

More than talk about weather in few years

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scientists may be able to increase the amounts of rain and snow in dry areas and tame hurricanes and hail storms within the next decade or two, according to a government advisory board.

The panel said the ability to do something about the weather besides talk about it should produce great human benefits.

But the Commerce Department's Weather Modification Advisory Board said in a report Wednesday that the scientific challenge to change the weather is formidable and will require a cohesive, 20-year federal program of intensified research.

"The case for hastening progress along these lines is very strong," the board's report said. "The economic benefits of delivering more water in the right places — for dry farming, for irrigated crops, for hydroelectric power and for municipal and industrial water use — seem very likely to outweigh the costs by impressive amounts."

Cloud seeding is the weather modification technique with most immediate promise.

The panel said a stepped up research effort probably would produce ways to increase mountain snow cover in the West in the 1980s and Midwest in the late 1980s and reduce hurricane and hail damage by the 1990s.

The board said cloud seeding probably will be able to increase snow and rain by 10 to 30 percent, reduce some hurricane winds by 10 to 20 percent with much greater reductions in wind damage, and reduce hail by up to 60 percent in some kinds of storms.

The panel emphasized that deliberate tampering with the weather should be carried out "with environmental prudence and after consultation with the people likely to be most affected."

Harlan Cleveland, board chairman and director of international affairs for the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies, said history is sprinkled with cases of technology running ahead of social and environmental thinking that should accompany them.

"Precisely because the science and technology of weather resources management are still at such an early stage, there is an excellent chance in this field to do things right," he said.

The 17-member Weather Modification Advisory Board is an independent body established last year to provide advice to the secretary of commerce.

It said the key conclusion in its first report is that a usable technology for significantly enhancing rain and snow and ameliorating some weather damage is scientifically possible and within sight.

Korea cash case focuses on four

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House ethics committee today launched formal disciplinary procedures against four House Democrats for taking cash gifts from South Korean millionaire Tongsun Park, capping an 18-month inquiry into a Capitol Hill influence buying scandal.

The House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct charged Reps. Edward Patten, D-N.J., Charles Wilson, D-Calif., John McFall, D-Calif., and Edward Roybal, D-Calif., with a variety of violations in connection with receiving cash gifts from the alleged middleman in a South Korean CIA scheme to win favorable U.S. military and economic policies from Congress.

The panel also referred two cases involving former members of Congress to the Justice Department for possible perjury prosecution. Sources identified the pair as former Reps. John Rarick, D-La., and Nick Gallifianakis, D-N.C.

Park told the committee he paid about $850,000 to 31 House members, including 14 current members. Most of the money went to former congressman, he said.

The charges, the equivalent of a grand jury indictment, begin a lengthy procedure that could lead to censure or expulsion from the House.

The four congressmen have 21 days to answer the charges. Formal hearings then begin. The committee then decides whether to recommend punishment to the House. Any action against the congressman must be taken by the full House.

Roybal was named in the most counts by the committee — four charges relating to a single $1,000 cash contribution from Park in August 1974, reportedly given in the office of former Rep. Otto Passman, D-La.

Roybal initially denied to the committee that he ever received the money, but later changed his testimony to indicate that the contribution may have come from Park.

Roybal was charged with failure to account for the contribution, conversion of the money to his personal use, failure to tell truth when asked about the money and false statements to the committee.

Wilson was named in a single count claiming he "knowingly and willfully did make a false statement and did make a false writing" to the committee when asked about receipt of cash or gifts from Park.

The committee said Wilson denied receiving any money from Park "when he then and there knew that his answer was false."

Earlier, Park had testified that he gave Wilson $1,000 as a "wedding present" in 1975 when he married a South Korean woman.

The committee set the stage for today's release of the charges by voting Wednesday to take further action against four of the 14 present members of Congress implicated in the scandal.

AMBULANCE ATTENDANTS HELP MARGARET ARRINGTON FROM CAR AFTER COLLISION ... she received hospital treatment following accident at downtown Twin Falls intersection

New stop sign due?

