

Labels listing salt content in food sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The group which lodged the request with the FDA, the Center for Science in the Public Interest, said, "most people know that preservatives and french fries are salty, but few are aware that many other foods, from pastries to cheeses to packaged breakfast cereals, also contain considerable amounts of salt."

The group said salt use should be curbed because it is an important factor in the development of high blood pressure, which contributes "to several hundred thousand deaths each year from heart disease and stroke. Studies indicate that hypertension could be alleviated or prevented in many people, if they simply consumed much less sodium."

The group said FDA should require food labels to state salt content in milligrams per serving, and highly salted foods should be labeled as such, as well as with a picture of a small salt shaker on the front of the package to tell consumers at a glance that a large amount of salt is present.

It suggested foods with from 200 to 800 milligrams of salt per serving be considered "highly salted." In foods with more than 800 milligrams of salt per serving, the group suggested an additional warning on the label about high blood pressure.

Dr. Michael Jacobson, executive director of the group, said "restricting the sodium content of foods would give people more choice. Low-sodium foods would give consumers the opportunity to determine their own sodium intake, rather than forcing them to consume the level added by manufacturers."

"Our own informal taste tests indicate that many many processed foods would taste fine with one-fourth as much salt," he said.

The science panel said in its preliminary report that for about 20 percent of the U.S. population salt has not been demonstrated to be harmful. But it noted that increasing use of salt in processed foods makes it difficult for those wanting to restrict their intake.

WELCOME BY SECRETARY OF STATE CYRUS VANCE ... for Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko

Short session on arms limits

GENEVA — The United States presented its current thinking on strategic arms control to an unresponsive Soviet delegation today against the bleak background of dissidents' trials in the Soviet Union.

Following the opening meeting between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, the tension that has been rising in Soviet-U.S. relations was to focus on their second meeting later in the day.

The trials overshadowed this sixth round of meetings between the two officials to try to work out a new strategic arms limitations treaty, SALT II.

Some Americans thought this round would be only a holding action in the negotiations.

Vance planned to express the U.S. distress about dissident treatment at his second meeting with Gromyko. He was also to deliver a message from President Carter to the Soviet Communist Party leader and national president, Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The first meeting in a conference room overlooking misty Lake Geneva was overbooked short. Vance presented U.S. thinking in less than an hour, Gromyko asked a few questions, and then they adjourned.

U.S. sources had said Vance would insist that any treaty leave open the possibility of U.S. deployment at multiple launching points of new mobile missiles. The Soviets have sought in earlier rounds to make that impossible under treaty terms.

Members of the U.S. delegation said after the opening meeting that the Soviets wanted time to consider the U.S. position before responding. But their cool reception of Vance's opening presentation suggested that the Kremlin had no expectation of meaningful negotiations here now.

Vance and Gromyko are scheduled to end this round of meetings Thursday. Shortly afterward, Vance plans to meet with the wife of the most prominent dissident on trial, Anatoly Shebaransky.

Vance said Tuesday that Avital Shebaransky asked for the meeting here and he agreed. She has been in Western Europe seeking to publicize the cause of her husband. She is expected to fly to the United States at the end of the week.

Vance said before leaving Washington that he would raise the subject of Soviet dissident treatment with Gromyko. That and Vance's plan to meet Shebaransky's wife were recognized by U.S. officials as likely to affect the Soviet attitude.

Dissident, U.S. newsman linked by statement

MOSCOW (UPI) — The prosecution in the trial of Anatoly Shebaransky today introduced a statement signed by American correspondent Robert Toth as part of its espionage case against the Soviet dissident.

A panel of experts testified that information Shebaransky gave Western reporters included state secrets.

At the trial of activist Alexander Ginzburg in Kaluga, 110 miles away, court spent much of the day wading through the tedious process of identifying and entering into evidence some 1,800 documents.

Ginzburg's wife was barred for a second day but his mother, who was allowed to attend, reported the document processing was so boring spectators were falling asleep on the benches.

During the closed session of Shebaransky's trial, the court heard a reading of transcripts of last summer's KGB interrogation of Toth, a veteran Los Angeles Times correspondent.

Shebaransky, who faces a possible death penalty, was accused of passing information about sensitive Soviet defense industries to Toth. The Soviets claim Toth was an agent for U.S. military intelligence.

Shebaransky has denied the espionage charges — and Toth has denied the Soviet accusations against both him and Shebaransky.

A court spokesman told reporters of the reading of the Toth interrogation transcripts — identifying him only as "a foreign correspondent, a witness, who was questioned during preliminary investigation and who cooperated with the military intelligence service of a capitalist state."

Toth was arrested in Moscow June 11, 1977, and interrogated for 13 hours by KGB officials at Lefortovo Prison on June 14 and 15. He was forced to sign interrogation transcripts before being allowed to leave the Soviet Union at the end of his three-year tour of duty in the Times' Moscow bureau.

A panel of security experts — presumably from the KGB — was called in to examine documentary evidence of the information Shebaransky provided Toth and other reporters.

A court spokesman said, "The experts then read out the text of their written conclusion saying that the information on the defense industry of the U.S.S.R. and its installations which Shebaransky is said to have forwarded to the West is absolutely secret and constitutes a state secret of the U.S.S.R."

The spokesman said Shebaransky listened to the reading of the Toth transcripts and told the court he had nothing to say about the testimony.

The evidence examined by the panel of experts was believed to include a copy of a Nov. 18, 1976 article Toth wrote headlined "Russia Indirectly Reveals Secret Work Centers."

The article dealt with the cases of Soviet Jews who had been refused permission to emigrate to Israel on grounds that they were privy to state secrets by virtue of jobs they had held.

The article noted that the Soviets classified much routine information openly available in the West.

Toxic wastes Idaho bound

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

MOUNTAIN HOME — A major shipment of hazardous materials including outdated pesticides and contaminated grain will soon be dumped in Idaho. If the state health department gives its approval.

A tentative $4,000 contract is being negotiated between the Montana Department of Health and Environmental Sciences and the Wes-Con Co. of Twin Falls for disposal of 75 tons of waste material on the Grandview missile site near Mountain Home.

The materials include outdated or banned pesticides, treated grain and similar materials which has been collecting on Montana farms since the 1930s.

Duane Robertson of the Montana Solid Waste Management Bureau said today the wastes are currently in storage at a former Air Force base near Glasgow, Mont. The bureau has been collecting the waste matter at the base for several years because there are no approved disposal sites in Montana.

Robertson said he has been negotiating with Wes-Con president Gene Reinhold for two or three years.

"He supposedly has it lined up," Robertson said.

But Idaho Health Department officials were apparently puzzled by rumors of the transport. After reading a United Press International story Tuesday that mentioned the transport, a health department official called Wes-Con to ask for details.

Jerome Jankowski, an environmentalist in the solid waste disposal section of the health department, said, "We haven't had any requests from the Air-Force or the state of Montana." He said Wes-Con had been contacted by the state of Montana three months ago, but added, "We have not approved it yet."

Jankowski said the health department must approve any transport of hazardous materials across state borders.

Reinhold is out of town and could not be reached for comment. Other Wes-Con employees said they knew nothing about the project.

The Mountain Home disposal site, an abandoned missile site operated by Wes-Con, is the only legal waste disposal facility for hazardous waste, hazardous material or toxic substances in Idaho.

Robertson said the waste materials are not hazardous "if properly handled."

He said they include arsenic bran, a substance used in the 1930s as grasshopper poison.

A shipment of 75 tons is considered a large shipment, according to health department public relations head Darf Schneider. She said a truck driver at the waste disposal site near Idaho Falls told her they receive two semi-trailers a week. Wes-Con employee Warren Shillington said 75 tons would fill four semis.

Schneider said the Grandview sites hold about 50,000 cubic yards of materials.

Robertson said the transport project is funded by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. He said a grant has been approved, but final go-ahead is being held up until the EPA determines whether an environmental impact report is needed.

The material is scheduled to be shipped by common carrier trucks in September or October, according to Robertson.

An Idahoan looks inside a Soviet courtroom

(Editor's note: Idaho Attorney General Wayne L. Kidwell is one of 12 young American political leaders who recently returned from a three-week tour of the Soviet Union. While in Riga, Latvia, they attended portions of a criminal trial and Kidwell was permitted by the minister of justice to take unprecedented pictures of the trial. In the following dispatch written exclusively for UPI, Kidwell gives an American lawyer's impression of Soviet justice.)

By WAYNE L. KIDWELL
Written for United Press International
BOISE (UPI) — As the door to the courtroom was opened by the guard, a musty smell hit us.

Peering over the six or eight rows of old, straight-back benches, I could see three persons sitting at an elevated judges' bench or desk at the back of the room. Obviously, they were presiding judges.

As all 12 of our delegation noisily filed in and took our seats on the hard wooden benches, I was somewhat jolted by the imposing hammer and sickle above the presiding officials.

The room was the size of a typical American courtroom but was arranged quite differently. The three rather youthful judges, one a woman, sat casually leaning forward on the hard-backed wooden chairs. I noted that there was an air of informality about the entire proceeding and that the two men did not even have ties on.

Immediately to the left was a woman in a dark blue uniform with some kind of gold insignia on shoulder boards who seemed to be doing most of the talking. I was told she was the prosecutor. On query about the uniform I was informed that it was optional with her whether or not to wear it when she was prosecuting a case. Evidently that day she had chosen to wear it. The uniform gave a stern, somewhat militaristic attitude to the proceedings.

Directly across from her on the other side of the room was a white-haired gentleman who rarely said anything, kept his head down at the desk with two pieces of paper in front of him. I noticed he kept his hands folded. He was identified as the defense lawyer. I mentally contrasted this with the way most U.S. defense attorneys attempt to make their presence felt in a courtroom.

Closer to the audience and on a raised box, where normally a jury would be impaneled in an American courtroom, sat a thin, tired-looking man of about 40, who was being tried on the charge of aggravated (second offense) attempted rape. We were informed that this carried a possible death penalty.

The man was dressed poorly in a faded, ill-fitting, checkered shirt over creaseless trousers. He needed a shave, which accentuated his almost bulging eyes. What type of man this was, I cannot say for his life, never came through. It was clear, however, that he was less ominous appearing than those in authority around him. On each side of the accused were two ramrod-stiff Soviet soldiers in traditional drab green. More soldiers stood at the back of the room with rifles. The bright red star on the soldiers' hats was the only splash of color in the room.

A young lady was tearfully testifying against the accused. When it came time for cross-examination, I was dumbfounded that the accused himself stood up to ask the questions. His defense counsel sat with head bowed, acting bored with the entire procedure.

Pictures of trial cap Americans' visit to court

BOISE (UPI) — At a time when American newsmen and officials cannot get into Soviet courtrooms and photographers in the United States cannot shoot pictures in most courts, an Idaho official has photographed a Russian trial.

Idaho Attorney General Wayne L. Kidwell accomplished the feat June 29 in Riga, Latvia, USSR. There, a middle-aged man was on trial for his life charged with aggravated attempted rape. Kidwell talked his hosts into admitting not only him but 11 Americans with whom he was touring. Then he took pictures.

Ironically, he almost was arrested in Moscow's Red Square later for taking a photograph of a speeding automobile.

"As one of 12 delegates of the American Council of Young Political Leaders on a three-week exchange tour, I met with many young future leaders of the USSR and saw sights that a tourist does not see," Kidwell said. "But the trial still haunts my memory."

"Serving as a state attorney general, a former practicing trial lawyer and former prosecuting attorney, it was my strongest desire to at least meet some court officials and look in on a trial."

Kidwell said he made his request early in the trip and it was finally granted by the Latvian minister of justice in Riga after hours of questioning.

After watching the trial for a while, Kidwell picked up his camera, and asked whether he might take one or two photographs.

"I knew that chances were slight that my request would be granted," he said. "But as a serious photographer I have learned that you might as well go ahead and ask."

The minister hesitated and then indicated a few pictures would be permitted. He said he knew this was an opportunity few Americans had. U.S. Embassy officials in Moscow later confirmed he was right. American reporters cannot even get into the courtrooms for the trials of Soviet dissidents Anatoly Shebaransky and Alexander Ginzburg — let alone take pictures of them.

The accused man seemed barely to be aware of his presence. Apparently, he was more concerned about cross-examining a witness testifying against him while his court-hired attorney stared at his hands doing nothing.

Support cutoff approved

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — An elderly man suffering from the creeping paralysis that killed basketball star Lou Gehrig has won the right to disconnect a hospital life support system that keeps him breathing.

Broward Circuit Judge John Ferris, who had earlier gone to the hospital a question, 73-year-old Abraham Perlmutter personally about his request, ruled in the patient's favor Tuesday, saying the systems "merely prolong a hopeless condition."

"All I'm saying is his Constitutional right to privacy supersedes medical and government interests here. I'm not saying he should live or die," added Ferris, who said it was the hardest decision he's made in 15 years on the bench.

Soviet trade under study

WASHINGTON — The White House is re-examining the planned sale of oil-drilling equipment to the Soviet Union in what officials said Tuesday was a possible prelude to the cancellation of this and other trade deals in retaliation for Moscow's trials of two dissidents.

The move has set off an intense, government-wide debate over the feasibility and desirability of using trade to try to influence Moscow's human rights performance or its foreign policy.

According to officials, the State Department is now reviewing the proposed $144 million sale. They said President Carter was likely to decide later this week whether to allow it to go through. The deal, recently approved by the Commerce Department, is for the export by Dresser Industries Inc. of Dallas of plans and equipment to enable the Soviet Union to manufacture high-quality drill bits.

Also under scrutiny, the officials said, is a proposed sale of a large Sperry Rand Univac computer to Tass, the Soviet press agency.

The proposal to curb exports to the Soviet Union is described as the toughest of several options being considered to demonstrate American displeasure over the trials this week of Soviet dissidents Anatoly B. Shecharansky and Aleksandr I. Ginzburg.

However, the proposal is said to have triggered a major debate in government circles, with Zbignev Brzezinski, the president's national security adviser, favoring a ban on the sales and State and Commerce Department officials strongly resisting the idea.

At a news conference Tuesday on Capitol Hill, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said he was asking Carter to cancel export licenses for the oil-drilling and computer sales.

A black woman who was acquitted two years ago of killing her white jailer, today pleaded guilty to an escape charge, saying that she wanted to proceed with reordering her life.

"In view of everything that has happened here, I want to change my plea because I want to get this over with and proceed in a more positive aspect with my life," Miss Little told Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey.

Bailey then began questioning Miss Little concerning her change in plea.

Miss Little changed the plea following a closed conference with the judge, prosecutors and her attorney, Jerry Paul, that delayed the beginning of the third day of her trial for more than an hour. The plea came as the defense had only one challenge left in jury selection with only five jurors seated.

Team in Hawaii

HONOLULU (UPI) — Vietnamese doctors and government officials who will try to account for Americans still missing in Vietnam have arrived in Hawaii to be briefed on techniques for identifying the remains of war victims.

The six-member group's arrival from Hanoi to inspect the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center and Central Identification Laboratory is the first visit by Vietnamese government officials to the United States since the war, except for appearances at the United Nations.

The visit followed an announcement by Phan Hien, vice foreign minister, that Vietnam is now ready for establishment of full, unconditional diplomatic relations with the U.S.

The establishment of full diplomatic ties has been delayed by the MIA problem.

Plea entered

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Joan Little, a black woman who was acquitted two years ago of killing her white jailer, today pleaded guilty to an escape charge, saying that she wanted to proceed with reordering her life.

"In view of everything that has happened here, I want to change my plea because I want to get this over with and proceed in a more positive aspect with my life," Miss Little told Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey.

Bailey then began questioning Miss Little concerning her change in plea.

Soviet trial photographed

Seated close to me was an interpreter and the Latvian minister. Some of the dialogue we carried on in a muffled whisper was to the effect that: "Yes, the state provides a defense lawyer. The accused does not have to present for trial. Rules of evidence and the right of bail are completely discretionary with the court."

The minister seemed to take the attitude that the poor devil on trial obviously was guilty and whether or not he would be executed or found guilty was something not to talk about.

After a while I very gently picked up my camera, pointed to it and whispered through the interpreter whether maybe one or two photographs would be permissible. I knew that chances were slight that my request would be granted. But as a serious photographer I learned that you might as well go ahead and ask.

The almost impatient minister hesitated, and then indicated that, "Okay, a few pictures were permitted." I knew that this was an opportunity few Americans had. I steadied the camera on the railing and gently pushed the shutter release.

At the startlingly loud click of the camera all of the guards jerked their heads around, stared at me menacingly... one started to move. At that point the minister held stood up and nodded his head that it would be all right. From that time on, in the approximately dozen or more pictures that I shot throughout the next better part of an hour, each time the camera would click, the guards would turn their heads and glare at me. The accused seemed to be barely aware of my presence. Only once did he glance in my direction.

The three judges looked at me each time I would take a picture but did not indicate for me to stop, evidently seeing the minister and taking their cue from his nodding to the soldiers earlier. It struck me that such a scenario could, fortunately, never happen in my world.

