

Nevada jury rules Mormon will not draw by Hughes

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Refusing to believe strange tales of desert rescues and secret couriers, a district court jury Thursday declared the "Mormon will" was not written by Howard Hughes.

The panel's decision wrecked the hopes of Melvin Dummar that three pages of yellow paper would make him an heir to the Hughes fortune.

(Related story, p. 3)

Although the trial ran more than seven months, the jurors deliberated only 11 hours before deciding the scrawled document was a forgery.

The Hughes estate still faces a tangled legal future expected to keep it tied up in the courts for years. But rejection of the Mormon will left no will to determine its disposition, indicating that about 70 percent of Hughes wealth will probably be eaten up by federal and local taxes.

The verdict was a victory for Hughes' distant relatives and the executives who administer his financial empire, who formed an alliance to discredit the Mormon will.

The jury obviously gave little credence to the stories told by Dummar, a Utah station operator and truck driver, and Alaska contractor Leovane Forsythe.

The jurors heard testimony from 69 witnesses, including 11 handwriting analysts, some of whom swore the "will" was written by Hughes and others that it was a forgery.

After 10 days of final arguments, the case went to the jury Wednesday evening and reached a climax little more than 24 hours later when the clerk read the verdict to a courtroom packed to standing-room-only capacity.

"We, the jury, duly empaneled and sworn ... find that a certain three-page document written on lined legal paper, dated March 19, 1968 ... was not written, dated and signed by the hand of the decedent, Howard Robert Hughes."

The disputed document, scrawled with a cheap ballpoint pen on three pages of common yellow legal tablet, was found on a desk at Mormon Church headquarters in Salt Lake City a few weeks after Hughes died.

The most controversial clause was a bequest of one-sixteenth of Hughes' estate to Dummar, who said he found Hughes, dazed and bleeding, wandering in a remote area of the Nevada desert on a chilly night in 1967 and gave him a ride to Las Vegas.

Both pro- and anti-will attorneys agreed that if Dummar's story was not true, the will would have to be a fake, because Hughes would never have known Dummar otherwise.

The other key element was the story told by Forsythe, who was Hughes' "secret courier" for many years, delivering political payoffs. Hughes gave him the will in 1972, telling him to deliver it to Dummar after he died, Forsythe said.

Attorney Harold Rhoden, who fought to establish the legitimacy of the will as substitute executor, for aging Noah Dietrich, said he had "no immediate plans for appeal."

"The jury voted, that's it," Rhoden said. "This was a fair trial, this was a fair judge."

The verdict leaves Hughes' financial empire in the hands of executives of the Summa Corp., which helped lead the fight to discredit the Mormon will.

The estate is expected to remain in the courts for years, working its way through legal proceedings in California, Delaware, Louisiana, Texas, Nevada and before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Fall fatal

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A villager in central Iraq has died at the age of 136 — not of old age, but in an accident, the official Iraqi News Agency says.

The agency said Thursday that Ubaid Abu Ali was killed in a fall from the roof of his home at Hillia, in the Babylon governorate.

Abu Ali reportedly was married twice and had a total of 170 sons and grandsons. His oldest grandson was 86.

"He did not smoke and was a teetotaler," the Iraqi agency said. "His staple diet was dried yogurt and dates."

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union contends the bugging device found in the chimney of the U.S. embassy in Moscow was really a "purely protective measure" to thwart "subversive activities" by the Americans.

Moscow also expects the embassy to foot the bill for damage done by U.S. security men who followed an underground spy tunnel from the embassy to a room in a Soviet apartment building after the bug was discovered May 25.

"The Soviet side strongly protested against the unlawful penetration by embassy staff members into the heating facilities of a nearby Soviet apartment house and demanded the restoration of what was damaged," Tass said.

It warned if Washington continued to press the matter, it will expose U.S. electronic spying in Moscow.

The Tass news agency report Thursday night was the first Soviet response to the U.S. charges.

but it did not directly deny the existence of a bug in the embassy.

Tass said the Americans damaged a heating facility in the Soviet building as well as a "protection system" it said was used as a "purely protective measure in connection with intelligence and subversive activities conducted by American special services from the U.S. embassy building."

The State Department confirmed "electronic devices of an intelligence gathering nature" were found but has been close-mouthed on the details of the tunnel.

American sources in Moscow said one or more security men followed the tunnel to a "room crammed with more electronic equipment and had a brief confrontation with a Russian, who fled."

The sources said the Americans then retreated and the tunnel was later bricked up.

The Tass report said at least one embassy employee entered the building but made no comment on whether anyone was discovered there.

Tass said the United States was whipping up the incident as part of an intensified anti-Soviet campaign "with the aim of covering up the unlawful actions of the U.S. embassy in the Soviet Union and drawing attention away from the intelligence and subversive activities carried out by American special services from the building of the embassy against the Soviet Union."

It said the Soviet Union has evidence showing that the embassy has long been used for radio-electronic intelligence work to intercept communications lines and radio-telephone conversations.

Imports of beef assailed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's move to increase beef imports from 15 nations, principally Australia and New Zealand, would save consumers $508 million during this year and hold the price of hamburger 5 to 6 cents per pound below what it might otherwise be.

The president used the beef imports announcement as an opportunity to chastise Congress for its spending and to exhort Americans to make "common sacrifice to control this rapid increase in prices."

"The most serious problem that our nation has is inflation and it is getting worse," he cautioned.

But the action, although expected for several days, drew sharp criticism from lawmakers from beef producing states, cattlemen and heads of farm organizations.

The White House estimated that renegotiating beef import agreements with 15 nations, principally Australia and New Zealand, would save consumers $508 million during this year and hold the price of hamburger 5 to 6 cents per pound below what it might otherwise be.

The action is expected to increase beef imports by 200 million pounds.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, who originally advised against the action but said he could live with it, said the savings to consumers would show up in late July or August.

The president said cattle producers would not suffer from the 15 percent increase in imports, above the current level for this year of 1.3 billion pounds, or about 7 percent of beef consumption.

Carter said a beef shortage had caused the 35 percent increase in beef prices since January, and noted the nation "has a lasting shortage" of the kind of beef used primarily for hamburger.

He said "carefully controlled modest increases" in beef imports "will not hurt the farmers who produce beef, but it will be of great help to consumers."

But legislators from beef producing states and farmers, who have been losing money on cattle for four years, strongly criticized the move.

Robert McDougal, president of the National Cattlemen's Association, predicted the action would discourage cattlemen from rebuilding their herds, keep supplies down and extend higher prices longer than if the imports were not increased.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said cattle producers will be hesitant to rebuild their herds "when the government takes actions designed to lower increased prices."

The president of the American Farm Bureau Federation said the government's decision to increase beef imports will have a bad psychological impact on the cattle industry.

"Cattlemen are angry because they have waited for four years for the market to change," Allan Grant said. "It took difficult management decisions to survive and hundreds of millions of dollars of debt have been incurred by cattlemen due to the loss position of the cattle industry."

