Idaho to vote on 1% limit in November

By DAVID MORRISSEY
 Times-News writer
BOISE — Backers of Idaho's 1 percent initiative surged over the top this afternoon, presenting Secretary of State Pete T. Conarrusa with enough signatures on petitions to mail down to voters on the November election ballot.

In a statehouse steps rally, two dozen jubilant statewide supporters of the initiative, led by state property owners association President Don Chance, turned in nearly 20,000 additional petition signatures. That brings to approximately 44,000 the number of verified signatures of registered voters officially filed with Conarrusa. A total of 25,964 signatures on petitions is required by law before an initiative can appear on the November ballot.

Approximately 2,500 of today's signatures were those of Twin Falls County residents, according to local initiative drive coordinator Howard Hubler.

Coinciding with the petition filing, Chance today announced the formation of a statewide committee "to study the implementation of the 1 percent initiative." Saying he expected the tax-slashing measure to be approved by a wide majority of Idahoans in November, Chance said the committee would make recommendations for local governments faced with reduced budgets.

The 11-member committee includes gubernatorial candidate and former State Representative C.L. "Butch" Otter, Caldwell; House Speaker and gubernatorial candidate Allan Larsen, Blackfoot; State Auditor Joe Williams, Boise; State Representative Gary Ingram, Coeur d'Alene; House Majority Leader Wall Little, New Plymouth; State Representative John Reardon, Boise; State Representative Ralph Olmstead, Twin Falls; Senate Majority Leader James Risch, Boise; State Senator Lyle Cobbs, Boise, and Clarence Planting, Boise.

An eleventh member of the committee will be announced later, Chance said. Every committee member but Williams is a Republican.

Chance strongly criticized recent suggestions by Gov. John Evans, a Democrat, that tax relief from the initiative should go to farmers and homeowners but not to businesses or utilities.

"That's unconstitutional as hell," Chance said, saying such a plan would amount to taxing some Idaho property at a different rate than other property.

Noting the Idaho Supreme Court rejected a similar legislative proposal in 1966, Chance said the Evans plan would require a constitutional amendment. Such an amendment couldn't be placed on the ballot until 1980, he said. That means taxpayers under the Evans plan would receive tax relief "at the earliest in 1981," Chance said.

Chance predicted utilities and businesses would also challenge such a constitutional amendment in court, possibly preventing implementation of the Evans plan "for many years."

Chance said his organization was considering additional state budget legislation, but said specifics of those laws couldn't yet be discussed. He said it was likely, however, the property owners association would support legislation preventing cities or counties from joining any organization where membership fees cost more than $100, unless approved by voters.

Presently taxpayers are paying for high membership fees in organizations like the Association of Idaho Cities, Chance said. "I honestly believe some of these mayors would lay off policemen before they'd lay off their membership in the AIC," Chance said.

The Association of Idaho Cities has been one of the strongest critics of Chance and the initiative.

Chance said the Gem State property owners would follow the lead of Howard Jarvis, leader of California's Proposition 13, on which Idaho's initiative was based.

Chance denied rumors he was a "land baron" who stood to profit enormously from passage of the 1 percent initiative. "I own 4.11 acres near Meridian," Chance said. "And I just sold two cheap duplexes in Boise."

Chance claimed members of the AIC were spreading the rumors.

Evans wants more control of prison

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans said Friday he will recommend there be a constitutional amendment that would give his office "more" authority in administration of the Idaho State Penitentiary.

The chief executive released at a press conference a report submitted to him by an investigative review commission, saying he would like the corrections board to follow it to the letter. Drawn up by a six-man body, the report called for sweeping changes in the corrections system.

The commission recommended the board dismiss Corrections Director Don Erickson, Warden Richard Anderson and Operations Administrator Garland Drewrey for displaying "inept and ineffectual leadership." The board dismissed Erickson and Drewrey but left Anderson in charge of the prison.

Evans said he was disappointed that the commission's suggestions were not completely accepted, but said he supports the board's decision not to oust Anderson because "that's the board's responsibility."

Evans said he believes his office must be able to influence decisions regarding penitentiary operations. "We can't hide these problems behind the door any longer. The legislature and I will be realistic in trying to adopt the commission's recommendations as fully as possible."

Evans also said Anderson is informally on probation until further studies are made.

Both the commission and Evans recommended the legislature appropriate more money to upgrade service and employee morale at the prison.

Controversy over prison administration came in December when former Security Chief Josef Munch charged Anderson and Erickson were mishandling the penitentiary's administration. The governor called for the investigation on March 29. Evans said Friday he didn't think Munch, who was fired earlier this year, has been vindicated, saying that "it all would have come out anyway."

The commission report also recommended various structural changes in administration of the corrections facility, establishment of a full-time training coordinator to assure the effectiveness of all prison personnel, and the expansion of educational and vocational training for inmates.

In its report the commission said it found: "concentration of authority in the upper reaches of the administration, with lower level administrators reluctant to make decisions or assume leadership roles."

"The corrections board had created figurehead department managers which resulted in confusion in the chain of command."

"communication is directive and exclusive to input from lower echelon employees."

"employee suggestions are not solicited."

"emphasis placed on material objects at the expense of both employees and inmates."

"inconsistency in hiring, firing and evaluating job performance."

"employee training inadequate."

"incentive programs too unattractive to retain quality personnel."

"the penitentiary is continually short-handed and tension created as a result aggravates the turnover rate, which is 32 percent per year."

"about 51 percent of employees have actively searched for other employment in the last year."

"the corrections board hears only what the director wants them to hear."

"favoritism is accorded certain inmates."

"counseling is unavailable for inmates with alcohol or drug abuse problems."

"an insufficient number of staff members supervise preparation and serving of food."

"menus is drawn up without input from a dietician."

The commission conducted a random survey of inmates and said:

"several inmates related specific examples of having to wait three or four days to get medical attention for blood poisoning and pneumonia."

"inmates complained of slow mail service."

"inmates said their funds in their accounts were improperly used."

"inmates said rules and regulations were unequally enforced."

"inmates said maximum security facility and farm dormitory overcrowded."

Tight security

Mondale arrives in Israel

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale began a four day goodwill visit today, trading compliments with Prime Minister Menachem Begin but accused by one government official of endangering the "existence and security" of Israel.

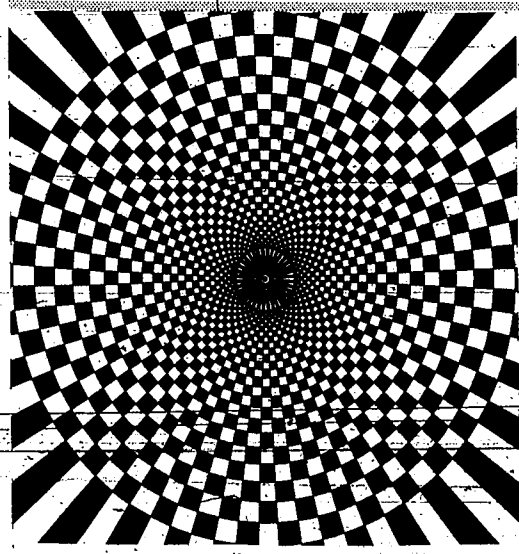

Mondale, who later visited the Walling Wall in old Jerusalem, arrived under the tightest security since Anwar Sadat's historic visit to Jerusalem last November. A bomb went off in Jerusalem Thursday, killing two Israelis on the eve of Mondale's arrival.

Mondale, in his airport statement, referred to Israel as "a modern day miracle" and spoke of the "special bond" between Israel and the United States. Begin, in his welcoming statement, called the United States the "leader of the Free World" and said Israel "rejoiced" in Mondale's visit.

But Zalman Shoval, a top adviser to Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, told a businessman's club luncheon that the Carter Administration was acting in an unfriendly manner toward Israel and that Mondale's visit came at a time when the United States was losing its credibility in Israel.

"We would like to see in Mondale the longstanding friend of Israel and not the Mondale who recently lent his hand to actions and policies that endanger our existence and security," Shoval said in a reference to Mondale's support for the U.S. sale of jets to Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

The universe is doomed ... today

but don't hold your breath

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) — Three University of California scientists report they have proof positive that the universe is coming to an end — in about 50 billion years.

The scientists told a University of California-Santa Cruz news conference Thursday about "a major breakthrough" in calibrating the brightness of quasars, the mysterious and distant star systems much smaller than a galaxy but producing hundreds of times more energy.

Peering through the 120-inch telescope atop Mount Hamilton near San Jose, they verified a theory by Dr. Jack Baldwin, now at Cambridge University in England, who found that the strength of certain atomic emission lines in the spectrum of a quasar is correlated with the brightness of the quasar.

"His discovery," said Dr. E. Joseph Wampler, "has given us a new clue to use in unravelling the mysteries of the enigmatic quasars and evolution of the universe."

Dr. Wampler explained that the ability to measure a quasar's brightness enables researchers to measure their distance and how fast they are moving from the center of the universe.

He said that data is then matched up with the theories on the nature of the universe — whether it is contracting, expanding or in a steady state. "Wampler said the quasar discoveries support the theory that the universe is expanding, but at a slower and slower rate and eventually will stop expanding, only to begin contracting."

Dr. Wampler, helped in his research by Larry Burke and C. Martin Gaskill, estimated that expansion will continue to slow down for about 20 billion years or so. The expansion will stop and the universe will turn in on itself and collapse in another 30 billion years.

"At the end, he told UPI, the universe's collapse will be faster and fester and come to a violent end."

What will happen then?

"Maybe it will bounce and expand all over again," Wampler said. "Or maybe it will just stay a lump. But once the universe stops expanding, gravity is going to keep on working and it will contract again."

More cases

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On the heels of the Allan Bakke decision, the Supreme Court may act Monday on several other appeals involving programs designed to remedy past discrimination against minorities.

The court ruled Wednesday race may be taken into account — but cannot be the only factor — in deciding who gets into universities.

Despite legal doubts remaining after the Bakke decision, Drew S. Days, the head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, Thursday urged private industry to step up voluntary programs to end job discrimination.

"I think desegregation in the employment area dealing with past discrimination is so vital to this country that business ought to 'cost it out' and move forward," Days said.

Loan assured

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New York City today has the assurance of both houses of Congress that it will get federal loan guarantees to avoid bankruptcy and seek a long-range solution to its financial problems.

The assurance came just in time. A direct federal loan program which Congress enacted for the city in 1975 expires today.

The Senate Thursday approved $1.5 billion in guarantees of up to 16 years by a vote of 53-27. The House on June 8, by a vote of 247-155, approved $2 billion in guarantees.

Soviet criticism

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet press sharply attacked a third American news correspondent today shortly after two other reporters won a two-day postponement of their trial on charges they slandered Soviet television.

The daily newspaper Sovietasky Sport, in an article headlined "An Expert in Search of Canards," accused ABC correspondent Charles Bierbauer of being hostile to the Soviet Union for asking boxer Muhammad Ali if he was aware that few Muslim mosques are open in Soviet Central Asia.

Break for Knievel

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — A judge dismissed a misdemeanor battery charge against Evel Knievel Thursday because of a technicality, but prosecutor Jon Henning said he will refile the case.

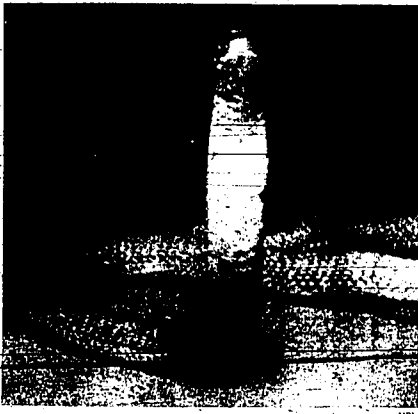

The charges stem from an incident at a bridge on the Intracoastal Waterway April 10, 1977. Knievel said bridge-erector Donnie Morris swore at him as his 116-foot yacht passed through the bridge.

"I had a little 12-year-old girl standing on the ship with me," he said in a sworn statement. "I told the man I'd be back."

Knievel said that after docking the yacht, he went back to the bridge and "grabbed hold of him, and I took his glasses off, and I was gonna punch him. But I saw he was an older man..."

He said Morris, 65, apologized and said, "I made a mistake. Go ahead and hit me."

Consumer prices soar again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fueled by continued sharp rises in food and housing costs, consumer prices in May soared 0.9 percent to register the fifth substantial increase in as many months and keep inflation at a double-digit level, the government said today.

The May jump — identical to April's gain — was antcipated by the administration. Government economists have predicted inflation should taper off somewhat later this summer.

During the past two months, prices have risen at an annual rate of 10.8 percent, the Labor Department said in its monthly report on the cost of living.

In both May and April, prices have risen at the fastest pace since February 1977.

Food costs, particularly for beef, and housing prices once again were the main culprits in the May inflationary surge.

