

Laetrile legal in Idaho Saturday—if it can be obtained

DOUBLE DIP OF APRICOT KERNELS
... laetrile derived from these

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—A new law effective Saturday still won't make it any easier for state residents to get laetrile shipped in from outside Idaho to treat cancer.

The new Idaho law prevents anyone from interfering with the right of another person taking the controversial substance for the treatment of cancer.

But U.S. Food and Drug Administration officials say federal law overrules the new state law when it comes to shipping laetrile across state boundaries.

Sue Hitchcock, a consumer affairs officer with the FDA's Seattle office, said federal law requires both patient and doctor to sign affidavits, which must accompany a laetrile shipment.

Ms. Hitchcock said one shipment is limited to a six-month supply of the substance made from apricot pits. The affidavit must affirm the patient's cancer is terminal, and also that one of the three following conditions exist:

- Further orthodox treatment is not reasonably expected to benefit the patient.
- Laetrile will be administered only in conjunction with established and recognized treatments.
- The patient has made a knowing and intelligent decision to take laetrile after being told of other treatments and of the fact that laetrile is considered to be worthless by most cancer experts.

Hitchcock pointed out that federal law does not overrule the new state law regarding laetrile produced and manufactured in Idaho.

"If the major components are grown and produced within Idaho, we have no jurisdiction over it," she said.

The apricot pits have to be grown within the state. But if they are shipped in, we have jurisdiction and we can take legal action," the federal employee said.

Presently, there is no known producer of laetrile in Idaho.

Jolene Turina is a Twin-Falls resident with a case before the Idaho Supreme Court fighting a State Nursing Board order to take away her nursing license for explaining laetrile to a cancer patient in September 1976.

She said the new state law is beneficial mainly because it changes the way people view laetrile. "The physical procurement is no different than it has been. But in the minds of the people it is easier to take. It is a spiritual and mental and spiritual thing."

A spot telephone check this week of several pharmacies, health food stores and hospitals in the Twin Falls area did not turn up any laetrile supplies or plans to stock it, unless patients begin asking for laetrile or doctors begin prescribing it.

Mag Valley Memorial Hospital Administrator Jim Rosenbaum said it is up to each doctor whether to prescribe laetrile, but he said he does not know any who will and the hospital pharmacy will only carry laetrile if a doctor orders it.

An official at Twin Falls Clinic said the clinic's physicians have decided not to use laetrile.

A Twin Falls doctor who specializes in treating children, Ben Katz, warned that delaying conventional cancer treatment and using laetrile is often more dangerous in children because malignancies spread faster in young people.

"Whatever process allows the abnormal growth to take place seems to be more violent and more rampant at an earlier age," Katz said. "You haven't got the same interlude as with an adult."

Dr. Robert Lister, a Twin Falls surgeon, said he does not know any doctor who will use laetrile.

"All the doctors here are pretty straight-laced," Lister said. "In larger cities, you might find some who would take advantage of the monetary factor, but I don't think you can find anyone in Twin Falls who would do that."

PRINCESS CAROLINE OF MONACO IS CHEERED BY A CROWD AS SHE WALKS TO CHAPEL FOR HER WEDDING TODAY.
Philippe Junot, bridegroom, behind Caroline, appeared nervous and downcast during walk to and from ceremony

Caroline's bridegroom was nervous

MONTE-CARLO, Monaco—(UPI)—Princess Caroline of Monaco and Parisian financier Philippe Junot were married in the Monaco palace chapel today. The bride gripped the nervous bridegroom's arm to help him in his first walk through cheering crowds.

Bells in the medieval palace pealed after the 25-minute ceremony for Caroline, 21, and Junot, 17 years her senior, whom she loved despite the reported initial objections of her parents, Princess Grace and ruling Prince Rainier III.

Thousands of Monegasques including schoolchildren given a holiday applauded and cried "Bravo" as the couple walked slowly from the palace after the Roman Catholic ceremony to have Caroline's bouquet of orange blossoms blessed at the nearby Chapel of Mercy in the ancient town of Monaco.

The walk was arranged to give the subjects of Prince Rainier a chance to get a glimpse of the newlyweds. But while Caroline smiled radiantly in her bouffant white embroidered wedding gown, Junot seemed to wish he were back in his favorite Paris night spots.

Pale and drawing in his breath as if he were suffering an ordeal, Junot clutched his gray top hat in one hand and walked with eyes downcast. His bride, more used to the public eye, held his arm as if to guide him.

Hundreds of waving photographers shouted for Junot to look at them but he gazed in obvious discomfort at the ground.

An honor guard of 24 of Monaco's finest — the principality's police in white uniforms, red bandoliers and white helmets — stood by for the couple's presentation to the public. Other police formed ranks as security while tourists and the local citizenry cheered from behind steel barriers.

Overhead buzzed two police helicopters hired by Prince Rainier to chase away any exuberant photographers who might try to photograph the wedding lunch and other events inside the palace walls. But the helicopters, dubbed the "air force" by reporters, completely missed their only prey, an unidentified young man who soared with the greatest of ease over the palace in a hang-glider.

After the blessing of the bouquet in the town chapel, the grinning bride and her uncomfortable bridegroom crossed a tiny, picturesque square to the office of Monaco's mayor to be shown a chest of silverware, a wedding gift of the town.

Then the couple disappeared back inside the palace for the wedding lunch for some 300 guests including such jet-setters as film stars Ava Gardner and David Niven, Prince Bertil of Sweden and the Aga Khan.

The lunch in the palace garden under flowering trees featured zucchini pie, pizza and other local gastronomic specialties.

The guests included 43 Monegasques born the same year as Caroline — 1957. One said the 43 were flying to Monaco "from all over the world for this event — I came from the hotel school in Geneva."

During the wedding ceremony, Caroline, asked if she wished to become Junot's spouse, replied in French, "Yes, I wish to," in a firm voice. Junot mumbled his reply.

Top officials open to suit, court declares

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 5-4 today that Cabinet officers and other executive branch officials do not have blanket immunity against damage suits charging them with unconstitutional action.

This means a commodity trader, Arthur Economou, can pursue his $32 million damage suit against former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz and several subordinates involved in Economou's suspension from the market for 90 days on grounds he failed to maintain a proper capital balance.

A lower court vacated the suspension, but Economou sued the Agriculture Department officials on grounds they acted maliciously.

The court, which will wind up the current term Monday, took these other actions today:

- Issued an opinion making it easier for the Justice Department to bring price-fixing charges under federal antitrust law.
- In a 7-2 decision, opened the way for policy holders to bring antitrust suits against insurance companies.
- Clarified the kind of proof a company can rely on to rebut a charge of racial discrimination in hiring, and held that a court may not impose hiring requirements before there has been final proof of a violation.
- The Economou case now goes back to U.S. District Judge Lloyd MacMahon of New York, who dismissed the suit in 1975. He was directed to reconsider it in light of guidelines laid down in today's opinion by Justice Byron White.

White said three categories of officials definitely may not be sued because their responsibilities require freedom from threats of this kind. They are hearing examiners and administrative judges; agency officials performing functions like those of a prosecutor; and an agency attorney who presents evidence in an agency hearing.

Other people who might be sued are entitled only to qualified immunity — that is, they can show they acted in good faith and have reasonable grounds for their conduct. This is the test laid down earlier for state officials in earlier cases, notably the 1974 Kent State student slayings by the Ohio National Guard.

The only exception for federal officers is a showing that "absolute immunity is essential for the conduct of the public business."

Deadly theft

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Whoever stole Indian tourist Param Gil Singh Aujia's suitcase from the Mexico City airport probably got more than he bargained for.

The New Delhi tourist's baggage contained two cobras and three other snakes.

Reporting the robbery to police, Aujia said the snakes are for exhibitions. He said he fears for the life of the thief.

Crime rate shows drop

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI today reported the rate of serious crime during the first quarter of 1978 was 4 percent lower than during the same period last year, despite increases in the numbers of rapes and assaults.

All types of property crimes — burglary, larceny-theft and motor vehicle theft — showed decreases, as did two types of so-called crimes of violence. Murder declined 2 percent and robbery 3 percent.

But forcible rapes increased 4 percent and aggravated assault rose 1 percent, the FBI said.

Black leaders, government officials like Bakke ruling

By United Press International

Government and black leaders generally welcomed the Supreme Court's decision in the Allan Bakke case, noting the court for the first time allowed the consideration of race as a factor in school admissions.

A divided court Wednesday upheld a claim by Bakke, a white, that he should have been admitted to the University of California medical school at Davis. But at the same time it endorsed special treatment of minorities in university admissions programs.

Bakke told reporters only that he was pleased with the decision, but considered his personal life as a private matter. He answered only one question — yes, he does intend to enroll in the medical school this fall.

Attorney General Griffin Bell said the court upheld the administration's position that affirmative action programs can take race and ethnic background into consideration.

"It's a great gain for affirmative action," Bell said after briefing the president on the decision. "It is not a setback at all."

"My general view is, affirmative action has been enhanced," Bell said. "That is what I told the president. He was pleased; I think the whole country ought to be pleased."

Joseph Califano, secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, praised the decision and said it provides support for federal efforts to end racial and other discrimination in education.

"These rulings strongly support this nation's continuing effort to live up to its historic promise — to bring minorities and other disadvantaged groups into the mainstream of American society," said

Califano, whose department oversees civil rights programs.

Deputy Attorney General Norton, head of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and one of the highest ranking blacks in the administration, said the ruling will have no impact on federal hiring programs and does not preclude quotas.

Quotas have been ordered specifically by courts after a hearing," Mrs. Norton said. "There's nothing in our decision that would keep courts from ordering quotas."

Reaction among other black leaders was mixed but generally favorable.

Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, said he spoke by phone with civil rights leaders Vernon Jordan, Benjamin Hooks, Jesse Jackson, Carl Holman and Coretta King, and they arrived at a consensus that it would be wrong to "push the panic button."

"They said the split decision should not be interpreted as a 'death knell' for affirmative action programs and agreed to urge the president to make a strong statement reaffirming his commitment to affirmative action."

Mitchell said he thought Carter would do so.

The bottom line was the reaffirmation by the Supreme Court that race may be taken into account in fashioning remedial programs," said Nathaniel Jones, chief counsel of the NAACP.

Meeting triggers debate

COLLIERVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Harold Sterling and Lamar Alexander went eyeball-to-eyeball in the town square Wednesday, waving their fists in mighty righteousness, bellowing and generally bringing back the good old days of politics.

Sterling and Alexander, the leading Republican candidates for governor, ran head-on in this sweltering west Tennessee town, backed by pretty girls in uniforms and an off-key brass band.

Sterling has been trying for four months to talk Alexander, considered the GOP frontrunner, into a face-to-face debate. Alexander, however, has been intent upon his highly publicized walk across Tennessee. That was what brought Alexander to Collierville.

He was strolling around the town square, shaking hands and chatting with voters, when up rumbled Sterling in a double-decker London bus filled with "Sterling Stars" — pretty girls in red, white and blue dresses.

They quickly began handing out Alexander buttons and literature while Sterling planted himself 10 yards from the back of Alexander's flatbed truck.

When Alexander got onto the truckbed to make a speech, Sterling announced "I'm the showdown guy. Now maybe he'll debate the issues."

With a wave of his hand, the Nashville attorney invited Sterling to share his microphone and his truck for a debate. Sterling refused.

"You come on down here with the people," Sterling shot back. Alexander finished his speech and did just that. He began shaking hands with Collierville voters gathered to watch the political fireworks.

Sterling rushed across the square, stopping inches from Alexander. "What did you tell those labor people?" the former college football player roared into Alexander's face.

Raising his voice over the din of his own off-key campaign band, Alexander denied he made any promises to a recent meeting of labor leaders.

"If we're going to debate, let's do it up here," Alexander said, pointing to the truck, bedecked with Alexander campaign posters and slogans.

But Sterling suddenly decided he would only debate on "neutral ground."

"This is a carnival, a road show," Sterling said.

GOP HOPEFUL ROBERT STERLING ... beckons opponent to debate issues

With that, Alexander turned on his heel and resumed his campaigning, and Sterling and his Sterling Stars returned to their bus. Both sides appeared satisfied with their performance.

New York loans scored

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A pair of Sunbelt senators joined Senate Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire in Senate debate today to criticize legislation providing a $1.5 billion loan guarantee to financially troubled New York City.

— "I still oppose it," said Proxmire, D-Wis., as debate opened on the measure. "I think it's unnecessary. I think New York City has the capability of doing the job by itself."

The Sunday election date is favored by Council President George L. Forbes and Council majority leader Basil Huels because it might increase voter turnout.

The recall effort against the 23-year old Kuehnel began three months ago, after Kuehnel fired the city's popular police chief. Last week, the Ohio Supreme Court rejected Kuehnel's appeal of a suit seeking to delay the recall effort.

With the court decision, the council certified some 39,000 signatures on recall petitions.

Proxmire, technically the floor manager of the measure approved by his committee, predicted Senate approval for the bill to provide federal guarantees for loans.

Backers argue the assistance costs taxpayers nothing. Opponents contend federal help for New York City would cost the taxpayers billions in the future. If other cities seek help.

Federal help for the nation's largest city would limit sympathy from representatives of the booming Sunbelt regions of the United States. Sens. Jake Garn, R-Utah, and John Tower, R-Texas, said New York should go it alone.

"New York City is being given a special status completely undeserved in view of its fiscal irresponsibility," Tower said. "Other cities have had to cope with the same problems, and they are doing so without a federal bailout."

"Unbelievable mismanagement" colors New York City's financial affairs, said Garn, a former mayor of Salt Lake City.

"There is very little sympathy for New York City's problems among the mayors of this country. Most of them would not vote to give them a dime."

Nevada claim OK'd

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A Superior Court judge ruled Wednesday that the University of Nevada may press a claim for $2.8 million of the estate of Howard Hughes, reversing a decision he had made previously.

In 1970 Hughes pledged $1.1 million to the university for building and maintaining a medical school. He made an initial payment of $300,000 and continued payments of $200,000 a year until his death April 5, 1976.

Last March, Judge Jack W. Swink ruled that the university had failed to comply with the six-month deadline after Hughes' death in bringing court action. He said publicly about Hughes' death and subsequent probate action was so widespread the university should have known about it.

— But Swink said Wednesday that the claim was an exception since the university is an out-of-state claimant and not bound under California law to make inquiries about probate filing dates.

The settlement of Hughes' estate, estimated at more than $100 million, is in a state of confusion ever since filing by a Nevada party last month that the so-called "Marion will" was a fake.

Managua trembles

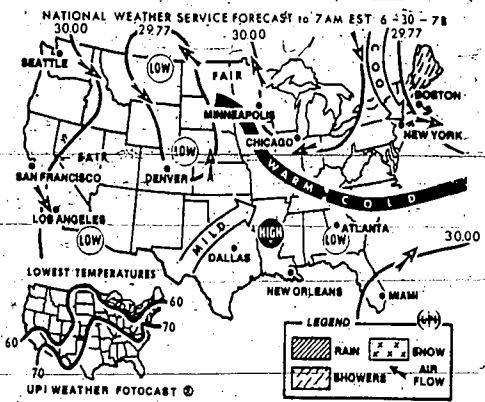

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Managua, which still bears the scars of an earthquake that killed 10,000 people in 1972, was shaken by a tremor before dawn Wednesday. There were no reports of injuries.

The Seismological Institute placed the intensity of the five-second quake at 4 on the open-ended Richter scale.

July 4th weather outlook grand

Twin Falls, North Side, Burley-Rupert area: Continued mostly fair and seasonably warm through Friday. Lows tonight near 50, highs Friday near 85.

Winds 10 to 15 miles per hour, and occasionally gusty early this evening, then light through Friday morning.

Chance of a thunderstorm 10 percent or less this evening and again tomorrow evening.

Halley, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley: Continued mostly fair and seasonably warm through Friday. Lows tonight 35 to 40, highs Friday 75 to 80. Winds 10 to 15 miles an hour, and occasionally gusty early this evening, then light through Friday morning.

Chance of a thunderstorm or less this evening and again tomorrow evening.

Synopsis: The upper air disturbance which threatened to produce showers or thunderstorms over Magic Valley Wednesday moved into Oregon and measured .17 of an inch of rain for the heaviest reported in Idaho.

Washington and caused thunderstorms and some hail over northern Idaho. Grangeville

There is now no other organized storm activity in the western United States or in the eastern Pacific; therefore, the outlook for the next several days, including the weekend and the Fourth of July holiday, is for typical early summer weather — warm sunny days with only very isolated thundershowers, activity, if any, and fair, pleasantly cool nights.

— Highs in the 80s; lows 45 to 55, good weather for most all work or play.

Recall vote Aug. 13

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The Cleveland City Council met today to set Aug. 13 as the date for Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich's recall election — the first mayoral recall election in the city's history.

The Sunday election date is favored by Council President George L. Forbes and Council majority leader Basil Huels because it might increase voter turnout.

The recall effort against the 23-year old Kuehnel began three months ago, after Kuehnel fired the city's popular police chief. Last week, the Ohio Supreme Court rejected Kuehnel's appeal of a suit seeking to delay the recall effort.

With the court decision, the council certified some 39,000 signatures on recall petitions.

Family plan pushed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's sexually liberated society has brought unhappy consequences for millions of teen-agers, says HEW Secretary Joseph Califano.

"The wrenching disruption of life and education caused by an unintended pregnancy and its consequences is not liberation," he told a House health subcommittee Wednesday. "It is a form of bondage for the child mother and the mother's child."

Califano suggested Congress can save young Americans a lot of anguish and save taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars by passing a $60 million family planning program aimed at cutting the growing rate of teen-age pregnancies.

A California congressman testified, however, the program needs to take better aim on improving birth control aid and advice and to concentrate on boys.

"This program and I might add, other family planning programs have systematically ignored the male," said Rep. Anthony Benson, D-Calif. "Why has all of the responsibility for prevention of pregnancy fallen on young women?"

Train jumps rails

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — A passenger train derailed late Wednesday, killing two persons and injuring at least 17 others, five of them seriously.

Two of the train's coaches spilled off the tracks near the northeastern town of Chaves and crushed two cars waiting at a railroad crossing, authorities said.

First test staged

LAKE HAVASU CITY, Ariz. (UPI) — The first major test aimed at development of a new intercontinental ballistic missile system was conducted in the Western Arizona desert Wednesday after surviving a last-minute court challenge by environmentalists.

The U.S. Nuclear Defense Agency detonated 120 tons of ammonium nitrate and fuel oil mixture to the atmosphere about 40 miles southeast of Lake Havasu City. Tom Kennedy, test director for the Nuclear Defense Agency, pronounced the test "highly successful."

The test was designed to determine the survival capabilities of underground storage tunnels for the proposed Air Force MX Missile.

The missile would have the capability to be released from multiple locations in the tunnels in an effort to confuse enemy attackers.

The test was delayed three hours, until early afternoon, while attorneys for the Animal Defense Council of Tucson, Ariz., argued in federal court in Phoenix for a temporary restraining order, halting the test.

U.S. District Court Judge Carl Muecke denied the request, ruling the Animal Defense Council failed to prove that the government had not provided a required 45-day review period, or that the explosion would be harmful to wildlife.

How to define a family?

Divorce alters conference plan

Ken Kesey: no more a hero from the '60s

In the late 1960s, author Ken Kesey was a hero of sorts. In the late 1970s, he sounds like an effete recluse who sold out his convictions long ago.

Kesey's books, "Sometimes a Great Notion" and "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," were venerable novels of inspiration to a generation grown cynical in the Vietnam War years.

His books are stories about men who don't give in to the "filioy" and narrow-mindedness of some institutions or authority.

In "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," a non-conformist named McMurphy fights insurmountable odds against the wickedness of an institution grown insensitive to the feeble desires of men gone mad.

Then came the Stammers in "Sometimes a Great Notion," a family that lived by the credo, "Never give an inch," even though not giving an inch cost them dearly in a world built on backscratching and gutter compromise.

Kesey's protagonists stand fast against oppression. They are heroes, apparently more heroic than their creator.

In the eastern Idaho town of St. Anthony, teacher John Fogarty lost his job this spring because he tried to use "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" in his high school English class.

Fogarty may or may not be a hero. But he clearly is a man who believed that Ken Kesey had a message for young people in his book "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and the message was to recognize inhumanity and try to overcome it.

Upon hearing Fogarty lost his job because he tried to teach "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," Kesey originally said he would try to help the St. Anthony man regain his job and Kesey talked heroically of joining a lawsuit against the St. Anthony school in an attempt to get "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" back in the classroom.

Now, Kesey has changed his story. In an interview from his Oregon home a few days ago he said, "I can't worry about little things that happen way out in little old Idaho."

Fogarty's problems just aren't worth worrying about, Kesey said, adding "I've got my own problems."

What would Hank Stammer, the patriarch of "Sometimes a Great Notion," say about Ken Kesey's reaction to the Fogarty affair?

Stammer always said, never give an inch. How would he look on Ken Kesey's abdication in the Fogarty affair?

Schools shouldn't be firing teachers for trying to expand the minds of young people, but the school boards will continue to collapse under the pressures brought by frightened, narrow-minded parents as long as the rest of society take the attitude of Ken Kesey.

One wonders what McMurphy would have done to a guy like Kesey who said, "It's not my problem anymore?" when asked if he would help fight for the principle of a school teacher using "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" in the classroom?

McMurphy might have ripped his head off. Or he might have led a brigade of students on an outrageous trip to a supermarket and bought everybody in St. Anthony a paperback copy of the book.

John Fogarty lost his job over "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and Ken Kesey says he can't afford the time to worry about it.

That might be worth a book in itself, a book about why heroes must so often burn out and fall from their pedestals with a resounding crash.

BOSTON — When Jimmy Carter called for a White House Conference on Families during his campaign it was not what you'd call a courageous stand. We are all, every registered voter of us, born in this family, and we were in favor of families, who was against them?

ELLEN GOODMAN

At the center of this story was Patsy Fleming, a speech assistant to IEW Secretary Califano. Fleming, a relatively unknown woman, who has a reputation for competency and kindness in an administration noticeably lacking both, had been appointed executive director of the conference.

But Fleming is also a black, divorced mother of three teen-ager sons, and so, after her appointment, the argument arose over whether she had the "proper qualifications," whether she came from the "right sort of family" to head this event by herself.

Califano, under pressure, decided that he needed a "balancing factor," i.e., a white, male Catholic from an intact family, as co-chair. In a fit of reverse-reverse discrimination (two negatives do still make a positive, don't they?), he sent out the word — a word he now denies — to Find ONE.

At which point Fleming quit. Now at first glance, this looks like just another victory for those people, who have to be a handicapped, black female with a Spanish surname to get government attention these days.

But it doesn't appear that Fleming was criticized primarily because of her race or sex or the fear that she would — heaven forbid — represent the viewpoint of the poor. The most controversial aspect of her job-profile was, apparently, her divorce.

What is most fascinating about this dispute to me is the notion that there are two categories of families in this country — the "broken" family and the "intact" family.

This two-families nation scenario is as important to public policy as it is meaningless. In it, the "broken" people are defined as supporters of the traditional family, while the people in single-parent homes are automatically categorized as a "threat."

The fact is, however, that families in America are much more complicated than this two-toned model suggests.

Sociologist Alice Rossi recently wrote that what used to be called the deviant family is now a variant. Only 7 percent of the American population lives in what we persist in believing is The American Family — with a breadwinner-father, a homemaker-mother, and kids.

Of the kids born in the 1970s, four out of ten will spend part of their childhood in single-parent homes. Seventeen percent of all children right now live in single-parent homes and 18 million other kids are living with step-parents.