As I sat back and observed the proceedings, I grew pensive. The layers of dust on the furniture, the general randomness and unkempt appearance seemed to be symbolic of the whole process. The rather pathetic defendant seemed resigned to his fate. I was told that I would be informed as to the outcome of the trial. I was not. But I would also be on the outcome.

Back in the meeting room our questions heated up. The American sense of justice had been aroused. But the minister would always point to words on paper to justify the system he was defending. All of us knew we had won an unspoken point. The minister seemed glad the time was up. We never decided whether he believed the empty answers himself.

Tax papers sought

BOISE (UPI) — Federal Judge Ray McNichols has ordered the J.R. Simplot Co. to surrender tax records to the Internal Revenue Service but has stayed the order pending a possible appeal.

McNichols directed the company to produce the records sought by IRS agents July 24. In stating that order he said if Simplot does not file the notice of appeal prior to that date he will vacate the stay and direct it to produce the records.

The IRS filed 17 petitions after the company refused to comply with a summons to furnish tax records in an investigation that could involve millions of dollars in unpaid taxes. These petitions say the IRS is looking into tax liability of the company, its owner, Simplot Industries Inc. and related companies for the tax years of 1970 to 1975.

Last year, Simplot and two of his companies were fined $200,000 for failing to report more than $1 million in income and for overstating deductions.

State spending cut plans ordered

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans said Tuesday some state departments will be asked to reduce their spending by 30 percent in an effort to accommodate property tax relief in the state.

Evans, in a letter to executive departments of Idaho state government, the judicial and legislative branches, and the state's self-governing agencies, said departments not submitting budget requests in a zero-base format must develop a prioritized list of reductions to cut spending by 30 percent.

Evans also told departments to begin identifying services provided by local units of government which the state would have to assume upon passage of the initiative.

"These services that would have to be assumed will be prioritized with first priority going to those that are essential for citizens' protection, health, and safety," Evans said.

request, Evans said "After identifying services that would have to be assumed by the state, each department will identify those specific services and existing programs within their jurisdiction that could be funded by the imposition of or increase in user fees."

Evans said the action is being taken to help him prepare the executive budget for 1980. He said the requests must be followed through by Aug. 15 and should be submitted with individual budget requests.

"Regardless of the final outcome of the initiative, I remain committed to providing property tax relief to Idaho homeowners and farmers who are bearing an ever-increasing burden for local government," Evans said.

"It is my firm intention to begin immediate action on the part of all departments of state government that will lead to the effective and equitable implementation of the 1 percent initiative if it becomes law."

Evans also asked the Division of Budget, Policy Planning, and Coordination to act as a clearinghouse for all state information and corresponding state action regarding the 1 percent initiative.

In addition, he said he has begun a series of meetings with local public officials to determine their views on the potential impact of the initiative and to assess how state government can best be of assistance.

Agency fee hike flayed

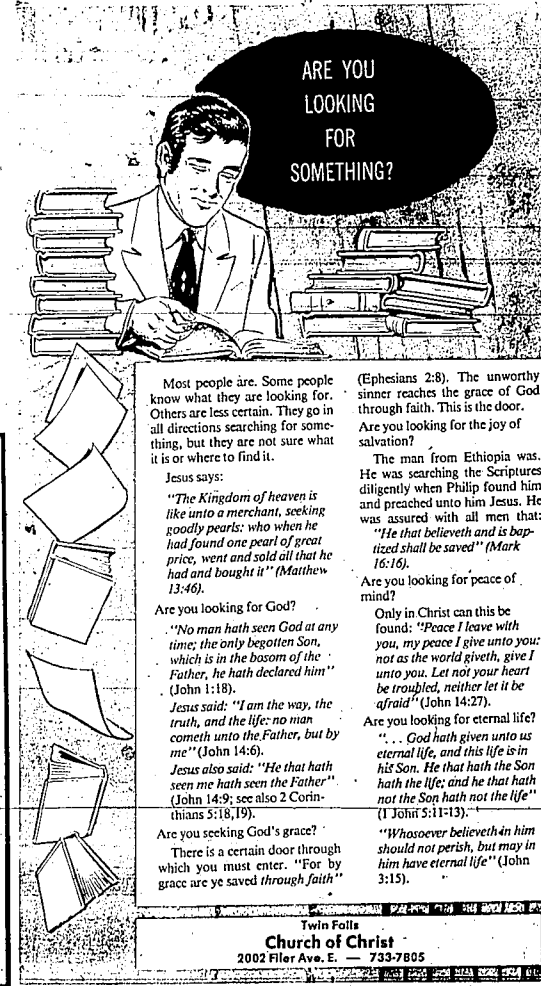

NAMPA (UPI) — The man who headed the state's successful 1 percent initiative drive said Tuesday night the Association of Idaho Counties is "spending money like it was going out of style."

Don Chance made the charges in light of increased membership dues the IAC has required counties to pay.

Chance said that in 1977, IAC membership was based on a fee of $20 per $1 million of assessed valuation and two cents per capita of county population.

Chance said the total statewide membership to IAC will hit $129,450.

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR SOMETHING?

Most people are. Some people know what they are looking for. Others are less certain. They go in all directions searching for something, but they are not sure what it is or where to find it.

Jesus says:
"The Kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant, seeking goodly pearls: who when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had and bought it" (Matthew 13:46).

Are you looking for God?
"No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him" (John 1:18).

Jesus said: "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6).

Jesus also said: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father" (John 14:9); see also 2 Corinthians 5:18, 19.

Are you seeking God's grace?
There is a certain door through which you must enter. "For by grace are ye saved through faith" (Ephesians 2:8).

The man from Ethiopia was. He was searching the Scriptures diligently when Philip found him and preached unto him Jesus. He was assured with all men that: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16).

Are you looking for peace of mind?
Only in Christ can this be found: "Peace I leave unto you; my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John 14:27).

Are you looking for eternal life?
"... God hath given unto us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath the life; and he that hath not the Son hath not the life" (1 John 5:11-13).

"Whoever believeth in him should not perish, but may in him have eternal life" (John 3:15).

Some gains on energy but no law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter may not have much of an energy bill to talk about at the economic summit, but there is another part of the energy picture he can describe with satisfaction, Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., said today.

"There is too much talk about energy legislation and not enough about other things that are happening," Sharp told an interviewer. "The president can say there has been really a major response in this country on energy."

Much of it is just that people often are cutting back because of the increasing energy costs, he said.

Sharp said he toured some industries in his home state during the Fourth of July congressional recess. One battery factory was spending heavily for equipment for saving energy. Another was making design changes to save on air-conditioning.

Those stories are typical throughout the country, Sharp said. "We have cut away the relationship between growth in the Gross National Product and consumption of energy," he said. "People are insulating their homes. They are buying different cars with gasoline mileage in mind. These things, added up, are starting to look like real progress."

Sharp said Congress should have done more toward enacting the program by now, more than a year after Carter proposed comprehensive energy legislation.

"But I think we should get off the defensive on this. We do not have to say, every day, 'We have sinned.' We are seeing progress."

Some foreign nations have not responded as well with setting up a petroleum reserve such as "is being filled up now" in the United States, he said.

As for legislation, the Senate is expected to debate a bill this week that pushes industry and utilities away from natural gas and oil toward coal for fuel.

Congressional energy staff workers say the strategy is to try to bring the natural gas pricing bill to the Senate floor next. That would leave energy conservation and utility rate reform for later, as insurance against a filibuster that would tie up the natural gas bill.

Energy taxes have yet to be worked on by the House-Senate energy conference committee. The leading tax legislators, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., and Sen. Russell Long, D-La., plan to meet later this week to discuss how to handle the tax proposals, passed in totally different form in the House and Senate.

Humphrey stock deal denied.

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — The trustee of the Hubert Humphrey family trust has denied published reports the late senator received stock from Dwight D. Andreas, who controls stock in an Illinois agribusiness corporation.

Joe Walters, a former Minneapolis lawyer and trustee of the Humphrey family trust, issued a statement through Sen. Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn., Tuesday.

"At no time did Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey or members of his family or trusts for the benefit of any of the Humphreys receive gifts of any kind from Mr. Dwight D. Andreas or members of his family or from trusts for the benefit of any of the Andreas," the statement said.

The Humphrey trust was established in 1955. As a blind trust, the beneficiary has no control or even knowledge of the interworkings of the trust's holdings.

The statement said the corporate securities were acquired in the 1960s as a result of investments of Humphrey's accumulated savings.

Scraps-Howard News Service reported earlier this week Archer-Daniels-Midland Co., headed by Andreas, used secret trusts to contribute perhaps $1 million in stock to Humphrey and his family.

Walters, who has offices in Denver, said the story was "completely inaccurate."

Andreas and Humphrey were longtime friends and their families traveled together and sometimes vacationed together in the Virgin Islands and elsewhere.

Supercarrier may be last

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate and the House have added a $2 billion supercarrier to next year's defense budget, but the Senate wants it to be the last one ever built.

In a surprise move Tuesday, the Senate amended the $36.1 billion military authorization bill to require any future carriers be "substantially smaller and less costly" than either the nuclear-powered ship in the bill or a mid-sized conventional flat-top originally sought by the administration.

The full authorization bill was then approved 87-2 late Tuesday.

In addition to multibillion dollar programs for aircraft, Army tanks and Navy ships, the bill includes such items as $41 million for adapting wide-bodied jetliners to carry cruise missiles, and programs for further development of strategic and space weapons.

Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, longtime critic of military spending, sponsored the carrier ban, enlisting the support of Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., and such military hardliners as Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

The Soviets now have weapons aimed at sinking such huge ships, Culver said, and "because of its increased vulnerability, an aircraft carrier sitting out there is a high value target."

The carrier ban must be approved by the House before being included in the final bill. Its acceptance by the Senate, however, is expected to spur opponents who hope to deny funds for the Nimitz carrier in appropriations legislation yet to be considered.

Price hike offered to oilmen for help

©New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — Secretary of Energy James R. Schlesinger has offered the oil industry an immediate increase in prices of newly discovered oil if oil executives will urge Congress to approve the controversial tax portion of the administration's long-delayed energy bill.

Industry representatives said that the combination of the price incentives and the taxes would add five to six cents a gallon to gasoline prices at the pump.

Administration officials said that some indications of support for Schlesinger's proposal could be seen from the industry. But industry sources said that most oil executives were unenthusiastic because the plan would not return enough earnings to the industry.

Administration and industry sources said the offer was made two weeks ago in a meeting called by Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., who is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. Ullman is an advocate of President Carter's proposed tax on imported crude oil that is intended to discourage such imports.

Schlesinger was also reported to have warned the industry representatives that they would not get the price incentives and other production incentives if the administration was denied its request for oil taxes. Carter has called the taxes the centerpiece of his energy legislation.

Should property taxes be reduced? Senator John Barker voted for the largest property tax relief bill ever passed by a Legislature which was later vetoed. Vote for Barker on August 6th to look out for your tax bill.

Construction project poses some hazards

It's lucky somebody hasn't been bumped by a car or fallen and hurt along Shoshone Street in downtown Twin Falls... Shoshone Street is being torn up as part of a street widening project...

At one spot there is only a caution sign at the left of a ditch and no barrier of any sort along the remaining 10 feet or so of width... This lack of adequate warning signs and/or barriers leads to an especially dangerous situation at night.

This section of Shoshone doesn't carry as much pedestrian traffic as, say, the Main Street Mall... But a fair number of people heading for South Park, for bars and other businesses do walk along Shoshone in this section...

As long as there is the chance of someone falling in a ditch, sincere attempts should be made to prevent that from happening.

If the construction company involved is not providing adequate warning signs and barriers, then the city should step in and insist on such. It could save the city some money in the long run, when the expense of a possible lawsuit is considered.

Conflicting voices heard in U.S.

The recently released poll of the American mood conducted by Potomac Associates is indeed a fascinating study.

The poll, which is the substance of the report entitled "State of the Nation III," was an extensive survey of Americans' thoughts in 1978. The contrasts between the 1976 findings and the 1974 poll are particularly noteworthy.

Two major areas in the poll are worth some extra thought by all Americans.

First, the poll showed that Americans think that the Soviet Union has pulled even with the U.S. in terms of overall power rating, but that the U.S. should take measures to remain the world's most powerful nation even if that means running the risk of involvement in another war.

Secondly, the poll indicated that Americans are not automatically against big government.

It showed that taxpayers aren't against governments spending more in certain areas, and one of those areas is defense.

The irony of this report, then, is that on one hand the most publicized news about the American mood these days is the so-called taxpayers' revolt and the concurrent talk of cutting down big government while on the other hand, Americans say they are willing to spend even more millions on big government, at least in defense.

How does a taxpayer's revolt, with such items as Proposition 13 in California and the 1 percent initiative in Idaho, jive with a poll showing that Americans are willing to spend more money making sure America stays number one in the world?

These two moods don't fit together well because the nation probably will not spend much less money and continue to remain on par with the Soviet Union's military technology.

Americans should consider the difficulty facing our policy makers who listen to one chorus of voices singing of a tax revolt while another chorus chimes in for keeping up with the Soviet Union on military matters.

Berry's World

7-5... "Speaking of affirmative action — how about a date?"

By MIKE ROYKO © 1978 Chicago Sun-Times... Suggestions keep rolling in from people who agree that the word "friend" is an up to the social burden of describing modern couples who live together without being married.

But I'm not sure that any of the proposed alternatives has a chance of receiving widespread acceptance, although some of them have a nice sound... Take the words "bunkee" and "lustee," both submitted by Mary Ann Sheehan of Chicago, who said:

"My first suggestion is that a live-in friend be called a 'lustee' — a person with whom you share your lust. Or, how about 'bunkee,' meaning the person with whom you share your bunk?"

I can see some problems arising in taking a young man-to-a-family-gathering-and-explaining: "Don is my lustee, someone with whom I share my lust." Especially among maiden aunts.

Several people, including John D. Hermann of Baltimore, support using the word concubine. Hermann said:

"Quick resort to any respectable dictionary will disclose that this relationship has long been known as concubinage and the partners to the relationship may be called either 'concubines' or 'concubaries.'"

I don't know. If people are going to say: "Martha and I are concubaries," they might as well get married. It sounds just as bad.

Vernon Coughlin of Helena, Mont., also turned to his dictionary and came up with this proposal:

"May I suggest you try the word 'fosterer,' which my dictionary defines as 'having the standing of a specific member of a family, but not by birth; as a foster brother.'"

"So, you would have 'foster wife or foster husband.'"

And you can bet that the first time somebody says, "This is Bill, my foster husband," a wise guy will crack: "Was he left on your doorstep?"

Grace Jeske of Baltimore says: "How can you go wrong with the term, 'better half'?"

"I'll tell you how. It was men who went around introducing their defenseless wives as their 'better half,' and women who referred to fully grown males as their 'hubby,' who probably convinced most of these young people that they should never get married.

Peter Szabelman says that in Oregon, where he lives, they have solved the word problem: "Out here, I've heard the relationship termed and the person introduced as 'domestic associate,' or D.A., usually with tongue in cheek or accompanied by a small chuckle."

Yes, but who wants to go through life as a domestic associate, accompanied by a small chuckle?

Edward Steubs, a blunt sort, says: "Why all this sugar coating? Why not call it like it used to be, still is and always will be: 'my shackup.'"

You do that, Edward, and you will be making your own breakfast.

Anne Hayes of Honolulu says: "The best term I have heard to describe this kind of friend is partner." It seems to fit the bill in so many ways, such as 'bad partner.'"

But what'll little children think when they see old Westerns on TV, and Randolph Scott says to Chill Wills, "Hawdy, partner" — that the two nice cow-boys are sharing one sleeping bag?

Craig P. Agnew of San Francisco says: "Out here we cover the problem of introducing the person one lives with by saying: 'This is my old man,' or 'This is my old lady.' It is that simple."

Nothing is that simple. A girl might introduce a young man as "my old man." And somebody might respond by pointing to his father and saying: "He is MY old man." We are back to confusion.

Enid German of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, believes she has solved part of the problem — how a mother-in-law introduces her son's friend: "My daughter-in-law."

Very good. Watch for it in coffee commercials. Dennis McCarthy of Chicago suggests: "This may seem a bit unusual at first, I offer 'goodman' and 'goodwoman.'"

The terms are equal, free of sexist charges that fly around when this kind of thing is discussed. There is no suggestion of superiority or ownership. There is a positive connotation to the words, unlike what we find in 'wife,' 'husband,' 'landlord,' 'mother-in-law.'"

"Since our culture is developing a disposable mating system, the positive feel of 'good' goes along with the 'as long as it lasts' philosophy of mating. As in: 'How's your goodman, Louise?'"

"Not so good any more."

"In any case, there is an urgent need for a new word for this relationship. The urgency is due to the fact that if no one said it, even the matter will be dealt with by the social scientists. This is frightening because God only knows what those people will do."

Your fears are well founded, Dennis, because the social scientists are already at it. Henry Burnett, of Santa Barbara, Calif., says that in the field of psychology, "a friend is still a friend. But a friend in the 1970s sense is now called a 'significant other.'"

And if you think that "significant other" is bad, consider this: Two University of Minnesota psychiatrists, Joseph Westermeyer and Pearl Rosenberg, recently wrote a learned report about unmarried couples which they called: "Role, Ritual and the Grynnflnk."