Coors by air

DENVER (UPI) — The Adolph Coors Company today for the first time in the Golden, Colo., based brewery's history shipped 2,000 cases of its beer by commercial airline carrier in an effort to meet increased California demand.

"Several distributors have run critically low due to the increased demand," said Bob Russo, a Coors spokesman.

He said the beer was being shipped to Los Angeles on a Continental Airlines DC-10 passenger jet, a procedure twice as expensive as usual truck or railcar transports.

Nazis may march

CHICAGO (UPI) — A federal judge has ruled a group of neo-Nazis may march July 9 as planned in Marquette Park, the center of a racially tense Southwest Side neighborhood.

U.S. District Judge George N. Leighton Thursday denied a request by the Chicago Park District to block an earlier court order allowing the Nazi rally. Attorneys for the park district said they will appeal Leighton's decision.

Carter says hands are tied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said today intrusions from the two other branches of government have tied his hands and clouded the separation of powers.

The president made the comment at the start of a busy day leading up to his mid-afternoon departure on a 10-day vacation at Camp David. He referred to no particular example of such intrusions, but said the situation is getting worse.

Carter also scheduled meetings with his foreign policy and economic advisers plus discussions with West German political leader Helmut Kohl and University of Notre Dame President Theodore Hesburgh.

The Supreme Court ruled Thursday that top government officials can be sued personally for deliberate violations of constitutional rights. In the 5-4 decision, the court rejected the contention that Cabinet officials are covered by immunity from liability.

Additionally, the House voted to give either chamber of Congress veto authority over any regulation fostered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

And the administration has objected recently to limits imposed on the White House by Congress, particularly in the area of foreign policy.

Approval rating of Carter slips

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Carter's approval rating, at its lowest point yet, stands lower than any of the last five presidents after their first 17 months in office, a CBS News-New York Times poll showed today.

Carter's approval rating — now at 38 percent — dropped in part because of a decline in support for his foreign policy, according to the survey of 1,527 voting-age Americans.

Approval of Carter's foreign policy dropped from 39 percent to 29 percent since April, the poll found. Forty-eight percent of those surveyed last January approved of the administration's foreign policy during a period of hope for a Middle East peace accord.

Presidents traditionally suffer drops in approval, according to polls.

Woman comes out of coma

MUSKOGEE, Mich. (UPI) — Lynn Stern defied medical prognostics by returning to consciousness after six months in coma.

Mrs. Stern, 22, of Ravenna suffered brain stem damage in a car accident Dec. 11. She spoke for the first time Tuesday, although doctors doubted she would ever regain consciousness.

Even so, Dr. Henry Cavallos, who has been treating Mrs. Stern, said he does not know if she will ever regain full use of her muscles.

"Only time will tell how much she regains and how quickly," Cavallos said. "She was in a coma for so long. She's going to have some brain damage. But because she's talking now, and speech is such a high brain function — that means a great deal of her brain is functioning."

Mrs. Stern — 5-foot-2 and dark-haired — weighed 105 pounds before she went into the coma. Now, after more than six months of inactivity and an intravenous diet, she weighs only 50 pounds.

Bonnie Conran, Mrs. Stern's mother, said her daughter apparently does not remember the accident and can move only one arm and one leg. She is expected to be moved to another hospital for physical therapy.

Mrs. Stern's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Poulin, were in her hospital room when she regained consciousness at the Christian Convalescent Nursing Home.

"My husband has thought for quite some time that she knew we were in the room," Mrs. Poulin recalled Thursday.

Seaborg says the Chinese are making nuclear strides

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Chinese scientists are on schedule with their goal of matching U.S. nuclear development by the year 2000 and in some theoretical research already have caught up with the Russians, the former chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission said Thursday.

"I was surprised by what they knew," said Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg. "We'll be moving, too. We'll be a moving target, but they could come close. It's a national priority."

Seaborg, 68, who won the Nobel Prize in chemistry for the discovery of plutonium during World War II and served under three presidents as head of the AEC, made the prediction following his return from a 3½ week tour of China.

Included was the first visit by Western scientists to the Institute of Modern Physics in Lanzhou, where basic research in nuclear physics is under way.

Scientists at Lanzhou are building a modern heavy ion accelerator, basically two atom smashing cyclotrons hooked together for use in "injecting" heavy ions, Seaborg said, noting the research is similar to work he and 10 graduate students are conducting at University of California laboratories.

"They were very, very well read on our literature," Seaborg said. "They knew all the literature in my field, but they were not up to us in their research." In experimental nuclear physics at Lanzhou, he said, "research that was carried on there is on par with the research of the Soviet Union."

Highly motivated Chinese scientists are working doubly hard at present to make up for time lost during China's "gang of four" political turmoil following the death of Chairman Mao Tse Tung in 1976 when graduate schools and advanced scientific training institutes were closed, Seaborg said.

China does not yet have nuclear power plants, but does have much-used research reactors, Seaborg said. It has conducted a number of nuclear weapons tests since the early 1960s and continues atmospheric testing, which the United States and the Soviet Union have mutually banned.

But the Chinese "are strong in applied research for natural products, such as converting oil into gasolines." They also are making great strides in the polymer sciences (plastics development) and in genetics — chromatography — the separation of pollution materials in the atmosphere, he said.

Food and how you cook them said to be vital cancer keys

SEATTLE (UPI) — What you cook and how you eat it can raise or lower the risk of cancer. That's the message from a panel of experts gathered for a national meeting on nutrition in cancer.

More than 1,400 physicians from across the nation Thursday pre-registered for the conference, sponsored by the American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute. The meeting will continue through Saturday noon.

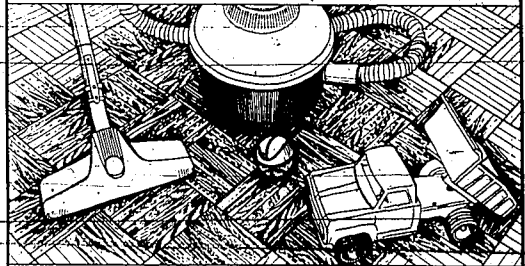

Broiled meats have been linked to cancer, said Dr. Phillippe Shubik, a University of Nebraska cancer researcher. He said a steak well broiled with fat could increase the cancer risk because high fat diets have been related to cancer of the breast, colon, ovary, prostate and lining of the uterus.

A type of mushroom called false morels has been found to contain a cancer causing agent, he said.

Dr. Ernst Wynder, president of the American Health Foundation, said foods high in natural fiber such as carotene vegetables and bran have been related to reduced risk of cancer in the gastrointestinal system.

POLICE CARRY AWAY SEABROOK PROTESTER ... 'die-in' demonstration in Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Protesters against the Seabrook, N.H., nuclear power plant were threatening today to again block the entrance to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission if the agency fails to prevent the plant's construction.

Police arrested 54 demonstrators Thursday for staging a "die-in" at the entrance to the commission. The protesters simulated the possible carnage of a nuclear power accident by screaming in mock horror and collapsing in a heap in front of the door to the building.

"They were charged with disorderly conduct for blocking a public sidewalk, but police arrested them so peacefully that other protesters who watched gave the law officers a round of applause."

The NRC is considering whether to revoke the Seabrook license, while the Environmental Protection Agency reconsiders the validity of the plant's proposed cooling system. The commission was expected to reach a decision today.

A spokesman for the "Seabrook Natural Guard," an anti-nuclear coalition that heads the Washington protest, said Thursday dozens of demonstrators would spend the night in front of the NRC building, and "if the decision goes against us, the people will block the entrance to the building again tomorrow."

Some 350 members of about 22 groups opposing the Seabrook plant arrived in Washington Wednesday after a weekend demonstration in New Hampshire, which drew 10,000 people to the site of the proposed $2.3 billion power plant.

Thursday's skill, watched by some NRC employees perched at windows overlooking the street, started with a mock announcement the commission had agreed to proceed with a nuclear power plant and that an accident at the plant had caused a major radiation leak.

Nuclear talk in South Africa

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — Gerard Smith, a top American atomic negotiator, has held nearly a week of secret talks with high-ranking South African officials on a wide range of nuclear issues.

The talks have been going on "since Smith's arrival in Pretoria Sunday, and represent the "latest stage in a series of discussions" between the two countries, Dr. Ample Roux, chairman of South Africa's Atomic Energy Board, said Thursday.

Nether Roux nor American Embassy officials would comment on news reports that Washington hoped the talks would soon result in South Africa signing the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty.

"The whole issue is complicated and sensitive," Roux said.

He said discussions about the treaty, which South Africa is not a party, were "just one aspect of a whole spectrum of matters being talked about."

A good idea from Jim Jones

Second District Republican congressional candidate Jim Jones has a good idea. Jones, a challenger to Rep. George Hansen in the Republican primary...

Jones correctly has identified one major problem of a legislative body that goes through elections every two years. The U.S. House of Representatives often is inefficient because the makeup of the legislative body changes significantly every two years.

New faces come in with little knowledge of the workings of Congress and many hours are wasted reinventing the wheels of government. In recent sessions, the house has failed to draft a workable energy bill, has haggled over tax reform, and bogged down in a myriad of smaller issues...

As originally planned by the framers of the Constitution, the members of the House are held accountable to the electorate every two years, to minimize the possibility of unresponsive officials making laws of the land.

But this frequent submergence into political waters tends to create a short-sighted House philosophy at times, and that's indeed a troublesome situation when you consider all of the long-sighted matters the House considers on its day-to-day business...

Candidate Jones thinks a permanent advance planning committee in the House could set priorities for the body and keep the House on a steady course from election to election.

The advance planning group would be charged with anticipating and planning for major national problems.

As Jones describes it, the committee would eventually make the House not just a body of reaction, but a body of foresight.

It's not a bad idea, and it would certainly aid green candidates like Jones if they are elected and sent to the House.

Still, the plan has the potential for abuse since the advance planning committee could become a political weapon used by powerful senior politicians determined to block particular pieces of legislation.

If an advance planning committee were set up, the House would have to establish careful guidelines for the selection and rotation of the members of the committee.

If the advance planning committee could make the federal government a more reasoned and statesman-like bureaucracy, then the committee indeed would be a fine idea.

Pilots' driving records should be made public

If drunk drivers weren't enough of a problem for Americans these days, now we have the ever-increasing problem of drunk pilots.

It has been recently pointed out that the number of pilots who have been caught intoxicated while behind the controls of a plane is quite staggering.

A major factor contributing to this situation is the fact that different bureaucracies under the Department of Transportation's jurisdiction aren't interdependent.

Specifically, the department of transportation's nation-wide record of persons with drunk driving records is on file in Washington, but for reasons of protection of the individual, those records are not available for uses not related to highway safety.

There are some thinkers in Washington who now are getting the idea that the protection of the American public in general would be better served if federal and state officials could search out the estimated thousands of individuals who are convicted drunk drivers, and who have had their driving licenses suspended, but, amazingly enough, are still allowed to maintain their status as fully licensed pilots.

Some pilots and others will argue a drunk driving offense should not carry with it the suspension of more than the driving license, seeing the suspension of other licenses as being a form of double jeopardy.

However, we're talking about the individual's attitude here, an irresponsible attitude that more or less says "I don't give a damn about the risks to myself or anybody else; I can drive (fly) in any condition."

Such a person should not be allowed at the controls of anything, particularly an airplane that could become a kamikaze craft in the hands of a drunk pilot.

A bill currently before Congress would release these driving records for the specific use of aviation regulations.

When such a law is put on the books, hopefully we'll get at least a few persons out of the sky who shouldn't be there.

Americans still have a right to get high, figuratively and literally, but both highs at the same time can be real downers for all of us.

Carter refuses to take sides

WASHINGTON - The hardest things for this city to handle these days are the blurry lines between one policy and another at home and abroad. Washington wants a clear sharp line from President Carter between high property taxes and adequate public services, between inflation and unemployment, the Israelis and the Arabs, the Soviets and the Chinese, but there are no clear lines, and Carter refuses to choose sides.

His latest press conference illustrates the point. Confronted with a series of complicated and ambiguous questions, he simply refused to give simple answers.

He agreed that taxes were too high but rejected the Stelger-Jones tax reforms he thought would favor the very rich. He criticized the Israeli government's answers to his questions about the future of the West Bank, the Gaza Strip, and the Palestinians, but insisted that the peace negotiations should go on anyway.

Brezhnev of the Soviet Union condemned Carter for "playing the China card" against the Soviet Union, but Carter pushed it off, and announced that he was sending to Peking on July 5 one of the most influential scientific and technological missions ever gathered together in the United States to go to another country.

It will be headed by Dr. Frank Press, former head of the Department of Earth and Planetary Services at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and now Science and Technology adviser to the president.

Other members will be Robert A. Frosch, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Agency (NASA); Richard C. Atkinson, director of the National Science Foundation, and other leaders from the State, Commerce, Agriculture, Energy, and Interior departments of the government, and from the National Security Agency.

