

'Cuckoo's Nest' author won't help Idaho teacher

By STEVEN K. WAGNER
BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — Author Ken Kesey, who drew national attention when he threatened to sue St. Anthony school officials who removed his book "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" from a high school classroom, says he will not help the teacher fired over the incident.

John Fogarty began teaching the novel, which presents an allegorical look at life in a mental institution, late in 1977. But parents of some of the 15 students in the class complained language it contained was inappropriate. Fogarty called it "unconventional" and his students stood by him.

Kesey threatened to sue for copyright infringement after pages from the novel were copied and distributed as examples. Fogarty later was fired over the issue.

"I can't worry about little things that happen way out in little old Idaho," said Kesey, who several months ago sympathized with Fogarty and said any legal action he would take would be based on whether Fogarty was fired or retained.

"He seems to have taken the situation into his own hands and it's his problem now," Fogarty said school officials for $10,000 in an effort to have the book reinstated and his contract for next year renewed. He said his freedom of speech had been violated and that he believed he would not be retained at St.

Anthony High School.

Kesey had said several months ago he did not want to jeopardize Fogarty's position at the school and that any possible copyright suit would depend on how the teacher's employment situation was resolved.

Kesey, who spoke by telephone with United Press International Tuesday night from his home near Eugene, Ore., said he decided to back out of the situation after Fogarty filed the suit.

"He seems to have taken the situation into his own hands," the author said. "He can't expect me to come running to his side when he gets into trouble. I've got my own problems. It's his problem now."

Kesey said in April, shortly after Fogarty's suit was filed in U.S. District Court, he still was considering filing a copyright infringement complaint. He said he had been "making moves behind the scene because I didn't want to make a press issue out of the thing. We're just sitting back waiting to see what happens with the teacher's suit."

He said he hoped Fogarty would be retained. But Tuesday he said he had not thought about the issue since then and that he had not been in contact with his attorneys.

"I had thought about getting involved but he's gotten himself into this mess and seems to want to handle it himself," Kesey said. "So I'm going to let him. It's not my problem anymore."

Gas-rationing plan revealed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy Secretary James Schlesinger today proposed a new standby gasoline-rationing plan — for use in times of crisis — calling it "the most complex" than one issued by the Ford administration but later withdrawn by President Carter.

Schlesinger stressed that rationing under the plan could occur only in time of crisis, such as another oil embargo or a Middle East war that cut off tanker shipments from the Persian Gulf.

If said a new embargo could cause a much worse energy pinch than the last one, justifying the "painful action" of rationing — because the United States now imports about 44 percent of its oil compared to about one-third of its oil during the 1973-74 embargo.

Under the Carter plan, the government would mail special "ration checks" to each owner of a registered motor vehicle, with one check per vehicle. The checks could be exchanged at banks for gasoline coupons worth five gallons each.

"Ration checks would be issued quarterly in a form similar to U.S. Treasury checks, but in gallon denominations rather than dollars," an Energy Department statement said. "The value in gallons of a ration check would depend on the available national supply of gasoline."

The plan must be approved by both houses of Congress, and Schlesinger said he does not expect approval before January.

It would be up to the president to order rationing into effect in event of a crisis. Either house of Congress could block the start of rationing at that time.

Schlesinger said the new plan could be put into effect within 45 days of an emergency declaration by the president, compared to more than 90 days under the Ford plan, because the new system is less complex.

The energy secretary said each passenger car would get the same allocation of gasoline, regardless of its fuel efficiency. He said the only vehicles that would not get any allotment are recreational vehicles.

Weapons obtained with the checks could be used to purchase gasoline or could be sold in a "white market," where their price would be set on the basis of supply and demand.

Schlesinger said basing rationing on individual vehicles, rather than issuing coupons to each licensed driver as Ford proposed, would be fairer because there are so many counterfeit drivers' licenses.

In another major switch from the Ford proposal, Schlesinger said coupons issued under the new plan would carry numbers.

Search planned for illegal aliens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Census Bureau plans a special effort during the 1980 census to find out just how many illegal aliens from Mexico are living in the United States.

Census Bureau Director Manuel Plotkin said Wednesday the bureau will use special street-wise census takers who will scout bars, poolhalls and saloons to ferret out the illegal aliens who are believed to number at least 5 million.

Plotkin said Mexicans living in the United States illegally would be naturally suspicious of census takers even though the bureau will try to get the message across that it will give information on individuals to no other government agencies.

"We're going to do our best job to count them," he told a news briefing. "The Constitution says we must count all inhabitants."

The census was criticized in 1970 for missing members of minority groups. By the bureau's own estimate, derived from birth and death figures and other public records, the 1970 census underestimated the population by 2.5 percent, including 7.7 percent of the black population. The census put the population at 203 million that year.

State convention starts today

Democrats also have taxes on their minds

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Property tax relief, the overriding issue at last week's Republican state convention, is expected to also dominate the Idaho Democratic state convention that opens in Boise today.

Idaho Democrats probably will agree with the Republicans that property tax relief is the key issue in this year's political debates.

But the two parties will differ somewhat on how best to cut taxes and control spending in Idaho.

And more than a few Democrats think they have a better idea than the 1 percent initiative.

"We're working on several ideas now," Steve Leroy, press secretary to Gov. John Evans said Wednesday. "We're writing a position paper now for the governor and hopefully we'll go with portions of that to the resolutions committee."

Tax relief is a Democratic issue, Leroy said, "and we see it to be the important issue of the 1978 campaign." Democratic alternatives to the 1 percent initiative, he added, might include homestead exemptions, local option taxation, income tax structure changes, sales tax changes, and a reclassification of property in Idaho for the purpose of taxation.

Evans isn't interested in just a tax shift, Leroy added, "he wants more equitable taxation."

Back in December he proposed that issue, and the people saw it the way he did. They still do."

Idaho's 1 percent initiative, and California's Proposition 13 on which it was based, were endorsed in principle at last week's GOP state convention. But delegates refused to support the specific contents of those two measures.

The 1 percent initiative would limit Idaho property taxes to 1 percent of actual market value, a cut estimated at between 50 and 60 percent of most local property taxes.

Before the initiative can be placed on the ballot in November, petitions containing nearly 26,000 signatures must be filed by July 7 with Secretary of State Pete T. Cenarrusa. Cenarrusa has said it is almost certain initiative supporters will reach that goal.

Evans has opposed the 1 percent initiative, although he has also stated that should it pass in November he would implement the spirit of that measure.

Democratic candidates have split on the initiative, with some endorsing the proposal and others opposing it.

But Evans has also advocated several tax cut and tax shift proposals likely to be discussed at this week's Democratic state convention.

One idea calls for a "homestead exemption." Under this proposal, a certain amount of the value of a person's home would be exempt from property taxes. Amounts differ, but most suggestions for this type of legislation have said the first $10,000 or $15,000 of property value should not be taxed.

In his State of the State address earlier this year, Evans also called for a constitutional amendment, which would allow property to be taxed at different rates.

The Evans proposal suggested in the last session of the legislature was to assess taxes on most homes on the basis of 10 percent of their value, and, to tax businesses on the basis of 20 percent of their value, and tax corporations and utilities on a rate based on 30 percent of their actual value.

Local option taxation is another issue likely to be discussed by Democrats this week. In his State of the State address Evans called for legislation giving counties and cities a free hand in levying local taxes. This proposal also died in committee, although limited local taxes were granted two resort cities.

Advocates of local option taxation insist cities and counties could shift part of the property tax burden onto local option taxes. This would result in a more equitable distribution of the tax load, they say. But opponents fear local option taxes would merely give cities and counties a green light for increased spending, not reduction of property taxes.

Evans may also propose changes in Idaho's income and sales tax laws, Leroy said, although the governor would prefer action first on his other proposals.

The Democratic Convention opens today with meetings of the executive and rules committees. Candidate workshops will be held in the morning, while Evans will deliver the official opening address tonight.

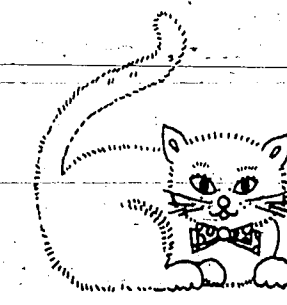

Friday will be occupied with speeches by Democratic candidates, committee meetings, and an evening barbecue. Saturday final adoption of the party's platform, resolutions and rules will take place.

Diplomats aren't the only U.N. pussyfooters

By ISRAEL SHENKER
O.N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — There are cats in the basement of the United Nations headquarters here and they are causing headaches in the upper stories.

Last month the United Nations medical director wrote to the Secretariat News complaining that cats on Level 3B of the Secretariat Building soiled "stools, documents, and uniforms being repaired," that ventilation was difficult and that the nuisance was "intolerable for those working there." Don't feed the cats, he pleaded, don't release trapped cats, don't steal their tails.

When the U.N. Animal Rights Club investigated, it, too, was appalled — on behalf of the cats. "You should see how horrible it is," said one member. "Very hazardous, and the cats never see the light of day."

Learning that cats were being exterminated, the club offered to find them homes. It wrote to The Secretariat News saying that the cats are not a group of terrorists or vindictive beings. They deserve to be treated with as much concern as its due any living, sentient being that is able to suffer."

Two weeks ago the club learned that six more cats had been trapped and four of them killed, without so much as a word to the club. When club officers tried to protest, they could not get through to Henry S. Jaran, chief of buildings management service. His secretary said that policy was policy.

But the liberation struggle was not over. Last week, after a year of rebuffs, the Animal Rights Club finally won United Nations recognition, and members attended the signing of the constitution. Who should turn up as chairman of the subcommittee on clubs of the United Nations Staff Recreation Council but Jaran.

Seizing on his presence, club members engaged him in what two participants characterized as "a very heated exchange." He finally invited the clubs to submit an official memorandum outlining the responsibilities it was prepared to take, and said he would see if a new policy could be approved.

The club sent the memorandum, as well as a complaint to the chairman of the United Nations Committee Staff Committee. "We asked him how high you have to go," said a club member. "Do you have to go to the secretary general to get cats in the basement?"

Under United Nations regulations, all except especially designated staff members are forbidden to speak to the press, so those who risked their careers by discussing this affair requested anonymously, "we are outside the United States," and recourse to courts or law."

Defending his handling of the case, Jaran pointed out that the club had no official status without his subcommittee's approval; he had delayed recognition because he felt there were too many clubs.

Though the United Nations has been charged with having a bureaucratic mentality and even with pussyfooting, Jaran this week signed a forthright protocol headed "Policy Concerning Cats Trapped on United Nations Premises."

When a cat is trapped, an official will call one of three members of the Animal Rights Club. If none of the three can be reached within three hours, the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will be summoned. Jaran added, however, that the new policy would not take effect until he got the view of the society on approved practices in dealing with cats.

He now has written an ASPCA vice president — the secretary general, Kurt Waldheim, would be the appropriate authority to get in touch with the society's president — and is awaiting a reply.

Jaran even tried to get an answer by phone, but he encountered the problem that the Animal Rights Club did not when it tried to call him. "The vice president wasn't in," said Jaran, "or he wasn't available."

Feds vow to be careful when searching newsrooms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department told Congress today the government will observe "careful deference" to the First Amendment in applying a Supreme Court ruling that allows police to search newsrooms.

Regulations being drafted by the Justice Department will ensure law enforcement does not abuse the new authority, Phillip Heymann, assistant to Attorney General Griffin Bell, told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee.

The guidelines will "ensure that if search must be undertaken, seizure of material will not have the effect of a prior restraint" of public opinion or broadcast, he said.

"We believe that these regulations offer assurance to the press that no change is contemplated in our longstanding policy of prodigious restraint with regard to press searches," Heymann said.

The constitution does not forbid newsroom searches, he said, but "the Justice Department has a responsibility to reassure the press and the public that our policy remains one of careful deference to the First Amendment."

The high court ruled states are not prevented from getting search warrants to look for evidence of a crime in the homes or offices of people or organizations — including publications and broadcast stations.

Leading journalists who testified said the ruling would allow police to search reporters' notes, seizing evidence irrelevant to the case at hand, and could impair a reporter's promise of confidentiality with sources.

Grant Dillman, vice president and Washington manager of UPI, said journalists fear they "may find themselves acting as unofficial investigators for many different agencies and, second, that the threat of retaliatory raids may dim the zeal of reporters looking into official wrongdoing."

Dillman said big city news media could defend themselves better than smaller papers and stations. The "empathy" between local courts and local law enforcement officials would

More tremors hit Greece

SALONICA, Greece (UPI) — New tremors shook the devastated biblical port of Salonica repeatedly today, sending hundreds of remaining residents fleeing the nearly deserted city as rescuers pulled more bodies from the debris of Tuesday night's shattering quake.

As aftershocks — at the rate of several an hour — kept the city trembling, rescue crews today pulled four more bodies from the ruins of a quake-devastated apartment building.

Discovery of the latest victims brought the official toll to 20 dead and more than 200 reported missing in the powerful earthquake that struck the industrial capital of northern Greece Tuesday night. More than 100 others were injured.

Northern Greece Minister Nicholas Martis said he feared the toll would rise as rescue crews searched through the debris of the eight-story apartment building in which 13 were known dead.

As the aftershocks continued, hundreds of residents jammed Salonica airport seeking to flee to Athens. Olympic Airways promised extra flights to handle the rush.

Hundreds more lined up at bus stations for buses out of the region. City officials estimated 75 percent of Salonica's 720,000 population had already fled the city. Most of those remaining camped in open spaces or moved to one-story homes of relatives, considered safer.

Gold treasures recovered

VOLUNTOON, Conn. (UPI) — Police today cut the seals on the doors of a tractor-trailer rig hijacked and abandoned by two bandits and found the $1.6 million treasure in gold and silver apparently intact.

About 12 heavily armed police officers in camouflage suits kept sentry duty during the night on the rig abandoned on a logging road, hoping the two thieves who pulled off the heist and camouflaged their treasure, would return. They did not.

The tractor-trailer — carrying a cargo of gold, silver and other precious metals from Connecticut to a Massachusetts refinery — was commandeered by two gunmen about 7 a.m. Wednesday on Interstate 95 in North Stonington. The driver, George Smith of Fairfield, Conn., was not hurt.

The green-and-white rig was found late Wednesday about 10 miles from the scene of the hijacking in the Pachaug State Forest in Voluntown, a few miles from the Rhode Island border, near the junction of Routes 128, 163 and 49.

John McLeod of the Connecticut State Police said before opening the doors to the rig, they were dusted for fingerprints by the Connecticut major crime squad, which also looked for other physical evidence.

make issuance of search warrants "almost automatic," he said. Robert Lewis, speaking for the society of professional journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, said his group can envision situations where police could demand access to newspaper computers, which are now widespread to obtain unpublished stories.

Paul Davis, vice president of the wradio Television News Directors Association, said, "The existence of this power is inherently abusive and could produce open season on journalists in many communities."

Julian Goodman, chairman of NBC, warned giving law enforcement officials the "right to rummage through the files of news organizations." He said "the Supreme Court's decision will undermine the ability of the print and broadcast media to gather news fully and effectively."

The panel was considering bills introduced by Sens. Birch Bayh D-Ind., John Heinz, R-Pa., and Robert Dole, R-Kan., to require states to seek subpoenas that could be contested in court instead of search warrants that could be issued immediately and lead to raids on the homes or offices of people not suspected of a crime.

Smaller tax cut planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration has abandoned its $20 billion tax cut-revision bill and instead will support a straight $15 billion cut with no other changes, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said today.

The decision to go with a smaller cut, unencumbered by other tax law changes, was a recognition that no tax bill could gain enough support even to get out of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee unless it had provisions unacceptable to the administration.

The administration's decision was revealed to House leaders Wednesday afternoon in a meeting with Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and other top economic advisers.

"He (Blumenthal) is going to work on the members of the Ways and Means Committee," said O'Neill.

The major problem with the bill involving an amendment by Rep. William Steiger, R-Wis., to give more favorable tax treatment to capital gains. President Carter stood by the provision, and House leaders have taken the same stand, but the amendment has gained strong support.

"This is a bill meant for the wealthy and the wealthy alone," O'Neill said of the Steiger amendment.

Clothespin makers pinched

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI) — American producers of clothespins will be driven out of business if cheaper imports from Communist countries continue to flow into the United States, industry representatives testified today at an unusual federal hearing.

Two top members of the U.S. International Trade Commission today heard only the second case in its history brought under a special section of the U.S. Trade Act.

The clause deals with unfair competition from Communist countries and puts quotas and duties on Communist imports.

Myron Solter, representing New England clothespin makers, said, "There has been a significant identifiable amount of direct loss of sales to imports from Communist countries."

Solter held up a $1 package of 72 wooden spring clothespins imported from China and also showed a package of three dozen Romanian clothespins selling for 59 cents. Meanwhile, domestic clothespins have sold for as much as $1.92 this year, he said.

Fantastic art objects sold

LONDON (UPI) — Medieval works of art from the Robert von Hirsch collection sold for such phenomenal prices today that half the collection created the biggest single art auction session in history.

The morning session alone barely missed beating the entire Mentmore "sale of the century" total.

So high were the prices that one world record was set, then broken, then broken again. Two items went for more than $2 million each.

The 197 medieval works of art — only half the number amassed over a 70-year period by a collector who willed that his collection should be sold to "share the joys of ownership" — sold for a total of $11.78 million. It was the biggest single-session art sale of all time.

Sobthey Parke Bernet, the auctioneer, said it missed beating the eight-day "sale of the century" dispersal of the contents of Mentmore Towers by only $38,850.

Crowe crows over polls too soon

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — A press release plating Idaho gubernatorial candidate James B. Crowe as an election front-runner was dismissed Wednesday as "too much campaign jargon" by two Crowe for governor employees.

The release, dated June 20 and originating from Boise, stated Crowe was "happy at his new position in the polls" and that "many of the press throughout the state placed him in second or third position and rising."

Dick Hyneman, campaign coordinator for northern counties, said he questioned the Hayden Lake politician on the release but that Crowe told him, "Yeah, it's going to go."

Mai McDonald, press secretary for Crowe, blamed the release on the candidate's inexperience, saying, "he has a habit of putting his foot in his mouth" and "he shouldn't be writing his own campaign news releases."

Hyneman said Crowe based his information on "informal conversations" with the media during last week's Republican state convention in Pocatello.

"To my knowledge, no formal polls were taken showing Crowe as either second or third poll," Hyneman said. "To be frank with you we have nowhere to go but up."

Hyneman said the polls conducted by the Twin Falls Times-News during the convention plating Crowe in sixth position out of a field of seven — including an undecided position — was "more realistic" and that he "couldn't argue with it."

The Times-News polled 331 delegates at the convention and showed Vern Havenscott to be leading in nearest opponent by nearly a 2-1 margin. Crowe came in sixth with 1.8 percent or six votes.

Hyneman did say he thought Crowe's credibility improved during the convention but not to the extent of elevating the candidate's lagging standings.

"If we would have picked up one delegate it would have been a great deal," Hyneman said.

Hyneman said Crowe did receive a good bit of attention from the media during the convention but theorized it might have been due to "better bar facilities than the other candidates."

"Larsen only served punch," Hyneman chuckled.

Rev. Moon fights KCLIA allegations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Evangelist Sun Myung Moon will return to United States and fight "all the way to the Supreme Court" a congressional subpoena for his alleged links with Korean intelligence. Moon's top aide said Thursday.

Calling the House probe a "sordid investigation," Col. Bo HJ Pak said Moon, head of the Unification Church, "will continue to return to the United States after the completion of his religious mission in Europe, although the date of his return has not yet been determined."

When Rev. Moon returns, he will fight the subpoena on First Amendment (free speech) grounds, all the way to the Supreme Court if necessary.

Pak also announced that he and the church had filed a $30 million damage suit against Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn., chairman of the House subcommittee seeking Moon's testimony, and two subcommittee investigators. Besides the damages, Pak said, the lawsuit wants the court to order a halt to the alleged "conspiracy" to "violate the constitutional rights of the Unification Church members in the United States to advance Korean government policies and aims."

Republicans are taught how not to act like Republicans

By PHIL GAILEY
 Washington Star
 WASHINGTON — About 70 Republican congressional candidates from around the country have been in Washington this week for a cram course on how to rout Democratic incumbents.
 If they need most of the advice — some will call it spousal — dished out at the four-day workshop put on by the National Republican Congressional Committee, their old supporters back home may have trouble recognizing them: when they resume their campaigning.

 The gist of what they heard from political consultants and party professionals was this: Don't talk and act like Republicans — or at least like people expect Republicans to behave politically.
 Get rid of political buzz words, no more snide remarks about the "Democrat" Congress; be careful about running against Jimmy Carter; prune high-falootin' words from the political vocabulary; stay away from liberal and conservative labels, slide into ideological low gear, and pick issues carefully instead of dragging all the so-called Republican causes into a race.

 "That's like telling a duck not to quack, waddle or swim," quipped one candidate during a coffee break. "A lot of us are going to lose, so at least we ought to have a little fun."
 The candidates, most of whom are on kamikaze missions for their party, and know it, arrived at the Marriott Twin Bridges Motel for a week of political grooming that stressed pragmatic politics. They were scrubbed on campaign financing, public speaking, the use of public opinion surveys and the courting of ethnic minorities and other voter groups who traditionally vote Democratic.

 But the major thrust of the sessions focused on the need to break out of the Republican stereotype that alienated many Independent voters. And although nobody mentioned any names, the message seemed rather clear: You don't win congressional elections in most districts — by imitating Ronald Reagan's presidential losses.

 "We tend to bore people with statistics and scare them with our rhetoric," said Wilma Goldstein, the NRCC's associate campaign director. "Republicans usually are on the right side of issues, but we let our use of inflammatory rhetoric kill us. When Republicans talk about crime in the street, a lot of people get the impression we're talking about vigilante patrols. So they turn to the moderate approach of the majority party."

 Republicans, she said, have been on the right side of the tax issue for years now, but they could blow it by making to embrace Howard Jarvis, the bellwether author of California's tax-cutting Proposition 13.
 A better role model on this issue, she suggested, is Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

A SHARPSHOOTER FROM THE MADISON SWAT UNIT DRAWS A BEAD ON FILEMON AMARO JR. ... police negotiators try to talk Amaro into releasing social worker he took as hostage

SWAT drama 'was just like television'

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — A heavily armed police SWAT team used a volley of shotgun fire to end a four-hour standoff with a burly fugitive who police say killed a sheriff's deputy, wounded another and took a woman hostage.
 "It was just like television," said Paul Harrison, 21, a witness to the four-hour drama Wednesday on a busy street corner near the University of Wisconsin.
 The fugitive, Filemon Amaro, 33, of San Antonio, Texas, suffered minor wounds and the hostage, social worker Nellie Gurath, was treated for minor cuts suffered when she dived to safety from the car in which Amaro held her at gunpoint.
 Police Chief David Couper said the final shots were fired by two officers from the city's Special Weapons and Training (SWAT) force, the only officers authorized to shoot. Police did not explain why the shots were fired.

 The drama began shortly after noon when the fugitive allegedly shot two sheriff's bailiffs in a Waukesha County courtroom where he was being arraigned on charges of first degree sexual assault, reckless use of a weapon and parole violation.
 Witnesses said Amaro suddenly began fighting with bailiff Michael Geszwain, 52, wrestled his .38-caliber revolver away and fatally shot him. He critically wounded Quin O'Brien, 50, sergeant in charge of the county jail, then took the woman hostage and fled to Madison, about 50 miles away.

Amaro was spotted by Madison police, who fired at his car at the corner of busy Park and Regent streets near the University of Wisconsin campus and shot a tire. Witnesses said several shots were fired and people began "leaving cars and running."
 At the scene, police evacuated two medical buildings that contained doctors' offices. Patients were turned away before they entered and told to go to a nearby hospital if it was an emergency.
 Two police officers — one of them speaking to the fugitive in Spanish — and an FBI agent negotiated with Amaro for four hours. They stood about 20 feet from the man, who was sitting with the woman in the front seat of the car, a .38-caliber police revolver trained on her.

Wanted before European trip Carter urges legislators to act on energy program

By HELEN THOMAS
 UPI White House Reporter
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter urged a group of congressmen today to complete action on his energy program before he leaves next month for West Germany and an economic summit.
 Western European allies have been critical of the United States for its failure to craft a meaningful energy plan that would trim ever-expanding U.S. oil imports and help balance the international economic scales.
 Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said Carter did not impose a deadline, however. He would like the package done in time for the summit in mid-July, Schlesinger said, but realistically sees the congressional recess this fall as a more likely date.
 "If the crude oil tax plan — designed to raise domestic crude to world price levels — remains stalled in Congress, Carter might impose a fee on imported crude, according to those who attended the White House meeting this morning.

 Whether Carter imposes such a fee depends, said Schlesinger, "on the president's assessment of the likely response of Congress prior to the recess on Oct. 1."
 Such an option would be administratively difficult, Schlesinger said: "It would require a larger bureaucracy, it would mean further controls."
 Chairman JERRY Jackson of the Senate Energy Committee said he hoped Congress would have Carter's other proposals on utility rate reform, coal conversion and conservation on Carter's desk by July 13.
 Conferees have reached a compromise on natural-gas pricing, leaving Carter's proposal for a crude oil tax as the last remaining hurdle.

Norwegian soldiers released in Lebanon

HASBAYA, Lebanon (UPI) — Palestinian guerrillas detained and later released two Norwegian soldiers of the United Nations peacekeeping force during a machine-gun and rocket clash with the U.N. troops in southern Lebanon today, residents reported.
 The fighting was the first major incident between the two sides since the Palestine Liberation Organization agreed to halt guerrilla infiltrations behind United Nations lines in the region last month.
 There were no immediate reports of casualties on either side, they said.
 The clashes broke out as Lebanese President Elias Sarkis scheduled a nationwide speech on both the uneasy peace in the south and the troubled north — scene of recent fighting between rival Christian factions.

Missile fails

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — A Trident missile fell into an undisclosed area of the South Atlantic test range today when a malfunction occurred in the second stage, a spokesman at Patrick Air Force said.
 It was the second failure in 13 test flights for the Trident missile, which is designed to carry nuclear warheads and be launched from submerged submarines.

Saber rattling in Yugoslavia

Is this Tito's last Congress?

By SYLVANA FOA
 BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — The phrase "after Tito" is rarely even whispered.
 But with President Josip Broz Tito now 86, concern for Yugoslavia's post-Tito future clearly dominates the public speeches, private discussions and future planning of delegates to the Communist Party's 11th Congress.
 Yugoslavs affectionately joke about the hair that has miraculously "grown" over the once bald spots on Tito's head — but they glare angrily when someone remarks that the 11th party congress may be the aging president's last.
 "People were saying the same thing at the 10th Congress four years ago," said one party delegate. "We see no cause for concern."