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Police in Twin Falls may recommend another stop-sign intersection in the city.

Construction of the new Safeco Title Insurance Co. building on Second Street and Third Avenue North has cut down visibility at the former wide-open intersection making the corner hazardous to drivers and pedestrians alike, officers said today.

Patrolmen on the Twin Falls police note that drivers are accustomed to a clear view at the corner because the Driveway Market that used to occupy the land was set back to allow parking space along Second Street.

But the new Safeco building, while meeting all zoning requirements for setback, does impair the vision of drivers on Third Avenue North and Second Street.

The visibility problem at the intersection resulted in a traffic accident involving a pregnant woman and a teenager Wednesday, police said.

Margaret Arrington, 22, was taken to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital for emergency treatment Wednesday after her car collided at the intersection with another driven by David C. Moss, 18, Twin Falls.

The accident report showed the Arrington vehicle failed to yield to the car on the right.

Mrs. Arrington was traveling east on Third Avenue North, and the Moss vehicle was going north on Second Street North when the two collided. The Arrington vehicle jumped the curb and knocked over a small street sign following the impact.

The accident occurred shortly before noon.

The city engineering department has yet to perform a traffic study on the intersection, a department spokesman said.

Soviets imprison dissident Ginzburg

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet dissident Alexander Ginzburg was sentenced to eight years imprisonment today after being convicted of charges of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

A crowd of local citizens outside the Kaluga courtroom 110 miles southwest of Moscow chanted "Not enough! Not enough!" and "Shoot them all! Shoot them all!" after they heard the verdict.

At the same time, the prosecutor at the Moscow trial of Jewish activist Anatoly Shecharansky asked the court to sentence Shecharansky to 15 years imprisonment instead of death by firing squad on charges he was a spy for the United States.

Although the state prosecutor in Kaluga had sought a sentence of eight years imprisonment in a labor camp and three years of Siberian exile for Ginzburg, the three-man court dropped the term of exile.

As Ginzburg was driven away from the Kaluga courthouse a small gathering of dissident friends chanted "Alex, Alex, Alex" and tossed flowers at the van.

The sentencing of Ginzburg was witnessed only by his 70-year-old mother Lyudmila. His wife Irina was barred from the courtroom.

The dissidents, including Nobel prize winner Andrei Sakharov, chanted "Let Irina In, Let Irina In" for about 10 minutes but Ginzburg's wife was kept outside.

Shecharansky's brother Leonid emerged from the fourth day of the trial in Moscow and told reporters the prosecutor asked the court to sentence Shecharansky to a total of 15 years confinement — three years in prison and 12 years in a prison labor camp — for espionage and anti-Soviet activities.

The 30-year-old activist could have received a maximum penalty of death by firing squad. Shecharansky's trial will resume Friday.

Hours earlier at a courtroom in Kaluga, 110 miles away, dissident Alexander Ginzburg closed the defense at his trial by denying his guilt and sending his "regards and solidarity" to Shecharansky.

The court then recessed to consider a verdict and sentence, expected to come late today or Friday, on the charges of anti-Soviet activities.

Ginzburg, 41, told the court in Kaluga, "I don't consider myself guilty and I am not asking for leniency."

The prosecutor demanded he be sentenced to eight years in prison at hard labor and three years exile in Siberia — two years less than the maximum for anti-Soviet activities — and said he was recommending a shorter sentence because Ginzburg has two young children.

House rejects move to impeach UN envoy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House today rejected a move to impeach U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young for remarks that both the United States and the Soviet Union have political prisoners, and then plunged into a spirited debate over whether the former civil rights leader should be fired.

The Democratic leadership shunted aside a move by Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., to have the House consider impeachment of Young for telling a French newspaper "hundreds, maybe even thousands of people" jailed in the United States are political prisoners.

Young, reacting to suggestions by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., that he be fired, told reporters in Geneva today that Congress should go ahead and try.

"All I can say is help yourselves. And they can help themselves," Young said.