This is no big deal. They will be in Peking for only four days, trying to make contact with the science and technology leaders of the new Peking administration, but the mission is a symbol of Carter's determination to keep in touch with all the new power centers in the world.

Moscow will probably resent this U.S. mission as a pro-Peking and anti-Soviet move, but four days after Carter's scientific adviser comes back from Peking, he will go to Moscow for the Sixth annual U.S. Soviet conference on scientific and technical cooperation.

And shortly after that, Carter will have to go to Bonn in West Germany for a summit meeting of the industrial nations, and try to explain why inflation is rising in the United States, and why he hasn't put an import tax on oil, which he will probably do, if the congress doesn't put a tax on oil imports before he goes there.

Watching Carter at his latest press conference, in the middle of all these domestic and foreign tangles, is a lesson on his character and personality. He knows better than anybody else that he is dropping in the popular election polls on the ground that he is vague and ambiguous, but he is dealing with vague and ambiguous problems, and is taking his chances on both.

Anybody who doubts the dilemma he is up against, or his ability to defuse them under public pressure, should read the text of his last press conference. You can agree or disagree with his answers, especially if you want definite conclusions to complicated problems, but he recognizes the complexity of his problems, and sticks to his beliefs.

And one other point. No president since the last world war has used the English language with more precision. On the radio and on television, he seems to hesitate and even stutter, with a thin and jumpy voice, but if you read the text, every subject and predicate, every sentence and paragraph, are in order. He may sound ambiguous and even tricky, but he is dealing with ambiguous and tricky questions, and the guess here is that he deserves more credit than he's getting.

JAMES RESTON

He condemned the Soviet violations of human rights under the Helsinki agreement, and the Soviet-Cuban aggressions in Africa - and agreed that this competition between Washington and Moscow would probably go on for almost a generation - but meanwhile he thought it was in everybody's interest to keep trying for control of the arms race.

Carter's answer to a question about whether he was playing "the China card" against the Soviet Union is particularly interesting.

"We are not trying, nor will we ever try, to play the Soviets against the People's Republic of China or vice versa," he said. "We have some very important relationships with the Chinese that need to be pursued: These are worldwide common hopes that we share with the Chinese. We have a bilateral relations that we need to expand - trade, exchange of science and technology, etc. And at the same time, we want to have peace with the Chinese - almost a billion people."

Always Carter has pressed for definite answers: "Mr. President," he was asked, "what precisely is our position toward the Soviets?"

"We want to be friends with the Soviets," he replied. "We do, however, stay in a state of competition. This is inevitable. I think it's going to be that way for 15 or 20 years... but there is no present threat to peace. Negotiations are proceeding in good faith. There is no cause for alarm."

In the middle of these exchanges, President

How did great Nazi scare take hold?

CHICAGO - The question is being constantly asked: Why did so many people get caught up in the "great Nazi" scare?

It's been like seeing a huge banquet hall filled with people standing on tables and squealing because somebody saw a mouse.

The mouse, in this case, was a poor strutting snp named Frank Collin, who won't even admit that his own father was Jewish. Freud would have had to work two shifts on that kid.

But at least a mouse is real. What we have here isn't even that.

They aren't Nazis. Nazis were a genuine political force, despisable as they turned out to be. They came along with a program of national socialism at a time when Germany was almost an economic corpse.

Our little group wouldn't knock national socialism from the National League. All they do is hope somebody with a TV camera will show up so they can put on their costumes and look grim. Their cry, program is racism, but they are such obvious clowns that they can't even recruit new members in the Marquette neighborhood, where racism is considered as American as potato pie.

So the question is how they managed to create such excitement.

I'm not sure, but I think there might be two reasons:

First, since the 1960s, we've become accustomed to having some kind of new crisis come along at regular intervals to give us a collective fright. It supplements the excitement of TV sports.

But it happens that this summer we don't have any new scares going for us. No assassinations of national figures, no ghetto riots, no Vietnam War, no Watergate, no gas pump shudowns, no recession.

Sure, we have inflation, but that's a chronic worry, not a visual jaw-dropper that can be put on the evening news.

Not having the real thing, and this is the second reason, we have accepted an artificial substitute.

MIKE ROTKO

And why not? Artificial substitutes now make up a major part of our lives. Many people can't tolerate the taste of genuine food anymore. We ogre artificial instant celebrities in People Magazine. Popular music is 5 percent talent and 95 percent electronic additives.

We even accept artificial substitutes for real people. There is a man who looks, dresses and sounds like Elvis Presley. He isn't Elvis Presley, of course, and his audiences know it, but people scream and pretend to have orgasms just as the real Beatles audiences did.

This is a growing trend in show business: Dead rock, some call it - cleverly packaged substitutes being treated like they are the real thing. It's the next best thing to cloning.

So we came up with an artificial Nazi crisis completely artificial Nazis.

Actually, the whole thing has been pretty harmless, despite all the hysteria. In fact, it might have even been a good experience. Consider some of the side benefits.

So many people have vowed to fight nazism that if the real thing ever came along again, it would be flung back into the sea.

A year ago at this time, residents of suburbia Skokie shared the ordinary interests of suburbanites everywhere - joy in the soaring values of their real estate and worry about the brand of dope their children are using.

But today Skokie's residents have a community spirit that is unequalled. They have been holding meetings, rallies, and vowing to stand shoulder to shoulder against the great menace. They've been interviewed by almost every reporter in town, as well as the New York Times, Newsweek, Time and the foreign press. Good-hearted strangers have flown in from New York and Los Angeles to give them support during the crisis.

There are towns that have been overwhelmed by floods or hit by hurricanes, and they didn't receive the kind of attention that Skokie has.

And it has spread beyond Skokie. Last Saturday, the two dozen Collin misfits held a rally in the Loop, and at least 3,000 counter-demonstrators showed up and had a wonderful time becoming indignant, outraged, throwing bottles and chanting 'kill, kill, kill.' You can't even get that kind of emotional release at a ball game.

The rest of us have been provided with a suspense story that has mounted from month to month, week to week, day to day. Will the Nazis march in Skokie? Will the judge rule this way or that? Will there be mass hysteria, rioting, violence? Tune in tomorrow night.

But nothing real happened, and nothing will happen. That's the best thing about an artificial crisis with an artificial menace. We can have all of the excitement, the rage, the worry, the noise and the bluster without any genuine danger.

Maybe we should not stop here, with Skokie and the "Nazis." We still have a long summer ahead of us. We can come up with a few more artificial crises.

Somewhere there must be some enterprising goons who can get themselves British Army uniforms, declare that they are the Chicago British Army and announce that they are going to march into Canterbury to upset the Irish residents of that neighborhood.

When the uproar over the Chicago British Army subsidies, somebody can formally announce that they are the Chicago Imperial Japanese and threaten to invade Chicago.

And when that hysteria fades, somebody else can announce that they are going to storm the city's Polish neighborhoods.

In a city of this size, we ought to have enough mice for every one.

'Jaws III' doesn't have to be a shark

WASHINGTON - If "Jaws III" is as successful at the box office, Universal Pictures will have no choice but to begin production on "Jaws III." The problem is, how many times can you frighten people with a man-eating shark?

I've been giving it a lot of thought. There is nothing that says "Jaws III" has to be a shark. As Elizabeth Bay here said, "There are a lot of other fish in the sea."

I have my own screen treatment for the third film, "Jaws III," instead of being about a shark, should be about the great snail darter.

The movie would take place at the TVA Tellico Dam in Tennessee. One night a young workman and Miss Tennessee of 1977 are lying on the banks of the Tellico River telling dam stories, when the girl decides to go swimming. Her boyfriend tells her it's too dangerous, but she goes.

Out of the murky water appears the cruel head of an monstrous snail darter measuring three inches from jaws to tail. It swims back and forth, perplexed by the strange body in the water.

Suddenly it bares its cruel, razor sharp teeth and nips the girl on the arm. She screams, but it's too late. The snail darter nips her again on the thigh, then it nips her yet again. The girl frantically swims to shore with nips all over her body.

ART BUCHWALD

The workman and the girl go to see the chief of police.

The chief of police reports the incident to the head engineer of the TVA Project. It's obviously a snail darter, the most vicious fish known to dam builders," he tells the chief. "If the story gets out that we have snail darters in the Tellico River, they'll keep us from completing the dam. We have to keep this a secret."

"But I'm responsible for the lives and safety of the people along the Tellico," protests the chief of police. "Suppose somebody else gets bitten by the snail darter?"

"Don't worry," the engineer assures him, "having nipped Miss Tennessee of 1977 it could be miles from here by now."

Two days later, the attorney general of the United States is fishing off a pier when the same snail darter sees a toe in the water. Curious, it swims around for a few moments and then suddenly opens its jaws wide and grasps the toe.

The attorney general falls over into the water and fights the snail darter for an hour, but the odds are hopeless. The attorney general is finally dragged out and returns to Washington, vowing to get the snail darter. It's the last thing he does.

The secret is out. News of the snail darter spreads like wildfire.

In order to save the dam the town decides to hire a tough sea captain who hated snail darters ever since one had bit off his fingernail years ago. One from the description by the victims, he suspects this particular one was the same type of fish that had destroyed the use of his left hand. He is determined to get the snail darter, even if it costs him his life.

Her goes out in a rowboat with a Swiss-made pocket knife.

Ten yards offshore, he snail darter starts circling under the boat, it nuzzles the side, then it nips one of the oars. The captain glimpses its brown stomach. He is sure now that this is his hated enemy. He takes out the pocket knife and is about to stab it when the chief of police runs down to the shore and shouts, "Stop. The Supreme Court has just ruled 5-4 that the snail darter is an endangered species. If you touch it, I'll have to arrest you."

The captain, his arm raised, pretends not to hear, and the chief takes out his gun and shoots the berserk captain in the chest, explaining later at the inquest, "I had to do it. It was the law of the land."

The Carters are backing Hugh's foe

Blood may be thicker than water down Georgia way — but it isn't as thick as printer's ink — especially ink used to write a book about kinfolk. That's the offense laid to cousin Hugh Carter. His book about the Carter clan — titled, "Cousin Beedie and Cousin Hot" — left President Carter's mother and little brother downright fumed. Hugh is running for re-election to the state Senate seat he's held since 1966, but Miz Lillian and Billy are on the stump for his opponent — Malcolm "Chicken" Whitehead. Billy's Plains, Ga., gas station carries Wishard's and "Help the chicken take the worm." Cousin Hugh runs a worst farm when he isn't writing family exposes.

WORKING GIRL
Most 14-year-old kids are willing to settle for a summer job at the local hamburger hut, but for Andrea Meardle it's a bigger league. The former star of the Broadway hit "Annie" must go to court in Los Angeles to tie up her next gig. She's on tap for a role in a TV movie tentatively titled "Rainbow," but since she's a minor, her parents, Paul and Phyllis Meardle, have to approve the deal — under the supervision of a lawyer. It's worth the hassle, she'll earn something in excess of $50,000 for her labors.

THE LOCK THAT FAILED
The nightclub owner locked the musicians out Thursday night when they couldn't come up with more money — but that didn't stop New York's non-profit Universal Jazz Coalition — or its "Salute to Women in Jazz." The group hired a caterer, set up tables and served a chicken dinner right on the sidewalk in front of the Casablanca Two club — where the legendary Blindland once stood — while pianist Mary Lou Williams, singer Helen Merrill and others jammed the night away for a crowd of about 100 fans. Says Ms. Merrill, "A padlock will not stop women in jazz." Adds Ms. Williams, "Perhaps it's better out here. It's cooler and there's more love."

QUOTE OF THE DAY
Police Commissioner Samuel Ruzel in an ode to the horse on adoption of the first mounted patrol in the history of East Meadow, N.Y.: "A mounted officer is an excellent vehicle to encourage dialogue with young people. It's a fringe benefit. When's the last time you saw a kid get a patrol car?" — applauded.

CHIP OFF THE OLD TWIG
Twiggy, the pencil-thin British model of the 1960s, turned pop singer for the 1970s, is expecting a little bud in November. Says her manager, Neville Schulman, Twiggy and her husband are very excited about it. They have come back to London because they want the baby to be British. Husband is American actor Michael Whitley. Schulman says the baby won't interrupt the Twiggy-singing career.

GLIMPSES
Don Adams, star of the old "Get Smart" TV series, was sued for divorce Thursday in Santa Monica, Calif., by his wife, Judy Luciano, who says he's a "chronic gambler," losing up to $8,000 a month ... Comedian Soupy Sales was sued for divorce Thursday in Los Angeles by Barbara Sales, his wife of 28 years ... The popular disco group The Ritchie Family is changing its image for its next album cover — from Cleopatra chic to a combination of bikinis and football helmets ... Crane dies from beating SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — Actor Bob Crane, the happy-go-lucky "Colonel Hogan" in the television series "Hogan's Heroes," was beaten to death in his sleep at his apartment Thursday, police said.