Tito himself may not be so optimistic. In his inaugural address to the Congress Tuesday, Tito set the theme that his aides continued to hammer out in their speeches Wednesday — that Yugoslavia is strong militarily, stable socially and able to carry out its current policies with continuity.
 "The most telling thing is the amount of saber-rattling they've been doing at the Congress," one Western diplomat said. "They're making a big effort to tell the world that Yugoslavia is not vulnerable and that post-Tito Yugoslavia is not going to be up for grabs."
 Both Tito and Defense Minister Gen. Nikola Ljubicki made a point of praising the nation's strategy of "people's self-defense," adopted after the 1956 Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Bond denial upheld for convicted spy

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld a lower court's denial of bond for convicted Vietnamese spy David Truong.
 Truong, an expatriate living in this country, and former United States Information Agency employee Ronald Humphrey, were convicted in U.S. District Court in Alexandria on May 19 of passing secret State Department documents to Vietnamese officials in Paris.
 Truong is seeking release pending his appeal, but U.S. District Judge Albert V. Bryan Jr. revoked his $250,000 bond after his conviction.

British issue protest on dissident sentencing

LONDON (UPI) — The British government today branded the sentences on two Soviet Jewish dissidents as a breach of the Helsinki agreement and other human rights documents.
 Commenting on five-and four-year Siberian exile sentences imposed on Vladimir Slepak and Ida Nudel in Moscow Wednesday, a Foreign Office spokesman said these were "a further sharp reminder of the tragic situation of Jews and others seeking to leave the Soviet Union and the need for continuing and determined efforts to persuade the Soviet authorities to adopt more humane policies."

What's happening to foreign aid?

Let 'em cruise on Addison Avenue

The cruisers of summer are out in full force. Along Addison Avenue and Blue Lakes Boulevard North in Twin Falls, the jacked-up Chevys and old pickups sputter and chug along each night in that teen-age American ritual of dragging the main streets in search of excitement.

At a recent Magic Valley Memorial Hospital board meeting, the security police complained about the cruisers. They said the young drivers were using a hospital parking lot as a turnaround point, squealing tires, revving their engines and disturbing hospital patients in the process.

The hospital board was asked to close off the parking lot to the cruisers. Shutting down the parking lot, patrolling it with police, arresting cruisers hardly seem appropriate.

Sure, the noise is bad on some nights. And when a teen-age driver peels out onto Addison some hospital patients grumble.

But is the annoyance really worth a confrontation between the kids and the police? How about a sign in the parking lot asking drivers to be quiet? Or, maybe the city police can issue a couple of warnings to the most obnoxious drivers.

But the hospital should hold off on any plans to shut the parking lot and then put patrols there to keep the cruisers out.

Cruising isn't a crime. It's simply a part of summer. Cruising isn't enough of a problem to warrant some crackdown by a security guard, a hospital, or the police.

A crackdown would only create a hot confrontation on a cool summer night.

Doctors must assume role as counselors

A Michigan doctor has challenged his colleagues to remember that a doctor's role in society involves more than the practice of medicine.

Dr. Peter A. Martin, speaking at a symposium in St. Louis during the American Medical Association's 127th annual convention, said that unqualified marriage counselors thrive because family doctors fail to help their patients solve marital problems.

He maintains that couples frequently are slow to realize they need counseling, but that a trusting relationship with a family doctor sometimes can prevent delay in seeking help.

Dr. Martin believes physicians have abdicated their centuries-old position as emotional as well as physical caretakers.

He terms the resulting situation as a "marriage counseling jungle" in the United States.

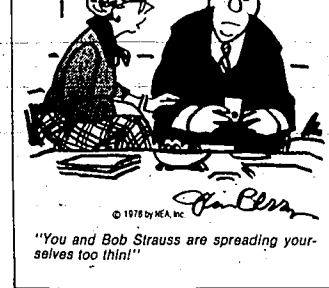

Because the primary-care physician is neglecting his responsibility, couples all too frequently turn to untrained, uncertified, self-serving practitioners who have invaded the field of marital therapy.

The physician has the responsibility of reversing this trend by taking on a more all-encompassing approach to his relationships with his patients.

The AMA can't do very much in reversing the trend.

Berry's World

"You and Bob Strauss are spreading yourselves too thin!"

WASHINGTON — You want to see a clear example of the influence of domestic politics on U.S. foreign policy, consider the effect of California's Proposition 13 on this year's federal foreign aid budget, which goes to the floor of the House in a few days.

Despite all the talk of U.S.-Soviet relations and new military technologies — the cruise missile, the neutron warhead, the guided anti-tank weapons, etc. — East-West and Atlantic relations are increasingly influenced by North-South relations and by trade and foreign aid, where the mood of the House of Representatives can be decisive.

JAMES RESTON

Members of the House, who are up for reelection this year, have not failed to notice the 2-1 vote for cutting property taxes in California by over 50 percent. In the last 10 days they have made sharp reductions in the appropriations for the Labor and Health, Education and Welfare Departments, and have even cut their own legislative appropriations by 5 percent. A good case can be made for these decisions.

The temptation to make even more drastic cuts in the foreign aid budget after Proposition 13 is even more severe. Nobody ever lost an election by voting to keep money at home, but there is an obvious conflict here between the political interests of congressmen and the imperative foreign policy interests of the nation.

The Carter administration has also heard the news from California, but it is still asking for $1.9 billion in bilateral development assistance abroad, and $3.5 billion in multi-lateral developments through the World Bank and regional development banks — for a total of about $5.4 billion.

The House Appropriations Committee has already cut $1.09 billion from these two types of foreign economic assistance — $875 million in multi-lateral aid, and $130 million in bilateral aid. But the critical battle will be on the House floor over a series of amendments to reduce the foreign aid budget much more drastically.

— Long Amendment. Rep. Clarence Long of Maryland has an amendment that would reduce the appropriations for the International Development Bank by an additional $584 million. — Miller Amendment. Rep. Clarence Miller of Ohio has a similar amendment to reduce the entire foreign aid bill by percent.

— Beard Amendment. Rep. Robin Beard of Tennessee has an amendment that would prohibit the use of any U.S. funds from being used "directly or indirectly" to support the governments of Cambodia, Vietnam, Laos, or Uganda. This seems reasonable enough, but adoption of such an amendment would virtually end U.S. participation in the World Bank, since the bank's charter forbids it from accepting any funds with such restrictions.

All these amendments had their followers long before Proposition 13 came out of California, and deserve serious consideration, but in relation to Proposition 13, which is the vital interests of the United States.

Foreign aid is not a charitable exercise like the New York Times Christmas Fund for "The 100 Neediest Cases." It goes to the developing world struggles in the poor nations during the last quarter of the century. The major confrontations between Washington and Moscow are no longer taking place over the great industrial complexes of the Ruhr, the Rhineland, and Japan, but in the Middle East, where weapons are clearly important, but also in black Africa, Southeast Asia and Latin America, where money, trade, economic assistance, health, education, and population control are likely to be more important than cruise missiles or neutron warheads.

The Congress has been right to concentrate on the balance of power and on the industrial power center since the last World War — "billions for bombers and missiles" has always been a popular slogan on the Hill — but new battlefields are now emerging.

The United States now depends on developing countries for 45 percent of its oil, 85 percent of its bauxite, 93 percent of its tin, 59 percent of its zinc ore and 58 percent of its iron ore.

U.S. trade with these poor developing countries is increasingly important. For example, according to official figures here, even in 1975 the United States exported $29 billion in goods to the non-uu developing countries — three times the 1970 total, three times our exports to Japan, and $3 billion more than our exports to Europe. The White House estimate is that "one out of every four American farm jobs and one out of every eight manufacturing jobs now depend on the sale of American goods abroad," and that "two million American jobs are now dependent on Third World exports."

So there is more to debate in the House in these coming days than the property tax revolt in California, important as that is. There is a policy to be decided for a changing and different world. World population today is roughly 4 billion. By the year 2000 it will be 6 billion, 87 percent of which will be living in the developing countries.

Unless this can be controlled, all bets on bombs and missiles may be irrelevant to the race between food and population, which is a foreign aid not a military question.

"If a free society cannot help the many who are poor," President Kennedy said in his inaugural address, "it cannot save the few who are rich."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Georgians are special

Administration possibly aided murderer

WASHINGTON — In October 1976, at a political fundraising luncheon, Congressman Andrew Young told Don Thevis, wife of a jailed pornographer, "I thought your husband got a bum rap."

In December 1976, Michael Thevis wrote to a former cellmate: "Things are going so terribly bad...I'm expecting some help from the new administration after this month."

In January 1977, after the Carter election but before Andy Young resigned his congressional seat to become U.S. ambassador, Young sent a maligned, to Norman Carlson, chief of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, asking that Thevis be transferred to a different prison for medical attention.

In February 1977, using his stationery as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Young became more insistent: "Please investigate this matter and inform me when Mr. Thevis will be released in view of his need for further surgery. Sincerely, Andrew Young, Ambassador."

The Justice Department was being taken over by Georgians; the prison chief transferred Thevis to the Medical Center for Federal Prisoners in Springfield, Mo.

What was the reason for the Young intercession? Simple: the ambassador was an aide claimant. The ambassador will not return calls on this subject. The cellmate who received the note found by police says that Thevis told him he had contributed $50,000 to the Carter campaign through Young and $250,000 through Bert Lance. Everyone angrily denies this, and there is no substantiation or investigation to discover any.

My guess is that Young was taken in by Thevis through subtle means. Though the source of the indictment reached Michael Thevis this year, he decided to end his incarceration. In the easiest jailbreak money could buy, he arranged to be transferred again, from the hospital to a jail in Indiana, to testify in a civil damage suit. Federal marshals guarding him were more than kind, and local jailers accepted $100 tips.

Tidily, Thevis finalized his divorce proceedings from his wife, who had been the one who spoke to the duped Andy Young, before departure. When this was concluded, Thevis was visited at the local jail by a young woman described deviously as "willowy" and "behaaved." He designated her to be boss of his financial empire, bade her a tender farewell pruriently watched by local lawmen, then sauntered out of jail and probably out of the county.

This week, as expected, the absent Thevis was indicted for 14 crimes including shooting one man to death personally, arranging for the murder of another, and otherwise restraining trade by causing the establishments of his porn competition to burn down. Wherever he is, Mike Thevis must be having a good laugh.

Since Jimmy Carter likes to denounce favored treatment to "big-shot crooks" and frown at excess legal aid to the rich, he will be interested in the pattern of lawyering. Bobby Lee Cook, of Summerville, Ga., is the key criminal lawyer. Cook also represented Billy Lee Campbell, convicted for embezzling a million dollars from Bert Lance's Calhoun Bank, and when his ex-client later told Senate investigators that Bert had been in on the deal, Cook disputed that story. Cook's fame reaches far. When Tongson Park telephoned Attorney General Griffin Bell from Korea, he tried to designate as the intermediary for his return one Bobby Lee Cook. Moreover, after Thevis fired his divorce lawyer, Warren Shulman, for his refusal to carry out some extra chores just before Thevis walked off, Shulman was summoned to Summerville to meet with Bobby Lee Cook. When the FBI asked him what they discussed, Shulman said he had sought legal advice from Cook and their discussion was thus privileged. (Bert Shulman's lawyer before the grand jury is Sidney D. Smith, who advised Bert Lance and Jimmy Carter during the Interregnum.)

Anybody want to produce a porno flick? The hero is a bearded entrepreneur of porn who attaches himself to the rising politico-legal powers in Georgia. His loyal wife collus the aid of a cabinet member, only to be rejected as she hero makes a knockout redhead queen of his enterprises and ally escapes just before the Keystone Kops charge him with murder. Supporting cast of rock stars and an array of Georgia legal talent.

Nothing X-rated about that. The only obscenity is the way the Justice Department's prison bureau can be influenced to lavishly favor a prisoner about to be charged with murders. No congressional investigation will take place. Georgians, as we know, are special.

California revolt is felt in Washington

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK WASHINGTON — Two weeks have passed since the California earthquake, and the tremors have at last crossed the Potomac. The House of Representatives last week voted to cut the Labor-Wellfare budget by $800 million. In terms of a $500 billion budget, it wasn't much, but it was a start. Thank you, Howard Jarvis.

Mr. Jarvis, of course, is the cantankerous apostle of the new political religion known as tax limitation. Since California's landslide vote of June 6 for his Proposition 13, his voice no longer cries alone in the wilderness. All kinds of politicians have got religion as an examination of the 220-181 vote in the House will suggest. Some of the 220 had never cast a vote for economy in their lives.

Here, as there, crises were raised that to reduce public spending, especially in areas of health, education and welfare, amounts to grinding the faces of the poor. In times past, such crises have proved marvelously effective; and as a consequence, the federal budget for welfare has become bloated beyond recognition. Until Brother Jarvis came along there seemed no possibility that the Labor-HEW appropriation ever would be touched by fiscal sanity. Now the boys are running scared.

Some other things have been happening in these two weeks. The news that reaches us from California is mostly maddening news. Daily we are deluged by pitiful stories of libraries closing, of firetrucks immobilized, of police laid off, of school teachers dismissed, all as a result of that dreadful Jarvis man. On examination, it appears that most of these doomsday tidings have to do with possible closings and possible cutbacks and response to the situation, but local imagination and local leadership could count for vastly more. A dispatch from Corona, Calif., informs us delectably that "the sleek new library on Main Street will probably close." Well, nonsense! The library won't close if Friends of the Corona Library won't stop sniffing and raise the money voluntarily to take up the slack.

The inference one draws from the post-referendum news is that Californians have become so absolutely dependent upon government, so weak and enfeebled, so pathetically gullus, that they are unable to lift a finger in their own behalf. I do not believe it for an instant.

In every community affected by Proposition 13, there are local industries, stores, banks, factories and well-heeled individuals who will benefit from substantial tax reduction. In many cases, these taxpayers can be persuaded to give large chunks of their savings back to their communities for parks, libraries, fire companies, or the like. Under federal income tax laws, such voluntary contributions would cost them nothing.

The goal is not only to enrich tribal treasures, but to make certain that this time they hold on to what they have.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

But another Atlanta grand jury had long been investigating for more serious charges than transmission of obscene material across state lines, for which Thevis had been jailed. When news of an impending murder and arson indictment reached Michael Thevis this year, he decided to end his incarceration. In the easiest jailbreak money could buy, he arranged to be transferred again, from the hospital to a jail in Indiana, to testify in a civil damage suit. Federal marshals guarding him were more than kind, and local jailers accepted $100 tips.

Indian lands hold wealth

The Council of Energy Resources Tribes, with initial federal assistance, is undertaking a comprehensive inventory of all tribal oil, coal, natural gas and other energy possessions. First with outside technical assistance and eventually with their own trained people, the tribes will maintain tight control over exploitation of the resources, negotiating advantageous leases with oil and coal enterprises.

The goal is not only to enrich tribal treasures, but to make certain that this time they hold on to what they have.

Times-News readers discuss dam payment from farmers, Kroeze's crusade, stolen pet

Kroeze devote lives to Lord

Editor, Times-News:
Ray Sullivan wrote an article on the Kroeze Brothers' Crusade that was called "The Cash Crusade."

I would like the people of Twin Falls to know that these brothers have given their lives to the Lord as very few have done. We were in their very first crusade in Wenatchee, Wash. The picture in the Life Story Book was one my wife took. We have known and been in many of their meetings, sometimes driving 200 miles or more to be there just like this crusade. Never have they asked anyone for money personally. I told them they would have to make the need known. You can only tell the people so they can do as they see the need.

I am surprised that you just couldn't get the right name or the right pictures. Of course, that was your first, and only mistake until "The Cash Crusade." The newspapers sure know how to change a high—If the people of Twin Falls are like a few, I feel sorry for them on the day of judgment.

I think you should state in the paper that this team is not out for the money. Speaking of money, how many bills are there that are not paid? I believe you can't find one.

You said Bill and John repeatedly asked for money. I guess that was all you heard! Why don't you tell it like it really was, just a crusade for souls of mankind.

Why don't you make a personal trip to Everett, Wash., and see how the boys really live and what the town thinks of them.

In your second paragraph you reported "sing-song chatter and country western music in their services. Of course, after seeing your article, I understand why you don't know the difference between gospel music and western. Also most of the 300 as you said understood every word. You said the brothers take turns pushing products. Johnny is the one that tells about records, tapes and books, which are sold for the work of the Lord. How much did you give in that meeting or in any other gospel meeting?

You said, when the offerings were taken, the words marvelous, marvelous came over the speakers. My dear-missed friend, the ladies were singing during the offering so I do hope this will set the record straight. Also I don't work for this team; I just love them and know what they stand for.

T-N knocked for 'publicity' given Kroeze Brothers

Editor, Times-News:
I am writing in regard to the full-page "publicity" given to the Kroeze Brothers' crusade here in Twin Falls.

I was absolutely astounded! What type of person would write such an article and try to discredit the motives and destroy the effectiveness of these dedicated Christians? And what other newspaper would have printed it?

The writer of the article and the photographer must have planned their method of attack in great detail—the finished product was a masterpiece! Had someone read that article to me, leaving out the names, I would not have even recognized it as being the same group that I heard and appreciated so very much. I attended four of the services and would like to have gone to every one. The music was great; the messages were timely, inspiring and right from the Word of God, and little Tammy's beautiful singing was a joy to all. I don't even know the denominational affiliation of the Kroeze families, and it isn't important, but I do know they love the Lord and are faithfully proclaiming the good news of the Bible and inviting people to receive Jesus as their savior, and then to live for Him. And this is the message that the world-needs most today.

By the way, did you know that all income from tapes and records is used to pay for their television ministry? And I very much doubt if their income equals even half of what a "writer" on a newspaper makes. I'm sure they wouldn't exchange their peace of mind and joy in the Lord for anything.

Did you know that these "high-living, money-grubbing" evangelists were eating sandwiches and salads that friends brought in? No, you probably didn't want to find out things like this. That might have made your article less credible. However, the article was such extreme mockery, I doubt that it was credible to but a very few anyway. And if the Kroeze families saw and read this, I imagine that you are at the top of their prayer list—praying that you, the writer, will see your need of a savior so that your heart can be filled with love rather than hate.

And to whomever decides what is to be printed in the Times-News: Why don't you promote righteous living, Godly homes and a return to moral values rather than exalting and promoting immorality and other evils that are weakening and threatening to destroy our wonderful America?

Farmers are government victims

Editor, Times-News:
Your issue of June is contained an article in which Steven Altred, water resources chief, is discussing what has stated when reporting the building of dams. "In the past, the federal government has provided 100 percent of the money."

Would that it were true! Doesn't he know who is financing the cost of the American Falls Replacement Dam? Farmers who have water stored there together with Idaho Power are paying for it.

Yesterday Congress approved the building of dams where they are needed. Our Congressmen are asking that the cost of the American Falls Dam be included and Senator Church is requesting that the farmers be reimbursed for the money they have been paying for it.

Candidates who favor an increase in sales tax or other taxes to replace any tax decrease will not be elected.

The last Idaho farm report which came out this week shows that farm income is below the cost of production. How can farmers pay even the one percent property tax?

President Carter wants it that way and is importing more meat to keep it that way.

Somebody stole pet Pekinges

Editor, Times-News:
I really hope that the people in Shoshone, who have twice stolen our little red Pekinges female are enjoying her company. She had a collar, license and had been spayed and is the beloved pet of a 2-year-old boy, so it was known she belonged to someone.

It breaks our hearts to know she has to make a life with people with such a lack of responsibility and low morals. May she have the endurance to survive such an existence.

By the way, her name is "Akeeta," she needed her stitches removed by the 19th and we hope her life with a common thief for a master will be bearable for her.

Traffic jam slows Sinatra

United Press International SHOW STOPPER

An old trouper like Frank Sinatra would be the last to shun the slogan, "the show must go on," but Wednesday night in Huntington, W.Va., it didn't. Seems, Old Blue Eyes got caught in an aerial traffic jam over Teterboro, N.J. — a jam that left thousands of fans waiting in vain at the city's Civic Center. Sinatra goes on tonight instead, and Huntington City manager Dick Barton says only a few ticket-holders have asked for refunds.

TRAVELER'S SYNDROME?

"Disco fever" may wind up a medical term, rather than just a hype phrase for the latest fad. Purdue University Prof. Paul Ziemer says in West Lafayette, Ind., the disco's thundering music and flashing lights may be playing havoc with the hearing, vision, and even the skin of overdoers. Ziemer says loud music can cause "irreversible" damage to hearing, and he adds flashing laser beams can burn a blind spot into the retina of the eye, while "black light" — actually ultraviolet — may cause skin cancer.

HELIPERM COUPBOY

Cowboy star Monte Montana — who says he was raised by Indians — was hailed a hero by the city of Los Angeles Wednesday for his work on behalf of abused and abandoned Indian children. The 69-year-old cowpoke blames booze for the troubles of Indian children — says their parents "get drunk and they abuse the children and neglect them. ... It's kind of a shame."

Maddox attempts to raise funds

ATLANTA (UPI) — Former Gov. Lester Maddox, looking to get money to repay debts from his losing 1974 campaign and a heart attack, said Wednesday he will sell memorabilia of his political career at public auction this weekend.

Maddox said he will sell the entire stock of a store where he sold alarm clocks and trinkets bearing his pickan-dee symbol. He said he would also sell certificates, awards, scrolls and plaques from the walls of the governor's office he occupied from 1967-71.

"It'll be mostly the things that I picked up in politics over the years," said Maddox. "Of course, I've got to sell out my stock of T-shirts and things from the store — even the bicycles."

As governor, Maddox was fond of riding a bicycle backward.

Maddox became a symbol of Southern segregation in the 1960s when he refused to allow blacks in his fried chicken restaurant and handed out pickhanded to customers of the Pickrick Restaurant, in opposition to federal orders to integrate. Along with the "Lester Maddox USA" alarmclocks, phonograph records — and trinkets he sold at his Under-ground Atlanta store, Maddox also sold autographed pickhanded — which he referred to as "Pickrick drumsticks."

Now, he said, he is unable to operate the store and will sell its stock to help pay about $150,000 in loans remaining from his unsuccessful campaign to regain the governor's office in 1974. Maddox was trounced by Gov. George Busbee in a runoff Democratic primary that year. "The debt was about $310,000 when I left office," Maddox said.

Since his heart attack, a series of appreciation dinners organized by Georgia Democrats — including Busbee — has chipped the backlog of overdue bills down to about $123,000, Maddox said.

"I don't have any idea how much we can make from the auction," Maddox said. "It depends on the size of the crowd."

Betty's plea ignored

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gerald Ford's political life was the main cause of Betty Ford's alcohol and drug problems, but she has refused to agree with her plea-not to seek the presidency again, McCall's magazine reported today.

The magazine said close friends and aides of Mrs. Ford say she turned to alcohol and drugs because of emotional problems caused by her husband's frequent absences during his political career.

Mrs. Ford has insisted her husband not run again, but he has ignored her wishes.

"Betty Ford was increasingly disappointed that once her husband was out of politics, at least officially, he did not diminish his travels," McCall's said.

The magazine said the day Mrs. Ford entered a rehabilitation center for treatment her husband was giving a political speech in Alabama and playing golf in a charity match, even though "her decision to seek such help had been planned by the family two weeks before."

Doonesbury cartoon target for O'Neill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill's staff tried so hard to get a Doonesbury cartoon killed or changed before publication that it "got kind of ridiculous," says a syndicate official.

In each of two strips drawn by Pulitzer Prize cartoonist Gary Trudeau, which ran June 15 and 16, radio announcer "Megaphone Mark" Slackmeyer was depicted interviewing a congressman called Lacey Davenport — a character based on Rep. Milllicent Fenwick, R.N.J. — about the progress of congressional ethics investigations.

In one strip, a coupon was included to be mailed to O'Neill asking for information about various congressmen mentioned as having received bribes from South Korean businessman Tongsun Park. One of those mentioned was O'Neill, for allegedly being the recipient of "$5,000 in parties" by Park. The coupon appeared Friday, and O'Neill's office sources said several hundred of them had been received as of Wednesday. The office will not discuss the matter officially.

In the other strip Lacey Davenport said some friends gave O'Neill a free interest in a nursing home in Boston, and "rather than offend his friends over a silly principle he graciously accepted. ... He just doesn't seem to know how to say no."

Both incidents have been reported in the past and no one has charged O'Neill with allegations of law or House ethics codes. O'Neill has said he actually lost money on the nursing home deal and the $5,000 party actually was a $20 steak dinner. The strips came to O'Neill's attention before publication when an editor checked with his office about the accuracy of the material, presumably to guard against possible libel.

O'Neill — a veteran politician who normally dismisses criticism with Irish good humor — this time felt the cartoons were too much, and asked his chief aide Gary Hymel to attempt to have them changed.

Little town of Jonesboro manages to make ends meet

JONESBORO'S MAYOR HUGH DICKSON DOESN'T WORRY ABOUT PROPERTY TAX REVOLT — property tax in this small community has been abolished — gone for good

JONESBORO, Ga. (UPI) — Mayor Hugh Dickson doesn't worry about a property tax revolt. In his small community of Jonesboro, Ga., 20 miles south of Atlanta. The property tax has been abolished. And so far as Dickson is concerned, it's gone for good. "I don't foresee a property tax for the city of Jonesboro — ever," says Dickson, a graying, retired banker who has served as mayor for the past 36 years. "Some folks just don't understand it, but I just tell them we run this city like a business." Jonesboro, population 6,000, grew up as railroad community in the 1860s. It provides police protection, water and sewers and free backyard garbage pickup — without a formal budget. "When you get a budget," Dickson explains, "you have a tendency to add to it every year. Now we get three real good girls here in the office who can handle all that. What do you need a budget for?" There are only 21 city employees — eight are policemen — and most work several jobs. The city fire department is manned by volunteers who "don't mind a little work if it means saving money." Dickson describes Jonesboro as "just a little town that stays within its income. We're not out to annex anyone or get any bigger. We've never solicited anyone to come in here." Since 1968, property taxes were gradually lowered until they were finally abolished this year. There is still about $200,000 in outstanding sewer bonds, but Dickson said there is enough money in the city surplus to retire the bonds, making Jonesboro virtually debt free. Jonesboro operates on about $700,000 a year, most of which comes from federal revenue-sharing, business and utility licenses and a 5 cent per beer tax. The beer tax was approved by voters in 1972 on a promise from city fathers that a personal property tax would be rolled back proportionately. Dickson estimates the beer tax will generate about $250,000 this year, covering more than one-third of the community's total spending program.