House members voted 233-82 to table McDonald's R.A.M. MDT move to consider an impeachment resolution and then cut off McDonald's power to open a House debate on the matter.

Young's comments, coming at a time of

Vance, Gromyko wind up arms treaty talks

WASHINGTON Star

GENEVA — The United States and the Soviet Union concluded a round of SALT talks today that Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko termed "useful but not conclusive."

The talks "have given us more complete answers about the questions we talked about," Gromyko told reporters after he and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance met for three hours.

Vance planned to meet later today with the wife of Soviet dissident Anatoly Shecharansky.

But that meeting was delayed to let Vance meet Gromyko again to discuss the Middle East "and anything else anyone wants to raise," Vance said.

The morning meeting dealt not only with a new strategic arms limitations treaty, SALT II, but also negotiations on a treaty to ban all nuclear weapons tests, Vance told reporters.

He said that SALT discussions were "finished for today." Vance was scheduled to leave tonight for Germany, ending the sixth round of meetings he has had with Gromyko on SALT since March 1977.

There was no indication that any substantial progress had been achieved in this round. It appeared to informed observers that the two sides had just elaborated their positions rather than reaching any agreements or compromising any of the outstanding issues.

A conference source said the opening four hours of SALT discussions Wednesday failed to produce much that was new.

The full delegations did not sit down together Thursday. Instead, Gromyko and Vance met in the Soviet mission headquarters separately from the waiting advisers.

"Various people" from the delegations "joined us off and on," Vance said. Gromyko told reporters after seeing Vance off that their talks had been "useful but not conclusive." Asked if they had improved Soviet-U.S. relations, he answered "I cannot say yes or no for the time being — we're still meeting."

worsening East-West relations and amid strategic arms talks, was seized upon by the Soviet Union to rebut U.S. criticism of the trial of two dissidents.

McDonald said Young should be reprimanded for "high crimes and misdemeanors." Young "in no way represents the people of the United States," McDonald said.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said he wished Young had kept quiet, but said, "I have never heard of a man being impeached for a newspaper article."

Sentiment in the House was sharply divided.

President Carter should fire Young, Rep. Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., said to applause.

"How long do we have to put up with one who no longer represents a narrow constituency in Georgia but is ambassador to the United Nations where he speaks for all of us?" Michel asked.

Carter flies to Germany for economic summit session

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter left today for a seven-nation economic summit in Bonn determined to pursue a policy of economic cooperation with America's chief trading partners.

"In the summit conference we will continue the process of cooperation," the president told reporters. "On this trip I recognize the economic interdependence of the people of the world," he said.

Searches deplored

WASHINGTON (UPI) — News executives told Congress today that letting police search newsrooms for evidence of a crime could lead to erosion of freedoms for all citizens.

Both houses of congress are considering legislation to overturn the Supreme Court's 5-3 ruling May 31 that police, with only a search warrant, may raid homes and offices — including newsrooms — looking for evidence of a crime even though the occupants and owners are not suspects.

Five arrested

NEW YORK Times Service

NEW YORK — Four adults and a juvenile were to be arraigned Thursday on charges of clubbing strollers and joggers, including former Olympic star Dick Button, with baseball bats and tree trunks in Central Park on July 5.

The arrests Wednesday of the five, who were charged with assault and robbery, followed more than 300 interviews by Detectives James O'Neill and Gerald Smith and detectives burglary squads.

Since the day after the attack, the police said, 75 detectives — in around-the-clock shifts of 25 each — some dressed as joggers, bicyclists and other park habitués, had been assigned to the case. The young men arrested boasted about the assault to their friends, Detective James McCauley of the Central Park Precinct said. He did not specify a motive for the attack beyond saying, "We have statements that they just came into the park to beat up some people and rob them."

Postal pact talks start

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chief federal mediator Wayne Horvitz today opened formal negotiations with Postal Service and union leaders over a new work contract for 600,000 mail craft employees across the nation.