These figures suggest the sort-of-fluctuating patterns that are abundant in categories. Today's intact family may be next year's single-parent family which may be the reconstituted family of the next year.

It's hard to know where someone like Fleming is actually post-divorce or pre-marriage (a question I assure you I didn't ask her) or if Mr. Intact is from a family that is together or merely pre-divorce.

Families also come in more shapes and sizes than those determined by marital status. Fleming's three teen-age sons, for example, have been raised in daily contact with their grandmothers, aunt, uncle, cousins, father, stepmother and their adopted child. Does that make them children of a "broken" family or of an "extended" family?

Mr. Intact on the other hand might be the head of a nuclear family that is entirely isolated from this sort of supportive web. Does that make his family the ideal, or just another aspect of the Problem.

It's ironic that a family conference should turn into a family fight, especially about Patsy Fleming's marital status. Sometime between now and 1981 somebody in Washington should look up this word in the dictionary. The definition: there is still the simplest and most sensible one around. What is a family? "Parents and children whether dwelling together or not."

Berry's World

"You're not taking the hard-line approach on allowances, too, are you?"

Tennis footprints of summers gone by

CHICAGO — We would get up before dawn. We ran through the woods. Mike was always faster than I was. We would go several miles before breakfast. It was dark where we ran. We were doubles partners. We told ourselves that we were going to do it for a living. Maybe Mike would have been good enough. I never would. But I thought, I could get better. The running helped. If you ran enough before the sun was up, you would never get tired on the court.

He was as serious about his tennis as a young man could be about anything. When he wasn't playing he was reading books. He would show up at my house with something Billy Talbert had written about doubles, and he would make me study it. He thought that we could make up with effort what we sometimes lacked in raw skill. I don't know why I listened to him; I never listened to anybody else. But he would get me onto a court, and we would sometimes work for 12 straight hours. The only thing that could get us off was the sunset.

One day a couple talked about "racquet sports," before the time when people carrying rackets around would become a national fad. We were young tennis players, that was it. Looking back, I find it remarkable that, being so young we could be so intense. It was mostly Mike's doing, I guess.

We spent one summer in New England, at a place for young players like ourselves. There was never any time for rest, save an hour at lunch. Most of us after players would gulp down our sandwiches, then go back to the dormitory and play Hearts before it was time to go back into the broiling sun. Only Mike resented the hard game. Why he would always be hovering around the court, trying to get one of us to throw our hand down and get in some more court time with him.

God, he was good. I remember how it would hurt when he would miss an overhead slam. He would stand very still on the court, staring at his footprints in the clay, and then he would look back up in the sky, as if he could reverse the flow of time by the sheer force of his will. Then he would bring his racket back behind his head and go through the stroke again, even though there was no ball there any more. He would do it twice.

three times, four times. He was a blond-headed kid, a very light complexion, he would always have worn white cream on his nose to keep it from burning too badly. When he would miss one of those shots his face would turn absolutely red, and there he would stand, going through his strokes in the air.

He could be tough to play beside. I would miss an easy ground stroke, and I could feel him looking at me. He would put his hands on his hips, one fist tight around the throat of his racket, and he would just stare.

"Sorry," I would say. "He would shake his head. "Come on," they would shout from across the net.

"Let's play," I would say. His head would still be shaking. "It was work, and yet it was the most fun I think I will ever have. Wanting that badly to be good at something... we would walk onto a court in the morning, the surface still wet from a night's worth of watering down, and we would hit the first balls of the day across the net to each other, going through our drills. It was cool when we started, and by a few hours later, when the sweat had soaked through our clothes and the tennis balls were colored by the courts, we had lost track of time, we were off somewhere of our own where I will never be again.

© 1978 Field Enterprises, Inc.

The tournaments and the pickup matches and the tedious practice routines all run together in my mind now. All I can remember clearly is those summers in the sun, trying to reach a standard we would never attain, working until the exhaustion caught up with us and the shadows were crawling along the courts.

And those summer nights, when we were so impatient. We would go to courts with lights, and we would have to wait our turn to get on, and we would hang around the pro shop, reading old copies of World Tennis and watching the pro secure a racket in the metal brackets of the stringing machine, and then pull the blue streak gut light through the holes, weave it back and forth, up and down. And then to sleep, knowing that it would start again in the morning. I used to sleep well.

Mike died when we were sophomores in college. He was flying back to school after a vacation and his plane went down. I never played again; I threw my racket out that year, and I have never stepped onto another court.

But now summer is hot again. I will see the men and women with their rackets, on their way to some court or other, and in a while, like it happens every summer, someone will ask me to join them. And I will give them the same answer I always do. No. Thanks, but no. I don't play.

Solzhenitsyn depressed Harvard grad

WASHINGTON — Of all the graduation speakers who presided this year, none has had a more powerful effect than Alexander Solzhenitsyn, who spoke to the Harvard class of '78. His forceful message about the decline of the West sent most of the students into a depression.

I know this because I got a call the other day from a friend of mine. She asked me if I would talk to her son, who had been part of this year's graduating class and unfortunately had heard Solzhenitsyn's address.

Gerard was sitting on the front steps of the house drinking a beer and staring out into space. "Gerard," I said, "you've got to pull yourself together."

"What's the use? Modern American society is doomed." "How can you say that, Gerard? You just graduated from Harvard, the most elite school in the nation. The world is your oyster."

"You can say that, but you weren't at my graduation. We're suffering from a psychic disease of the 20th century." "We are!" I said in surprise. "Yes. We're cowardly. We've all lost our courage."

"That's true, but you've got to rise above it," I told him. "By getting a job?" "If I get a job I'll only be contributing to the state of spiritual exhaustion that is part of the West's malaise."

"But if you do find a job you might get us out of the fix we're in. It cost your parents $50,000 to put you through school, not counting the Pinto they bought you the Fiat to be recalled. Surely you owe them something."

where they don't know what they're talking about. You owe it to us to pass on what you have learned at Harvard so that our civilization can be saved."

"All I have to show for my education is TV stuper and a penchant for intolerable music. I have a licentious press and the bad media to blame for all my problems."

"Gerard, everything you say may be true, but you're still master of your own soul. If the Harvard class of '78 drops out, who will our leaders be 28 years from now? Who will take over the Mob Oil Corp. — or AT&T, or the Ford Foundation? Where will we get our Cabinet officers or our economists from? Are you going to leave it to the Yale class of '78 to solve the problems that the West must face?"

"It's no use, Uncle Arthur," he said, slipping his beer. "We have lost our freedom first, before our responsibility. We're sick because we've lost our national will. We don't know who we are."

"Right," I said. "So it's up to you to tell us who we are. This country listens to people who went to Harvard. It's not like Princeton or Stanford where they don't know what they're talking about. You owe it to us to pass on what you have learned at Harvard so that our civilization can be saved."

"That's your privilege in a free country, Gerard. But sitting on this stoop is not going to get us out of our spiritual dilemma." "The only thing to do is to raise our sights and search our hearts and overcome our readiness to accept material well-being. I can't do it, Gerard, because I went to the University of Southern California. But you can, because you were educated in Cambridge."

Just then Gerard's father drove up. He got out of his car and stomped up. He said angrily to his son, "Are you still sitting on this stoop?" Gerard didn't say anything. His father grabbed him by the shirt and pulled him up.

Solzhenitsyn or no Solzhenitsyn," he said, flinging Gerard toward the car. "You get your butt out of here and don't come back until you've got a job." Gerard, fear in his eyes, picked up the car keys from the sidewalk and said, "Sure, Pop, you don't have to get mad, but no. I don't play."

Atlantic City feels aftershock

Atlantic City was supposed to be one with the introduction of casino gambling. There has been the expected flood of visitors, but not all of their impact on the aging resort has been favorable.

Prices at some restaurants, shops and particularly parking lots have zoomed to an extent that the municipal administration is reported to be worried that the city will acquire a new nickname — "Gauge City."

But the casino and Boardwalk merchants aren't alone in experiencing a business upturn.

Increased activity is also being noted by pawnshops, the Salvation Army and the Travelers' Aid Society. The latter two have been helping out stranded individuals with meals, phone calls home and transportation loans.

According to Travelers' Aid, which reopened shop for the first time since 1958, most of the visitors in need have been out-of-town job-seekers for whom Atlantic City did not turn out to be the expected boomtown, rather than wiped-out gamblers. But their season is still young. (Newspaper Enterprise Association).

Hydro generation is preferable to coal

Editor, Times-News:
We wish to address this letter to the Public Utilities Commission.
The Gooding County Farm Bureau wishes to give its full support to Idaho Power's request to build low-head dams at the A.J. Wiley and Dike sites. As we as a farm organization feel that hydro generation is far preferable to a coal plant because of the adverse economic effects that a non-renewable thermal source would have on small-family farmers.

We also wish to draw your attention to two State Farm Bureau policies that also support the construction of dams for power generation.
Policy #1: "Electrical Energy reads in part: We support the maximum utilization of existing capacity of hydroelectric generation. As demand for electrical energy increases, we support the development of hydroelectric sites."
Policy #2: "Water Resources: We favor maximum utilization of Idaho's water in developing Idaho's agriculture. We recognize the need for increased energy generation, and we believe that properly sited and designed dams provide the least environmentally damaging means of meeting these needs. We favor the continued wise development of the Snake River and its tributaries as working rivers."

Weather didn't cause motorcycle injuries

Editor: Times-News:
I have seen a couple of articles in this paper about the recent motorcycle race held in Jackpot. Both of these articles blamed the number of injuries in that race on the weather.
I want to clear this up. The weather couldn't have been better. The only mud that could be found was in the bottom of the few creeks that we crossed. The wind kept the dust moving so that we could see the trail when we were behind another bike.

The reason for the numerous injuries was the lack of course markings. The course should be marked so that a contestant traveling at a high rate of speed can tell where he is going and will have time to slow down when there is a dangerous place in the course or a corner.
On the Jackpot course, the markings were so sparse that we were often wondering if we were still on the course. The danger spots were not usually marked so that we were still going at high speed when we hit them. I often wonder if the person who marked the course was out for a trail ride and tied a marker on the course only "because he got tired of looking at scenery." Or was it that he had no idea of how fast the racers would be riding? Either way, they should have had someone who knew what he was doing marking the course.

Alaskan puts down land plan

Editor, Times-News:
How would people in your town like it if the federal government came in and imposed a scheme of land-use regulations that hindered your local economy, restricted your travel and use of land, and usurped the best land for federal interests without regard to local needs. Further, what if that land had valuable energy resources that people elsewhere could use for heat and industrial purposes that keep people employed. Still worse, what if part of that land was once promised to you by Congress in your Statehood Act but Congress reneged on that promise and decided to take these "federal interests" lands before you finished selecting your land.

These "what ifs" are really happening in Alaska. The U.S. Senate is considering a bill known as the 63 lands bill, H.R. 38, sponsored by Rep. Mo Udall of Arizona. Environmental lobbying groups are calling it their "Environmental issue of the century." We Alaskans love our state, and our lands. We have a better record of protecting it than an absentee federal landlord could. We can provide oil, gas and minerals to the rest of the country without fouling our state.

The professional media campaign by the national environmental lobby hopes to drown out the voices of Alaskans who are too few and far away. Our Senator U.S. Sen. Ted Stevens is Alaska's truest voice on this issue. He is also being helped by our Junior Sen. Mike Gravel. It is likely that no two senators from any state have ever had the unanimity of their constituency behind them as the Alaskan senators do on this issue. We wouldn't support a federal takeover of land in your area. Please tell your senators and congressmen to support the Alaskan senators' position on the 63 lands bill.

Legal aide has question for Kouinik

Editor, Times-News:
An open letter to L. James Kouinik.
Thank you for the comments regarding Idaho Legal Aid Services, Inc. In your column on June 26, you have received attention from such an august person as yourself is gratifying.
To learn that our small efforts to ensure that the laws of the state of Idaho and of the United States are equitably complied with in regard to each person causes you such negative reactions gives one pause. Surely you do not suggest our laws are designed to be applied to, or for, some people but not to, or for others? Surely you do not suggest that some people are above and beyond the law? No, one would not think you suggest that. If one does not initially engage in conduct which is beyond the pale of the law, one does not expect situations where the law must then be applied properly, and then one is not stricken in the solar plexus. Fairness to all is the bottom line.

Diesel testing planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Faced with increasing use of diesel engines in the United States, the Environmental Protection Agency plans to step up research to see if diesel exhaust can cause cancer in animals. A preliminary short-term test reported Wednesday found that exhaust from a six-cylinder automobile diesel engine produced no significant immediate health effects in mice, rats, cats and guinea pigs. But Delbert Barth, deputy assistant EPA administrator, said substantially more research must be done to determine whether there is a public health risk in the particles emitted in the exhaust of diesels. The question of cancer arose when a laboratory test last year showed concentrated diesel-exhaust-caused mutations in bacteria, an indication a substance might be capable of causing cancer in animals. The EPA's Cincinnati laboratory then conducted the 50-day test exposing animals to diluted raw exhaust. Barth said immediate health effects of any significance were found, although he said an increased susceptibility to infection occurred which may have been caused by nitrogen dioxide in the exhaust. The study, however, did find that exhaust particles entered the deep regions of the lungs and stayed there for a long time.

Academic freedoms defended

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Education Association expressed its concern Wednesday about protecting the concept of professional and academic freedom in Idaho. "We believe both the learner and the teacher have the right to explore, express, and discuss divergent points of view—in the quest for knowledge and truth," said Terry Gilbert, association president. Gilbert made the remarks with regard to the case of John Fogarty of St. Anthony, an English teacher who was dismissed for using in the classroom the "Ker" Kesey novel, "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest"—a story about tyranny in an insane asylum. Fogarty is suing the school. Gilbert said Fogarty is a member of the IEA and is not being defended or supported by the association in his suit. He said, however, "teachers and students must have the right to wrestle with even the most controversial issues." "Instructors, of course must be sensitive to various factors when dealing with controversial issues, including the age and maturity level of the students," Gilbert said. "Simply stated, what is appropriate for juniors and seniors in high school may not be appropriate for first graders, but that is a decision best left up to the professional judgment of the instructor." Gilbert advised school boards and teachers to work together to establish a set of procedures for dealing with the selection of books in the classroom—one of the issues in the Fogarty case. "All Idaho districts should have written policy and procedure directing how books are to be selected and ordered," he said. "Such a policy should also clarify that a party who objects to a book must have read the work in its entirety before filing a written objection stating why the book is not proper for classroom use." Gilbert added the policy should allow instructors to offer alternative book selections to students. "The IEA also defends the practice of professional freedom which is the right of a teacher to evaluate, criticize or advocate a particular point of view concerning the policies and programs of a school. We believe teachers have the right to assist colleagues when their academic or professional freedom is violated." "It said a school board and an administrator 'must protect the right of teachers to teach and students to learn'."

Ex-football stars end up in court

JIM BROWN

United Press International BROWN DROWN

Jim Brown, actor and one-time gridiron great, has drawn a day in jail and a $500 fine in Inglewood, Calif. — all because he became a bit too carried away with his golf game. Golf pro Frank Snow says he was playing a round last year when the formidable Brown when a squabble erupted over placement of the snow ball — a point Brown allegedly argued by slipping Snow in the face, punching him in the ribs and choking him. Brown denies it, but Snow had a witness, so Municipal Judge Wardell Moss said "90 days" — then suspended all but one day, levied the fine and put the former All-Pro Cleveland Browns running back on two years probation.

AND UNITS OUT

Another ex-football superstar has lost a round in court. Johnny Unitas, who used to toss the pigskin for the Baltimore Colts, has been denied a preliminary injunction in New York against Hawthorn Books, Inc. He says the publisher used his picture without authorization — on the cover of "Thrill of Victory," by Bert Sugar. The illustration depicts a football player in a blue and white jersey bearing the number 18-Unitas says that can only be him since blue and white are the Colts' colors and his jersey — now red — is the only one ever numbered 18. The judge, who was impressed — says there's no proof Unitas actually has been damaged.

JANE JAILED

Jane Russell — the bosomy bombshell who rocketed to stardom when Howard Hughes chose her for "The Outlaw" back in the 1940s — is serving a four-day jail sentence in Santa Barbara, Calif., for drunken driving. The conviction — from an arrest following a minor accident in April — is the second in two years for the 57-year-old actress. Of late, her career has been confined to television commercials for "the full-figured woman."

STOP THE WORLD

It takes a lot to make an old trouper like Sammy Davis Jr. decide the show can't go on after all — but sciatica is a gracious plenty, so he bowed out of two performances of "Stop the World I Want to Get Off" Wednesday in Chicago. Sciatica — a painful nervous disorder — hit him in the right leg. Doctors say they're not sure when he'll be able to get back on the boards.

LAUNCHING PARTY

Maybe "Heaven Can Wait" — but the kudos couldn't, and it was high-powered guest list that turned out in Beverly Hills, Calif., to launch Warren Beatty's new film of that time-honored title. On hand to applaud the premiere and toast Beatty and costar Buck Henry, were Dyan Cannon, Art Garfunkel, David Frost, Walter Matthau, Sissy Spacek, Jane Fonda, Linda Ronstadt and Sylvester Stallone. Also Beatty's big sister — Shirley MacLaine.

GLIMPSES

Russian ballet dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov, who won an Oscar nomination for his appearance in the film "The Turning Point," is forming his own movie production company to film the story of Vaslav Nijinsky, the Russian ballet star who died in 1950. Donna Summer is the winner of the Billboard magazine award for best disco singer of the year. Leonard Nimoy — temporarily suspending his one-man show "Vulcan" in Minneapolis — is heading for California to start filming Paramount's long-delayed feature-length film "Star Trek."

EAT AND BE MERRY

Shigehyo Izumi celebrated a birthday Thursday — his 113th — and that makes him the oldest man in Japan. Born in 1865, Izumi, who lives with his 75-year-old daughter, has survived four emperors, living into the reign of the fifth — Emperor Hirohito. His secret of long life: "Eat any food and worry about nothing."

Bordello, to restaurant, to auction

DALLAS (UPI) — Once a notorious Texas bordello, and most recently an unsuccessful restaurant in Dallas, the Chicken Ranch was sold piece-by-piece Wednesday. It brought $18,191.54 at auction. Among the estimated 250 people on hand was Houston television reporter Marvin Zindler, who was instrumental in "clearing" the establishment which had operated in La Grange, Texas, for more than 100 years.

Moved from La Grange and opened in 1977, the Chicken Ranch was the third restaurant in its location to have failed. "It was a cancer in La Grange, and it was a cancer in Dallas," said Zindler, as his television crew filmed the auction. "It was a Zindler television report on the Chicken Ranch that prompted Gov. Dolph Briscoe to close it down in 1973."

Female alcoholics show high rate of rape, incest

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Researchers say female alcoholics are four times more likely to have been raped and eight times as likely to have had incestuous sexual relations than the general population.

Two University of Utah scientists who counsel alcoholics said Wednesday that nearly 40 percent of the respondents say they have been raped at some time in their life. Ten percent is considered a reasonable estimate for the general population.

About 40 percent have experienced incest, while experts say only about five percent of the general populace have had sexual activity with a relative.

Dr. Gary Jorgensen, clinical director of the University's Alcohol and Drug Abuse Clinic, and Dr. D. Gorydon-Hammond, co-director of the University Medical Center Rehabilitation Sex Therapy Clinic, released results of their study.

They said the reports are reasonably accurate because the participants filled out anonymous questionnaires and the answers were probably somewhat conservative.

"I don't know why anyone would want to save it," he said. "When you get down to it, it was only good for one thing." But aside from Zindler, most observers weren't ready to bid the Chicken Ranch, a final farewell. The front porch and parlour of the old house were affixed to the existing building on Greenville Avenue in Dallas, and that part will remain standing, at least for the time being.

"None of the parts of the old Chicken Ranch were sold permanently fixed to the building were sold," said auctioneer John Gaston. "That includes the exterior walls of the old structure, which were used as inside partitions and the rules of conduct for the girls posted by former proprietor Edna Milton. Novelty items sold were perhaps the most prized possession taken away at the auction, although the restaurant equipment brought the best prices."

Club operator Geneva Hooker swore there was no play on words intended when she bought the large Chicken Ranch sign. She's undecided where or how she'll use her treasure. "Paula O'Neill from Breckenridge, Texas," bought three dozen bricks inscribed "I was laid at the Chicken Ranch." She also bought at least 1,000 bumper stickers which read "Bring it back! The Chicken Ranch." She's going to advertise them for sale in New York newspapers at $5 apiece. She paid about $10 for the lot. Gaston said the bulk of the auction receipts came from expensive kitchen equipment but bar stools, which looked like dancehall girls' legs, were for $50 each. "Everybody got a little piece of the Chicken Ranch and went home with it," he said.

DAVID GARTNER, RIGHT, LAWYER PLATO CACHERIS ENTER HEARING... senators sought testimony on potential conflict of interest

Gartner blasts conflict charges, refuses to quit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — David Gartner, complaining of the "unfairness" of conflict of interest charges against him, is refusing to bow to President Carter's call for his resignation from the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Gartner was a Humphrey aide for 18 years. Gartner at that time promised to ask a trustee to sell the stock, and the committee was satisfied that no conflict existed, although ADM is a major grain processor and CFTC regulates grain futures trading.

(Carter) called me right after this committee hearing. I'd have to tell him I can't quit. Although the president nominated Gartner to the job, he cannot fire him. Gartner could only be removed by impeachment or act of Congress.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two nuclear regulatory commissions say they support use of government funds to help finance citizen intervention in commission proceedings, according to leaders of an anti-nuclear power plant demonstration.

Probe of CIA Angola role sought to free America

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., said today he made an agonizing choice in deciding to call for an investigation of the CIA's covert role in the Angolan civil war despite his loyalty to the agency.

It tears at me in a very hard way, Dornan told UPI in an interview after he introduced a resolution Wednesday calling for the investigation by the House Select Committee on Intelligence.

Dornan said Dornan introduced the resolution after delivering a eulogy on the House floor for Daniel F. Gearhart, another American volunteer who was executed by a firing squad after being captured with Acker and several others in one.

official U.S. support. She sued on behalf of herself and four children. Dornan said he doubts the Angolan government would have executed Gearhart if the United States had claimed him and insisted that his Geneva Convention rights be protected instead of denying it had any part in Gearhart's action.

It looked like too small a place for five people to be. I would call it a professional job, Jordan said. We have some information we are working on. We have some leads.

Gearhart's wife Sheila filed a $3 million damage suit Wednesday, charging the CIA used "treachery" in recruiting the Americans and then turning its back on them after their capture rather than reveal its covert role in Angola.

Turkish shift worries U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States is concerned that Turkey might

Scores slain

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — As many as 36 Christian villagers were abducted and massacred in what police fear may be a new round of political revenge killings. But a political chief today seemed to blame Syrian troops for the slayings.

President Elias Sarkis today met in emergency session with top government and military leaders and ordered immediate action to apprehend those responsible for the slaughter in northeastern Lebanon Wednesday. The Syrian-dominated Arab League peacekeeping force in Lebanon said "unidentified gunmen" kidnapped several men from four villages in the upper Bekaa valley in pre-dawn raids, marched them into woods and killed 22 of them.

But independent reports from the scene said as many as 36 persons were killed — 27 bodies have been found.

accept Russian weapons and move close to the Soviet camp if the congressional embargo on American arms is not lifted. The NATO military commander, Gen. Alexander Haig, disclosed Wednesday a Soviet official has offered to provide at least some of the military equipment denied to Turkey's poorly supplied armed forces by the 1975 embargo.