Grant also said importing more beef would do little to reduce supermarket prices because imported beef amounts to only about 7 percent of total consumption in the United States.

"The cattlemen is not the culprit in inflation," he said. "While beef prices are a very visible part of our daily lives, the root problem with inflation is runaway government spending."

Mormon priesthood race, color bar falls

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — President Spencer W. Kimball today announced the granting of the Mormon priesthood to "all worthy men" — including blacks.

Kimball, saying God had answered his prayers, ended a 146-year church policy of excluding blacks from the priesthood which is open to all other male church members in good standing over the age of 12.

In a letter to church members, the 83-year-old prophet said he and other Mormon leaders had spent "many hours in the upper room of the temple supplicating the Lord for divine guidance."

"He has heard our prayers, and by revelation has confirmed that the long-promised day has come when every faithful, worthy man in the Church may receive the holy priesthood."

"Accordingly, all worthy male members of the church may be ordained to the priesthood without regard for race or color."

Since the 1860s the church's exclusion of blacks has been a sore spot between Mormons and members of minority groups and led to protests against its private university — Brigham Young University.

Blacks had always been allowed to join the religious sect, but had been excluded from holding administrative offices. Only priesthood holders are allowed to perform temple rights or serve as bishops of local wards (parishes).

The church had previously said, "There is a religious belief confirmed by each prophet that blacks of African lineage may not, at the present time, hold the priesthood."

But leaders of the religion always professed "that the time will come when they (blacks) will be given the right to hold the priesthood" — which allows males to hold administrative offices in the church.

In a 1970 statement by the Mormon Church First Presidency, the church said, "Even before that day comes, we are reminded by the very core of our beliefs that all men are brothers."

"Mormons teach that many who are black will receive greater heavenly rewards than many who are white, because they will have lived more righteous lives and have served mankind better."

Salvation, according to Mormon leaders, "will be a reward for individual effort and will not be based on race."

The church will continue to exclude all women and males under the age of 12 from its priesthoods.

MELVIN DUMMAR WON'T BE MILLIONAIRE
... strums guitar while awaiting Las Vegas verdict

Jury's ruling bursts bubble

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — Beer truck driver Melvin Dummar's vision of being an overnight millionaire has burst, but he has his dream: maintaining the truth about Howard Hughes "Mormon will."

"I don't know," Dummar said after hearing his bubble was burst by a jury finding that the will was a fake. "I'll just go back to work and try to play some music."

"If they file charges against me, well that's the way it is. I can't do anything about it."

Dummar was banging out country and western music with his band, "The Night Riders," at a Mormon Church sing-along dance in Ogden Thursday night when a Las Vegas jury announced its verdict.

As reporters told him the news, Dummar looked stunned and obviously disappointed.

"Had I been found genuine, he would've won $10 million today."

Asked if he had told the truth about picking up Hughes in the Nevada desert in 1968, he replied "yes, definitely."

"The jurors did not follow the evidence. I don't know what else to say."

In gambler's parlance, Dummar seems to have made a career out of betting the come line. He never made it big, but he stayed ahead of the house.

His largest wager left him, in the days before the jury went out in the trial to determine the validity of the "Mormon will," admittedly "feeling kinda nervous."

He was offering a blanket apology for "the lies I told when I brought him in which named him heir — one-sixteenth of Hughes' fortune — first surfaced."

"I just didn't think that anyone would believe the truth. I want to apologize to everyone. If I had it to do over again, I probably would tell the truth from the beginning," he said.

Dummar, 32, a sometime factory worker, milkman, gas station operator and beer truck driver, had his hot streaks and his bad runs. A year before the discovery of the will, he visited Hollywood and won nearly $7,000 in cash and prizes as a contestant on television game shows.

But his exploits also brought him into conflict with the law on several occasions. Although never convicted, he was charged in Nevada with forging an endorsement on another person's paycheck, in Utah with receiving stolen property and with shoplifting.

The 1969 Nevada case ended with a hung jury and was not retried. The 1976 charge that he received stolen property — a deer rifle — was not prosecuted because of jurisdictional problems.

And Dummar received informal probation of six months on the charge that he stole seven wood screws, valued at about a dime, from an Ogden, Utah, supermarket.

But Dummar's biggest gamble was with the "Mormon will." He started off lying about it the moment it was discovered in the Mormon Church office building in Salt Lake City, and underwent not only grueling examination on the witness stand in Las Vegas, but a constant warning from District Court Judge Keith Hayes.

"I don't believe you," Hayes told Dummar when the sworn deposition of the prospective heir was taken in a crowded courtroom in Las Vegas in January 1977 prior to the probate trial. "There is a saying that, 'Do it or profit a man if he gains the whole world and loses his soul.'"

"I'm not concerned about your soul. I'm concerned about your hide."

And, Hayes admonished Dummar, if he continued to lie, "I will make it my duty to have a piece of your hide."

But, despite the judge's wrath, Dummar stuck to the final version of his story. It was markedly different from earlier versions.

When the will was discovered at Mormon Church headquarters in April, 1977, Dummar claimed he was shocked that he had been named an heir. He told newsmen that the first he heard of the will was from them.

Then operating a three-pump gasoline station in rural Willard, Utah, Dummar professed to be unable to sleep or think straight after hearing the news. He went into seclusion, under sedation and in the care of a doctor.

Repeatedly in the following months, he insisted he had never seen or heard of the will before its discovery.

He cried at several news conferences, and begged the person who delivered the will to church headquarters to come forward.

"I wish," he said in December, 1976, "whoever did deliver it to the church office building would come forward and tell the circumstances surrounding it."

"I never had anything to do with the will," he said. When it appeared that his fingerprints had been found on the envelope containing the document, he charged the Hughes empire with planting them and trying to frame him.

"Someone is trying to keep the Hughes organs together and they will do anything in their power to keep it that way," he said.

A month later, he admitted lying — not once, but at least three times. First, he admitted delivering the will himself. Then he said he was in Las Vegas, met a man in a club and was given the will.

Then he said a mysterious stranger — later identified as Alaska contractor LeVare Forsythe, a self-proclaimed courier for Hughes — left the will at Dummar's service station.

He admitted steaming open the envelope containing the document and reading it several days before writing, covering and delivering it to the church office building.

But he steadfastly denied forging the will. He was asked on the witness stand in Las Vegas, "If it meant eternal damnation in hell, would you stick with this story?"

"Yes," Dummar answered.

As the trial moved toward conclusion, Dummar continued to maintain that it was not he — but a disheveled Howard Hughes whom Dummar picked up in the Nevada desert in 1968 and gave a ride to Las Vegas — who penned the will.

"I still don't know whether it's real or not, because — I just know what happened to me."

China exports in works?

Washington — Carter administration, in a review of the export of military-related technology to China, is preparing to approve the sale of some equipment in an effort to improve relations.

Administration sources said that the United States had quietly agreed to a bid to export to Peking advanced airborne equipment for geological exploration, an item that the administration will not sell to the Soviet Union because of its potential military uses.