Do you know what the Grynnflnk is? They say it was formed with leftover letters from a Scrabble game by two women who wanted a word to describe the girls with whom their sons lived.

In the report, the psychiatrists wrote: "It is suggested that if (grynnflnk) is a convenient descriptive term and will be used to denote the person with whom one's offspring cohabits, without an explicit time commitment or the legal sanction of marriage."

Being called a grynnflnk is the kind of thing that could drive people to marriage.

Can the obscene be protected?

By LES BROWN © N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — A few nights before the Supreme Court issued its decision upholding the Federal Communications Commission's repression of a New York City radio station for broadcasting indecent language, ABC News presented a cinema verite documentary, "Youth Terror: The View From Behind the Gun," which contained a good deal of street talk, including words never before spoken on national television.

Twenty-one ABC stations — including those in major cities such as Philadelphia, Atlanta, Houston and Dallas — refused to carry the documentary because the network would not let them blurt out the words. About a dozen other stations delayed the broadcast to a later time.

Network officials cite this fact as evidence that the airwaves would not have erupted if the scatological language of the Court's 5-4 decision had gone the other way. Television stations, they point out, always are conscious of playing to a mass audience and worry about alienating viewers with blasphemous or otherwise offensive language. "No network wants to put on programs that 20 or 25 of its stations won't carry," one executive remarked.

What has been discouraging to broadcasters is the Court's decision is not its implied curbs on their use of foul language but that once again the Court has held radio and television to a different First Amendment standard than is applied to newspapers, books, magazines and motion pictures.

"I react on two levels," said Frederick S. Pierce, president of ABC-TV. "On the practical level, nothing has changed. Our network operates by its own set of standards that aren't affected by the decision. But on the philosophical level, there are bad precedents in this, with long range implications on our freedom of expression."

Pierce said the news documentary would have been televised without cuts or changes even if it had been scheduled after the Court's decision on what has come to be called "the seven dirty words case."

The case in question involved a 1973 mid-afternoon broadcast on WBAI, a listener-supported station licensed to the Pacifica Foundation, which featured a routine from a comedy album by George Carlin about the seven dirty words the comedian maintained could not be put on the air.

In responding to a complaint from a single listener, the FCC censured the station for playing the program during hours when children were likely to be in the audience and ruled that the material might have been more appropriately presented late in the evening.

Last year, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia reversed the FCC, saying the program content and violated the First Amendment.

In overruling the lower court, the Supreme Court did not ban indecent language from radio and television but rather affirmed the FCC's right to interpret the public interest according to the federal codes, and to act as it did.

The central issue was the FCC's authority, but the entire case turned on the indecency question and whether the language used was protected speech. There has been a long history in the Court of majorities of justices agreeing that obscene speech is not entitled to the protection given other kinds of speech under the First Amendment, but distinctions are made between "obscene" and "indecent."

By judicial definition, "obscene" appeals to prurient interests while "indecent" is patently offensive.

The decision in the "dirty words" case was one of several over the years by which the Supreme Court frustrated the quest of broadcasters for protection under the First Amendment equal to that guaranteed to print publications.

In the landmark Red Lion decision in 1969, which upheld the constitutionality of the FCC's fairness doctrine and articulated an obligation by broadcast licensees to present the views and voices representative of their communities, the Court made it clear that the public's right of access, precedence under the First Amendment over the right of broadcasters.

Similarly, in the "dirty words" decision, Justice John Paul Stevens, who wrote the opinion, argued that the "individual's right to be let alone in his home plainly outweighs the First Amendment rights of the intruder."

Citing the intrusiveness of the broadcast media, Justice Stevens also argued for the right of society to protect its children, and he pointed out that this was not limited to radio and television. "Bookstores and motion picture theaters may be prohibited from making indecent material available to children," he wrote.

First Amendment activists — some of whom filed friend of the court briefs when the case was before the Court — argued that the Supreme Court decision as a setback to the cause of fostering robust, wide-open debate in radio and television, and indeed see it as an endorsement of a form of censorship. Other legal experts, however, contend that it is unrealistic for broadcasters to hope for freedom of expression, equal to the print media under the present communications laws.

They point out that an abridgment of the First Amendment occurs on the day the broadcaster accepts his license. This is because the license requires him to serve "the public interest, convenience and necessity." Owners of newspapers and magazines are asked to take no such pledge, nor do they assume obligations as public trustees.

Lawyers' defense is a case of record

By RUSSELL BAKER © N.Y. Times Service

Here are the distressed letters from lawyers. Most of them are hurt rather than angry. A few days ago in this space, I published the Guiding Principles for the Conduct of Life and naturally included a precept which, one would suppose, even children follow intuitively: "Avoid lawyers." It advised, under almost all circumstances,

In justice to all lawyers who felt maliciously slandered, let me assure members of the profession that there was no such intent. I like lawyers. Some of my best friends are lawyers.

If a sister asked whether I minded her marrying a lawyer, my answer would be, "certainly not, particularly if he is a successful lawyer." If he was not, I might urge her to consider a dentist before doing anything irreversible, but not because I believe discounts on bridge work are intrinsically more valuable than free interpretations of the Constitution.

It is simply that if things came to divorce, my lawyer would be able to obtain more alimony from a dentist than from an unsuccessful lawyer. Brothers have to consider unpleasant possibilities like this when sisters ask for advice.

I should add that no sister has ever my advice about whom she should marry. Why, you may ask, should I add such personal information? To make a record in case I am hauled into court, that's why.

It is not inconceivable that some lawyer, reading these very words, has once asked for the hand of a sister in marriage and been rejected. If so, it is not inconceivable that this jilted lawyer might sue me, using the words above as evidence that I committed willful damage to his personal life.

Whether such a suit is possible in law I do not know, but it is based on the assumption that once you fall into a lawyer's line of vision anything is possible. Not long ago I read of a case out west in which a fallen son had a lawyer suing his father and mother for not raising him right.

If the courts are going to let poor old parents be tied up at law for "malparenting," it is entirely possible that lawyers may also start "malbrothering" suits against people like me. Apparently the only people left who can sue are the drop of a writ are judges who offer unpleasant things done upon more or less helpless people.

This, at least, is what the Supreme Court ruled not long ago in a woman who had been sterilized by her doctor as a child, tried to sue the judge who had ordered the sterilization. Not being judges, most of us have to watch our steps. For this reason, I want to make the record right here: no sister has ever asked me for marriage advice concerning anyone, including lawyers.

Making the record is something that men always be done with great care when, considering the possibility of involvement with lawyers.

The statistics aren't adding up to a recession

By PETER'S NAGAN Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — A recession may be coming soon, so many forecasters are predicting, but there isn't much sign of it in recent business statistics.

The first important measures of economic activity that have come along for June — and they are very basic — have been upbeat, several of them strongly so. The numbers suggest that the year's second quarter closed on a very positive note.

The country's biggest retail store chains showed strong increases in volume last month, which brought the totals to record levels. Gains ran from 1 3/4 percent to 2 3/4 percent over June of 1977.

Auto sales set records for June. They were 3 percent ahead of the very strong pace reached during June of last year.

It is possible that the very strength apparent in the job and retail pictures last month will be contributing to a slowdown later in the year. Still, it is made now could be borrowing from the future. Fear of higher prices may be leading some consumers to accelerate the timing of auto and other purchases.

depressed start of the year — was clearly unsustainable. Significantly, though, many were expecting the slowing to start last month, and that hasn't happened.

Instead, June has come up with some happy surprises.

Unemployment, for example, declined 0.4 percentage points to 5.7 percent of the labor force, the lowest rate in nearly four years. That's lower than the rate that government economists were forecasting for the end of the year.

The number with jobs rose by more than 700,000. There have been only three other months in the last 15 years when gains were as large or larger.

But the strong sales showing isn't attributed wholly to a sales lull — to inflation psychology. Consumers also seem to want to buy.

The high level of hiring reflects confidence among businessmen in the levels of demand and production that they face in the months ahead. The Conference Board's private research group, reported last week that its index of business confidence rose to 58 in the second quarter from 52 in the first.

The economy may be basically stronger than has been thought. Maybe the recession won't begin as early as some had feared, or be as severe — or be a real recession at all.

Death toll in Spanish campground blast could pass 200

SAN CARLOS DE LA RAPITA, Spain (UPI) — Spanish officials said today more than 100 people lay dying in hospitals from burns in the gas truck explosion that engulfed a Mediterranean campground in a holocaust of fire.

The explosion and flames that shot hundreds of feet in the air killed 108 people Tuesday — nine died in or on the way to hospitals — but officials said the death toll could rise to 245.

Spanish police stopped up their search for the bodies of up to 24 vacationers that authorities believed were blown into the sea or buried at the scene by the force of the blast.

Only about 10 of 123 critically injured people in Barcelona and Valencia hospitals were expected to survive burns over 80 to 100 percent of their bodies, the authorities said.

The disaster struck at early afternoon at Los Alamos camp site on the Costa Blanca, crowded with some 800 vacationers. A tank truck carrying volatile liquid gas exploded as it passed the camp, sending a wave of burning death through "a vast area."

Investigators said they still did not know what caused the blast but they ruled out a highway collision.

"The driver ended up in a bundle about like this," investigator Emilio Alcovero said, holding his hands about 1 1/2 inches apart.

Survivors packed their gear today to leave the camp-

WRECKAGE LITTERS RAVAGED CAMPGROUND IN SPAIN ... following explosion of gas truck, campers' fuel supplies ground and relatives began arriving to try to trace the whereabouts of the dead and injured, poring over registration records in the camp's trailer office.

Survivors compared the explosion and its effects to a bombing raid or a plane crash.

"The burning gas came rolling over the ground just like napalm," French tourist Jean Sibillo of Marseille said.

"It looked like a little Hiroshima," said local resident Juan Verdura, who watched from about a mile away.

"We thought that there had been a plane crash," said Genevieve Froment of Toulouse, France. "Everyone ran for the water." A handage covered Mrs. Froment's nose, cut when she jumped into the sea.

Marcel Fabre, also of Toulouse, said his wife and two children were unhurt in the blast but "some friends were in their tent just over there and now there is nothing left."

The bodies were laid out in open coffins along the pine-shaded paths of the Tertosa Cemetery. Embalmers were at work in the hot air, as birds sang in the open Mediterranean sun.

About half of the bodies were charred black. Some of the dead wore rings and watches but most of their clothes had been burned off.

Some of the European vacationers were eating lunch as the burning gas rushed through the campground halfway between Valencia and Barcelona. Others were taking a siesta or sunbathing. The lucky ones had gone fishing.

The 800 campers were mainly Dutch and Belgian, but also included Germans, French, English and Danes. Camp owner Mario Gianni said none was American.

Authorities said identification of the victims was difficult because of the charred and mutilated condition of the bodies.

"The worst was having to see the dying," Edith Ruffin of Nancy, France, said. "Some had no skin, no clothes, no hair. Their eyes were burned."

"Some who were already half dead ran to get under the showers."

The holocaust stopped just 20 yards short of where Mrs. Ruffin and her family were camped. She said her father, Georges Maire, "got too close and was caught up in the explosion."

"I carried him out but I don't know in what hospital he is now," she said.

The explosion of the tanker truck touched off smaller blasts from bottled gas used for outdoor cooking and from the fuel tanks of automobiles parked at the campground.

Old hotel collapses in Texas

VICTORIA, Texas (UPI) — Workers digging through cement, bricks and wooden beams of an old, closed hotel that collapsed here temporarily suspended their operations without finding additional victims.

Officials said at least three people were killed in the cave-in Tuesday of the 65-year-old Denver Hotel. Officials believed three more people might still be buried under the rubble.

A fire department spokesman said teams with crowbars and torches worked from late Tuesday until early today trying to find additional victims. The search was to resume later in the morning.

The once-grand hotel, closed since 1971, was scheduled for demolition during the weekend and crews were gutting the structure Tuesday when it collapsed.

"We don't know why it fell like that," said police officer Don Ward. "We're investigating. (The crews) were getting ready to pull it down in a couple of days, but we were told they hadn't pulled out any of the support beams or anything yet."

The first victim was identified as Weldon Johnson of Austin, Texas, who was standing on a sidewalk when the three-story hotel's front wall collapsed. The games of the two other victims were withheld pending notification of relatives.

All but a corner section fell, and rescue attempts were hampered because authorities feared that section also might tumble.

"There was a tremendous noise — it sounded like an explosion," one witness said of the fall. "The dust cloud took five minutes to clear."

Ward, who once worked as a security guard in the hotel, said it used to be considered the finest lodging in this city close to the Gulf Coast.

In the 1930s, Ward said, the hotel was popular mostly by elderly people and in the late 1960s began faltering financially. The hotel was closed in 1971 and was being torn down this week to make way for a parking lot.

JOAN MONDALE CHATS WITH SCULPTOR MARK DI SUVERO ... during break in work on 'Isis' in Washington, D.C.

Not junk but sculpture, creation going together

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Here is a progress report from the grounds of the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden on how sculptor Mark di Suvero is coming along making a work of art from 35 tons of scrap iron and steel he has collected across the nation.

He started Monday. By Tuesday, using a rented crane and working the controls himself, he'd cradled the parts from the beds of two love boys and a trailer that brought them here from his studio in California.

Now he's welding. The parts consist chiefly of the front of a diesel locomotive cab, two pieces of the bow of a refrigerated ship, three rusty bridge beams, a submarine buoy and an anchor chain capable of lifting 200,000 pounds.

The sculpture is to be completed in a week, a gift to the nation from the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel.

Tourists have been watching di Suvero from behind construction barriers. An "Artist at Work" sign explains what is happening.

Work was interrupted at mid-afternoon Tuesday when Mrs. Joan Mondale stopped by. She put on a hardhat and gave di Suvero a kiss.

Museum benefactor Joseph Hirshhorn was on hand too, wearing a hardhat. So was S. Dillon Ripley, Smithsonian secretary. He declined to wear one.

The bearded di Suvero, his long hair bulging from under his welder's safety mask, pulled off his leather gloves and shook hands all around, then led an entourage of Smithsonian people, Mondale people and Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel people on a tour of his project.

"It is not junk. It is scrap iron and steel," said Herschel Cutler, executive director of the Institute, which paid $35,000 and di Suvero's efforts, $20,000 for the scrap and $20,000 in freight charges.

The Smithsonian served the officialdom food tea in stemmed glasses. Tourists snapped pictures.

DALY CITY, Calif. (UPI) — At a 50th birthday party roast for a successful clothing manufacturer, the master of ceremonies quipped:

"Well, Tom, we managed to get all your friends together under one roof ... they're outside in the car."

"The reason for Tom's success," the MC continued, "is that with every dress he sells, he includes free installation," (aside to Tom) "you devil, you."

"Actually," he intoned, "Tom adores his wife and four children. He always wanted a big family ... it saves on manikens."

The humorous lines had the audience in stitches. They should. They were costing up to $300 per minute of delivery time.

Material in this particular case was tailored for the clothing gathering by Comedy Unlimited, headed by Jim Curtis, an energetic ex-Philadelphia with a twisted moustache and sharp sense of humor.

"We've never had anyone ask for a refund," said Curtis, who runs his 12-year-old agency from an office located on the bottom floor of an old stucco apartment building atop a hill in Daly City, a stone's throw from San Francisco.

Sitting beneath an autographed picture of an earlier client, Phyllis Diller, Curtis said he and his personally trained writing staff tackle projects ranging from stand-up executive speeches to spiced night club comic routines. Fees vary according to services rendered and deadline pressures.

"We're the best kept secret in the business community," said Curtis, who never advertises, but keeps busy punching out jokes, speeches and humorous presentations.

"A lot of research goes behind just one line. We do a thorough analysis of the client's needs before sitting down to the typewriter."

Some business comes from public relations people who are called on to write sparkling material for an executive's speech.

"They suddenly realize the skill it takes to create comedy and they come to us, confidentially."

When taking a job, Curtis

JIM CURTIS ... humor pays off finds out the type of audience being addressed, their education, the time of day of the talk, seating arrangements. If drinks are being served and what interests those present.

"We look for lines that are perfectly appropriate for both the client and the audience. What might be hilariously funny and quite effective for a sales manager might be disastrous for the chairman of the board."

In introducing a famous plastic surgeon, Curtis had the speaker say:

Fan mail, yes, but Zodiac letter, no, says officer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Dave Toschi, San Francisco's demoted ace homicide inspector, admits that he wrote "two or three" (fictitious) letters to a newspaper writer praising his own work on the notorious Zodiac case.

However, the veteran police inspector Tuesday denied that he forged the recent cryptic letter from the psychotic killer known to have slain six persons.

"I wrote no Zodiac letter," said Toschi, who was "maneuvered by Chief Charles" into the property management-pawn detail. "I don't need another letter. It only brings me tons of extra work. It's a strain enough being in homicide."

Equally ridiculous, said Toschi, who celebrated his 47th birthday Tuesday, were suggestions that he was the Zodiac.

"I'm getting older and this case has taken a great deal out of me. The latest letter really disturbed me. The charge is totally absurd."