BOB CRANE ... murder's a riddle

Police said today they had no suspects and did not know of a motive for the slaying. They said there was no sign of forcible entry in the apartment and burglary was not considered a motive because nothing seemed to be missing. "At this point it's a riddle," said Lt. Ron Deen. Crane, 49, was struck at least three times on the head with a heavy instrument that had not been found by authorities. An electrical cord was found wrapped around his neck. A sheet had been pulled over Crane's body and he was clad only in underwear. Authorities said he was beaten so badly his body was not immediately identifiable. Investigators were questioning acquaintances and members of the cast of "Beginner's Luck," a dinner-theater production in which Crane had been starring for nearly a month.

The apartment early Thursday. "We heard nothing at all," said Jean Reed, manager of the apartments. Ms. Reed said Victoria Ann Berry, an actress, found Crane's body at about 2 p.m. Miss Berry went to his apartment looking for him because he failed to appear at a scheduled luncheon address to the Phoenix chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. "She ran out screaming and the other residents apparently made the call to the police," Ms. Reed said.

'Jaws 2' starts hot

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The movie "Jaws 2" grossed $1.1 million in three days of nationwide openings at 654 theaters, which Universal Studios said was the largest in motion picture history. The three-day total for the first "Jaws" in 1975 was only $7.7 million at 410 theaters. Nipping at the heels of "Jaws 2" was the three-day opening of "Grease," a musical set in a high school for the 1950s, which took in $9.3 million at 902 theaters, a record for Paramount.

CARTER RELAXES ON THE CHARTER FISHING VESSEL 'GANNET' . . . perhaps he relaxed too much, daughter Amy caught the biggest fish

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (UPI) — President Carter's 16-year-old daughter, Amy, holds bragging rights to the most recent White House fish story.

Amy caught the biggest fish Thursday, a 30-pound tuna, during a deep-sea fishing trip with her parents about 25 miles off Virginia's coast.

Taking a rare weekday off and clad in dungarees, a blue cowboy shirt and white sneakers, Carter landed a 25-pound tuna, about the same size as the tuna boated by the First Lady.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus picked up the $300 charter boat tab but didn't catch any fish.

"Amy got the biggest one," Carter told a dockside news conference after nine hours at sea, trolling the sunny reefs of the blue Atlantic.

"She did a good job, but we did help her some," he said. Asked if the day amounted to presidential hockey, Carter grinned and said, "Yes, I think this did more for the nation than if I stayed there (in Washington)."

The president didn't quite get away from it all, however. His 47-foot chartered boat, the Gannet, was accompanied by a Coast Guard cutter and a police vessel, as well as several boats hired by television crews and local reporters. Carter's party flew by helicopter from Washington to Virginia Beach, pulling out of Rudee Inlet aboard their baby blue chartered boat about 9 a.m. EDT.

Fishermen, among hundreds lining the shore, said the president should have a trailer.

Nixon to be heard but not seen much

HYDEN, Ky. (UPI) — People who expect a lengthy public appearance from President Nixon during his visit this weekend are in for a disappointment.

Nixon, who is making his first public speech since his resignation, will appear briefly at an airport rally Saturday in London, Ky., and then be cloaked from the public at Hyden's only motel Saturday night.

Madams withdraw appeal

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — Two madams who operated together in Lincoln County have agreed to drop their appeal to the Nevada Supreme Court contesting a referendum on outlawing prostitution.

Lorraine Helms and Judy Kuban, who were joined in their appeal by Lincoln County, agreed to the dismissal Thursday.

Voters last month petitioned for the new law and then approved it, but the two madams had argued before dropping their appeal, that there were irregularities on the petitions and the election should not have been called.

No more dice throws

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — An anonymous gambler who 28 years ago rolled a record 28 straight passes at the dice table does not want to try his luck again, even if the bankroll is free.

The Desert Inn Hotel had been searching for the man who made the rolls, a feat with odds of 10 million to 1.

However, the Southern California resident has chosen to remain anonymous and has turned down an expenses-paid trip to the Strip resort's reopening next week.

Brethren endorse handgun control

INDIANAPOLIS — Delegates to the Church of the Brethren annual conference have overwhelmingly endorsed a paper urging members of the denomination to surrender handguns in witness to their commitment to the Prince of Peace.
The statement also urged Congress to enact legislation further restricting handgun availability.
The paper was presented to the 1,000-member delegate body by a committee which had been commissioned last year to study violence and the use of firearms.
During the hour-long floor debate that followed presentation of the item, a number of persons, both delegates and observers, spoke to the issues. Some of those speaking against the paper expressed their belief that registration of guns is not the answer to crime and, in fact, be the first step in stripping citizens of their rights. Others opposing the paper said guns were no more dangerous than other weapons.

Religious beliefs surveyed

NEW YORK — The first major national survey compiling the views of churchgoers with those of the "unchurched" shows considerable agreement on basic religious beliefs but sharp differences in attitudes toward organized religion.
The survey, conducted by the Gallup organization, polled 848 adult church members and 1,253 adults who are not affiliated with a church.
An "unchurched" person, for purposes of the poll, was defined as one who has not attended a church service, other than for a special occasion such as a funeral, wedding or Christmas program, in the last six months.
The number of people in this category has been climbing in recent years, and this was a major reason the religious coalition decided to look for explanations.
According to the survey, 41 percent of all Americans are now "unchurched." By comparison, a study eight years ago by the Glenmark Fathers, a Roman Catholic group, found the number to be 38.6 percent.
The respondents who did not attend church tended to be younger, more mobile and more frequently male than their churchgoing counterparts. They were more likely to believe that it is possible to be religious without attending church, were more of the opinion that an individual should make his own decision regarding religion, and complained more often that churches had lost their spiritual dimension.
Fifty-two percent of the unchurched said they would return to church under certain conditions, such as finding a clergyman they could confide in or a church where people were receptive and that offered good preaching.

They also shared convictions with churchgoers to a somewhat surprising degree. For example, 93 percent of the churchgoers said they believed in the resurrection of Jesus, and 88 percent of the unchurched agreed. Eighty-nine percent of the churchgoers polled said they believed Jesus was the son of God, and 88 percent said they believed in life after death. Corresponding figures for the unchurched were 76 percent and 57 percent.
Further, 25 percent of the unchurched reported having had a "born again" experience, as opposed to 47 percent of the churchgoers.
The survey also found a sharp drop in the proportion of the general population that regards religion as "very important" in daily life.
Similar questions posed on surveys conducted in 1962 and 1967 found respectively, 75 percent and 70 percent of those polled regarding it as such. The new poll shows only 53 percent give religion as much importance.
The disparity between responses of churchgoers and the unchurched was especially large, with 70 percent of the former giving it a "very important" rating, a view shared by only 30 percent of the latter.
Other parts of the survey uncovered a strong current belief that the individual should "arrive at his or her own religious beliefs independent of any churches or synagogues." Eighty-six percent of the unchurched and 76 percent of the churchgoers agreed with that statement.
Although the unchurched were more inclined to criticize churches for allegedly "losing the real spiritual part of religion," a large proportion of churchgoers agreed with them. While 60 percent of the unchurched "strongly" or "moderately" held that view, the same attitudes were affirmed by 52 percent of churchgoers.
Similarly, both groups criticized organized religion as being "too concerned with organizational as opposed to theological or spiritual issues," as not being "effective in helping people find meaning in life," and as not being "concerned enough for social justice."
The greatest divergence in views was found in regard to church teachings on morality. For example, the unchurched group was much more likely to favor the legalization of marijuana and to hold a more permissive attitude on sex.
Those who had left the church cited several reasons, including competition from other activities, objections to church teachings or members, and moving to another community. However, 72 per-

Atheists respond to Dial A Prayer

DENVER (UPI) — The Society of Separationists has arrived at their response to Dial A Prayer — it's Dial-An-Atheist.
The newspaper ad began appearing in Denver newspapers last week. The curious may find it difficult to resist dialing the number.
"Hello," greets a cheery voice.
"Are you responding to the ad?" he asks. It is not a recording.
The Dial-An-Atheist number, 233-1278, began appearing in Denver newspapers last week. The ads and the telephone line are paid for by the Denver chapter of the Society of Separationists Inc., also known as American Atheists.
The chapter is affiliated with the national organization founded by atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair, who first made news in 1963 when her Supreme Court case led to the banning of prescribed prayer in public schools.
Dial-An-Atheist program is a scuttling effort by the local chapter, which now has about 30 members. But the person who answers the phone says: "We don't try to convert anybody, and I don't think we could, anyway."
"Some of our members are only trying to help atheist and agnostics, not trying to spread atheism."
"I find a considerable number of them think they're along," the engineer said. "That's marvelous — I didn't realize anyone else felt the way I do."
Dial-An-Atheist appears near the listings of Dial A Prayer; Dial-A-Devotion, sponsored by the American United Methodist Church; Dial-A-Meditation, sponsored by the Mile Hi Church of Religious Science, and Dial A Devotion, sponsored by the Seventh Day Baptists of Boulder.
All follow one format: a tape-recorded message, usually by the church's pastor, including a short sermon, scriptural quotations and prayer.
Not with Dial-An-Atheist. The phone is answered by a consulting engineer, who said he agreed to answer the Gospel Music Week observance planned

TWIN FALLS — As part of the observance of Gospel Music Week, a concert by Magic Valley artists will be held Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium of the College of Southern Idaho.
The current week has been proclaimed Gospel Music week in Idaho by Gov. John V. Evans.
The concert Saturday night is free and open to the public, although a free-will offering will be accepted. Steve McMullin, president of Silver Hollow Productions, the only recording studio in Twin Falls, said his firm is sponsoring the concert as the first in a series of such programs.
"Our purpose," he said, "is to make the public aware of gospel music and of the talent in our own area in this field."
McMullin said some of the groups and individuals performing in the Saturday concert include The SOS Quartet and Spirit Tones, both Filer; Gospel Roads, Jerome; Kurt Snyder and his group, Linda Day, and The New Five Singers, all Twin Falls. Day is a recording artist with her best gospel album recorded and produced by Knox Brothers, Harrisburg, Ore. She is accompanied by Jo Gerrish, piano, and Randy Gardner, guitar.

Teen uncertain

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old male with a problem. On the first date with a girl, I feel no irrefutable urge to kiss her or to make out with her as is expected of most guys nowadays. I feel that I should get to know the girl better in order to be certain of my feelings toward her. It seems that most girls expect a guy to do more than just talk or hold hands even before they know him very well. Is my slow approach normal and something to be desired? Or should I go ahead and jump all over a girl as is expected? I'm sure many boys my age are wondering the same thing and we'd be greatly relieved of much pressure if we knew how to act.

UNCERTAIN

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Who said "all" girls expect a guy to jump all over them on the first date? My mail tells me that most girls prefer the "slow approach," and I recommend it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him Frank) and I are in our late 20s, have been married four years and have a 2-year-old daughter I'll call Tammy.

Frank has always had a rotten temper. Well, last week he got mad and slapped me around and I cried. Tammy was in the room at the time and saw it all, and now Tammy won't have anything to do with her father. When he comes near her, she turns her head away and cries. If he tries to touch her, she screams and draws away.

This hurts Frank something terrible. I keep telling him that Tammy will forget and get over it in time. Will she?

RHODE ISLAND RED

DEAR RED: Tammy may, in time, become more "forgiving"—but don't count on her to forget. In the meantime, unless you enjoy being slapped around, insist that Frank get some professional help. In learning how to control his temper, a man who "slaps" his wife around has serious problems.

DEAR ABBY: My wife is one of those women who knows everything. Amongst her "most thorough" area of knowledge is what "most" husbands do and do not do, although I can't for the life of me figure out where she gets all her information.

The specific question at the moment is who should shampoo the rug—the husband or the wife? We have an electric "shampooer" that is no heavier to push around than the average vacuum cleaner, so it's not too hard for her to operate.

I am employed full time. My wife is not employed outside the home. Our three children are in school all day. We live in a well-furnished house with all the modern conveniences. My wife insists that I should shampoo the rug because "most" husbands do. Do they?

DENVER DUDE

DEAR DUDE: I can't speak for "most" husbands, and neither can your wife. But what "they" do should have no bearing on who does what in your home. Instead of working yourself into a lather over this seemingly trivial problem, why not take turns?

CONFIDENTIAL TO M.M.: If you want your children to turn out well, spend twice as much time with them, and half as much money.

your health Tissue swelling

Dear Dr. Lamb,
About three years ago my doctor discovered that I have lymphedema and said it had been coming on for many years. This has affected both my legs and my feet. I was finding it more and more difficult to walk. At the time I was losing some weight and to wear measured elastic legwear. I went to an orthopedic surgeon who performed bunionectomy two months ago. He said he never saw legs that were so badly swollen. In his opinion I should be taking pills for water although my doctor won't prescribe them for me. What causes this condition and is there a cure?