Haig gave few details in an appearance with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Defense Secretary Harold Brown before the Senate Armed Services Committee, but said the offer came last month during a visit to Turkey by the chief of the Soviet general staff, Nikolai Ogarkov.

"I'm confident there were blandishments offered for items no longer available through Western sources," said Haig. He said "introduction of Eastern influences in their military establishment will be the inevitable consequence" of a continued embargo.

"Time has run out on this issue," Haig said, adding that if prompt action is not taken, he believes U.S. forces would be expelled from Turkey.

If Turkey did move away from NATO, the commander said, Greece would be outflanked and up to 50 Communist divisions now committed to the Balkans and the 1,500-mile Russian-Turkish border could be used elsewhere, including central Europe.

Vance and Brown repeated earlier administration arguments for repealing the embargo, which was voted by Congress in the wake of Turkey's use of U.S. arms in its 1974 invasion of Cyprus.

Vance said the step "would encourage Turkey and the Turkish Cypriots to be more flexible in the negotiations ... If it is not lifted I believe the positions are going to be hardened and it is going to be very difficult to make any progress." Haig said the Turkish air force now has a normal readiness rate of only 25 percent to 30 percent as a result of inability to get U.S. spare parts and there also are deficiencies in anti-tank and naval capabilities.

Brown said the United States needs Turkish air bases to protect its Mediterranean fleet.

"U.S. security will be harmed unless the embargo is now lifted," he said.

Bomb rips Jerusalem mart

JERUSALEM (UPI) — A powerful bomb apparently set by Arab terrorists ripped through an open-air fruit and vegetable market today on the eve of Vice President Walter Mondale's arrival for a four-day visit.

Police and hospital officials reported two dead and 40 injured, two of them critically, in the explosion at the Mahne Yehuda market on the western fringes of Jerusalem. But witnesses reported medics carried away a third dismembered body.

Police said they were questioning a number of suspects in the early morning blast, apparently East Jerusalem Arabs. According to some reports they were caught trying to flee the scene.

Security forces cordoned off the area as ambulances rushed to the scene to evacuate the casualties.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the explosion.

A police source described the explosive charge as "sizeable." It was left at a vegetable store near a public toilet on Agripas Street.

The powerful blast bent the metal-topped, wooden vegetable and fruit stands out of shape and sent tomatoes, apricots and watermelons spilling into the narrow street. Window panes in nearby shops and apartment buildings were shattered.

The blast came as police were putting the finishing touches on security arrangements for Mondale's visit. Codenamed "Snaik" (squirrel), the Hebrew acronym of "a vice presidential guest of Israel," Mondale's visit will involve more than 3,000 police and other security personnel, police sources said. Today's blast came almost one month after an explosion aboard a city bus in Jerusalem's Bayit Vegan sector killed six people and wounded 20 others.

Mondale leaves Washington tonight on the goodwill visit that has generated controversy in Israel over his plans for a private visit to the Walling Wall in the Arab section of East Jerusalem, whose annexation by Israel never has been recognized by the United States.

The vice president's itinerary called for a visit to the Walling Wall, a remnant of the ancient Jewish temple that lies at the base of the Moslem Dome of the Rock shrine in the heart of the Arab sector of the city.

The Americans insisted the visit be private and the Israeli officials, accompanying the vice president. But the Israelis indicated they would not put up with what they termed "a snub to the unity of the capital."

However a statement issued Wednesday by Mondale's office in Washington inviting Mayor Teddy Kollek "to accompany the vice president" and "his family" on "their personal visit" to the Walling Wall could end the controversy, Israeli officials said.

Other U.S. leaders, on previous visits to Israel, made it a point to avoid crossing into East Jerusalem or else took precautions to underscore the private nature of their visits.

Guard, terrorist swap shots in Rome

ROME (UPI) — An air force guard in Rome exchanged submachine gun fire with terrorists early today and bombs exploded in Milan and Palermo as hundreds of police braced for possible attacks. In Palermo, Sicily, a soft drink factory owned by a former mayor was partially destroyed by a bomb planted for what police believe were political motives.

Italy's seventh president Assalini fired on the sentry at an air force warehouse on the outskirts of Rome hours before voting for a successor to President Giovanni Leone was due to begin at the Chamber of Deputies in central Rome.

Counterterrorist police rushed to the site but no casualties were reported.

In Milan, a bomb blasted a state employment agency, wrecking the entrance and shattering surrounding windows. The presidential balloting was caused by Leone's sudden resignation June 15, six months before expiration of his seven-year term because of charges that he had avoided taxes, been involved in the Lockheed bribery scandal and favored businessmen.

The tortuous balloting for a successor to Leone requires a two-thirds majority on the first two ballots and then a simple majority. It took 16 days and 23 ballots to elect Leone in 1971.

COMPUTERIZED ACCOUNTING -- DESIGNED BY ACCOUNTANTS

Billings Computer Corporation introduces an accounting system designed by accountants—a completely integrated financial system offering interacting programs to streamline accounting from input entry to financial statements.

Profit from the accuracy, speed and powerful machine logic of modern computers right in your own office. Quickly and easily generate financial statements, prepare payroll, organize reports, update records and perform a multitude of other business tasks.

Mr. Eugene L. Faux, President of Mobila Light and Maintenance, says this about his Billings system: "Our accounting has become a relatively simple operation compared to the tedious task it was. The system literally pays for itself each month because of labor savings and increased cash flow. It is clearly a superior system."

Efficiency, economy, and increased profits—three good reasons to computerize your accounting with the system designed by accountants, the Billings Computer System.

For only $350 per month for programs and equipment, shouldn't you find out more?

Population rise slows

©New York Times Service
 UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The United Nations, in a guardedly optimistic report on world population trends, has concluded that the rate of growth is "starting to slow down."
 "There are clear signs of a decline in fertility," Raphael M. Salas, the executive director of the United Nations Fund for Population Activities, reported on the basis of information from more than 70 countries.
 However, he cautioned that the world must still expect a big increase in population. He predicted that the world population would rise from the present 4 billion to at least 5.8 billion to the year 2000—and that increases in some countries with limited resources would create "awesome" consequences.

 Yet only 8 of 144 countries surveyed by the United Nations restrict access to modern birth control methods in any way, Salas said in his annual report, prepared for a meeting in Geneva of the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Program. In a number of these countries, contraceptives cannot be sold, in some, such as Saudi Arabia, it is an offense to possess contraceptives. The study did not identify the eight countries, but officials said that besides Saudi Arabia, those restricting access to birth control measures were Burma, Chad, Equatorial Guinea, Gabon, Laos, Syria and Malawi.

 In the others, it was said, the United Nations was able to provide funds for programs, many of them carried out by the International Planned Parenthood Federation or local agencies.
 "Since the 1960's, birth rates have fallen by approximately 15 percent in some three to four dozen countries," Salas reported, saying these countries had roughly half of the population of the developing world.
 In China, it was said, analysts estimated the decline in the birth rate in the last two decades at around 20 percent. The report said that (U.S.), this would indicate "a major transformation of fertility patterns" in the world's most populous nation.

 Salas said data collected by the United Nations pointed to a decline in fertility of 10 percent in India and 10 to 15 percent in Indonesia in the last decade.
 In Latin America, recent indications suggested that traditionally high fertility rates had been reversed in Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Guyana and Mexico.

Twin Falls airport plans $10 million development

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A preliminary 20-year master plan for the Twin Falls city-county airport estimates it will cost roughly $10.5 million to develop the field into a regional airport.

Improvement plans are still in the preliminary stages but the engineers designing a three-phase, 20-year master plan for Joslin Field outlined their projections—Wednesday—to the airport's board of directors.

Dale Riedesel and Wayne Gibbs, of J-U-B Engineers, Inc., stressed the work session with the board does not mean the plans or cost estimates are final. They added that the $10.5 million price tag is what it would cost to do the work today, with the local share running about $3 million.

The engineers said the rough estimates do not take into account an inflation factor during the 20-year period from 1978 to 1998.

"In trying to look ahead at the cost for the 20 years, I don't think you can quite grasp it. Not the way it has gone up in the last 20 years, it would be hard to say anyway," Gibbs, an associate planner from J-U-B's Boise office, said.

Gibbs pointed out that while the rough costs are likely fluctuate as plans and emphasis change during the planning stages.

The first phase of the master plan encompasses 1978 to 1983 and would cost $3 million, the local share being about $750,000, Riedesel said.

Major improvements include extending Runway 07/25, the main runway, 1,500 feet to 8,700 feet to accommodate handling DC-9 and B727 jets. The original runway would be strengthened to handle the extra weight of the larger aircraft.

Other key recommendations in Phase One include making the first of three 60-acre land acquisitions to the east, expanding baggage handling and security areas in the existing terminal until a new terminal is built.

Phase Two covers 1983 to 1988 and would cost about $2.5 million overall. The local share would run just over $1 million, Riedesel figured.

The biggest share would be for a new terminal building to the east of the existing structure. That cost isn't eligible for a federal grant.

Other Phase Two developments include building an access road to the new terminal building, a new air carrier apron adjacent to the new terminal and adding another 60 acres to the east to the airport.

The airport board did not go along with a J-U-B plan to develop an airport industrial park in this phase. Riedesel said the engineering firm probably take that idea out of a final master plan.

The third phase covering 1988 to 1998 would have to be reanalyzed at that time,

Gibbs said, because long-range estimates now might not accurately forecast what the needs will be at Joslin Field then.

The estimated costs would be $3 million overall, the local portion being $1 million.

Major construction would include another extension of Runway 07/25 to 10,000 feet and expanding the parallel taxiway, expanding the new terminal building built in Phase Two; picking up another 60-acre land parcel to the east and expanding the general aviation apron.

"One of the first things we want to do is solidify the phasing and costs, to have a more complete picture of both," Riedesel said. "We will incorporate any ideas from last night's meeting and another meeting or two to somewhat solidify the report."

He said the environmental impact study will be finished and circulated in two weeks, with a public hearing to follow.

The firm should have the master plan ready for a public hearing in August and finalized by September or October, he said.

The engineers did not speak to what happens to Joslin Field if a movement underway to build a proposed $32 million regional airport in Jerome County succeeds. The Southern Idaho Regional Airport Authority is sponsoring the move.

Riedesel said this morning if that happens then Joslin Field is likely to become the general aviation airport for southern Idaho.

Beetle seekers knock on doors

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Local gardeners may be getting a knock on their door this summer from a young lady who wants to take a look at the string beans they have growing in their back yard.

Upon admittance to the garden, she will carefully inspect all bean plants sprouting from the soil.

If she happens to find a tiny copper colored beetle, slightly larger than a ladybug, with 16 spots, there will be a lot of excitement in the neighborhood.

The girl is part of a team of nine inspecting garden beans in Twin Falls for voracious Mexican bean beetles.

Although small and harmless to man, the copper colored insects are a deadly threat to beans and have been the object of two massive eradication programs in the Twin Falls area since 1954, according to state entomologist Dr. Robert Saunders.

Since the last eradication program in the late 1960s, not one Mexican bean beetle has been found crawling on the leaves of local bean plants, but Idaho Department of Agriculture officials are still not taking chances.

Plant pathologist Carry West of Twin Falls has his crew of nine girls cruising alleys and back roads in the area looking for beans growing in garden patches.

When they spot a garden bean crop, the girls knock on the door of the house and ask for permission to inspect the beans.

West says he will also be putting a team of men on the job in a few weeks when they finish field-inspecting peas.

The program is part of an ongoing Mexican bean beetle suppression effort by the agriculture department, according to Saunders.

"It can really raise havoc with beans," Saunders says. "We're just making sure it hasn't moved in and making sure it doesn't become established again."

Saunders says the beetle has become a big economic problem in the eastern U.S. where gardeners and farmers spend 80 percent of their pest control budgets on keeping bean beetle numbers down.

And in Boise, Saunders' department is now carrying out the third major Mexican bean beetle eradication program in Idaho history.

Saunders says gardens in the Boise area first became infested with the beetles in 1961 and this year the battle to control their numbers is continuing.

Saunders says inspectors have found about 40 gardens in the Boise-area with beetle populations so far this year, and last year found a total of 690 infested gardens.

When found in a garden, agriculture department officials can apply pesticides for their control or release swarms of parasitic wasps for natural biological control of the beetles.

Dr. Robert Stolitz, University of Idaho extension entomologist in Twin Falls, says the beetles eat up the leaves on bean plants leaving the veins and creating a lace effect.

Roll-over injures two

BURLEY — Two Kerns, Utah, residents were hospitalized in Burley today in serious condition following a semi-truck roll over Wednesday night on Interstate 80 North.

Guy Burke, 33, Kerns, a passenger in the truck was listed in serious condition in the intensive care unit. The truck driver, Eddie Norris, 34, Kerns, was in stable condition.

Cassia County Deputy Sheriff Ruben Saldana said the truck left the interstate at the Sweetzer pass and rolled over. The 13-year old passenger was thrown out, and the driver was pinned in the crushed cab. Members of the Mink-Cassia Search and Rescue extraction crew and ambulance personnel worked 20 minutes to cut through the vehicle to rescue Norris.

He suffered burns from radiator fluid and battery acid which dripped into the cab while he was entrapped there, the officer said. The accident occurred about 7:40 p.m. Saldana said damage including the vehicle and its contents was estimated at $100,000.

'Skiflation' talks scheduled

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — The Committee to Stop Skiflation, a group organized to fight ski lift ticket rate hikes in Sun Valley, will present an informal legal brief to the U.S. Forest Service Friday and meet formally with forest service representatives July 6.

The skiflation committee's attorney, Steve Crabtree, has drafted the informal legal brief stating the group's opposition to the ski lift price increases and reasons why the Forest Service should regulate ski lift rate prices on Bald Mountain.

Crabtree said he hopes to present the briefs to the forest service Friday and then discuss the situation with agency representatives July 6 in Ketchum.

Sun Valley company officials have been invited to the July 6 meeting with the forest service, which administers the public land where Sun Valley's main ski facilities exist.

Sawtooth Forest Supervisor Ed Fourmier must decide whether to approve Sun Valley's proposed lift rate increases, which suggest lift rate hikes ranging from 11 percent to as much as 50 percent over last season.

A full-day lift ticket would increase in price from $13 last season to $15.

Skiflation committee members say they are afraid that increased lift rates would bolster inflationary trends to the point where the local economy and labor market would be seriously hurt.

In its fight to control "skiflation" and obtain reasonable lift rates for the general public, the skiflation committee this week circulated among area businessmen 225 letters seeking feedback and financial contributions.

The group also distributed a position outlining the five main goals of the committee:

- Guarantee the forest service will regulate future price increases.
- Establishment of a public committee to review the economic and inflationary impacts of rate increases.
- Public policy providing that natural monopolies on private land leased to private concerns be regulated as are public utilities.
- Lift prices shall not be designed to create an undue competitive advantage for mountain operations over other area businesses.
- Rate controls to benefit the general public.

Police told to forearm for taxpayers' revolt

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Kelly Pearce, Idaho's director of law enforcement, said today the taxpayer revolt is not aimed at law enforcement but that officers should prepare for it anyway.

Pearce made his remarks in a speech to the Idaho Peace Officers' Association, which is holding its annual convention and shooting contest in Twin Falls.

Speaking before today's morning session, Pearce said the 1 percent initiative could have a tremendous impact on law enforcement if it is adopted in Idaho.

"We are told local law enforcement — meaning city and county — spends $39.5 million annually. If the initiative passes, the consideration now is to do away with city police departments, require county sheriffs to carry out their constitutional responsibilities and transfer the remaining authority to the state," Pearce said. "I don't think the taxpayers or any of us want this."

Pearce said he thinks the strongest message coming through the 1 percent initiative move is a demand from the people for getting the most out of every tax dollar and wider cooperation between agencies.

"I think we are going to have to meet this challenge," he said.

Pearce said his department is sending out questionnaires this month to all city and county law enforcement agencies asking how they feel the Department of Law Enforcement can best help them and in what areas there may be weaknesses.

The same questionnaires will ask each agency to evaluate its own manpower and policies with an eye to economizing, he said.

Pearce said there have been many changes in Idaho in the past few years including increasing population, an increase in crime and a new mood and spirit among the people.

He said while Idaho crime has increased 16 percent in the past year, population has increased even more.

"At the same time our police forces have remained about the same," he said. "We in the state still have the same manpower we had in 1972 but changes in population and the numbers of vehicles on Idaho highways has certainly not remained static."

Thomas Proctor, newly named superintendent of Idaho State Police, also addressed this morning's sessions.

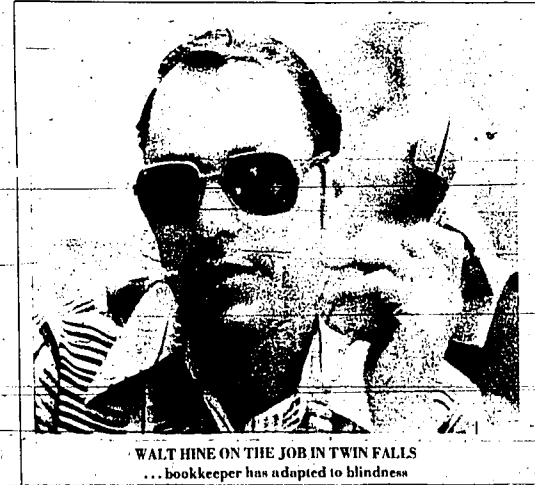

He called on police officers to set goals and work toward accomplishing them as a means of a more satisfactory and rewarding profession. Proctor said this department is seeking participation in administrative matters from the "line officers" and applying the same standards to officers of all ranks.

He noted law enforcement has a high rate of suicide, divorce and drinking problems.

"I think this is largely because you have no goals and there are very few rewards in the profession," he said. "I believe we can reduce these and solve our other problems if we stick together. When things get tough you will find the only friend you have is your fellow officer. We have to stop back-biting and we have to help each other."

Proctor said he is sending a management principals publication to all state police districts in the near future outlining what he hopes to see state officers follow in the future.

The IPOA convention will this evening with a banquet featuring the presentation of awards to winners of Wednesday's state pistol shoot.

WALT HINE ON THE JOB IN TWIN FALLS... bookkeeper has adapted to blindness

Man overcomes loss of sight woes

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Since Walt Hine lost his sight seven years ago, life has been pretty much the same for the 43-year-old Twin Falls bookkeeper.

When diabetes started to cause a slow loss of vision in 1971, Hine began accusing himself to blindness. Though he knew he would eventually lose his sight completely, he didn't even consider giving up his job as office manager at Magic Valley International, giving up his part in the church orchestra, or giving away his fishing rod.

Fortunately, Tom Kalange, who is Hine's boss at MVI, where he has been employed since 1966, thought his knowledge of the company outweighed the value of his eyesight, and not only kept him on, but has boosted his salary several times in six years.

"He helped us build the business," says Kalange, who hired Hine's eight months after opening the firm. "I told him once if it ever came down to only giving out two paychecks, it will be mine first and his second," Kalange adds.

"This job is very important," to him, and credits the company for allowing him to keep working in spite of blindness.

"They're willing to give people a break and let them try," he says.

Hine has had to alter his work activities some since his vision began disappearing, first in his right eye, which is now completely blind, and then in his left eye, which still perceives a small ray of light.

The Idaho Commission on the Blind gave him braille and walking lessons, and provided special equipment to help him at work. For example, a "talking" calculator responds to his touch with an electronic voice, and a system of buzz signals tells him which telephone line is ringing.

Hine says he can answer all calls before the third ring.

"Magic Valley International," he greets callers. "Just a moment... just a moment," he tells them as he routes the call through the large warehouse.

Besides answering the phone, Hine continues to oversee the company bookkeeping, as he did before losing his eyesight, and helps do mailings.

Like most workers, he spends a lot of time planning his next vacation, usually a week-long outdoor trip with his wife and three other couples who are close friends.

"I've never spent a vacation a home yet," he says.

This year the group will go fishing at Redfish Lake. Hine got his fishing license last week.

"It says on that I can't hunt," he jokes.

He also can no longer ski, snow-mobile or drive a car. But measuring what he still can do against what he's had to give up, Hine still comes out ahead.

For example, every Sunday he pulls out his trombone and joins the orchestra at the Bethel Temple Apostolic church. Hine quit the band, which he played in from 1958 to 1962, after losing his sight six years following his first eye operation.

He rejoined last August, even though he says "It's hard when you can't read the music."

"I hit a lot of wrong notes, but no one seems to notice," Hine laughs.

Hine says friends and religion have helped him face blindness.

"I have the right faith at the right time. God could heal me," he believes.

Buoyed by his strong faith, Hine never reacted to losing his sight with the despair many others allow to overcome them.

He says 99% of blind people consider suicide. Hine considers getting his mind, but never as more than a passing thought.

"You have to go on," he says, from his busy desk at MVI. "You just can't stop."

James Jones proposes Congress planning group

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Congress should establish an "advance planning committee," charged with anticipating and planning for major national problems, Republican-congressional candidate James Jones said Wednesday.

"Too often there is little logical planning in Congress in anticipating a potential crisis," Jones said. "The energy crisis was one example. We didn't anticipate we just reacted. We need a joint overview committee that can take a broader view and make recommendations for future national policy."

The Jerome article said such a committee could save "a tremendous amount of money," by mapping out logical ways the nation could meet potential crisis situations. Such an overview committee would prevent costly duplication of governmental action, he said.

Jones made his remarks during campaigning in the Magic Valley. While in Twin Falls, he also called for a dual program of decreased federal government spending coupled with income tax credits to encourage private business investment.

"We have to do more than just cut spending at the federal level," Jones said. "We have to restore the confidence of the private sector."

Encouraging private enterprise to invest will create jobs, Jones said, taking up any "slack" that might be created by cutting federal expenditures. "We have to balance the two," Jones said, "to make sure we don't trigger a recession."

Such a program, Jones said, would cut inflation without reducing the number of available jobs. Jones said he didn't support government creation of jobs. "Government make work jobs don't benefit the economy. The private sector is more efficient than government."

Jones also called on the Carter administration to go "full speed ahead" on development of the breeder nuclear reactor.

Court affirms dismissal in case against Aetna Life

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Supreme Court has affirmed the dismissal of a case brought by former Twin Falls Police Chief Frank Barnett and a number of other city employees against Aetna Life Insurance Co.

Fifth District Judge James M. Cunningham had dismissed the complaint of 24 city employees, most of them police officers. They brought the suit against Aetna in an attempt to recover money they paid the company under a retirement plan, rather than waiting until their retirement vested.

The city is no longer covered by the insurance company. Cunningham ruled the statute of limitations had run out. In an opinion written by Justice Charles R. Donaldson the Supreme Court upheld the district judge and said the statute of limitations for fraud rather than for contracts was applicable to the case, affirming that the statute of limitations had run out.

Services

HAILEY — Services for Milton E. Akoy Greet, 75, Hailey, who died Monday, will be at 1 p.m. Friday in the Hailey Latter Day Saints Church. Final rites will be in Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls at 4 p.m. under direction of Wood Rich Chapel.

RICHFIELD — A funeral for Robert J. Rodman, 63, Richfield, who died Sunday, will be at 2 p.m. Friday in the Twin Falls First Baptist Church. Cremation will follow in Boise under direction of Bergin Funeral Chapel in Shoshone.

HANSEN — A funeral for Emma Ethridge Standlee, 82, Hansen, will be at 12 p.m. Friday in Reynolds Funeral Chapel. Last rites will be in Sunset Memorial Park.

Harding called on local government officials to run their offices for the people they serve and not for the sake of the office or program involved.

"Efficiency at all levels of government, coupled with zero-based budgeting, will go a long way toward eliminating waste and carelessness in government. If this is accomplished then the citizens will be provided the vital necessary services at a dollar-for-dollar return on their taxes paid."