Toschi has spent the last 9 of his 25 years on the force working on the bizarre case in which the Zodiac wrote his deeds in symbols and verse, bragging of killing 37 persons in the 1960s, including several "lover's lane" murders.

In an earlier coded letter to a San Francisco newspaper, Zodiac claimed responsibility for a frenzied knife attack on a woman and wrote that "killing people is more fun than killing animals."

Toschi, who observed his 47th birthday Tuesday, admitted writing several fan letters praising himself to San Francisco Chronicle columnist Armistead Maupin two years ago, but said he considered them harmless at the time.

"It was a foolish thing to do. I am ashamed of it."

"I wrote them because he (Maupin) became a friend and I was featured in the column. I wanted to make sure the Chronicle did not drop the column. I wanted to add to his fan mail."

Chief Gain said Toschi's transfer to a low echelon post was because of the disclosure of the inspector's fake fan letters. Gain said there was also some doubt as to the authenticity of the last Zodiac letter, which was mailed in April.

The letter, which broke a five-year silence from Zodiac, read in part: "... that pig, Toschi is good but I am smarter and better. He will get tired and then leave me alone."

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Speculation over oil drilling and the dollar's improvement abroad sent stocks higher Wednesday in active trading. Dow Jones Industrial average, which gained 45.20 points Tuesday, was ahead 3.21 points to 824.40 around noon EDT. The Dow has gained 15.20 points the past four sessions.

Advances led declines, 717 to 402, among the 1,604 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Mainly leaders were spotlighting the nation's oil companies would make some major finds in the Baltimore Canyon of New Jersey to ease America's energy problems.

Unconfirmed rumors Tuesday that Texaco had made a major gas find sparked a market rally.

Brokers said investors were encouraged by the dollar's continued rebound. Brokers said there was hopes something might be done to bolster the currency at the Tuesday economic summit in Bonn beginning Sunday.

Alexis R. Lewis, chief economist, Charles Schwab, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, told Congress that they would have to approve a significant tax cut in 1979 in order to keep the economy from sliding into a recession.

The Conference Board also reported its latest survey showed consumer confidence improved in June. However, retail sales rose less than 0.1 percent that month, according to the Commerce Department.

press injected some uncertainty into the situation. The session ended 4 1/2 to 2 cents lower.

Soybeans closed slightly lower across the board although late short covering brought prices of their lows.

Wheat closed near Monday's settlements, down a half cent to a half higher, despite enthusiastic buying near the end of the day which was tempered slightly by profit taking.

Pressure from the weather held the crop report was notable in the corn pit, but reports of favorable crop prospects.

California lures foreign investors

By JOSEPH AMANT

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — "Keep California Green — Bring Money."

That's an old bumper sticker gag but it seems to have been taken seriously by swarms of foreign investors loaded with American dollars.

Millions of dollars have been poured in the past few years into the California economy by well-heeled visitors from Japan and other rich countries of the Middle East, as well as from Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Thailand and from European countries such as West Germany, Italy and Switzerland.

Many of these investors have awesome amounts of cash to spend on choice properties. West German group recently stumped a Southern California broker when it approached him by office buildings and offered to put up $100 million — in cash.

Targets of the foreign investors, some of whom like the California weather and lifestyle and plan to become permanent residents, are multi-million-dollar mansions in the wealthy Los Angeles suburbs of Bel-Air and Beverly Hills; elite commercial locations in metropolitan areas; acres and acres of rich farmland in the San Joaquin Valley; expensive residential properties in Marin and San Mateo counties in the San Francisco Bay Area and large buildings in San Francisco itself.

Foreigners have invested heavily in hotels, condominiums and office buildings in the Golden State and they are also buying up big warehouses to store goods to be imported from their homelands.

Many a wealthy foreigner pays over-the-market prices for whatever catches his fancy.

A resident of the Hollywood Hills, a desirable area of Los Angeles with homes in the $100,000 plus range, is approached as the waters, his town, an Oriental passerby offers him $50,000 more than he paid for his home three months earlier. He accepts. The buyer is a watch importer from Hong Kong.

In Bel-Air, highly real estate brokers report it is difficult to find a home for under a half-million dollars. Some of these homes sold originally 30 or so years ago for $20,000.

California's inflation may be compounded by inflationary real estate prices but the thinking behind the tactics of the foreign buyers is simple, qualified observers report.

It's this — inflation may be bad in the United States but it's worse in most foreign countries. Hence, what seems like an exorbitant price to Californians is regarded as reasonable by the foreigners. The slumping U.S. dollar also makes the exchange more favorable.

Other factors in what may seem like a financial flight from foreign lands are unrest in the Middle East and some European countries and consequent lack of confidence in the governments in power; prohibitive taxes; terrorism and frequent kidnappings of persons of wealth and the threat of such violence to those who have escaped to date.

Lincoln County treasurer sent to prison

By LORAYNE O. SMITH Times-News writer SHOSHONE - Former Lincoln County treasurer Myron Johnson went to the Idaho state penitentiary today to begin serving a maximum 10 year term for misuse of county funds.

dollars for his personal use. He had been county treasurer for 36 years. An aide in the Idaho Department of Corrections said today Johnson could be paroled within a year, depending on how he responded to incarceration.

Judges and courts are not only protectors of their rights, but also punishers of their wrongdoings. Kramer said letters he received from Lincoln County citizens implored him to give Johnson a maximum sentence.

society will be best served by such leniency. The sentencing comes nearly 10 months after Johnson unexpectedly resigned Oct. 17, 1977. The $130,000 in missing funds were reported soon afterwards.

The long delay in charging Johnson was due to a legal concern that the statute of limitations might have run out on Johnson because he could have taken the money years ago.

Bellevue bar fire now termed arson

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN Times-News writer BELLEVUE - A fire that gutted Kyle's Club and the Korral Coffee Shop at Bellevue June 15 was the work of arsonists, Blaine County police recently acknowledged.

Knigh stated lab tests revealed some kind of motor oil or fuel was poured on wood at the "hot spot" of the fire behind pin ball machines in Kyle's bar. The "hot spot" of the fire is usually where the fire originates, according to police officials.

Land and water are key voting elements

An assessor assesses the 1 percent ascent

Wes Trounson believes the initiative has too many pitfalls to be effective

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

GOODING — If the 1 percent initiative is passed, Idahoans can look for additional sales tax and state income tax, according to the Gooding County assessor.

Wes Trounson, who has had public differences with the Idaho State Tax Commission in past years over the speed with which property tax reappraisal is being carried out in Gooding County, predicts the state will pick up the probable deficit from the proposed tax ceiling by increasing both sales and income taxes.

He also says he does not believe the 1 percent initiative will have much effect on individual tax bills in most Magic Valley counties, if it becomes law because most property taxes here already are within that range.

Backers of the initiative have obtained sufficient signatures to put the measure on the ballot this fall. "Frankly, the proposal is very confusing," Trounson says. "No one seems to know exactly just how it will work out. It would be 1 percent, but 1 percent of what? Who would determine what is 'true' market value?"

The Gooding County official said he believes that the backers of the 1 percent initiative "don't know very much about taxes."

While admitting that there are presently inequities between various counties in Idaho, Trounson says he believes that in Gooding County, and in most other areas of Magic Valley, taxes now fall well within or below the 1 percent range of current market value.

However, most real estate is valued at far less than today's selling price when it comes to computing the assessed valuation. Each county has its own assessment ratio, or the percentage between actual and assessed valuation. All states must have this ratio up to 20 percent by 1981. Gooding County currently is at 17.25 percent.

Although Gooding County has been criticized by state tax officials for not reappraising property at its full market value, Trounson says "other counties are much lower than Gooding in their assessments."

"I balk at the word reappraisal," Trounson says. "Instead we have a continuing appraisal under way with fieldmen out every day."

He cites as an example an average home which would sell for about $20,000 but might be valued at only half that price, or $10,000 for assessment purposes.

"So if you consider the owner may pay $300 to $400 and the current market value is $30,000 that is within the 1 percent ceiling," he says.

The county assessor urges people "who are screaming about taxes" to "instead look closer" at state and federal income taxes which, he says, "often run a taxpayer 10 times what his property taxes do." "Trounson says backers of the 1 percent initiative do not seem to realize that what they are cutting into is the money that pays for operation of locally controlled services, such as road and cemetery districts, schools and county services such as the sheriff's office."

"They (the initiative backers) are restricting spending by their own elected people," Trounson says, "rather than looking at state and federal income taxes which consume a much larger percentage of their income."

While he believes that if passed, the 1 percent initiative will not make much effect on Gooding County "one way or the other," Trounson says he interprets the proposal to mean that taxes do not "have to be 1 percent of market value."

"If they currently are .75 of a percent they could remain at that level. They would not have to go up. If the concept becomes law, it will necessitate a thorough personal inspection of every house and piece of property," he says, "resulting in 'tremendous cost' before taxes can actually be computed on the 'true market value.'"

Debate in Wendell

What should sports be for junior high students?

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

WENDELL — The old controversy between inter-school athletic backers vs. the alternative benefits from intramural sports for junior high students was apparent at the Wendell school board meeting here Monday night.

Although the difference of opinion remained muted, it was obvious that the gap between the two sides will not be easily bridged, with Coach Yong Behrens referring to intramural programs, as where "you just throw a ball out, the kids get nothing."

The discussion was occasioned by a report of a telephone survey made among a majority of the parents of incoming 7th graders. The survey was made by members of a parents' committee at the request of the school board. Just months ago students was apparent at the Wendell school board meeting here Monday night.

According to Lou Schrenk, chairman of a parents' committee concerned about the school, 31 of the 41 households contacted favor having an intramural sports program in the junior-high instead of the competitive sports schedule which requires out-of-town games.

Mrs. Harold Ruby, former PTA president, who participated in the calling, said five parents wanted to keep the present setup with five undecided. There are 61 households with incoming 7th grade students.

Mrs. Schrenk said she personally did not participate in the survey because she was prejudiced against taking "12-year-olds out of town on buses."

Coach Behrens questioned the validity of the survey results because, he said "you can get different answers from the same people by how you ask the questions."

He indicated all students going out for sports get to play, but Mrs. Ruby said the overwhelming opinion of the parents contacted is that many more children would get to participate if an intramural program was inaugurated.

Behrens said he wondered "if most parents even know what an intramural program is," referring scornfully to it as "just play and they can get that in P.E. classes."

The backup of the intramural approach said more children would benefit because with a varsity basketball team, for example, "five play, five can fill in and the rest run up and down the hall during the games," Mrs. Ruby said.

Behrens said schools without a varsity program in junior high suffer in high school competition. He also warned that doing away with the junior high traditional sports competition would cause an increase in delinquency.

The board took the telephone survey report under advisement.

In other business, trustees raised the price of school hot lunches 5 cents, to 70 cents, for teachers, following a report by Mildred Frith, lunch director. She said with many children refusing to drink milk the school is not breaking even on the hot-lunch program because the district cannot be reimbursed with federal money unless milk is included in the lunch.

The board decided Mrs. Frith should include a carton of milk on every tray and instruct students not wanting to drink their milk to place the cartons on a table where other children could drink them, or they could be recycled in the refrigerator if not opened.

KETCHUM — Ketchum police are investigating a burglary of an undisclosed amount of money from a safe at the Warm Springs Restaurant in Ketchum.

Ketchum Police Chief Dennis Haynes said he has asked for assistance from the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement in conducting the investigation into the burglary.

Ravenscroft called 'man of indecision'

IDAHO FALLS — James Crowe Republican candidate for governor said Tuesday that fellow Republican gubernatorial candidate Vernon Ravenscroft was "the man of indecision." "Look at the record," Crowe said. "Here is a man who has flip-flopped over every major issue. First he was against the right to work proposal, now he's for it. First he voted for the Equal Rights Amendment, now he's against it. First he opposed local option taxes now he's for them. The list goes on and on. Where does this man stand? The voters of Idaho know all about Ravenscroft and his indecision and they won't be fooled on election day."

Crowe, a Coeur d'Alene builder and developer, said a businessman "stands by his decisions, while a politician plays with indecision and the voters suffer." Ravenscroft is a Tuttle lawyer and businessman.

Candidates talk on land issues

Fearful of the development of a landed aristocracy, such as those which developed in Europe and in Mexico, Congress placed tight restrictions on water delivered from federal reclamation projects. That water, it was realized, was the source of survival and wealth for the state.

The 1902 law expressed the philosophy that power and wealth should be broadly controlled and enjoyed. To achieve those goals, Congress then limited to 160 acres the amount of directly owned land which could be irrigated from a federal reclamation project, and established a residency requirement for irrigators using federal water. For the pro-researched farming conditions of 1902, 160 acres seemed a reasonable restriction.

The law was loosely followed, however, and attempts in 1977 to reinforce the provisions against California corporate farming plants brought militant and massive protests from irrigators throughout the west. Idaho farmers said the law was no longer realistic. The average size of an Idaho farm in 1978, they pointed out, was 389 acres — almost four times the size of the average "family farm" outlined in the 1902 law.

Idaho's gubernatorial candidates were among those protesting last year. At hearings on the law, held in Boise last December, Evans called for a one year moratorium on enforcement. The governor said during this period acreage limitations should either be scrapped or replaced with "an acreage equivalency factor for each acre dependent on local conditions." The governor also said existing residency requirements should be abolished or updated in light of modern farming conditions.

After Crowe, Amyx, Ravenscroft and Larson argued acreage limitations should be scrapped. Agricultural conditions have changed since the time of the 1902 law, and the conditions which might have once made the limitations necessary have largely ceased to exist.

Election '78

Jackson says he supports "realistic" limitations, but adds the acreage size for one state might not work in every state. Jackson says a limit helps keep the land in the hands of small farmers, and says he could support the 1,600-acre limitation proposed in legislation introduced by Sen. James McClure.

The Republicans also differ on residency requirements. Larsen, Amyx, Ravenscroft, and Crowe say they should be eliminated. Modern transportation systems make the original 50-mile limit unrealistic, they say. Otter says the land should be owned only by Idahoans who are more likely to understand Idaho farming problems. Jackson also says the land should be owned by Idaho residents, but adds they should live within a "reasonable limit" of the farm.

Idaho's gubernatorial candidates disagree on the 1902 residency law, but not on the subject of 100 percent parity for farmers. Many "proposed" solutions "Part" is a system by which a varying level of equality is maintained between farmers' current purchasing power and rate of exchange and the purchasing power and rate of exchange which existed during a selected base period of years. That equality is maintained by government support of agricultural commodity prices at a level fixed by law.

The system is designed to give the farmer a fair return in relation to the things he must buy. When 100 percent parity is established, the farmer is receiving, through government supports, the same rate of exchange and purchasing power as existed during the selected base period.

During last year's national farm strike, Idaho farmers were among those demanding 100 percent parity as their key goal. But Democratic and Republican gubernatorial aspirants alike argue the move would be inflationary, while at the same time placing agriculture under increased federal regulation.

The candidates agree a goal for Idaho farmers should be a gradual phase out of parity and a return to a free market for agriculture.

Cities back Airwest run

BOISE (UPI) — Five of Idaho's western neighbors threw their support to Hughes Airwest today at a Civil Aeronautics Board hearing on applications of five airlines who want to provide additional service for Boise.

Continental, Frontier, Airwest, Texas International and Western Airlines all seek CAB approval for daily, round-trip service between Boise and Denver — service at present provided only by United Airlines.

Eugene, Ore., Yakima, Wash., and the Washington tri-city of Richland, Pasco and Kennewick supported Airwest because it could provide connecting flights.

Don Duvall, manager of the Boise airport, said even one new carrier for Boise will require eventual expansion of the local airport and the carrier will have to help pay for that expansion through long-term lease.

He said the airport could handle two new carriers temporarily but stressed the facilities eventually would have to be expanded. Under examination by a Hughes Airwest attorney he said it would be easier if Airwest provided the additional service.

Continental and Frontier airlines got into a dispute before administrative law Judge Frank M. Whiting about low-cost fares and whether those of the two airlines are comparable. Continental contended they are not because it has no advance booking restrictions on such fares.

Ensuna elected board chairman

CASTLEFORD — John Ensuna, Castleford area farmer, was elected chairman of the Castleford School Board Monday night.

He succeeded Mary Ann Blicik in the annual board reorganization. Trustees elected John Cothran as vice chairman and Susan Lawrence Guigley as a new trustee.

The board approved Jerry Allred as new agriculture teacher for the high school and approved expenses for the school coach to attend a state coaches' clinic in Boise next month.

Dick Peters, school superintendent, said the district is in pretty good condition for the coming year as to filling faculty positions. Only one vacancy remains — that being a music teacher for the district.

Annual breakfast in park Friday

TWIN FALLS — The YFCA's 15th Annual Chuck Wagon Breakfast will be held Friday at the City Park from 6:30 a.m. until 10 a.m.

For only $1.75 ($1.50 for children), the YFCA volunteer chefs will whip up a fine breakfast of sausage, eggs, pancakes, juice, milk and coffee in the cool morning air beneath the City Park's trees.

Tickets may be obtained at the YFCA or at the breakfast.

Bricks, truck top auction at Jerome

JEROME — One hundred fifteen thousand bricks and an old beat up pick-up will be among items auctioned by the Jerome School District July 20.