At the same time, the administration is seriously considering approving the sale of an array of processor to China. This highly sensitive item — whose potential sale to Communist countries has sparked a strong debate in the Pentagon — is used to detect oil or mineral deposits along the ocean floor or on land.

But the technological equipment — which has been sought by the Chinese — is also used for the detection of submarines and could sharply improve China's anti-submarine warfare capability.

The decision to step up the sale of military-related technology to China follows the visit to Peking last month of Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser.

During the visit, the United States delegation discussed the transfer of technology to assist China's modernization drive. Significantly, Brzezinski's small delegation included Morton I. Abramowitz, an Asian specialist at the Defense Department who was recently named ambassador to Thailand, and Benjamin Huberman, assistant director for the Office of Science and Technology Policy at the White House.

Several administration officials said that the issue of technology sales to China was extremely sensitive, largely because of its possible impact on relations with the Soviet Union. The administration has been deeply divided on the issue of military-related sales to China, and two key policy studies over the past five years have failed to come to final agreement.

Although officials at the White House, State Department and Pentagon were reluctant to discuss the sales, one government source said of relations with China: "The atmosphere has changed, the atmosphere has improved. The Brzezinski trip obviously helped."

On the Chinese side, administration sources said, there has been a considerable, "mellowing and relaxing" since the death of Mao Tse-tung in 1976 in accepting Western proposals involving technology.

One administration source said that the Chinese had been, until last year, "very prickly about national sovereignty," and often refused to accept Western limits placed on companies exporting military-related technology.

Over the past year, however, Peking has allowed increasing numbers of foreign technicians into the country and has indicated that it would relax its opposition to various conditions placed on sellers of technology. Those conditions include limits on the modification of various equipment, provisions that curb the expansion of computer uses and reports from the companies involved detailing how the equipment is being used.

1978 report on "The Condition of Education."

The 315-page book also said: "Money is the great motive for schooling and men still earn higher salaries than women with comparable educations."

"As always, high school dropouts have a hard time finding jobs."

And, as previously reported, the enrollment rate is slowing down in four-year private and public colleges.

One poll contained in the report indicated only 4 percent of Americans consider local schools inadequate while the "inadequate" response was about 5 percent for fire protection, nearly 9 percent on police, more than 10 percent on hospitals and clinics and about 35 percent on public transportation.

Surplus pondered

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The landslide vote for property tax-cutting Proposition 13 is translating into action.

Public employees Thursday got official layoff notices. Schools announced their first cutbacks and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. unveiled plans for spending the state's bulging $5 billion budget surplus to help local governments.

"We have only three weeks to act, three weeks to decide multibillion dollar questions," he told the Legislature.

California's fiscal year begins July 1 and the new tax limitation law demands that the state divide the remaining $4 billion of property taxes among local governments and schools by that time.

"This is not a partisan issue and we cannot look for a partisan solution," declared Brown, who is seeking a second term in November.

There also were these developments: — In nearby Yolo County, one of only three of the 58 California counties where Proposition 13 was defeated by voters Tuesday, layoff notices were handed to 326 county employees, including 47 deputy sheriffs.

Schools top list of services

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite the rising cost of education, the government said today Americans generally rate their public schools above such services as fire and police protection, hospitals and transportation.

"On the local level, most residents believe education is performing adequately compared to other neighborhood services," said the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in its Riverside 100. Showers and thundershowers today hit New England, the Lower Great Lakes and the Gulf Coast from Louisiana to Florida. The National Weather Service said heavy rains that fell in some areas Thursday have diminished and almost all flash flood watches have been canceled.

Widely scattered showers or thundershowers also ranged over parts of the upper Mississippi Valley, upper Michigan and the southern Rockies. Light rain was reported on the northern Pacific Coast.

Formadores struck Alabama, Georgia and Indiana Thursday, hospitalizing at least two people and causing scores of minor injuries.

Weather officials said at least four south Alabama counties were hit by twisters. The tornadoes destroyed mobile homes, damaged houses, tore down fences and barns and uprooted trees. In Arion, Shari Wiloughby, who was alone in her trailer when the twister hit, was hospitalized with chest and head injuries.

In Georgia, one person was injured when a tornado touched down near Catalina, north of Columbus. The high winds caused at least $20,000 damage to a small grocery store in the town.

Heat, smog irritate Californians

By United Press International

Showers and thundershowers blasted a large section of the nation today while 100-plus temperatures and eye-stinging smog in Southern California lured thousands of people to beaches and local lakes.

A thick, suffocating layer of brownish smog covered Southern California, with the heaviest concentrations reported in the valley areas. First-stage health advisories were called in many areas Thursday.

The mercury soared to a sizzling 113 in Palm Springs Thursday while Apple Valley reported a high of 101 and about four hours later the command to change positions was applied through a computer aboard the 84-ton, 118-foot assembly — a spokesman said.

"Everything is going well aboard the Skylab this morning," the spokesman said. "We've just about accomplished everything we wanted to do Saturday."

The maneuver represented a major step in the federal space agency's unprecedented attempt to save Skylab for possible future use in orbit.

HOUSTON (UPI) — Flight controllers today stabilized Skylab in orbit for the first time in four years and started turning it around to give it at least six extra months of life.

The action came a day ahead of schedule as scientists were successful in their first try to have outside solar sensors find and lock the unmanned space station in position to soak up the energy-giving sunlight needed to power the orbiting laboratory.

The sensors found the sun shortly after midnight and

Summa silent

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Summa Corp., the holding company of the late Howard Hughes, had no official reaction today to the district court verdict Thursday on the so-called "Mormon Will" ruled a fraud.

Fred Lewis, a company spokesman, said the corporation had a "hands off" policy during the seven months trial and there probably will not be any reaction regarding the final outcome of the case.

Skylab stabilized

— On Wall Street, Standard and Poor's, a bond rating service, suspended its ratings of California bond issues that are based on property taxes as a main source of revenue.

The decision, which had been expected for some time, affects about 200 issues, mainly local government agencies, but appeared to have no immediate impact on the bond market.

— The Riverside County school district of Corona-Noree canceled all extracurricular activities, including sports, and reduced staffs by about 6 percent.

In his speech to the Legislature, Brown also suggested cutting $300 million from his proposed $17.4 billion state budget to help make up for the money lost to local agencies.

West losing courage, willpower, Solzhenitsyn says

ALEXANDER SOLZHENITSYN
...doomsday message

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Exiled Soviet author Alexander Solzhenitsyn says Western civilization is suffering from a "decline in courage" and "moral poverty" that could be fatal.

The doomsday prophecy was delivered Thursday to a hushed audience of several thousand who came to hear the Nobel Prize winning dissident deliver his first major speech in two years during the 37th Harvard University commencement.

"The next war, which does not have to be an atomic one and I do not believe it will (be), may bury Western civilization forever," said the bearded, stern-faced author, who spoke in Russian with a simultaneous translation.

Solzhenitsyn, 59, who now lives in seclusion in Cavendish, Vt., said Americans have been raised "in a cult of material well-being" that has left them paralyzed by a "loss of willpower," unwilling to die for their country.