Dear Reader:
Although lymphedema is simply tissue swelling, it is a fairly complex problem. Most people don't know that in addition to the arteries, veins and the capillaries that connect them there is still another part to the circulation. That is the big lymphatic system.

These tiny little vessels are throughout your entire body. Fluid leaves the capillaries in your circulation to go out and bathe tissues. A good 80 to 90 percent of it is returned to the circulation through this enormous lymphatic system. These are little tiny channels which are very thin walled. The fluid oozes into them and is gradually collected and returned to the circulation.

Whenever these channels are blocked for any reason the fluid begins to back up behind them and produce swelling. This can occur after surgery or any injury when the lymphatic system is damaged. It can also occur because the lymphatic channels have been cut during surgery. You can hardly make an incision anywhere on the body without cutting them so there is nothing that the doctors could do to avoid that problem.

The swelling is quite different from that that you might get from heart failure, but somewhat more similar to what people have with varicose veins. To give you some information on the whole mechanism of swelling and what people can do about it, I am sending you the Health Letter number 11-6, Swelling: Causes and Management.

Other readers who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in the form of this paper, P.O. Box 298, San Antonio, Texas 78292.

As explained in the Health Letter, one of the major factors that permits swelling is the flow of fluids in the tissues around the lymphatic and capillary channels. That's why the fluid accumulates in the loose tissue around the ankle or if you're lying down around the eyes. The elastic bandage increases the pressure within the tissues and helps prevent this. That's what your elastic legwear is doing.

Another important factor in swelling is posture. You can help prevent swelling of your feet with the problem that you have by lying down and putting the feet above the heart level.

FAMILY GATHERINGS IN THE TV ROOM AT WATERS HOME INCLUDES AUSTRALIAN STUDENT

Jane Thompson, at right, AFS exchange student, relaxes with host family

Exchange student compares lifestyles

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JANE THOMPSON enjoys stay

TWIN FALLS — Jane Thompson, 19-year-old blonde Melbourne, Australia, student, has made the most of her American Field Service exchange student opportunity this year.

When she returns home later this month she will be able to relate a wide variety of experiences of life in a rural Idaho community. She has lived in three different homes while in Twin Falls and has taken part in a graduation ceremony, something her fellow Australian graduates do not do.

Jane is currently residing in the home of Deskin "Deck" and Susan Waters where she has an opportunity to be a big sister to their 4-year-old daughter, Ammy. Jane has finished high school in Melbourne and was attending the university there, studying child care.

Deck, whose father was a Navy man and who served in the Navy himself for several years, says he has been in just about every country — except Australia. Susan, who also traveled abroad and studied in France because of her major in French, also missed Australia. After spending the past few months with Jane, both say when they have an opportunity to travel again, that may be their first stop.

Jane, who says she hopes some day to work in the American Field Service program and help other young people avail themselves of the program opportunities, said her year in Twin Falls has been much more educational than a year in college.

In the Twin Falls High School, she took subjects she would not have had an opportunity to take in her own school system. She studied American government, joined the lifetime sports program, studied psychology, performing arts and such other subjects as creative writing,

Jewelry making and leather work. "In our schools (Australia) we do not have basketball, football and baseball teams. We study in school from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and then study after dinner until about midnight at home."

"Graduation is not at all like it is in Twin Falls. We take our final exams and only about 80 percent of the students are able to pass. The results are not available for several months after school ends and we wait and worry until we are notified we passed or until we read in the newspaper the list of names of those who passed and therefore graduated. It can be pretty embarrassing for those who don't find their names on the list," she said.

When Jane first came to Twin Falls as an American Field Service Exchange student, she lived with the Con O'Keefe family which included the parents, three daughters and one son. "Next, she spent several months with the John Burkhardt family and when one of their three daughters who had been away returned, she moved into the Waters home."

"I have given her some experience in American life," Susan Waters said. She worked on a committee during the State Republican Central Committee to observe a political convention first hand. She also attended Girls State as a page to see youth government sessions at work.

Susan, whose father is T.W. Stivers, state representative from Twin Falls, said she couldn't be a member of the family and not get involved in politics. Her other experiences included a trip to California and realization of a goal of long standing — a visit to Disneyland.

"Not overly enthusiastic about outdoor activities like camping and backpacking, Jane said she did have one camping trip — when she slept in the front yard of the McNeess family, still in the cabin in Ketchum, in the rain.

"I went camping with Dr. McNeess and his family but it rained, so we camped in the front yard," she said of her main outdoor adventure.

She also took part in one day of snow skiing in the high school lifetime sports program at Soldier Mountain and managed to try the lifts and a variety of slopes.

Although she says life in Idaho is far different than it is in Melbourne with about 27 million people, young people have about the same interests and problems in both countries.

While she has been in the United States, her family purchased a new automobile agency, handling Ford vehicles, and because the agency is located in a rural area the family has moved from the city.

"I will probably continue to live in Melbourne because of my college, but I will spend some time at my family's new country home," she said.

Jane is a big booster for exchange students. Her 17-year-old brother applied for participation but has not been placed.

"I didn't think I would have a chance of being accepted when my brother didn't get in. One of my friends suggested I apply. I had always wanted to visit the United States but I was studying Indonesia so I listed that as my first choice. Thinking I would have a better chance of going there, America was my second choice but somehow I was selected for the United States and for a whole year, another situation I thought would be out of my reach," she says. Jane hopes to become a social worker with emphasis on child care. She has been interested in the child development center program and feels fortunate to have been assigned to a community with such a facility.

Expert gives details

Beauty standards differ around globe

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — There is a clear contrast between the Miss USA and the Miss Universe entries. In Miss USA a girl of 22 is among the eldest. Most are college coeds. A few are still in high school. Only a handful have jobs. Usually they haven't traveled much and few of them have ever been on TV.

"They all are beautiful. Put any one of them on a street, and she would turn heads."

"The Universe contestants, on the other hand, average 25 or 26. Many are successful professional models or screen actresses in their own countries. They're much more worldly than the USA contestants."

"They all are beautiful. Put any one of them on a street, and she would turn heads. But when they get on the stage, they begin to outshine and outshine each other."

"The field is narrowed to 12 beauty queens and there is little to choose from. That's where poise, personality and intelligence come in."

"But let me make it clear that there's never been a Miss Universe who didn't look great in a swimsuit."

Barker, who does none of the judging, himself, said the Miss Universe entrants are judged in swim suits, evening gowns and their national costumes. The judges rate each girl individually and cast a secret ballot for the 12 semi-finalists. Their names are not revealed, even to the judges, until Barker reads their names on the air.

Thereafter, each judge meets and interviews the girls in private to weigh her personality and intelligence. A second secret ballot is cast for the top five, again unrevealed until Barker reads their names on the air.

"I always think I can guess the winner," Barker said, laughing. "But I'm rarely right. I was more successful when I first started. Now I find myself trying to outguess the judges."

"Always the winner beauty contest wins and hugs the girl who is runner-up. But Miss USA of 1977, Kim Tomes of Texas, made a lasting impression on me."

"When I announced her name she laughed — the only girl ever to do that — and threw her arms around me and gave me a big kiss. That was memorable."

Barker has traveled to Puerto Rico, Greece, El Salvador, the Philippines, Hong Kong and the Dominican Republic for the Miss Universe telecasts. This year's contest will be held in Acapulco, Mexico.

There is a considerable language barrier among Miss Universe entries which makes interviews difficult for the veteran television personality. "But Barker works hard at putting the contestants at ease."

"During the week of the pageant I try to meet each girl individually," he said. "Most of them are going on TV for their first time and they're frightened. There's a lot of talk for them."

"I tell them I'm there to help and if anything goes wrong on the air I'll take over and cover for them."

So far there have been no major accidents or busts. One of a contestant's shoulder straps broke. But before the young lady's evening gown

"The girls learn about makeup, how to dress, posture and poise. It's a growing experience for them."

"When I did my first pageant, I expected the girls to be beautiful but I was surprised how intelligent they are. I don't think they're being exploited. The pageants represent an opportunity for them."

revealed any impropriety. Barker grabbed the broken strap and saved the day.

"I was very proud of myself," he said. "But this time in the crowd later told me they didn't think I was there."

"Some people say beauty contests are demeaning to women. I don't think so. The girls learn about makeup, how to dress, posture and poise. It's a growing experience for them."

"When I did my first pageant, I expected the girls to be beautiful but I was surprised how intelligent they are. I don't think they're being exploited. The pageants represent an opportunity for them."

Northwest Opera plans new season

TWIN FALLS — The Northwest Opera Association of Twin Falls recently announced plans for its 1978-79 season.

A one-act opera and scenes from other operas, to be accompanied by full orchestra, are being organized.

A meeting at the home of Hubert Keltner in Twin Falls for the association's board of directors decided to hold auditions for vocalists and chorus sometime in early September.

The NOA 1978-79 program, to be called "Magic Valley Night Opera," includes a fully staged and costumed production of Wagner's comic one-act opera, "The Impresario." Staged scenes from other popular Grand operas will include Wagner's "Lohengrin," Verdi's "Rigoletto" and "Otello" and Puccini's "Manon Lescaut." The performances are scheduled for February 1979.

The opera company has previously produced such operas as "Suzanna," "Don Pasqual" and "Pallachi."

Those interested in auditioning or working with the association can get more information from Keltner at 733-9147 or Pat Woliver at the College of Southern Idaho music department.

HAZELTON — Hazelton's annual Independence Day celebration will be held Saturday, July 1, at the city park beginning at 6 p.m.

Fireworks will be shot off at dark.

The Hazelton Lions Club, which sponsors the celebration, will also provide "fathers' games," food booths, and a mini-carnival for children.

Deadly toxins aid research

By HAROLD M. SCHMECK Jr.
1978 N.Y. Times Service

BALTIMORE — The list sounds like a recipe from the three witches in Macbeth: mice, rats, electric eels and unborn chickens. Juice from poisonous plants and spoiled food; venom from kratts and cobras, poison from black widow spiders and the deadly Japanese puffer fish.

But there is nothing magical or Shakespearean about the purpose to which these items are put. They are laboratory materials used at Johns Hopkins University for research on a strange disease called myasthenia gravis.

The deadly poisons act by interfering with the transmission of nerve signals. Dr. Daniel B. Drachman, of Johns Hopkins, explained in a recent interview. Each does so in a different manner, so the poisons can be used for a sort of chemical dissection to reveal details of the interplay between nerve and muscle.

The deadly toxin of botulinum, for example, prevents release of the messenger chemical acetylcholine from nerve cells. The puffer fish toxin halts nerve signal propagation at the point of injection, as though a wire were cut.

Purified components of cobra venom block the receptors in muscle cells that receive the nerve signals. Components of the venom and probably also holds clues to many other important diseases.

Myasthenia gravis afflicts 50,000 to 100,000 Americans, causing muscle weakness that is sometimes mild, sometimes so severe that it threatens death.

Early symptoms include fatigue, weakness upon exercising, drooping eyelids, double vision and slurred speech.

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) - Prices opened mixed Friday in slow trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average was slightly off a point at 91.46 shortly after the close. It has gained 9.36 points the past three sessions.

Early turnover amounted to about 730,000 shares. Thursday's turnover was the slowest in a month.

Before the market opened, the Labor Department reported consumer prices, fueled by sharp rises for food and housing, soared 0.9 percent in May - identical to the April jump. For the past two months, prices have climbed 2.54 percent annually.

Trendsetting in the bond market is the prime lending rate for big corporate borrowers (9 percent from 8 1/2 percent) Friday in a move that was widely anticipated. Nevertheless, Wall Street observers said the prime's latest level (5 1/2 percent) still could be a market depressant.

Slite traders were emboldened by the Federal Reserve's report late Thursday that showed the nation's cash money supply had risen 1.6 billion in the latest statistical week. It dropped $1.1 billion the week before. Loan demand remained strong.

The report appeared to take pressure off the Fed to lighten credit, although the supply's growth over the past month exceeded targets, the Board reported.

Brokers said there was little in the news background to move the market in either direction.

The Senate late Thursday approved a bill to guarantee $1.5 billion in loans for financially strapped New York City, and Commerce reported retail sales rose 1.2 percent last week.

Stock dealer licenses needed

BOISE — All livestock dealers in Idaho will be required to be licensed as of Saturday, Wilson Kellogg, Idaho director of agriculture, said Thursday.

The ruling came under new provisions of the Livestock Dealer Licensing Act passed during the last session of the Idaho Legislature, Kellogg said.

"Dealers should be aware that bonding under the U.S. Packer and Stockyards Act does not exempt them from licensing with the State of Idaho," Kellogg explained. Kellogg said a livestock dealer is defined as any person who buys, receives or assembles livestock for resale, either for his own account or for another person.