Starting at 6 p.m. at the old Lincoln School, bidders will compete for red bricks, lumber, light fixtures, doors, windows, railings and other relics from the school which is being demolished.

School Superintendent Percy Christensen hopes to sell a pick-up truck which has been sitting behind the school for three years. Christensen said another auction will be held later.

Bridge clubs aid Easter Seal center

TWIN FALLS — A donation of $100 has been made to the Twin Falls Easter Seal Center by Duplicate Bridge Clubs of Major Valley.

The donation represents funds returned to the local organizations from the American Contract Bridge League. Clubs from local areas donate proceeds from special charity games to the national organization for a charity adopted each year on a national basis. This year the charity is Multiple Sclerosis.

At the end of the year the national league returns some funds to local units and these can be donated to favorite charities.

The Twin Falls Unit No. 400 selected the Easter Seal program which helps crippled and handicapped children to receive the $100 donation.

Drop looms in nation's corn crop

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 1978 corn crop, after two years of surpluses and low prices, is expected to be 6.15 billion bushels, 4 percent smaller than last year, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

The department's Crop Reporting Board predicted the yield per acre would be 90.1 bushels, compared with 91 bushels in 1977 and below the record 1972 yield of 97 bushels.

If the forecast is realized, this would be the third largest crop on record.

The season's first crop estimate, based on July 1 conditions, was smaller than last year's because of farmer participation in an administration soil-side program designed to reduce the supply and raise prices.

Last year's crop of 6.37 billion bushels and winter wheat crop would be 1.8 billion bushels, 11 percent below last year's 2.025 billion bushel crop.

The estimate indicated the total wheat crop would fall below 2 billion bushels for the first time since 1974.

The department's first spring wheat estimate indicated it would be 406 million bushels, 3 percent below last year's crop.

The department revised downward its winter wheat estimate to 1.28 billion bushels compared with last month's estimate of 1.3 billion bushels and 11 percent below last year's crop.

Durum wheat production is expected to be 119 million bushels, 49 percent more than last year.

Oats production is expected to total 656 million bushels, 15 percent below last year. Barley production was estimated at 410 million bushels, 4 percent below last year.

The estimate for rye was 23.5 million bushels, compared with last year's crop of nearly 17 million bushels.

Production estimates for the soybean and grain sorghum crops will not be made until August.

Production of summer potatoes was forecast at 21.2 million hundredweight, 4 percent below last year. The commercial apple crop was estimated at 77.5 billion pounds, 7 percent above last year. Peaches are expected to total 2.5 billion pounds, down 6 percent from a month ago, 14 percent below last season.

Pears were estimated at 655,000 tons, 17 percent below last year. Sweet cherry production was estimated at 37,000 tons, 7 percent below last year and tart cherries at 79,000 metric tons, down 17 percent from last year.

Soviet grain crop estimate moves up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 1978 Soviet crop, which has an impact on American grain export farmers' prices, is expected to be as much as 25 million metric tons larger than last year's.

In the second forecast of the 1978 Soviet grain crop, the Agriculture Department Monday revised upward its prediction to between 195 million and 200 million metric tons for a "relatively good crop." Last year's crop was 195.5 million metric tons.

A June 15 forecast had predicted a 1978 crop between 185 million and 225 million tons. The latest forecast was based on early July conditions.

The high point of this year's estimate assumes good weather and the low point assumes poor weather. The department tentatively predicted a middle ground between the two extremes.

"Barring unusual conditions during the balance of the growing and harvesting season, a total grain output of approximately 215 million tons is now indicated, including about 165 million tons of wheat, 100 million tons of coarse grains and 10 million tons of miscellaneous grains, rice and pulses," the department said.

The 1978 estimate for total grain planted remained at 130 million hectares, about the same as last year, but yield is expected to increase by 10 percent. A hectare is equal to 2.47 acres.

The total Soviet crop in 1972 when the Soviets made large American grain exports was 168.2 million metric tons. The crop was 149.1 million metric tons in 1975.

Idaho crops show good July growth

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said this week crops around the state are making good growth, but harvesting was delayed last week because of above-normal amounts of precipitation.

Crops in southeastern Idaho did the best, with hay almost completely harvested and potatoes and winter and spring wheat crops doing well.

Growers in the eastern part of the state, however, said they still need rain. The service said dryland crop-land soils are showing the effects of lack of moisture.

Thundershowers kept fields in north and southwest Idaho green, although some farmers report quality problems in hay because of the downpour during the past week.

Statewide, the cherry harvest is nearly finished and first crop hay is 80 percent harvested. Most crops are on their way to completing this year's cycle in normal fashion, the service says.

Insects threaten plains area crops

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — Kansas Gov. Robert Bennett says state and federal officials must act immediately to stop swarms of grasshoppers and chinch bugs munching their way across the Midwest.

Bennett has called a meeting of officials from Kansas, Oklahoma, Colorado, Nebraska and the federal government to discuss ways of combating the pests.

"I am convinced from my own discussions with farmers that considerable damage should be done to approval of non-restricted insecticides, under close supervision, to save this year's crop production," Bennett said in a telegram to governors of Oklahoma, Nebraska and Colorado.

The telegram, which also went to the U.S. Agriculture Department and the Environmental Protection Agency, set the meeting for 10 a.m. Thursday at the Kansas Capitol.

National league continues all-star domination of AL

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Steve Garvey of Los Angeles, who always seems to shine brightest when the All-Stars come out, singled home two runs and tripled to start a four-run eighth inning Tuesday night which brought the National League a 7-3 victory over the American League for their seventh straight All-Star Game triumph.

Garvey, who tied the score for the Nationals with a two-run single in the third inning, greeted New York Yankees reliever Rich Gossage with his triple high off the right field wall leading off the eighth inning and promptly broke the deadlock by dashing home on a wild pitch with Dave Concepcion at the plate.

After Gossage completed a walk to Concepcion, Dave Winfield, pride of the host club Padres, singled to left-center and made it into second when left fielder Chet Lemon kicked the ball. Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies then singled for two more runs and after Ron Cey grounded out, Davey Lopes of Los Angeles singled to right for the fourth run of the inning.

Garvey, who has batted .500 in five All-Star games with two homers and six runs batted in, was named winner of the most valuable player award for the second time. He previously achieved the honor in 1974 at Pittsburgh.

The victory, which went to Chicago Cubs' reliever Bruce Sutter, who pitched 2-3 innings of hitless ball, was the 15th for the NL in the last 16 games and increased their overall record to 36-13.

The Americans struck quickly against their former teammate, Vida Blue of the San Francisco Giants, who was making All-Star history by becoming the first pitcher to start a game for both leagues. Minnesota's Rod Carew, the first batter of the game, drilled a 1-2 pitch to the wall in left-center, legging it out for a triple, and George Brett of the Kansas City Royals followed with a double.

After Boston's Jim Rice went out on a grounder to second, Richie Zisk of Texas walked and Boston's Carlton Fisk scored Brett with the second run on a sacrifice fly to shallow right which second baseman Joe Morgan caught down. Any further scoring was snuffed out, however, when the slow-footed Zisk was cut down trying to steal second for the final out.

Two innings later, Carew whacked another Blue pitch over center fielder George Foster's head and it caromed off the wall in left-center in almost the identical spot as the first hit for another triple. Carew then easily scored when Brett hit a long sacrifice fly that again sent Foster to the wall.

"The same old Rod Carew," said Blue of the two triples which set an All-Star game record.

But the AL's lead was short-lived when its starter, Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles, ran into a disastrous streak of wildness in the bottom of the third. After Larry Bowa of the Phillies led off with a single and stole second on a third strike to pinch-hitter Reggie Smith, Palmer got Pete Rose on a tapper to first base before walking Morgan, Foster and Greg Luzinski in succession — the last forcing home a run. Garvey then sent a sharp grounder past shortstop Fred Feteo into left field to score Foster and Luzinski for a 3-3 tie.

"I made a real bad pitch to Garvey," Palmer said. "It was a slider like the one he hit for a homer last year."

The hit marked the fifth All-Star game in which Garvey has hit safely and it knocked Palmer out of the game and brought on Oakland right-hander Matt Keough, who got out of the jam by getting Rick Monday on a fly to left after Ted Simmons beat out a check-swing dribbler down the third base line which retarded the bases.

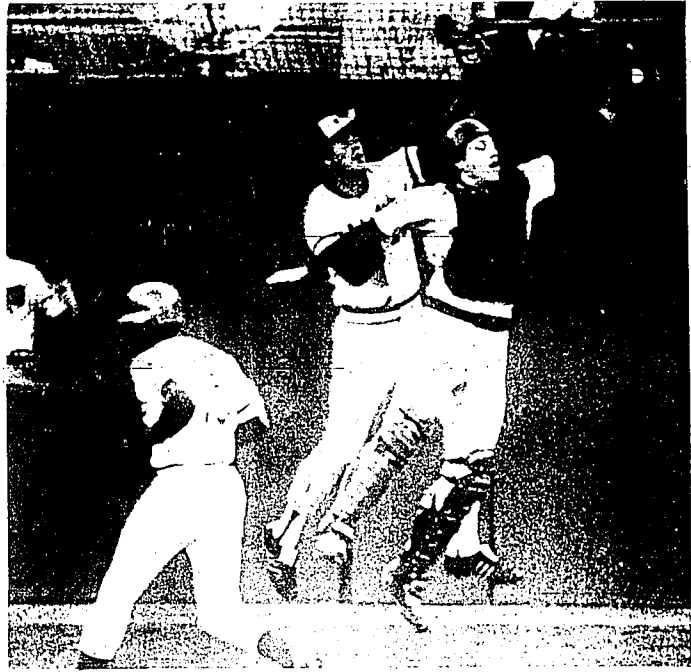

The NL threatened to break the tie in the seventh when with one out, Rose doubled down the left field line. After Morgan fled out, AL Manager Bill Martin ordered pitcher Jim Kern of Cleveland to walk Foster intentionally and brought on his own ace, left-hander Ron Guidry, to pitch to pinch-hitter Willie Stargell. With the count 1-1, a Guidry fastball bounced off catcher Jim Sundberg's glove for a passed ball advancing the runners to second and third. But Guidry got Stargell on an inning-ending fly to center to end that threat.

Meanwhile, the AL never threatened seriously against San Diego's Rollie Fingers and Sutter. Fingers pitched two innings, allowing only one hit, and Sutter struck out two in his 1-2-3 innings. Sutter could have finished the game but NL manager Tom Lasorda of Los Angeles pulled a nice gesture by asking 39-year-old knuckleballer Phil Niekro of Atlanta to get the final out. Niekro got Darrell Porter to pop out to Ron Cey to end the game.

Garvey admits prejudice in comparison of leagues

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — "It's not for me to say if the National League is stronger than the American League," All-Star game MVP Steve Garvey said Tuesday night. "But I'm prejudiced. I feel the National League has the best 24 or 25 best players."

Booted in the pre-game introductions, the Los Angeles Dodgers' brilliant first baseman wound up the hero of the San Diego Stadium-crowd-of-51,549 with an eighth-inning triple off premier New York Yankee reliever Rich Gossage that ignited a four-run rally for a 7-3 National League victory.

"I didn't mind the boogie (by the Padre fans) because it shows they have a lot of enthusiasm," Garvey said. "One fan yelled at me in the eighth inning, 'I love you tonight, but I'll hate you tomorrow.' That's the way it should be."

Garvey, who has now hit safely in all five of his All-Star appearances, and has been the game's MVP twice in that five-year span, also contributed a two-run single in the third inning as the National League got three runs after the American League got off to a 3-0 start. Garvey's triple in the eighth inning was high off the right field wall.

"Eachward is special," Garvey said. "In 1974, I was the first write-in starter and I had the mumps five days before the game. That was a chance to thank the fans for the write-in vote. Tonight it was special because I helped us come from behind."

Garvey displayed a large bandage on his chin. At Houston Saturday, he received a severe cut from a pickoff attempt by hard-throwing Dodger rookie Bob Welch and it took 20 stitches to close the wound.

"I think I popped one of those stitches out on that triple. At first I thought it was out. But against Gossage, any time you hit a ball hard like that, you've got to be satisfied. He's just a tremendous pitcher."

Asked about the National League's seven consecutive victories and 15 triumphs in 16 years, Garvey said, "I think spirit and comradery have been the keys in the five games I have played. You could see our bench come alive tonight...What each player did before the other in the eight spurred us on. Maybe by the time the All-Star Game comes up each season, we're so tired of battling our heads against each other that we want to play together."

Tommy Lasorda, Garvey's Dodger manager, who had his first managerial assignment in the All-Star game, said he was never worried after the American League went ahead.

"I'll be honest," he said. "I thought we were going to score a lot of runs tonight because we have so many outstanding offensive players."

"We knew we would be stealing a lot of fastballs from Gossage because he's such a tremendous fastball pitcher but Garvey, (Dave) Winfield and (Bob) Boone turned his heat around."

Lasorda refused to speculate on the National League's recent dominance in baseball's mid-summer classic.

"That's hard to explain," he said, "but I've never seen the enthusiasm from such an outstanding group of ballplayers as I saw tonight."

Gossage views loss as lowest point of career

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Slitting in front of his locker, wearily toweling the beads of perspiration from his face, losing pitcher Rich Gossage said he never felt this low since he was sent to the minor leagues.

That was four years ago when he still was with the Chicago White Sox. On Tuesday night, called in by Manager Billy Martin to pitch for the American League All-Stars in the eighth inning with the score tied 3-3, the husky, hard-throwing right-hander gave up a leadoff triple to Steve Garvey and then wild-pitched him home with the tie-breaking run while working on Dave Concepcion. The National League went on to score three more runs against the Yankees' ace reliever and wrap up their seventh straight All-Star victory and 15th in last 16 games, 7-3.

"I'm very disappointed," muttered Gossage. "With Garvey, I got the ball up and over the plate and he just hit it."

"On that wild pitch, I just started musing the ball and try to throw it too hard (to Concepcion). "That's what happens when you overthrow the ball," Gossage went on. "You want to do your best. You don't want to do what I did tonight in front of 60 million people. It hurts. I think the last time I felt like this is when I was sent to the minors."

Jim Sundberg, the gritty Texas receiver who had spelled starter Carlton Fisk behind the plate for the American League's in the sixth, had no chance at all to knock down Gossage's wild pitch as Concepcion excitedly waved Garvey in from third.

"He had no chance at all," Gossage said. "It was three feet outside and it was sailing away from him. I think it's the first time in the big leagues I've ever wild-pitched the winning run home."

Someone asked him if he said anything himself after overthrowing the pitch and for the first time Gossage managed a weak smile.

"Yeah, I said something all right," he confirmed. "I said, 'Explosive deflected.'"

Fisk called it the best All-Star game I've been in" despite the American League's loss. He specially singled out Larry Sorenson, the American League's third pitcher who held the winners scoreless on one hit over three innings for prizes.

"Sorenson pitched real good," affirmed the Red Sox catcher. "It was his first time out in an All-Star game, but it wasn't his last."

Kansas City third baseman George Brett, who doubted home the losers' first run in the opening inning, then knocked in their second one with a sacrifice fly in the third and added a single in the fifth, said he thought "We had them early."

Asked whether he felt the American League would ever win another game, he poked his head up from the ham and cheese sandwich he was eating, laughed and said, "Are you kidding?"

Splintering ash

UNARMED Fred Lynn of Boston and the American League all-stars winds up with a shattered stub of a bat in his hands but a base hit during the midsummer classic Tuesday night National League won 7-3.

Brown washes hands on Braves' demise

BOSTON (UPI) — Wheelbarrow dealer John Brown, who took over the Buffalo Braves and then traded the franchise to own the Boston Celtics, said Tuesday he accepts no responsibility for the demise of the Braves. "All an owner can do is his best," Brown told a news conference. "We gave up a piece of the future to get players. I'm proud of what we've done."

Brown took over the Braves at the end of the 1976-77 season, after a 30-52 season. The team finished 27-55 and attendance dipped after a rash of trades and injuries. Brown traded Moses Malone to Houston for two first-round draft picks. He dealt NBA Rookie of the Year Adrian Dantley to Indiana for Billy Knight and Mike Bantom. Knight was hurt and Bantom never played a game for the team.

Rice draws praise from everywhere

BOSTON (UPI) — The applause starts slowly and reaches an almost deafening crescendo as some 2,000 people cheer a Squacchia-like body in a baseball uniform as he approaches home plate. Excitements of momentary echo from Fenway Park spectators as the powerful swing sends baseballs into neighboring streets and parking lots.

The applause fades and Jim Rice steps away. It is batting practice, two hours before the game. But Rice could have known from the sound coming from that band of early arrivals in the stands.

James Edward Rice makes a living out of terrorizing opposing pitchers, managers and teams. The 6-foot-2, 205-pound gentle giant leads the minor leagues in home runs, RBIs, and four other batting categories. But what frightens opponents most is that at age 25 he is only approaching his peak.

"I have no goals. This is the way I am going right now, goals could only hold me back. Why put a limit on my own mind on what I can do," he says with a self-assured air that seems to border on conceit.