"Should one point out that from ancient times decline in courage has been considered the beginning of the end?" he asked. "If the world has not come to its end, it has approached a major turn in history."

Solzhenitsyn drew hisses and scattered boos when he condemned U.S. anti-war leaders, said the United States "lost its nerve" in Vietnam, and warned America's renewed relationship with China is a "doomed alliance."

"The most crucial mistake occurred with the failure to understand the Vietnam

War. Some people sincerely wanted all wars to stop just as soon as possible ... But members of the U.S. anti-war movement wound up being involved in the betrayal of Far Eastern nations, in a genocide and in the suffering today imposed on 30-million people there. Do those convinced pacifists hear the moans coming from there? Do they understand their responsibility to day? Or do they prefer not to hear?" Solzhenitsyn said.

"The American intelligentsia lost its nerve and as a consequence thereof danger has come much closer to the United States," he said, adding, "If a full-fledged America suffered a real defeat from a small Communist half-country, how can the West hope to stand firm in the future?"

Referring to China, Solzhenitsyn said, "When at a later date China, with its billion people, would turn around armed with American weapons, America itself would fall prey to a genocide similar to the one perpetrated in Cambodia."

"And yet — no weapons, no matter how powerful, can help the West until it overcomes its loss of willpower," he said. "To defend oneself, one must be ready to die; there is little such readiness in a society raised in the cult of material well-being."

"All the glorified technological achievements of progress, including the conquest of outer space, do not redeem the 20th century's moral poverty," he said.

Exxon denies claim of oil overcharges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Exxon Corp. officials today strongly denied allegations that the giant firm has overcharged its crude oil customers by $18.3 million since 1973 and accused the Energy Department of "ditching its administrative procedures" in taking the charges to court.

The Energy Department, in a suit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Washington, charged that Exxon was selling oil pumped from some of its wells at Hawkins Field, Texas, as "new oil," when it should have been classified as "old oil."

"New oil" is worth an extra $6 to $8 a barrel under a two-tiered pricing system created after the 1973 Arab oil embargo to encourage increased domestic production of crude oil.

"Exxon denies that it has overcharged anyone or violated any Department of Energy regulation and that Exxon will vigorously defend itself against these allegations," Exxon Senior Vice President O.L. Luper said in Houston.

The Washington Post said the suit asks that the alleged overcharges, plus interest, be refunded to the federal treasury because it would be difficult to institute a price rollback.

Exxon spokesman Les Rogers, also in Houston, said the company received notice that it might face the charges in January. Exxon subsequently filed suit in Dallas challenging the Energy Department's interpretation of its own regulations involving old and new oil.

Luper said the Washington suit "was unexpected because of the suit in Dallas already before the courts. The Department of Energy is ditching its administrative procedures."

The department contends that Exxon shut down several old wells at Hawkins Field and shifted production to new wells, but that total production from the area did not actually increase.

"Essentially, we are saying that Exxon has taken old oil and turned it into new oil without producing any more oil," one Energy Department attorney was quoted by The Post as saying.

Rogers said, "We maintain that (the Energy Department) was aware of how we made the calculations (differentiating old from new oil) and took no exception to them at the time and now has made a retroactive interpretation."

"That was the basis of why we went to court to challenge the allegations served on us in January," he said.

Airliners probable targets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Terrorists armed with small surface-to-air missiles will someday try to shoot down a passenger airliner, warns a spokesman for professional pilots in the United States.

The warning was given Thursday during testimony to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is considering anti-terrorist legislation.

"We know there are small surface-to-air missiles available right now to various terrorist groups," said Capt. Tom Ashwood of the Airline Pilots Association and the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations.

He also warned that terrorists soon may have access to the weapons-grade nuclear material capable of making bombs that could flatten cities.

HEW loses $1 million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ignoring pleas from Secretary Joseph Califano, the House has voted 299-97 to pare $1 billion from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare budget as an incentive to reduce waste, fraud and abuse.

Sponsor Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., said the action will give Califano "that additional stick really needed to move the bureaucracy into action" to reduce losses through fraud and abuse.

He said an inspector general's report has placed such losses at from $6.3 to $7.4 billion a year.

Opponents called Michel's amendment a reaction to Proposition 13, the controversial measure approved this week by California voters to lower property taxes by $7 billion, involving a corresponding cut in government spending.

Pair face probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sens. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., and Edward Brooke, R-Mass., are facing full-scale Senate Ethics Committee investigations of their financial affairs to determine if they were involved in any "improper conduct."

Moving fast at a closed meeting Thursday, the committee voted to go beyond the stage of "preliminary inquiry," to hire a special counsel for each case, and to examine confidential financial reports filed since 1972 by Talmadge, chairman of the Agriculture Committee, and Brooke, the only black senator.

"This action does not imply guilt," said Chairman Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., in revealing that his bipartisan panel agreed without dissent to take the steps.

The Senate's rules "require us to determine if improper conduct has occurred, reflecting on the Senate," and his committee felt it had to look into all the allegations, he said.

If "substantial credible evidence" of offenses is found, he said, the committee could take one more step — "lanquidation to a trial."

Stevenson told a news conference his panel would try to find out if Brooke or Talmadge failed to meet Senate financial reporting requirements or broke rules.

Asked to go into greater detail, he said, "I'm very reluctant to speculate now as to what the facts are and what the applicable rules will be."

Collapse brings safety violations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has not yet determined whether criminal charges should be brought against a contractor cited for 16 safety violations in connection with a West Virginia scaffolding disaster that killed 51 workers.

Assistant Labor Secretary Eula Bingham announced Thursday 20 citations had been issued against three firms, carrying proposed fines totaling $106,300.

Sixteen of them were against Research-Cottrell Inc., of Bound Brook, N.J., the construction company building the second of two 400-foot cooling towers for a power plant at Willow Island, W. Va., when the April 27 disaster occurred.

She said 10 of those 16 were for "willful violations," adding that meant either the firm was aware they were violating federal safety laws, or were simply aware of a hazard and did nothing about it.

Each willful violation brought the maximum $10,000 fine, but could also bring criminal charges.

"The OSHA law prescribes criminal sanctions for a willful violation of a standard resulting in the death of an employee," Mrs. Bingham said. "The Department of Labor is determining whether to recommend criminal action to the U.S. Department of Justice in this case."

Asked about the status of such a recommendation, she replied: "The decision has not been made... it is a possibility."

Both Mrs. Bingham and OSHA solicitor Ben Mintz refused to comment further on the possibility of criminal charges, saying discussions must be held with the Justice Department on whether the Research-Cottrell firm had been legally negligent.

Actor Dreyfuss spreads himself much too thin

By United Press International
GOODBYE BOY

Richard Dreyfuss, who won the Academy Award for best actor in "The Goodbye Girl," has quit Columbia's "All That Jazz" because he's too tired. The 30-year-old Dreyfuss has been spreading himself a bit thin lately — "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" segued with "The Goodbye Girl," which secured with "The Big Fix." In addition, he's been taxed — recently — with a demanding portrayal of Cassius in "Julius Caesar" at the Brooklyn Academy of Music in New York. Dreyfuss was "exhausted," said a friend in Los Angeles, who added, "Rick's still not over the Academy Award."