By late morning, neither side had issued any progress reports on the closed sessions in a motel across town from the Postal Service headquarters. Before the sessions get under way, the negotiators posed for news photographers.

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service entered the bargaining Monday after both sides had failed to make progress in more than two months of contract talks.

The present contract expires July 20 and union leaders warned during demonstrations that there may be a nationwide walkout if the deadline passes without a new contract.

Until today, a spokesman said, Horvitz has been making "exploratory" meetings with both sides. On Wednesday he met both separately and jointly with the management and union negotiators and "mapped out strategy of where we'd like to go from here."

Long swim over

MARATHON, Fla. (UPI) — Walter Poensch, the 65-year-old retired cookie baker who set out to swim 105 miles from Cuba to Florida, was pulled from the water, some 20 miles short of his destination today when his shark cage started to fall apart.

"He stopped swimming because it was getting too dangerous," said Capt. Glenn Drummond who piloted the boat that accompanied Poensch on the planned 105-mile swim that began in Havana at 5:40 p.m. Tuesday with Cuban President Fidel Castro looking on.

Drummond said Poensch was taken from the water 100 yards from tiny Bahia Honda, about 20 miles southwest of Marathon, where he had hoped to end his epic "swim for peace."

Young impeachment fails

"The president should take a firmer hold on the reins of his administration and call for Andrew Young's resignation," Michel said.

But Young had supporters, too. "I believe that all of us would be best served if Andy Young can continue in his present role," Rep. Teno Rinaldi, D-Wyo., said.

"I rise to commend Andy Young," said Rep. Portney Stark, D-Calif., noting the case of the Wilmington Ten, nine blacks and one white charged in North Carolina in connection with the firebombing of a grocery.

"There will be many blacks who will be in jail because we have failed politically to get them jobs and educations," Stark said.

John Wasyluk, national commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, called Young an "unguided missile."

"As has been repeatedly demonstrated in the past, as far as President Carter is concerned, Young is ineffectual and lacks the grace either to shut up or get out," Wasyluk said.

GOP Chairman Bill Brock said Young had "stuttered the United States and should resign."

Tornadoes, hail hit upper Midwest again

By United Press International

Tornadoes and hail struck areas of Minnesota during thunderstorms in the upper Mississippi Valley.

Tornadoes were reported in several rural areas of southeastern and central Minnesota, but the weather did not compare with last week's in the state.

One twister Wednesday night damaged trees and power lines in Litchfield before damaging a barn and killed livestock. No one was hurt. None of the other tornadoes caused serious damage.

A week ago, a tornado killed three persons at Gary in northwestern Minnesota. Then extensive flooding in southeastern Minnesota killed eight persons.

"The wind was just unreal," said Steve Neighbors, news director for radio station KLFJ. "It really roared."

The funnel was spotted in time to warn Litchfield residents before it passed over the town. State television broadcast warnings until the last possible minute.

"Then we just put an album on the turntable and headed for the basement," Neighbors said.

Hail up to 2 1/2 inches in diameter struck homes and cars in 60 to 70 mph winds in Anoka and Roseville, Hudson, Wis., reported golfball-sized hail.

Scattered showers fell in the Great Lakes region, the Ohio Valley, Colorado, Kansas and New Mexico.

Scattered thundershowers fell along the eastern Gulf Coast. Tallahassee, Fla., had almost 5 inches of rain between noon and midnight.

Western states and New England had mostly fair skies.

Teen rescued

The teen-ager visited the house during the weekend and decided to slide through the chute for old time's sake. She got stuck.

Egypt, Israel confer in Vienna today

SALZBURG, Austria (UPI) — Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, arrived in Salzburg today for surprise talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and War Minister Mohammed Gamassy that could pave the way for resuming full-scale negotiations.

The one-day meeting between Egyptian and Israeli officials marked the first official face-to-face contact between the two nations since March 31. Gamassy arrived at Salzburg Airport several hours before Weizman. Each drove in separate motorcades to the Lake Fuschl resort hotel where the vacationing Sadat was staying.