Rice's batting feats are such that boos emanate from Boston fans when he is walked in the middle of a Red Sox rally. A newspaper poll of general managers showed if they could have only one player — most would choose Rice. "I don't know what his potential is; no one does," says Ted Williams, who worked with the Red Sox as a spring training batting instructor. "He is so strong that he can do anything. Fred Lynn has a better style but he hits that extra long out; he either home runs or he will walk when Rice hits them. He could end up doing anything he wants."

Rice bats from Anderson, S.C., and was Boston's No. 1 selection in the 1971 June draft. He spent the better part of four seasons in the minors before joining the team for good in 1975.

In his rookie year, he clubbed 22 homers, batted .302 and knocked in 102 runs, but lost out to Lynn for Rookie-of-the-Year honors. He broke his hand in the latter part of the season, missing the playoffs and World Series.

He followed his rookie season with 25 homers, 45 RBIs and a .282 batting average. Last season, he served notice to the any remaining skeptics when he hit .320, knocked in 114 runs and belted a league high 39 homers.

"He's the most destructive hitter in baseball," says Reggie Jackson. "He's the most feared hitter in the game right now. He has a chance to stay that way for a long time because he's mastered the strike zone at such a young age."

Rice downplays his hitting achievements. He says he still hasn't reached a groove this year but adds he's not worried.

"I'm approaching hitting the way I always do — see the ball and react. You can't change for any one ball. Being a power hitter is a gift and you can't teach it or work on it. You have to do what you do best and what happens, happens," he says.

"If there's a book on how to pitch Jim Rice, I wish someone would show it to me," says Tigers manager Richie Hank. Orioles manager Earl Weaver says he has the best advice on how to handle Rice — pitch and pray. Rice is an introvert who hides a sensitive ego in his reclusive shell. Boston writers point out Rice complained of a lack of publicity in 1975, his rookie year, but that wonder how he expects to get coverage when he doesn't talk to many of them.

Rice's relationship with the media was underscored in June when a Sport Magazine article quoted him as saying there was a racial motive in the Red Sox decision to play Lynn ahead of him in the outfield. Rice issued a statement saying no racial problems existed today, but did not deny the quotes. "I'm not going to do anything to mess up myself or the team. Why would I want to say anything while this club is getting so good? Why would I say anything to hurt the club?" he says.

Rice also is sensitive about his defense, even though he committed only 12 errors in his first four years. Batting coach Johnny Pesky admires Rice's tenacity in trying to improve his fielding and disped the notion he's half a ballplayer.

"If we played 20 exhibition games at home during the spring, I'd bet he was out 20 days getting extra work in the outfield. I know my hands were sore hitting fly balls to him. But when a kid wants to learn as much as he does, you go out and help him," Pesky says.

One of Rice's closest friends is his attorney and golfing buddy, Tony Penacchia of Providence. The two met while Rice was in the minors at Pawtucket and Penacchia talks of his client in terms normally reserved for relatives. "He's been doing some things that haven't been done in baseball for awhile and he's only 25," Penacchia says. "He has to be the most awesome player in the game. People are just starting to be aware of Jim Rice and what a force he is."

Rice's current, four-year, $125,000 contract binds him to the Red Sox through 1979 but Penacchia wants the team to extend it as soon as possible to keep Rice in Boston for the rest of his career. He makes it clear the Red Sox recognize Rice's value — the sooner the better. "We were hoping we could eliminate the problems of free agency by having his contract extended now. We're looking for a contract which will basically be the last he will sign in major league baseball. I would think his next contract will be the most impressive contract of any major league player if not athlete in general. His performance and skills are uncontradicted," Penacchia says.

Penacchia says the Red Sox have told him they do not want to talk until the season is over. That leaves the team this winter or next season to sign Rice to a long-term contract. After that, he says, it will be too late.

"We're sure the Red Sox understand there's going to be a time down the road where, because of today's structure in baseball, it will come to the point where we're so close to seeing free agency. It may be at that time to see what Jim Rice is worth on the open market," he says.

Rice lets Penacchia talk contract. He prefers to discuss contact.

"With me, the idea is to make contact. I don't go there looking for home runs," Rice said. "I try to hit the ball hard, and if you hit it right it'll go."

American League pitchers are wary of Rice's strength especially in Fenway Park, which some have dubbed "Rice Paddy."

Contact of another sort was what Rice may have had in mind when Jim Colburn hit him with a pitch in a game earlier this season. The Boston slugger walked briefly to the mound then headed to first base.

"I thought I was going to be turned into Rice-a-Roni," quipped Colburn.

Yankee relief ace Rich Gossage was asked how it felt to pitch to the power-hitting Red Sox. He mentioned one player.

"I've got to pitch to a guy like Jim Rice. That's enough to worry twopenners," he says.

Red Sox broadcaster Ken Harrison says Rice will become an even better hitter when he learns to stay away from hot pitches.

"In a couple of years, he'll be getting ahead of the count. Then we'll see what Jim Rice is really like."

Mets keep eye on minor leaguer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Everyone's the Nell Allen's turn to pitch down in the minors, the New York Mets keep both eyes on him, and oh, what his father would give if he was only able to do the same thing.

The last time he saw his son, was 15 years ago.

That's when Robert Allen went blind. Nell Allen, a strapping 20-year-old right-hander with the map of Ireland on his face, pitches for the Jackson Mets of the Texas League and has one prime objective, to get to the big leagues as soon as he can.

Every kid in the minors has pretty much the same goal in mind, but in Nell Allen's case, it's a little different.

"My main reason for wanting to get to the majors is to help my folks, the whole family, my father, mother and two brothers, all of whom helped me get this far," he says.

"You never saw a baseball fan like my father," Allen laughs, his blue eyes twinkling. "We're from Kansas City, Kansas, so he can tell you anything you want to know about the Royals. I signed with the Mets two years ago, he has been swinging over to them, too."

"He became blind when I was five years old. Deterioration of the retina. He refuses to use a cane and doesn't want any sympathy, though. Everytime I pitch, I call him up after the game and he'll tell me things to help me. When I get a win, it's like he won, too. He's so happy for me."

Last Monday night, Allen beat Tulsa, 6-1, on a five-hitter. It was his first victory in a month and made him 5-9 for the season. His earned run record is a much more lousy 2-03 and if you're wondering about the lopsided contrast between that and his won-loss record, the Jackson Mets score runs at about the same rate as the New York Mets. In Allen's last 11 starts, his ball club has gotten him a total of 13 runs.

Last week, Allen dropped a 2-0 decision in Little Rock. It was a doubly tough one to lose because his father was on hand for the first time since Allen was signed by the Mets in 1976.

"He came to Little Rock with my mother and she told him I didn't look the same as the last time she saw me pitch on opening night in Jackson," Allen says. "That night, my mother and my girl friend, Carole, came to see me pitch and I struck out 15 and beat Tulsa, 4-0. In Little Rock last week, after my mother told my father I wasn't getting enough on the ball, I could hear him hollering to me, 'Throw hard, throw hard!' That little voice, it's funny how I could pick it out from all the others in the stands. It gave me more incentive."

Upon graduating from Bishop Ward High School in Kansas City, Allen signed a letter of intent to play football for Kansas State. But Ed Charles, the Mets' former third baseman who scouts for them part time now, had seen him pitch and recommended him to Russ Schon, another of the Mets' scouts with whom Charles was working.

Allen's father then sat down and had a talk with his son.

"He told me I didn't like studying very much and if I went to Kansas State, I'd be required to maintain my grades along with playing football," Allen recalls. "He said I should give my decision some thought. I did and decided to go with baseball."

His first season out, Allen split with Marion of the Appalachian League and Wausau of the Midwest League, posting a 2-0 record with Marion and a 4-2 log with Wausau. Last season, under former major-league pitcher Jack Aker, he was 10-2 with Lynchburg of the Carolina League, striking out 126 batters in 142 innings and compiling a 2.79 ERA.

Allen missed the last month of the season when he came down with mononucleosis.

Bradley has big NFL plans

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — Luther Bradley, the Detroit Lions' top draft choice and hopeful of emulating the feats of Lem Barney and Willie Brown at cornerback, signed a multi-year contract Tuesday and immediately reported to training camp.

Precise contract terms were not disclosed. But the four-year starter at Notre Dame said it was not a no-out agreement and some of his pay will be deferred.

"I'm excited about going into camp — like all rookies," Bradley, 23, said at the National Football League team's offices just hours before the deadline for rookies to report.

"I want to play and I want to go in with all the other rookies," Bradley is tentatively pegged as Detroit's right cornerback, a spot held by Barney at the end of last season. "I don't look at it as pushing Lem Barney out of job," Bradley said.

Barney began last year as a backup safety after a 10-year run at left cornerback, a position James Hunter took over. But Levi Johnston was hurt so last year's coach, Tommy Hudspeth, switched his veteran back to the corner.

"It takes a heck of a man to be out on the corner all by himself," Bradley said. "I've got a lot of confidence in myself."

The 6-foot-2, 200-pound defensive star has "been debating" with himself what he wants out of professional football.

"I want to be satisfied I can play the game — and play it well," said Bradley, whose father was a high school football coach. "I've always looked up to Lem Barney and Willie Brown. I want to see if I can play as well as they have played."

The 11th player selected in the draft has already graduated from Notre Dame, where he holds the records for interceptions (17), interception return yardage (218 yards) and consecutive games played (46).

Successful debut

FLEDGLING PRO John McEnroe, 19, forerounds the ball back to veteran John Newcombe, 34, in their Tuesday match at Forest Hills invitational. McEnroe, playing first match in the U.S. as a professional, wore down Newcombe 1-6, 6-4, 7-5 to win.

Nastase controls temper and Fleming

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Ilie Nastase, recently suspended from Grand Prix events for three months because of his disruptive on-court behavior, kept his antics to a minimum in struggling to a 5-7, 7-6, 6-4 victory over Peter Fleming of Chatham, N.J., Tuesday night in the World Championship Tennis sanctioned $300,000

Forest Hills Invitational. In other first-round results of the 12-man round-robin event, John McEnroe made a successful American debut as a professional by wearing down veteran John Newcombe, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5, and Wojtek Fibak of Poland beat Billy Martin of Palos Verdes Estates, Calif., 6-2, 6-4. In a second-round match,

Australian Phil Dent eliminated Ken Rosewall from contention for the $100,000 first prize by handing the 43-year-old veteran his second loss, 7-5, 6-1. Dent evened his record at 1-1. Nastase displayed only a few moments of the kind of "aggravated behavior" cited by the Men's International Tennis Council in suspending the volatile Romanian and fining him $5,000 last Wednesday. Nastase's participation in the invitational is not affected by the suspension. After rallying from 2-4 and 4-5 deficits to win the first set, Fleming, the 1976 NCAA runner-up from UCLA, nearly did it again in the second. Nastase led 5-3 and fell behind 6-5 before winning the tie-breaker

7-3. In the 10th game of the final set, Nastase broke Fleming at deuce to win the match. Newcombe, the three-time Wimbledon champion and world's No. 1 player in 1972, showed the effects of not playing for nearly a week after being eliminated in the round of 16 at Wimbledon last week. A one-hour practice session Monday was the first tennis played by the 34-year-old Australian in six days. Despite growing up in nearby Douglaston, N.Y., McEnroe, 19, the NCAA champion from Stanford who turned pro last month before Wimbledon, got much of the announced afternoon crowd of 3,515 behind Newcombe with outbursts of temper and complaints about line calls. But McEnroe's behavior only served to annoy Newcombe. Newcombe broke McEnroe twice en route to an easy first-set victory. But McEnroe broke Newcombe in the final games of the last two sets to win the match.

Players 'feel for' more than like links

St. Andrews, Scotland (UPI) — After taking his first look at St. Andrews in 1946, Sam Snead called the world's most revered golf course "just a collection of cow pastures."

Jack Nicklaus, who won the British Open last time it was played here in 1970, says most Americans would call St. Andrews "a joke." "American people don't have any idea what this is," added Nicklaus who personally loves the course. "You put this course over there and they'd say it's the worst golf course they've ever seen."

The Royal and Ancient Club, which traces its roots to the very beginnings of golf, has elicited such phrases of endearment and bewilderment, passion and fury, for the past century. It is unlike anything in the United States, although Tom Watson said Tuesday that some of the fairways remind him of Augusta National.

The most unusual feature of St. Andrews is 14 double greens, meaning that those 14 holes share seven enormous greens, the largest green, serving the fourth and 14th holes, covers almost an acre.

Another perplexing distinction of the 6,933-yard course is hidden bunkers, some as deep as 10 feet. The Royal and Ancient old course will host the British Open for the 22nd time starting Wednesday, and once again it is evoking a mixed bag of emotion from players who have never seen it before.

Watson, the defending champion and 6-1 co-favorite with Nicklaus, isn't even sure from one day to the other just how he feels, although he's now warming up to the environment. "I didn't particularly like it when I first came here," said Watson, who saw the course for the first time last Thursday. "Yesterday I played it for the third time and I was still negative. But today my feeling changed to positive."

"It's a unique course — I have never played anything like it in my life. It is typical of British and Scottish courses for a tremendous number of bounces that you have to contend with on the greens."

Watson has won the British Open two of the last three years, each time on a course he had never played before — at Carnoustie and Turnberry. So even though St. Andrews still is strange terrain to him, he feels he has a good enough chance to win again.

"I like to play on different golf courses," said the 28-year-old redhead. "I don't like the tradition of playing one tournament on the same course every year. I enjoy the challenge of playing a new course. This is what golf is all about."

Auerbach mum over future employment

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston Celtics owner John Brown said Tuesday he will make every effort to keep Red Auerbach as general manager. But Auerbach said he is withholding any decision on his future while he weighs other offers.

"We're interested in every way for Red to stay," Brown told a news conference. "We're going to make every effort to keep him here. I've made him a very lucrative offer, but we're going to give him the time he needs."

"I don't think Red and I will have any problems. Any owner would be thrilled to team up with Red Auerbach," Brown took over the Celtics after swapping his Buffalo Braves franchise with former Celtic owner Irv Levin. Levin then moved the Braves team to San Diego.

Auerbach, whose contract expires Aug. 1, said he had received offers from New York Knicks owner Sonny Werblin and one other NBA club, which he did not name.

"I'm thinking about it," the crafty redhead said. "As of now, I'm staying and employed by the Celtics. I've made no decision. I'll talk with Sonny and one other ballclub and maybe some television."

Auerbach said he had received permission from Celtics owner Irv Levin to avoid the possibility of a tampering charge. "I feel very comfortable with Red," Brown said, "but Sonny Werblin wields a mean checkbook."

Auerbach said he did not envision any problems in working with Brown, who has a reputation of being an involved owner. But he said he was upset at not being consulted about the trade which brought three Buffalo players to Boston in exchange for four Celtics.

"I was mad, mad at not being consulted. But naturally, I couldn't be consulted because he (Brown) didn't own the club. I was going in one direction (role players) and he's going in the other (offensive power)," Auerbach said.

"We got some great players. Whether they can do it or not remains to be seen."

Brown traded center Kevin Kunnert, draftee Freeman Williams and power forward Kermit Washington to San Diego for forwards Marvin Barnes and Billy Knight and guard Nate Archibald. Brown staunchly defends the trade, saying the Celtics acquired the talent to turn the ballclub into a playoff contender. He said the Celtics needed "a lot of help."

"They are three all-pros and I feel they make a great contribution or I wouldn't have brought them here. I feel very confident about the future of the Celtics," Brown said.

Brown said Sidney Wicks would probably go to San Diego as well, with the Celtics receiving draft choices they could send to Houston as compensation for signing free-agent Kunnert.

"Wicks is likely to go. Irv has a right to get him and I have a right to give him," Brown said.

Brown agreed with Auerbach to hold off on any pressure tactics to sign Larry Bird. The Celtics' top pick who has one year left of college eligibility at Indiana State.

Miller believes his game rounding back into shape

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (UPI) — They used to call him "Johnny Come Lately" because of his close-to-the-wire last round charges.

But it's now two years since Johnny Miller last arrived at the front of a field and he says he has not given any thought to winning the 107th British Open in which he will be the first of the 29 Americans off the tees Wednesday morning.

"I am happy to be here after almost not coming," said the 33-year-old Napa-based Californian. "I have always been steady and no problems. If I can drive it better, which I am doing now, and make a few putts, then I have a chance here," he said.

Miller, who played St. Andrews the only time in 1965 with Brigham Young University against St. Andrews University, said it was vital to watch the fairway bunkers.

"You must play almost every hole way left and that was why the late Tony-Lema won at St. Andrews in 1961," he said.

"He hit the ball and kept down the left side and it was ideal for him. You can hardly hit it too far left. You might make the hole play longer, but that is better than playing out of a bunker."

Miller said he was worried about his pulled back muscle when he first arrived but now it was fine and he felt no twinges following his final practice round over the famous St. Andrews Old Course Tuesday.

He had not played since lying for sixth in the U.S. Open and had been told it would be a three-week job — and now after three weeks he was fit.

The 6-foot-2, 180-pound blond, who won the British Open two years ago, is still looking for his first tournament success since that victory.

He blames his slide on driving and putting problems. His putting was mediocre and he had not been making the putts he used to. Until last month he had been driving poorly for two years.