RICHARD DREYFUSS

A BREAK IN TRADITION? It's not clear just what New York Yankee manager Billy Martin did, and Lee MacPhail, president of the American League, isn't saying, but it doesn't take a fertile imagination to reconstruct the charges. On June 5 MacPhail sent a directive to Martin in a letter to Yankee President — Art Rosen — complaining of obscene gestures on the field. "When I see anything of this nature... I don't let it pass without calling it to the attention of the player or club," MacPhail said. Rosen called the letter "tremendously upsetting. I believe in the Yankee tradition. There is an obligation by all concerned to uphold that tradition."

ROYAL RUNNER-UP Jordan's King Hussein has taken another step to ensure his royal lineage. The king named his 2-year-old son Prince Ali second in line for the Jordanian throne, after Hussein's brother, Crown Prince Hassan. The young heir — Hussein's eldest son by the late Queen Alia — was officially designated because, as the king said in a royal directive issued in Amman Thursday, "I am keen that the line of succession for the future be crystal clear." The directive came exactly one week before his marriage to 25-year-old New York socialite Lisa Halaby.

WELL, SHUT MY MOUTH There are a lot of ways to react to an acquittal — especially on a drug charge. In the case of "Sokk It To Me" girl Judy Came, there were two reactions to her acquittal in Cincinnati Thursday on a charge of possessing heroin. The jury couldn't decide on a charge of carrying a forged prescription for sleeping pills, for which she may be retried. On the one hand she says she was "speechless." Then Miss Came went on to say how she'll "never forgive" the cops who arrested her — and she says — "I'm forced to submit to a skin search, and even gave her a couple of kidney punches. The police denied her charges."

UP FOR GRAHAM It was only practice, really, but the audience was impressed so the show had to be good. It was the preview Thursday for the Martha Graham Dance Co.'s engagement at New York's Metropolitan Opera House June 26 through July 1. The audience — peppered with reporters and photographers — included Gloria Swanson and Lisa Minnelli, who knows a thing or two about dancing herself. The guest list of Graham supporters also consisted of Joan Bennett, Polly Bergen, actor-turned-author Thomas Tryon and Post herself Dina Merrill.

QUOTE OF THE DAY Nobel laureate Alexander Solzhenitsyn in a speech to Harvard graduates Thursday, discussing the Western press: "People also have the right not to know... the right not to have their divine souls stuffed with gossip, nonsense, vain talk."

Algerian woman must face Islamic tradition

MONTREAL (UPI) — A young Algerian woman who fled to Canada to escape her tradition-minded family and broke Islamic law by marrying a Christian was dragged, abducted and flown back home to marry a stranger, her husband says. Dalia Maschino, 26, was depicted by her friends Thursday as a spirited and sophisticated woman desperate to gain her freedom from a brother who pursued her across three continents. Her husband of only a few weeks, Denis, reportedly was in hiding, fearful of possible attacks, by his brother-in-law's friends.

Dalia told a Montreal journalist in a telephone interview from her home in a village near Algiers that she feared for her husband's life. "I love my husband," Mrs. Maschino said. "I want to see him again but I can't. Traditions are so important here. The family has decided." She is studying at Concordia University, where she was well liked. At the time she was a "sophisticated, very bright" woman who felt she had finally escaped her brother's control by coming to Montreal. University instructor Tarry Byrnes said the woman and her future husband, an Algerian Christian, eluded her brother in Geneva, Switzerland and fled to Canada via Paris. They were married shortly before she was kidnapped April 26. Byrnes said she feared for her life because Islamic law dictates a Muslim woman can be stoned to death for having sexual relations with a Christian.

Diet stressed

Intestinal cancer researched

URBANA, Ill. (UPI) — A proper diet may control intestinal cancer, the second most common form of cancer in the United States, research at the University of Illinois indicates.

Experimental work at the university supports the theory that the high intestinal cancer rate in the U.S. may be linked to the 80 percent decrease during the past century of consumption of fiber, such as wheat bran, in the average diet, the school said Thursday.

The work has been conducted by Steven K. Clinton, doctoral student in nutritional science and research assistant in the School of Basic Medical Sciences. Clinton was assisted by C. Richard Truex, a postdoctoral research scientist, and Willard J. Visek, a professor in the schools of Basic Medical Sciences and Clinical Medicine.

The three said that while the information from laboratory research with rats is not yet ready for direct application to humans, the implications seem clear. "Our research indicates that wheat bran is effective in decreasing exposure to cancer-causing substances at levels often encountered in the human diet, Clinton said.

He said wheat bran prevents exposure of intestinal cells to certain cancer-causing substances. The university research is now concerned with examining the protective capacity of a variety of fiber sources from vegetables, fruits and grains. Also being examined are various carcinogens (cancer-causing substances), and how much fiber is needed for protection.

In the experiments, fiber constituted 10 percent of the diet. Clinton said fiber appears to protect intestinal cells by removing foreign substances such as carcinogens produced by charring.

Zoo star dead at 32
LONDON (UPI) — Guy, the star gorilla of the London Zoo since 1947, died Thursday at 32 — brought down by candy and ice cream his admirers had fed him since 1947.

Guy, whose 380 pounds was packed on 5-foot-3 frame, died of a heart attack when he was coming round from the anesthetic for an extraction of a tooth rotted by the sweets he had consumed.

"In the wild, he would still have his teeth — and perhaps he'd still be alive," said a zoo spokesman.

His appetite was large, tending toward protein pellets and bananas. But his desires apparently excluded females.

He spurned Lomie, the female gorilla with whom he was mated and who eventually went to another zoo in Bristol.

During his long and famed life, Guy was visited by most of the 60 million visitors who have passed through the zoo.

Moro execution site found

ROME (UPI) — Red Brigades terrorists executed former Premier Aldo Moro on the slime-covered beaches of Focene, just a stone's throw from Rome's Leonardo Da Vinci Airport, police said today.

Laboratory analysis of the sand found in the assassinated politician's trouser cuffs, socks and on the bottom of his shoes showed it almost certainly came from the Focene beach, police experts said.

Anti-Soviet campaign continues

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (UPI) — Foreign Minister Huang Hui carried China's strong anti-Soviet gospel to Western Europe, pledging his country's support for all those struggling against Soviet "hegemonist aggression."

Huang arrived in Holland Thursday following a five-day stay in Zaire and met with Dutch Foreign Minister Chris van der Klauw. Today Huang was to be received in audience by Queen Juliana and continue talks with Dutch officials.

While in Zaire, he toured embattled Shaba province and promised support for Zaire in its "just struggle to safeguard national independence against a new aggression being perpetrated by Soviet Socialist imperialism."

He had much the same message for the Dutch.

Though he did not mention the Soviet Union by name, the reference was clear.