Gauguin painting still missing

MARSEILLE, France (UPI) — Police said today they found a stolen truck which had contained over $3 million in 19th century French paintings, including a masterpiece by Paul Gauguin, but all the paintings were gone except one worth just $30,000. The stolen paintings, a collection of 13 master pieces which were being returned to their owners after being shown in Peking and Seoul, Korea, included Gauguin's portrait of "Madeleine Bernard," which alone is estimated at $2 million. The truck, stolen Tuesday night from a Marseille street, was found parked in a rest area off the A13 expressway by a gas station attendant who spotted it after reading about the theft in the newspapers. Police said the thieves probably left behind a large oil painting by Emile Loubon, "Marseille Seen from the Aigalades," because it was cumbersome, measuring 7.5 feet in length. They said its estimated worth was $30,000. Earlier today police said the thieves were probably after the truck and not the art it carried. The driver of the Lemolne-Perrignon Express Co. truck stopped at a bar Tuesday night to ask directions. Patrons directed him to the nearby police station. When he returned, the vehicle was gone, police said. "We believe that the thieves did not know what they had taken," a police spokesman said. "There is no evidence that they had planned the robbery."

Floor show not part of service

MIAMI (UPI) — The lovely, naked blonde slurping champagne and darning through the "no frills" section of National Airlines Flight-51 wasn't part of the planned entertainment, but the cheering, gaping, clapping passengers didn't complain a bit.

The blonde, in her mid 20s, ran out of the first class section of the DC-10 last week on a flight from Miami to Los Angeles, clutching her bottle of champagne, whooping and giggling. She climbed over the middle section, seats as dumfounded stewardesses stared.

"She had a beautiful body," a female passenger recalled. "Short blonde hair, a complete suntan all over."

"She perched on top of Row 27, guzzling champagne, and the passengers started laughing and clapping. She said she had just inherited $5 million and that's why she was doing it."

A young man who accompanied the blonde "just crawled under the seat," a passenger said. "He didn't even go after her or anything."

The chief flight attendant was the first to recover. She grabbed a blanket and went after the blonde, who evaded her for 15 minutes as she darted up and down the aisles, encouraged by the appreciative, applauding passengers.

The attendant finally wrapped the blonde in the blanket and took her back to first class, where crew members helped dress her. She "slept like a baby" the rest of the flight.

Capt. Ed Mitchell went to the rear of the plane and tried to restore decorum. He had little success.

"I never saw so many grins in my life," one woman said. "For the rest of the flight, we just sat there and smiled."

"It definitely did happen," a national spokesman said. "It's just not part of our standard in-flight entertainment. We tend to stick to movies and sitcoms."

Skokie plans its defense for weekend

SKOKIE, Ill. (UPI) — Officials are moving ahead with plans to turn the village into a bastion against violence if a small band of Nazis demonstrate Sunday in the heavily Jewish Chicago suburb.

Village President Albert J. Smith said Wednesday the 140-man Skokie police force, the Illinois National Guard, state police and policemen from 12 surrounding communities would be on hand to keep peace between Nazis and the thousands of Jews and sympathizers who are expected to protest.

Smith ordered a large area of central Skokie cordoned off to automobiles Sunday. Seven National Guard helicopters, he said, will patrol the area.

Sol Goldstein, organizer of a massive counter-demonstration planned five blocks from the Nazi march, said the Village Hall, said 18 ambulances and 40 doctors had been mobilized to act in case of violence.

"We expect 50,000 people here," he said. "There are 400 to 500 from Cleveland alone. What else can I do... we are coming."

"We have a commitment to a peaceful rally. No one asked for this. But if Jews and Christians — feel they must take to the streets, there is no power in the world that can achieve stopping them."

Legal maneuvers shrouded whether the Nazis actually would march.

Frank Collin, leader of the National Socialist Party of America, has said he will not take his followers to Skokie if they can demonstrate in the southwest Chicago neighborhood of Marquette Park, where they have sought in the past to stir conflict between blacks and whites.

A federal judge Tuesday lifted requirements for heavy insurance guarantees for a Marquette Park demonstration. But Collin said he would not make up his mind until late today and the Chicago Park District said it was studying the judge's decision, debating whether to make an appeal.

Skokie is the Nazi target because it has a 35 percent Jewish population and a large number of them are survivors of Nazi concentration camps.

Militant Jews led by the Jewish Defense League have threatened violence if members of the Nazis demonstrate in Skokie. If the Nazis cancel their march, the JDL threatened to march on their Chicago headquarters. They indicated they would not be part of Goldstein's demonstration at Niles East High School.

Smil's security arrangements were designed to keep the two demonstrators apart.

"The only hard news we have is that the demonstration is still on," he said. "There is tremendous interest in this throughout the world. We hope we can come off in the best possible manner. I think we can... the whole world protest can occur without anyone getting hurt."

Skokie people, on the eve of what has become an international cause celebre, wanted to see what would really happen and played things very cool in the meantime.

Flash flood deaths double since 1960

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Flash floods have become a nation's No. 1 weather-related killer during the past decade as they claim 200 lives and cause $1 billion in property damage each year, the government said Wednesday.

Since 1968, the Commerce Department said, the average annual death toll from flash floods has been double that of the early 1960s and more than triple the rate of the 1940s.

The main reasons for the increased danger, the department said, is "urban development" along rivers and increased use of narrow canyons in mountainous areas for recreation.

"Recreational camping in mountainous areas and construction of vacation homes there have both increased greatly in the past decade, bringing with them greater potential for disaster as normally tranquil streams are turned into raging torrents by heavy summer rains," the department said.

"Two hundred lives lost and a billion dollars in damage is the average annual toll Americans have been paying to these sudden, vicious killers during the past decade," it added.

To further emphasize the point, the department said flash floods "have become the nation's No. 1 weather-related killer," outranking even lightning — which long was the leader — and far outranking tornadoes and hurricanes.

Two of the worst flood disasters occurred during the past two summers, the department said.

In July 1976, 139 people were killed in Big Thompson Canyon, Colo., when floods were triggered by 12 inches of rain in less than six hours.

Last July 76 persons died in flash flooding in Johnstown, Pa. Serious floods that claimed lives have also occurred in Tooele, Ga.; Kansas City; Los Angeles and New Orleans since last fall.

Doctors told to hold down fees

... AMA president

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The new president of the American Medical Association has called on doctors to voluntarily limit fee increases to prevent government price controls on health care.

Dr. Tom E. Nesbitt, who became president Wednesday at the AMA's 127th annual convention, said the Carter administration wants controls as a first step toward "a federally dominated, tax-supported, federally administered program of national health care."

Nesbitt, a Nashville, Tenn., urologist, said in his inaugural address that by tradition the AMA considered as forbidden ground any discussion of a doctor's right to determine his own fees.

"If certain proposals now in the Congress are enacted, the forbidden ground of professional fees will become a playground for legislators, economists, health planners, consumerists and whomever," he said.

"I refer, of course, to the legislative proposals which would impose arbitrary revenue restraints on hospitals and perhaps extend such restraints to private practice, as some have proposed. If these proposals are enacted, then we can forget all the rhetoric about issues such as health planning guidelines and national health insurance."

Nesbitt said although the rate of increase in doctors' fees has declined during the past two years, the 9.2 percent increase last year still was ahead of the consumer price index. Nesbitt said if doctors trim their rate increases by 1 percent a year during the next two years, the rate will be close to the general increase in cost of living.

At a news conference, Nesbitt said

Carter and Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano are attacking the medical profession because they want a popular political issue.

"That's all it's about — the total politicization of the medical care of the people of this nation," he said.

Delegates to the convention, which ends today, have spent much of their business session discussing ways of holding down health care costs. A resolution adopted Wednesday urged Blue Cross-Blue Shield and the Health Insurance Association of America to stop issuing policies that penalize patients for having care rendered at the doctor's office instead of a hospital.

The convention also backed off somewhat from traditional AMA opposition to health maintenance organizations, which provide medical services at group rates.

California can't sue Texas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today refused to let California sue Texas directly in the high court to determine whether multimillionaire Howard Hughes was legally a Texan.

The court's denial in a one-sentence order appeared to demolish an agreement between California and the Hughes estate approved last December by courts in Las Vegas, Nev., and Los Angeles.

That agreement would have allowed California a 2 percent tax settlement regardless of the outcome.

The two states are fighting for the right to collect a huge chunk of inheritance taxes. Justice Potter Stewart, joined by Justices Lewis Powell and John Paul Stevens, wrote an opinion concurring in the order.

Stewart said the high court's jurisdiction does not exist until each state claiming an uncollectible judgment "has finally established an enforceable claim under state law and it is clear that the estate's assets are insufficient to meet both claims."

Justice William Brennan and Powell also wrote separate concurrences.

Texas contended that California was merely a front for the estate to get the case into the Supreme Court directly. Since only states are permitted to file suits against each other in the high court, a private party would have to resort to lower courts.

Part of the Texas claim is that the estate wanted a Supreme court decision as an aid to proving the wealthy recluse, actually was a legal resident of Nevada, which has no inheritance tax.

Inflation a little worse

Business and labor cooperate but need to go much farther

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's chief inflation fighters said Wednesday business and labor are beginning to cooperate with the president's voluntary program to hold down prices and wages but should go much farther.

Robert Strauss, Carter's counselor on inflation, and Barry Bosworth, head of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, told a House Banking subcommittee initial business skepticism of the program seems to be wearing down.

They said a number of firms, for example in the auto and aluminum industries, have agreed to slow down price increases. As to wages, the two officials said there are encouraging indications labor wants to cooperate, but Bosworth told the committee, "Quite frankly we have not been able to make very much progress here."

"The leaders of organized labor have been very skeptical. A lot of this, of course is understandable. In many cases wage earners are being asked to commit themselves to deceleration in three-year labor contracts."

"They feel this is a gamble. If prices do not come down they are stuck. If the program doesn't work for business, they can just picky their market and raise prices, but workers under long-term contracts cannot do the same."

Bosworth said that while the average worker's pay has barely kept pace with inflation, those in many large industries have been doing better than that.

He said the administration is asking unions that have been getting 10 percent annual increases to hold them to the range of other workers, around 7 percent annually.

"If every American worker were to seek the wage increases received by the members of the largest industrial unions," he said, "this nation would quickly return to double digit inflation."

"Yet, I am not asking that much of these groups. I only ask that they bring their wage and benefit increases back in line with the average of the rest of the American work force."

Bosworth said for the year the administration expects an inflation rate approaching 10 percent.

"It means that inflation is getting a little worse when we would like to see it getting a little better," he said. "But I do not feel economic disaster is just around the corner."

Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla., appeared as a witness to charge that federal agencies, including Bosworth's, are recommending relaxation of environmental, health and safety standards for the sake of controlling inflation.

Strauss said that Carter administration is "in no way" sacrificing environmental goals to the inflation fight.

Feds launch electric car use program

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Except for a fortunate few, Americans who buy and maintain an electric car enter an adventure filled with uncertainties.

There are few dealers. There are even fewer service stations or garages with the know-how and equipment to handle maintenance or repair. And there is little performance data on which to make a choice of vehicles.

The Energy Department set the Tuesday to change all that. But trouble cropped up almost immediately.

Launching a government-subsidized push to make electric cars an everyday reality on urban streets, the department selected five companies in four states for the first mass demonstration that battery-powered vehicles are practical.

Within hours a private consumer group, the Center for Auto Safety, accused the department of unnecessarily reducing vehicle safety by setting performance standards too low.

Clarence Dill of the center, in a letter to acting Assistant Energy Secretary Donald Beattie, said the required minimum acceleration standard of zero to 31 mph in 15 seconds is inadequate and will result in "decreased safety and an unnecessary reduction in consumer satisfaction."

Beattie, in a news conference, said acceleration would be adequate.

Department officials estimated it would cost about $4 million — half paid by the government — to get the 200 vehicles for the first phase of the new program, set up service centers and keep extra-detailed maintenance records.

They said the purpose of the program is to get people to use electric cars and trucks, to create the sales and service network needed to make such vehicles a practical form of transportation and to collect detailed records on how they stand up.

Vehicles in the program can be either entirely battery-powered or "hybrid" — using both an electric motor and an internal combustion engine — so long as they meet federal performance and safety standards.

They must have a range of 31 miles for all-electric or 123 miles for hybrids between rechargings.

Only one of the firms named Tuesday, Penn Jersey Subaru Inc. of Pennsylvania, N.J., will provide electric cars to the public. It will offer the same full maintenance service available for gasoline-powered autos.

The other four firms — American Telephone and Telegraph Co. in Los Angeles, Consolidated Edison Co. in New York, Long Island Lighting Co. in Mineola, N.Y., and West-Union World in Lake Buena Vista, Fla. — will operate and maintain electric vehicles in their own company fleets.

Each firm will get between 20 and 60 vans, light trucks and cars — a total of 155 vehicles. In addition, federal agencies will order 35 more vehicles to bring the total to 200.

The program's ultimate goal is to put 10,000 electric vehicles on the road at some 40 test sites nationwide during the next eight years.

Underground economy: symptom of a threat

NEW YORK (UPI) — A recent cartoon in The New Yorker shows a wealthy lady catching a burglar rehanding in the library of her sumptuous home. Unabashed the burglar tells her, 'Crippling local, state and federal rules and regulations have made criminals out of many a small businessman, Ma'am.' The burglar has become a member of the underground economy, the implications of which are being explored by a number of economists and tax consultants including Dr. Peter A. Gutman of the City University of New York's Baruch College and Samuel J. Fossaner, a New Jersey tax accountant whose book 'The Frustrated American,' (Olympic Press, Montclair, N.J.) contends that the economy of the United States now is drifting utterly out of control and something must be done about it. Dr. Gutman contended recently that 800,000 to 1.6 million Americans now are in the underground economy and that their activities may add $200 billion to the annual Gross National Product — $200 billion that goes untracked.

A more alarmed view of this subterranean economy is taken by Arthur Milson, a New York insurance broker and author of the current book 'Will Inflation Destroy America?' Milson told UPI that, unless present trends are halted soon and the entire U.S. economy reformed, about 50 percent of the economy may go underground at no distant hour, leaving the government threatened with bankruptcy. He said the alternative to swift ending of gross inequities could be armed insurrection. He said such a revolt could result from unemployment rates of up to 40 percent in the black community and from the bitter frustrations being experienced by other Americans. Milson said it is much too late to save the situation by piecemeal tinkering and that neither Congress, the White House nor the bureaucrats can do the needed job. He believes President Carter should move to set up an organization similar to a constitutional convention to hold periodic hearings for perhaps four years looking toward a complete overhaul of the nation's economic system, particularly the tax system. He said that although labor, industry and the academic community should be heard, the public, through elected members, should have a dominant place in the movements. He said he is convinced that the public is far ahead of the politicians, the unions or the scholars in knowing how serious the situation is and what should be done about it. Although far from a radical, Milson is convinced the country needs a bigger shaking up than Franklin D. Roosevelt gave it in the early 1930s.

Another scandal

By VERNON SCOTT BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — Columbia Pictures, barely recovering from one alleged money-stealing scandal, was rocked Tuesday with another — the chief accountant of its television commercial division has been charged with embezzling more than $250,000. The district attorney's office said late Tuesday it had issued an arrest warrant on grand theft charges for Audrey Lisner, 41, of North Hollywood. Mrs. Lisner, who has been chief accountant at Screen Gems since 1973, is accused of stealing $275,000 from U.E.S.-Screen Gems by issuing and cashing traveler's checks that supposedly were to pay for on-location film crews.

Columbia Pictures official charged with embezzling

Deputy District Attorney Sterling Norris said "we think we know her whereabouts" and her arrest was expected soon. The arrest warrant was issued Friday and Municipal Court Judge Gabriel Gutierrez set bail at $50,000. Norris said the woman stole the money from Columbia Pictures between June 1975 and April 1978 by authorizing payment of Bank of America traveler's checks to cover expenses of the film crews. She allegedly cashed "hundreds" of such checks and kept the money. Norris said the woman disappeared during an investigation by Columbia auditors and the district attorney's office. Screen Gems, a division of Columbia, is involved in the production of television commercials. Columbia Pictures refused comment on the latest potential scandal to hit the studio since last February when former studio president David Begelman was fired in the wake of grand theft charges.

Wasatch Chemical sold

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Great Western Chemical Co. of Portland has announced purchase of Wasatch Chemical Co., Salt Lake City, for about $750,000. Wasatch, oldest chemical firm in Utah, will add about $3 million annually in sales for Great Western, according to Ernest McCall, president of the Portland firm. Great Western, a division of McCall Oil and Chemical Corp., has annual sales of more than $50 million. McCall said Wasatch would operate as a division of Great Western and open up new territories in Colorado and Wyoming. Both pipelines would have a capacity of about 1.5 million barrels a day. Another pipeline — this one to move Guatemala oil from fields in the north of the country to the Caribbean coast — was recently approved by the economy minister. This line will be built by Shenandoah Oil, which has been exploring and pumping oil in the area of Rubensano and China. The wells struck there are estimated potential production capacity of 8,000 barrels a day. The 10-inch line will run from the oilfields to Puerto Barrios, at a cost of $25.5 million.

Guatemala may be used for moving Alaskan oil

By RAUL GONZALEZ GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — Guatemala may someday become a land bridge for transporting Alaskan oil from the Pacific to the Atlantic Coast, where U.S. refining facilities are more adequate to handle it. The government is considering two projects for an oil pipeline to carry Alaskan crude — one submitted by the U.S. company Intermare, and another by the Guatemalan state railway, Fegua. Both projects envision a pipeline that would move Alaskan oil from the Pacific, where there is an oversupply of petroleum, to the Caribbean coast for transshipment to the larger refineries on the U.S. East Coast. The Intermare plan foresees a 237-mile, 36-inch pipeline that would run from a port near San Jose on the Pacific to Santo Tomas de Castilla on the Caribbean, at a total cost of $600-800 million. With super-tanker and storage facilities at both ends, the cost of transporting a barrel of oil from Valdez, Alaska to Houston, Texas, would be $1.83 — more than 17 cents less than the cost of shipping it through the Panama Canal. Fegua's project is more economical, costing $550 million to $600 million. The Fegua pipeline would run along the railway from San Jose to Puerto Barrios, a distance of 273 miles. The railway company owns port facilities in San Jose, and no land purchases or building of access roads would be necessary under Fegua's scheme. But the Fegua project would require more pumping stations and be built at a higher altitude than the Intermare line. Both pipelines would have a capacity of about 1.5 million barrels a day.

Montana coal tax under fire

HELENA, Mont. (UPI) — Ten utility companies serving the Midwest and Texas and three coal companies filed suit Tuesday, asking that Montana's coal severance tax be declared unconstitutional. The companies also asked a refund of nearly $5.5 million in coal taxes paid under protest in late April. The long-expected challenge argues that the coal tax, the highest in the nation, is an unfair burden on interstate commerce which ultimately raises consumer bills. The tax also "frustrates" the federal government's policy of expanded coal production, the companies said. According to the suit, the tax is expected to raise $34 million for state government in fiscal 1978 and $40 million in fiscal 1979. Companies filing the suit are Commonwealth Edison Co., Central Illinois Light Co., Detroit Edison Co., Interstate Power Co., Lake Superior District Power Co., Lower Colorado Electric Authority (filing jointly with the city of Austin, Texas), Minnesota Power and Light, Northern States Power Co., Upper Peninsula Generating Co., Wisconsin Power and Light Co., Decker Coal Co., Peabody Coal Co. and Westmoreland Resources.

Twin Falls County sets hearings on land use

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — County commissioners are considering July 20 as the date for a public hearing on the proposed county land use plan, but say informational meetings may be held first.

Merl E. Leonard, county commission chairman, said in two weeks a meeting will be set to explain the status of the proposed plan, including the use of soil classification as a basis of determining land use in rural areas.

"We want agricultural people in particular to understand the 20-acre minimum size farm does not mean we will not allow any reduction below that for farmers with some marginal land or for a farmer who must sell his farm on retirement because he has no son or son-in-law or other member of the family to stay on and operate the land as a farm," Leonard said.

The 20-acre minimum farm size will remain in the plan as proposed but on the basis of soil tests, as used by the Soil Conservation Service, any land which is not suitable to crop production can be used for housing, he said.

This would permit the farmer to utilize the land at the highest possible value and to allow those who want to live in the country, but are not interested in buying 20 acres, an opportunity to purchase a home site, according to the chairman.

Leonard said some farmers have a few acres of land which have shallow soil and may be rocky and unsuitable for farming but are paying taxes on it as part of their productive farms. By using soil classification, such land could be used for housing, which he said is about all it is suitable for.

Leonard said the commissioners wish to contact farm organizations such as the Grange and Farm Bureau and invite them to an informational meeting prior to the hearing to discuss the land classification issue.

Division of quality farm land to less than 20 acres also would be possible, Leonard said, providing the individual goes through the subdivision or planned unit development process with hearings before the Planning and Zoning Commission.

The plan, as now proposed by the county commissioners, would permit land in the agricultural zone to be divided into no less than one acre parcels without having to file a plat and prepare subdivision.

Leonard said he feels this will retain the large farms on high quality ground in production but will allow for development of the less desirable land for housing. He said the objective of the plan is to protect the area's good farm land and keep it in production.

He said John Durham of the Twin Falls County Property Owners Association has endorsed the proposal of soil classification as a basis for land use, and he believes many other individuals also will accept this as a logical compromise between those who want to move to the country without having to buy "a farm" and those who want to retain agricultural land in production and protect it from encroaching housing development.

Opponents of the relaxation of the stringent 20-acre minimum size farm, say this will defeat the plan's purpose and will scatter housing throughout the county, mixing housing and farming.

Leonard said the health department will have a final say in the matter where public health is involved. He said no building permits will be issued for any land which the health department rules additional septic tanks would endanger ground water.

Young cowboys to travel in Europe following rodeo

By DOUG TULLIS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 2½-month swing on the rodeo circuit in Europe earning money to get bucked, kicked and bitten is ahead for three area high school youth.

Two of the youth, Shane Prescott of Twin Falls and Monty Webb of Wendell, left by plane Friday and are now in Germany preparing for competition. Hal Peterson of Twin Falls will complete this week in the State High School Rodeo here and then leave for Europe Sunday.

The chance of a lifetime has come about as a result of a trip taken to Europe in 1970 by CSI Rodeo Coach Shawn Davis.

"We presented a rodeo along with the livestock and personnel to the armed forces personnel there in 1970," Coach Davis explained about his introduction to Alan Jacob, trip promoter.

As a result of that contact in 1970, Jacob has contacted Davis occasionally to get riders to compete in the rodeos over there.

A total of eight young riders from the U.S. were invited this summer and three are from the Magic Valley.

The rodeo competition Jacob has planned for the riders will be held in a resort town in Southern Germany. "I can't remember the name of the town, but it's up in the mountains, kind of like Jackson Hole. It's strictly a resort town," Davis said.

The rodeo they're going to compete in is exhibition and will offer armed forces members and tourists from all over Europe a chance to get a view of American rodeo.

As a part of their wages, the three will have their housing provided, receive a food allowance and on top of that, will receive a monthly wage for their efforts.

"I haven't had a chance to see the rodeos he puts on now, but from the information he has sent me, it looks like he really packs them in," Davis commented.

The three riders from Idaho will compete four nights a week and then will have three days off to travel or do what they want.

"We want to see every country in Europe and plan on traveling every chance we get," CSI rodeo team member Shane Prescott said.

The four nights a week they have to compete may seem like a heavy schedule to some but to Prescott and Hal Peterson, it's just a normal course of events.

"Sometimes I'll work three rodeos a weekend. I've been to 50 shows this year," Prescott explained.

Besides working in the exhibition rodeos, the fellow rodeos will be able to enter other rodeos for a chance to earn money prizes.

"There's an armed forces rodeo club over there with 300-400 members," Davis said. He explained that along with the rodeos, clinics and schools may be offered by the riders to help the armed forces club members be better riders.

When asked what he wanted to do in his spare time, Prescott said he'd like to get to see Sweden sometime during the stay.

Peterson, on the other hand, just smiled and said he didn't know what to expect when he got to Europe.

"I'll be a little late going over because I'm going to compete in the Idaho State High School Rodeo this week," he added. That rodeo begins Wednesday with finals Saturday. "I'll probably leave Sunday right after it's over."

Both Prescott and Monty Webb are sacrificing a shot at a national title in their events at the national College Rodeo Finals in Bozeman next week. "Coach Davis had to get somebody else to take our place on the team," Prescott explained. He added that the chance to go to Europe comes only once in a lifetime and really couldn't be passed up.

"If the guys do well over there and don't mess up, I hope to try to continue this in future years," Davis added.

Prescott and Webb got on a plane Friday and are now in Germany preparing for competition while Peterson is now preparing for the state rodeo. Plans call for them to return at the end of August to continue their education.

Car troubles in Jerome

JEROME — Small is not beautiful, says Jerome police chief Howard DuBols, and he's trading in the city's three economy squad cars for bigger models.

DuBols says the six-cylinder Chevrolet compacts Jerome police began driving in 1975 are unable to withstand the rigor of police use. The city council okayed his request Tuesday to switch to eight-cylinder Ford LTDs.

DuBols says the economy cars hold out for about 20,000 miles, and then "the seals start to break, and there's trouble with the brakes and the electrical system."

The police chief said Jerome Police put about 35,000 miles a year on each squad car, and maintenance and replacement of the old economy cars costs about $6,000 a year.

The police department will try leasing one of the new squad cars on an experimental basis. If the $3,000-a-year leasing fee plus maintenance is more economical than the cost of buying new cars, the police may switch to leasing permanently.

DuBols noted that the leasing company does all repairs on police equipment on the cars for free. Jerome would only pay costs of maintaining the automotive features.

The leasing plan also saves the city $8,000 budgeted for buying a squad car this year.

In endorsing the car rental, councilman Glen Capps said impressions are important in law enforcement, and added the LTDs are "certainly more impressive than what we've got."

"If I saw them chasing me in one of those crackerboxes, I wouldn't have much respect for them," Capps said.

The new rentals feature automatic trunk and shotgun locks, and safety lights that flash when the trunk opens. The $7,000 cars will be leased from the Burke company in Montana, and the first one will be delivered on June 29.

JEROME — Businesses in Jerome have successfully fought a ban on left hand turns at the city's main intersection.

Giving in to pressure from Safeway supermarket and local firms, Mayor Marshall Everheart urged the city council to "leave it as it is" and kill a plan proposed last month to prohibit left hand turns at the stoplight where Main and Lincoln streets intersect. The ban had been proposed by the city council as a solution to traffic congestion and hazards to pedestrians crossing at the intersection.

Everheart said the council should consider at a later date a plan to add a "pedestrian crossing" period to the current east-west, north-south alteration of green lights.

"Safeway seems to be quite uneasy about the other alternative," the mayor remarked, referring to the proposed ban.