"It is a combination of bad driving and bad putts. My irons have always been steady and no problems. If I can drive it better, which I am doing now, and make a few putts, then I have a chance here," he said.

LA mayor opens final IOC push

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Mayor Tom Bradley, who began the push to bring the 1984 Olympics to Los Angeles, said Tuesday he would "drop the whole matter" if the International Olympic Committee rejects a contract offered by a private organizing committee.

Bradley said the contract, which was presented to the IOC by the private Los Angeles Olympic Committee headed by attorney John C. Argue, is the only way the city can be protected from any financial liability from the Games if they are held in the city.

The IOC's policy is to award the Olympic Games only to a city or similar government body that would be required to assume all financial liability.

Bradley's spokesman, Tom Sullivan, said if the private contract is rejected, the mayor "would be left with no other choice than to drop the whole matter."

The private pact, Sullivan said, "is the only way we can protect the taxpayers from a deficit, although we don't think there would be a deficit, but we want iron-clad guarantees that the city would not be responsible for one."

LASORDA PLEASES ROSE
SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Tom Lasorda, manager of the National League All-Stars, made one of them, Pete Rose, an offer he couldn't believe.

Prior to Tuesday night's contest, Lasorda, a great admirer of Rose's, asked him if he would take the opening lineup card out to home plate before the game instead of him.

"It was one of the nicest things that I've ever had done to me," said the appreciative Cincinnati third baseman.

Seattle and Wilkens okay five-year plan

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Seattle Superstars have reached a compromise agreement by which Lenny Wilkens will remain as coach and director of player personnel in the first three years of a new five-year contract, it was disclosed Tuesday by team president Sam Schulman.

The agreement, disclosed by Schulman in a telephone news conference from his Los Angeles office, provides that Wilkens will move into an executive capacity in the Seattle organization the final two years. But this does not rule out the possibility that Wilkens could continue coaching after three more seasons.

Wilkens explained that he didn't know, at this time, if he would like to continue coaching after three years.

In his dual capacity as coach and director of player personnel, Wilkens will be responsible for player acquisitions, scouting and drafting, but will not conduct contract negotiations with the players.

Wilkens became coach last Nov. 30 when Seattle was struggling with a 5-17 record. He guided the team to a 47-35 regular season. The Sonics then posted playoff victories over Los Angeles, Portland and Denver and appeared for the first time in the NBA championship series, which they lost to the Washington Bullets in seven games.

"I'm delighted to have Lenny in the fold with us," said Schulman in his conversation.

Summertime and menus are easy

By WILLETTA WARBERG

There must be more than 100 times in the last few weeks you've almost simultaneously visited the new garden, your yard and cook books hoping to come up with just one dish that's light, refreshing and filling, uncomplicated to fix, preparable in a few minutes and is economical, and which makes unusual use of your foods at hand. A salad (cold collection of foods with a dressing) is probably what you're mentally palatalizing. Kicky combinations which make one meal and at the same time are well-balanced nutritionally are just not quite imaginable. Experimentation scares you for fear of wasting food.

Maybe the following salad ideas for making just one meal in a salad, which can be increased again as much for each additional salad required, can key you on your way to dream up your own unique food combinations to void you of your salad days blues. You've got to follow a rule, however, for making your salads into well-rounded meals and that is to include at least one food from these three food groups . . . (1) meat, poultry, fish, eggs, dried beans and peas, nuts, milk, cheese and other milk products; (2) fruits and vegetables; (3) bread, cereal, pasta and cornmeal products and rice.

Let one ingredient speak louder than all because that gives you the theme for good flavor. Over-seasoning can ruin everything . . . especially when the total meat is just one item. Vinegar and oil dressing is suitable for any salad but just a touch of any other dressing converts the mundane into a gourmet treat. Enjoy your salads chilled but don't overdo it because you can lose the flavor, as with anything else, when icy cold edibles stun the taste buds.

SPLIT BANANA SALAD

1 small carrot, pared and grated
1 ounce Muenster cheese, diced
1 tablespoon chopped walnuts
1 tablespoon Ginger Dressing (see salad dressing section)
1 banana, peeled and sliced in half lengthwise and brushed with lemon juice

lettuce leaves
In small mixing bowl, toss together grated carrot, cheese, walnuts and Ginger Dressing. Cover; chill until ready to serve. To serve, arrange banana slices on lettuce leaves in banana split fashion; top banana with carrot mixture. Complete your balanced salad meal with toasted raisin bread, a glass of milk and a piece of fruit.

MACARONI GREEN PEPPER SALAD

1 small sweet green pepper, seeded and finely chopped
2 ounces Cheddar cheese, diced
2 tablespoons Russian Dressing (see salad dressing section)
1/2 teaspoon drained and mashed capers
salt and pepper

lettuce leaves
In small bowl, combine cooked macaroni, chopped sweet green pepper, cheese, Russian dressing, capers and adjust seasoning with salt and pepper. Cover; chill until ready to serve. To serve, arrange macaroni salad-on-lettuce leaves. Complete meal with wheat thins, glass of milk and piece of fruit.

TUNA SALAD EXOTICA

1 can (3 1/2 ounces) tuna fish, drained
1 tablespoon currants or raisins
1 ounce American cheese, diced
2 tablespoons Ginger Dressing (see salad dressing section)

sweet green pepper to garnish

CUCUMBER-RAISIN SALAD

1 small cucumber, peeled and thinly sliced
1 small onion, peeled and thinly sliced
2 tablespoons raisins
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 hard-cooked egg, peeled and chopped
2 tablespoons Yogurt Herb Dressing (see salad dressing section)
salt and pepper

lettuce leaves
In small bowl, combine cucumber slices, onion slices, raisins and salt. Cover; chill overnight. When ready to serve, press or squeeze out and discard liquid from cucumber mixture. Combine cucumber mixture with chopped egg, Yogurt Herb Dressing and adjust seasoning with salt and pepper. Serve salad on bed of lettuce leaves. Complete balanced salad meal with toasted dark brown bread, glass of milk and piece of fruit.

VEGETARIAN'S TOTAL MEAL SALAD

1 can (3 1/2 ounces) peas and carrots, drained
2 ounces Swiss cheese, diced
1 tablespoon minced onion
1/2 teaspoon basil leaves
2 tablespoons mayonnaise or Cheese Dressing (see salad dressing section)

To serve, arrange wedged tomato on lettuce leaves; fill center with peas and carrot mixture. Complete meal with toasted English muffin, glass of milk and fruit.

MINTED LEFTOVER MEAT SALAD

1/2 cup diced leftover cooked lean roast beef, pork, veal or lamb
1/4 cup French Dressing (see salad dressing section)
1 teaspoon minced fresh mint leaves or 1/2 teaspoon crushed dried mint leaves
1/2 cup cooked white, brown or wild rice
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento-stuffed green olives
salt and pepper
1 tomato, wedged
lettuce leaves

In small bowl, combine leftover meat, French Dressing and minced fresh or crushed dried mint leaves. Cover; marinate in refrigerator overnight. When ready to serve, combine meat mixture with rice, chopped olives and adjust seasoning with salt and pepper. Place wedged tomato in center of lettuce leaves; fill tomato with meat mixture. Complete meal with a hard roll, glass of milk and piece of fruit.

The best summer menus are those that delight your guests but take little of your time or energy. As a welcome change from the usual barbecue or picnic fare, we suggest you consider one of these pleasurable alternatives.

- Set out an assortment of unusual breads and some delectable cheeses from Denmark; accompany with fresh fruits. On another table, offer several wines for tasting and salted almonds for nibbling.
- Serve a sensational salad with soup. Make the salad high in protein with almonds and cheese.
- Set up a Sandwich Bar and let guests create their own.

- Host a "San Francisco Supper" featuring a fabulous pasta/vegetable dish of egg noodles cooked in a sauce made with three cheeses, ringed with sauteed vegetables, and crowned with roasted almonds.
- Pass dill-seasoned almonds and Danish Dip (with fruits or vegetables) with popular light aperitifs such as chilled California white wine or naturally-carbonated mineral water with fresh lime wedges.

COPENHAGEN SALAD
1 pound fresh peas, hulled (1 cup)
1 cup diced celery
1/2 cup diced Creamy Havarti cheese
1/2 cup whole natural (unblanched) almonds, chopped, roasted
1/2 cup dairy sour cream
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon minced onion
1/4 teaspoon prepared mustard
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 medium tomatoes, cut into wedges
watercress or parsley

Cook peas in lightly salted boiling water until barely tender (1 to 2 minutes); drain thoroughly. Combine peas, celery, cheese, almonds, sour cream, lemon juice, onion, mustard and salt. Toss lightly to mix. Spoon into 4 individual glasses or bowls or one serving bowl. Garnish with tomatoes and watercress. Makes 4 servings (3 cups).

DANISH DIP

1/2 cup sliced natural (unblanched) almonds
2 cups dairy sour cream
1/2 cup Danish blue cheese, crumbled
1/2 cup whipping cream, whipped
Spread almonds in shallow pan. Toast at 350 degrees for 5 minutes or until light gold in color. Cool. Reserve 1 to 2 tablespoons for garnish. Crush remainder with rolling pin. Mix crushed almonds, sour cream and blue cheese; fold in whipped cream; turn into bowl. Sprinkle with reserved sliced almonds.

Serve with strawberries, apple or pear wedges, cubes of melon, assorted crackers or raw vegetables. Makes 2 cups.

DILLY ALMONDS

1 cup whole natural (unblanched) almonds
1 cup whole blanched almonds
2 teaspoons butter
1/2 teaspoon dill weed
1/2 teaspoon seasoned salt

ALMOND-COATED CHEESE

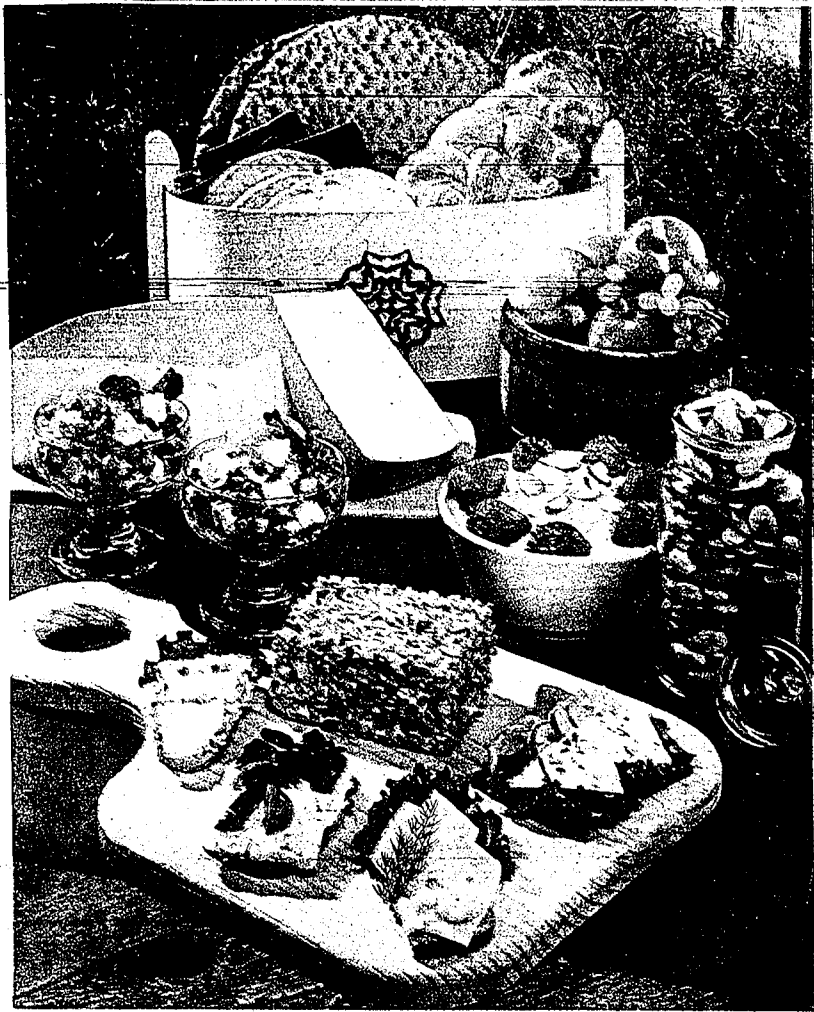

Spread roasted diced almonds on waxed paper or plastic wrap; place a block of natural Danish Cream Cheese with Orange or other fruit flavor in center. Bring up sides of paper to help coat cheese with almonds, then turn cheese over and, with fingers, pat almonds onto any areas of cheese that have not been covered. Slice and serve with assorted crackers or rounds of raw zucchini or carrots.

DANISH SANDWICHES

Complement salad with right dressing

TWIN FALLS — A salad is not a salad without a dressing of some sort. Look the word "salad" up in the dictionary. Here are salad dressings developed for the salads on this page.

That doesn't mean you can't use them in other ways. Try them in other salads, to top cooked vegetables, fruits, fruit salads and compotes and with hot or cold meats, poultry and fish, or as spreads for sandwiches. The dressings have many uses!

The mayonnaise and French dressing called for in the special dressings may be substituted with store varieties.

MAYONNAISE

1 egg
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
pinch garlic powder
1 1/2 cups salad oil
In mixing bowl, using wire whisk or electric mixer, beat together egg, dry mustard, salt, lemon juice and garlic powder. When well-blended, beat in oil slowly by adding only a little at a time and thoroughly beating after each addition. Put mayonnaise in storage jar; cover and chill until ready to use. Makes about 1 1/2 cups. Note: If mayonnaise separates, oil has probably been added too quickly. Remedy this by gradually beating mayonnaise into 1 egg yolk.

FRENCH DRESSING

1 cup salad oil
1/4 cup white vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
1/4 teaspoon onion powder
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
In storage jar, combine oil, wine vinegar, salt, pepper, mustard, onion and garlic powders. Shake together and allow to stand overnight at room temperature for better flavor, then refrigerate until ready to use. Shake well before using.

Note: For Creamy French Dressing, add 1 tablespoon mayonnaise or heavy cream to above recipe. Shake well to serve. Makes about 1 1/2 cups.

DILLED DRESSING

1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon dill weed
1 teaspoon lemon juice
In storage jar, combine mayonnaise, mustard, dill weed and lemon juice. Cover and chill until ready to use. Dressing is best when allowed to stand at least 24 hours. Makes about 1/2 cup.

GINGER DRESSING

1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 1/2 teaspoons powdered ginger
1/4 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon soy sauce
1/4 teaspoon orange extract

In storage jar, combine mayonnaise, powdered ginger, sugar, soy sauce and orange extract. Cover and chill until ready to use. Dressing is best when allowed to stand at least 24 hours. Makes about 1/2 cup.

CHEESE DRESSING

1/2 cup French dressing
2 ounces Roquefort or Blue cheese, crumbled
1/4 cup sour cream
In storage jar, combine French dressing, crumbled cheese and sour cream. Cover and chill until ready to use. Shake before using. Makes about 3/4 cup.

RUSSIAN DRESSING

1/2 cup French dressing
1/4 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons ketchup or chili sauce
1/4 cup pickle relish, drained
In storage jar, combine French dressing, mayonnaise, ketchup or chili sauce and pickle relish. Cover and chill until ready to use. Shake before using. Makes about 1 cup.

Weddings

MR. AND MRS. DANIEL HADAM

Jorgenson-Hadam

JEROME — Linda May Jorgenson and Daniel John Hadam were married July 11 in the First Baptist Church in Jerome.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. LaVern Jorgenson, Jerome, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hadam, Singapore.

Rev. Vernon Kendall performed the ceremony.

The bride was attired in a dress of crepe backed satin with a lace overlay. The gown featured long lace sleeves, round neckline and an empire waistline which fell into a chapel train.

Her bouquet consisted of baby pink roses in baby's breath and greenery with pink satin streamers.

Nancy Jorgenson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Teresa Jones, cousin of the bridegroom, and Jeri Ostler, both Jerome, were bridal attendants.

Best man was Jerry Hadam, brother of the bridegroom, and Dennis Jones, Doug Ramsey, Benny Walker and Kurt Garner were ushers.

Kelly Daris was ringbearer and Melissa Daris was flower girl. Both are cousins of the bride.

Candlelighter was Monica Hadam, sister of the bridegroom. A reception to honor the newlyweds was held following the wedding ceremony. Guests were seated at quartet tables which were decorated with pink tablecloths and pink silk roses in crystal budvases.

Mrs. Leland Sablin served coffee and Mrs. Tom Daris cut the cake. Both are aunts of the bride. Mrs. Coy Jones, aunt of the bridegroom, poured punch.

The bride is employed at Gem State Realty in Jerome and the bridegroom works for Circle A Construction in Twin Falls. Following a short trip to Boise, they will live in Mackay.

TWIN FALLS — Teresa E. Goicoechea became the bride of Robert J. Bodine June 23 in St. Paul's Catholic Student Center in Boise.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Goicoechea, Kuna, and the bridegroom's parents are Mrs. Patricia Doshier, Twin Falls, and Marvin Bodine, Meridian.

Father Bill Wassmuth performed the ceremony.