Huang also told the Dutch his government supports the European Common Market's efforts to "attain greater strength through unity."

Weekend outlook sunny and dry

Twin Falls, North Side, Bailey-Rupert areas: Chance for a few widely scattered thundershowers this evening. Gusty winds. Clearing later tonight and cooler with low temperatures near 45. Mostly sunny Saturday with high temperatures near 75. Probability of measurable rainfall 10 percent this evening.

Hailey, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley: Chance for a few widely scattered thundershowers this evening. Gusty winds. Clearing later tonight and cooler with low temperatures near 35. Mostly sunny Saturday with high temperatures in the 60s.

Synopsis: A cool front was causing rain on the coast this morning. The front was expected to weaken before it moves across Magic Valley early tonight. Therefore, it is expected to cause only cloud-ness, gusty winds and very isolated thundershower activity.

Cooler air and clearing skies are expected to return behind the front by Saturday morning, leaving an extended outlook for sunny, dry weather for the weekend and into the first half of next week.

The cooling will only bring temperatures back to the seasonal normals, with highs around 72 and 82, nighttime lows between 42 and 52.

Seaborne Israeli raid base

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — A seaborne Israeli strike force destroyed a Palestinian naval base in south Lebanon early today, only four days before Israel was to withdraw its troops from the occupied territory, the military command said.

Zaire rounds up collaborators

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — The Zairean army has begun rounding up suspected sympathizers of the Angola-based rebels who invaded Shaba province last month and has already seized about 350 people for questioning, witnesses say.

Zaire blasted the Soviet leadership as "modern day crows" for their reported logistical support of the invaders, but praised the United States and China for their backing during the battle with the rebels.

About 150 suspects rounded up in the area of Lubumbashi, capital of Shaba province, were flown out Thursday, apparently for interrogation at the military base of Kamina, 250 miles to the north, witnesses said.

In the two previous days, more than 100 other suspects had also been detained and flown out, they said.

The scope of the operation was not known, but the witnesses indicated it was extensive. Rebel leaders have said many insurgents stayed behind in the bush and will regroup for new attacks.

The government apparently was worried that the population of Lubumbashi and other towns in Shaba was sympathetic, if not actively involved with the rebel actions, the witnesses said.

Diplomatic sources have reported the rebels, who have been living in exile in Angola, were helped by fellow Lunda tribesmen in their attack on the mining center of Kolwezi last month.

what's what

J.M. Boye

Tracers of missing persons report that a remarkably high number of husbands who report runaway wives can't give proper physical descriptions of those wives. The husbands don't seem to remember their wives' heights, tape measurements or eye and hair colors. Significant, what? Most such husbands do recall, however, the make, year and color of the cars said wives run off in.

MURDER IN SLEEP

Q. "Is it conceivable that somebody could commit a murder while sleep walking?"
A. A few people who've been afflicted with a rare condition diagnosed as "sleep drunkenness" have killed, according to the records. A Canadian psychiatrist names Alexander Bonkalo has linked 30 homicides to that, or something similar. It seems no motives show up, and the violent sleepers don't remember what they've done. The condition is far more extreme, clearly, than the simple "sleepwalking" quirk. But many of the so-called "sleep drunks" tend to walk in their sleep, too, wet their beds, and hallucinate, when awakened. I read this in a real big book.

GRANDPARENTS

Question arises as to whether grandparents have a legal right to visit their grandchildren. In Arkansas, New York, California, they do, by law already established. Courts in other states have said so, too, case by case.

An etiquette expert contends a good hostess will leave out not only the appropriate soap and towels in the guest bathroom, but a bottle of aspirin and an emery board, too.

CURBITT PERRY LOOKS OVER FIRE DAMAGE TO HIS HOME
... he and his wife may not be able to afford to rebuild

SHIELDS WAREHOUSE FIRE CAME CLOSE TO DESTROYING THIS VACANT HOUSE IN BUHL
... firefighters' efforts saved this and nearby homes but not the warehouse or contents

Buhl warehouse total loss, homes scorched

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News writer

BUHL — "Hey, there's a fire out there."
A group of Shields Warehouse employees gathered around the counter of the main office building in Buhl Thursday were stunned by the panicky words of the teenage boy who had just raced in the front door.
By day's end, a block-long wood warehouse containing red clover, alfalfa and bean seeds was destroyed by fire. One Shields official estimated the loss to the company and farmers could reach as high as $1 million, but insurance adjusters are still sifting through the rubble to determine the loss.
Warren Sigson, plant manager, said today the cause of the blaze had not been determined, but it apparently started in the middle of the building in an upstairs cleaning room. The first alarm for the fire was sounded at 8:10 a.m.
Sigson said the company hasn't decided whether it will rebuild.
It was an ordeal the 20 employees of the company — and the rest of the community — will remember.

Two nearby homes had to be evacuated, and one couple — dismayed by the damage to their bedroom — say they may be leaving Buhl for good. Power was cutoff to some nearby homes — and fire pumps — when flames engulfed a power pole. And the city swimming pool was closed for fear there would not be enough water to fight the blaze.
While the identity of the teenage boy remains unknown to company officials, two things are certain. It was fortunate none of the employees were in the building, and the fire department's quick response saved additional damage to nearby homes.
"The flames were just leaping out from everywhere when I got here," said Ron Jones, 21, a volunteer Buhl fireman who was one of the first on the scene. "I was frightened. Pure fear. I'd never seen a fire this big."
As the more than 50 firemen arrived (they came from Buhl, Castelford, Kimberly and Fillet), flames began to engulf the entire structure, moving quickly toward both ends.
One block northwest of the fire, David and Stacey

Snyder, both under four years old, were watching television when Stacey yelled to David to look at the smoke and flames coming out of the warehouse.
"I ran into the bedroom and told my aunt who was sleeping," he said.
His aunt, thinking their house was on fire, grabbed the kids and headed out the front door. Not until she was outside did she realize it was the warehouse burning.
Despite pouring more than two million gallons of water on the structure, the flames spread quickly. At one point, the flames raced up a power pole, cutting off power to two fire pumps.
"We were low on water for about 15 minutes," Upland recalled. "We still had two pumps going, but it made it interesting for awhile."
As it became apparent that it would be impossible to save much of the warehouse, attention turned to three houses (one of them vacant) and other warehouses at the northwest side of the building. There are six buildings at the company.
The houses, less than 20 yards from the fire, became a prime target for the wind-whipped flames: One wood shed was destroyed.

Already friends and neighbors were helping one couple — Mr. and Mrs. Curbitt Perry — remove furniture and valuables from the house.
Mrs. Perry remembers her husband was out working on their camper at the time, when he noticed the smoke and flames.
"I was in the bedroom quilting, and I heard this beating on the wall and my husband yelling fire," Mrs. Perry said.
Mrs. Perry said after running outside and seeing the flames, she ran back in the front door to grab some valuable papers.
"I was looking for the deed to the places we owned, and then I remembered it was in my purse. I sat the purse next to the door, and then started grabbing anything else I could find," she said.
The bedroom wall and part of the roof of the house was damaged. Firemen had doused the house with hundreds of gallons of water, but the heat was just too much.
Fireman Jones said if the strong winds hadn't suddenly shifted direction, "we would have lost the houses for sure."