He added the new law does not apply to livestock producers defined under the act as any person who sells only livestock which he has raised or which he has owned or had in his possession for a period of at least 60 days.

Loans open.

HAILEY — The Farmers Home Administration has loan and grant funds available for Blaine County low income home owners. Such persons under 62 years of age may be eligible for loans up to $5,000 to repair, or improve their homes.

Interested persons should contact Randy W. Hart at 788-2288 or write Farmers Home Administration, Box 1650, Hailey.

Zoning violator mad, sues judge, attorney

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN Times-News writer

HAILEY — A Blaine County resident convicted last March of violating county zoning regulations, now is suing the prosecuting attorney, planning administrator, and magistrate judge involved in his trial.

Frank C. Geissler filed his suit in 5th District Court in Hailey.

He is suing Blaine County planner Alan Reynolds, Blaine County prosecutor Maurice Ellsworth and magistrate judge Daniel Alban for allegedly depriving him of common law rights guaranteed under the United States and Idaho Constitutions.

Geissler, who is representing himself in the lawsuit, claims the three officials have slandered, harassed, and maliciously prosecuted him.

He is suing each official for $2,500 actual damages and $20,000 in punitive damages and asking for attorney fees in the case.

Although the cause for his action is not stated in the court complaint, Ellsworth said the lawsuit stems from Geissler's conviction for violating Blaine County zoning regulations.

Ellsworth filed a criminal action against Geissler for maintaining a trailer home in a residential use area without a conditional use permit.

Ellsworth said Geissler was found guilty of the zoning violation in a jury trial presided over by Alban this past March and the Blaine County resident was fined $300 and ordered to move his trailer home.

Geissler subsequently appealed his conviction to 5th District Court and then to the Idaho Supreme Court, Ellsworth stated.

Now Geissler has filed a separate suit against the three county officials who, he asserts, deprived him of his constitutional rights.

Geissler charges that Reynolds, as the county's planner, harassed him with threatening letters. Invaded his privacy by taking unauthorized photographs of his property and collaborated in the county's court action against him.

He claims Ellsworth, as prosecutor, harassed him with threatening letters, slandered him in a newspaper article and denied him of due process rights during court proceedings.

Geissler also charges Alban, as the magistrate presiding over the jury trial during which he was convicted, with denying him of due process rights; acting without jurisdiction and furthering the county's malicious prosecution.

There is some question, however, whether Alban can be sued in this case because judges are often protected from civil liability in cases they have heard by a doctrine of "judicial immunity."

Deputy Attorney general Rudolf Beresch, whose office will defend Alban in the case, said he will invoke judicial immunity as a defense and he thinks he can make a very strong case for it in this situation.

Geissler has asked for a jury to hear his case.

Busy recreation weekend expected

Bliss measurers pass

BLISS — Bliss Bliss school patrons turned out in small numbers to overwhelmingly approve both an override and plant facilities levy Thursday.

The vote was 37 "yes" to 3 "no" on the 12.75 mill maintenance and operation override levy. The vote was 38-2 for the 2 mill plant facilities levy, according to Anita Standal, school district clerk.

Both levies have been in effect previously. The plant facilities levy was approved for 10 years, while override levies have to be voted on annually.

'Crib death' in Wendell

GOODING — A 3-month-old baby from South Dakota was found dead Wednesday morning at the home of a relative east of Wendell where his parents were visiting.

Dr. James L. McChugh, Gooding County coroner, termed the death of Richard Wade Reitenbaugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Reitenbaugh, Edgemont, S.D., a crib death. The child was born March 28, 1978, at Chadron, Neb.

In addition to the parents, a brother and sister survive. The body will be sent to Edgemont by Thompson Chapel, Gooding, to Edgemont for services Monday.

Woman becomes principal

HAILEY — Wood River High School guidance counselor Barbara Dargatz accepted Tuesday the Blaine County school district's offer to become principal of Wood River Junior High School.

Dargatz, who must still be approved by the Blaine County School Board, will become the second woman principal in the school district.

School officials say Dargatz's appointment has nothing to do with a civil rights complaint the guidance counselor filed last year charging the school district with sex discrimination in its hiring policies.

Dargatz filed the complaint after she was turned down for the principal's position at the Wood River High School in 1977.

Rather than go through a full-scale federal investigation to settle the matter, she and the school board decided to informally work out any grievances with the help of officials from the Pacific Institute of Nonsexist Education in Portland.

Blaine County school superintendent Norman Riggs stated firmly Wednesday that "the appointment had nothing to do with the complaint she filed."

Riggs, however, did acknowledge that her complaint was finally resolved when the opportunity appeared for Dargatz to apply for the junior high school principal's position.

The school superintendent said the formal resolution of the civil rights complaint will soon be announced publicly.

TWIN FALLS — Sawtooth National Forest officials are expecting the busiest weekend of the season in campgrounds and recreation areas for the Fourth of July holiday.

This week's recreation report indicates the more than 80 campgrounds in the forest will be well utilized as well as many unimproved areas. Most popular campgrounds such as those around Redfish Lake, Stanley and Alturas Lakes are expected to fill by Friday afternoon.

With the exception of areas around Alturas, Redfish and Stanley Lakes, the public is permitted to use areas outside of designated campgrounds. Rangers say there is an increased trend among recreationists to utilize these less formal sites.

On the Burley Ranger District, all campgrounds are open with water available. The spur road into Lake Cleveland is still blocked by snow and the Thompson Flats road is somewhat muddy. The Clear Creek Ridge road is closed on top of Redfish River Mountain.

The Rock Creek road in the Twin Falls Ranger District will remain closed until construction is completed. Campgrounds below Third Fork are open and accessible from the Hanson entrance. Access to the Diamond Field Jack area is available through Shoshone Basin.

All campgrounds are open and water is available in the Fairfield area. New speed limits have been established and signs posted along the South Fork of the Boise River. Snow level in that area is about 9,400 feet.

In the Sawtooth National Recreation area most high lakes are still frozen or partially frozen and mountain trails are not advised for either horses or trail machines. Snowline is about 7,600 to 8,000 feet elevation. Lakes that are accessible include Farley, Hell Roaring, Yellowbelly, Lower and Middle Cramer, Bench Lakes, Heart Lake and the lower lakes in the Bolder chain.

Roads remaining closed because of muddy conditions and snow include Mayes Creek, Fisher Creek, Park Creek, and Elk Meadow. The Fourth of July road is open for about six miles.

Forest officials suggest recreationists take along insect repellent and some trash containers as containers provided are heavily used on busy weekends. Forest users are reminded fire works are illegal in the forest and vegetation in some lower elevations is beginning to dry out, increasing fire hazards.

The Red Fish Lake visitor center and the Stanley Ranger station are open on a daily basis with visitor activities scheduled on a daily basis at the Redfish Lake center.

Planners consider Jerome golf course

JEROME — Golf enthusiasts may soon be able to live right in the middle of an eighteen-hole course, if the Jerome County Planning Commission approves a novel development plan.

The Mesa Verde Corporation presented preliminary plans Thursday night to build an additional nine-hole golf course adjacent to the Jerome Country Club's existing nine-hole course and to sprinkle it with 127 residential lots. The planning commission delayed approval of the plans until the Mesa Verde Corporation completes routine steps in the application process.

But commission chairman Roy Prescott praised the proposal, saying "it's time for a development in Jerome."

The golf course-residential combination is the first of its kind in Magic Valley.

The planning commission told Mesa Verde secretary Joe Davidson it won't vote on the proposal until Mesa Verde gets permission from the health and highway departments to proceed with soil tests and property owners within 300 feet of the proposed development.

Governor notes rapid rise of juvenile crime

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The rapid rise in juvenile crime in Idaho must be met with new emphasis on deterrence by law enforcement and communities, Gov. John V. Evans told Idaho Peace Officers Association members here Thursday night.

The governor said following the meeting he came to Twin Falls to perform one of his favorite duties — present awards to the Governor's Ten, the top pistol shooters of the state, and other winners of the annual police pistol shot.

Gov. Evans complimented the association for helping maintain a high quality of law enforcement in Idaho, saying state, city and county officers here need not take a back seat to any other state in the nation.

He singled out crime by juveniles as one of the major problems the entire state must deal with.

"The average age of inmates in our state prison is below 26. Many of the young men and women there have long records of offenses. Last year juveniles in Idaho were arrested for murder, rape and arson as well as the usual burglary, car theft and vandalism.

"We need to put more emphasis on deterrence of these crimes. A young man or woman should not have to commit a crime in order to get assistance," the governor said.

He called on schools and local communities to establish programs to identify and assist the potential violators.

"I believe the time to cut down our juvenile crime is when it is in the making. These young people need our assistance before they become criminals, not after the pattern is set. I have made the assistance of the Law Enforcement Planning Commission available for such efforts," Evans said.

He said the legislature accepted many of his proposals of the Public Safety Program. Features of the program include new efforts to assist schools and local communities in fighting the drug problem.

Evans said Idaho, as the fourth fastest growing state in the nation, is being challenged by many new problems brought on by growth in population.

"Today the growth in our population is the most important issue facing Idaho," he said. "That growth provides prosperity, problems, and opportunities in areas as diverse as energy, land use and transportation, but it also has a major impact on law enforcement in even the smallest of our communities."

The governor said Idaho law enforcement is rising to meet these challenges with better training programs and utilization of new techniques in the field. He said the Idaho Peace Officers Association is helping keep law enforcement agencies abreast of new developments and programs.

Twin Falls officials deny opposing 1% initiative

By JEFF SHER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — State Sen. Richard High and Twin Falls County Assessor Bill Clark said Thursday they are not organizing opposition to the 1 percent initiative.

Clark emphatically stated, "Neither of us oppose the initiative as such. Both of us are certainly in accord with the fundamental objectives of that initiative, that of limiting government spending."

Clark added, however, that he has "some serious questions about the language of the initiative."

High and Clark, both recognized taxation experts, made their comments to clarify a misunderstanding they said was caused by their participation in a meeting held last week to discuss the initiative.

Clark admitted he contacted several people, encouraging them to attend the meeting, but he said he felt the purpose of the meeting was to present factual information regarding the initiative.

"Neither of us were trying to formulate a coalition to oppose the objectives of the initiative," he added.

The Idaho Education Association and the Idaho Association of Cities, on the other hand, viewed the meeting as an opportunity to organize opposition to the initiative, and at the end of the meeting they asked for volunteers to work against the initiative.

Clark said, "I did not sign one of those green slips to be considered part of the steering committee of the opposition coalition. I was high on that either."

Clark said he would not become part of any opposition coalition, but he said he would be available to provide information about the initiative and its impact.

High, in a press release, said, "The initiative is already accomplishing its purpose. Local officials are getting the message, and I would hope our national leaders are too. It's ironic. If we had had the initiative a year ago, Gov. Evans wouldn't have dared veto the eight mill tax relief proposed by the Republican legislature."

High added the legislature can and will work to fulfill the wishes of the people.

Magic Valley horse show opens

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

FILER — Lovers of both western and English style riding will find something to enjoy in the second annual Magic Valley Open Horse Show Saturday at the Twin Falls County fairgrounds.

Competition in the day-long event begins at 8:30 a.m. with classes offered for both beginner and advanced riders and horses. Anyone interested in showing may enter the events.

Show committee members say morning classes will include over-the-fence jumping competition and will start with a warm-up class over low fences. These will not be judged but will serve as practice for anyone interested in competing in the show or trying out their mounts.

Judging the show will be Jackie Smith, of Los Altos, Calif.

Exhibitors of all breeds of horses are invited to participate in both the English and western classes.

During the afternoon the silver jumper event is planned. This will include modified hunter, shown in hand, freshman, green and regular hunter under saddle classes hunter, seat equitation for riders 13 and under, 14-17 and 18 and over, English pleasure open, bridle path hack, adult pleasure and hunter hack classes will complete the English division of the show.

Jackson 'put foot in it'?

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans' campaign manager said Thursday he was pleased to see Republican challenger Larry Jackson "follow the example of two counterparts by putting his foot in his mouth."

"Larry Jackson has joined the list of Republican gubernatorial candidates who are daily losing credibility with Idaho voters," Jan Hammer said. He was reacting to Jackson's statement saying that Evans, a Democrat, was doing nothing to prepare for implementation of the 1 percent property tax initiative should it become law.

"Evidently, Jackson doesn't know the difference between state-government department heads and any three state employees," Hammer said. "The governor discussed budget cutbacks with department heads who were well aware of his intentions. When trying to get information Jackson only thought it necessary to call state workers almost at random."

Hammer said Idaho politics this year are being enlivened by the antics of the Republican gubernatorial candidates falling over themselves seeing who can get the most facts wrong.

He said voters are getting a good idea of how the state might be run if Bluch Ort, Jim Crowe or Jackson became governor.

Hammer didn't say anything about Vern Ravenscroft, Allan Larsen or Jay Amys, the other Republican hopefuls.