The nationwide grocery chain was concerned enough to fly a representative from Salt Lake City to Jerome last week for a public hearing on the matter. The representative told the city council at that hearing Safeway might cancel plans for a $400,000 expansion if the ban was approved.

Other merchants at the hearing complained the ban would divert shoppers from Main Street to outlying shopping areas.

Ketchum meeting tonight

KETCHUM — A public hearing on plans to develop one of the last major undeveloped state canyons in Wood River Valley will highlight a Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in the county courthouse at Halley.

Land owner Bill Burt and developer Jerry Kirkman have presented plans for a 57-unit planned unit development in Green Gulch located about five miles south of Ketchum and west of State Highway 75.

The land is currently zoned to allow only about 56 units, but Burt and Kirkman are asking that the project be allowed to take advantage of density transfer provisions in the Blaine County zoning ordinance, according to Blaine County Planning Administrator Alan Reynolds.

Reynolds explained that the ordinance allows the Blaine County commissioners to award density transfers to PUDs. In effect, density from land left undeveloped is transferred to a project's core development area.

By using density transfer, Burt and Kirkman hope to raise the project's density from 56 lots to the proposed 97 lots, Reynolds said.

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Memorial Hospital will proceed with a project to remodel the former nurses home into offices despite a low bid approximately $40,000 more than the budgeted amount.

The bid of $228,585, from Jac-Lyn Construction Co., Jerome, was accepted Monday night by the hospital board. The firm's basic bid was $238,572, but the board voted to eliminate several alternate items at this time.

The remodeling project will provide additional office space for a number of hospital offices now in a building about two blocks away. The board felt the old nurses home will provide more convenience because it is adjacent to the hospital.

Monthly rental is about $1,500 which will be realized as a saving once the remodeling project is completed.

Hospital Administrator James Rosenbaum told the board it could do one of three things: Reject the bids as too high and drop the project, or dip into the hospital cash fund to meet the difference or borrow money to meet the added cost.

He said the hospital has budgeted a maximum of $100,000 for the work and the county has provided another $75,000. The hospital could possibly make up another $25,000 without hurting the financial situation but Rosenbaum said he is reluctant to take funds from the regular cash flow because in the event of one bad month, the present surplus would be needed to meet regular obligations.

County Commissioner William Chancey suggested the board use the $175,000 available at this time to start the remodeling, saying a new budgeting period will be underway before the contractor finishes the work and more money will likely be available by that time.

"Down the road a ways if you run into difficulty I see no reason why we can't come up with a little more from our subsequent budgets. We have never let you down yet," he said.

Attorney for the hospital, Fred Decker, said the money could be borrowed through the Hospital Facilities Authority and furnished by a local bank at an estimated 6 to 6.5 percent interest. He said the rent now being paid for outside office space would just about cover this.

He warned the loan would count as a liability by fiscal agents preparing for the $8 million over-all hospital improvement project, and he would not like to see the $8 million project jeopardized by the small remodeling loan.

Hansen, McClure top security group rating list

TWIN FALLS — Three Idaho members of Congress received perfect ratings from the American Security Council for their votes on key national security issues, the council announced recently.

U.S. Senator James McClure and U.S. Congressman George Hansen and Steve Symms, all Republicans, received ratings of 100 on the ASC's voting index.

Democratic Senator Frank Church, on the other hand, voted with the ASC index only 20 percent of the time.

In a press release, John Fisher, president of the council, said, "The people of Idaho who are represented by these members of Congress can be proud of the fact that so many of their elected representatives have consistently voted to maintain a strong U.S. defense posture."

The council did not indicate the specific votes involved.

According to the ASC, a non-profit research and educational organization in Boston, Va., its index compared key votes of Congress during 1977-78 with public opinion on the same issues.

For instance, the council said, a public opinion poll showed 79 percent of the public favors "a defense posture of military superiority over the Soviet Union."

Fisher said the National Security Voting Index is an analysis of ten key Congressional and Senate votes on national security matters, including "internal security, South Vietnam aid, the importation of Rhodesian chrome, the B-1 bomber and the Panama Canal."

The American Security Council said it has about 225,000 members and contributors nationally and 1,071 in Idaho.

State official warns counties on 1%

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Only local services and not state government will be cut back if Idahoans approve the 1% tax initiative, a state tax commissioner told Idaho County Clerks and Recorders Tuesday at their annual conference.

And an official of the Idaho Association of Counties said the county officials must begin considering alternative tax measures available if the initiative is passed.

Tax Commissioner Don Loveland said passage of the initiative to reduce local property tax to one percent of the assessed valuation means a $140 million revenue loss. And local budgets amounted to $211 million in 1977. He said by way of comparison.

That means either $140 million will have to be raised some other way or local services, such as schools, street and highway repairs and fire and police protection, will face the chopping block, Loveland said.

"It won't cut the state services. All the ad valorem tax collected is spent by the people elected. It is not taken out of salaries," the tax commissioner explained.

Loveland said he found it ironic the United States was formed by fighting "a war over a problem without representation and, as somebody said the other day, now we are fighting a war over a tax problem with representation."

He stressed the state tax commission and county clerks and recorders should not take a stand for or against the 1% initiative.

Loveland said such a decision is for voters to make and not elected or appointed officials. But, he said, it is the officials' responsibility. If the measure does go to the voters, to educate the voters between July 7 and the Nov. 7 election on just what will be the initiative's impact.

Chuck Holden, a research consultant for the Idaho Association of Counties, said the 1% initiative seems assured of being on the ballot and alternative taxing methods and sources of revenue must be studied.

As well, officials need to look at how much local government people really want, which programs should be completed and which ones deleted, he explained.

Huysen to face Rep. Hollifield

SHOSHONE — Harold Huysen, a Shoshone area farmer has been appointed by the Democratic Legislative District 23 committee to run for state representative.

He will be unopposed in the Aug. 8 primary for the Democratic nomination, but face incumbent Republican Gordon Hollifield in November.

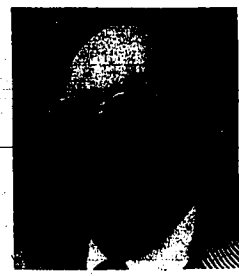

Huysen said he had decided to run after no other person from either party tried to contest Hollifield.

"I believe District 23 has been poorly represented in the past sessions of the legislature," the candidate said, but declined to make specific criticism of Hollifield "at this time," indicating he would have such a statement later.

The Democratic appointed candidate has 179 signatures on his petition which, he said, contained the names of Republicans, Independents and Democrats.

A native of Gooding, he attended school in Bliss and Gooding and has been in the cattle business since his return in 1950 after three years in the military.

He and his wife, the former Audrey Lowe, also a native of Idaho, have four sons, three of whom

PUC's Ward talks energy

BOISE (UPI) — The state of Idaho can gamble or go conservative with regard to energy but the decision must be made by the Legislature, Public Utility Commissioner Conley Ward Jr. said Wednesday.

Ward, speaking to a legislative interim committee examining the commission, also said the Legislature has not asserted itself with regard to energy and added directional decisions on the issue must be made.

Ward's comments followed those of Commissioners Robert Lenaghan and Ralph Wickberg who also discussed the role of the PUC.

"We need to decide what we want to do," Ward said. "We can play the energy situation safe. If our interest is protecting supply at all costs and we're willing to pay a premium price, we can do that. If we want to be a gambler with alternate energy sources, we can do that too."

"But that's where the Legislature comes in. The PUC can't decide those things."

Ward said the PUC must make some decisions with regard to energy, but added "I wasn't elected to decide what kind of society we will have and what our energy future will be five or 10 years down the road."

When asked about the PUC's hiring and firing policies, Ward said commissioners have little say in such matters.

"The Legislature makes the rules," he told the panel of state legislators. "You have created a personnel system which is far from what you intended to create. So many steps have to be taken to fire (staff) that it's unbelievable."

PUC President Denaghan earlier told the committee legislative auditors hardly touched the surface in their recent studies of the PUC because they lack the expertise to conduct an in-depth review.

He said the audits of the PUC "for our purpose have had very little benefit" and that persons making the audits lack the experience needed to make valid judgments of PUC operations.

Lenaghan said the auditors reported surface findings but failed to take a sometimes-needed critical look at the decisions the commission has reached.

"These people are not capable of making judgments," the commissioner said.

Lenaghan also told committee members that the state's personnel procedures have "strangled" his commission which, he said, has unusual requirements for its employees.

Hailey gears up for 4th

HAILEY — Hailey's Fourth of July Celebration will be so big this year that the city has spread the events throughout three days, from July 24.

The Hailey Art Festival will begin the Independence Day Celebrations Sunday, July 2, at the Hailey city park. The art festival will be open July 2 from 4-7 p.m., and on July 3-4 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

In addition to local artists who will display their work at the festival, the Antique Festival Theater will perform two shows in the city park July 3. At 1:30 p.m., the theater group will perform a children's mime show and at 6 p.m. it will put on the show "Toby Goes To Washington."

A children's parade will also march down

Main Street in Hailey at 12:45 p.m. on the 3rd and at 8 p.m. the Days of the Old West Rodeo will open at the Hailey-rodeo grounds. Fireworks will follow the rodeo.

The biggest celebrations, however, will come on the Fourth of July itself.

The day will begin with a pancake breakfast from 9-11 a.m. at the Hailey Grange Hall, and an Old West Shoot out will occur on Main Street at 11 a.m.

At noon, a parade will float, two marching bands and livestock displays will come down the city's Main Street.

The Days of the Old West Rodeo will begin again at 2 p.m. on the Fourth, and a city barbecue will be held in the park after the rodeo.

Ravenscroft fete held

FILED — A reception for Republican candidate for governor Vernon Ravenscroft will be held tonight in Filed.

The reception is open to the public and will last from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Paul Brown home, one mile north and one-half mile west of Curry Crossing.

The candidate will meet the public and answer questions on campaign issues.

Democratic convention opens

By BOISE CHARNOCK

RICHTER — Idaho Democrats open their 1978 state convention tonight — but added attraction sought by State Chairman George Klein will be on hand to give it a little extra spice.

Klein, incurring the wrath of some of the party faithful, invited California's Proposition 13 promoter Howard Jarvis to attend the convention and speak to the platform committee.

Because it appears likely the 1 percent property tax initiative is going to be on the Idaho ballot this fall the Democrats are expected to take a stand for or against it in their platform. The American Party embraced the initiative last week and the Republicans endorsed it in principle.

Although Jarvis cannot make it to Boise for the convention, Klein said, he is willing to discuss the initiative with Idaho Democrats at another time.

"Arnold Ford, an aide to Jarvis, has notified me that because of prior commitments in Washington, D.C., New York and Kentucky, Mr. Jarvis is unable to attend the Idaho State Democratic Convention," Klein said.

Klein said he is not certain when a convenient time might be for Jarvis to address the Democrats and said he will leave that matter up to the delegates at the convention.

He said his invitation to Jarvis should not be interpreted as an endorsement of the initiative but merely an effort to put both sides of the question before the delegates.

"Some people are interpreting it (the invitation) as an endorsement of the 1 percent initiative," Klein said. "And they are fighting mad. I'm hoping they come to the convention and say to everyone what they are saying privately."

Klein acknowledged he has caught some flak over the invitation.

"I have had people say, 'Would you ask Genghis Khan to come if he announced he was going to sack the city?' and I reply, 'I'd negotiate with him if I thought it was inevitable he was coming through the gate.'"

Even as Klein spoke the secretary of state's office reported that backers of the initiative have filed more than 22,000 of the 25,364 signatures they need by July 7 to put the issue on the ballot this fall.

Klein said he was not playing games with the invitation — that he believes the party must take a stand on the initiative. Personally, he said, he opposes the initiative and considers it a "wrecking bar."

But, he said, "I can't see us sitting here, holding our breath and waiting for disaster. And I'm hoping we don't sidestep it."

State Sen. Norma Dobbler of Moscow, the Platform Committee chairman, also wants the party to take a Court reverses case of Twin Falls man

BOISE (UPI) — The State Supreme Court reversed the Industrial Commission of Idaho Wednesday and said it to reconsider whether Delos L. Bowman became permanently disabled as a result of his employment with Twin Falls Construction Co.

Bowman was denied benefits by the commission which found that his working conditions had contributed only minimally to his disability.

But the court decision said the commission had required the wrong standard in the examination of the doctors who testified relative to Bowman's condition.

The court said the commission should reconsider whether Bowman's condition was due to the nature of an employment in which the hazards of pulmonary disease existed and whether it was characteristic of and peculiar to that employment.

The high court upheld the commission's findings that the occupational factors have contributed to Bowman's condition, leaving it for the board to determine the proportion chargeable.

Band plays tonight

TWIN FALLS — A summer concert of marches, popular music and jazz will be presented tonight in the city park by the Twin Falls Municipal Band.

The program, which begins at 8:15 p.m., will feature such pieces as "King Cotton," by John Phillip Sousa, "A Western Portrait," by Pierre La Plante, "Londonderry Air," by arranger Sammy Nestico, and "Folk Song Suite," by Ralph Vaughan-Williams.

Other music to be played by the band includes "Satin Doll," "In a Persian Market," and "Colonel Bogey."

The program will close with "America the Beautiful."

The municipal band will present the concerts every Thursday evening through Aug. 10.

Annual quilt show to open

HAILEY — Some of the finest quilts in Idaho and the West will be displayed Sunday, July 2, at the fifth annual Quilt Show in Hailey.

More than 30 quilts will hang for public viewing in the Orchard at the Quilt Barn in this year's show, according to Sonja Tarnay, owner of the Quilt Barn.

This fifth annual quilt show will feature state fair prize-winning quilts from Idaho to Iowa, and a large collection of the Quilt Barn's own quilts will be displayed.

Tarnay said the show will also present a section of antique quilts.

The show will be from noon until 6 p.m. at the Quilt Barn located at the corner of South River and Elm streets in Hailey.

Elkhorn's injunction bid denied

HAILEY — Fifth District Judge Douglas Kramer denied Monday the Elkhorn resort's request of a court injunction forbidding the City of Sun Valley from considering the subdivision plans of a private developer before Elkhorn had a chance to approve the project.

Elkhorn, a resort and planned community in Sun Valley corporate limits, filed suit in early June against Sun Valley and a private development group which owns about 317 acres in the Elkhorn Valley.

The resort claims that when Elkhorn sold the land to the Robert W. Reiss Sun Valley Venture development group in 1974, the property became subject to private contractual restrictions regarding property use and density.

Elkhorn charges that the group's development agents, Carl Curtis and Clayton Carter, are now attempting to sidestep the restrictions of the sale contract agreement and that Sun Valley is interfering with that private contractual agreement.

The Sun Valley Planning and Zoning Commission gave preliminary approval last week to developers Curtis and Carter for a 46-lot subdivision on the Reiss property in Elkhorn, and it now looks as if that approval will stand because Kramer flatly refused Elkhorn's request for both injunctions against the developers and Sun Valley.

The judge said Monday that he "dismissed Sun Valley from the lawsuit on the grounds that I would not put judicial restraints on the discretionary power of a political subdivision."

He also said the development plans for the Reiss subdivision were not final plans, therefore, he could not yet determine whether the developers had in fact violated their contract with Elkhorn.

Elkhorn's attorney, Lee Schlender, said he planned to continue the case with further court proceedings.

Outage interrupts TV programming

TWIN FALLS — Microwave outages from the Mt. Harrison station south of Burley caused a loss of cable vision programming Tuesday night for Magic Valley viewers.

Gene Ritnour, general manager of Magic Valley Cable Vision, said lightning storms over the southern mountains probably created the power surges which caused the problem. He said about 6:02 p.m. Tuesday the microwave feed from Channel 2, Salt Lake City was lost and at about 8:19 p.m. the microwave feed from Channel 5, Salt Lake City went out.

He said the left viewers in the Burley-Rupert, Gooding, Jerome and Twin Falls areas without these channels. He said some emergency switching was done to continue reception of a movie which was underway on Channel 5 at the time. Ritnour said the system is carried by Western Telecommunications microwave facilities from Mt. Harrison. Microwave networks are extremely sensitive, he said, and weather can create serious problems.

About 10:40 p.m. service was restored from KSL, Channel 5, via KUED, Channel 7 in Salt Lake City and about 4 a.m. Wednesday all of the service was back. Ritnour said everything was fine until about 10 a.m. Wednesday when the KUED circuit went down, again, apparently from the Mt. Harrison center. He said many of the engineer crews had worked throughout the night and were catching some sleep when the Wednesday morning problems occurred.

Murder charges reduced in Jerome

JEROME — Murder charges against a Jerome woman were reduced to voluntary manslaughter in the Jerome county court Tuesday.

County prosecutor Eugene Fredericksen requested a reduction of the second degree murder charge after receiving two psychiatrists reports that declared Elsa Chapa, 21, was not acting with prior intent when she beat to death a two-month old infant on March 15. Chapa pleaded guilty to the manslaughter charge.

Chapa was babysitting for the infant, Marie Caldera, when she allegedly beat her over the head with a shoe. The child died of a brain hemorrhage on the way to the hospital.

The child's parents, Pascual and Sylvia Caldera, worked with Chapa's husband at a potato plant near Hazelton, and the Chapas lived in a mobile home behind the Caldera's house. It was in this mobile home that the alleged attack occurred.

Chapa will be sentenced next month. She is currently free on property bond.

Three Wyoming men arrested, charged

TWIN FALLS — Three Wyoming men were arrested by Twin Falls city police Tuesday night and charged with destruction of public property after a street sign at 9th Ave. E. and Ash Street was pulled from the ground.

Police arrested them one after a citizen who witnessed the incident notified the police department and provided a description of the vehicle.

Lance Spence, 21; Gregory Boal, 19, and Mark Bartlett, 19, all Upton, Wyo., were arrested a short distance from the scene. Officers said apparently the men tied a chain around the sign, fastened the chain to the back of their pickup truck and pulled it from the ground.

Bond was set at $250 and the three were in the county jail in lieu of bond this morning.

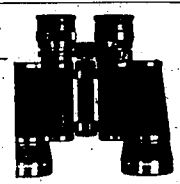

Murder trial reset

RUPERT — A first-degree murder trial has been reset for Aug. 15 for Leodegarlo Juarez Gil, charged with the Jan. 22 shooting death of Francisco Vega outside a Minidoka bar.

The trial originally was scheduled for June 12. Fifth District Court Judge Sherman Bellwood ordered the delay when Gil's lawyer, Minidoka County Public Defender Herman Bedke, became ill the week before the trial was to start.

Gil, 29, Minidoka, is charged with shooting Vega, 33, Acequia, on the morning of the shooting. He is being held without bond in Minidoka County Jail in Rupert.

City attorney goes full-time

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls city attorney will soon be a full-time city employee, at an additional cost to the city of $10,000 to $13,000 a year.

City Attorney Charles Brumbach now handles all the city's criminal and most of its civil legal activity on a part-time, contract basis. For his services, the city pays Brumbach $24,000 a year, plus additional sums on an hourly basis for work outside his regular function.

Brumbach proposed to the city council that he be hired on a full-time basis, because, he said, the city has grown to the point where it needs "constant, preventive legal attention," rather than part-time reaction to problems after they occur.

The council, according to Brumbach, has made an "informal commitment" to change Brumbach's status to that of full-time employee, effective Oct. 1, 1978.

Mayor Leon Smith said a final decision on Brumbach's salary will not be made until the final budget is established. The budget must be adopted by Oct. 1, the beginning of the city's fiscal year.

After Oct. 1, Brumbach will cease serving private clients and will handle all civil and criminal matters for the city. He will be paid $33,500 a year; and his secretary, now paid out of his own income, will be paid by the city.

The new secretary on the city payroll will work primarily for Brumbach, but will also work for the city administration if time permits, Brumbach said.

Thus, the cost to the city for legal services will be increased by the $3,500-a-year "boost" in Brumbach's salary, plus the salary of his secretary. The city will no longer have to pay Brumbach hourly wages for additional services. Brumbach estimated the cost to the city for legal services will increase by $10,000 to $13,000 a year.

Smith, also an attorney, said Brumbach, unlike other city employees, will work for him, take his orders directly from the council, not from the city manager.

Councilman Chris Talkington said one of Brumbach's new roles will be to provide "check and balance with the city manager."

Smith said the council will resolve any conflicts which may arise between the city manager and city attorney.

Smith said he feels there is enough legal work required by the city to justify hiring a full-time city attorney.

W.C. OAKLEY
... gets degree

General surgery planned

GOODING — W. Christian Oakley, M.D., received his medical doctorate at the University of Colorado Medical Center at Denver, Colo., recently.

Dr. Oakley, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Oakley, Gooding, is a 1976 graduate of the University of Idaho and has studied at the Colorado school for four years. He and his wife, Judith, have one son, Nathan.

The Oakleys are moving to Burlington, Vt., in June to begin a residency in general surgery at the University of Vermont Medical Center.

Restaurant closed by fire

PAUL — It will be three weeks before their fire-damaged cafe will be open again for business, Loona and Calvin Connor estimate.

An early morning kitchen fire at Connor's Cafe June 14 caused about $8,500 total damage, Calvin Connor said, with $6,000 damage to the building and $2,500 to equipment. The cafe is located off the Burley-Paul exit of Interstate 80-North.

Mrs. Connor said the biggest problem is replacing the cook stoves and ovens, which were destroyed in the heat. She said it appeared to be a grease fire in the stoves which caused the fire.

Mr. Connor, who has owned the cafe with his wife since 1964, said the building will be in better condition after repairs than it was before the fire. He said neither the building nor the contents were insured.

Aragon sentenced to prison

JEROME — Emilio Aragon, who was charged with stabbing a Jerome man in a barroom brawl last New Year's Eve, was sentenced Tuesday to a maximum three-year prison term.

Aragon pleaded guilty in the Jerome county court to a charge of aggravated assault and battery. He had been accused last April of assault with a deadly weapon, but the charge was reduced in exchange for the guilty plea.

Aragon's case involved the stabbing of Danny Maddox three times with a pocket knife during an argument at the Smoke Shop bar in Jerome. Aragon is also a resident of Jerome.

ALBERT EIS, 19, a resident of St. Peters, Mo., is one of the few professional sheep shearers left in the St. Louis area. For Eis, sheep shearing is only a parttime job: He works fulltime as a technician at Emerson Electric. He tends a flock of about 100 sheep on his family's farm. For shearing sheep in and around St. Charles County, Eis gets paid about $1.25 a head. He expects to shear from 600 to 800 head this year.

Allowed in some products

Powdered bone now accepted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When meat is deboned by machine instead of by hand, some of the bone tissue is powdered in the process and lands in the meat.

Consumer groups who initially fought the Agriculture Department's plan to allow ground bone in some processed meat products, today are reluctantly going along with the idea.

Consumers, they believe, will be protected by the fact that the products, when they are allowed to begin appearing about one month from now, will be clearly labeled as containing "powdered bone." That, they said, should give the buyer enough knowledge to make an informed choice.

The meat products which result when bones are scraped by machines will be allowed in sausage, hot dogs, scrapple, and canned spaghetti with meat sauce.

"They will not be allowed in hamburger, fabricated steaks, roast beef, barbecued meats, corned beef, beef with gravy, combination products such as lima beans with ham and meat pies.

"Although we believe that all the answers to the biological effects are not in, and that the questions regarding the products continue to linger, we do support" the decision, said Ellen Haas, head of the Community Nutrition Institute.

"These measures afford consumers the absolute bare minimum of information with which they can protect themselves from a devaluation in dietary quality, and will insure that meats containing mechanically processed meat products will not be misrepresented in the supermarket," she said.

Irrigation training

GOODING — An irrigation scheduling training session will be held Friday at 2 p.m. at the Orchard Valley Grange Hall yard.

The Grange Hall, which is the old Orchard Valley school house, is located five miles south and one-half mile east of Wessel on the Bob Barton Highway.

Dorrell Larson, extension irrigation specialist, will be the instructor. He will discuss water needs of specific crops, when to irrigate, irrigation scheduling and when to quit.

Administration plans better rural services

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration is moving to better the lot of rural Americans by improving their access to health care, transportation, housing, and water and sewer services, White House officials said Wednesday.

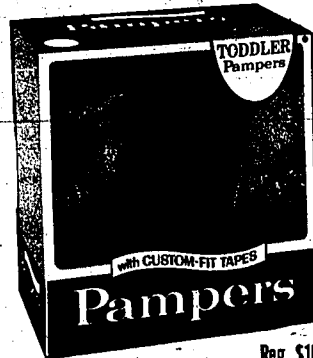

The initiatives, being drafted under the direction of presidential assistant Jack Watson, are aimed at allaying widespread rural frustration and concern. Officials expect the programs to show tangible results within the next several months.

They said Watson is developing methods to better relate urban programs to the problems of rural areas and small towns.

One of the goals is to develop an agreement between the Agriculture Department and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare under which HEW will direct funds for health clinics, Medicare and Medicaid, and other resources sufficient to provide greater health predictability than has been the case in the past.

Under the plan, the Agriculture Department would fund construction of clinics and long term care facilities, not just hospitals.

Wildlife aide upset over BPA line

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — The Bonneville Power Administration seems to be making very few friends with its construction of a multi-million-dollar, high-voltage power line from Lower Monumental Dam in southeastern Washington to the Willamette Valley of Oregon.

Besides a number of farmers in Washington's Franklin County who are upset with the line, add to the list the name of Washington Game Director Ralph Larson.

"I get upset as hell with the Bonneville Power Administration because they always wait to the last minute to get something done and when they don't get their way, they do it anyway," Larson said Wednesday.

"They seem to think they're omnipotent and that irritates me. It's very frustrating and I'm tired of being accommodated."

Larson's department recently went to U.S. District Court in Spokane in an attempt to stop construction of a portion of the power line cutting through the 3,500-acre Rattlesnake Wildlife Recreation Area near Richland, Wash.

A different portion of the same line has been at the center of a bitter legal struggle between BPA and farmers who are upset with the line crossing their land in eastern Washington's Franklin County. After being tied up two years in the courts, construction on the first section of the line began earlier this year, but the matter is still being appealed by farmers.

Both then and now, BPA argued that the line was essential because it would feed needed electricity from new generators at Army Corps of Engineers dams on the Snake River to central Oregon and the Willamette Valley.

Judge Marshall Nellis last week rejected a request from the Game Department for a preliminary injunction, and Larson said Wednesday his agency would "probably" wait for condemnation proceedings before trying to recover damages from BPA.

Among other things, the Game Department contended that BPA failed to meet requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act and the Federal Land Policy Act.

The Game Department also asks BPA to take measures to protect wildlife in the area by constructing protective fencing and revegetating the area once the line was finished. BPA declined, deciding instead to condemn the needed land.