The Perrys said they may move to Missouri, near their son, because it would cost too much to rebuild.
An 81-year old woman was evacuated from her home nearby too, after residents went in and brought her out.
Hundreds of Buhl residents (one man said he hadn't seen so many people since the county fair) flocked to the scene and lined the streets.
They witnessed the biggest fire in Buhl in five years. The last destroyed the Citizens Building on July 4, 1972.
Firemen, although weary-eyed from six hours of battling the blaze, stayed on in two-man shifts last night to guard against flareups. Fireman Harold Clarkston said one flareup occurred, but was quickly put out.
Assistant Fire Chief Upland summed up the feeling of his men when he said:
"I'm just glad it didn't get the other houses or warehouses, and we didn't lose more than we did."
The Corbitts, Shields Company officials, and other nearby residents today are shaking their heads in agreement.

Acquaculture program

USDA offers aid to Idaho trout farms

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — The trout industry in Magic Valley may soon be eligible for federal funds to help cure its ills, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture official.
The Idaho trout farmers, who produce 90 percent of the world's trout, indicated they could use some help, but a few worried about more government involvement in their prospering business.
In the placid surroundings of Rangen's Trout Research Station near Hagerman Wednesday night, Dr. Rudy Schmittou told about 20 local trout producers a new USDA program could bring aid to aquaculture by late 1979.
Reaction from hatchery operators was mixed as Schmittou, recently appointed by Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland to coordinate a new federal aquaculture program, outlined his plan for trout, catfish and crayfish in this country.
Schmittou told the group he first wants to know what conditions exist in the aquaculture industry and what problems are hampering growth.
With that information, he will then begin to set priorities for allocating a "limited" budget he expects to be appropriated by Congress about 18 months from now.

But some local hatchery men were reticent about supplying information to a government agency. They said trout farming in Idaho is "in the black" and government officials will not be likely to allocate aid to a healthy industry.
"Basically this industry is in the black," Ken Ellis of Valley Trout Farms in Buhl said. "We don't feel like we are in the ball game for funds."
Schmittou argued his aim is to help the aquaculture industry as it now stands. He said it would be a better use of federal funds to help a healthy industry rather than waste money on a failing one.
Schmittou also said supporting domestic aquaculture could be good for the nation's balance of trade deficit since over 10 percent of last year's deficit was caused by importing aquatic foods.
"We import about 60 percent of the aquatic foods we eat in this country," Schmittou explained. "This contributes to inflation."
Other trout men at the meeting said they were hesitant to invite more government involvement in their industry.

"I've got too much government already," Thorleif Rangen of Buhl said. "I've hired a couple of extra men just to fill out reports."
Schmittou argued the USDA is not a regulatory agency like the Environmental Protection Agency, but will be providing a service to trout farmers in Magic Valley by allocating funds to help solve problems in the industry.
Schmittou urged industry leaders to organize, make their needs known to USDA officials and get in line for federal monies which could be applied toward improving conditions in the trout industry.
"There are several bills now pending in Congress," Schmittou told the group. "We need to know what the problems are in the industry in order to start building a reasonable program."
Schmittou said the aquaculture industry will be under the jurisdiction of the USDA and any program initiated to provide aid will be administered under Bergland.
Schmittou is now trying to get cooperation of industry leaders in helping educate the USDA staff.

Two weeks ago Dave Erickson of Buhl attended a preliminary educational seminar in Washington, D.C., to talk to USDA and other government officials about the trout industry in Idaho.
Erickson said he described the industry to government officials and briefly outlined some of the problems confronting trout growers in the valley. He estimated total Idaho trout production at 27 million pounds annually.
As far as problems, "disease was high on the list," Erickson reported to the group Wednesday night. "Lack of identity was another problem. We are not recognized as an agricultural industry."
Other problems industry spokesmen listed Wednesday night included:
•Not enough clearances for necessary drugs.
•Consequently, there is no way to fight disease effectively.
•Problems with Environmental Protection Agency and Food and Drug Administration regulations.
•Marketing problems.

More camping open

TWIN FALLS — More areas of the Sawtooth National Forest are opening as warm temperatures and winds have melted snow and dried out many of the areas.
This week's forest service recreation report says trails and roads in higher elevations are still closed, however.
The Rock Creek road south of Hansen closed above Third Fork for five weeks and access to campgrounds above the Magic Mountain Ski area is available only through Shoshone basin.
Lower campgrounds in Rock Creek Canyon, such as Big Bluff and Harrington Fork, are open and accessible.
In the Burley ranger district, the road from the Pomerelle ski area to Lake Cleveland is still closed by snow.
In the Fairfield district, all campgrounds are open and have been maintained. Water has been turned on at Baumgartner campground and fees are being charged there.
Dollarhide Summit is closed by snow as are all trails in the area above 8,300 feet elevation. Streams are high as warm weather continues to increase run-off.
Trail Creek Summit in the Ketchum Ranger District is also closed by snow and rock slides but Warm Springs road is open to Croncy Cove only.
In the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, all campgrounds are open except inlet at Alturas Lake, Point at Redfish Lake and Mountain View and Chinook Bay at Little Redfish Lake.
Roads still closed in the SNRA include Pole Creek, Fourth of July Creek, Haysa Creek, Fisher Creek, Park Creek, Cry Creek and Elk Meadow roads.
Snowline in the Sawtooth Wilderness-White Cloud peaks has receded to about 7,300 feet.

Harrah buys stores

KETCHUM — Harrah's Club of Reno has announced the purchase of two additional buildings at Ketchum.
Sample Shack Clothing Store and Western Cafe were bought in transactions announced Thursday by a representative of Harrah's.
Western Cafe Manager Pam Copson said the cafe will continue to operate as usual. The store has an eight year lease which will be honored, she said.
A Sample Shack spokesman was unavailable for comment.

Wells hit record bottom

MAGIC VALLEY — Record-breaking low well-water levels were recorded in May near Gooding and Eden, according to the U.S. Geological Survey.
The reason, the USGS said, is because surface water has not yet reached the ground water supply, depleted during last year's drought conditions.
A hydrologic technician in the Boise office of USGS said the average well depths are compiled by measuring six wells around Idaho which the government agency officials feel are representative of the state.
Exact figures were still being compiled.
The USGS technician said the Eden area well is low because irrigation water hasn't filtered down into the underground supply, which was drawn down during last year's drought.
The Gooding well is being recharged by the Big Wood and Little Wood rivers, the technician said.
While well levels are low because of the "lag time" in surface water entering the well water table, the USGS said the overall Idaho water picture seems normal.