Harding stressed that the tax problem will not be solved until until Congress reduces federal spending and balances the national budget. He said these are goals to which he is committed.

Harding backs 1 percent

BOISE (UPI) — Democratic congressional candidate Ralph Harding said Wednesday the Idaho Democratic convention's endorsement of a 1 percent property tax limitation on homes and farmers has his "full support."

"It is time individual property owners are freed from the yoke of local government," Harding said.

He said local government benefits all citizens and should be supported by all citizens who work and pay taxes and receive the benefits of local services and not just by those citizens who are property owners.

Harding called on local government officials to run their offices for the people they serve and not for the sake of the office or program involved.

"Efficiency at all levels of government, coupled with zero-based budgeting, will go a long way toward eliminating waste and carelessness in government. If this is accomplished then the citizens will be provided the vital necessary services at a dollar-for-dollar return on their taxes paid."

Harding stressed that the tax problem will not be solved until until Congress reduces federal spending and balances the national budget. He said these are goals to which he is committed.

Dead boy's parents sue UP

BOISE (UPI) — The parents of a boy killed in a railroad accident last year have filed a $200,000 suit in U.S. District Court charging negligence led to the death of their son.

Lynn and Marian Rostler claim the death of their son Gerald, who was killed Oct. 18 in Bonanza County when the car he was driving collided with Union Pacific track work equipment, resulted from negligence on the part of the railroad.

The couple is seeking $200,000 in general damages and an undetermined amount in special damages from the railroad.

Union Pacific, which admitted the accident occurred, filed an answer in District Court Wednesday claiming Rostler's death was caused by its negligence. The firm says the complaint does not state a claim on which relief can be granted.

Rostler died of multiple bodily injuries.

Middleton councilman ousted

MIDDLETON (UPI) — Middleton voters decided Wednesday that councilman Darrell Scruggs should be removed from office.

The vote was 141-96 in the special recall election.

Tax cutters near signature goal

BOISE (UPI) — Suppliers of the 1 percent property tax limitation initiative are nearing their goal of obtaining nearly 26,000 signatures to put the proposition on the November General Election ballot.

The secretary of state's office said an additional 454 signatures were received Wednesday from Rich Lake, Bonner, Latah and Washington counties.

With the latest signatures the secretary of state's office now has on file 24,229 names of those supporting the proposal. This leaves 1,725 signatures to meet the necessary requirement to place the measure on the ballot.

Initiators of the proposal said, however, they have sufficient signatures and plan a mass presentation to the secretary of state's office Friday. The deadline for meeting the requirement is July 7.

Larsen pledges support of tax cuts

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Alan Larsen of Blackfoot pledged Wednesday, if elected, appointment to the state tax commission of someone supportive of the 1 percent property tax initiative.

"We need some people out of the tax commission who are interested in saving tax money and cutting taxes as they are in collecting them," Larsen said in Idaho Falls.

"When the 1 percent initiative passes there will be some in the bureaucracy who will be wanting to teach the people a lesson by cutting the heart out of government services rather than the fact I will now allow that in my administration."

Larsen said the 1 percent will be fully implemented without "disruption by people who are sympathetic to it." He said if they are not sympathetic and try to block implementation, such members of the executive branch "will be asked to leave."

NEW CANYON ROAD ABOVE THIRD FORK OF ROCK CREEK
... road will not be open for July 4th campers, picnickers

Upper part of canyon road still closed

TWIN FALLS — Fourth of July campers and picnickers will not be able to drive in the upper recreation areas of Rock Creek Canyon over the new canyon road.

Sawtooth National Forest officials said the contractor had hoped to be able to open the road above Third Fork of Rock Creek by the July 4th weekend, but it now appears this is not possible.

The prime coat has not hardened properly causing delays in applying the asphalt coat.

Because of the narrow canyon, the road will remain closed above Third Fork until this has been completed. Access to the ridge is possible, but only by way of Shoshone Basin or Oakley and Besteller.

Lower campgrounds are open and accessible. These include the popular Schipper, Birch Glen, Big Bluff, Harrington Fork and Steer Basin campgrounds.

New regulations govern hiring youngsters

SEATTLE, Wash. — The U.S. Department of Labor recently issued final regulations for hiring of 10- and 11-year-olds in hand harvesting operations for short season crops.

The new rules govern the conditions under which farmers can obtain a waiver under a 1977 amendment to the Fair Labor Standards Act allowing them to hire 10- and 11-year-olds for hand work only.

To obtain a waiver, a farmer must show there is a shortage of workers 12 years of age and older and the crop to be harvested has a particularly short harvesting season. He must show delay in harvesting the crop would cause him severe economic damage.

An applicant must also show employing youngsters under 12 would not displace substantial job opportunities for individuals over 16 years of age.

In addition, no pesticides can be used in crops to be harvested by 10- and 11-year-olds.

A spokesman for the Department of Labor in Seattle said waivers can be obtained only for crops harvested by hand. Children are not allowed to work around equipment.

Children 10 and 11 years of age cannot work more than five hours a day with a maximum of 30 hours a week. Adequate sanitary facilities, first aid, drinking water and emergency transportation must be provided.

Recreation area rules effective Saturday

SHOSHONE — Restrictions on the use of the Big Wood River Recreation area will go into effect Saturday, according to the Shoshone Bureau of Land Management district manager, Charles J. Hazier.

After Saturday the 280-acre area, two miles north of Ketchum on Idaho Scenic Route 75, will be closed to overnight camping. Discharging firearms, firecrackers or other fireworks also will be prohibited.

Hazier said the increasing recreation pressures on the popular fishing, pleknaking and hiking area have made the restrictions necessary.

"Although camping has occurred in the past, BLM planning for the area calls for the development of day use only facilities.

Meeting slated on soil test plan

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County commissioners are recommending a Soil Conservation Service soil testing method to determine whether land in agricultural areas is better suited for farming or housing.

TRC tests are those used by the Soil Conservation Service and would be included in the proposed county comprehensive land use plan.

In order to explain the soil testing idea and other recent changes in the plan, the county has scheduled two meetings next month.

One will be an informational meeting and the other a public hearing on the proposed plan.

Agricultural organizations and interested farmers are being urged to attend a July 6 meeting at 8 p.m. at the College of Southern Idaho. Officials will explain recent changes in the proposed plan.

The public hearing on the plan is scheduled for July 20. Both meetings will be held in the Shields Building, room 117 at CSI.

Commission Chairman Merl E. Leonard said the results of the soil tests would be used to classify according to its ability to produce crops. Land which is non-productive will be opened to housing, providing the South Central Health District finds it suitable for septic tank installation.

Leonard said the soil testing idea is a compromise of the 20-acre minimum division of farm land. He said the commissioners feel will be more fair to all land owners. The 20-acre minimum would still be retained in prime agricultural areas to protect highly productive land from development.

He said this will allow the city dweller who wants to live in the country an opportunity to purchase a small piece of land for a home without having to own 20 acres. It will also give the farmer an opportunity to realize the highest price possible for some of his marginal farm land, Leonard said.

Opponents of the new proposal say this will scatter housing through farm areas and cause problems which the plan was supposed to correct.

Red-tape ensnarls small hospital in rural Texas

By DAN CHISAR

DENVER (UPI) — No one knows better how government red tape can ensnarl a small rural hospital than Dr. Mario Ramirez of Rio Grande City, Texas — population 1,570.

Ramirez once owned a 21-bed hospital—in Roma, Texas — population 1,400.

For 10 years, it was the only hospital for three counties with a total combined area of 3,350 square miles and a population of about 27,000 persons.

"Then came Medicare and Medicaid and government regulations," said Ramirez.

The doctor was told his hospital must be registered nurses on duty around the clock. It needed a registered pharmacist, a dietitian, a graduate record librarian.

Ramirez had to find a certified public accountant. The payroll tripled. Federal regulations did not take into account patient bed details.

Ramirez was told the century-old stone building needed an outside metal fire escape, fire doors, a fire sprinkling system, a new power generator, humidifiers and a defibrillator monitor for the operating room.

The hospital closed.

Had Ramirez been like most rural physicians encountering such problems, he would have moved. But Ramirez' family had lived in Starr County for 200 years. "I never considered any other career except medicine; I never thought of practicing anywhere else except there," he said.

So, Ramirez got himself elected county judge.

"I realize the only way we could build a county hospital for our community was through personal political involvement," he said April 6 at the American Medical Association's 31st National Convention on Rural Health.

"One of our first official projects was to appoint a committee from all political factions and with wide area representation to help work on a plan for a new county hospital."

The county got a state grant for 90 percent of the money needed, and Ramirez and his committee convinced the community to vote in favor of establishing a hospital district.

A 50-bed hospital in Spanish architecture opened Feb. 15, 1975 three miles west of Rio Grande City, 10 miles from the old hospital. The new facility has been operating successfully ever since.

Ramirez, who served on the AMA's Committee on Health Care for the Poor for nearly five years, still feels the sting of government regulations causing his old hospital to close.

"In this case, government regulations were counterproductive to cost containment and to patients' access to health care," he said at the conference in Denver.

His assessment of the old hospital:

"I felt that we were providing better than adequate care." Our maternal mortality during its entire existence was zero, and our infant mortality was less than half that of the state. Our overall morbidity and mortality was completely comparable with state averages."

Ramirez said the national guidelines for health planning, especially an 80 percent occupancy requirement, would have closed 200 small hospitals in Texas alone.

"As originally proposed, health care in rural areas would have suffered greatly," said Ramirez. "Many persons would have been forced to go to urban centers for basic services that should be provided at home. Physicians would probably have followed the migration of the hospitals to urban areas and thus aggravated the shortage of physicians in rural areas."

"Fortunately, public outcry was such that the regulations had to be remanded," he said. "The new revised guidelines still pose some problems. There are many smaller communities that are going to require exception to the 80 percent annual occupancy standards and although they probably will qualify, the red tape required will be enormous."

What does Ramirez recommend to save the small rural hospitals in America? Certainly not more federal regulation.

He disagrees with advocates of a national health service, consumer control over a health care system, replacing medical fees with salaries for physicians, and other suggestions advocating a major reorganization of the nation's health care delivery system.

"The much more taxation can the people of our country endure?" said Ramirez. "Statistics have shown that bureaucratic control rarely improves quality or efficiency and that costs usually soar."

"These advocates propose to kill private incentive and initiative. They want to use rural America as a testing ground and a stepping stone."

Search resumes for biggest egg

PITTSFIELD, Maine (UPI) — Porcine Muir's search for the world's largest chicken egg is on again.

Entries have started rolling in for the fifth annual contest, held in conjunction with the Central Maine Egg Festival.

Muir, the University of Maine at Orono's extension service poultry specialist, Wednesday said he'd already received four eggs as entries in the July 22 scramble for the world title.

He has judged the previous contests and said the competition usually attracts eggs from about 14 states, but entries have also been submitted in recent years from Poland, Korea, England and Canada.

The winner is gold plated and its owner's name is engraved on a permanent plaque honoring the largest eggs. Last year's winner was owned by Richard Jose of Stockton Spring, but one previous winner was from Idaho he said.

Maize Agriculture Commissioner Joseph N. Williams announced, "I send information about the contest to the other states, urging farmers to submit their biggest chicken eggs."

Entries are refrigerated until the contest. Muir said all are judged on weight displacement, rather than weight, since eggs lose weight as they are stored.

He said the contest is all in fun, "but it's always nice to win this and go back next year and see your egg on display."

There's only one stipulation — the winner will be subjected to chemical analysis to make sure it originated with a chicken and is not the product of a duck, ostrich or platypus, Muir said.

Firm turns trees into stock feed

By ARTHUR P. BUSHNELL

BANGOR, Maine (UPI) — Cows eating trees? "Trees are nothing more than tall grass," says Michael Thomas, president of Timber Resources Inc.

So his firm has developed a process to convert trees into chip feed in hopes that Maine farmers wanting to save money and increase productivity will begin feeding poplar trees to their cattle and some other animals.

Increased pressure and temperature are used to treat the trees so ruminating animals, such as cows, goats and sheep, can extract energy from them.

Thomas' firm, using technology developed by Canadian researchers, has been using a small demonstrator to show farmers how the process works. Full production began this spring with a plant capable of producing feed for as many as 6,000 head of cattle.

The basic cost for the poplar feed is $35 a ton. Thomas says that can be reduced by buying large amounts or by a farmer supplying some of the poplar used. That compares to charges of $50 to $80 a ton, plus transportation, for hay.

"The process breaks down cellulose and hemicellulose so that they're just as nutritious as any form of starch in plants," Thomas says.

"Feeding trials have turned out super. One Canadian mixed the product into regular rations and saved 23 cents per head of dairy cattle per day on each of 100 head. Their milk-fat content also went up, so their milk was getting 30 cents more per 100 pounds," he said.

He says any farmer can reduce feed costs 10 percent by using the poplar feed. Further, he says, a farmer using his own poplars for feed can save as much as 23 cent $54.75 per head per year. "That really mounts up when you're talking about some farmers with several hundred head."

"For farmers who have timberland, most of it has a great deal of poplar in this area. It's primarily a weed plant in this state, Vermont, Massachusetts and New Hampshire."

Thomas says the process is an old idea which was used to feed animals in some areas of Europe during World War II, feeding crops for human consumption. But he says new technology now makes the idea more feasible.

"Trees have the same structural make-up of any other type of plant. We just alter the structure and chemistry. Grass allows animals to convert cellulose directly into energy. All we've done is reduced the tree to a chemical structure similar to grass or hay."

Timber Resources Inc. is now the nation's only distributor and marketing agent for the process developed by Stak Technology of Ottawa.

"We started looking into such processes about nine months ago and were interested in a similar idea in Texas," Thomas says. "But we thought it involved too much chemicals and pollutants. This method appealed to us because it's clean.

"We work with no chemicals, no pollutants, no waste. We convert a complete tree into an energy source for livestock. A pound of tree makes a pound of food."

"The fact that poplars have some nutritional or metabolic use for ruminant animals isn't too new. It's quite common to go into the woods and see moose chewing on limbs. All we've done is make it bite-size. The state of Alaska is even considering this process to help feed caribou."

Thomas says.

"We've had an outstanding response. The idea of feeding trees to livestock initially met with a great deal of scoffing. But as it was explained, it was understood by farmers."

"We've actually created a separate industry for a tree that was otherwise considered absolutely useless," Thomas says.

Ancient leaves from Oregon preserved perfectly

NEW YORK (UPI) — The most perfectly preserved specimens of living tissue from the distant past have been discovered by a team of biologists from the New York Botanical Garden and the University of North Carolina.

The specimens are tree leaves that are 16 million to 36 million years old but that remain green and intact down to the membranes, organelles and other microscopic structures inside the cells.

Analysis of the leaves has led the researchers to suggest that they may have been preserved when compounds that are normally isolated in certain parts of the cells were released to act as a kind of self-preservation fluid. It has been suggested that if this mechanism could be understood and imitated by human action, it could provide a new method of preserving foods for human consumption.

"The discovery that the leaves remained green after millions of years was reported last year after they were recovered from volcanic ash deposits in eastern Oregon. But now, after more detailed examination of the leaves with electron microscopes, the researchers have discovered that far more was preserved than simply the leaves' shapes and colors.

"The preservation is just simply astonishing," said Dr.

Karl J. Niklas of the Botanical Garden, who has been able to determine nothing like this has ever been seen for certain in any other tissue from the past."

Ordinarily, living tissue that is somehow trapped and preserved under such conditions of alteration. The best known is mineralization, a process in which molecules of mineral replace molecules of tissue. Petrified wood is an example, in which stone has formed, after duplicating detailed structures, within the wood. Under other conditions, however, there may be no mineral substitution but a compression of the tissues and a form of decomposition that converts the plant tissues into oil or coal.

What Niklas and his colleagues have found, however, is that under very dry conditions that apparently kill any decay organisms, leaves may simply be trapped and merely desiccated. Scattered off, the leaves simply rest undisturbed. Niklas also suspects that the entrapping of microscopic structures was startling, Niklas said that it was felt necessary to publish along with the report in the July issue of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

Food plan comment sought

BOISE (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service and the Idaho Department of Health and Social Services will hold public forum July 11 in Boise to consider the Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants, and Children.

The WIC forum is set for 4 p.m. in the Central District Health Department conference room, 1455 N. Orchard Ave.

"The intent of the public forum is to offer WIC participants and the public an opportunity to tell federal, state and local program administrators what they like and dislike about the program," said J.R. Kragh, regional WIC program director.

"Our hope is that the open dialogue, criticisms, and suggestions we get from this forum will help us become more effective in meeting the needs of WIC program participants."

The program serves pregnant and nursing women, infants, and children up to five years of age. To be eligible, a woman or child must be certified by a competent medical authority to be at nutritional risk because of poor or inadequate nutrition and low income.

Western senators have supported and worked toward years.

"The goals of improved planning and efficient management of federal water resource programs, enhanced federal-state cooperation in resource planning, increased attention to environmental quality, and appropriate water conservation programs have been priorities of westerners for many years."

The letter also said "The establishment of a new national water resources policy holds both promise and problems for virtually every region of the United States."

Another corn deal make with Soviets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. exporters have sold an additional 200,000 metric tons — 7.3 million bushels — of corn to the Soviet Union for the supply year ending Sept. 30, the Agriculture Department announced Tuesday.

That brings Soviet export sales for delivery in the second year of a five-year grain supply agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union to 3.4 million metric tons of wheat and 10.7 million metric tons of corn.

The total sales represent 124.9 million bushels of wheat and 42.1 million bushels of corn.

Under the agreement, the Soviet Union pledged to buy at least 8 million metric tons of grains during each of the five years. Any purchases over 8 million tons in a year require special approval.

The Soviets earlier received permission to increase their purchases to 15 million tons in the second year of the agreement.

The most recent sales announcement leaves the Russians 900,000 tons below the 15-million-ton purchase limit.

Grain reserve plan brings grower ire

RITZVILLE, Wash. (UPI) — The Washington Association of Wheat Growers released a statement Tuesday opposing the Carter administration's proposal to establish an emergency grain reserve.

"Another grain reserve is just what wheat growers do not need," said Bill Zagelow, association president.

Zagelow said Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland's statement that the reserve would meet the United States' international commitments does not hold water because DENNIS SONIUS was surprised when he sold 270 feet of chain link fence the first day.

Arrest shakes confidence of U.S. businessmen

N.Y. Times Service

CHICAGO — The forcible arrest and detention of an International Harvester representative who was released Tuesday in Moscow has shaken the confidence of American businessmen who had grown accustomed, in the trade relations with the Soviet Union, to a sense of immunity from political tensions, according to industry, government and trade association officials.

Despite the efforts of Soviet trade authorities who have been working overtime to give them assurance, business executives expressed bewilderment over the treatment of Francis Jay Crawford, Harvester's service manager in Moscow, who was dragged from his car and taken to Lefortovo Prison more than two weeks ago.

Crawford was accused of illegal currency dealings, but no details of his alleged violations have been forthcoming.

Thus far, there is no evidence that the concerns of the businessmen interfered, even temporarily, with their international trade operations, though a State Department aide said he had "talked to one firm that had wanted to send a technician to Moscow but decided against it after this happened." He declined to identify the firm, any, one of 24 with Moscow trade offices.

While Crawford was in prison, Harvester officials said they were not allowed to communicate with him, though he was allowed a visit from his fiancée.

"That is awfully harsh treatment of a company that has had a presence in the host country for over half a century," said Samuel B. Casey Jr., president of Pullman Inc., which recently completed a $75-million truck factory contract in the Soviet Union and is in the design and engineering stage of another $25 million job.

"It is certainly disturbing, but I don't think it will have enough material effect to bring our three expatriates home," Casey added, before Crawford was released. "The question is Mr. Crawford's guilt or innocence. I don't know him, but the way he was treated is of great concern."

"My phone has been ringing every 10 minutes," said Harold Scott, president of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council, citing calls from businessmen expressing their anxieties in the period before the Harvester aide's release. "Most have called to find out what their policy should be. The great concern of the American business community is whether this is a new era in relations so far as they are concerned."

The trade council, sponsored by the two governments, is an organization of about 260 private American businesses and about 113 counterparts among Soviet institutions, formed in 1973 to facilitate trade.

The most strongly worded comment on the Crawford matter came from Brook McCormick, chairman of the International Harvester Co. who said in a recent letter of protest to Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin that Crawford's "arrest and subsequent treatment by Russian authorities raises serious questions for the future relations of all American firms doing business with the USSR."

"Such actions are not consistent with the high level of conduct and mutual respect developed over the years between International Harvester and the Soviet Government," McCormick said. The company is a major worldwide producer of farm machinery, trucks and heavy construction and industrial equipment.

At the company's world headquarters here, the official who has been most closely associated with development of Harvester's East-West trade said he was "in a quandary" over issues raised by Crawford's arrest.

"This came as a very great shock to us," said Omer G. Voss, a director who until recently was vice chairman with responsibility for the company's overseas operations, but has now retired from that post. Harvester was the first American company to be invited to establish a business office in Moscow in the trade thaw that began in 1972.

"I believe Mr. Crawford is a very honest, trustworthy, law-abiding individual," Voss said. "We can't believe he would commit any crime."

Experts predict recession in '79

Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Many government economists now expect a business recession in 1979, but there is considerable disagreement over how severe it would be.

Many officials of the Carter administration see the possibility of a fairly severe decline beginning a year from now. But others at the credit-controlling Federal Reserve, for example, think the slide can be kept mild.

Much depends on which group is correct. The unemployment rate would be significantly higher in a sharp decline than in a shallow downswing. And Jimmy Carter's re-election chances could be hurt if the economy is struggling during the campaign period of 1980.

The differing forecasts are based on similar perceptions of underlying business trends. Most economists agree that the recent spring spurt in activity was a temporary rebound from the cold weather slowdown of last winter; growth is expected to slow markedly in the second half.

The forecasters expect consumer spending to level off under the weight of heavy installment debts. Consumers are believed to be buying autos and other appliances in advance, at higher rates than can be sustained, because of their expectations of further inflation and price increases.

Economists don't expect industry to step up its investment in new plant and equipment. That would leave a tapering rate of home-building and a still large though gradually shrinking budget deficit as the main supports for the economy in the year ahead.

Pessimists worry that these sustaining forces will be overwhelmed by the impact of the cumulative credit restraint that the Federal Reserve is exerting. Tight money, it is feared, will tip a weakening economy into a recession.

It is because of these fears that administration officials are hoping the Federal Reserve will begin to ease credit in a few months. If it doesn't, its restraint will speed the slide, which could be deep and prolonged.

Federal Reserve officials believe their tightening will have a moderating, not a worsening impact on the economy. They feel that restraining excessive growth of the money supply can be a powerful factor in keeping inflation from rising faster.

In this view, current administration efforts to slow the price spiral won't be very effective in the months ahead. But credit restraint can keep the inflation rate from leaping higher and can head off a post-inflation bust.

Fed officials feel that if tightening is properly applied, the recession that may be inevitable anyway could be relatively mild.

Stanley kayak races slated July 7 and 8

STANLEY — Stanley's annual kayak races on the Salmon River near Stanley will take place July 7 and 8.

The races will be held in connection with the regular Stanley Slomp, a weekend of entertainment and contests.

Entries for the kayak races can be made through the Stanley Chamber of Commerce. Merchants will supply prizes for the winners. Spectators are invited to watch the races from the river area in Stanley.

Chamber of Commerce officials also have a July 4 observance scheduled beginning with a pancake breakfast to be served out of doors during the morning.