Their first meeting was scheduled for late morning today.

The hotel's manager said Gamassy would stay at the summer-resort-but Weizman planned to stay at the Hotel Rupertshof in Salzburg.

The Radio Cairo announcement today that Gamassy had gone to meet with Weizman took observers by surprise because only Wednesday state-controlled media had said Gamassy turned down a request by Weizman to meet before next week's peace conference in London.

Middle East experts said the sudden and unexpected change in Egypt's position could have been due to the emergence of "new elements" that made a Sadat-Weizman meeting necessary.

Israeli sources said earlier the meeting could lead to the resumption of formal, full-scale negotiations broken off last January.

The unexpected talks in Austria come just five days before the meeting in London among the Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

In Jerusalem, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said today Israel is ready to resume direct peace negotiations with Egypt in El Arish in the occupied Sinai desert following the London conference but the meeting is not yet definite.

"We are ready for that, but I cannot confirm that it's been agreed upon by the parties," Dayan said. "We were contacted about that, but the news is a little bit premature."

With both sides still deadlocked over the question of Israeli concessions in the occupied West Bank, little had been expected to come out of the London talks. But Weizman's meeting with Sadat in Salzburg could change that.

Terms drawn to end Namibia guerrilla war

UNITED NATIONS — Western negotiators have reached an agreement with Angola-based blacks to end the 11-year-old guerrilla war with South Africa and create a new black African nation in the diamond-and uranium-rich territory of Namibia.

The reported agreement, announced by U.S. officials at the United Nations Wednesday, will require some 5,000 U.N. troops to implement, one of the largest U.N. peace-keeping operations ever mounted.

Acceptance of the plan drawn up by five Western powers — the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Canada — followed 15 months of hard, at times seemingly hopeless, negotiations.

South Africa, which administers the territory and its 2,000,000 people, accepted the Western plan last April.

But Sam Nujoma, leader-of-the-South West

African Peoples Organization known as SWAPO, suspended his talks with the Western envoys after South African troops raided a guerrilla base and refugee camp in Angola last May, killing 500 people.

Under pressure from black African states, Nujoma finally consented to the plan Wednesday following two days of talks with the Western representatives in the Angolan capital of Luanda.

EXPLOSION SURVIVORS REACH AMSTERDAM ... some carry only remaining possessions

Truck foes block route

SAN CARLOS DE LA RAPITA, Spain (UPI) — The fiery crash of a gas truck that killed and injured hundreds of vacationers at a campground on Spain's Costa Brava, has triggered protests against transporting volatile cargoes on public roads.

The people of San Carlos de la Rapita buried the first two victims of the explosion Wednesday and staged a sit-down strike on the highway to demand "no more deaths."

The Ministry of Health in Madrid reported Wednesday night that the death toll in the disaster had climbed to 121 and probably would top 200 as more of the injured succumbed to severe burns.

Hospital officials said most of the 104 critically burned victims from Tuesday's disaster were not expected to live.

Authorities said relatives of carriers were arriving from all over Europe, but so far had managed to identify only a few of the dead because the bodies were so charred and mutilated.

About 1,000 people sat down in the town's two main intersections for almost two hours, blocking traffic on busy National Highway 340 to demand that tanker trucks be barred from the coastal road.

The demonstrators carried the red-and-yellow flag of Catalonia and banners reading, "Detour the trucks" and "No more deaths."

The tanker, carrying a full load of volatile propylene, a liquid gas used in the manufacture of plastics, crashed and exploded at the campground on Spain's Costa Brava, spraying a wave of fire over the vacationers and touching off other blasts from bottles of cooking gas and from auto fuel tanks.

The civil governor of Tarragona Province, Francisco Graupera, Wednesday issued an order banning travel by trucks carrying dangerous cargoes from highways in the province.

This would mean the trucks would have to pay a $12.50 toll to use the nearby superhighway instead of Highway 340 to reach the Puerto Llano refinery complex.

But the townspeople said the truck danger was an old issue and the governor had promised the same action a year ago but never enforced it.