Anaconda closes plant

WEED HEIGHTS, Nev. — The Anaconda Co. Friday completes the shutdown of its big open pit mine, a mainstay of western Nevada's economy for 25 years, and there were indications Kennecott Copper Corp. would permanently close its eastern Nevada works.

Sixty-three men were laid off in the final phase of Anaconda's work force reduction, that began early this year.

Works Manager Mark Nesbit stayed on to sell the machinery, equipment and buildings. Many of the workers moved out, seeking jobs away from the area that had grown dependent upon Anaconda's payroll of about $8 million a year.

The mine opened in June 1952 and its reduction plant began production in October 1953. Nesbit said the plant turned out 7.75 billion pounds of copper over the years. It had a peak work force of 565 in 1972. Then the operation ran into double trouble: foreign competition and a dwindling supply of ore.

"The decision to close was influenced by the market. We only had three years of ore left in the mine, but we would have run it if the market had not sagged," Nesbit said.

He said there is a "pretty good market" for the plant's equipment. Ironically, much of the interest is from foreign operators largely responsible for the domestic copper market slump that has affected most U.S. producers.

Nesbit said the men who were laid off will be able to draw an unemployment benefit that most are work-oriented and won't really stay on the government long.

"They may want a summer vacation, but by the time school starts, they'll want jobs," he said.

As for the huge pit, Anaconda has proposed flooding it to the Walker River Irrigation District and creating a 600-foot deep lake. Flood waters diverted from the Walker River would make it a valuable irrigation and recreation asset, but downstream interests oppose the plan on grounds it would deplete Walker Lake, a prime recreation resource near Hawthorne.

Meanwhile, Kennecott's headquarters in New York reported Thursday it decided to continue indefinite suspension of mining and concentrating operations near Ely and will begin to dispose of its laid-off work force. A spokesman at Ely said the company intends immediately to start selling its heavy equipment in the mine at Ruth or to shift it to Kennecott operations in Utah or other states.

The area's copper deposits have been mined since the turn of the century. In recent years, the yield was low grade ore.

Kennecott's open pit and reduction works were closed indefinitely May 1 because of the poor market and federal clean air requirements the company deemed to costly for the old smelter. Kennecott said it had spent more than $20 million to comply with state air quality regulations, but the improvements did not meet tougher federal standards.

A few years ago, about 1,000 persons were employed but that was slashed to 325 in May, leaving only enough workers to process stockpiled concentrates. A spokesman said the smelter will continue to operate until fall.

Dean Kerr, general manager of the Nevada Mines Division, said the company will start an immediate search for replacement jobs in Kennecott operations in other states. He said some workers would be encouraged to take company retirement benefits.

He said the company will support White Pine County's economic development efforts to replace Kennecott's multimillion-dollar payroll. One proposal is to locate a huge electric generating plant in the county.

Scruggs to fight loss of position

MIDDLETON, Idaho (UPI) — Middleton Councilman Darrell Scruggs said Thursday he may contest the legality of an election which resulted in his recall because of typographical errors in legal notices regarding the election.

Scruggs, who was recalled Wednesday, said he may institute legal action because of notices announcing the election printed in Press-Tribune Newspapers. He said at least two of four contained a typographical error that changed the meaning of one of his statements concerning why he initially voted to retain Council Chief James Reid.

Recall proponents said Scruggs failed to keep a campaign promise that, if elected, he would vote to fire Reid.

In addition, Scruggs said two other legal notices failed to tell voters the closing date for voter registration.

A Press-Tribune check of the legal notices indicates those published June 10 and June 17 attribute a statement to Scruggs about Reid which read, "He has to do." The statement should have read "He has to go."

Scruggs said he asked Middleton city officials June 12 to correct the error but that the legal notice published June 17 still contained it. It was not corrected until June 23.

Verla Harker, Press-Tribune newspapers legal notices clerk, said Thursday she was not notified by Middleton officials to correct the error until "sometime around the 19th or 20th of June."

Ms. Harker said when the corrected version of the election ballots were published June 23 and 24, she was not asked by city officials again to publish the notice of the recall election that would have included voter registration instructions.

She said, though, the notice of recall election did not run correctly June 10 and 17.

Scruggs said the city's failure to immediately correct the error, which appeared in the first two legal notices, changed the meaning of his statement to the extent that it may have influenced the results of the election.

Levin completes swap of Celts for Braves, slates move to San Diego

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Irving Levin, owner of the Boston Celtics, announced Thursday final agreement has been reached with Buffalo Braves owner John Y. Brown to switch franchises and pave the way for Levin to bring the Braves to San Diego next season.

The agreement, reached after two weeks of negotiations, will be presented to the NBA Board of Governors, of which Levin is chairman, at its meeting July 7 in Chicago.

"Yes sir," Levin said in a telephone interview with UPI. "We just made an agreement with John Y. Brown to exchange franchises. I foresee no difficulties with the board approving the agreement."

Under terms of the "simple franchise swap," Levin would take over ownership of the Braves with his partner Harold Lipnick and move the franchise next season to San Diego. Previous history of two unsuccessful basketball franchises, the NBA Rockets, who moved to Houston, and the Conquistadors of the ABA.

In exchange, Brown would assume ownership with Harry Mangurian of the Celtics, who would remain in Boston.

Levin, a movie mogul who conducts most of his business in Southern California, said the first step would be for Brown to make an application to the NBA Board of Governors July 7 to transfer the Buffalo franchise to San Diego.

If that is approved, the swap of franchises can be finalized.

"That's pretty much the short and simple of it," said Levin, who met with Brown-Thursday at the offices of his Los Angeles attorney to work out final language of a tentative agreement they hammered out in New York the previous day.

Levin said serious negotiations with Brown began two weeks ago after the NBA's annual meeting at Coronado near San Diego.

Levin, who has owned the Celtics since 1975, said he is "very excited about the move to San Diego."

"The people in the San Diego area have done a fantastic job and have shown great enthusiasm and results in making a commitment for season tickets without knowing whether a team would come there. It is just impressive."

San Diego promoters already have launched a season ticket pledge drive that has reached the 4,000 mark.

Levin said he has talked informally with a number of members of the board of governors "and all of them have been positive and enthusiastic about it. I've had no adverse response."

The Celtics owner said no money would change hands in the franchise swap.

"After we get approval from the board of governors, we may be doing some player trading however," he said. Levin did not discuss what players he may have in mind.

"The net result should be that both myself and Brown should have very competitive bill clubs."

Levin has long wanted a basketball franchise in Southern California and once briefly considered moving the Celtics to San Diego, but the idea never materialized.

Another consideration appeared to be a falling out between Levin and the Celtic fans, who booed him soundly last spring during a national telecast of John Havlicek Jr. because of their dissatisfaction over a number of Celtic player trades.

Meanwhile, it was reported that Auerbach, fixture with the Celtics for the last 28 years, would bolt the team to become general manager of the New York Knicks if the franchise switch was made.

Brown, a high-powered wheeler-dealer, reportedly has been looking forward to taking over the Celtics and returning the club to its former prominence.

Brown, who tried to move the Braves to Hollywood, Fla., two years ago, had been actively negotiating to relocate his club since the end of the season. At first he favored his hometown of Louisville, where he owned the ABA's Kentucky Colonels; but then narrowed the choice to Dallas, Minneapolis and San Diego.

Yank owner rails at MacPhail over American loop schedule

By MIKE SHALIN UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Answering criticism by American League President Lee MacPhail, George Steinbrenner said Thursday there is "total unappliance" in the league over this year's schedule and in his opinion it is "perhaps the most detrimental factor affecting baseball today."

Furious when the Yankees lost a two-night doubleheader to the Milwaukee Brewers Wednesday night after an all-night fight from New York, Steinbrenner, the principal owner of the Yankees, blasted the AL schedule-makers.

"The guys who make up the American League schedule are unbelievable," said Steinbrenner. "They scheduled us for a double-header in Milwaukee (the Yankees' Tuesday night game ended at 11:15 a.m., EDT Wednesday) and then sent us right back to New York."

But MacPhail quickly pointed to Steinbrenner's blast and pointed out that the Yankee owner himself helped plan the change from the original AL schedule which created the round-the-clock odyssey between New York and Milwaukee.

MacPhail said Steinbrenner had no reason to blame the American League schedule-maker because he knew the double-header had been arranged previously in place of an open date.

"The 1978 schedule made up by the league Tuesday night game ended at 11:15 a.m., EDT Wednesday) and then sent us right back to New York." The two-night double-header scheduled on June 29 was arranged by the two teams with league concurrence by changing games previously scheduled for other dates.

But Steinbrenner, in his statement, said the league president "missed the point I was trying to make altogether."

"The league leadership evidently cannot seem to understand that this is not just one isolated instance," he said. "This year's American League schedule is so destructive that it makes people wonder whether grown men could possibly have put it together. There is no reason to be in the league that is happy with the schedule."

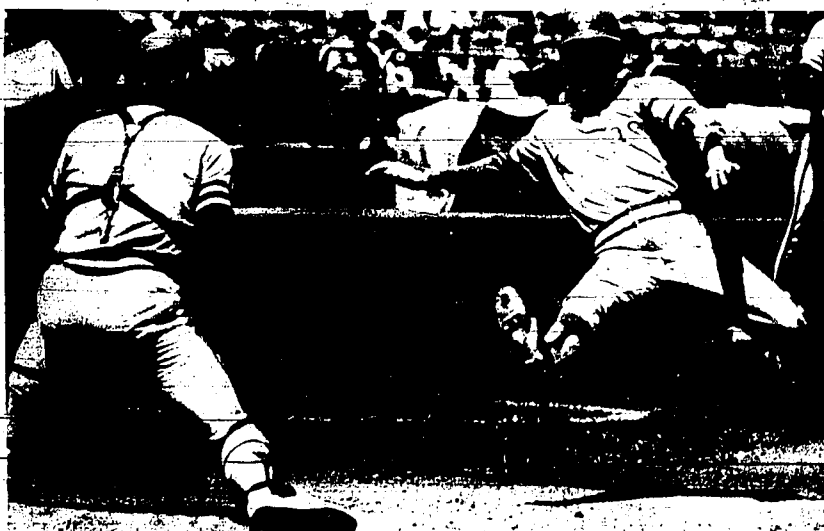

"Regarding Mr. MacPhail's statement that the Yankees were actually the culprit in this matter because they approved everything, let me set him straight. Perhaps someone in my organization went along with the requests for a loop schedule based on the fact that meetings with the American League officials every time we raised points which concerned us about the schedule, we got little consideration and even less remedy."

Steinbrenner went on to say that the schedule in the "backbone" and "guts" of major league baseball is "a loop schedule that threatens the integrity of the game."

"The basic problem, and make no mistake about it, is that the expansion to 14 teams makes an effective schedule impossible. With all due respect to the two great cities of Toronto and Montreal, it is a total disgrace to let the league leaders of the American League when the expansion vote was passed. Now we are seeing that 14-team, 3-division play in the American League cannot work effectively and that every team and every fan will continue to suffer with this same problem next year because we really didn't fix it."

Steinbrenner added that, at a league president's meeting in Chicago June 8, the proposed 1979 schedule met "with almost complete unopinion and said that a committee was established to study an effective schedule format — headed by Bud Selig of the Milwaukee Brewers."

"As of yesterday, the league had not appointed such a committee," Steinbrenner said.

Gray rejects Patriots' offers

BOSTON (UPI) — New England Patriots lineman Leon Gray said Thursday he would reject the team's latest offer to extend his contract and indicated he may not report to training camp next month.

"I will not be accepted," Gray said in a telephone interview from his Hyde Park home. "I had hoped the whole thing would have been resolved by now, but it doesn't look that way. My attorney (Howard Slusher) will make a counter proposal and we'll see what happens."

When asked if he would report to training camp, which begins July 20, Gray said, "It's pretty difficult to make that kind of a decision now, but it doesn't look that way at this point."

Patriots attorney, Chuck Sullivan, offered the new pact to Gray Monday and expressed confidence the former All-Pro would sign it by week's end. The proposal extended Gray's contract through 1981 and included a pay increase and a bonus for signing. Gray's current contract runs through 1979.

"We're disappointed, but we still feel we can work things out and if we don't, we still expect him to play," Sullivan said. It's not the end of the world. We've had offers and counter offers going forth for some time and it's fairly normal negotiating procedure."

Gray said after consulting with Slusher Wednesday night he was unhappy with "several parts" of the contract. He said he still wanted to play for New England and hoped differences could be ironed out.

Gray, a 1976 All-Pro, joined the Patriots as a free agent in 1976 after being released by Miami. The Jackson State graduate has rejected other Patriots offers, the latest being one which carried a June 1 deadline.

Rain halts Wimbledon action

WIMBLEDON (UPI) — An all-day rain caused a complete washout of play on the fourth day of Wimbledon Thursday, at the same time providing the All-England Club with a bonanza windfall.