The Antique Festival Theater will perform two plays following the breakfast. At 2 p.m. a puppet show and mime, "The Boy and The Deer" will be presented and at 8 p.m. "Toby Goes to Washington" is scheduled. Both productions will be shown outdoors.

Fireworks will be displayed across valley Creek from Stanley following the evening theater performance.

An arts and crafts fair will be held in Stanley July 22 and 23. This is the annual Mountain Mamas fair featuring many kinds of hand made items.

Rate boost sought

BOISE — Union Pacific Railroad has filed an application with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to increase freight rates from 4 to 7 percent.

The rates would rise 4 percent on all traffic except coal. Coal would rise 7 percent under the proposal.

The public has until July 1 to file a written protest with the commission.

Space for spectators

TWIN FALLS — Space for watching the July 4th fireworks display in Twin Falls will be available at the College of southern Idaho.

Spectators should use the west entrances at CSI to get to the viewing areas.

The city will set off its fireworks about 9:30 p.m. City officials said an area east of the Perrine Coliseum will be closed to spectators and traffic in order to provide adequate safety clearance around the launch area.

Vehicles may park in any of the college parking lots but the east campus area will be closed for safety. The fireworks display will be under the direction of the city fire department and will last 30 to 45 minutes.

NFO plans open house

JEROME — The National Farmers Organization will hold an open house Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. for its new dairy testing office at 301 N. Linden St. in Jerome.

When the new office opens, local dairymen can have their milk independently tested for fat, protein and general quality. Cheese samples, coffee and punch will be served at Friday's open house and door prizes will be offered. The public is invited.

ROBERT BURCHFIELD
... English dictionary editor

American language vs. King's English

CHICAGO (UPI) — English is changing so much in America that in 200 years, Americans and Britons won't be able to understand each other without the help of a translator, a British lexicographer says.

"Since 1776, American English and British English have been on a divergent course," says Robert Burchfield, the chief editor of the Oxford English dictionary. "They should end up being unintelligible to one another in another 200 years."

There is a popular misconception that the ever-broadening influence of the media is narrowing the differences between the two forms of English, Burchfield told a news conference this week.

"However, I would guess that 200 million Americans haven't been to England, and there are probably 47 million British who haven't been to the U.S. And it's not the media that control the language, it's the 200 million and the 47 million who are staying at home, writing letters, talking to one another."

American English is changing more rapidly than its British counterpart because there are more cultural influences, said the soft-spoken, silver-haired lexicographer, attired in a conservative, gray business suit.

"A lot of people here don't speak English as a first language. Also, there are simply more stimuli here than there are in Britain. New developments often create the need for new words."

"I feel British English is retaining its more ancient character. I think in Britain there is a form of standard English to which the British aspire, but there is no one standard here. In countries where English is taught as a second language, British English eventually will be taught exclusively, because it is easier to learn," Burchfield said.

"Look, for example, at the encyclopedic content of an American novel. It is infinitely more complicated than that of a British novel."

Burchfield, 55, also said the recent increase in the number of books and scholars deploring the demise of English doesn't concern him.

He laughed when asked about recent concern over the misuse of the word "disinterested."

"Edwin Newman (the author of several books on the use and misuse of English) is concerned over the sloppy use of 'disinterested.' Well, in the 17th century, disinterested was used to mean both impartial and indifferent. No one complained about it, and the language didn't die."

"I, at the moment, make the distinction when I use the word. It's useful in the 20th century. But we shouldn't be worried about changes in the language. What sense does it make to worry for 10 years whether 'hopefully' is used correctly, even though some of my friends continue to sermonize about it?"

Ex-film executive sentenced in theft

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — Former Columbia Pictures President David Begelman was fined $5,000 Wednesday and put on three years probation for stealing $40,000 by forging endorsements of studio checks.

Superior Court Judge Thomas C. Murphy also warned Begelman he would go to prison if he violated any terms of his probation.

Murphy termed Begelman's conduct "bizarre, as bizarre conduct as you'll find anywhere."

"It's an unusual case," Murphy said. "It's a case that really boggles me. Here you have a man who is 50 years old, a success. Nothing has passed to indicate any type of clue to this type of conduct."

Murphy could have sentenced Begelman to a maximum of 10 years in prison.

Begelman, who was fired as president of Columbia, pleaded no contest May 17 to a grand theft charge that he stole $40,000 from the studio by forging three checks made out to actor Cliff Robertson, director Martin Ritt and restaurant owner Pierre Grolaud.

The thefts occurred between Jan. 13, 1975, and May 19, 1977, when Begelman headed the studio.

Begelman later repaid the money.

Begelman's attorney, Richard Hagan, asked for leniency, telling Murphy that Begelman "has suffered a great humiliation" and was willing to underwrite and produce a film on the dangers of the drug, angel dust, and show it to high school students.

Church touts gasohol

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church invited members of Congress and other administration officials Wednesday to test their cars with gasohol — a mixture of gasoline and alcohol — to test its efficiency.

Church is the Senate sponsor of legislation that would require introduction of gasohol by 1981.

Members of the Senate and House as well as cabinet members and other administration officials were invited Wednesday, today and Friday to fill the tanks of their cars with a blend of 50 percent unleaded gasoline and 10 percent alcohol, distilled from surplus corn.

AMERICAN F. JAY CRAWFORD
... at news conference

U.S. businessman traded for spies

MOSCOW (UPI) — American businessman F. Jay Crawford, freed from a Moscow prison in exchange for the release of two accused Russian spies in the United States, told an emotional news conference Wednesday he was innocent of charges of black market money dealing.

"I firmly state I am innocent of all charges," the 37-year-old tractor salesman told a brief news conference. "I have denied these allegations."

"I do not understand and maybe I never will understand why I would be detained in prison during this investigation."

Crawford was released from Moscow's Lefortovo Prison Tuesday after spending 15 days there following his arrest by Soviet militiamen on a central Moscow street. He was released following the release of two Soviets accused of spying in the United States.

Crawford, who has been in Moscow for two years as the representative for International Harvester Corp., said he is still under investigation by Soviet authorities and was released in the custody of U.S. Ambassador Malcolm T. Toon.

The two accused Soviet spies were likewise released in custody of Soviet ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin.

Crawford said he was treated well during his two weeks in Lefortovo Prison and he thanked International Harvester, Toon and Embassy Counselor Officer Clifford Gross.

"Cliff Gross... visited me regularly and he was really my only contact. This definitely helped me to keep up my faith," Crawford said. "I am most happy and I can't tell you how pleased I am to know that people have maintained their confidence in me."

Crawford appeared to be in good health. He said he felt well and saw no reason to visit a doctor. Asked if he lost weight, he said, "Well, my pants aren't falling off and my boots still fit."

Crawford, who has returned to his room in the Hotel Intourist in downtown Moscow, told reporters he was only interested in getting back to work and seeing his life return to normal.

"I have conducted myself in accordance with Soviet law," he said. "I always tried to improve the business relations between our two countries."

"I am sure that you understand that what I want now most of all is to resume my duties in the office and return to a normal life."

Crawford held the news conference at International Harvester's central Moscow office. He was flanked by two company officials who declined to say anything about his case.

"At one point, one of the officials told him, 'stick to the prepared statement,' when Crawford was asked a question by a reporter."

"Until such time as this thing is completely resolved and we have a clear understanding I think that I should tell you that there is really nothing else I can really give you," he said.

Mideast gamblers flock to London

LONDON (UPI) — Gamblers from the oil-rich Middle East have returned in force to London's casinos which are reaping the biggest profits ever.

"Every night we are seeing Middle Eastern gentlemen winning or losing thousands of pounds. And more and more seem to be coming," said a spokesman for Ladbrokes, which has 11 casinos dotted around Britain including four in London.

"We're doing exceptionally well."

Cyril Stein, chairman of Ladbrokes, said his flagship, the Hill Street casino, has taken a record "drop" — the cash exchanged for gaming chips — in the past three weeks.

"Business is so good that we have added a new gaming floor to our Hill Street casino," he said. He takes in more than one million pounds ($1.8 million a week).

Ladbrokes shareholders should be pleased. Not only is the company taking in chips at the tables — it's also expecting to profit some 10 million pounds ($19 million) in bets from last week's Royal Ascot after already collecting a similar amount at the Epsom Derby meet.

Corals, which also has a number of big casinos, said Arab gamblers are flocking back to the tables. Last year something like 52 percent of Corals profits came from casinos.

London's Playboy Club confirmed that many of the old Arab bettors had returned, together with new gamblers. The group owns the casino at the Park Lane Bunnys Club, the largest of its kind in Britain, the plush Clermont Club and two casinos in Portsmouth and Manchester.

The Playboy Club did not expect profits to grow at the same rate they did last year during the boom which saw the take at all of Britain's casinos soar by more than 40 percent to a record 680 million pounds ($1.292 billion).

Buhl schedules Legion tourney

BUHL — Twin Falls meets Pocatello and Buhl takes on Valley in the seventh annual American Legion sagebrush tournament Saturday and Sunday.

The event is part of the town's annual Sagebrush Days celebration.

Twin Falls and Pocatello will square off at 5 p.m. Sunday with Buhl and Valley meeting in the nighttime about 9 p.m.

The single-elimination tournament will wind up Monday with the first-eight losers playing at 5 p.m. and the two undefeated clubs battling for the championship about 9 p.m.

Unitas loses suit

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former football great Johnny Unitas was denied a preliminary injunction Wednesday in his court battle with Hawthorn Books, Inc. over the alleged unauthorized use of his portrait on the jacket of "The Thrill of Victory."

In denying the motion to bar further publication and distribution of the book about ABC sports coverage, Federal Judge Robert W. Sweet said the "unsupported allegations" by Unitas of damage to his ability to sell his endorsements and image failed to warrant an injunction.

Unitas contends he is represented in the portrait by sports artist Leroy Nelman of a football player about to pass while wearing the blue and white team colors of the Baltimore Colts and number "19" on his jersey.

Oldtimers name captains

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eddie Mathews and Brooks Robinson, two of the premier third basemen in the history of baseball, were selected Wednesday to serve as honorary captains for the All-Star Game on July 11 at San Diego.

Mathews will captain the National League and Robinson will serve the American League.

Honorary captains first joined the All-Star teams in 1975, when Mickey Mantle captained the AL and Stan Musial the NL. Bob Lemon and Robin Roberts followed in 1976 and Joe Judge and Willie Mays received the honor last year.

Mathews, who played for the Milwaukee and Atlanta Braves, will be inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame on August 7. Robinson ended his career with the Baltimore Orioles at the completion of the 1977 season.

Cowens to miss 10 days

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Kansas City Royals Wednesday announced outfielder Al Cowens, who sprained ligaments inside his right knee during a Monday night game against the California Angels, will be unable to workout for at least 10 days.

"At this point the doctor says it will be 10 to 14 days before he can start working out," said Bruce Carnahan, a club spokesman.

Dr. Paul Meyer, team physician, examined Cowens Wednesday and said he had a first-degree sprain. Cowens, hospitalized Tuesday, is listed in satisfactory condition. His right knee was placed in a splint.

Silver Star classic to begin Wednesday

JACKPOT — Cactus Pete's annual Silver Star Classic two-man best ball tournament, slated for Wednesday and Thursday, still has some openings, reports host Professional Billy Dova.

The tournament will be played from shotgun starts both days, allowing the nine-hole course to accommodate 70 teams. The morning and afternoon squads will be flipped for the second day.

The usual amount of fringe benefits will be included in the entry fee, he added.

Bantamweights set match

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Bantamweight boxing champion Carlos Zarate has been signed for a 10-round bout in the "super bantam" weight class against Jose "Pamblico" Cervantes of Colombia at the Forum, Aug. 12, promoter Don Fraser announced Wednesday.

Zarate, recognized as bantam king by the World Boxing Council, has a 52-2 record with 51 knockouts.

Cervantes has a 27-4-1 record and will be making his second appearance in the Los Angeles area. He knocked out Ruben Olivares at the Sports Arena in 1976 and is ranked No. 6 by the WBC among super bantams.

Brewers going strong despite injuries

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nobody in the clubhouse said a word as Gorman Thomas walked over to his locker and pulled out one of the bats inside it.

Everybody wanted to see what the big Milwaukee long-baller was going to do with considering the "thick new cast" on his left thumb which he had chipped some bones making a diving catch.

Holding the bat handle in his right hand, Thomas carefully cradled his left one over it, cast and all, and then took a swing.

"What the hell are you trying to do?" called out George Bamberger, the Brewers' startled manager, watching from another part of the clubhouse. "Who are you trying to kid?"

"It's not too bad," Thomas answered, looking at the cast. "I'll be ready to go again in a week."

Bamberger couldn't help but laugh. He really was laughing with tears in his eyes looking at Thomas trying to swing that bat before Wednesday night's doubleheader with the Yankees in Milwaukee because he had been in professional baseball 21 years and has never seen any club come up with as many injuries in a single season as the Brewers have so far this year.

"With the season not even half over yet, the Brewers already have lost three of their players for the rest of the year and a total of 16 due to a variety of injuries from periods ranging from four days to two months."

"I've never seen anything like it in my life," says Bamberger, putting in his first season as manager of the Brewers. "We have to be leading the league in injuries. Probably both leagues. I don't think there's anyone even close. Everytime I see the trainer come into my office, I wanna run and hide under my desk!"

Thomas says he'll be ready to go again in a week. It'll be a week before his cast even comes off, after which it figures to be at least another week or 10 days before he's likely to feel as comfortable as he had been gripping the bat.

What hurts all the more is that Thomas is one of the club's leading run producers with 43 RBI and 17 home runs.

Larry Hite, the Brewers' top RBI man, also was among those forced out of action when he ripped some ligaments in his leg diving for Mike Hargrove's blooper last month in a game with Texas.

"When he got hurt, he told me not to worry about it, he'd be there the next day. But the following day he couldn't even stand on his leg," Bamberger recalls. "The thing I admire most about this club, though, is its spirit. It's been positively outstanding. Whenever anyone gets hurt, I just make up a line-up, put someone else in there and he comes through beautifully. Like Dick Davis. I put him in the lineup and he hit home runs two days in a row."

Regarded as one of the best pitching coaches in the business during the last 10 years with Baltimore, Bamberger has done a remarkable job in his first year managing the Brewers. They're still within sight of the front-running Red Sox in the American League East and showed 17 victories in their last 24 games before their double dip with the Yankees Wednesday night.

Milwaukee's injury list this season includes almost as many names as one of the pages in a telephone directory.

Ray Fosse, Andy Etchebarren and Tim Nordbrook are all finished for the year. Fosse came up with a leg problem; Etchebarren had an arm operation; and Nordbrook damaged a nerve in his leg.

Along with that, Cecil Cooper, the Brewers' fine hitting first baseman, will be out for another month with a cracked bone below his knee (this is the second time this season he has been sidelined), and outfielder Sixto Lezcano, who hit 21 homers last year, was lost nearly two weeks with a bad shoulder.

Shortstop Robin Yount missed a month earlier this season after he hit his ankle with a foul ball and pitcher Bill Travers also was on the shelf a month following an arm operation.

Moose Haas, another of the team's starting pitchers, was out five days after being laid up for two months with a torn muscle in his elbow.

Infielder Don Money pulled a groin muscle that kept him inactive three weeks and Paul Molitor, the spectacular rookie shortstop and second baseman, missed five days with a similar injury.

Bill Castro, another pitcher, lost four days with a sore elbow and Jerry Augustine, a 12-game winner last year, missed two starts for the same reason. Ed Rodriguez, still another pitcher, was out five days with a bad shoulder and outfielder Davey May also was stinelled for the same amount of time due to a pulled rib cage.

Connors and Evert sweep easily to wins in second round of Wimbledon tourney

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Former sweethearts Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert, hoping to have one more date together at the Wimbledon Ball, each won second-round matches in convincing fashion Wednesday.

Connors, maintaining he's more serious than ever about his game, followed Evert on center court and defeated Australian Kim Warwick, 6-3, 7-5, 2-6, 6-4. Evert had required only 40 minutes to dispose of Helena Anliot of Sweden, 6-1, 6-0.

"I'm feeling 100 per cent fit and taking things as they come," said Connors, who was out of action recently for five weeks with mononucleosis, leaving his status for Wimbledon in doubt.

"I'm probably a little more serious than I have been in the past. I didn't expect to be here really. I got a break when they let me come here and play, and now I want to take advantage of it."

Connors, the second seed among the men, won Wimbledon in 1974 and has finished runnerup twice since then. Evert, the women's top seed, captured the championship in 1974 and 1976.

Advancing to the third round along with Connors were fourth seed Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, fifth seed Brian Gottfried, seventh seed Raul Ramirez of Mexico and No. 16 John Newcombe of Australia.

Vilas defeated Britain's John Veaver, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3. Gottfried beat compatriot Brian Teacher, 6-2, 7-5, 6-3. Ramirez beat Dave Schneider of Britain, 6-1, 6-0, 6-2, and Newcombe, a three-time Wimbledon champion, beat countryman Ross Case, 6-4, 6-2, 9-8.

The men's ranks lost their fourth seed in three days as No. 12 Buster Mottram, the only seeded British player, fell to South Africa's Frew McMillan, 9-8, 6-4, 6-3. The three previous seeds to drop out all were Americans — Arthur Ashe, John McEnroe and Dick Stockton.

The women continued to hold firm Wednesday with third seed Evonne Cawley of Australia and ninth seed Tracy Austin still winning second-round matches.

Cawley, who left immediately after her match to bathe her baby, routed Lele Forood of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-0, 6-2, and 15-year-old Austin beat Betsy Nagelsen, 6-2, 6-1.

Virginia Ruzici, the No. 13 seed from Romania, won a first-round match from Britain's Winnie Woodbridge, 6-1, 6-2.

Determination
TEEN AGED Tracy Austin, now 15, grits her teeth during Wimbledon competition. The America miss has run through her first two matches unlost.

Connors said he worked himself into shape, particularly for grass, by playing in two tournaments in England. He won both of them, at Beckenham and Birmingham, sweeping all 12 matches he played.

"I played those tournaments to see if I was fit enough and strong enough to go the distance at Wimbledon," Connors said. "Then I took a week last week and I feel rested. If I make it to the final rounds here, I will be in condition."

"I thought I played pretty well today. If I can play the rest of the tournament as I did today, I'll be satisfied."

Newcombe, who is 34, is attempting a serious comeback after playing only sporadically for three years following knee surgery. He also says this will be his last singles appearance at Wimbledon.

"I don't know how well I can play yet," he said following his victory over Case. "I've been building up for this tournament, and we'll see how it goes each round."

"This is my last shot. I came here to Wimbledon to give it one last shot and see if I can win. If I can't win, I'll still have fun. Winning or losing isn't that important, it's just being out there. I was lucky enough to win three times."

As evening fell on a warm, sunny night, an all-time record attendance of 37,453 had been set for Wimbledon. The previous mark of 37,389 was set last year, also on the first Wednesday.

Celtics, Braves may swap owners

NEW YORK (UPI) — A tentative agreement has been reached that would shift the NBA's Buffalo Braves to San Diego under the ownership of Boston Celtics owner Irving Levin and turn the ownership of the Celtics over to current Braves' owners John Y. Brown and Harry Mangurian, it was reported Wednesday.

The New York Daily News, in its Thursday edition, said the swap of franchises had been agreed to Wednesday, but must be approved by the NBA Board of Governors at their July 7 meeting in Chicago.

Under the terms of the agreement, Braves would operate in San Diego under Levin's ownership next season and the Celtics would stay in Boston under Brown and Mangurian.

Since the end of the NBA season, Brown, who tried to move the Braves to Hollywood, Fla., two years ago, has been bogging the relocation of his club. His hometown of Louisville, where he owned the ABA's Kentucky Colonels, was the early favorite, but soon gave way to Dallas, Minneapolis and San Diego. At one point, Long Island's Nassau Coliseum was mentioned, which would have given the New York area three NBA teams.

Levin, who lives and does business in Los Angeles, was unavailable for comment, according to his Los Angeles office.

San Diego has struck out twice with pro basketball franchises in recent years — losing the San Diego Rockets of the NBA to Houston and later losing the San Diego Conquistadors of the ABA.

The swapping of teams by the owners of the Braves and Celtics would be similar to deal worked out between NFL owners Carroll Rosenbloom and Robert Irwin in 1977 trading the Baltimore Colts for the Los Angeles Rams.

Superdome fight program filling

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mike Rossman, the No. 6-ranked light-heavyweight in the world, signed Wednesday to meet light-heavyweight champion Victor Galindez in one of the major bouts on the Battle of New Orleans card at the Louisiana Superdome Sept. 15.

The headline fight on the card will be the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship battle between Leon Spinks and Muhammad Ali.

Rossman, who will turn 24 Saturday, was honored with a birthday cake at a New York restaurant Wednesday at the press conference announcing his first title shot. The Turnersville, N.J., native, 33-4-3 during his five-year career, will try and become the first American to beat Galindez, who has won his last 38 fights and defended his championship on 10 occasions — the last being May 6 in Italy over Yaqul Lopez.

Rossman, who has won 20 of his 18 fights by knockout, last fought in Philadelphia on May 24 and knocked out Lonnie Bennett in the second round.

Galindez, an Argentinian who first captured the crown from Len Hutchinson in Buenos Aires, has never been back to his homeland to defend his title. The Louisiana matchup will be his second defense in the United States — he defeated Jorge Ahumada at Madison Square Garden in 1975.

Following the announcement of the signing, an amplified telephone hookup with WBC heavyweight champion Spinks was made from his Hilton Head, S.C. training camp, where Spinks reported everything going well.

"Spinks is a public figure for some understanding" of his recent problems, adding that his troubles with the law aren't much different from the average person's.

"I wasn't arrested, I was stopped," Spinks said, referring to his latest clash with police for speeding. "Everybody gets stopped but everybody's name isn't Leon Spinks. I doubt if Larry Holmes (World Boxing Association champion) would get stopped because nobody would recognize him."

Triple crown winners aren't all known

For 25 years the sport of racing went without a triple crown winner.

The inference was clear: Instead of improving the breed, we were dispersing the breed. We foal about 20,000 race horses a year but couldn't get one who could win three races in a row. We were breeding a pack of plating horses with airs. Delusions of grandeur.

common as homers in baseball or 66s in golf?

"Actually, we've had lots of triple crown winners in the past. Don't look for them in the record books but they're there. You take the 1920 triple crown winner, Man o' War. What's that you say? Man o' War never ran in the Kentucky Derby? Well, that's true. But let me ask you this: If he had to you doubt for a minute he would have won? Man o' War won the Preckness easily and won the Belmont by 20 lengths. So when you say only eight horses won the triple crown prior to 1972, you have to put an asterisk in there for Big Red."

In 1931, Twenty Grand won the derby and the Belmont. In the Preckness he was beaten by a horse that he had run right away from by seven lengths in Kentucky - Mate. Now hear this from the Racing Form charts of the day: "Twenty Grand, badly bumped and knocked off stride at the clubhouse turn, recovered gamely, went up on the inside again, was then again blocked by his stablemate, Surf Bore, at the head of the stretch, and then responding gamely under punishment, was wearing down the winner at the end."

So Twenty Grand was a triple crown winner with any kind of racing luck - if he hadn't been asked to run the race practically on his knees.

The Secretariat broke the drought in 1973. And now look at us. For the first time in history we've had back-to-back crown winners. It's practically raining triple crown winners. There in six years is no record (the boys had four in eight) but it's a deluge compared to the past quarter-century.

What has happened? Has the breed finally improved? Are we going to get an annual triple crown winner? Will they become as Graville was probably a triple crowner in 1936. He lost his rider in the derby, he lost the Preckness by a nose coming through heavy traffic and he won the Belmont.