The bride chose to be married in a white gown and carried a bouquet of white roses, baby blue carnations and baby's breath.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Sharon Florence, Tacoma, Wash., sister of the bride.

Bridal attendants were Janie, Carol, Diane, Judi and Marcella Goicoechea, all Boise.

Ray Brock, Twin Falls, was best man and Carl Jr. and Dave Goicoechea, both Boise; Bob Olmstead, Twin Falls; Tom Odinaaga, Boise, and Scott McKibben, Seattle, were ushers.

A reception for the newlyweds was held in the Sheraton Downtown Ballroom. Basque music for the occasion was provided by Jimmy Jausoro and his orchestra.

Mrs. Debbie Van Engelen, sister of the bridegroom from Twin Falls, attended the guest book.

Balloon for sale

LONDON (UPI) — You could own the world's largest hot-air balloon for the price of one British pound, about $1.80.

The Whitebread Brewery, owners of the 500,000-cubic-foot, four-year-old balloon, said the asking price is no gimmick.

"Rather than see it lying idle, we felt someone else should be offered the opportunity of enjoying it," a company spokesman in London said.

The balloon, named the Gerard A. Heineken, once made one of the longest crossings of the English Channel.

It may be cheap to buy, the spokesman allowed, but not to run.

It will cost about $35 an hour to fly and the buyer will have to remove the advertising slogan from the side at his own expense.

Whitebread thinks maybe an aviation museum or exhibition would be its best resting place. But the company wonders if there is a building big enough to accommodate it.

Home testing kits can't be trusted

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — Marijuana users worried about purchasing herbicide-contaminated dope should stay away from the so-called paraquat testing kits because they are a "rip-off," says Mark Miller, director of the University of Oregon's Drug Information Center.

"These home kits are ineffective and should not be trusted," Miller said. "For the consumer's benefit, I wish I could say the kits were reliable. But they aren't."

Paraquat is a highly-toxic herbicide used by the Mexican government to kill marijuana plants. Large quantities of the marijuana is harvested before it dies and is then imported into the U.S.

Recent studies indicate extended, regular use of paraquat contaminated marijuana can cause a toxic reaction called fibrosis, which destroys the lungs' ability to function normally, Miller said.

But he believes the effects of paraquat on marijuana users have been "overblown by the media" and need to be better understood by the public.

"What we're saying is that by no means is (paraquat) safe, but people won't die right on the street from smoking it, like many seem to think."

In testing for paraquat, strong chemicals are needed to extract the herbicide from plant material so that it can be identified.

Miller said the "home test kits," sold at some record stores and drug paraphernalia shops in Oregon, rely on only mildly acidic or alkaline solutions — "some even use water" — for the extraction process and are rarely, if ever, successful in identifying contaminated marijuana.

Captain Kangaroo pushes for better kids' programs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Captain Kangaroo wants to see more local programming for children — and a greater station-by-station commitment to quality broadcasting for young people.

"You can't have one without the other because without the commitment it is difficult to broadcast quality programming that gets knocked out of the box by the competition's lineup of smugner cartoons."

Bob Keeshan, who is Captain Kangaroo's off-camera alter ego, has no illusions that quality on the tube can be easily transformed into quantity in the bank.

"If 'Captain Kangaroo' depended on income, we'd have been gone back in 1956," Keeshan said of the morning children's show that has been on CBS for 25 years. "We were losing well over a million dollars — some years several million — we were a big financial loser for CBS."

Most experts would agree that CBS' continued support of "Captain Kangaroo" ranks as a real contribution to quality children's entertainment. The network now has another contribution — it is holding a week of workshop-seminars with 24 of its affiliate stations to encourage them to develop local children's programming.

Don't get the idea that such programs would obliterate the cartoon blitz or present alternatives to the present heavily inadequate afterschool programs that children watch.

Most of the afterschool and some of the Saturday morning shows that parents' groups object to are shown on independent stations. Affiliates of all three networks tend to stick with network programming, which means game shows and snags during the week and the network line-up of children's shows on Saturday.

CBS has no intention of encouraging affiliates to drop network shows in favor of locally originated programming.

The local children's shows mostly would be aired in the hour before "Kangaroo" on weekday mornings, in the hour directly after "Kangaroo" in the east where the time zone difference means an extra hour of local access before network programming begins, and in the half-hour before the evening prime time begins on weekdays.

The big advantage to locally-originated shows, Keeshan said in an interview, was their ability to pinpoint their audience and broadcast directly to the special needs of a specific community.

Keeshan and George Schweltzer, "Kangaroo's" producer, will present the affiliate producers and show hosts attending the conference with a line-up of guest instructors, plus speakers and panels that range from Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television to James H. Rosenfeld, president, CBS Television Network.

Schweltzer is particularly impressed with the possibilities of feedback among affiliate representatives, who will be able to help each other solve problems common to their special markets.

Keeshan is wary of being too specific about the kind of programs he would like to see local stations produce.

"What's a good show for one child or group of children to watch might not be for another."

He told about the woman who ran a Texas home for children awaiting adoption — kids eight, nine and ten years old who likely were too old to be adopted.

"The show she wouldn't permit them to watch was 'The Donna Reed Show,' which was at the top of everybody's sacharin list. There was the nice Mommy and the nice Daddy and the nice family — all the things those kids were deprived of."

This was the kind of show that encouraged those unfortunate children to hostility and possible violence, the program that was wrong and bad for them.

Keeshan has no great admiration for much children's programming even on networks, where it is almost non-existent after school except for specials, nor on independents where the cartoon characters run violently rampant. He blames the parents, however, who he believes must take final responsibility for what their children watch.

"One of the problems is that parents don't really support good television for children," Keeshan said.

"We have good programs — 'Sesame Street,' 'Mister Rogers,' 'Captain Kangaroo,' the afternoon specials, Saturday programs like 'Lively Arts.' They just don't have large audiences because the cartoon characters run violently rampant. He blames the parents, however, who he believes must take final responsibility for what their children watch."

"If you think prime time is too 'adult,' you should watch what goes on in soap operas. They have their place for the adult women for whom they were designed — not for children."

He concluded, "If the parents across America really were supportive of good children's television, those cartoon shows would be off the air in no time."

Butcher, baker now candlestick maker

DES MOINES (UPI) — Art Alber has been a butcher and a baker and now plans to become a candlestick maker.

"I figure I was a butcher for more than 30 years and now I have been a baker for more than 10 years — where else could I logically go?" he asked. "Seriously, I plan to go into decorator candles when I do retire. I figure there's a market there like anywhere else."

"THE OWL AND THE PUSSYCAT" TO BE PRESENTED IN TWIN FALLS— former Twin Falls resident Trish Elledge-Coonts, Allan Gruenrud rehearse

French snap up imperie, old U.S. forties fashion

By ALINE MOSBY
PARIS (UPI) — The flowered rayon dress with short sleeves had a label marked J.C. Penney. It probably sold for $10 to a logger's wife in Polson, Montana, around 1947.

That old dress with a secondhand price tag of 160 francs — about $35 — was being tried on eagerly the other day by a young Parisian in a chic new boutique on one of Paris's most elegant shopping streets.

New York-New York offers a new look for the French — American clothes from the thirties and forties.

Old clothes have been a fast-selling item among fashion-conscious females in Paris for "some" years. They first discovered ancient lace-trimmed night gowns, frayed evening gowns and ruffled petticoats, mostly from the turn of the century, in stalls at antique flea markets.

The French dubbed these clothes frip — an abbreviation of friperie, or secondhand clothes.

Now frip is branching out into refined specialties. Flea market stalls and little boutiques offer men's old shirts and vests and clothing from the thirties and forties.

One big department store, Galeries Lafayette, has instituted a special boutique for old clothing in its "20 Years" department.

The New York-New York boutique opened last fall on the plushy Rue Jacob off the Boulevard Saint Germain on the Left Bank.

"American clothes of those years are special," said boutique manager Nicole Blanes. "They really have style" and they're quite different in the frip business.

"Old American clothes are much further out than the French clothes of those years. Most of the styles I sell were made between 1935—and—1945,—very large shoulders, much more embroidery and pearls than you saw on French dresses."

The dressy 1940s cocktail dresses of the United States are much more eccentric than the French styles. They have a special look, a special cut.

Mrs. Blanes, who with her husband used to operate French restaurants in Spain and New York, got the idea for the boutique when she saw similar shops in New York.

"There are wholesalers in New York who deal only in used clothing," she said. "I had to look through boxes and boxes of old clothes. I cleaned the clothes when necessary and took down hemlines if they were too short."

One recent day, they were fingering crepe cocktail dresses that swept America during the World War II era. Plain ones were 150 francs — about $35; beaded, 200 francs — about $45.

Printed afternoon-dresses-looked-like those American women wore to the town hotel for lunch in the 1940s.

One corner of the shop could have been a 1945 coat rack in a midwestern college town. There were well-seuffed, suede jackets for 300 francs (about $63) that appeared to be veterans of bowling alleys and football field bleachers.

Three-act plays scheduled

TWIN FALLS — Performances of the play "The Owl and the Pussycat" will be presented here Friday and Saturday by the Idaho Public Theater troupe of Boise.

The three-act play, which features a former Twin Falls resident in one of the two roles in the show, will begin at 8 p.m. both nights in the Blue Lakes Inn following a buffet dinner, according to Phil Schmidt, the play's director.

The comedy takes place in the loft apartment of a bookstore clerk who gets a neighbor evicted when he tells the landlord she is a prostitute.

The laughs begin when the ex-neighbor comes screaming up to the clerk's apartment and discovers he learned of her activities while peeping through her open window shade with binoculars.

Trish Elledge-Coonts, who has moved to Boise from Twin Falls, portrays the prostitute.

A graduate of the College of Southern Idaho and Boise State University, Ms. Elledge-Coonts works fulltime for Idaho Public Theater. She has acted as Elinor of Aqualaine in "The Lion in Winter," Sybil in "Dracula," Amanda in "The Glass Menagerie" and Countess Aurelia in "The Madwoman of Chastlet."

Allan Gruenrud, formerly San Francisco, plays the bookish young clerk. Also a fulltime employee of the theater, Gruenrud has acted as Nick in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" Jim in "The Glass Menagerie" and as Frank in "Lovers and Strangers."

Schmidt said tickets are $9 each and include the cost of dinner. The tickets are on sale at the Blue Lakes Inn and The Plant Hotel, both Twin Falls.

He said this year marks the first time in its two-year history the Idaho Public Theater has gone on the road to establish professional theater in Idaho. The troupe performed "The Owl and the Pussycat" earlier this year at the Mountain Home Air Force Base, Schmidt concluded.

University announces semester honors list

TWIN FALLS — Students on the dean's list at Boise State University for spring semester included 13 Twin Falls residents.

Those with 4.0 grade averages are Karen Andrews, Judith Nelson, Bryant Rudd and Linda Stropie. High honors went to Nora Baldwin and Rosemary Lanfeng, with 3.75 to 3.99 grade averages. Honors for 3.50 to 3.74 points went to Lisa Boyd, Deborah Coier, Debra Eskridge, Susan Peavey, Kirk Thiel and Robert Williams.

Woman trooper hired

BOISE (UPI) — Joan Pinnock, 24, Shelley, has been hired as Idaho's first female state police trooper.

The former Blackfoot police officer is one of 10 new officers who are being hired by State Police to replace 10 veteran officers who have been assigned to Idaho's Task Force 55 — a group enforcing the 55 mph speed limit.

Miss Pinnock is a graduate of the vocational education course in law enforcement at Idaho State University. She has been working as a police officer, performing regular patrol duties in the City of Blackfoot for the past year.

Her first assignment for the State Police is dispatching State Police cars for District Three, headquartered at Boise. As soon as there is an opening she will move into patrol duties.

Abby

Puzzling situation

DEAR ABBY: After waiting for years for the perfect mate, three months ago I met a wonderful English girl and married her.

Shortly after we were wed, she told me that her mother was terminally ill and she had to go back to England. She knows I'm not a wealthy man, but she expects me to keep sending her money while she's with her mother for an indefinite stay. (Her mother is on a pension.)

Abigail Van Buren

I have relatives in England who have tried to meet my wife several times in order to help her out any way they can. My wife has refused to meet my relatives, saying that they were rude when they called.

I offered to go to England to help her, but she says I shouldn't spend the money since there is nothing I can do there.

My question: Should I go to England anyway to find out what is going on there? And if I go, should I surprise her? I have a feeling she is hiding something from me.

PUZZLED HUBBY

DEAR PUZZLED: Something smells fishy here. Don't ASK her if you should come; TELL her you're coming. Then go. You'll get the picture soon enough.

DEAR ABBY: Here are the facts. My daughter, Marcie, had to get married at 17. She and Scott had gone steady for two years. We begged them not to get so thick when they were only kids, but they said they were "in love" and we couldn't keep them apart.

The baby is 2 years old now, and Scott wants a divorce! (Marcie and the baby have moved in with me.) Scott says he doesn't want the responsibility of marriage. He doesn't love Marcie anymore, and all he wants is out.

He refuses to talk to our minister, and he won't see any kind of a counselor. He has a job and says he's willing to support the baby, but he is not going to spend his life in a marriage that's hopeless.

Marcie is heartbroken. She says she loves Scott, no matter what, and is willing to do anything to save her marriage. What can you suggest?

MARCIE'S MOM

DEAR MOM: It's not possible to "save" a marriage unless both parties want it saved. And assuming you could force Scott to return to Marcie, a young man who feels trapped would make a miserable husband and a worse father.

DEAR ABBY: I am just about ready to blow my stack. My husband and I gave his parents a key to our house so that they could check on it when we are out of town, although we seldom are. They live near us, so it is hardly for them to drop in often. Now when they come over; they never knock or ring the bell, they just let themselves in with the key they have. They come into our home whether we are home or not.

What's the solution?

HAD IT ON OHIO

DEAR HAD IT: Ask your husband to ask his parents to please knock or ring the doorbell when they visit, and to use the key only to "check the house" when you are out of town.

And if they continue to ignore your wishes, the solution is obvious—change the locks.

HAD IT IN OHIO

TALSARN, Wales (UPD) — Gwyneth Price, 23, scooped her hands full of coal and lit a fire in the ancient forge where she is a full-time blacksmith.

"I never want to do anything else," she said with a toss of her close-cropped brown curls. "I quite enjoy it."

Miss Price is believed to be the only woman blacksmith in Britain. She is a fair cry from the Longfellow image of "the smith, a mighty man is he, with strong and shrewy hands."

Her hands are black, her cheeks are smudged, her working clothes tough and shapeless. But Miss Price is slim and womanly. Her strength as a blacksmith is artistic skill with a red-hot iron.

She said she began messing around her father's forge as soon as she could help a hammer.

"I used to come here in the school holidays," she said. "I don't know why, but I always enjoyed it. I even had a small fire at home for when I couldn't get to the forge."

Her father and ironmaster, John M. Price, 53, put her through a formal five-year apprenticeship leading to tests at a technical college. She now is a fully qualified welder as well as blacksmith.

Her father, a lifelong blacksmith, has four workers, including his son, David, 19, an apprentice. They will tackle any job from making a church key to repairing broken garden tools and tractor hitches. Price still shoes horses for Welsh farmers on the low green hills around this tiny village 255 miles west of London.

One of their two buildings has a stonebuilt forge, lanky with smoke and the soot of 300 years. Its three waist-high fireplaces are fanned by huge hand bellows. The bedrock floor is littered with anvils and tools worn by centuries of use. Piles of used horseshoes fill a room at one end.

Miss Price works in a corrugated iron structure housing modern machinery. There she makes everything from stainless steel railings to weather vanes.

Merely or carelessness have no place in bridge. The diagrammed hand dramatically depicts a determined defense that plucks declarer clean.

North's bidding is high but, in fact, he was right to bid five spades as a sacrifice. East-West are lay down for five clubs.

Declarer's key play at trick one to set the stage for what was to follow. He dropped the jack of clubs under his partner's king. This suit preference signaled West to switch to the highest of the unbid suits.

West realized that East's emphatic suit preference at trick one had to be based on the possession of the singleton king of hearts. With two or more hearts and the king he would not have been in a rush to make the suit played.

West led his remaining heart and East ruffed. Down two!

$900 recovered from lake bottom

MATTOON, Ill. (UPI) — Figuring better soggy than never, Jim and Evelyn Thompson got back their $900 from the bottom of Lake Mattoon.

"The money has been dried out but is brittle and has lost its color," Thompson said Monday after the money was found, still in his wife's purse, during cleanup operations Saturday in 5 feet of water.

"We'll have to take it to the bank and exchange it."

A weekend mobile home owned by the Gibson City couple was buried upside down in Lake Mattoon waters during twin tornadoes last Aug. 21 that killed six persons and damaged thousands of dollars worth of property.

"We don't usually keep that much money around but we had planned on purchasing a truck the weekend of the tornado," recalled Thompson who was visiting St. Louis with his wife at the time.

The couple's mobile home was lodged in the bottom of the lake when they came back.

"When they pulled the frame of the trailer out of the water the contents must have scattered," said Thompson, who spent several days this summer walking a cove near the lake in search of the purse and its cash contents.