"They came to us in late December, after Christmas, and wanted a right of way, but only the game commission has that authority," Larson said, noting that his department went out of its way to give BPA right of entry to the wildlife area pending the granting of a right of way.

"They admitted they forgot to get in touch with us, and when we tried to accommodate them, they stomped on us," Larson said.

Dan Schausten, a BPA spokesman, said his agency released the original routing of the proposed line as far back as 1974 in a preliminary impact statement. He said the Game Department and other agencies were notified.

"We had a series of meetings all along the route of the proposed line and we have noted that at least three Washington state agencies were sent copies of that environmental impact statement and sent back their comments and they included no arguments on this particular stretch of line," Schausten said.

But Larson said the impact statement was not very specific about the line crossing the wildlife area and BPA didn't contact anyone in authority within his agency until late last year.

The BPA line is being built in three sections: from Lower Monumental Dam to the Ashe Substation near Richland; from Ashe Substation to the proposed Slatt Substation near Pebble Springs, Ore., and from Pebble Springs to the Marion Substation near Salem, Ore.

Assuming BPA encounters no other major legal roadblocks, the entire line should be completed in 1980.

Lenaghan scores legislative audits

BOISE (UPI) — Legislative auditors barely skimmed the surface in recent studies of the Public Utilities Commission because they lack expertise to review it in depth, PUC President Robert Lenaghan said Wednesday.

Lenaghan also told a legislative interim committee that the state's personnel procedures have "strangled" his commission, which, he said, has peculiar requirements for its employees.

He said the legislative audits of the PUC, "for our purposes, have had very little benefit." He said those audits lack the experience necessary to take a good, close look at PUC operations and make valid judgments.

Some of the findings were well-founded, he acknowledged, but most of them "barely skimmed the surface."

"These people are not capable of making judgments," he said.

While reporting surface findings, he said, the auditors have failed to take a sometimes needed critical look at the decisions the commission has reached. He said they even criticized his stationery selections which he defended before the committee.

Sen. Walter Yarbrough, R-Grand View, said one of the audits criticized a PUC employee who spent a lot of time on the golf course during normal working hours and said an auditor "doesn't have to be too smart" to figure out that is wrong.

Lenaghan defended that employee who, he said, is a gas pipeline inspector who travels throughout the state and sets his own hours. He said the man takes off a Wednesday afternoon to play golf but probably is taking compensatory time off for overtime he worked earlier.

But, he said, criticisms such as that — when publicized — erode public confidence in the PUC. He said the PUC must have the confidence of the public if it is to do its job.

Yarbrough said that the legislature and the public both want to be certain state employees are being utilized efficiently.

Candidate D. Jensen seeks labor support

BOISE (UPI) — Senatorial candidate Dwight Jensen told the Idaho AFL-CIO Tuesday he wants labor's support now and in November.

"In election after election it is traditional for Idaho Republicans to point the finger at Idaho Democrats and shout, 'He was supported by big labor,'" Jensen said. "Don't deny James McClure that opportunity this year."

Californians in a state of confusion

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Residents of Alpine County are the targets of a door-to-door campaign to donate $150,000 to save the jobs of 25 firemen — victims of Proposition 13's forced cutbacks on government spending.

But there are 69 Superior Court Judges in southern California and five Los Angeles County supervisors who are in line to share $427,000 in automatic pay raises under provisions of a charter amendment approved by voters in 1962.

Just as Proposition 13 is affecting county government throughout the state, the tax assessor's office in San Francisco disclosed some mind-boggling figures on how the city's 10 biggest property taxpayers will reap $27 million in benefits as a result of the Jarvis-Gann Initiative.

For example, the Pacific Telephone Co.'s share of property tax savings will total $3 million and the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. will get $6.7 million.

Such is the confusion — and apparent unequal application of the effects — surrounding the property tax limitation initiative passed by California's voters June 6.

Some public opinion samplings since election day show voters did not expect that reducing taxes would mean reducing services. Nor did they favor cutting the kind of vital services now threatened. And there is already a move in the Legislature to allow Californians to vote on an amended version of Proposition 13 to restrict its tax benefits to home and apartment owners and exclude businesses.

Proposition 13, which still faces challenges in the courts, rolled back property taxes assessments to 1975-76 levels, pegged taxes to 1 percent of assessed value and slowed assessment increases to 2 percent annually.

Some city and county governments, fearful of drastic reductions in operating revenues, have begun belt-tightening procedures — some say prematurely. Scores of school districts already have closed their doors for the summer, termination notices have been sent to employees, including policemen and firefighters, and there is talk of possible local tax hikes.

In a move to allay fears of massive unemployment, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has urged the Legislature to delete proposed pay raises for the state's 150,000 employees and said he will recommend that trustees of the state's vast university and college system to forego wage hikes for another 100,000 workers.

Brown, in asking local officials to follow his soft-step lead, chided them, saying some have panicked by prematurely laying off police officers and firefighters. Brown said that in approving Proposition 13, Californians did not vote to reduce their protection.

"People have been running before they knew what funds were available and also how much was in their own local reserve funds or what other sources might be available," he said.

There have been positive notes resulting from passage of Proposition 13, despite an expected $7 billion annual loss in tax revenues.

B. Nelson Corp., a large builder and apartment operator, recently announced $25 to $30 cut in rents for tenants. And members of the Sonoma City Council cut their salaries by 15 percent.

But the Santa Rosa City Council, which earlier cut library services to a two-day schedule and proposed firing hundreds of workers, voted to give its city manager a 5 percent raise and other top-level officials increases ranging up to 6.4 percent.

Wichita will draft anti-sex laws, again

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — City laws that allowed one business to offer legal oral sex for hire have been changed to halt that practice, but the enterprising businessmen have found another legal loophole.

A special ordinance that took effect Friday prohibits offering "oral or anal copulation for hire," the former of which the Rapp Parlor had been openly offering for a $20 minimum fee. Vice officers' complaints that they were powerless under city laws prompted the city commission to adopt the new law.

However, now the business has begun offering manual stimulation by a topless woman for a fee of $25 and city attorney John Dekker says that aspect was not addressed in city statutes and therefore apparently is not prohibited.

Dekker, who said last week he doubted such a "service" would be saleable, said his office was preparing a prohibitive ordinance that would mirror the Sedgewick County massage parlor ordinance enacted in 1976.

Before the ordinance prohibiting oral or anal sex for hire was approved last week, police vice division Capt. Virgil Ternes expressed concern that it would leave a loophole for manual stimulation.

Commissioner Tony Casado also echoed that concern, but was assured by assistant city attorney Eugene Pirtle that another assistant who had drafted the law "has more knowledge of the law than the information contained in a contrived news report."

Dekker said Tuesday his office had not prepared a broader ordinance banning all sex for hire but the city because it was asked only to prepare a law that would prohibit oral sex.

Harris Poll reveals opposition to Alaska wilderness proposals

WASHINGTON — A poll shows most Americans are against setting aside 124 million acres of virgin Alaskan lands in parks, refuges and wilderness, opponents of a house-passed bill say.

Richard Dresner, representative of Lewis Harris and Associates, said the survey shows 76 percent of Americans took its most "flexible" position on what should be done with the scenic lands that was reflected in a House-passed bill.

The House bill, approved on a 277-31 vote, would create 65.5 million acres of wilderness areas barring all development by man, including roads or restrooms. The bill also creates 10 new national parks.

Alaska's two senators, Mike Gravel, a Democrat and Ted Stevens, a Rep.-publican, have promised a filibuster if the bill reaches the Senate for a vote.

The Harris Poll was paid for by the steering council for Alaska lands, a group created by the Alaska legislature.

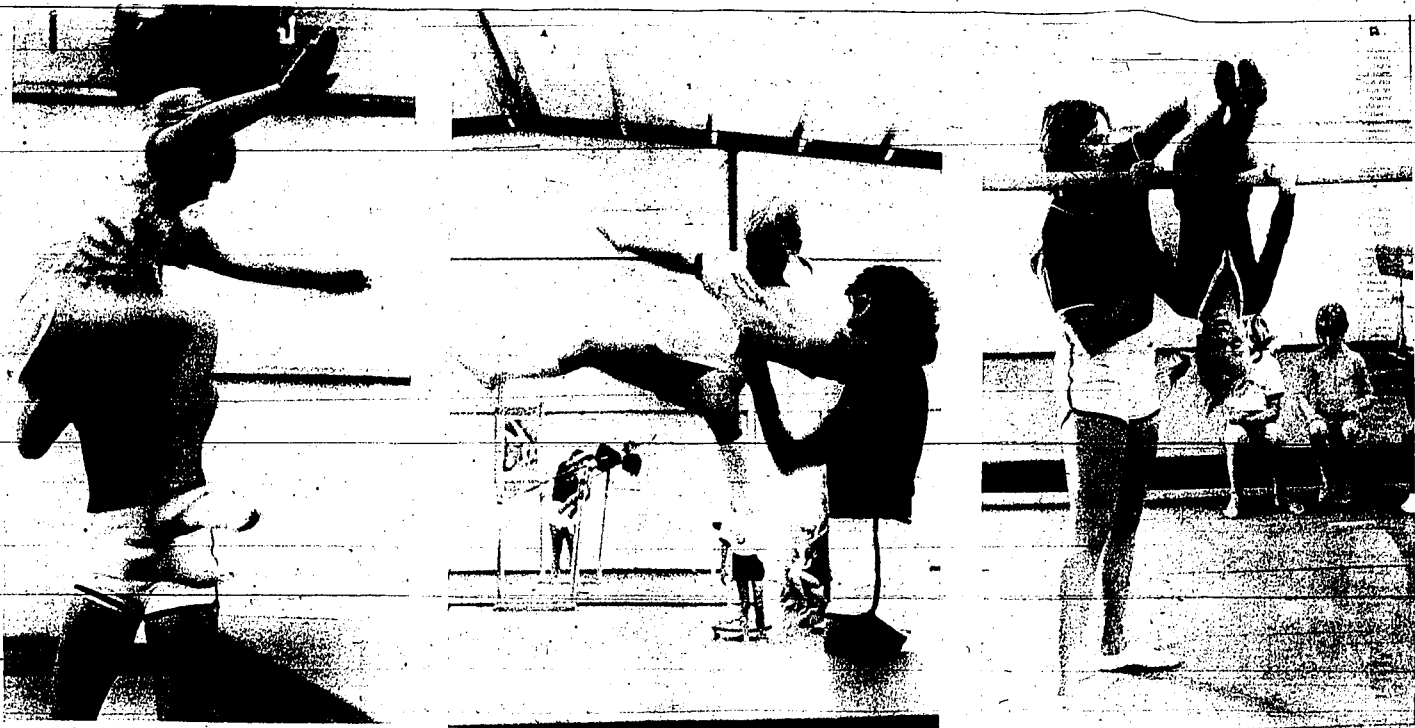

Dresner said 56 percent of those surveyed supported protection in some form, but 79 percent said only land of the "highest scenic value" should be given virtually unapproachable "wilderness" status.

Dresner said 71 percent of those interviewed said there should be more exploration of mineral deposits before lands are set aside and 42 percent said oil and gas mineral deposits should be explored before lands are set aside and 42 percent said oil and gas should be produced if it does not destroy park values.

He said 47 percent supported construction of oil pipelines through protected lands if they do not interfere with public enjoyment of the parks.

Dresner said the findings were based on telephone interviews with about 2,000 individuals received a cross-section of the entire country.

Sports

New and in use

GETTING ACQUAINTED with a new sport, Tana Clarke, Rosana Boyle and Kenleigh Kelly begin instruction at

Twin Falls' new gymnastics academy, 2042 Fourth Street East. The trio is part of 200 children eight through 18 who helped initiate the new facility this week. It will be available for year-round instruction.

Gymnastics crash Twin Falls scene in big way

TWIN FALLS — Because a few youngsters became enthralled by tumbling and basic gymnastics through the YWCA program, Twin Falls and Magic Valley now has a full time gymnastics facility and professional staff available.

The facility opened its doors at 2042 Fourth St. East in Twin Falls Monday morning and it was with a great sigh of relief that all early indications were more than highly favorable.

The idea for the gymnasium and fulltime staff grew through discussions among parents of children in the YWCA program. Their children loved the sport and there wasn't a lot of future for it. The YWCA with its multi-purpose programs and, of course, budgetary restrictions, was unable to carry the program through the higher levels of excellence.

So after much discussion, soul searching and self doubt, three couples decided to test the gymnastic attitude of Twin Falls and Magic Valley.

Those three were Bruce and Andrea Buck, Edward and Mary Perry and Judy and Larry Watson.

In discussing the background before construction, Mrs. Watson disclaimed I had anything to do with the recent introduction of gymnastics as a competitive sport in Idaho high schools.

"Not really," she answered the question. "Our one daughter just wanted to take gymnastics. She was taking classes at the YWCA and they provided what they could. But equipment is extremely expensive and you have to have a lot of room. We are very grateful to the YWCA for their classes and instruction and believe they did a better job than you could expect in an area like this where there isn't much expertise in the sport."

"Also, we wanted to develop a team and in order to do something like this you have to have the kind of people who can train all levels, not just beginning students. We offer classes for youngsters three years of age through 18."

The matter of that professional staff was the biggest and knottiest decision the trio faced.

"It was very hard," Mrs. Watson says. "We interviewed, interviewed and interviewed, made phone calls all over the United States and put ads in all the magazines. We had two or three people who we liked very much. But when we interviewed Eric Gunnerson of Las Cruces, N.M. I think he immediately was everyone's first choice."

"He's just super," she continued about the new coach. "He competed all through high school and college and then went to Germany to study and competed on that university's gymnastics team."

Gunnerson, due to contract commitments in New Mexico and various summer gymnastic camps throughout the west, will not become full time resident gymnast until mid-August.

In the meantime, the school offers good quality instruction. Two of the instructors currently are competing for Big Sky Conference schools, Laura Blake, Twin Falls graduate, for Montana State and Shiela Milligan, a Boise native who competes for Boise State. Connie Jones, Twin Falls high school gymnastics coach, assists at the school and is the dance instructor.

Holly Christofferson of Boise, who has been on the Mike Young gymnastics academy staff in Boise, is heading up the summer sessions.

The program is set up to run year-round. Strictly for a starting basis, the school puts the beginners in classes according to age group. But thereafter advancement into new classes in more demanding levels is made according to the development of the individual.

Those enrolled at the school attend classes twice a week. The eight through 18 age group basically, but again based on desire and level of competence, receive 90 minutes of instruction per session. The three through seven-year-olds have hour-long classes.

Asked about the initial response, Mrs. Watson said "we are absolutely delighted."

The new academy has 200 signed up and working now. The majority are girls but the patrons believe that more boys will sign up as the sport in the state broadens. Currently, there are two classes of boys.

In a rather unexpected development, the patrons have found the interest in gymnastics is not limited to the very young.

"We getting a lot of interest from young adults and younger women for slimastic and conditioning programs," Mrs. Watson says.

And basically the gymnasium and staff are gearing up for a winter program that far exceeds initial hopes. With 200 starting in the traditional summer vacation period, they anticipate near maximum enrollment this fall.

But they promised the gymnasium is neither designed nor will be allowed to become a vast P.E. type facility. All interested will be allowed to enroll to the point that the professional staff can handle it. "We definitely want to remain within the realm of considerable individualized attention and instruction," Mrs. Watson says.

Undhjem collects Rupert golf crown

RUPERT — Virginia Undhjem of Twin Falls defeated Karen Brown of Twin Falls on the fourth overtime hole to win the annual Rupert women's invitational golf championship.

The two ended the regulation 18 tied at 80s before the pair strung it out to a 22-hole decision.

Brown wound up with low net honors in the championship flight, followed by Calven Johnson of Burley and Sergene Sorenson and Betty Eames, both Burley, and Della Wilson of Buhl all tied for third.

Jackie Gasser of Twin Falls won the first flight with net honors going to Darlene Baines of Burley, Wanda Randall of American Falls, and Linda Halouska of Burley shared second net while another tie for third developed among Eleanor Glarborg of Rupert, Dot McLinn of Twin Falls and Bonnie Plumlee of Burley.

In the second flight, Maggie Somner of Buhl was the gross champion while net went to Lois Anderson of Rupert. Second net was won by Lucille Wakewood of Rupert, third by Clarice Groesbeck of Rupert and fourth was tied between Sammi Martin of Jerome and Marilyn Sawick of Burley.

Diane Somers of Rupert won the third flight gross prize. In net, Dora Maier of Rupert won, followed by Berniece Westendorf of Rupert, Kari Miller of Rupert and (fourth) Zevra Wakewood of Rupert, Evelyn McKenzie of Rupert and Evelyn Cole of Burley.

Tri-city match scheduled

TWIN FALLS — The tri-city women's golf competition will be held at Canyon Springs Golf Course Tuesday, reports Head Professional Jim Packard.

The tournament pits members from Twin Falls Municipal, Blue Lakes Country Club and Canyon Springs golf courses in head-to-head matches for points.

Packard said due to the tournament, the course will be closed to public play until 2 p.m. that day.

Canyon Springs men meet

TWIN FALLS — Canyon Springs Men's Golf Association will meet at 9 p.m. Thursday at the clubhouse, feminds association President Ted Black.

The meeting will be preceded by a nine-hole sweepstakes tournament beginning earlier in the afternoon.

The association will try to formulate activities and plans for the rest of season and plan for the Canyon Springs amateur next month during the business meeting.

Rice stirs Boston race circles

NEW YORK (UPI) — The subject is an ugly one, racism, and Jim Rice finds himself caught in the middle.

On one hand, Rice comes out and says there's no racism on the Boston Red Sox today, which seems true enough.

On the other hand, he's quoted in the current edition of Sport Magazine as saying his progress with the Red Sox officials are concerned because the club is riding along nicely on top in its division, looks as if it should have little trouble winning and no one wants to rock the boat at this point. Particularly on such a sensitive subject as racism.

Most everyone in baseball remembers how an article quoting Reggie Jackson in this same magazine stirred up trouble among the Yankees a year ago. That one also was done in the spring and came out in June. It caused Jackson uncommon grief and he talked to Rice about it in the outfield for some time at Fenway Park before Tuesday night's Red Sox-Yankees contest.

What Red Sox officials are hoping now is that the article on Rice doesn't have the same effect upon his teammates that the one on Jackson had among the Yankees.

In the magazine piece, Rice, talking about Fred Lynn's winning a regular job ahead of him three years ago, says, "Rice has to be a factor when Fred Lynn can hit .260 in the minors and I can hit .340 and he gets a starting job before I do."

There were more quotes in which Rice said he felt Lynn received more publicity than him because he was white, that he and Lynn used to be close but have drifted apart and that he associates with Luis Tiant and Butch

Hobson but he wouldn't call them friends.

In my personal experience with Jim Rice, I've found him to be honest and completely above-board. I believe he has no personal resentment toward Fred Lynn, nor Lynn against him, but each simply wishes to do the very best he is capable of doing.

Occasionally, that can create a situation, or a rivalry if you like, the same way it did in years past between Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris and Hank Aaron and Rico Carty. Everybody likes to outdo the other fellow. That's what competition is all about. Years from now, when they're in their '40's or '50's and get together at some Old-Timers Game, I'm sure Jim Rice and Fred Lynn will talk about the "old days" and have a good laugh over these stories now.

As Boston's designated hitter, Rice leads the American League in home runs and runs batted in and ranks in the top 10 among the circuit's hitters. He's like to play left field regularly but Don Zimmer is playing veteran Carl Yastreski and no one can fault the little Red Sox manager the way the team is going.

In Boston Wednesday, Rice said he hadn't read the magazine article but he did have a prepared statement about the story.

"I have the highest regard for Don Zimmer, part-owner and general manager; Haywood Sullivan and the entire Red Sox organization," Rice's statement said. "Furthermore, I've always been treated fairly by this organization. There may have been a time through the years when racism was an issue on this team. It certainly does not exist today."

Rice said he considered all his teammates his friends but that didn't mean he had to socialize with them every minute of the day. He also said he was "deeply hurt" by what he called his "unaged quote" which said he associated with Tiant and Hobson, but wouldn't call them friends.

"I'm pretty sure I know what Jim Rice meant there, too. What he was trying to say, I believe, is certainly he's friendly with Tiant and Hobson but that basically he's a loner. Nothing wrong with that."

Rice is absolutely right when he suggests there was a time when the Red Sox were lily white. The first black player they ever brought up was Pumpsie Green, and that wasn't until 1959. Others like Joey Poy, Reggie Smith and George Scott followed. Now, the Red Sox have Al Jackson as their pitching coach and Tommy Harper as administrative assistant in the front office.

One thing I can't buy is that the Red Sox advanced Lynn more quickly than Rice because of the difference in their color. Both were brought up from Pawtucket late in 1974. Darrell Johnson, managing the Red Sox then, designated Lynn as his regular center fielder at the start of 1975 after Lynn hit .419 in 15 games for them at the tailend of the previous season.

Rice had better figures than Lynn at Pawtucket but batted only 269 in 24 games for the Red Sox at the end of the 1974 season. He started the 1975 season off the bench while Tony Conigliaro tried a comeback in left field, but Rice took over the regular job in June.

The entire situation, I feel, is placed in proper perspective by Larry Whiteside of the Boston Globe. Whiteside covers the Red Sox regularly and is one of the best baseball reporters in the country. The fact he's black is only incidental.

"You can't refute history," he says about the Red Sox past policy on black ballplayers. "It's there. In that regard, there are still inequities in baseball, as there are outside it, but to accuse the Red Sox of racism in 1978 is grossly unfair."

Women's slowpitch tourney begins Saturday morning

TWIN FALLS — Women take centerstage this week for the weekly Twin Falls slowpitch softball tournament.

A total of 19 teams from Southern Idaho will compete in the two-day event at the Harmon Park diamonds. It is the women's B competition but some A teams are in the brackets.

Three diamonds will be in use most of Saturday and the first couple hours Sunday morning. The championship game is slated for 6 p.m. Sunday with the extra game playing at 7:15 if it is necessary.

First round pairings include: Saturday 8 a.m., Sandwich Syndicate of Twin Falls vs. Culbertsen Insurance; Times-News of Twin Falls vs. Downtowners of Pocatello, and Gillette Farms of Burley vs. Schiltz of Twin Falls.

9:15 a.m. Saturday, Thain Farms of Twin Falls vs. Pioneer Credit Union of Mountain Home; First Federal Savings and Loan of Twin Falls vs. Sultan of Harburg, and Me n' Ed's Pizza of Twin Falls vs. Thompson Sucki-Kerbs Oil of Burley.

10:30 a.m., Professional Pharmacy of Twin Falls vs. Kennedy Hay Crew of Nampa, and Press Box of Pocatello, vs. Nicholas and Sons of Gooding.

Noon, Sandwich Syndicate-Culbertsen winner vs. Pioneer Credit Union of Glenns Ferry; Winner of Times-News-Downtowners vs.

Computerized Farming-Ecco of Twin Falls, and winner of Gillette Farms-Schiltz vs. an opponent to be named (or will receive a bye).

1:15 p.m., Winner Thain Farms-Pioneer Credit vs. Tom and Jerry's Windbreak of Twin Falls; II and; K Electric-Chicken House vs. winner of First Federal-Sutton, and Big O Tires of Meridian vs. winner of Me n' Ed's-Thompson-Kerbs.

Three diamonds will be in use for games at 2:30 and 4 p.m. and diamonds one and two for 5:15 games. Three games are on tap for 6:30 and 8 p.m. to wind up the first day's action.

Sunday dawn with all three diamonds seeing action at 9 and 10:15 a.m. Diamonds one and two will be played at 11:30, a single game is set for 1 p.m. and the final two-game session is set for 2:15. From 3:30 to conclusion all games will be played on diamond one.

Rice says racism doesn't exist on Red Sox 'today'

BOSTON (UPI) — Slugger Jim Rice, the major leagues' leader in homers and runs batted in, said Wednesday a racial problem "does not exist today" on the Boston Red Sox although he is quoted in a different vein in a national sports magazine.

"First of all, I haven't read the article," said Rice when asked to comment at an informal news conference. "Even though certain quotes have been attributed to me, I feel I've always been treated fairly by the organization."

Rice is quoted in Sport Magazine's July issue, appearing on the stands tomorrow, as saying "race has to be a factor when Fred Lynn can hit .240 in the minors and I can hit .340 and he gets a starting job before I do."

In the magazine article, Rice is quoted as saying "I haven't had a close friend on the team since Cecil Cooper was traded to Milwaukee... I used to be close to Lynn but we've drifted apart... I associated with Luis Tiant and Butch Hobson but I wouldn't call them friends."

The interview for the magazine article took place last March.

"Presently my only concern is that the Red Sox win the pennant and bring the World Series to Boston," said Rice Wednesday. "I have the highest regard for Don Zimmer, Haywood Sullivan and the entire Red Sox organization."

"Furthermore," Rice continued, "I've always been treated fairly by this organization. There certainly was a time when it bothered me to be solely a designated hitter. Of course, I would like to be the regular left fielder but I also realize that [manager] Don Zimmer has a job to do and I respect his judgment."

"There may have been a time through the years when race was an issue on this team," Rice added, noting that the Red Sox often were criticized on that score in the 1950s shortly after the arrival of Jackie Robinson in the majors. "But it certainly does not exist today. This team is comprised of many dedicated players and our only goal is to bring the World Series to Boston."

"I consider all my teammates friends but that does not mean we have to socialize every minute of the day and during our own free time away from the ball park," Rice went on. "I am deeply hurt by the alleged quote that says, 'I associate with Tiant and Hobson but I wouldn't call them friends.' There are men on this team such as Zimmer, Johnny Pesky, Carl Yastrzemski and Walt Hriniak whom I respect as much as anyone I ever met."

Hockey loops quash rumors of merger

HARTFORD, CONN. (UPI) — Both the World Hockey Association and the National Hockey League issued formal statements Wednesday denying that a merger of the leagues is imminent.

Replying to a report in a Birmingham newspaper, Howard Baldwin, president of the WHA, said, "It has come to my attention that there have been cews

Martin still on job

BOSTON (UPI) — Billy Martin's job as manager of the world champion New York Yankees is in no immediate jeopardy, according to club president Al Rosen.

Rosen gave the beleaguered Martin the job assurance Wednesday after the latest crisis in the stormy Yankee camp. The crisis was precipitated when the Yankees fell eight games behind the Boston Red Sox in a 10-4 loss Monday night. The Yankees won by the same score Tuesday night and moved back to within seven games behind the Red Sox in third place. The teams met again Wednesday night.

"My job is on the line (too) just like any other job in baseball," said Rosen in answer to a question put to him at an informal get-together at which Martin also was present. "Billy's job won't be on the line for just one game."

"He's a winner," added Rosen. "He's always been a winner."