Blanchet in 1940 was second in the derby but ran a trip in which his route took him through parts of Indiana and Southern Ohio on the way to the finish but he won the Preckness and the Belmont easily.

Does anyone seriously think Native Dancer was not a triple crown winner? Roughed up and eased back in the Kentucky Derby, he just missed catching Dan Star at the wire. Dan Star ran down the track to Native Dancer in the Preckness and declined the issue in the Belmont.

The years 1954 and 1955 pose a dilemma. The California horses, Delermine and Swaps, won their derbies and then skipped the other crown races to come back to Hollywood Park. In 1955, Nashua, second in the derby to Swaps, went on to win the Preckness in record time and the Belmont and then beat Swaps in a match race that summer (in the slow-flight time of 2:04 1/5).

In 1957, Tim Tam won the derby and the Preckness and then finished second in the Belmont on a broken leg. If he stays sound, he wins eased up.

In 1972, Riva Ridge won the derby and Belmont but lost the Preckness in the mud to Bee Bee Bee.

In 1974, one of the most overlooked and underrated horses of his generation, Little Current, ran away and hid from his company in the Preckness and the Belmont, winning each by seven lengths. The derby that year was a 23-horse nightmare, so to speak, that looked more like an Indian raid than a horse race. Little Current was 17th after a mile in that posse but passed 12 horses in the quarter-mile to finish a closing fifth and probably the best in the race.

Bold Forbes could have won all three races for Laz Barerra two years ago but the riders rode the Preckness as if it was a sprint race at Rudolph. He won his derby and Belmont with ease.

So the breed is not improving all that much. You need a great horse to win the triple crown. But you also need to be the kind of a guy who draws ease, throws sevens and is standing at the right corner when opportunity comes by.

Because, even when you do everything right you have to hope some hot dog wrapper doesn't come blowing across the horse's nose in the stretch. Or that some jockey doesn't stand up in the stirrups at the eighth pole.

Fidrych undergoes new arm examinations

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The Detroit Tigers announced Wednesday that Mark "The Bird" Fidrych, who has been sidelined with a sore arm since April 17, was admitted to Lenox Hospital in New York Tuesday for tests and possible treatment.

The Tigers said Fidrych, the AL Rookie of the Year in 1976, was to return to Detroit with their derbies and then skipped the other crown races to come back to Hollywood Park.

Fidrych was sent to New York by the team to be examined by Dr. Maurice Cowen, the Yankees' team physician who was successfully treated Yankee pitcher Don Gullett for a similar ailment.

Owens retires

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Veteran Washington Redskins defensive back Big Owens announced his retirement Wednesday.

Owens, 35, was traded to Dallas Cowboys. He played 154 consecutive games between 1966 and 1976. His 36 career interceptions are a team record.

A's end Texas streak

OAKLAND (UPI) — Mike Edwards' single with two outs in the 15th inning Wednesday night scored pinch-runner Bob Picciolo from second base with the run that gave the Oakland A's a 2-1 victory over Texas and snapped the Rangers' seven-game winning streak.

Wayne Gross started the winning rally by beating out a hit behind second. Picciolo ran for him and made it to second on a sacrifice by Jim Esian. After Glenn Burke walked and Joe Wallis flew out, Edwards grounded his winning hit into left and Picciolo beat Richie Zisk's weak throw home easily.

Brewers drop Yanks twice, vault into second place

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Jerry Augustine pitched a seven-inning and Sal Bando singled home the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning Wednesday night to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-2 triumph in the nightcap and a doubleheader sweep of the New York Yankees.

The Brewers won the opener 5-0 on Mike Caldwell's six-inning shutout and Ron Oglivie's three-run homer. The twin victory moved the Brewers ahead of New York into second place in the American League East, 8 1/2 games behind the Boston Red Sox.

Augustine struck out two and walked one in posting his fifth complete game and ninth victory against eight defeats.

The Brewers roughed up Larry McCall, making his first major league start, for two runs in the first inning on a double by Paul Molitor, a single by Don Money and a double by Dick Davis.

New York tied it in the third on a two-run single by Chris Chambliss, but the Brewers scored twice in the seventh to take a 4-2 lead. Sixto Lezcano singled, McCall was called for a balk and Bando delivered an RBI single. Buck Martinez doubled home Bando for the second run.

The Brewers added three runs in the eighth off reliever Ken Clay on an RBI single by Lezcano and a two-run single by Robby Yount.

In the opener, Caldwell struck out five and walked one in boosting his record to 8-5. Milwaukee singled him to a 2-0 lead with the third off-thrower Dick Tidrow, 3-6.

San Francisco (UPI) — Barry Lutz pitched a seven-inning and the San Francisco Giants won a 7-2 triumph in the nightcap and a doubleheader sweep of the New York Yankees.

The Giants won the opener 5-0 on Mike Caldwell's six-inning shutout and Ron Oglivie's three-run homer. The twin victory moved the Brewers ahead of New York into second place in the American League East, 8 1/2 games behind the Boston Red Sox.

Augustine struck out two and walked one in posting his fifth complete game and ninth victory against eight defeats.

Tribe, Tigers split
CLEVELAND (UPI) — Andre Thornton, hitless in his previous 10 trips to the plate, singled home Rick Manning with the winning run in the sixth inning Wednesday night to give the Cleveland Indians a 2-1 victory and a doubleheader split with the Detroit Tigers.

The Tigers parlayed a pair of run-scoring singles by Ron Lyle and four double plays into a 4-3 victory over the Indians in the opener with reliever John Hiller picking up his eighth save.

San Francisco (UPI) — Barry Lutz pitched a seven-inning and the San Francisco Giants won a 7-2 triumph in the nightcap and a doubleheader sweep of the New York Yankees.

The Giants won the opener 5-0 on Mike Caldwell's six-inning shutout and Ron Oglivie's three-run homer. The twin victory moved the Brewers ahead of New York into second place in the American League East, 8 1/2 games behind the Boston Red Sox.

Augustine struck out two and walked one in posting his fifth complete game and ninth victory against eight defeats.

Dodgers 3, Braves 2
ATLANTA (UPI) — Ron Cey drilled his second three-run homer in two games and Bum Hooton, Charlie Hough and Terry Fanter combined on a six-inning Wednesday night to pace the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 3-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Cey's homer, his 10th, came in the third inning off 1958er Phil Niekro, 9-9, who went the distance and gave up only three hits. With one out, Bill Russell singled and stole second.

San Francisco (UPI) — Barry Lutz pitched a seven-inning and the San Francisco Giants won a 7-2 triumph in the nightcap and a doubleheader sweep of the New York Yankees.

The Giants won the opener 5-0 on Mike Caldwell's six-inning shutout and Ron Oglivie's three-run homer. The twin victory moved the Brewers ahead of New York into second place in the American League East, 8 1/2 games behind the Boston Red Sox.

Giants, Padres split
SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Dave Winfield hit a two-run homer in the first inning and pinch-hitter Jerry Turner drove in two more runs with a bases-loaded single in the sixth Tuesday night, lifting the San Diego Padres to a 4-1 victory over San Francisco in the second game of a doubleheader after the Giants won the opener 4-2.

Winfield's homer, his 14th, came with Fernando Gonzalez aboard on a fielder's choice. In the sixth, San Diego led the bases, San Oscar Gamble, who had four hits in the game, singled, Gene Tenace doubled and Willie Williams walked intentionally. Randy Jones hit his seventh loss in decisions. Barr pitched 7 2/3 strong innings as the Giants took a 3-0 lead after four innings and held on to win. Moffitt took over for Barr in the eighth and retired the final four batters to gain his fifth save.

San Francisco (UPI) — Barry Lutz pitched a seven-inning and the San Francisco Giants won a 7-2 triumph in the nightcap and a doubleheader sweep of the New York Yankees.

Phillies 7, Expos 5
MONTREAL (UPI) — Garry Maddox drove home three runs, including a two-run homer during a seven-inning, to slice the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-7 victory Wednesday night over the Montreal Expos.

Expos' rookie star, Men Schaezeder held the Phillies scoreless through the first six innings and was leading, 5-0, after consecutive double plays by Warren Cromartie and Tony Perez in the first inning. But in the seventh, reliever Mike Garman took over for Montreal and gave up three runs in the bottom of the seventh.

San Francisco (UPI) — Barry Lutz pitched a seven-inning and the San Francisco Giants won a 7-2 triumph in the nightcap and a doubleheader sweep of the New York Yankees.

The Giants won the opener 5-0 on Mike Caldwell's six-inning shutout and Ron Oglivie's three-run homer. The twin victory moved the Brewers ahead of New York into second place in the American League East, 8 1/2 games behind the Boston Red Sox.

Lopez takes week off from practice

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (UPI) — A sunburned Nancy Lopez arrived Wednesday for the July-13 Mayflower LPGA Classic at Harbour Trees Golf Course smarting from a poor showing last week and weary from media pressure. The sports world's newest superstar said she had not touched a golf club since last weekend's tourney at Hershey, Pa., in which she finished 18 strokes behind winner Pat Bradley. Although the loss brought her five-tourney winning streak to an end, Lopez told reporters last weekend's finish relieved some of the pressure she had been feeling. Hordes of reporters had been traveling on the LPGA circuit since her winning streak began during which time she won more than $160,000. "I was mentally tired last week," she said. "My schedule was so tight with interviews and things that I didn't find time to concentrate. I guess I haven't even had time to think about what I've done." The 21-year-old New Mexico native said she originally planned to skip the Mayflower Classic but a friend talked her into it. But she said she won't participate in next week's tourney at Wheeling, W. Va. "I know when I need a rest and I think I need one now," she said. "I did get some rest yesterday, just sitting by a swimming pool and signing autographs. I even got sunburned." Despite Lopez's loss at Hershey, tourney sponsors are hoping for 150,000 fans during the three days of the Mayflower Classic. That would be a 500 percent increase over last year's turnout. Lopez's success has put the rest of the LPGA touring pros in obscurity for the present but she feels it has been good for the ladies circuit. "The galleries that have come out to watch have not only seen me play but they've seen the other girls too and I think they're impressed," she said. "I feel like every one of the players is my friend. They judge me as a person, not as a golfer and I judge them the same way." Lopez, who classified herself as a "veteran rookie," said she's hoping to win this weekend's tourney "but my biggest goal right now is to win the U.S. Open," which will be held July 20-23 at the Country Club of Indianapolis. "I'd really like to win that tournament. But something passed through my mind this morning — about Tom Watson never winning a U.S. Open even though he won so many other tourneys," she mused. "But that's a terrible thought. I won't think about it any more."

Schnitzer to fight NHL

HOUSTON (UPI) — Houston Aeros owner Kenneth Schnitzer flew home Wednesday from three days of talks with National Hockey League officials, and the team immediately called a news conference for Thursday morning. Chief among topics to be discussed will be Schnitzer's efforts at the NHL Board of Governors meeting this week to persuade NHL owners to allow the move of the NHL Colorado Rockies to Houston. Most of the discussions at the NHL meetings centered on the NHL's possible acceptance of four World Hockey Association teams other than Houston into the NHL next season. No merger was made. It was not known how the board's decision affected Schnitzer's plan. He was unavailable for comment. Rockies' President Jack Vickers, upset over a lease disagreement with Denver city officials, said last weekend he was seriously considering moving the team to Houston. Schnitzer was prepared to make the announcement of the move Monday, according to an informed source.

Remy happy to be steady influence in Boston infield

BOSTON (UPI) — Jerry Remy, one of baseball's better base stealers, has always been a wanted man in Boston. Now that the Red Sox finally got behind him, he hopes they won't let him go.

The swift second baseman may not be the most celebrated of the many acquisitions made by the Red Sox in the off-season — nine new faces on a team which won 97 games last year. But he has provided stability to the Red Sox infield with his defense and added a new dimension on offense.

"Remy has been a man we have wanted for a long time," says Manager-Don Zimmer. "He's been a big man for us. We were lucky enough to get him without really hurting our ball club."

Remy, 25, came to the Red Sox in a Dec. 8 trade for Don Aase and other considerations, which turned out to be the money needed to sign free agent Rick Miller. The infielder spent three seasons with the Angels and captained the squad last year.

Remy said he was upset he did not receive a "courtesy call" from Angels General Manager Buzzy Bavasi, who dealt him to Boston.

"You'd think after three years they'd say 'thanks' or something like that. But I found out about it from my agent (Jerry Kusnitzin). It wouldn't have happened that way if the old general manager (Harry Dalton) was still there. I'd probably still be there," Remy says.

"But I enjoyed California, very much. I was fortunate to come here and he with a contender, but it looks like the Angels will be contending too. But now that the Red Sox got me, let's hope they hold on to me for awhile. I'd like to finish my career here," he says.

Remy's speed was a major factor in the acquisition because the team is top heavy with home-run hitters and short on-swiftness. Remy stole 110 bases in his three seasons at California. He has not been in his running as much this year (15 stolen bases) but he has the green light to go whenever he pleases.

"Base stealing is not that much of a necessity with this club because of the hitters behind me. As long as we win without stealing, I don't care. That's only a part of my game. If it were the other part, I would be upset," he says.

Remy, a .258 career hitter, is off to his start at the plate this year. He is batting .300 through the first 73 games and had an eight-game hitting streak. He attributes his fast track to his new home and teammates.

"I just feel like a better hitter. Fenway is a park for hitters and on this team, you're surrounded by hitters. I guess it rubs off. I'm just trying to avoid a long slump at this point," he says.

Remy's other asset is his defense, though some were quick to condemn him when he had some early season troubles in the field.

"One day I made a couple of bad plays and I was labeled a bad defensive player. But we've been turning a lot of double plays this year and I'm happy with my defensive play," he says.

"Boston hasn't improved that much this year, except for one area — second base," says Yankee manager Billy Martin. "Remy's a big key to that ballclub and to their success."

The trade also meant a homecoming for Remy, raised in Somerset, Mass.

"It's nice to be back home and my family will get to see me play more often now. I've always wanted to be part of a winner and it looks like that's what we've got here. It makes it more fun to come to ballpark when you're winning."

Munson suspended for three games

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Yankees, already reeling from injuries and the fast-moving Boston Red Sox, suffered another blow Wednesday when catcher Thurman Munson was suspended for three games.

Munson received a telegram from American League president Lee MacPhail Tuesday night informing him of the suspension as a result of bumping umpire Jir McKean in Detroit last week.

The Yankees, who played a doubleheader with the Milwaukee Brewers Wednesday night following a 6-4 14-inning game over the Red Sox early Wednesday morning (the game ended at 12:15 a.m. EDT), called up catcher Mike Heath from West Haven of the Eastern League to replace Munson.

"The Yankees' star catcher, who may also be hit with a small fine, went to his home in Ogle to be with his family. 'It's the first time I've lost my temper all season and see what happens,'" commented Munson.

A spokesman for the Yankees said the incident was "cut and dried." The team already is under-manned because of injuries to centerfielder Mickey Rivers, second baseman Willie Randolph and shortstop Bucky Dent.

Watson believes good weather key to winning western open

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — Tom Watson had an eye on the weather Wednesday because it could have major effect on his effort to repeat Western Open champion and claim his third Western title in five years.

Watson, a three-time tournament victor this year and the pro tour's leading money winner with earnings of $211,379, hoped for sunny skies during the four-day, $225,000 event, which begins Thursday at Butler National Golf Club.

"If the fairways get real wet," he said, "it's difficult to play the course. The ball sits down and you get flyers and I don't like to hit flyers into these greens that are hard to hold."

Wet conditions also would hamper efforts to put backspin on the approaches to bite and hold the greens longer. But the same difficulty could arise in the longer-than-usual rough.

"If you're in the fairway, you can spin the ball," Watson said. "If you're in the rough, you can't and it's hard to hold the greens. You won't get spin out of clover either. You just don't know what the ball is going to do."

Watson could find playing conditions favorable, although the course was somewhat soggy due to a heavy rain Sunday and fairly heavy downpours both Monday and Tuesday morning. But the long-range weather forecast indicated a possibility of showers late Thursday and possibly late Saturday, perhaps not enough to force a change in tactics.

Watson believed that the U.S. Open Champion Andy North and Hale Irwin, who won at Butler in the 1975 Western, along with himself could be favorites in the field. All have good track records on the course.

Watson won in 1974 with 227 and last year with 283. Irwin's winning score in 1975 was 283. North, while not a Western winner, has been leader or co-leader on various days in past tournaments.

"Andy is good on tough courses," Watson said. "I think we was tied for the lead after 54 holes last year, and Irwin has proved he can play this course well."

Five of the top 10 money winners — Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Gary Player, Hubert Green and Lon Hinkle — are not in the field of 153 Western Open competitors. Nicklaus, Trevino, Player and Hinkle did not enter and Green scratched, saying he was not playing "well enough" to entice people to pay "to see me play."

Another casualty was J.C. Snead, who finished tied for second behind North in the U.S. Open. Snead fell off a hay wagon at home in Arkansas Saturday and broke his wrist. The injury will keep him sidelined for at least six weeks.

Assault charge filed

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A man who allegedly smashed a beer bottle on the head of Los Angeles Dodgers' outfielder Reggie Smith Saturday night was charged Wednesday with battery and assault with a deadly weapon.

Smith said he was approached in the Dodger Stadium parking lot by two men after Saturday night's loss to the Cincinnati Reds. He told police the men asked for his autograph and when he refused one of them smashed the bottle on his head while another broke the windshield of his car.

Smith required no medical attention.

Javelin best set

HELSINKI (UPI) — East German javelinier Wolfgang Hanisch set a world season best with 289 feet Wednesday at the XII World Games at Helsinki's Olympic Stadium.

With his strong showing Wednesday Hanisch, of East Berlin, brings a javelin for the European Championships in Prague this fall.

"My technique is more stable now. I throw much more — how much is my special secret," Hanisch said. "I am psychologically stimulated by the fact this is a European Championships year."

Sportsmen face closure of sheep lands

By DOUG TULLIS
Times-News sports writer.

TWIN FALLS — Sportsmen around the state may run into this sign this fall as they venture into the field to get their elk or deer or to hunt birds. The sign and the possible closure of some two million acres of private land is an attempt to urge sportsmen to put pressure on the Department of Interior.

The Idaho Wool Growers Association is now in the process of initiating the closure to the dismay of Fish and Game officials and sportsmen alike.

"They don't like what we're doing and neither do we," Idaho Wool Growers Executive Committee member Keith Noh commented. "We don't want to penalize them (the Fish and Game Department) or the sportsmen," he added.

The closure could result in difficulty of sportsmen to get to open areas of public lands to hunt or fish and the legalities of the closure are yet to be completely defined but according to Noh, the Wool Growers are going ahead with the plans.

"The Association is circulating a letter explaining the legalities of the thing and the members should have them soon," Noh said.

The closure will be used to spur sportsmen to write letters to members of the Idaho congressional contingent asking that steps be taken to control the amount of damage to sheep flocks by coyotes.

"In other states and in other times, the closures have been very effective," Noh said in pressure on the senators and representatives through letters from home.

The idea of the closure began in the early 1970's when the federal government banned the use of a poison called 1080 for controlling coyotes. That ban left sheep raisers with no effective means of controlling the coyote population, Noh asserted.

"We want a commitment from the Department of Interior to stay in animal damage control and properly fund it and slash it with professionals and the proper equipment," Noh said.

The disagreement between the Interior Department and the wool growers involves the lack of research to prove or disprove that 1080 can be safely used to control coyotes.

"Right now there has been no evidence of problems from using 1080 for coyote control," Noh said, but others have claimed that it damages the environment and is dangerous to other animals.

Members of some environmental groups have testified that the poison is unsafe and should not be used. As a result, the poison was withdrawn from use by the Environmental Protection Agency.

However, Noh said the Oregon Environmental Council and members of other environmental groups have agreed the poison should be studied, not just banned.

Because of the ban, the Wyoming Wool Growers Association has filed suit to block the EPA move. That case is still in the federal courts in that state, but Noh says the suit claims there was lack of evidence that 1080 was dangerous and that the EPA acted capriciously in making their decision.

The root of the problem is that the Department of Interior has refused to fund a study to determine whether the toxic substance is safe for use against coyotes.

"Our position is to settle this issue once and for all," Noh said of the Wool Growers request for a study.

A committee was formed to study the problem and make recommendations and their first recommendations do not include a study of the 1080. A second set of recommendations should be forthcoming this week.

All he has is second hand information but from what he heard, the recommendations are not substantially changed from the earlier ones," Noh said.

Some of the recommendations included a ban on grazing in areas with concentrations of coyotes and adding additional men to sheep herds to watch for coyotes. Noh said all of these means would be too costly to make sheep raising profitable.

When asked whether the sportsmen helped to control the coyote population, Noh said he didn't know exactly what part they played in keeping the animals in control.

Idaho Fish and Game Regional Conservation Educator Stu Murrell said the closure appears to be self defeating in that hunters which would help control the coyotes would be kept from using the land.

Noh said that although hunters and trappers help to control the population, the biggest problems occurred in the high country where there is cover for the coyotes.

"The program of gunning them from the air has been very effective but it's impossible in the high country. Besides, the coyotes usually feed in the evening or at night and it's hard to get them then, if at all," he said.

One possible way to help control the population is a bounty system but Noh said that is not a good alternative. "Bounty hunters tend to take the easiest animals and don't go after the hard ones," he said.

"As a group, we are not in favor of it," Noh said the coyote problem is very spotty and varies from area to area but damage to flocks ranges from four percent of the lambs to one percent of the adult animals killed. He stressed that those figures were averages and the loss of four percent of the lambs could be disastrous to small operators.

"Only about 100 of the 1200 or so members of the Wool Growers Association are large herd owners but the loss of three or four animals by someone who has only 10 head could be disastrous," he stressed.

The eventual outcome if action is not taken to control coyotes will be the selling of much of the privately owned land and Noh said that could be disastrous for sportsmen, the Fish and Game Department and the wool growers.

"One wool grower in the Bitterroot valley of Montana was not allowed to use poisons to control the coyotes and as a result, he sold all 6,000 acres of his ranch. The valley became 600 10 acre subdivisions."

A final decision as to whether 1080 will be studied and perhaps used again will likely be made by Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus near the end of July and then is when the Wool Growers will make a firm decision whether to close their lands or not.

While the wool growers wait for the Andrus' decision, members of the organization are gearing up for the closure. How effective it will be is one serious question that may be answered if the closure comes about.

Noh said there was one area in the state where farmers closed their lands to bird hunting and the law enforcement officers and the courts cooperated with the farmers.

"We can put it into effect but it remains to be seen how effective it will be," Noh added.

The pamphlets being passed out by the Wool Growers Association state that they are asking for sportsmen's help in getting the federal government to act by writing Idaho congressmen, senators, the governor, the Secretary of the Interior and the President himself.

Where it will end up neither sportsmen, nor wool growers nor Fish and Game officials would answer but the closure could take effect September 1, 1978.

Permit deadline tomorrow

BOISE — Hunters wishing to apply for permits for special hunts must have their applications in the mail by tomorrow night or hand delivered to the Department of Fish and Game office in Boise by closing time tomorrow to be considered for any of the drawings for special hunts.

Department of Fish and Game officials expect some 90,000 or more application cards to be received by the deadline.

The deadline for the applications is June 30 and those mailed in and postmarked later than that date will be discarded by the department.

The application cards will be processed through a computer and those without the hunt numbers will be discarded. The applicants will be checked to determine whether they have a valid Idaho resident or non-resident hunting license. Those that don't also get discarded.

This year, only one application per species is allowed and those successful for a permit in 1978 or 1977 will not be eligible for the same species this year.