Some 27,349 people crowded into the club, but it is a general practice at sports facilities in England to provide no refund or raincheck.

"This is firmly stated," said Richard Holt Vice chairman of the All-England Club. "As much as one regrets it, there is no alternative. I think the people understand it."

Officials decided just before 6 p.m. (1 p.m. EST) that it was useless to wait any further, but no general announcement was made to the public for almost a half hour. Instead, there was a little notice on the results board that said "there will be no play today."

This marked the first time since the final day of 1977 that an entire day's program had to be scrubbed.

Despite their financial setback and the loss of a day, the tennis buffs in the crowd accepted their fate with little British stoicism. Thousands of them had lined up well before noon to file patiently into the club, and once inside hundreds sat in the open stands of the outside courts, holding umbrellas as their only protection.

Filtered to them that no matches would be staged.

Thousands of other people, the vast majority of them school children, stood in the rain outside the players' tea room, hoping to catch a glimpse of a player. When someone like Bjorn Borg or Billie Jean King was visible for a fleeting moment, they were greeted with a cheer.

This was the second consecutive day Borg's match against Australian Peter McNamara was postponed, first because of darkness and then rain, and emphasized a major problem now besetting Wimbledon officials.

On Monday, only 19 matches were played because of inclement weather. Now with Thursday's total disaster, officials find themselves 130 matches behind.

"From this stage, hopefully, we can catch up," said Fred Hoyle, the tournament referee, who added he would recommend that starting Saturday competition begin at noon. Wimbledon, by tradition, doesn't start play until 2 p.m., but two years ago this was bent when a 1 p.m. start was necessitated.

"Some of the free days players enjoy between encounters will be lost," Hoyle said. "The men, for example, would have had a free day Monday, but now they will have to play. If they have doubles matches scheduled for that day as well, they will have to play both."

Stones, 3 others

suspended by AAU

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — High jumper Dwight Stones and three other members of the 1978 U.S. Olympic track and field team have been suspended from competition for accepting prize money, the Amateur Athletic Union announced Thursday.

The others named were Javelin thrower Kate Schmidt, middle distance runner Francie Larrieu and pentathlete Jane Frederick — all suspended indefinitely by the Southern Pacific Association of the AAU.

The decision to suspend was reached June 29 in a 74 vote by seven members of the SPA-AAU nine-man registration committee, the AAU said in a statement.

The SPA-AAU charged the four were paid earlier this year for competing in a made-for-television sports event, "Superstars," televised by ABC and sponsored by Trans World International.

The athletes are accused of having received $50,000, with $35,000 going to Stones' Desert Oasis Track Club. The other $15,000 went to the Pacific Coast Club, of which Schmidt and Larrieu are members, the AAU alleged.

Frederick, who competes for the Los Angeles Track Club, had asked that her prize money be paid to the P.C.C.

Payment of funds directly to an athlete's club "directly violates amateur rules," the AAU said.

The rules of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body for track, state any money an amateur gets for performing must go to the sports national governing body — in this case, the AAU.

Larrieu and Frederick, who have yet to appear before the SPA-AAU registration committee, will be given an opportunity to rebut the charges made against them.

"Both had declined to appear at previous hearings on the matter," the statement said.

"Stones and Schmidt had had hearings prior to the suspension, in which they admitted to accepting remuneration," the AAU said.

All four will get a chance to appeal the ruling to the SPA-AAU board of managers. The next level of appeal is the AAU's national registration committee. The ultimate appeal is to the AAU board of review, a five-member panel.

Stones, 24, is a former world record holder in the high jump and a two-time Olympic bronze medalist. Schmidt, 24, also a double Olympic bronze medal winner, owns the women's world record in the javelin.

Frederick, 26, is the American record holder in women's pentathlon and Larrieu, 25, has the U.S. women's record for the mile.

Sanudo opens comeback bid with 5-under 67

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — Cesar Sanudo, 34 trying to make a comeback on the pro golf tour, used a new putting stance Thursday to shoot a 5-under-par 67 for a 1-stroke lead in the first round of the $25,000 Western Open.

Sanudo, off the tour as a regular since mid 1975, had a 1-stroke edge over Bob Glider and Allen Miller and a 2-stroke advantage over Rod Curt, John Schroeder and Craig Sieder.

His 3-stroke gap separated these six from the rest of the field. Nine had 70, while 13, including defending champion Tom Watson, had 71, and 18 matched par-71 as the field put on its best scoring display ever in the five years the Western has been held on 7,083-yard Butler National Golf Club.

According to Sanudo, "seven guys I haven't met yet" arranged a sponsorship in 24 hours to put him back on the tour. He has played in 11 tournaments this year, finishing out of the money in nine. He earned money in 10 finishes in two events for total earnings this year of $309.

"I found a couple of things about my putting Wednesday," he said. "And Jack Taylor (PGA tournament director) helped me. I wasn't put right, and you get a little frustrated when you putt bad. Wednesday, I putted horribly. Thursday, they went in."

Sanudo had two bogeys on his round, one when he drove into tree lines and the second when he knocked the ball into a trap near the 17th green. But he dropped two birdies putting a 30-foot, another of 20, one from 12 feet, one from eight feet and a 1-footer on the 16th after a fine wedge approach.

But he said the shot that put him ahead was his 167-yard iron to the hole, which left him close to the flag for another birdie.

"I was in the right rough and I was just trying to get on and make par," he said. "I had to hit it over a tree and it stopped right next to the hole."

Sanudo said he "didn't keep in shape" while he was off the tour and has lost 17 pounds since he began playing regularly. "I'm in a lot better shape now than I was. And I usually play well from tee to green. I hope the putting change keeps going."

Miller, playing with Sanudo, had a chance to share the lead but went 1-over on the 18th hole when he took three putts from 50 feet for a par-3 and his 67.

Glider had played "as good as I have in a long time," probably because of a new swing. He said he had been "breaking my arms in the hitting area and not extending them. Now I hit it more solid, straighter and with more control."

Mixed scramble opens Saturday

TWIN FALLS — A field of 105 will compete in the second annual Twin Falls men's Fourth of July mixed scramble golf tournament this weekend.

The tournament is one of the few that had men and women competing. In the scramble format, each five-person team will include each one woman.

Host Professional Don Hamblin said Thursday night that the women's division, which was originally restricted to 30 players, was over-subscribed while the men did not come close to filling their 120-spot allotment. For that reason, some of the teams will have two women.

The tournament is specifically designed as an enjoyment thing. Pairings and tee-off times have been formulated for Saturday's opening round. The entire field will be re-drawn for Sunday and that day's competition will be a whole new tournament.

Highlight of the event will be a cookout featuring the club's 400 members, weather permitting. The tournament also will offer on-course refreshments in addition to merchandise prizes. Several Twin Falls businesses help to sponsor the event by providing added money.

Pairings and tee-off times for Saturday's first tournament include:

- 8:30 a.m. Don Durrant, R.K. Smith, Ken Kurbert, Odell Sweet and Kim Moon
- 9:30 a.m. Arnie Hansen, Jim Burke, Joe Johnson, Vinny Stey and Tom Lewis

Bowloff field still unknown

TWIN FALLS — A bunch of bowlers will show up at Miller's Magic Bowl Saturday afternoon in a quest for one spot in the Professional Bowler's tournament in Salt Lake City next week.

But how many that will be isn't known.

The house, which won the berth by sending more entries to the pro-am than any other in the intermountain area, has set aside qualifying times of 4 and 8 p.m. Saturday with a maximum entry of 70 players.

"I don't have any idea of how many will show up. I don't expect it will be 70. We just set the figure to make sure that we could accommodate everyone that wanted to," said Fred Miller, proprietor Paul Miller, "I look for between 40 and 50."

Mrs. Miller, who was picking up entries from Butte, Medford, Moscow and Salt Lake City along with other communities closer to Twin Falls, said she similarly isn't sure how many will compete. "We have been promised a lot of calls tomorrow (Friday) with some finalized entries but, no, I couldn't say right now how many will be there."

Each of the entrants will roll in eight qualifying games Saturday afternoon or evening. The top 14 from that competition will advance to the final qualifying round at 2 p.m. Sunday. In that one they will meet each other head-to-head with the 14th game being a position round.

Tarkenton plans one more season

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Fran Tarkenton, the Minnesota Vikings' record-setting quarterback who suffered a broken ankle in a game last November, said Thursday night he's decided to play again next season because "I really want to win Super Bowls."

Tarkenton, 32, who holds almost every NFL passing record, was both ridiculed and honored at a $100-a-plate "Tarkenton Roast" to raise funds for the Minnesota Diabetics.

Howard Cosell, the ABC sports announcer, was master of ceremonies. Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach and a group of entertainers roasted Tarkenton.

Tarkenton had knee troubles early last season and suffered a broken ankle when he was sacked against Cincinnati last November. He missed the rest of the season.

Tarkenton said he and his wife, Elaine, struggled with the question of whether to play the last year of his three-year $310,000-a-year contract.

"I didn't want to come back if I was a shadow of what I was before," he said.

Tarkenton said he has been working out at his mountain home in Georgia and his wife has been running with him.

Lopes 'steals' way into Dodger offense

By United Press International
A life of crime has proven most profitable for Davey Lopes.

Swinging bats with a defiant "catch-me-if-you-can" attitude, the Dodger second baseman has been giving catchers fits for years, and last night victimized Bill Pecora for two thefts that led to two runs in Los Angeles' 7-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

"Sooner or later, someone is going to throw me out again," said Lopes, who has now stolen 22 bases in 23 attempts, including 19 straight—Lopes is chasing his own record of 38 consecutive steals, a mark he set in 1975.

"It would be nice if that didn't happen until after I reached 39, but I'm not going to worry about it until I reach 37."

While Lopes was pursuing the stolen base record, Don Sutton was setting a record of his own. The stylish Sutton fanned five Braves to become the all-time Los Angeles strikeout leader, surpassing Don Drysdale. He entered the game tied with Drysdale at 2,265.

Actually, Drysdale and Sandy Koufax have both struck out more batters than Sutton, but both pitched for the Brooklyn Dodgers. The strikeouts accumulated there do not come into consideration for the Los Angeles record.

"The strikeout record is very important to me," said Sutton, who raised his record to 84 with a complete game effort. "They gave me a standing ovation when I tied the record this past Sunday. It was a nice feeling."

Sutton, who will never rest on the laurels of his hitting ability, (finished off a five-run first inning with a two-run single, Reggie Smith, Steve Garvey and Rick Monday had driven in runs with singles to start the rally.

Astros 5, Reds 0
Jose Cruz and Jesus Alou drove in two runs each and Floyd Bannister fired a four-hitter as the Reds have now been held scoreless over the last 20 innings. Cincinnati trails division-leading San Francisco by 2½ games.

Pirates 4, Mets 3
Renlie Stennett's pinch-hit triple scored Phil Garner in the eighth inning and gave Pittsburgh a victory over New York. Stennett's hit off loser Skip Lockwood, 7-6, bounced in front of Bruce Boiesclair in right and rolled back to the Mets' bullpen fence.

Phillies 9, Cubs 3
Jose Cardenal drove in three runs with a bases-loaded double and Greg Luzinski powered a three-run homer to pace the first-place Phils. It was the eighth win in nine games and the extended Philadelphia's lead to three games over Chicago in the NL East.

Red Sox 4, Orioles 3
Consecutive home runs by George Scott and Dwight Evans with one out in the ninth inning dealt the reeling Orioles their eighth straight loss and raised the Red Sox' AL East lead to nine games. Martinie Minter was pitching three hitler and was leading 2-1 when Fred Lynn singled and Scott and Evans followed with the homers. Allen Ripley, 2-4, hurled 5-2 innings of shutout relief for the win.

Indians 6, Tigers 3
Andre Thornton singled home Paul Dade with the winning Cleveland run in the eighth inning. Gary Alexander belted a three-run homer in the fifth inning for the Indians, his 13th and fifth in the last nine games. Jim Kern was the winner in relief.

Angels 3, Royals 1
Ron Fairly, hitless in his 24 previous at-bats, singled with two out in the eighth inning to score Lyman Bostock from third base as the Angels moved into a virtual tie with the Royals for second place in the top-py-lury west. Fairly, playing in his 2,400th major league game, also drove in the first Angels' run with a sacrifice fly in the seventh. Tookie David Frost, 1-1, got the win. Mariners 9, White Sox 7.

Veteran policy disputed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Paul Sonnabend, executive director of the National Football League Management Council, took strong exception Thursday to a players' union threat of disciplinary action against veterans who report early to preseason camp.

"The collective bargaining agreement with the National Football League Players Association states that veterans are not required to report until 15 days before preseason games, but have every right to do so if they desire," said Sonnabend.

"We do not believe the NFLPA has any right to discipline any players who comply with provisions of the collective bargaining agreement," Sonnabend said.