Meyerhoeffer wins youth golf crown

TWIN FALLS — Freshman-to-be Steve Meyerhoeffer fired his best score on Canyon Springs Wednesday to lead six Twin Falls golfers into the state Insurance Youth Classic.

Meyerhoeffer fired a seven-over par 79 on the course to lead all local qualifiers by two strokes. Third ended up in a three-way tie that was settled through a playoff. Bill Long won it against Gary Baum and David Rasmussen. Also qualifying for the state playoffs at Elkhorn July 16 and 17 were Scott Kyles at 85 and Jim Rasmussen at 86.

If any of the six can finish in the top two or three at state, they earn the right to advance to the nationals where they will be paired with PGA tour golfers in a four-day tournament.

Carlene McClain won the girls division.

Borg, Connors get early tennis nod

WIMBLEDON, Eng. (UPI) — Bjorn Borg is the man to bet at the Wimbledon and Jimmy Connors is the one to watch.

That seems to be the unanimous feeling of the experts as the start of the most prestigious tennis tournament in the world nears. The tournament begins Monday when Borg, apparently not yet at his peak, goes for his third straight Wimbledon men's title.

Not one of the world's great tennis players has captured three consecutive Wimbledon slouces: Fred Perry achieved the feat from 1934 through 1936.

Borg will begin his bid for No. 3 against Victor Amaya of the United States and is expected to have little difficulty until perhaps the quarter-finals. The same goes for Connors, who believes he is approaching the top of his game just in time to take the title away from Borg.

"It looks like I'm right on schedule," he says. "And being on schedule in tennis means being ready for Wimbledon." Borg went into seclusion about a week ago. It is said to be practicing five or six hours a day but isn't available for comment.

Virginia Wade, the British veteran who took the winner's bow before Her Majesty the Queen last year in a storbybook episode, is seeded only fourth in the women's division this year.

Argentina and Holland gain World Cup final

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Holland and Argentina, dazzling victors in games of nail-biting tension, set their sights Thursday on the top prize in international soccer and one neither of them has ever won — the World Cup.

Thousands of delighted Argentines waved flags, banged drums, blew bugles and honked horns into the early hours in what looked like the start of a four-day fiesta leading up to Sunday's final.

Holland topped its next to last hurdle by downing elegant Italy 2-1 in a bruising but skillful battle in Buenos Aires. Argentina — watched by President Jorge Videla and former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger — crushed hapless Peru 6-0 in Rosario.

Italy, the Group A runner-up, and its Group B counterpart, Brazil, play a consolation game Saturday to decide third and fourth place.

Austria ended West Germany's slender hopes of qualifying by winning 3-2, its first defeat of its German neighbor since 1931. Brazil beat Poland 3-1 — but it was not enough.

The Brazilian score posed Argentina with the daunting task of beating Peru by four goals to qualify on goal difference. And Argentina did it with goals to spare.

"Argentina was terrific," raved Coach Cesar Menotti afterward.

Kissinger agreed.

"I have no doubt Argentina will win the Cup," he said. If it does, it will be the first time. Argentina's only other appearance in the final was in 1930, the first World Cup, when it lost to Uruguay.

Tradition favors it however insofar as the host nation has won the trophy four times out of 10. And only once has a team won the Cup while playing on another continent.

Holland, described by Menotti as "a very strong team," will be appearing in its second consecutive World Cup final. It lost 2-1 to West Germany in 1974.

Both teams got off to a slow start, but both built to glorious climaxes.

Italy, knowing it must win to qualify, capitalized on an early error by Holland's Enzo Brandi, who put the ball into his own net. But the Dutchman redeemed himself by scoring from long range in the 50th minute. Aris Haan got the winner — a shot of unbelievable power from 35 yards — in the 75th minute.

Argentina played fast and knew precisely what it must do to qualify. That four-goal target seemed to weigh heavily at first and the Argentines made a fumbling and nervous start, nearly conceding an early goal to Peru's Munante.

But his shot hit the post and Argentina took charge.

A goal in the 21st minute by Mario Kempes was followed by one in the 43rd minute by Alberto Tarantini, but the deluge broke in the second half.

Kempes and Leopoldo Luque hit the third and crucial fourth goals in 49th and 56th minutes, and when Luque's header crossed the line, World Cup administrators, technicians and local reporters joined the 40,000-strong crowd in chanting "Argentina, Argentina."

Another goal by Luque goal and one by substitute Houseman sealed Argentina's entry to the final.

Brazil had its chance to put Argentina's target beyond reach earlier in the day but it lacked the punch up front to pile on the goals.

An opening goal by Nelinho was followed by two from Roberto. But Brazil was dominated by the Poles for long periods, and the Europeans might well have won with a better finish. Grzegorz Lato scored for Poland.

Austria, which knocked off the defending champion, was sparked by two goals by Johann Krankl. West Germany's Bert Vogts kicked the ball in his own net for the other Austrian goal. The West German scorers were Karl-Heinz Runnenigge and Bernd Hostenlein.

Wyo., BYU cowboys lead college rodeo

BOZEMAN, Mont. (UPI) — Hank Franzen of Wyoming's Casper College and Sherri Muir Rochee of Brigham Young University were the frontrunners in all-around competition after the first go-round Wednesday at the National Collegiate Rodeo Finals.

As the early leader, Franzen replaced Steve Bland of Southeastern Oklahoma State, who was the evening's top bareback bronc rider.

The Oklahoma club also claimed 150 points and the top-standing women's team at the half-way point in Wednesday night's competition. Central Arizona College was second with 135 and South Dakota State University had 120.

The College of Southern Idaho continued to build up points in the men's standings, with 240 midway through the night. Howard Junior College of Texas and Southeastern Oklahoma State each had 180.

Top competitors Wednesday included Howard's Mack Altizer, who led the call-roping event, and Samuel Edmondson of Cal State-Fresno, leading the steer wrestling. Barrie Beach of Central Arizona was the leader in women's goal-tying.

Ex-chief couldn't kill fund

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — A former president of Oklahoma State University said Wednesday he tried to stop an OSU football recruiting slush fund back in 1974 and is disappointed to see he was not successful.

Dr. Robert Kamm told reporters at a news conference that he became aware of the slush fund while serving as president of OSU and met with some of the people involved.

Crackdown won't attend new rule

DENVER (UPI) — Members of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics were told Wednesday the U.S. Office of Civil Rights is anxiously awaiting the July 21 deadline for colleges and universities to provide equal opportunities for men and women in athletics.

Frank Till, a special assistant on Title IX athletic policy from the Office of Civil Rights in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, closed out the 13th annual NACDA convention with a session on the effects of Title IX, which ends a three-year adjustment period on July 21.

"We're as worried and anxious about July 21 as you are," Till told the athletic administrators from NJADA, NIAA and NCAA institutions.

"Some schools will be more prepared than others," said Till. "If your program is satisfying the needs of the coaches and athletes, you won't hear from the Office of Civil Rights. If a complaint is lodged, we will be available to help, not punish the schools, late meeting the requirements of Title IX."

Till laid the ground adjustments to equal opportunities for women as well as men in athletics is "not as confusing as first thought."

Till said each athletic department is relatively free to take any philosophical approach to achieving the guidelines of Title IX as long as "there are no inferior opportunities and no one is disadvantaged because of being a man or woman."

"It's clearer and clearer to me that if Title IX disappeared tomorrow, what it has started would continue to grow," said Till. "What the women are demanding would still be with us."

Till said his agency will provide model plans for various levels of athletic programs to assist in achieving compliance with the new requirements. He also said that mixed sex teams are not a goal of Title IX. He said the ultimate goal is equal opportunity for both sexes in athletics.

Golfers worry over Canadian pay-off

OAKVILLE, Ont. (UPI) — The winner of this year's Canadian Open Golf Tournament, scheduled to start Thursday, may get a nasty surprise when he carries his $50,000 top prize to the bank. The payoff will be in Canadian funds, ravaged over recent months on international money markets, and currently worth only 89 cents on the U.S. dollar.

But according to tournament chairman Dick Griffin, "There have been no complaints about that, that I'm aware of. I don't know what other funds you would use for Canadian tournament."

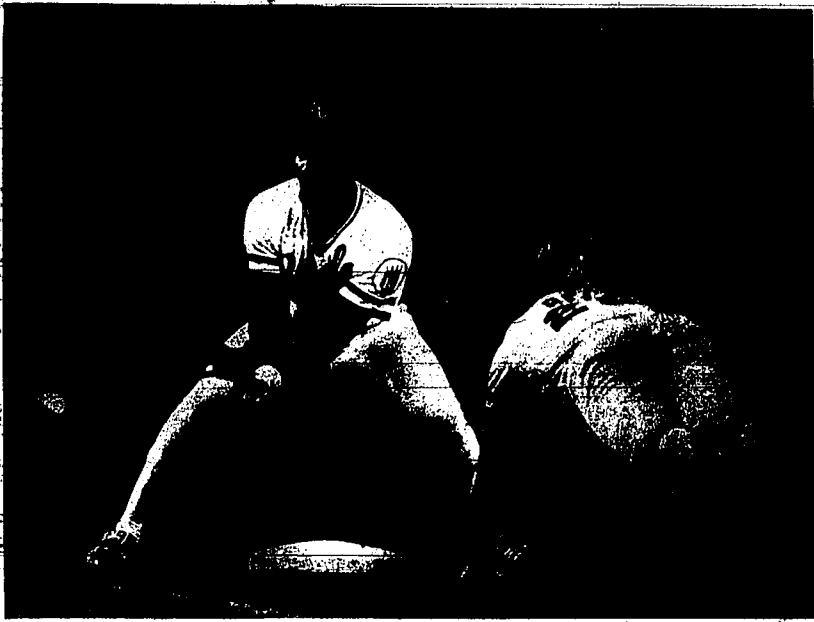

Organizers expect one of the strongest fields ever for the $250,000 tournament, featuring last week's U.S. Open winner, Andy North, along with popular stars Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player.

Also entered are defending champion Lee Trevino and last year's runner-up, Peter Oosterhuis.

A disappointing late withdrawal came from Severiano Ballesteros, the 21-year-old crowd-pleaser from Spain, who returned home after the U.S. Open, citing exhaustion.

"He said he was just worn out after playing 10 tournaments in a row," Griffin said. The fairways on the tricky, par-71 Glen Abbey course are lush this year than for last year's event, and expected to play longer. Nicklaus, who designed the layout, described the course after surveying it this week as "just beautiful — the way I intended it to be."

Three Olympians beg Congress for money, protection for amateurs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three Olympic athletes pleaded with Congress Wednesday to support amateur athletes with money and protect competitors from feuding among sports governing bodies.

But the administration balked at the idea of federal financing, or intrusion, into amateur sports.

"We as athletes need some mechanism, some means of supporting our families," retired Olympic track star Willie Davenport told a House Judiciary subcommittee.

He said he did not want the government to subsidize athletes directly but that it should provide training facilities and take other actions to relieve the financial burdens on would-be Olympians, who have to train eight to ten years to reach their peak.

Davenport said he had to join the Army and go to college to find adequate training facilities, and later was able to maintain his world class status through the help of his employer, the mayor of Baton Rouge, La.

The athletes were testifying on a $30 million bill, already passed by the Senate, that would legislate a new structure for amateur athletics, designed to end jurisdictional squabbles that have often kept individuals from competing.

Speed skater Dianne Holum testified that her sport suffers from lack of money and facilities and that the national governing body is composed of people "out of touch with the sport."

Gold medal swimmer John Naber said, "America judges its athletes by how much money they make," making it hard for amateurs to survive. He said the public forgets its Olympic stars during the three years they need support the most — between Olympics — and that in the current state of affairs, track people can make crucial decisions about swimming competition.

The bill would expand authority of the U.S. Olympic Committee, setting it up as the coordinating body for amateur sports and giving it a one-time grant of $18 million in "seed money." Another $12 million would be provided for operation and develop of training centers for top athletes and for studies in sports medicine.

The panel of athletes told of how American amateurs have to pay their own way to train abroad because of the lack of facilities in the United States.

Granting the money "will be a giant step for major and minor sports," Miss Holum said. Davenport said the $30 million "is only a drop in the bucket" compared to the real needs, and Naber said the figure, while low, would be important in showing the public that the government is behind the effort to upgrade Olympic performances.

He said if the government chips in, "I would have to say private industry will get on the bandwagon."

But C. Carson Conrad, executive director of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, said the administration "strongly believes that the federal government should not attempt to direct amateur athletics in this country and that amateur athletics should be financed through the private sector."

He said the administration could accept Congress making the $18 million grant on a one-time basis but that the $12 million proposal for training centers is "unnecessary and undesirable."

Williams pleads not guilty to charge of stabbing student

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Suspended Providence College basketball star Dwight Williams Wednesday pleaded innocent to charges of stabbing a fellow student with a paring knife in the school cafeteria.

Superior Court Judge Antonio S. Almeida released Williams, 20, on $3,500 personal recognizance pending a pre-trial hearing July 18.

Williams is charged with stabbing Raymond Romagnola, 22, of Somerset, Mass., over a $10 bet on a pool game April 12. He faces charges of assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a concealed knife with a blade of more than three inches.

Romagnola received two stitches in his wounded shoulder and was released from the hospital one day after the incident.

Williams, a junior from Buffalo, N.Y., was suspended from Providence College. The school's disciplinary committee has not ruled whether he can return in September.

Williams was arraigned in District Court after the incident, but had to be arraigned again Wednesday because his case was transferred to Superior Court.

Williams was a starting guard with the Friars for the last two years. He was named by UPI to its all New England team.

Spinks pays fines

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — Heavyweight boxing champion Leon Spinks paid a $52 fine Wednesday after being cited for driving without a license and driving with improper registration.

Police Chief Roger Halbert said Spink's 1978 Cadillac was stopped around 2:50 a.m. when officer J.D. King noticed it had no license plate. King later established that Spinks also did not have a driver's license.

"As far as I know, there was no argument, no fight," Halbert said. "It was peaceful."

Spinks, 24, recently beat Muhammad Ali for the heavyweight title but one of the two bodies sanctioning boxing stripped Spinks of his title. He is still the World Boxing Association champion but lost the World Boxing Council title.

Tate faces big test

NEW YORK (UPI) — Unbeaten John Tate, the U.S. Olympic heavyweight who was knocked out in one round by Teofilo Stevenson in 1976, gets his first big test as a professional Thursday night when he meets another undefeated heavyweight, Bernardo Mercado of Colombia, in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden.

Tate, of Knoxville, Tenn., is 11-0 with eight knockouts, but his opponents have all been unknowns. He is rated a slight underdog to Mercado on the basis of the Colombian's 20-0 record with 17 knockouts. Mercado is ranked seventh by the World Boxing Council. Tate is unrated.

Tate, at 6-foot-4 and 225 pounds, calls himself "Big John". Despite an impressive record as an amateur and young pro, he is remembered primarily for a loss — the one-round knockout in the semifinals at Montreal by two-time Olympic champion Stevenson.

Fran's decision unknown to Viks

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — If quarterback Francis Tarkenton has made a decision to return for his 18th season, the top management of the Minnesota Vikings knows nothing about it.

A New York newspaper said Tuesday the 38-year-old Georgia star has decided to try one more season. The News said he would announce his decision June 29 at a charity "roast" in Minneapolis.

"I'm very glad to hear it, if it's true," Vikings President Max Winter said. "I don't know a thing about it until he makes the announcement. We'd welcome him with open arms."

"He's never informed us at all," said Winter.

Tarkenton suffered a broken ankle last season during a game against Cincinnati and he was said to have agonized throughout the off-season whether he could play again.

"He did want to find out if his injury responded," Winter said. "We left it wide open (as to his return)."

If he decides to play, Tarkenton, who holds just about every NFL passing record, will be paid an estimated $550,000 for the upcoming season, the last year of his three-year contract. Summer training camp opens July 27.

Few adventures compare with white water float trips

TWIN FALLS — Combine the fun and thrill of the best rides at Disneyland, the enjoyment of camping in some of the most beautifully rugged country in the world, and the opportunity to fish for native cutthroat trout and the result is a float trip down the Middle Fork of the Salmon River.

That trip offers an opportunity of a lifetime for anyone and at a price that is still a bargain.

Planning a vacation can become so expensive as to keep the even the most hearty at home but that is not the case with the Middle Fork trips.

The price tag that begins at $400 for five days includes meals, lodging in the form of a tent, if needed, transportation down the river on a rubber raft and the trip back to the beginning point at Stanley.

"It's a helluva bargain," River Guide Roy "Nick" Nicholson of the float trip.

The bargain can range up to $700 depending on the guide company but most of the in-state guides get in around the $400 level. The higher prices usually go for those companies that offer a little more fishing but the trips are usually five or at the most 6 days.

"You'll see other parties on the river, but not too many," Guide Elwood Masoner said. Several years ago, the U.S. Forest Service took over the jurisdiction of the river runners and the river and as a result, they plan when and how many people can raft down the river.

"It's amazing how clean that river is with all the people on it," Nicholson's son Jeff said. "You can hardly find a beer can tab or a cigarette butt. Most of them are picked up and taken out," he added.

The trip is an adventure and there is some risk but there have been people from ages six to 80 who have made the trip without serious incident.

"People say 'it's dangerous' and I can't tell them it's totally safe. When you get people and water together, somebody will find a way to drown. You're dealing with rapids; you're dealing with boats and you're dealing with people," Nicholson said.

His son Paul said he hasn't had a serious threat in life since he has been working with his dad for some eight years. "People always get thrown out or fall out but that's not a problem," he said. Those who take the trip are instructed on what to do and the first and most important rule is that while in the boats life jackets must be worn at all times. "State law says every guest must wear a life jacket on the river," Masoner said. "The insurance is invalid if something happens and the person involved doesn't have a life jacket on," he added.

Other rules include not standing up in the raft and being prepared for the extreme situations like getting hung up on a rock or overturning.

"They listen to you very closely. We seem to attract a special type of people who are adventuresome and willing to learn," Nicholson commented.

"This year holds a promise of some of the best running for quite a few years, both Nicholson and Masoner said. "It's going to be a tremendous year. We usually start right after the high spring run-off and this year, the water was high but there is plenty of snowpack left up there," Nicholson said.

"Last year we quitte running on July 14. I called the guests and told them if they want a river trip, come on out, but if you want a white-water trip, come next year," Nicholson said of the problems with the low water last summer.

Many of those who take the trip have no idea what to expect, Masoner explained both the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association and the Idaho Tourism Department can advise people who call for the trip.

When asked whether there are good and bad guides floating the river, Masoner said he hasn't had anybody complain about the trip. "That river has one redeeming feature and that is that people find it very exciting," he said.

"When you guide the river, you can tell a good trip from a bad one but the people can't," Nicholson added.

The guides usually provide everything but personal clothing and sleeping bags and mattresses but that may vary from company to company.

One of the things brought on by a trip on the Middle Fork is a huge appetite. "People have a terrific appetite when they get out in the open, Nicholson said.

The menu, depending on the guide company, usually includes large portions of meat, biscuits, bread, and eggs. "For a five day trip, we carry 20 loaves of bread and 20 dozen eggs," Nicholson added.

"If I were taking the trip, there are several questions I would ask," Nicholson explained. "Like how long have the guides been on the river and are there any hidden costs."

There are some companies that require you to rent the sleeping bag from them or pay extra for the water-proof duffle bag or another 15 cents for a cup, Nicholson explained.

Nicholson also said it is very important that those with special diet problems. "It's kind of tough when someone all of a sudden says 'I can't eat that' without any warning or idea there was a special problem," Nicholson said.

Each trip varies according to the weather, the people guiding and the people in each boat but most of the time, everything is an adventure.

Early in the year is the best time for white water because the river is high with spring runoff. As the summer goes into July and August, the snowpack has melted and the river gets down to two and one half to three feet.

"If you want a relaxing trip with the weather, fishing and camping, September is the best month to go. The biting insects, the gnats and mosquito, are usually gone by August," Masoner said.

Most of the dates for trips for this summer are now filled, both river guides agreed, and for those who want to give the Middle Fork a shot this summer the choices may be few and far between.

"We're geared for the maximum party size, and if we know the day before, we can get someone in," Masoner said. He added that his dates are full and he has to suggest other runners when people call.

"The bulk of the bookings are made in January, February and early March and all we are doing now is filling holes," Nicholson elaborated.

While the summer offers a variety of things to do for a vacation, few offer the adventure and excitement of the Middle Fork of the Salmon River.

Getting ready

LOADING the gear boxes and equipment boxes in preparation for trips on the Middle Fork of the Salmon River are Guides Paul and Jeff Nicholson. The rafting season begins June 23.

Pheasant season holds promise of go year

TWIN FALLS — It may be a ways from pheasant hunting season but indications are that the hunt could be a good one.

Although it too early to tell exactly what the hunt will be like, several factors have contributed to what could be larger numbers of the birds.

One of the biggest factors is the late spring which prevented many of the valley farmers from burning their ditchbanks and road sides. Those areas provide excellent cover for the birds and are good nesting places.

Flash and Game Spokesman Stu Murrell said the brood counts are taken in late July and early August but by then the opening dates and the seasons have been set by the Fish and Game Commission.

Murrell said most of the pheasants nest in hay fields and it is difficult to tell whether the eggs are hatched and the small birds are off the nest before the first cutting of hay.

He added that if the young are still in the nests, the culling operations put a terrific bite in the populations.

Controlled hunts deadline June 30

BOISE — The days are slipping by for those who wish to apply for a controlled hunt permit in Idaho this fall.

Department of Fish and Game officials remind sportsmen that the application cutoff date is June 30 at 5 p.m. Applications must be received at the department headquarters office at 800 S. Walnut Street, P.O. box 25, 83707 by the deadline or be postmarked June 30. Applications received after that date will not be included in the drawings.

The time from the cutoff date to the start of computerized drawings August 1 is needed to allow the department to process the thousands of applications and make sure that they are properly completed.

To be eligible for the special hunt drawings, applicants must have a valid license and enter the number on the application card. They must also list their first hunt choice by number and the second choice, if desired, in the same manner.

The card must be signed and have the applicants social security number, sex, age, height and weight along with the proper name and current mailing address. The card also must be signed.

A group application must also furnish the same information. Group applications are accepted only for deer, elk, sheep, mountain goat, and antelope hunts. They are not accepted for moose.

Fishing hints: by Swen

What happened to the flowers

Have you ever wondered about the city parks, and what has happened to beauty we used to have in parks. It seems that monies are available to bulldoze down the trees and plow up the flowers to make room for fences and cement.

Most of our parks are now dominated by softball diamonds and tennis courts. That combination of chain link fence and cement that allows park use for only the young.

Some tell me that federal monies to our cities is the cause of the ruination of our parks. Seems the money is available to tear out the trees and flowers that we all enjoy and then replace them with softball and tennis courts.

If you feel you need to go to our parks for relaxation, I suggest the Cascade park. It is the only one NOT dominated by ball parks and tennis courts.

Swen gave the croppie a double try during the week of June 10 and came up empty as for as the croppie. But... small bass are in the upper part of the Salmon reservoir. I found them mostly along the rocky shores.

Mepps spinners give me good results. Reports from Henewake Lake are excellent. Two reports that 3 fish limits of cutthroat trout are being taken. Several in the 2 to 4 pound class.

The best bet for a limit of trout is still the Snake River in the Hogerton valley. I gave the river a try Saturday morning early, and it was HOT, HOT, HOT.

Our generation made all these mistakes because we failed to read the minutes of the last meeting.

Old species offer change of pace fishing

TWIN FALLS — If your days of fishing for trout, bass, salmon and other assorted mild fish have caused you to cast about for a more interesting fish, consider the species and trip takers recently by a couple of Magic Valley sportsmen.

Gary and Bret Stone and Curt and Chad Smith decided to try a different breed of fish the first of June so they flew to Glendive, Montana for a little paddletail fishing.

The bait they used for the fish amounted to two or three spark plugs; their gear, a heavy duty pole and 80 pound test line and a bunch of treble hooks up strung up the line. In reality, the spark plugs were used for weight and there was no bait because the paddletail don't seem to take anything.

"It's not that they don't eat, it's just that little is known about the ugly flat-nosed prehistoric fish."

"They don't know where they came from or much about them," Gary Stone explained after his son pulled in a 73 pound monster. "They are found only in the Mississippi river and in one of the larger rivers in South America. It's a prehistoric monster like the sturgeon but has a snout that looks like a canoe paddle."

"You just throw out your line and start pulling," Stone said about the sport of paddletail fishing.

"I caught a little one about 33 pounds and everybody laughed so I threw him back," he added. Bret, on the other hand, threw out his line and hooked into a 73 pounder.

"You just have to go with them. It's like hooking a pig," Stone elaborated. "You should have seen the expression on his (Bret's) face when he hooked that one."

The fish just took off down river and all Bret could do is go with it and that's exactly what happened.

"He was in and out of the river and it took about 35 minutes to haul it in," Stone said.

The paddletail is not too well known and fishing for them is a well kept secret. They run when the Yellowstone river is high and after the spring runoff is complete, no one knows exactly where the big monsters go.

However, during the mornings and the evenings when the fish are running, the banks were shoulder to shoulder with the fishermen, Stone added.

The meat is a little like red snapper, Stone said. "We cooked up some of it the other night and it tasted pretty good."

The paddletail was not the only different fish they four caught while in Montana. They hauled in their share of sturgeon and Mississippi white catfish.

"The sturgeon are a completely different breed from those in the Snake River. Up there, they are like suckers and are killed or thrown back," Stone went on to explain.

"We were warned to bring plenty of gear and we had seven poles and we broke every one of them and had to go into town to get more," he said.

"I'm an artist and I was making sketches all the time Bret was pulling on the fish and I'm going to make some paintings of him hauling that thing in."

Stone said the trip was a once in a lifetime trip for the four and was a thrill.

If paddletail fishing is a little too exotic, Buhl fisherman Edwin Iverson can suggest a trip to Weiser and a shot at catfishing.

He should know, too. Earlier this spring, Iverson was fishing at dusk on the Snake River near Weiser and managed to pull in a 24 pound, nine ounce channel catfish.

Where the other fish offer a big fight, the catfish just sort of lay there while they are reeled in, but they do offer delicious eating.

"I really don't like trout for eating," Iverson commented. He added that the catfish are excellent tasting, although they are not a sport fish.

Half a fish?

"We went out one night between 9:30 and 10 p.m. and had 70 bullheads," he said.

"My favorite fishing is salmon fishing," he said but then "fishing is fishing. When I get a chance to go, I go."