Applicants for 1978 bighorn sheep permits cannot apply for a controlled hunt permit for any other species. Also, hunters that were successful in taking a bighorn sheep since 1974 are ineligible to apply this year.

Other regulations that will weed out improper applicants include hunters who have killed a moose in an Idaho controlled hunt and are not eligible for a moose permit again and non-residents are not eligible for moose permits.

After the weeding out process has been completed, the applications will be fed into a computer for the drawing which will take place August 1. Successful applicants will be notified by mail by the department.

Complete hunt regulations and applications are available at most sporting goods stores throughout the state.

Commission considering hunts

BOISE — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission will meet in Boise July 10 to consider recommendations for the 1978-79 hunting season, beginning at 1:30 p.m. at the department's headquarters building, 609 South Walnut Street, Boise.

No change in seasons or bag limits are proposed by the Department.

Public comment is invited at the afternoon session, beginning at 1:30 p.m. at the department's headquarters building, 609 South Walnut Street, Boise.

A vacation trip that is close to home and provides fishing and something for everyone in the entire family

by Swen

For all of us with that weeks vacation, that isn't long enough to go to Big Sky land and too short to just waste pointing the house, I have a super-quick trip that allows all members of the family to come home happy.

1st Day: North on U.S. 93 to Magic Reservoir. The fishing is usually good early in the season and late fall. For two days fishing, water skiing and lying around. Cabins available and camp sites. Meals and party time for adults in any of the three resorts on the lake. Boats can be rented.

2nd or third day: takes you north to the Wood River south of Ketchum and Holey. This is one of my favorite fly fishing streams in the middle summer months or late fall. Early fishing will be slow. The water should clear in the section of Wood River about the middle of June. The river flows parallel to U.S. 93. It's pools and riffles produce large cutts, stone, and mayfly hatches. Actually the "middle" is the trout favorite food, but if you don't know no fly matches the middle. Most times the trout just dip the surface when feeding on the middle.

This problem may be finding a place to stay. There are few campgrounds in the area, but motels are available.

3rd day: Travel north past Ketchum and fish the upper reaches of the Big Wood. Not many lunkers here, but the kids and mother will have a ball. Better than the lower Big Wood area. Here again, I prefer flies. But my wife has caught more and larger fish on a small spinner and a worm. Good campgrounds and facilities available.

4th day: Cross over Golconda Summit and head for the upper reaches of the Main Salmon River and the Alpine lakes that have streams flowing into the Salmon River. The extreme upper reaches of the Salmon will produce only small Dolly Varden trout and only Rainbow trout that may have been placed there by the Fish and Game.

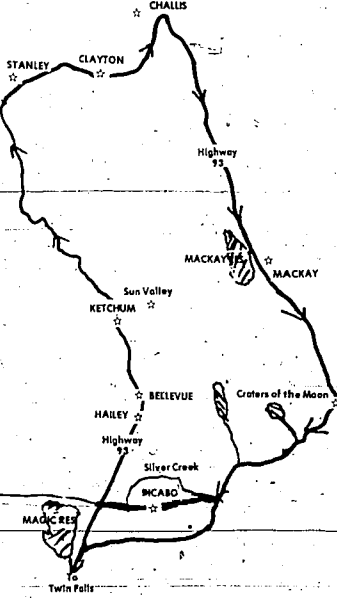

The first lake that will produce some fine limits of 12 inch rainbow is Alburno Lake. Alburno seems to be the best producer for rainbow of all the lakes in the area, but does get more pressure.

Next you have Pait Lake. This lake seems barren at times. I suggest you fish early in the morning and late at night to catch the fish in this lake.

The showplace of all the lakes in the area is Redfish Lake, just north on U.S. 93 from Pait Lake. All facilities are available. My suggestion is to take your boat to the upper part of the lake where the stream flows into the lake. You must get in the area early in the morning because this is also the favorite of many. Trailing it slowly, try drifting with bait.

If the kids and mom don't want to go fishing, there is hiking and horse-back riding in some of the most beautiful country in the world. Shelter and clothing must be suitable for elevations of 6000 to 8000 feet. Last July while hiking to high lakes in this area, I was in rain and snow for 6 days.

During your stay at Redfish Lake, I suggest a visit to Stanley Lake. The view is majestic, even if the fishing leaves a lot to be desired. If you must fish, I suggest the inlet of Stanley Lake, along where it meets the lake.

reservoir can be windy at times, so head for shore if your boat is small. Some of the larger fish can be caught in the stream (Big Lost) below Magic reservoir. I suggest that only the larger kids and dad fish this area. You will need worms or hip boots. Also, the bugs are back. So take a repellent.

7th day: Head for home via the Arco-Craters of the Moon National Monument. If you have rushed the trip you are in luck. On the highway from Arco to Shoshone you will have two reservoirs and one blue ribbon stream to fish.

Hollowy between Carey and Craters of the Moon is the road to Fish Creek Reservoir. Within the city limits of Carey is the road to the Little Wood Reservoirs. Both have good catch records. Fish creek produces larger fish, but Little Wood will produce more.

Between Carey and the main highway 93 is Silver Creek. Much of the stream is fly fishing only, but in the few places where cutts type of fishing is allowed, the whole family should be able to catch a fish.

Yes pooped? Should be!

Hikers warned to watch for snakes

MAGIC VALLEY — The chances that a hiker will encounter a snake while hiking in areas of southern Idaho vary from zero to 100 percent, depending on where the hiking is done.

Since there is only one species of snake in the state that can cause serious damage to humans, hiking lakes on an easy, enjoyable air not found in other areas with much higher concentrations of dangerous snakes.

Idaho desert areas have their fair share of rattlesnakes, though, and the Magic Valley is no exception.

The foot hills of the South Hills are prime habitat for the rattlers and campers in the campgrounds at the bottom of Rock Creek Canyon see the snakes quite often.

Another area that contains plenty of the snakes is the Bruneau Canyon in the southwest part of the state.

According to CSI Assistant Professor of Biology Don Purder, the elevation of those two areas and the closeness of water and food make them ideal for the snakes to survive. Past the first few forks in Rock Creek Canyon and in the higher elevations south of the Bruneau Canyon, there are relatively few of the rattlers.

The snakes do perform an ecological function in that they eat mice, rats and other small rodents and help to keep the population down but since they are dangerous to man, they are considered a pest.

The philosophy the rattlesnakes should be killed when observed is wrong, according to one Boise State University professor. "It's their habitat, and we are the one who are intruding."

That philosophy doesn't quite set right for the livestock men who travel the country and have expressed concern that the cutting could hit an artery which could be considered intruders into man's environment.

The one advantage about the rattlesnakes is that they cannot take heat or cold and as a result they tend to get out of the hot sun and stay in shelter during the hot part of the days during the summer. Since they hunt mostly in the early mornings and the late evenings and dark, they present a smaller hazard to humans.

A manual put out by the U.S. Department of the Navy has some very good advice for their troops and that is to avoid going barefoot in the morning and evenings.

That advice is sound and could help careless hikers also prevent some snakebites.

While the bite of a rattlesnake is dangerous and should avoid, it is taken lightly by the victim. One of the less toxic venoms when compared to others around the world.

An example of this is the venom of the beaked sea snake which has enough power in one strike to kill 10-15 normal sized men. The rattlesnake bite, on the other hand, can kill but it takes a much larger dose and many times, the rattler will not inject the total amount of venom into the man.

Some herpetologists have found that the rattlers inject from 25-75 percent of available venom into a man when bitten.

According to the Navy manual, the best advice for bites from the species of rattlesnakes in Idaho is to try to get the venom out of the wound as soon as possible after being bitten. That includes cutting between the fang marks and using suction for at least 30 minutes after being bitten.

Some medical authorities have questioned the cutting and suction treatment and have expressed concern that the cutting could hit an artery which could be more fatal than the bite. However, several studies have shown that such treatment is effective when done as soon after the strike as possible.

Other sage advice given in the manual is to remain calm and to use a tourniquet to slow the advance of the venom.

Most hikers should have a good snake bite kit with them when hiking in snake country and should know how to use them.

While snake bites by rattlesnakes is not uncommon in the state, there are few reported incidents and since 1949, there have been no deaths here due to snakebites.

Most of the bites occur when a snake is surprised. Rattlesnakes do not go after men and will usually move away from humans. Hikers should use the same tactic when confronted by a snake.

Although the Navy manual suggests that the offending snake be captured and killed to determine the type, Idaho has only one species of rattlesnake and that bit of heretics is not usually necessary.

The next step is to get the person that has been bitten to a doctor as soon as possible but not by having him or her walk. That activity can increase the spread of the venom and hurt more than help.

There are plenty of suggestions based on folklore on how to handle snakebites but the best way is to seek prompt medical advice and if needed a snake antivenin can be given to counteract the poison.

As a point of interest, the Navy manual, entitled "Poisonous Snakes of the World," contains more information than can be absorbed by most people but it is interesting for reference on snakes from throughout the world. It is usually available at local libraries or through the Department of the Navy.

Buhl oldtimer believes in magnetic healing

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

BUHL — A.B. Fairchild of Buhl says he has successfully treated many persons given up to die by their doctors through his practice of magnetic massage and manipulation.

While this type of natural therapeutic healing through touch is not accepted in traditional medical circles — and Fairchild says he was “closed down” by the Idaho Law Enforcement Dept. years ago — there is more emphasis on the importance of touch in healing today, according to a local nurse.

Jean Machack, longtime Buhl nurse, said Fairchild “had quite a following” and she “never once heard anything bad about him.”

The now 83-year-old Buhl man learned the healing skill from Dr. Otto Vosika of Kimberly, who was the father of F.V. Vosika, currently a Kimberly chiropractor.

But while Fairchild claims the satisfaction of knowing he helped a considerable number of people regain their health, he never made much money, let alone earn a living, at his “practice.”

“I never charged more than $1.50,” he said.

Sometimes he didn’t even get that. Sitting in his little dugout outside his home where he operates a thriving night-crawler business, Fairchild told of a woman who came to him after she had been unsuccessfully treated at Mayo Clinic.

He told her and her husband if she regained her health after six months of his magnetic treatments they could give him a new car since the man was in the car business. If not, he would not charge them a cent. According to Fairchild, the woman did regain her health as the result of his treatments, but he has yet to see the new car.

The Buhl oldtimer, who was born near Oakley Nov. 2, 1894, became interested in the field of magnetic massage and manipulation when he worked for a farmer who was a magnetic healer. He was more impressed after the late Dr. Vosika used the same art on a bad shoulder Fairchild had suffered with for eight or 10 years.

“He treated me every night for one week in 1924 and in a week’s time he took all that (pain) out,” Fairchild said.

Like anyone who serves people, Fairchild has sometimes had intangible rewards money cannot buy.

“About 12 years ago he held a young man walked up to him and asked if he was “Dr. Fairchild.” Upon learning he was, the young man asked if he “remembered the little boy given up to die at Melon Valley.”

Fairchild did indeed recall sitting by the child’s bedside. He said he successfully treated several babies who had pneumonia. After he was forced to close the small offices he maintained in Jerome and Wendell, Fairchild continued to treat people out of his home both in Melon Valley and in Buhl until about 1950.

He no longer practices because “at my age you can’t have a lot of power. You run down just like a battery,” he chuckled.

But despite skepticism, Fairchild firmly believes in the validity of magnetic healing and predicts the “medical profession someday will come to (accept) it.” He wishes there was somebody here practicing it now.

Perhaps Fairchild’s interest in this type of therapy stemmed from a traumatic experience as a boy when he was nearly killed in a dynamite explosion.

He and three older brothers had found large powder cans, supposedly empty, which contractors had used to blast rocks while building Milner Dam.

The boys were throwing pieces of powder into a fire when a spark ignited a can of 20 pounds of black powder the contractor had discarded earlier because the powder had refused to come out.

The impact threw him about 30 feet and he was so severely burned in the incident, which occurred on Christmas Day when he was 9 years old, he claims the doctor gave him strychnine “because he figured I was a gooner.”

No one expected him to live, and he suffered pain and ill health for many years. His father, the late Seymour Fairchild, who was one of the early settlers in Melon Valley, worked with his son’s right leg for two years. Through this homebased physical therapy Fairchild was finally able to regain the use of the badly burned leg.

His parents came to Twin Falls in 1905 and his father drove one of the first “school wagons” during the 1905-06 school year.

The elder Fairchild and his sons soon developed a thriving business putting up the “prow-up” sheds that settlers had to have to claim the then cheap land promoters were so anxious to sell on the Twin Falls Trail.

Fairchild said they could put up one of the simple 10 by 14-foot structures which he described as a “tool shed with a one-way roof” in a day.

His dad also helped clear sagebrush from the streets in Buhl. By the time Fairchild was 17 years old his health had improved and he “hailed every yard of gravel used on the original Clear Lakes Bridge over the Snake River north of Buhl.

He takes issue with the fact the new span built a few years ago was named for Ken Curtis who, according to Fairchild, “did not even come here until 1929.”

“If that bridge was to be named after anyone it should be named after me since I hauled every bit of gravel for the original bridge with a four-horse team,” Fairchild said.

The Fairchild family moved to Melon Valley about 1910 and his father started raising the melons for which the area is well known.

Fairchild described the picturesque valley as “full of rattlesnakes, sagebrush and rabbits” at that time. Coyotes were plentiful and he recalls one morning finding five coyotes helping themselves to his father’s watermelon patch. They preferred only the ripe ones.

Fairchild only went to the fifth grade, for as he describes it, “in those days you had to work or starve.” His brief formal education was at the old Riverton School.

But his lack of formal education did not stop his inquisitive mind. He once studied “to be a detective” under a man in Pocatello but gave this up when he was told he “wouldn’t make a very good one.”

He farmed for some years in Melon Valley and “worked for wages.”

He and his wife, Bessie, moved to their present home in Buhl in 1948.

They had six children, one of whom was killed in the Korean War.

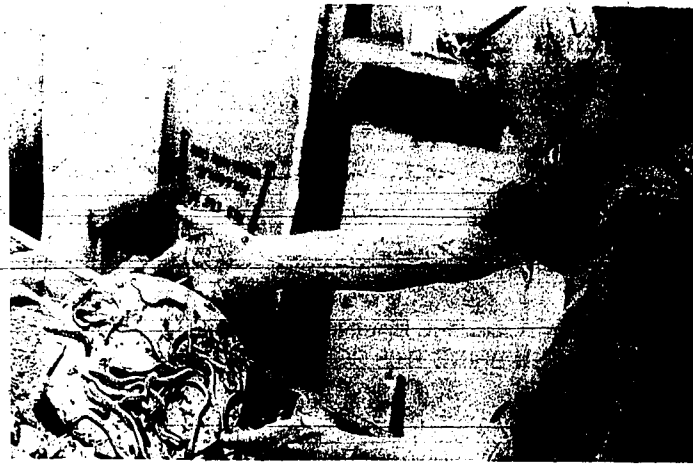

Their children include Esther Gaines, a registered nurse, of Marsing; Mona Small of Cortez, Colo.; Dale Fairchild of Tacoma, Wash.; Paul Fairchild, who lives across the street from his parents, and John F. Fairchild of Twin Falls.

Now in his third season of selling worms, Fairchild said it isn’t a big business “but it keeps you out of trouble.”

With his father’s little dog, Peanuts, whom he considers “the smartest dog in the world at his heels, Fairchild seems to have little trouble either keeping busy or staying “out of trouble.”

Reply given on disability income insurance query

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 116 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 45881. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I am 57 years old. I recently had an insurance salesman in my home to sell me a disability income insurance policy. Can you tell me anything about these policies? — A.F.

This type of health insurance helps to replace earnings lost because of physical disability. These policies provide coverage for accidents only; others cover both accident and sickness. Companies offer many kinds of disability income policies, which usually pay on a monthly basis. The amount of insurance an individual can purchase is generally a percentage of their income (60 percent of their gross income, for instance).

Heartline has available a book to help you in purchasing health insurance. This book covers Medicare supplements and regular health insurance and also contains a policy checklist. To order, send $1.50 to Heartline’s Guide to Health Insurance, P.O. Box 1193, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: My husband and I have been divorced for five years now. We were married for 16 years. He will be 62 years old in October 1978, and he will start drawing his Social Security benefits. Will the new law under Social Security allowing divorced wives to collect Social Security include me? — J.D.

Yes, this new law will include you. However, under the present law the wife must have been married for at least 20 years in order to claim benefits as the former wife of the wage earner. The 1977 amendments reduce the requirement to 10 years, effective for all months beginning after January 1, 1979, for applications made on or after Jan. 1, 1979. Many people have raised the question, however, of whether the amendment applied only to women who were divorced in January 1979 or later, so that persons who had been married for 10 years but, were divorced before then could not take advantage of the reduction. The Office of Policy and Regulations of the Social Security Administration has informed Heartline that this amendment will not be interpreted to exclude women divorced before 1978. So, regardless when you were married or divorced, as long as you were married for 10 years, you should apply for these benefits in January 1979.

HEARTLINE: I am 58 years old. I am a veteran of World War II and I presently have a 60 percent VA service-connected disability rating. Recently, I was admitted to a VA hospital for treatment of my service-connected disability. While hospitalized, I was given a temporary 100 percent disability rating. Will I retain this rating indefinitely? — B.J.

No. Normally you will be reduced to your previous disability rating when your convalescence is over. Your disability will be re-evaluated according to the hospital’s report, and you will be advised of any change in disability status.

HEARTLINE: My wife and I are 65 years old. We have been drawing Social Security for three years. We are planning to move to a state with a warm climate. If we move to a different state, will our Social Security benefits be affected? — N.B.

No. Regular Social Security retirement, disability and survivors benefits do not vary from state to state. You will continue to receive the same amount of benefits.

HEARTLINE: I am going to be 65 years old in September of this year, but I do not plan to retire at that time. I will continue to work until age 68. My company has a disability health insurance program. Do I have to take Medicare now or can I stay on my group plan? — K.F.

You do not have to take out Medicare when you turn age 65. However, you should make sure that your company’s insurance will still cover you after age 65. Many companies will not let you remain on the insurance plan after age 65, they will convert your major-medical plan to a Medicare supplement.

Regardless what the company does, you should sign up for the hospital portion of Medicare because it is free. The medical insurance portion requires a monthly premium (in July it will be $8.20). If you do not sign up for this at age 65, there is a 10 percent penalty for each year you could have signed up for it before that.

Heartline has a book available for people on Medicare who will be going on Medicare. This book gives a very easy to understand explanation of Medicare. To order, send $1.75 to Heartline’s Guide to Medicare, 116 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45881. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I am 63 years old, a widow living on my Social Security. I enjoy looking at the ads in magazines. I would like to order some of these articles, but I am afraid the company may not be reliable. Can you give me any ideas as to what to do? — K.R.

Ordering merchandise through the mail is a very convenient and inexpensive way to shop. And 90 percent of mail order companies are reliable, efficient and offer a good product. It is the other 2 percent to look out for. Here are some tips when shopping by mail.

1. Never send cash through the mail. Always use a check or money order so you can have a record of when you sent your order and when the company received it.

2. Make sure there is a guaranteed delivery date. If you are ordering for a special date, you want to make sure the item is received in time.

3. Find out the company’s policy on returns. If it is not mentioned in the ad, write the company first and ask what it is.

4. Beware of exaggerated claims on the product or price. If it seems too good to be true, it usually is.

5. Check out the company. If you do not know anything about them, do not hesitate to call the Better Business Bureau.

6. Keep a record on your order. Make sure you also keep the name and address of the company with which you are dealing.

7. Do not rely solely on the picture. Note the size, weight, color and contents. Be sure to include this along with the order number.

HEARTLINE: I am 64 years old. I have been drawing my Social Security widow’s benefits for the last four years. Do you know if we will get a raise in our benefits this year? — D.C.

Yes, there will be a raise in Social Security and Supplemental Security Income payments this year. These benefits will increase automatically by 6.5 percent beginning with the June 30 checks for SSI recipients and the July 3 checks for Social Security beneficiaries.

Under the law, Social Security and SSI checks increase automatically each year if the Consumer Price Index rises by 3 percent or more over specified measuring periods. Through this mechanism, the purchasing power of Social Security and SSI recipients is maintained despite inflation.

The average monthly Consumer Price Index rose by 6.5 percent from the first quarter of 1977 through the first quarter of 1978, which is the measuring period for the 1978 benefit increase. The increase requires an automatic 6.5 percent cost-of-living increase in Social Security and SSI payments. Previous cost-of-living increases were 8 percent in 1975, 6.4 percent in 1976 and 5.9 percent in 1977.

Heartline has written a guide to Social Security for those persons drawing Social Security or going to start who would like a better understanding of the Social Security program. To order, send $2.00 to Heartline, P.O. Box 1193, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I am 68 years old and I draw a VA check and a Social Security check. I have heard that the VA pays a clothing allowance. Do you know anything about this? — T.A.

There is a yearly $150 clothing allowance that is paid to many eligible veterans. To be eligible for this, the veteran must be receiving a service-connected disability benefit from the VA, and his disability must require the use of prosthetic or orthopedic appliances, including artificial limbs, braces, and wheel chairs which the VA determines to cause undue wear and tear on clothing. Veterans on this VA compensation roll receive the allowance automatically after their initial application. You can apply for this benefit at any VA office.

HEARTLINE: My husband is on Civil Service disability. If the Civil Service says his earning capacity is restored, how will this affect him? — N.J.

Even if an individual remains totally disabled, an annuitant whose earning capacity is restored before reaching age 60 will have the annuity discontinued. If earning capacity is restored, the annuity is continued temporarily (not to exceed one year), if reemployed in government service within the year, annuity stops upon reemployment. If the individual is not reemployed, the annuity stops at the expiration of the one year period.

Former resident weds in Corvallis

TWIN FALLS — Yvonne M. King, Portland, former Twin Falls resident, and David A. Gilbert, Corvallis, Ore., were married May 28 in the Good Samaritan Episcopal Church in Corvallis.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard King, Portland, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Gilbert, Corvallis.

Father Charles Neville performed the ceremony before large baskets of peach gâteaux, carnations, cream roses and yellow spider mums.

The bride wore a gown fashioned of imported swiss embroidery candlelight organly with a cathedral-length train. Her illusion cathedral-length veil was attached to an organly profile cap.

The bridal bouquet was composed of cream roses, miniature peach carnations and baby's breath.

Connie McIntyre, Twin Falls, was maid of honor and Mrs. Gary Irish, Boise, was matron of honor. Mrs. James Snyder and Mrs. Bill Nickleberry, both Portland and sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids.

Kali Irish, Boise, was flower girl and Allen Snyder, nephew, was ring bearer.

Randy Young, Portland, was best man and ushers were Douglas, Dru and Darren Gilbert, all brothers of the bridegroom.

A reception for the newlyweds was held at the Corvallis Country Club.

The dry flower arrangements for the bridesmaid bouquets and reception decorations were made by the bride's parents.

The bride attended Twin Falls High School and Boise State University.

The bridegroom attended Corvallis High School and Oregon State University.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID GILBERT

Delegate.

TWIN FALKS — Mrs. Robert S. Goss, of Twin Falls, is attending the Delta Gamma fraternity's 40th International convention June 25-30 in Dearborn, Mich.

She is province collegiate chairman for Idaho, Montana, eastern Washington and Alberta, Canada.

She will be among 600 delegates and visitors who will participate in the governing sessions and workshops directed toward special interests of alumnae chapters.

Relief Society not in favor of ERA

NAUVOO, III. (UPI) — The Relief Society, the foremost women's organization in the Mormon Church, supports equal opportunities for women but believes the Equal Rights Amendment is not the way to achieve them, the society's president says.