Streamflow on the Snake River at Halse was 76 percent of normal in May compared to 104 percent of normal on the Snake near Welter.
Reservoir storage remained below average, the government agency reported, but is increasing.
The National Weather Service office at Twin Falls reported the "average weather outlook" for June predicts June precipitation will be above normal of the Salmon River and near normal north of the river.
The weather service said hay curing weather should be good the first few days, while past history shows there is only one year in four when there is a week in early June without rains.
Precipitation levels should range between two-thirds to eight-tenths of an inch.
The weather service report said Magic Valley temperatures should follow the norms with highs reaching from the mid-70s to low 80s and lows in the mid and upper 40s.

Jerome sighs for 1961

JEROME — A wave of nostalgia swept over Jerome school trustees at a Thursday budget meeting as they recalled 1961, when 2,800 students were educated for only $600,000.
And with good reason.
The cost for the school year 1978-79 will be $2.5 million, and there will be about the same number of students.
Trustee Jerry Callen said he was not pleased with the budget because he thinks it emphasizes teacher salaries at the expense of maintenance. Noting that 73% of the funding goes to salaries, Callen said, "I don't like the trend we're setting."
The new budget shows a 13% increase over the 1977-78 budget. Major increases are in teacher salaries, transportation and equipment.
Teachers signed a new contract last week which includes a ten percent across-the-board raise. A new five-year transportation contract, also signed this year, provides a 32% increase in busing costs next year.

The 83% equipment increase of $16,000 is not intended to finance any specific project, trustees say. They claim they must overshoot estimates of the district's financial needs in order to actually receive what is required.
If the budget is approved by the Jerome district school board Monday, Jerome will spend $952 per pupil next year. Last year's per-pupil expenditures were $840.
A light winter this year enabled the district to spend less than was budgeted for heat and utilities, and this savings was projected again in the 1978 utility allocation.
Superintendent Percy Christensen said the schools will have a net 1088 of one teacher next year. He projects 2,800 students for 1979, an increase of 164 over last November's enrollment.

Rogers' one hitter lifts Expos over slumping Dodgers

United Press International — There are times when Steve Rogers behaves like the best right-handed pitcher in the National League. Thursday night was one of those moments.

Rogers stopped the slumping Los Angeles Dodgers on just one hit — a first-inning homer by Reggie Smith — in pitching the Montreal Expos to a 4-1 triumph for their eighth victory in their last 10 games.

A right-hander with good control, a sinking fastball and a good curve, Rogers has been the Expos' best pitcher since joining the club in 1973. Yet, his career has been plagued by a lack of hitting support and, at times, a lack of concentration which has cost him several games.

When he's in command of his game, however, there are few better pitchers. His effort against the Dodgers was the third one-hitter of his career, but he says it was the best game he's ever pitched.

"This was not the best game of my career," said Rogers, 35. "I feel the best was earlier this season when I was carrying a no-hitter into the eighth inning against the Pirates. But of these three one-hitters that I have had, this one was the best because it came against such a tough hitting team."

"It's been a funny season for me because I've been in so many close games. In the games that I lost, I never gave up more than three runs. The important thing is I try to be consistent. I never get discouraged even when I lose these close games."

Even Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda, whose team has lost seven of its last eight games, had to tip his hat to Rogers.

"Rogers pitched a heck of a game," said Lasorda. "I've always said he was a great pitcher. That's the best game against my club anywhere this season."

Andre Dawson's three-run homer in the sixth off loser Don Sutton, 4-6, provided the winning margin for the Expos.

Martin cited for gestures

NEW YORK (UPI) — American League President Lee MacPhail has issued a warning to the New York Yankees about the obscene gestures of Manager Billy Martin on the field.

"When I see anything of this nature, whether it's a letter from a fan or I see it on TV myself, I don't let it pass without calling it to the attention of the player or club," MacPhail said.

MacPhail declined to be specific about what caused him to reprimand Martin.

The warning was sent in a private letter, dated June 5, to Yankees President Art Rosen that accompanied a bulletin from the league office circulated to all players. The bulletin included a number of routine matters plus the problem of obscene language and gestures.

"This was a warning," MacPhail said. "People have been warned if we have positive evidence of this kind of thing in the future, there will be disciplinary action."

"The letter was tremendously upsetting to me," Rosen said. "I believe in the Yankee tradition. There is an obligation to all concerned to uphold that tradition."

MASON, Ohio (UPI) — Judy Rankin's back is better. That could mean headaches for the rest of the LPGA field.

Americans ousted from British Open

TROON, Scotland (UPI) — Frank Campbell, a 52-year-old Alabama insurance broker, was the last American to be ousted from the British Open as he was defeated by South African's Gavin Levenson Thursday.

both years, is witness in 1978, due partly to some nagging back trouble.

But Rankin, claiming her back "is not bad at all," fired a 5-under-par 67 Thursday to grab a share of the first-round lead with JoAnn Washam in the $150,000 LPGA Championship.

Washam, like Rankin, looking for her first "major" women's title, also was forced off the tour earlier in the year by physical problems — in her case, calcium deposits in her right shoulder.

She missed more than a month but except for some first-round problems, has been playing well.

at 2 under 70, while nine players, including rookie Nancy Lopez, looking for a record-tying fourth straight win, and JoAnne Carner, were at 71.

"I missed about six putts which is terrible," Janet complained, "but I didn't let it get me. I'm the perennial optimist."

LPGA Hall of Fame, said she was "very surprised to have played so well."

"I'm just tickled to death," she said, "I hit it very decently and putted very well."

McTear fails to qualify in AAU heat

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Houston McTear, the former Florida schoolboy sensation who dominated the sprints in winter indoor track, will have to wait another year to win his first AAU title.

The 21-year-old Cerritos College runner was a surprise casualty Thursday in the opening day of the National AAU Championships in the sun and fog at UCLA's Drake Stadium.

McTear ran a non-qualifying fifth in one of the three semifinal heats for today's finals of the 100-meter dash and then blamed leg cramps on his performance.

"I had cramps in both legs while I was sitting in the blocks," he said, "My left leg started bailing up midway through the race. The harder I ran, the more I tightened up."

"I'm disappointed because I was planning on coming back and really dominating everything in the finals."

On a day that started with plenty of sun and 80-degree heat, but later fell into fog over the field, the muscular McTear was up against a tough field — cramps or not.

Panamanian Guy Abrahams won the heat in a career best of 10.16 seconds, followed by Steve Williams in 10.21 and NCAA double sprint champion Clancy Edwards in 10.26. McTear's time was 10.33.

The other 100-meter finalists were defending AAU champion Don Quarrie of Jamaica, Steve Riddick, former Illinois star, and University of Oregon's Don Coleman, Hugh Fraser of Canada and Roy Robinson. In addition to McTear, two-time NCAA 100 champ Harvey Glimb of Auburn, 1972 Olympian Eddie Hart and Dr. Delano Merritt will make it into the finals.

"I haven't recuperated from the NCAA meet yet," Edwards said. "It's tough to go back-to-back in two major meets like this where there are so many heats. I think there should be more than one week between the NCAA and AAU meets."

Edwards may have a point. He scored 22 1/2 points at Eugene, Ore., last weekend to lead University of Southern California to the NCAA title.