Steinbrenner explodes as Yanks fall to Boston again

United Press International
There was one more alien in Fenway Park than Billy Martin counted on Wednesday night — his boss, George Steinbrenner.
Martin's defending-world champion New York Yankees had just dropped the "rubber" game of their critical three-game series with the American League East-leading Boston Red Sox by a whopping 9-2 margin and Steinbrenner, attending his first road game of the season, was fuming.
"When (Tom) Burgmeier came in to pitch in the first game of this series where was (Lou) Piniella?" the outspoken Yankee owner said angrily. "Piniella's only the second-leading hitter in the league and he didn't play in any one of the three games here. But don't get me going. I'm not going to get involved."

Steinbrenner and Martin have, of course, had their differences in the past. However, this season the Yankee owner has been content to leave the ballclub in the hands of President Al Rosen and, until Wednesday night, was uncharacteristically silent in the wake of the Yankees' current woes. The victory increased the Red Sox' lead to seven games over second-place Baltimore and dropped the Yankees eight games back.

Although he refused to bow to pressure and start unbeaten Ron Guidry a day ahead of time instead of the rookie Beattie, Martin was testy when asked if he nonetheless considered such a move.
"That's the dumbest blessing question I've ever heard," said Martin. "I run the pitching staff. As for bringing in Hunter, he needed the work. He's due to start next Wednesday."
Red Sox Manager Don Zimmerman had good reason to be happy with the two victories over the Yankees.
"We've got a seven-game lead," said Zimmerman, "and I don't see this club losing seven or nine in a row like we did last year. After getting shellacked (20-4) last night and coming right back at them tonight, that's a good sign."

Eckerley, 7-2, struck out seven and walked just one. In his last five starts at Fenway Park this year, the 22-year old right-hander is 4-0 with an earned run average of 0.82.
"I'm becoming more of a pitcher than a thrower now," said Eckerley. "I'm built for this ballpark because I can get righties out, while a lefty has to hit the ball a long way or go to the opposite field."

TF Legion entertains Burley

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Legion team will face Burley at 6:30 tonight in a double-header and try to overcome the loss of two games in Idaho Falls Tuesday night.

The Twin Falls team has hopes of improving their 4-6 record with the double-header tonight.

In the two game loss at Idaho Falls Tuesday night, IF's Kerry Martin held the Twin Falls nine to only one hit in the first game and in the second game of the night. In the first game which IF won 5-2, Idaho Falls jumped on the Twin Falls pitcher Richie Lowe for four hits and that combined with two errors put the game out of touch.

Idaho Falls' Erhart set the mood of the two games by smashing a triple in the first inning and then scored on an error. McMannon singled and moved to second when Tobin walked. Cushing singled and was followed by Pointer and suddenly the score was 4-0 with only half of one inning completed.

Twin Falls answered with one in the fifth inning when Ramerez and Kay singled. Lowe was walked and then Kerry Brown slanted a single to score Ramerez but Idaho Falls quickly put out the fire with two quick outs.

Idaho Falls picked up another run in the sixth inning when Wilson singled and then advanced to third on an error on the Twin Falls third baseman. Erhart continued to speed down for Twin Falls as he singled in Wilson.

The one run in the sixth could have been avoided as the error occurred with two outs.

Twin Falls picked up one more run in the bottom of the sixth when Easley got a double and Miller drove him in with a single but by that time, the game was over and the IF team was on top 5-2.

In the second game, Martin struck out 12 and walked three in taking the 4-2 decision. "How in the heck can you beat something like that," Coach Charles Brown commented. "He's a good pitcher."

Neither team managed to score through the first two innings but in the Boyce walked for Idaho Falls and was doubled home by McMannon. Tobin walked and a throwing error on Twin Falls scored McMannon to end the scoring that inning.

In the fourth, Painter singled and another error in the outfield allowed him to get to third. Three IF batters were walked in a row to force Painter to cross the plate uncontested. McMannon got on base again on a fielders choice that scored another run and then Twin Falls put the brakes on and completed the inning.

Twin Falls picked up their two runs in the fourth inning also when Thorpe walked and stole second. Turner singled him home for the first run. Turner then was pushed home when Brown was walked and Easley stayed alive on an error but that was where the scoring ended.

Kay started the second game for Twin Falls but Walter was pegged with the loss. Bucky Brown allowed only one hit in the last three innings of the second game but the effort was to no avail.

Bowling great hospitalized

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (UPI) — Earl Anthony, professional bowling's all-time money winner, Wednesday was reported in stable condition after suffering a heart attack.
Anthony, who was enroute San Jose, Calif., to compete in a Professional Bowling Association tournament this week, was stricken Tuesday morning and admitted to the cardiac unit at John Muir Memorial Hospital.

Jerome has its very own 'Grandma Moses'

STELLA WALTERS, JEROME, CONVERTS UNUSED GARAGE INTO ATTRACTIVE STUDIO ... she enjoys painting and shares her studio with the Jerome Art Guild

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

JEROME — Stella Prentiss Walters doesn't claim to be an Idaho version of Grandma Moses but at 90 she still paints and enthusiastically shows visitors her work and studio.

The studio itself indicates the successful way in which Mrs. Walters has dealt with life's problem, turning a potentially wasteful situation to good use.

When her husband died five years ago, she had no need for a garage since she does not drive, so the space conveniently located adjacent to her kitchen was converted into an attractive studio.

The studio in her spacious brick home in Jerome is put to good use, serving as the meeting place every Friday for the Jerome Art Guild which Mrs. Walters organized in 1959. The 16 charter members have now grown to some 30 painters.

"I always wanted to paint in school," she said, "and when we could choose our own activity, like Friday afternoon, I would always choose drawing."

But she didn't have many years in school for her mother became ill and Stella was needed at home to care for the house and cook. She is the only one left of her 10 brothers and sisters.

It wasn't until 1924, after she was married and the last of her own eight children were in school, that she again found time to return to her artistic interests.

She took her first art lessons that year from Virginia Ikard of Jerome, a widow who taught at the former Gooding College.

While modest about her ability, Mrs. Walters says she has probably sold $1,000 worth of Edmund S. Prentiss.

Her father, whom she fondly described as having lily feet, purchased a dairy south of Twin Falls across Rock Creek in what is now South Park. He operated it from 1908 until 1916, delivering milk in the new town with two wagons.

"Mrs. Walters said on her father's first trip to Twin Falls he returned to their home in Lawton, Okla., with samples of Idaho fruit, vegetables, grain and hay "a whole suitcase of them. People came from all around to see the things raised out in Idaho. It was wonderful and a great advertisement for the Twin Falls community then," she has written in a family history.

On Jan. 8, 1910, when she was 22, she married Carl Walters, who had worked at the old Riverside Ferry near where Sligar's Natatorium is now located in Hagerman Valley, in 1908 and '09.

"We did our courting on the old Rock Creek Bridge, which preceded the Singing Bridge," she laughs.

Walters worked for his father-in-law at the dairy and later was associated with him in farming after they moved to Jerome County in 1916. The Walters lived on three different farms before moving into Jerome in 1958.

"I was 20 years old before I got a nice home, so I'm still enjoying it," she said.

Since she is blessed with most of her children living near by she now leaves the major housekeeping chores to her daughters.

The Walters first lived in the Grand View neighborhood where 80 acres already were cleared, but Walters took additional land from sagebrush. Mrs. Walters belonged to the literary society and recalls that the three-room country school house, which later burned, and Grange Hall served as a center for the rural community.

In 1930 they moved to the Falls City area and about 12 years later purchased a farm northeast of Jerome in the Sugar Loaf District where her oldest son still farms.

Several of her daughters share their mother's interest in painting. Jessie Browne, who is a deputy in the county auditor's office, and Ethel Romans, who lives northwest of Paul, both paint.

Of her eight children, six live in Magic Valley. They include Charles Walters, who farms northeast of town; Harry Walters, and Mrs. Romans, both Jerome; Gordon Walters, who farms out of Jerome; Inez Hammond, Kimberly, and Mrs. Romans, Paul, and Vivian Orth, Olympia, Wash., and Craig Walters, Portland.

Mrs. Walters enjoys her large family which consists of 32 grandchildren and 30 great-grandchildren and "two more coming."

"She had put away her easels until after the "shindig" June 18, an open house her children held in honor of her 90th birthday which was June 19. But now that the party is over, in all probability Mrs. Walters will soon be busy again in her converted garage studio.

STELLA WALTERS ... still paints at 90 paintings over the years, and has entered a water color of a Wood River scene at the International Art Show in New York City. As she talked about her hobby, graciously juggling out an easel so she could be photographed "at work," it was hard to realize the artist has seen nine decades.

She works in oil, water color and pastel (colored chalk). Currently she has an order for a scene from the Grand Tetons. In earlier years she painted "on location" doing both original and copying from photographs or other pictures she likes.

One of her favorites in the studio was painted at Niagara Springs on the Snake River while her husband fished.

"I could hardly paint for wiping my nose, it was so cold that day," she recalled.

She no longer paints "every day" but recently copied a portrait of Maude Shewmaker, Kimberly, (a friend of 50 years) from a picture appearing in the Times-News Elders column last March.

Born in June, 1888, near Huron, S.D., Stella lived as a girl in Missouri, Texas and six years in Oklahoma before coming to Twin Falls in September, 1908, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs.

Railroad retirement benefits to increase in July

HEARTLINE: is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 43081. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be posted in this column.

HEARTLINE: I am 68 years old and I have been drawing my Railroad Retirement benefits for three years. Can you tell me if there will be an increase in our benefits this year? — L.D.

Railroad Retirement annuitants will receive cost-of-living increases in their monthly benefits beginning with July checks. The Tier I portion of Railroad Retirement annuities will be increased by 6.5 percent. However, to avoid duplication of the cost-of-living increase in the Tier I benefit for an annuitant who is also receiving Social Security benefits is reduced by the amount of the cost-of-living increase in the Social Security benefit.

There is also a second cost-of-living increase available only to Railroad Retirement beneficiaries. The Tier II benefits will be increased by 2.1 percent for retired employees and their spouses and by 6.5 percent for survivor beneficiaries. This increase is not reduced because of a beneficiary's entitlement to Social Security benefits. Both Tier I and Tier II increases are effective this month and will be first reflected in July checks for most annuitants. Increases that cannot be paid in time for the July check will be paid in a later date.

HEARTLINE: I am getting ready to retire and start my Social Security and my company pension. I have quite a large sum of money in the bank and would like to invest this, yet I do not know much about where to invest. Can you give me any tips on what to do? — S.J.

Any time you are investing your own money in anything, the first thing to do is investigate the company completely and seek advice from either your attorney or an investment counselor. The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission has issued a list of 10 warning signals that should make investors beware. They are:

1. Promises of spectacular returns or profits far exceeding those normally expected.
2. Sales approaches from strangers.
3. Rumors you hear from friends, neighbors, and acquaintances about unusual investment opportunities.
4. Telephone calls from strangers, particularly in other cities, trying to persuade you to invest.
5. The use of post office box numbers in connection with communications.
6. The failure to receive full information about the people involved, the terms of the offering, the financial condition of the enterprise and its prior business record.
7. The promise of a solution to all your financial problems.
8. Pressure to make quick investment decisions.
9. Claims of a new or exotic product or enterprise.
10. Claims that you have been selected to get in on the ground floor.

HEARTLINE: I am presently receiving Social Security Retirement and SSI benefits. If I move to another state, will I still be eligible for SSI benefits? — A.W.

SSI is a combination state and federally funded program. If you are presently living in a state that funds the federal SSI program, and move to a state that does not, you could possibly lose (or have reduced) your SSI benefits. However, if you live in a state that does not pay funds into the federal SSI program and move to one that does, your SSI benefits would be increased.

HEARTLINE: I am 69 years old and I have been on Medicare for four years now. I have been quite sick during these last four years and I have used my Medicare quite frequently and they have helped me to pay considerable hospital and doctor bills. Since Medicare has paid so much money on me, could they ever cancel my coverage? — N.R.

No, Medicare cannot cancel your coverage. Once a person turns 65, they have Medicare Hospital Insurance because of their work credits (or their spouse's work credits) and as their personal, or the coverage for as long as the person lives, or as long as they want the coverage. Medicare Medical Insurance is also guaranteed as long as the premiums are paid or the recipient authorizes Social Security to deduct the premiums from their monthly Social Security check.

Heartline has available a book which gives out additional information on the entire Medicare program. To order, send $1.75 to Heartline's Guide to Medicare, 114 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 43081. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: Can you tell me what Social Security means by "resources" and how do they affect someone applying for Supplemental Security Income (SSI)? — G.S.

Resources are things a person owns: money, benefit coverage? — B.N.

Yes, if:

1. The deceased employee or annuitant was enrolled for self and family at the time of death.
 2. At least one member of the family is entitled to an annuity as the survivor of the deceased employee or annuitant.
 3. The annuity of all survivors eligible for health benefits coverage is sufficient to pay the withholdings required for enrollment in the plan.
- HEARTLINE: I receive a 100 percent service-connected disability benefit from the Veterans Administration. Am my children and wife eligible for medical care from the VA? — A.Y.
- Yes, under Public Law 93087, which authorizes the VA to provide medical care for the spouse and children of a veteran who has a permanent, service-connected total disability and the widow, widower or child of a veteran who died as a direct result of that service-connected disability, provided that they do not have entitlement under CHAMPUS or Medicare.

HEARTLINE: I have seen where you have mentioned service-connected benefits from the Health Insurance Plan over the last two years. I have not heard nor read anything about this lately. What's new with the possibility for a national health insurance program? — W.L.

In a major strategy shift, President Carter has decided to mount a massive campaign this year on behalf of a national health insurance program to provide universal and mandatory coverage for all citizens.

bank accounts, investments, real estate and other things of value. A person can have resources valued up to $1,500 ($2,200 for a couple) and still be eligible for SSI. Not included in resources are the value of a home, automobile with a value of $1,200 or less, furnishings with a value of $1,500 or less, as well as certain other things.

HEARTLINE: Will you tell me if, when a person who was working under Civil Service dies, his survivors can continue the health

Standouts

Jeffrey Lawrence Arrington, Twin Falls, has been awarded a Kansas University Endowment Association Scholarship for the 1978-79 school year.

The scholarships are awarded to freshmen on the basis of superior academic achievement.

Arrington, son of Mr. and Mrs. K.R. Arrington, is a freshman speech communication major at KU.

David Weller, Twin Falls, has been awarded a president's scholarship for exceptional talent by Whitman College, Walla Walla, Wash.

The scholarship will provide 100 percent of his demonstrated need or, in cases where financial aid is unnecessary, an honorarium.

Those from Hagerman who made the list are Lee R. Cox, Linda McFadden and Karl A. Uppalno.

Filer students are Bruce E. Lincoln, Rockne K. Lammers and Craig R. Lincoln.

Kathy Scott of Twin Falls has achieved the Arizona State University dean's list for the spring semester.

Scott is majoring in computer systems in the Tempe, Ariz., university's college of business administration and earned a grade point average between 3.5 and 4.0 (all A's) to make the list.

Area students have won upperclassman scholarships for the 1978-79 school year at Idaho State University, Pocatello.

Each scholarship is to pay the cost of registration and is worth $200.

Twin Falls winners were Robyana C. D'Annunzio, Edward Fuchs, Cheryl Hack, Jerry Justice, Karin E. Varley and David Hilly.

Other area winners were Tim F. Quigley, Bubi; Rick K. Larsen, Jerome; Shaun M. Maxey, Jerome; Becky L. Slanger, Jerome; David Douglas, Rupert; Terry Neil, Rupert; Teresa Anderson, Glenns Ferry; Ralph E. Ballard, Shoshone, and Karen M. Gorrige, Oakley.

LI. Patrick Leo Bermingham of the Twin Falls Police Dept. graduated June 16 from the Federal Bureau of Investigation training facilities at Quantico, Va.

Each graduating officer concluded 11 weeks of executive-level training.

The training is designed to meet the needs of contemporary law enforcement in such areas as police management, ethics, recent court decisions, urban police problems and behavioral sciences.

Three Filer School District personnel who retired at the end of this school year were honored recently at a reception at the Filer Elementary School.

They include Genevieve Engle and Uletta Martin, teachers, and Vernon Herd, janitor. They were presented plaques from the school board and gifts from the Filer Teachers Association.

Margaret M. Laramie, Richfield, was included on the dean's list at the College of Idaho, Caldwell, for the spring semester.

MR. AND MRS. C. CORKEY COLE

Couple marries in Jackpot rites

JACKPOT — Edith Dapita Rytting and C. Corkey Cole exchanged wedding vows May 19 at 4 p.m. in the Gala Room of Cactus Pete's.

Justice of the Peace Jay Snyder performed the double-ring ceremony. Bridesmaid was Nola Anderson of Twin Falls and Bob McConnell was best man.

The bride wore a pink colored street-length dress and the bridesmaid wore a pale green suit.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the club, hosted by Bob Chapman with Joe Franco, Jim Chopola, Ash Allen, Pat Ireland and Joe and Evon Brown as his assistants.

Guests were served refreshments from the bar and a smorgasbord dinner.

The bridegroom is employed at Cactus Pete's. The couple will reside in Twin Falls.

Gallery displays antique watches

LINCOLN, England (UPI) — Odd things are tucked into odd corners all over England, and one of the most unexpected is John Usher's watches.

One is shaped like a beetle. You open its iridescent wings to tell the time, and set the hour using a black button under the rose diamonds on its solid gold neck.

There's another watch whose case is shaped and painted like a strawberry, and another inside a tiny mandolin 2.5 inches long — you can see its balance wheel. If your eyes are good, through the sound hole under its gold strings.

One watch is enameled with a minute picture of "The Meeting of Coriolanus and His Mother." Another shows three children hunting butterflies. Two of Usher's watches are so small they are set into finger rings.

This glittering collection of 68 antique watches — one of the finest in the country — was compiled by a Lincoln jeweler named John Ward Usher.

Usher made clocks himself. Several are in the Lincoln art gallery which bears his name. Among other things, Usher was a high-class pack rat.

He collected Chinese export porcelain and miniature portraits and delicate enamel boxes. He collected relics of Nelson and Napoleon and porcelain figures, and English silver and Charlotte Broeze's thumb case.

Not to mention the watches.

When he died in 1921, Usher not only bequeathed his scattershot collection to his native city, 136 miles north of London, but left money to build a gallery. The Usher Gallery, opened in 1928, is still Lincoln's main museum.

Usher's watches are its special pride. They hang in jeweled, gleaming rows, each not only a rarity but a beautiful work of art.

"Pocket watches were extremely rare until the craft of watchmaking became more widespread during the 17th century," says a gallery catalogue.

Most of these watches, their cases lushly enameled or of densely worked gold, date from the 18th to mid-19th centuries. But the earliest — set in a hollowed-out rock crystal — was made in 1620.

Early pocket watches were so inaccurate that only an hour hand was provided — and dials were marked off only in quarter-hours. Several of Usher's watches have only one hand.

"Dumb repeaters" are queer features of several others.

Couple exchanges promises

GOODING — Terri Lynn Wolfe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Wolfe, Gooding, became the bride of Brian Manning, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Keith Manning, Bliss, June 3 in the First Christian Church in Gooding.

Rev. Harold Hake performed the ceremony before an altar decorated with lighted candelabras and baskets of blue and white mums.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a princess-style gown of ivory organza over satin with a yoke and long sleeves made of chantilly lace. The gown and attached train were trimmed in lace and beaded lace medallions were applied on the skirt.

Maid of honor was Debra Manning, Bliss, sister of the bridegroom, and Debra VonWeller, Joyce Flynn, Anna Arriga, all Gooding, and Debra Areman, Paul, cousin of the bride, were bridesmaids.

Flower girl was Stephanie Mays, Wendell, cousin of the bride. Rickie Manning, brother of the bridegroom, was ringbearer.

Attendants for the bridegroom were Willie Mullins, Gooding, best man, Rod Bliss, Steve Goodby, and brother of the bridegroom Brad Manning, all Bliss, and Steve Nette, Richardson, Tex.

Sandra and Sherri Areman of Paul, cousins of the bride, were candlelighters.

Donna Murphy and Goe Gonzales, both Gooding, played and sang for the ceremony.

The lace covered bride's table at the reception was centered with a three tiered cake decorated with blue and white butterflies, lattice hearts, blue and white sugar bells and blue birds carrying wedding rings. It was topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom.

The cake was baked and decorated by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Dale Morgan, Heyburn, and was cut by Mrs. Jerry (Raymond) Short, aunt of the bride, and served by Betty Marsh, Wendell, cousin of the bride.

Kay Mays served coffee and Jo Shafter presided at the punch bowl. Both are cousins of the bride from Wendell.

Debra Areman of Paul registered the guests and those in charge of the gift table were Connie Hastings, Teresa Mullins, Karen Waskiewicz and Debbie Navarro, all Gooding.

After a short honeymoon trip the couple will be at home on Wyoming Street in Gooding.

Pantyhose big winner

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the 10 years since pantyhose were invented and introduced in the United States, they have captured 84 percent of the market for all women's hosiery.

Stockings now account for less than 10 percent of that market, says Glenn Manishin, editor of "Hosiery & Pantyhose," a trade magazine. The remaining six percent are knee-highs and socks. Manishin said the figures armchair, says Glenn Manishin, editor of "Hosiery & Pantyhose," a trade magazine. The remaining six percent are knee-highs "43 percent of those sold are conventional styles; 33 percent are support styles and eight percent are control-top.

By United Press International Today is Thursday, June 22, the 173rd day of 1978 with 192 to follow.

The moon is between its full phase and last quarter. There is no morning star.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars, Saturn and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh, author and widow of famed American aviator Charles Lindbergh, was born June 22, 1907.

On this day in history:

In 1858, Arkansas was readmitted to the Union, three years after the end of the Civil War.

In 1940, France fell to Germany in World War II.

In 1973, President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev signed a pledge to try to avoid nuclear war. Also that day, the American Skylab astronauts returned to earth after a record 28 days in space.

In 1977, John Mitchell, first U.S. attorney general to go to jail, entered federal prison to serve time for Watergate crimes.

A thought for the day: Anne Morrow Lindbergh wrote, "The wave of the future is coming and there is no fighting it."

Vows exchanged in garden

TWIN FALLS — Denise Messersmith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Messersmith of Twin Falls, became the bride of Lee R. Butterfield in a garden ceremony May 20 at the home of the bride's parents.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Butterfield of Fruit.

The ceremony was performed by the bride's cousin, Judge Roy Holloway of Burley.

The bride's gown was an off-white organza with long sleeves accented with an elbow-length veil. A wreath of real flowers formed a crown for her head.

Attending the couple were Kim Messersmith, sister of the bride; Katie Britley and Vickie Hauber. Bill Hardy of Salt Lake City was best man.

Following the ceremony Ranae Messersmith served cake and punch. Rhea Messersmith assisted at the gift table.

Following a wedding trip to Nevada, California and Arizona, the couple is at home in Rupert where each is employed.

'Essence' aims to please

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Edward Lewis eight years ago launched "Essence," a magazine to help black women feel good about themselves.

Out of the red now, "Essence" goes to 600,000 mostly college educated black women with a median income of around $11,000 a year.

Excellence in "Essence" is taken for granted. Among its recent awards is one in fiction from the National Society of Magazine Editors and another from the United Negro College Fund.

One clue to what goes on inside Lewis comes from the most prominent thing on his desk. His office is in a rather sedate executive suite in a glass tower overlooking Times Square.

The framed message on the desk makes these points:

"The six most important words — 'I admit I made a mistake.'

"The five most important words — 'You did a good job.'

"The four most important words — 'What is your opinion?'

"The three most important words — 'If you please...'

"The two most important words — 'Thank you.'

"The least important word — 'I'."

During an interview the other day Lewis came across as a person who considers the words important.

Now 37, Lewis has achieved star quality in publishing. And it's been as tough but as rewarding as any football game, to hear the former fullback from Dewitt Clinton High in the South Bronx and the University of New Mexico tell it.

"We've been trying to make black women feel good about themselves," Lewis said, "Our aim is to have them consider 'Essence' a necessity."

Other women's magazines, according to Lewis, don't address the needs of the black woman. The ads, stories and reports are aimed at a white audience.

In "Essence," however, black babies and black mothers are featured in the ads for infant products. Cosmetics for black women are special and "Essence" readers learn about "our cosmetic art."

But Lewis said the magazine is not just another women's magazine, specializing in reports on what used to be subjects for women only: fashion, cooking, cosmetics.

Between the covers also are bright reports on child-raising, travel, education, money management, love life, sexual problems, health matters.

your health Heart problems

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb:

About four months ago I had an attack of chest pain and was hospitalized for 10 days. The blood tests were OK, but the electrocardiogram showed that I had a myocardial infarction. About six weeks later I went back to the hospital and had enzyme tests that showed I'd had some more heart muscle damage and so I was hospitalized. After I got out of the hospital that time I didn't have any more chest pains. I take Inferal four times a day and walk about one mile a day for exercise. Now I'm getting some tightness across my chest when I take my walking exercises. I can relieve this with nitroglycerin. Do you feel that all these attacks were coming from the same artery that was closing off? How long will I have this soreness and discomfort in my left chest? Will I have to take the Inferal the rest of my life? I am 54 years old and was in good health before my attack although I was a heavy smoker. I have completely quit smoking and my weight is about normal. Should I expect to return to work and lead a normal life? My personal doctor expects me to be off from work six months.

Lawrence E. Lamb M.D.

Dear Reader:

It's impossible to know which or how many arteries were involved in causing you to have heart problems without special X-ray dye studies that outline the coronary arteries themselves. It is probably true that the major difficulty that caused the heart muscle damage (myocardial infarction) was caused by the progressive blockage of one coronary artery, but that doesn't mean that you couldn't also have disease in the other major arteries to the heart.

The key to deciding what should be done to evaluate you further and what you should do in the future depends on how well you recover at this point. The chest discomfort that you are experiencing with exertion suggests that you still have some problem of providing sufficient circulation to your heart muscle. This is probably due to the blockage of your coronary arteries that caused the heart attack in the first place. The tightness or squeezing across the chest is a frequent way that inadequate circulation to the heart muscle causes discomfort.

I'm glad you have quit smoking because that should help a great deal. In addition you should make every effort possible to decrease your weight to the point that there is no evidence of any significant fat deposits under your skin, regardless of what the bathroom scales read.

The kimono-clad waitress bows slightly and offers you a moist towel on a rattan tray. Uncertainty sets in. Now what? Moisten your mandible? Clean your clavicle?

According to Margaret Stewart, mentor of manners for Ore-Ida Foods, the moist towels, called oshibori and found in Japanese restaurants, are for cleaning the hands before dining.

Mrs. Stewart is an expert on global gobbling in good taste. She spent many years among foreign dignitaries in Washington, D.C., teaching the elite to eat with the King of the Chef of Protocol, she advised families, who would be traveling abroad in an official capacity, on the proper manners for all kinds of occasions with a foreign flavor. Author of several etiquette books, Mrs. Stewart is now emissary for Ore-Ida Foods, Inc., (the frozen potato people).