"The governor's words are not enough. We demand action," Juan Jose Cua said. He said if nothing was done, there would be a three-hour sitdown tonight and a four-hour protest Friday.

Hundreds of mourners helped bury a San Carlos de la Rapita woman and her granddaughter who were killed in the explosion. They were the first victims of the disaster to be buried.

Cinta Felipe, 50, and 56-year-old Elena Maglin died in the disintegrated across the road from the camp, which also was destroyed by the explosion and fire. A third member of the family died later in a hospital in Barcelona.

No official word on new Hanoi view

WASHINGTON (UPI) — State Department officials have not received official word that Hanoi may drop its demand that economic aid be linked to the establishment of diplomatic ties, but are aware of reports indicating such a move.

A department spokesman Wednesday acknowledged there have been "several such stories," but no official word has come from Hanoi.

Reports from Tokyo quote Phan Hien, the Vietnamese vice foreign minister, as saying that "even if the U.S. Congress rejects the reconstruction aid, we look forward to establishing full diplomatic ties."

But U.S. officials said, "We are unaware of any change in the position of the Vietnamese government that (a U.S.) commitment on economic assistance be a part of any agreement to establish normal diplomatic relations."

Hien's statement — which would be a reversal of earlier policy — was thought by observers in Tokyo to reflect Hanoi's problems with China, which has suspended all economic and technical aid to Vietnam because of Vietnamese treatment of its Chinese residents.

New center director needs referrals

Carl Bergstrom this week took over as director of the Gooding alcoholic treatment center and, at first glance, he seems a well-trained, personable executive. But Bergstrom's role as director of the center could easily become an exercise in frustration.

The shortage of medical treatment available to alcoholics in Idaho implies that our state is guilty of ignoring, misdiagnosing and hiding its alcoholics. Idaho can't possibly cure its alcoholics with 100 hospital beds in two small alcoholic treatment facilities and a handful of often un-professional half-way houses.

Media loses again?

High court rules out dirty words

WASHINGTON — Some of my colleagues of the media are howling with outrage and despair at the Supreme Court's decision in the Case of the Seven Dirty Words. I wish they were howling in a better cause.

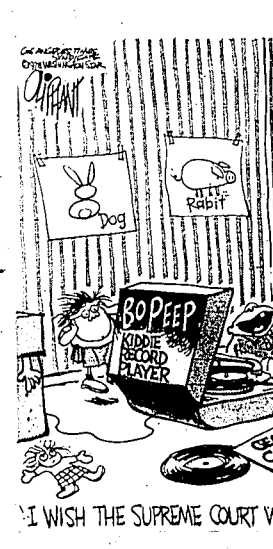

Granted, this has been a terrible year for the press at the hands of the high tribunal. Lytle Donistion, Supreme Court reporter for the Washington Star, added up the score the other day: Through June, out of six major decisions, the press had lost five. Perhaps the 5-4 verdict of July 13 in the matter of Station WBAI means we lost six of seven.

But on this last point, I am not so sure. In affirming the action of the Federal Communications Commission in this affair, the Supreme Court may have struck a small but useful blow for good taste and simple decency. Rationally viewed, that prospect has a nice appeal. These were the facts: A little over a clock on the afternoon of Oct. 30, 1973, the New York radio station broadcast a "satiric monologue" by George Carlin. A transcript of this alleged humor accompanes the Supreme Court's opinion.

libertarians to stop equating the George Carlins of the garbage circuit with Shakespeare, Chaucer and Twain. In the name of cultural values, let us discriminate. Not one scintilla of evidence suggests the FCC is about to lay clumsy hands on works of art.

There is something pathetic in the performer who relies for his laughs on the "bleeping" this and the "bleeping" that. What a poverty of imagination! What barrenness of mind!

Good men can do better. For the past few months, Reed Irvine, president of Accuracy in Media, has been belaboring the Washington Post for inadequate coverage of the Cambodian massacres. Irvine finally got under the skin of Executive Editor Ben Bradlee. Bradlee wrote him a note denouncing him as a "carping, vindictive, retromingling vigilante."