"We are concerned because equal rights and Title IX requiring colleges to provide equal educational funding for both men and women) have an adverse affect on the family," Barbara Smith said Tuesday.

Mrs. Smith spoke to reporters prior church ceremonies honoring women. A musical pageant was held Tuesday night and dedication ceremonies for a statutory park were held Wednesday.

Church President Spencer W. Kimball was to preside at the ceremonies at the site of the Relief Society's founding on March 17, 1842. Thirteen statues representing various aspects of a woman's life will be unveiled at the dedication.

Mrs. Smith said the Mormon Church supports equal pay, educational opportunities and equal protection under the law, but does not believe women should serve in combat roles during war.

Relief Society members studies various lessons on religion, homemaking, social relations and other topics. "We think some of the most important human relationships are those in our own home," she said.

THREE WILIS STRIKE A CLASSICAL POSE IN "GISELLE" ... performance planned July 20 in Twin Falls

Music club to sponsor ballet

TWIN FALLS — Western Ballet Productions will present the classic ballet "Giselle" at 8 p.m. July 20 in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium.

Sponsored by the Twin Falls Music Club, tickets are $4 and $2 and are on sale at the Music Center at both locations, downtown and Lywood, and at the door.

Call 423-5576, 733-2291 or 733-7949 for more information. First performed in Paris in 1841, this romantic ballet is the story of a tragic maiden, Giselle, and her love for Albrecht. After her death, she becomes a Will, a restless spirit that haunts the forests at night, seizing all males who have betrayed their sweethearts. Her love reaches beyond the grave to save her sweetheart in the beautiful "white" ballet of the second act. The famous "mad" scene is one of the highlights of the ballet.

Colorful costumes and a fully dressed stage all enhance the production.

Newhouse News Service WASHINGTON — The Census Bureau is making final preparations for a "new and improved" 1980 census.

Formal planning for the nationwide count of population and housing began as early as July 1, 1973, immediately following the wrap-up of 1970's census.

According to David L. Kaplan, assistant director for demographic census, changes will result in better coverage of the "hard-to-enumerate" population and in "faster" and more accurate counting than ever before.

The cooperation of the hard-to-enumerate population (people without a fixed residence or living where their residence might be, legally questioned) is of primary importance, according to Kaplan. Therefore, the Census Bureau has selected special "community service representatives" to promote respect and trust in the program.

"All information given to the census is confidential," said Kaplan. "Government agencies give information to us—we do not give information to them. Not even the President can get data on an individual."

Three "dress-rehearsal" programs have been set up by the bureau for the purpose of testing final materials and procedures. Two rehearsals already have taken place in the Richmond, Va., area and in Montezuma and La Plata counties in Colorado. In addition, a census will be taken in September, 1978, in Lower Manhattan in New York City.

Two methods are placed in taking the U.S. Census: the "mail-back" system where census takers call on households that have not sent back their questionnaires or have not filled out the forms completely; and "door-to-door" enumeration system where each household is requested to fill out and hold its questionnaires for pick-up by the census taker.

Don't do it yourself

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb, I read in your column about electrolysis. I am a woman of 40 and have shaved for 10 years. Six months ago I went to a doctor who does electrolysis. I went every week for four months. When I go every week it looks nice. I haven't gone now for three weeks and the hair has all come in again. I thought that electrolysis was to kill the roots and the hair would not grow back. I can't afford to keep going back. Now I would like to know if you would recommend this method described in the enclosed ad that you can use for electrolysis at home and do it yourself.

Dear Reader, No, I don't recommend a do-it-yourself project. If you have real electrolysis and the operator — physician or otherwise — does it properly the follicles should be permanently destroyed. The whole principle of electrolysis is to introduce an electric current of sufficient intensity long enough to destroy the hair follicle (root) of the hair. The trick is to do it just right without damaging the skin and causing scarring or unsightly blemishes that may persist. Some local reaction is not unusual and should be temporary.

The first treatment is not enough for any one area. Why? Because you can't see the smaller hairs or find the root of those that are resting or have had the shaft of hair removed by whatever means. As these sprout and are identified they can then be treated. A few treatments in a given area, though, should produce permanent results. If the area to be treated is large, then sections of it may have to be treated at different visits to complete the job.

The delicate balance between destroying the hair and damaging the skin requires a certain amount of skill and that is why I don't want you to do it yourself.

If you have a Depilatron procedure, the electrical current is delivered by touching the hair rather than with a fine needle. This will not remove the hair permanently as the current isn't that strong. The hair is removed but grows back again. Have a talk with your doctor about your treatments and if you are not satisfied call your local county medical society and discuss it with them. If you have had multiple treatments to the exact same area and it is electrolysis you are paying for something is amiss.

If you still can't get a reasonable result see a different dermatologist and he may recommend a competent trained individual to do the electrolysis for you. Many trained operators for this procedure are not physicians at all and the cost might be less.

I do think that for most people the place to start with the excess hair problem is with a dermatologist from your area. He will define the cause of the problem and will know the reliable operators in your area who can do proper electrolysis.

Those who are interested in keeping the hair on their heads and taking care of it can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for the Health Letter number 124, Your Hair and Its Care. Address your request to Dr. Lamb in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, Texas 78282. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

MR. AND MRS. JAMES SCHOETTGER

GOODING — Rebecca Kelly and James Schoettger were married June 3 in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church.

Parents of the couple are Eugene Kelly and Dorothy Kelly and Mr. and Mrs. Joan Schoettger, all Gooding. The bride wore her mother's wedding dress of ivory satin. Fingertip sleeves and tiny buttons down the back to the waist emphasized the long waited fashion. The seven-in satin train was long and circular. Her elbow-length illusion veil was attached to a beaded headband. Her bouquet was made of white roses, baby poms and the church was decorated with poms and large spider mums. Father James Shilnik performed the double-ring ceremony. Maid of honor was Nancy Kelly, Twin Falls, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Sharon Ryan, Spokane; Mrs. Patrick Furey, Moscow, and Mary Reed, Seattle.

Best man was Brad Stevens, Gooding, and Blair Shepard, McCall; John Giese, Gooding, and Mike Byce, Moscow, were groomsmen. Flower girl and ring bearer were Toni and Doug Clifford, Boise, cousins of the bride. Mrs. Dolores Robinson was organist as Karla Kinnison, Moscow, sang.

Allar boys were Joe Nelson and John Arkoosh. The guest book was attended by Lori Broadhead, Boise, Nancy Pierson, Jana Johnson and Jeanie Ryan attended the bride's table at the wedding reception held at the Gooding Country Club. Lonny Gunther provided music.

Special guests were Mrs. Frances Cold, Omaha, Neb., grandmother of the bridegroom, and Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Kelly, Gooding, grandparents of the bride. The bridegroom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner in Gooding the evening before the wedding. Mrs. Don Simis, Mrs. Tom Morrison and Mrs. Bill Oakley gave a shower for the bride at the Simis home. After a honeymoon trip to Canada the couple is at home in Gooding where the bridegroom is in business with his father and where the bride will teach school this fall.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag The unlucky expert had us in his clutches again. "Everything, except good things, happens to me," was his complaint.

We have to agree with him this time. The game was duplicate. Every South played in four spades and every other South made the contract.

The queen of diamonds was opened at all tables and after East followed with the six or eight West was allowed to hold the trick. Declarer would win the diamond — continuation and knock out "West's" best trump. Later on he would get to discard one of dummy's clubs on his fourth heart and lose just one club.

Now look what happened to our unfortunate friend. East put his king of diamonds on his partner's queen. South had to win in order to stop an immediate club return. Then he knocked out the ace of trumps only to have West lead his nine of diamonds to his partner's 10. Back came the club and down went poor South.

Mullen, Titus wed in garden rites

GLENNIS FERRY — Debra Jean Mullen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Mullen, became the bride of Edwin Charles Titus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Titus, all Glens Ferry. Rev. Glenn Bulton performed the double-ring ceremony at 4 p.m. June 11 in the garden at the home of the bride's parents. Blue carnations, white daisies and snapdragons in baskets decorated the area.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a white dotted-swiss floor-length gown with long sleeves and a high neckline trimmed in lace. Her floor-length veil of illusion net had a headpiece decorated with seed pearls and satin ribbon roses.

She carried a basket of pink roses, blue carnations and white daisies with long ribbon streamers attached to the basket handle.

Mrs. Daniel Allen of King Hill was matron-of-honor, Karen Mullen, sister of the bride, and Donna Titus, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids.

Fred Rokertson acted as best man and ushers were Frank Case and Matt Titus, brother of the bridegroom; both Glens Ferry. Stacey Phelps, King Hill, was flower girl, and Robbie Mullen, brother of the bride, was ring bearer. Mrs. Paul Shrum was pianist and Lori Bejot was soloist.

At the reception the bride's table was covered with a white lace cloth over blue and centered with a four tiered cake made and decorated by Mrs. Delmar Branon. The bride's cake was decorated in white with blue flowers and featured two gold colored china rings that had been used on her parents' and grandparents' wedding cakes. Six miniature silver slippers and horseshoes and clusters of blue satin bells with seed pearls also decorated the cake.

Mrs. James Hove and Mavis Gillet of Glens Ferry cut and served the cake. Mrs. Mullen's father, Fred Mantion, London, England, served punch from a silver bowl that he had made himself some years ago in England.

Pam Robertson, King Hill, registered the guests, and Denise Whitlock of Wendell and Mrs. Ted Swency of Phoenix, sister of the bridegroom, were in charge of gifts. A buffet supper was served to the guests after the reception.

Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Mantion, London, grandparents of the bride. The new Mrs. Titus is a 1978 graduate of Glens Ferry High School and Titus graduated from the school in 1977. Their wedding trip was a two-day horseback ride into the hills. The couple is at home on the Phelps Pitchfork Ranch near King Hill where the bridegroom is employed.

MR. AND MRS. MICHAEL BOWERS

Ann Neal, Bowers married June 3

CASTLEFORD — Ann Neal and Michael Bowers were married in a morning ceremony June 3 in the Salmon United Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Neal of Carmen and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Bowers of Castleford.

Rev. Emory Robelham performed the double-ring ceremony before an altar arrangement of yellow lilies, gladiolus, carnations and roses tied with blue ribbons. Mrs. Ed Vender was organist for the ceremony.

Nancy Neal, the bride's sister, was maid of honor and Theresa Morton and Mrs. Randy Lobb were bridesmaids. Ed Neal, the bride's brother, was candlelighter.

Marty Becker was best man and Terry Kramer and Randall Rector served as ushers. All are from Castleford.

A buffet luncheon honoring the couple was held at the bride's parents' home on Carmen Creek immediately following the ceremony.

Serving as hosts for the reception were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gwartzney and Mr. and Mrs. C.R. Morton.

Holly Finlayson, Judy Emerson and Jean Crupper played the gifts. Assisting were Bruce McFarland, Jon Daniels, Jack and Meade Neal, Bob Morton and Mrs. Jerry Harrison and daughters, Diane and Catherine.

The newlyweds will live near Brunau this fall where he will teach and coach at Rim Rock High School. The bridegroom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner on the Friday evening prior to the wedding. A wedding party and granddaddy party was held on Saturday. Ernest Neal and L.N. Swartzney.

A second reception for the newlyweds was held June 17 by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Bowers in the Castleford Methodist Church. Mrs. Al Vathier furnished and arranged the garden flowers carrying out the bride's colors. Nancy Neal was in charge of the guest book. Mrs. John Conrad and daughters, Chasen and Kristen, were in charge of gifts. Mrs. John Blick, Mrs. Guy Kinyon, Mrs. Leslie Jackson, Mrs. Max Rector, Mrs. Don Reese and Mrs. Robert Becker served refreshments.

Miss Hovey, Clark exchange promises

TWIN FALLS — The Christian Center was the setting for the June 10 wedding of Jackie Hovey and Bob Clark, performed by Sheldon Sigel.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Larry Hovey, Twin Falls, and Mr. and Mrs. Truman Clark, Dallas, Tex., are the bridegroom's parents.

The bride was attired in a floor-length white gown trimmed in lace. The full sheer sleeves were attached to cuffs which came to points over her hands. Other features of the gown were an empire waistline and a super-long train.

Hot bridal bouquets consisted of daisies, white roses, blue baby's breath and lacy fern.

She wore the necklace her grandmother had worn at her wedding.

Bridal attendants were Marilee Burns and Jennifer Hovey, sister of the bride. Other attendants included Suzanne Hedrick, Chicago; Miralee Fasha, Dallas, and Kathy Reager, Oshorn.

Best man was Richard Castagno, West Hartford, Conn., and ushers were Larry Hill, Mexico City; Don Clark, Dallas, and Eric and Lars Hovey, both brothers of the bride.

The reception following the ceremony was held in the church which was decorated with flowers from the bride's grandmother Hovey's garden. The tables were covered with white cloths and were adorned with blue flowers in brassy snifters.

Reception assistants were Mrs. Armond Woolley, Pasco, Wash., and Mrs. R.A. Daniels, Tacoma, Wash., both aunts of the bride, and Terry and Brenda Latham both Twin Falls. Mrs. Ed Klinsky was in charge of the guest book.

Guests attended from South Africa—Iran, Mexico City, Connecticut, Texas, Oregon and Washington.

The bridegroom is a minister and following a trip to McCall and Wallows Lake, Ore., the newlyweds will live in Dallas.

Jane Russell jailed for drunken driving

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — Actress Jane Russell has been jailed for drunken driving.

A Municipal Court Judge Tuesday ordered the 57-year-old actress to spend four days in county jail for violating a condition of her parole on another drunken driving conviction.

Miss Russell, convicted two years ago for drunken driving, was arrested in April on the same charges after a minor traffic accident.

She was a 19-year-old model in Hollywood when the late billionaire Howard Hughes selected her to star in his controversial film "Outlaw." She later appeared in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "Tall Men," "The Revolt of Mamie Stover" and "Fuzzy Pink Nightgown."

Cosmetics no aid to wrinkles

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — All the creams, masks, face exercises, steam and hormones that women use in nightly rituals to preserve their skin are almost useless in preventing wrinkles, a skin expert says.

Dr. Bobby Lee Limmer said the time and money women have spent on the preservation of skin through the use of expensive cosmetics is for naught because a woman can not change the quality of her skin.

Wrinkles have little respect for a $40 per ounce bottle of lotion bought for the tiny laugh lines around the eyes, said Limmer, clinical professor of dermatology at the University of Texas Health Science Center.

"On a practical standpoint, cosmetics hide blemishes and lines. Aesthetically, they accentuate beauty," he said. "But realistically, cosmetics can't do a thing when it comes to wrinkling and aging."

Limmer said water content is what makes a woman's skin soft and youthful and suggests applying a small amount of moisturizer on a damp face to seal in the moisture.

Cleansing with a mild soap and water twice a day and using a pure oil or moisturizer such as baby oil is enough for any type of skin, the dermatologist added.

"Heavy oils, creams and dirt clog up pores," he said.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today is best for taking care of practical or mundane matters. But you find that the aspects soon change and delays and obstacles get in the way where matters of either a financial or emotional nature are concerned. Use control.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Settle financial affairs today and forget expensive recreation. Show more cordiality toward loved ones. Avoid a troublemaker.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): You can be successful in whatever it is you want to do, but later you meet with stumbling blocks in the path of your progress. Take time to improve health and appearance. Be active.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Study your private aims early and know how best to obtain them. Handle important tasks also. Confer with an expert and get good suggestions. Avoid one who could harm your home life.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Make plans with good friends early and later carry through nicely with them. Not a good time for any major entertainment, though. Avoid those who are envious of you.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Get into important civic matters and watch good results. Make sure you complete your work intelligently.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Plan how to enlarge your horizons early and then be sure to keep any promises you have made. New contacts you make today may not prove satisfactory, so be careful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Come to a better understanding with loved one and then get busy at work ahead of you. Follow intuition early in the day. Later they are not so correct.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Come to a better understanding with associates and then do the work necessary to mutual endeavors, make them successful. Know better what is expected of you by the public in general. Be active and you win out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): If you get a very early start you can accomplish a great deal and get that feeling of satisfaction, fine benefits. Take the exercise you need to build up energy, muscles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Schedule work and then you can sail through it with flying colors. Plan a delightful evening with loved one and show true devotion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 18): Handle domestic problems early and clear the air and refuse to argue later on. Get rid of whatever it is that is causing the tension. Get into the consciousness of greater abundance and use your energies wisely.

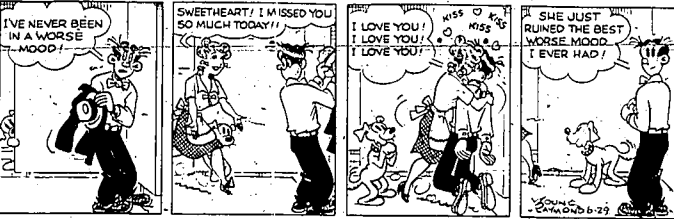

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): Handle domestic tasks well and then get into your specialized work and do a good job. Take time to handle correspondence intelligently.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY: ... he or she will eat up knowledge like a gnat, so plan for a fine education early and then this can become a most successful life, especially where dealing with money and property is concerned. Teach facts and figures early as possible and give good grounding in manners, ethics, religion.

Q. "When was it that the first musician re-recorded a number of musical instruments, one over the other, to produce a record?"

A. Exactly 37 years ago. Sidney Bechet was the bright fellow who initiated that trick. With first a soprano sax, then a clarinet, followed by a tenor sax, adding a piano, plus a bass fiddle, and finally drums. He did the whole schmeer himself. To turn out "The Sheik of Araby."

A British electronics firm has come up with a radio transmitter so small it can be put into a pill, prescribed as medicine by a cooperative doctor, swallowed by the intended target person, then tracked by electronic triangulation so the sneaky traces can know at every moment the whereabouts of the suckered party.

So you always thought the Christopher Columbus flagship was the "Santa Maria," did you? But some scholars now say the "Santa Maria" wasn't built during his lifetime, that his command ship, in fact, was "The Capitana."

Consider those cadets going into their second year at West Point. One out of every seven was an Eagle Scout.

Q. "Did you say the Yo-Yo was invented in 1930 by one David Duncan?"

A. No, sir. Said the name Yo-Yo was coined then by that gentleman. It's no longer a patented mouster, might mention, not since 1965 when Mr. Duncan's company folded. It now can be spelled lower-case yo-yo, and belongs to everybody. The plaything itself, please note, dates back to ancient Greece.

WONDERFUL BANANA CAKE
2 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1 1/2 teaspoons soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 cup shortening
1/2 cup buttermilk, divided
1 1/4 cups mashed ripe bananas
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup chopped nuts
Banana frosting

Sift flour, baking powder, soda, salt and sugar into large bowl.
Stir in shortening, 1/2 cup buttermilk and bananas and beat for 2 minutes.
Add eggs, vanilla and remaining 1/2 cup buttermilk and beat 2 minutes longer.
Fold in nuts and spoon into two prepared 8 or 9-inch cake pans.

Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes or until cake tests done. Cool, fill and frost with banana frosting.

BANANA FROSTING
Blend 1/2 cup mashed banana and 1/2 cup lemon juice and set aside.
Cream 1/2 cup butter and gradually stir in about 3/4 cups powdered sugar alternately with banana mixture to make a thick frosting.

Cookbook available to 'Star Trek' fans

NEW YORK (UPI) — Astronauts in the dawn days of the space age may have eaten glop from tubes, but that isn't K-rations they eat aboard the star ship Enterprise.

News of the favorite foods of the "Star Trek" crew — and even some of their Klingon enemies — comes from Bantam Books in a paperback titled "Official Star Trek Cooking Manual."

Oddly enough, its spaced-out "recipes" are solidly workable and thoughtfully compiled so the novice chef can make what are standard dishes in the repertoire of good international cooks.

Bantam is the paperback company that has been making money as if it were printing it, just by issuing the "Star Trek" series that network television refuses to revive and fans refuse to forget.

The cooking manual is "compiled by Mary Ann Piccard from the logbook of Nurse Christine Chapel."

It is divided into segments featuring the favorite foods of the Federation (which includes chopped chicken livers), of Vulcans, Romulans and Klingons, as well those picked by individual officers from Captain Kirk to Ensign Chekov.

Some of the recipes are quite serious — Kirk's steamed pumpkin bread, Klingon Kiroa Kul Faki (spits feet and pea soup), Chekov's beef stroganov and McCoy's plantation rice.

Intertwined with the recipes are bits of "Star Trek" lore, such as what was in the sandwich that Captain's Kirk ordered but the Tribbles intercepted. And speaking of Tribbles, there's even a recipe involving bread baked with their favorite grain — quadriltrical — although you can substitute present-day Terran approximations.

In case any "Star Trek" fans wonder the source of the Klingon recipes — some were exchanged during a brief truce with Kang (when a strange outerspace beastie, tried to take them on a trip to nowhere, with Federation and Klingon enemies battling furiously for eternity while it fed off their emotions).

Another source was Cyrano Jones, that trader who first brought Tribbles on the scene and later showed up with a Klingon cookbook.

The chopped chicken liver recipe referred to earlier is a favorite of Ambassador Robert Fox, who was aboard when the Enterprise found itself in the middle of the centuries old war between the planets Emlinar and Vendikar.

If the "Star Trek Cooking Manual" does nothing else, it promises that the future will not be turned over to the fastest food freaks who wouldn't know Dolman chicken from Chicken Delight.

The ten top network television programs for the week ending June 25, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

1: "Three's Company"; 2: "Laverne & Shirley"; 3: "Charlie's Angels"; 4: "Happy Days"; 5: "Love Boat"; 6: "Alice"; 7: (three-way tie) "M-A-S-H," "One-Day At A Time," "Quincy"; 10: "Fantasy Island."

Abby Dangerous situation

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My father dreamed up what I consider to be a very dangerous way to wake himself up in the morning.

First he sets the alarm clock for a certain time. When it goes off, he gets up, goes into the kitchen, fills the tea kettle with water, puts it on the gas range, turns it up to "high" and goes back to bed until the tea kettle whistles and wakes him up again.

Several times he has failed to get up and the tea kettle has burned all to blazes!

I've tried to tell him he is taking a terrible chance, but he doesn't listen. And, Abby, would you believe he is a lieutenant on a volunteer fire department? Maybe he'll listen to you.

MERRIMACPORT, MASS.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR MERRI: Sound sleepers should NEVER go to sleep with the gas range burning. And for his sake, as well as his family's, I hope your father listens to me instead of to the whistling of that tea kettle.

(P.S. And if the chief of the Merrimacport volunteer fire department reads this, the lieutenant is likely to be busted to private).

DEAR ABBY: What do you do with a 17-year-old boy who refuses to clean his room?

BINGHAMTON MOM

DEAR MOM: You close the door to his room, but go in to rake it once a week. Sorry, Mom, but you must share in the blame for your son's sloppy habits. You should have trained him many years ago, when he was still trainable.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, who is 16, is begging me to let her marry a boy of 16. I have tried to talk her into waiting until she finishes high school. (This is her first year.)

Recently she told her father and me that if we don't give her permission to marry, she will get herself in a fix like lots of girls do. Then we will have to let her get married or she will disgrace us.

I told her that was the wrong attitude to take, but she said she doesn't care, she loves the boy. (He quit school and has no job.)

Has any advice to give her? She reads your articles every day. I hope you will print something to help us with this situation since she is about to drive her Pa and me nuts. Thank you.

W. VIRGINIA MOM

DEAR MOM: I could give your daughter plenty of advice, but she hasn't asked me for any. Tell her that even if she gets herself "in a fix," you may not consent to the marriage. And let her know that her threats to "disgrace" you do not frighten you. She can disgrace only herself.