According to Mrs. Stewart, ethnic etiquette isn't only for the elite, however. Along with those who breakfast in Belgium, lunch in Liberia and sip in Spain, are millions who are discovering the delights of dining with a foreign flair in their own home towns. The ethnic eatery is the place to be seen. "And," says Mrs. Stewart, "you'll feel most comfortable if you're seen partaking properly. What's polite in Poughkeepsie could be ruled in Rumania."

For instance, in a Japanese restaurant it is considered correct to hold the rice bowl close to your mouth and, of course, to use chopsticks to carry the food to your waiting lips.

If you find yourself actually in Japan, be sure to say "thank you" before and after the meal. You are expected to remove your shoes if there is a tatami (woven straw) mat on the floor, says Mrs. Stewart. In Japan the diner must keep eating all that is offered, even if he is full. And in all of Japan, slurping noises when eating indicate enjoyment.

Mrs. Stewart reports that Continental manners are being seen more and more here in the States. "It's not at all unusual," she says, "to see diners holding their forks in their left hands and their knives in their right hands, and eating with their left hands as they do in Europe." Europeans also keep their right hands on the table, at about wrist length, instead of on their laps, which is considered rude.

If you are in a European eatery, don't expect to find a glass of water. You must ask for the water — and the ice, if you wish. The wine that is served is bound to be delicious!

In Germany and Austria you'll get a sandwich served on a little wooden board. Don't pick it up — use your knife and fork. Europeans eat nothing with their fingers — not even french fries. "Of course," asserts Mrs. Stewart, "in the United States, any way you eat an Ore-Ida french fry is all-right."

In Holland, or in Dutch restaurants in this country, you will find a fish fork and fish knife. The short, flat fork has three large tines. The wide, tapered knife is excellent for removing fish bones.

Another Dutch specialty is a potato spoon which is round with a lip on each side — so designed to keep the potatoes from falling onto the table. Mrs. Stewart would like to see the potato spoon used in this country. "No one should chance dropping an Ore-Ida Tater Tot," she said.

In Ethiopia, as in other Arab countries, one eats from a communal pot with the right hand. Since the left hand is used for sanitary purposes, this custom is adhered to strictly. Not too many years ago, an Ethiopian who ate with his left hand was punished by having his right (eating) hand cut off. He would then starve to death. And you thought your Mother was strict!

Our own state of Hawaii also has a dish eaten with fingers from a communal pot — poi. Poi is a glutinous substance made from taro root. It is eaten by putting the middle and index fingers in the pot and licking them off. Sharing poi is very social thing to do — much like eating fondue, which is a Swiss dish.

Everyone likes to be social when they dine. The French have carried this to the extreme and aim for an air of style and elegance. A French meal can be a "masterpiece," reports Mrs. Stewart. She says there is complete attention to detail with an "interweaving" of fine food, good company, sparkling conversation, beautiful service, fresh flowers, and the ever present wines.

However, a guest in a French home or restaurant need not be intimidated by the array of wine glasses and silverware.

Mrs. Stewart says, "The fork and large spoon at the top of the plate are for dessert. When the meal begins, start by using the silverware farthest from your plate and work your way in. Your dinner fork will be removed with your dinner plate. Your dinner knife should be left resting on the small crystal or silver knife holder and used again for the cheese course."

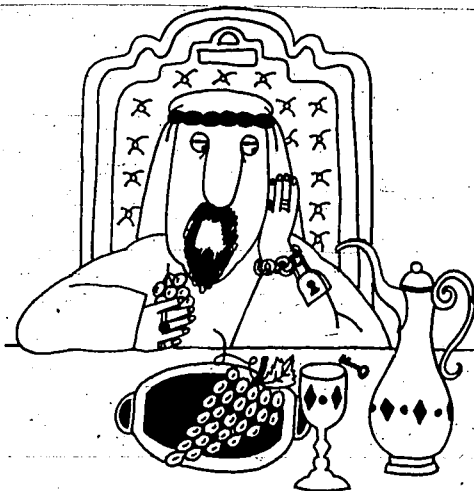

Even in a private home in France, there may be three or four wine glasses per person. Mrs. Stewart says, "In a French home it is considered rude to leave wine in a glass. However, it is perfectly permissible to signal the butler that you've had enough.

"If you find yourself confused, watch what your hostess does," advises Mrs. Stewart, "and just follow her lead."

Course after course, the French meal goes on. It is not unusual for the meal to continue for 2 1/2 hours. It is perfectly all right to smoke between the courses — cigarettes only, no cigars or pipes. Following dinner in France, the guests adjourn to the salon (living room) for coffee, brandy and bon bons. After an especially large meal, with many wines, cold orange juice is also served just before the guests depart.

Interestingly, the English divide the sexes after dinner. The men remain in the dining room for port and cigars while the ladies retire to the living room for coffee. In France, the men and women stay together for coffee and liquors. (Vive la difference!)

The French, incidentally, will not eat corn on the cob. They think it is a dish only fit for pigs. And the English rarely eat salad. It does not normally accompany a meal in an English restaurant.

ARAB CUSTOMS ARE ADHERED TO STRICTLY
... they always eat with their right hand

Rattler gets just desserts

Downey, Calif. (UPI) — A 4 1/2-foot rattlesnake that scared a motorist got its just desserts — it was eaten by the cop who captured it.

John Masidonio, 21, of Downey, said a snake crawled from under the driver's seat of his car Tuesday as he and a friend were driving home from a camping trip in the Angeles National Forest.

Masidonio stopped the car and he and his friend jumped out and flagged down a police patrol car.

Cindy Sparling, Jones wed

TWIN FALLS — Cindy Sparling and R. Wesley Jones were united in marriage on May 31 in the Idaho Falls Latter Day Saints Temple by President Groberg.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Dean Houser, Twin Falls, and the late Thomas H. Sparling of Hollister, Calif.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jones of Idaho Falls.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white chiffon with a full skirt, sash and pearl buttons. She wore an add-a-pearl necklace given to her 20 years ago by her grandparents, the E.E. Sparlings.

She carried a bouquet of tiny roses, blue daisies and baby's breath.

Lisa Mayo, cousin of the bride, was maid-of-honor and bridesmaids were Lori Casperson of Idaho Falls and Bonnie Hansen of Twin Falls.

Flower girls were Aimee Loewenstern and Kimball Mayo, cousins of the bride.

Jedd Jones of Salt Lake City was best man for his brother and Joe Casperson of Idaho Falls was groomsman.

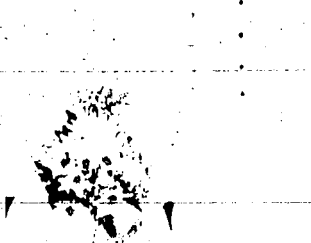

Honored guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lee Beer, San Jose, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. Jay Houser, Twin Falls, and Mrs. E. E. Sparling, Hollister, Calif., all grandparents of the bride.

The reception for the newlyweds was held in the LDS Church on Elizabeth Boulevard. The church was decorated in blue and white by the Larry Stonelays and Mrs. Bob Galley. The cake was made and decorated by Happy Schrader of Jerome.

Assisting at the reception were the bride's roommates from Ricks College, Terri Fielding, Zonda Mallory and Lori and Lana Derriotti. Julie Hackworth of Caldwell was at the guest table.

A wedding luncheon was hosted by the bridegroom's parents in Idaho Falls with an open house in the evening. A luncheon by the bride's parents preceded the reception in Twin Falls. A bridal shower was given by Mrs. Raymond Mayo and Lisa Mayo, Mrs. Robert Deason, Mrs. Walter Loewenstern and Mrs. Lee Beer.

The newlyweds are graduates of Ricks College in Rexburg and are living in Salt Lake City where the bridegroom will attend the University of Utah this fall.

Candy monsters are target of cookbook

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

To Vicki Lansky, mother of two small children, appetizing is "anything advertised on TV," concession is "a C.A.N.D.Y. stand where a parent usually concedes" and snack is "the meal lasting all day."

That gives you an idea of Mrs. Lansky's latest cookbook, a guide to getting children to eat what's good for them instead of what they really want: the highly sweetened, salted and fatty fried foods increasingly criticized by health and family experts.

Young parents may remember Mrs. Lansky as the Minnesota mother who collaborated with five other mothers to write and publish a baby food cookbook. Both "Feed Me! I'm Yours" and her new book, "The Taming of the C.A.N.D.Y. Monster" are best sellers on national trade paperback lists.

The acronym in the second book's title represents the subtitle: "Continuously Advertised, Nutritionally Deficient Yummies!"

It is hard to say which is more beguiling, Mrs. Lansky's suggestions for easily made alternative foods and recipes or her good-humored approach to dealing with the large and small food crises that are daily occurrences in households with young children.

In the chapter on "Tasty Alternatives to Junk Food Snacks," she offers recipes for homemade Popsicles and Creamsicles using frozen juice concentrates or canned or ripe fruit or yogurt; homemade granola bars, homemade soft drinks (club soda mixed half and half with fruit juice or fruit nectar or substituted for tap water in reconstituting frozen juice concentrates).

Polka with Perpich

MOORHEAD, Minn. (UPI) — The polka without beer is like beer without foam, but that's the way it's going to have to be at the Moorhead Armory — even if the dancing is in honor of Gov. Rudy Perpich.

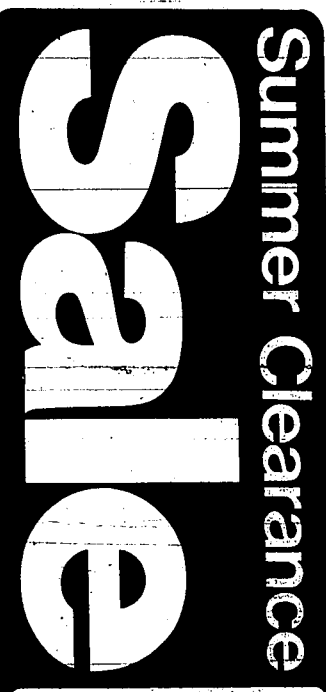

On advice of the city attorney, the Moorhead City Council served notice Tuesday it will not allow beer to be served June 28 at a social gathering and dance, dubbed "Polka with Perpich."

City Attorney Robert Schaefer said a local ordinance prohibits any alcoholic beverages in public places and makes no exceptions for the governor.

"He's an ordinary citizen just like anybody else," Schaefer said. "Whether it's a church or whether it's a charitable organization like the Jaycees or the Governor of Minnesota or my family reunion, we can't waive the law for something like that."

Schaefer said the only time beer has been drunk legally at the armory was at National Guard functions. Any other instances, he said, would be illegal.

Perpich comes from the Minnesota Iron Range where the polka is so much a part of life it is played at church in so-called "polka masses."

Abby

She wins the game, but loses the man

DEAR ABBY: I'm an attractive girl who likes sports, and I'm exceptionally good at them. When I compete with a man I usually win, but it's a bitter victory because from then on, the fellow I beat promptly loses interest in me romantically.

It happens every time, Abby. When a man competes with me and loses, his ego takes a beating, and no man is inclined to get turned on by a woman who's athletically superior to him.

I would like a romance, but I also like to win. Will romance ever bloom if I keep winning? To lose a game or lose a boyfriend—that's the choice. What do you say?
LIKES TO WIN

DEAR LIKES: Always play to win. A real man will enjoy the challenge. And those who would lose interest in you romantically because they lost aren't men, they're crybabies.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 3-year-old daughter whom we adore. We were unable to have more children, so we adopted "A"—a 2-year-old girl who had been in several foster homes before we got her.

The problem is that we honestly don't feel the same about "A" as we do about our own child. "A" whines constantly and seems generally dissatisfied and contrary. (When I'm holding her she whines "down," and when she's down she whines until I pick her up.)

Our own child is always cooperative and lovable. My husband and I feel guilty for our thoughts. Is it natural for parents to favor their own child over one who's adopted? And can parents be blamed for favoring the child who's more cooperative and lovable?

I can't sign this for obvious reasons, but I need to know if other adoptive parents feel as we do? And what can be done about it.
FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: Whether the child is your own flesh and blood or adopted, the least lovable child is the one who needs your love the most. Don't feel guilty for honest emotions. Ask the agency from which you received the adopted child if they provide counseling for this problem. (It's not uncommon.) Or write to Parents Anonymous, 2810 Siesela Street, Redondo Beach, Calif. 90278 for the address of a chapter near you.

Sharing your experiences and feelings with other parents who have learned how to deal with "unlovable children" can bring blessed relief. And please let me know the outcome. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday at the neighborhood beauty shop which I patronized for years, I was irked by the new operator who did my hair. She did a good job, but when she finished, she said, "That will be $10, plus $2 for the tip." Is it accepted procedure in some areas to state the tip expected? I have never encountered this before and it annoyed me. Unless you tell me that I am off center here, I plan to speak to the manager about this. Perhaps it's a new policy.
PHILADELPHIAN

DEAR PHILADELPHIAN: Although customs may differ in different areas, I know of no area where it's "accepted procedure" to ask for a tip for ANY service.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby, Box 49700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

had gone through a lot of thought before making the play and when he did ruff it was with the ace. His problem was to find some way to defeat the contract and he finally reconstructed the exact hand.

If he ruffed with the five of trumps the defense would have two tricks in. Later on he would take a trick with his ace of trumps, but that would be all. So he ruffed with the ace, led a trump to his partner's king and let his partner cash a club to set the hand.

What if East did not hold the king of trumps? Declarer would score an over-trick. It wouldn't have worried Pietro. You don't worry about overtricks in rubber bridge.

Many Hong Kong westerners rent live-in 'mothers'

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
HONG KONG (UPI) — Renting apartments, furniture, appliances and even fish tanks is commonplace in the British Crown Colony of Hong Kong. Some weary parents also rent mums.

The mums are, in effect, live-in surrogate mothers who stay in a household 24 hours a day. But the business run by two British women is not a glorified baby-sitting service, they said in interviews.

Bent-a-Mum caters to the transient Western community. Although such residents represent less than one percent of the colony's largely Chinese population of 4.5 million, new arrivals unable to communicate with native help have found the service a blessing in family emergencies when mother has been hospitalized or for parents on business trips or who simply want a quiet holiday alone.

Mavis Barrett and Linda Rose operate the service. Miss Rose arrived here with extensive personal experience and the desire "to do something that was really needed, a business I could sink my teeth into and build up."

Mrs. Barrett, who has two children, knew from experience the frustrations a transferred wife faces trying to apartment hunt with her children in tow.

The two became partners out of their firm conviction that children cope best when their normal routine is not upset, when the woman in charge can easily communicate her affection for them in their native language and also cope with problems as they arise.

The service is not advertised because word-of-mouth praise from satisfied customers gives the partners all the business they can handle without lowering its standards, they said.

The women they place are carefully screened by Miss Rose or Mrs. Barrett. Most have all the warmth of a Mary Poppins and one advantage the fictional governess lacked. They have raised families of their own.

"We have a responsibility that we don't treat lightly," Miss Rose said. "This is a people-business, a highly personalized one. The person we send to our clients, the parents, must be able to keep a household running smoothly and know what to do should anything unexpected arise."

Wives whose own offspring are in boarding school or grown particularly enjoy doing what years of family life taught them.

Parents pay the service a commission for matching them with an acceptable woman, and prospective mums are sent for interviews until everyone is satisfied.

The women's salaries range from $14 to $20 per day, depending on length of employment, responsibilities involved and the number and ages of children in the household.

Miss Rose and Mrs. Barrett said both their client and prospective mum files are continually expanding.

Mums range in age from 20s to 60s. Having one's own child is a plus, but qualified single women are eligible.

In addition the audience was delighted by clowns, leopards, elephants and even 'Kenya,' the world's only circus rhinoceros. ('Kenya' performs with, and thinks he is, an elephant.)

But one indispensable feature of the circus is a closer relative to the humans who enjoy watching animals perform — the chimpanzee. At top of the page, a chimpanzee, trained by Al Antonelli, shows off his still-walking and his sartorial abilities.

Gooding lifeguard pay hike denied

GOODING — Gooding city councilmen Monday night lent a sympathetic but unresponsive ear to requests from the city swimming pool employes for more money.

They also were lukewarm to a request from Sharon Howland, adult adviser to the Gooding swim team, for the city to pay for a lifeguard to accompany the team to out-of-town meets and provide the use of the Gooding pool for three Saturdays this summer.

Councilmen agreed that the local meets could be held in the city pool, but indicated there is no money to pay for the lifeguards on out-of-town trips. On the three home meets the lifeguards will not be needed for regular work so would be available if they can donate their services.

Lori Patterson, pool manager, and four lifeguards attended the council meeting to ask for some adjustment in wages. Patterson said the guards put in up to 18 hours a day and work six days a week for $450 per month. Their duties include, in addition to lifeguarding, teaching swimming lessons five hours per day and cleaning the pool and shower rooms.

She said the fulltime guards felt they were not paid enough in contrast to the substitute guards who earn $360 per month, but work only six hours per day.

She urged the council to consider raising fees at the pool another year and "consider building a new pool in five to 10 years."

Patterson said fees at the Gooding pool are the lowest of anywhere in the Magic Valley. They are 35 cents for children up to 11 years, 50 cents from 11 to 17 years and 75 cents for persons 18 years and older.

Mayor Don Morrow said the recreation department budget currently is in the red but promised the guards the council would take the suggestions under advisement.

Mrs. Howland was urged to contact Harold Reed, councilman in charge of recreation, who is out of town. Councilman Bob Moline said he believes the formation of a proposed recreation district "is the only answer" to the hard pressed city finances. The county has contributed $5,000 toward the recreation activities in past years, but this was dropped this year.

The pool manager said many children come from Hagerman, Wendell and Bliss, all Gooding County communities, to swim and take lessons in the Gooding municipal pool. Both Howland and Patterson pointed out the swimming activities draw people into Gooding who don't spend money.

Richard Heindel, Twin Falls, architect for the remodeling project which is converting the old Salway building into a new city hall-library complex, said completion date is estimated at about 30 days.

TF council OKs drive-in window

TWIN FALLS — The City Council Monday approved another fast-food, drive-in window on Blue Lakes Boulevard North, but with a catch.

Fast food fans can now drive up to Blimpie's at 708 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. and order a meal without leaving their car, but when they drive away, they can make only a right turn onto Blue Lakes.

Although there were no objections from local residents to the drive-in window (unlike a similar application by McDonald's), the city imposed the right-turn only restriction on Blimpie's to help reduce possible traffic problems the drive-in window might cause.

When the owners of the fast-food restaurant agreed to the city's conditions, the council unanimously approved the drive-in window.

Local panel makes appointments

TWIN FALLS — The City Council Monday appointed Councilman Hank Woodall as Twin Falls' voting delegate to the Association of Idaho Cities convention.

The council appointed councilman Bud Cheney as the alternate voting delegate.

The panel also made three appointments to the city's accident review board, a body composed of representatives from the various city departments which hears the cases of employees seeking accident leave for injuries sustained on the job.

Brick by brick

WALLS of the $3.5 million North Burley Shopping Mall are rapidly rising. Opening of the 21-shop enclosed mall is expected by February 1979. The JB's Big Boy Restaurant in the adjacent center should be open by August.

Otter calls Idaho 'colony'

TWIN FALLS — Idaho is a colony of the federal government, C.L. "Butch" Otter said Tuesday.

"Two-thirds of Idaho's land is under the absentee management of the federal government," Otter said. "That's a percentage found only in Idaho, Arizona and Nevada. I think it's time to return those federal lands to Idaho control."

Otter, a Republican candidate for governor, criticized federal land management policies. "It's important to the future of Idaho that Idahoans start drawing designs on our own resources, whether they're wilderness resources, mineral resources, or what have you. Right now the federal government is making Idaho a playground for the other states. Idaho is a colony, and the colonists are the Bureau of Land Management and the Forest Service." Otter, who made his remarks in a campaign swing through the Twin Falls area, said he wasn't advocating selling Idaho lands now classified as wilderness or forest land. "What I'm saying is we need to implement the policies and management practices designed by Idahoans. Our future is being mortgaged by well meaning but ill advised people at the federal level. I'm convinced we would still have wilderness in Idaho and wild rivers, but 105 legislators would be making decisions now made by the federal government."

Riding club sponsoring horse show

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Junior Riding Club is sponsoring a horse show Sunday, July 1, at the Jerome County Fairgrounds.

Beginning at 10 a.m. young riders can take part in the following classes: pleasure riding, halter, bareback, poles and barrels and games on horseback.

The public is invited to attend.

Entry blanks for participants are available at Macie's Boots and Western Wear, Vickers Saddlery, Peterson's Western Wear, D & B Supply and Farm and City, all in Twin Falls.

Those needing further information can telephone 423-5178.

No dance at IOOF Hall

TWIN FALLS — There will be no dance at the IOOF Hall in Twin Falls this Saturday, June 24.

However, a dance is scheduled at the hall from 8:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. July 1. Floyd White's Four Aces will play and the public is invited.

Woman, 86, lifts weights

CLARA TOVEY, 86, SAN DIEGO, CALIF. spends four days a week at a health spa.

Birthday spent in exercising

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Friday was Clara Tovey's 86th birthday.

Like most every other day, she spent a portion of it lifting weights. "I can't wait in the morning to get up," she said. "I jump up from my bed and get ready to exercise."

Four times a week for the last five years, Mrs. Tovey has been out of bed at 5 a.m. and to the health spa to begin her routine, one that might tire a person a fraction of her age.

She begins with aerobic exercises for 30 minutes, dives into the pool for a few laps, rides an exercise bicycle and then moves to the weight machine where she pumps iron because "it gives me energy."

She finishes each two-hour session with a relaxing dip in the whirlpool bath.

"I wish more older people would exercise like this," she says. "I feel differently altogether. Because I exercise, I have a different attitude."

The third of 16 children, the La Mesa resident says she was born in Brazil, Ind., in 1892.

Aside from a hearing problem, she seems to be the picture of perfect health as she flexes a bicep and proudly proclaims her weight is a firm 117 pounds.

Mrs. Tovey said she eats a special diet which excludes salads. She is always up by 5 a.m., she said, and in bed by 8:30 p.m. She does not smoke cigarettes nor drink alcoholic beverages.

Carter opposes PCP laws

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Dr. Peter Bourne, the White House drug adviser, told Congress Wednesday the administration opposes legislation to control manufacture and distribution of PCP — the "angel dust" which causes 100 drug deaths a year.

Peter Bensingler, head of the Drug Enforcement Administration, disagreed, calling for laws increasing the criminal penalties for unauthorized manufacture, distribution or possession with intent to distribute PCP.

Bourne, special assistant to President Carter for drug abuse, told a joint hearing of the Senate drug and alcoholism subcommittees the administration opposes such legislation and also objects to requiring positive identification of persons who purchase the chemicals used to make the drug.

"We don't support it at the present time."

I don't think that increasing the penalties will significantly solve the problem," Bourne said.

— He said the identification requirement might impose too many "onerous" restrictions on the chemical industry and hinder legitimate medical uses of the ingredients that go into PCP.

Unless some information is developed to indicate that the legislation will reduce PCP use, Bourne said, "there is no sense passing it."

Bensingler encouraged Congress to pass a bill that would require purchasers of PCP chemicals to provide proper identification and require sellers to maintain records for reporting purposes.

Bensingler said DEA is asking chemical supply houses to voluntarily report unusual purchases of PCP ingredients to law enforcement agencies and the increased reporting by law "would be an important single step in the prevention of the manufacture of PCP."

Bourne argued, "We're talking about a very small number of people who get into actual problems" with PCP. There are about 100 deaths a year among the 1 million frequent users of angel dust, he said, but the figure constitutes only about 2 percent of all drug-related deaths.

"It's a question of setting our priorities between PCP and other drugs," Bourne said. "We have to be sure the other 98 percent of drug deaths get the appropriate attention."

Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, chairman of one of the subcommittees holding the hearing, said he was concerned about Bourne's " cavalier" attitude toward the PCP problem and said the White House might want to "get a little more interested" in PCP abuse.

4 rape suspects at large

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn. (UPI) — The Carter County Sheriff said strict justice could have prevented the gang rape of four high school girls by a group of mountaineers drunk on moonshine whiskey.

Sheriff George Papanitoni said Tuesday the five men wanted in the case all had been arrested before on a variety of charges, but were able to remain free either by paying small fines or through legal maneuvers.

"If the courts had given us some kind of justice, none of this would have happened," he said bitterly. "This is really beautiful country and it's a shame people can't enjoy it without this kind of thing happening."

Four of the five suspects remained at large Tuesday in the mountains along the border between Tennessee and North Carolina. One man was in custody and another suspect not initially sought was apprehended Tuesday and held for questioning.

A picture of this sixth man had been sent to Raleigh, N.C., for identification. Papanitoni said charges would be filed immediately if the girls could identify him as one of their assailants. The man's name was withheld until then.

In custody was David Jones, described by police as in his mid-30s. Jones was ordered held on $125,000 bond on two charges of rape and one of armed robbery.

HUNTER'S...

HUNTER'S now are the only new franchise Kit Companion dealer in the Twin Falls area. HUNTER'S were given the Kit franchise because the factory knew that HUNTER'S are the true "under-sellers" and would sell more Kit trailers and campers.

HUNTER'S ARE THE TRUE AND ORIGINAL "UNDER-SELLERS" AND WILL NOT BE UNDERSOLD!

"We've Been Underselling For Over 12 Years"

Sincerely, Larry Hunter

THE SMOOTHEST PRODUCTION 4 STROKE EVER BUILT...

If smooth, quiet performance is any measure of a superbike's prowess, the Yamaha XS Eleven needn't take a back seat to anyone.

A fully-enclosed, direct-coupling shaft drive does the trick. This state-of-the-art power transfer system makes the XS Eleven as silky as it is sultry. With virtually no drive-train noise or maintenance. And turbine-like power, galore.

Available at CENTURY, if you can catch the guy who's got one, ask him how neat it is.

A STORY OF VALUE
One internal moving part glides over the inlet ports to allow water flow in the "on" position and shears off the flow when moved to the "off" position. Valley faucets offer years of drip-proof, trouble-free operation. Feather touch control eliminates lubrication requirements and assures smooth operation throughout the life of the faucet. Exclusive with Valley is the whisper soft noise inhibitor. No leakage ground handle. One operating assembly is common to all Valley single control faucets.

Most-recognized styling: best engineering, heaviest metal work with the finest finishing go into creating the Valley faucet — the best we've found and your best faucet value. For The Kitchen No. L103-B.

Valley washerless two handle style also available in chrome or crystal handles. $16⁹⁰