Russia holds to 'layer cake' strategy

WASHINGTON — What are the Russians up to? One week, they arrest an American businessman on trumped-up spy charges, and the next week they launch a medal on an American cellist for the way he plays Tchaikovsky's "Variations on a Rococo Theme."

interest" and includes ingredients that benefit both superpowers: the Russians need our grain and computer technology, and our producers can use their markets. Even more important to them, now that the Soviet Union is achieving military and naval superiority, is strategic arms limitation.

The bottom layer is ideological warfare. For two generations, the Soviet Union has been on the offensive; however, a decade ago, the Chinese began challenging Russian ideological leadership within the Communist world, which makes Brezhnev most sensitive to our playing of the "Chinese Card."

What the Soviet leaders will not do is permit the trade of a middle layer item for a top-layer item. That is why we cannot get them to help SAIT along by cutting out the rioting in Africa.

Fast-talking stranger on plane loses out

CHICAGO — Afternoon flight. He is already on the plane when you board. Your cardboard pass puts you in the next seat.

You don't know why he is telling you this. But he goes on, half an hour into the flight and he is giving you sales figures and inventory.

Tonight, I think I can change it around. You and I will have drinks later.

You tell him no; thanks, but you have a place you have to be, and besides, you're not sure there is any sense, the two of you talking.

Times-News readers discuss Alaskan land, effects of Proposition 13, newspaper delivery

One percent seems fair and square

Times-News delivery service rapped

Editor, Times-News:
Well, Lee by this morning's paper, you are expecting your patrons to "flip" the paper boys a dollar a week to deliver the Times-News to our doors. I'll be damned if I am going to pay for a service that half the time is poor at best. The paper is thrown hither and yon, in the bushes. Sometimes it is blown half apart. Sometimes the front page is torn so that you can't read it. Sometimes it is where it gets wet and is useless. So for myself, I only pay a gratuity for good service. I can't say that I have been getting it for quite a spell, and I have been getting this paper for nearly 50 years.

Now I can hear a lot of parents screaming, like the postman, "These kids work hard, six days a week. Neither the heat, rain, heat, sleet or snow, can stop them from making their appointed rounds." But these kids should know or be told of the hazards of the job before they apply for it — irate patrons, people who never seem to have the dough when they come to collect, dogs and other and sundry things. And the parents should know them, too, when they urge their young'ens to take a paper route. Personally I tried to avoid these same hazards by bringing my $48 to the office and nary a dog do I have. But for our side, these kids have no respect for your law, make paths across it with their bikes and run over your hose when it is full and break down the fibers in it, when it would be so easy to avoid it.

Now my subscription is paid up till the first of November, so if you want to cancel me out and send me back my money, that will be fine with me, but I think your sheet takes enough money so that you should be able to afford to give these kids that monthly stipend for a good job well done, and some of them do, and no doubt need the money they earn. But when you work for the public, and I guess we are the public, the customer is supposed to be nearly always right, not that we always are, understand.

But, nevertheless, we are the public and patrons of your paper. But then I guess you can use the badly overworked word "inflation," the cost of the pulp, the ink, your help, and if we, your subscribers, want the news we pay for it. Isn't that how you feel? If they would just give the hospital entries and the "obits" on television, who would need the Times-News any more? I hope there are a few more who feel like I do.

J. VAN OSTRAAN
Buhl

Editor, Times-News:
Mike Wetherell is the Democratic candidate for attorney general. He apparently has fears that local units of government will become more and more dependent on the state government if the 1% property tax limitation is petitioned on the ballot and wins in the general election. The Tribune has editorialized along the same lines. To come out this way is an indication of poverty of arguments against the 1% percenters; for our worst enemy in the tax matter right now is the state government. Frankly, tax matters could be worse, but not much. It is the state that forces such a reliance on the property tax by local governments. They know that only half the wealth is thereby in the tax harness.

The Lewiston Tribune editorialized about tax dreamers. They did not encourage those of us thinking it long past time to join the issue of very narrow special interests controlling a legislature that should be ours. I can't agree. I think this 1% limitation is fair and square to start with. I also think that the special interests are really walking a tight political wire as farm prices hurt, taxes on property get higher and power rates go up. All of this might just wake up the South Idaho people, and the tax clowns and others running the legislature for the narrow special interests could be dumped. The truth about how the South Idaho people have been used by some of their presses and certain other institutions and organizations could be revealed. This has to be done sooner or later anyway. So, why not now? It is worth a try. Register, sign the petition and vote. Better yet, help circulate the petition on the 1% in the home block. "George" can't do it all.

How Proposition 13 affected California

Editor, Times-News:
Perhaps some of the Magic Valley readers would be interested in knowing how Proposition 13 (the Jarvis-Gann Act) has affected the people of California. The following is an excerpt from a letter from my sister who lives in Marin County, California:

"Don't know if your papers have told you about California's confusion after the Jarvis-Gann Initiative passed June 6th. It has cut our property taxes in half and so has caused turmoil in all our schools, social programs and state government. People voted for it thinking that all the expense accounts and limosines would be taken away from the politicians. What fools! Who would ever truly believe that they would cut themselves back? Anyway, hundreds of state employees in every area are losing their jobs and our fire and police departments are being cut back in manpower. All summer schools have been cancelled, and I'm afraid that buses won't run in the fall for school as well as having too few teachers.

"And my mother in California writes: 'The high schools will not open in September unless the State or U.S. government comes forward and fronts them the money to open.' San Francisco has closed its libraries. Firemen in San Francisco are retiring in droves, to safeguard their retirement funds and accrued sick-leave. A lot of people never got beyond the 'reduce my taxes' level.

They are in for a big shock — no more paramedics in the firehouses, no more swimming programs, no libraries, no more free junior colleges."

Let's try to keep Idaho from parroting the Jarvis-Gann Act. I would like property tax relief as much as anyone. But before I support any property tax limitation, I want to know what programs are going to be cut back and where additional monies are going to come from to support needed programs. I don't believe that rushing into reducing our taxes is the solution to our ills.

Alaskan opposes lands 'lockup'

Editor, Times-News:
It appears that newspapers across the nation are printing letters signed by people who claim to be Alaskans stating that Alaskans are divided on the D-2 lands issue and do not support their senators. This simply is not true. We are supporting the efforts of our Alaska senators 100 percent in securing a responsible and reasonable settlement for Alaska in the D-2 issue.

Locking up Alaska's resources will mean loss of jobs and security for Alaskans through mining and forestry. It will hamper our ability to contribute to our nation's efforts toward energy self-sufficiency.

People today: Dr. J's movie debut, a split for Pele, and why an actor wielding a rifle

By United Press International
PICCES 1978: Erving the razz-dazzle "Dr. J." of the Philadelphia 76ers, is moving to Pittsburgh — not to change basketball teams, but to make his movie debut. Erving — who costars with Meadowlark Lemon of the Harlem Globetrotters and Jerry Tarkanian, coach at the University of Nevada in Las Vegas, will be technical adviser. The plot goes like this: Erving and Lemon play for a lousy Pittsburgh team that couldn't score standing on ladders. A 14-year-old boy persuades the owner to build his team around players born under the same sign as the Zodiac — Pisces — and things thereafter go swimmingly. The film title — "The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh."

JUST BEGINNING: Ex-husband v. ex-wife fight — a m.p. Muhammad Ali visited the Statue of Liberty in New York Wednesday on behalf of the American Indian Movement and its freedom march to Washington. All used the occasion to announce formation of a new international organization called WORLD — "World Organization of Right, Light and Dignity." He licked frozen custard and autographed bills of paper — and even $1 and $5 bills — for the Indian children. He shrugged off a question about his upcoming bid to regain his heavyweight crown. SAVE A KITTY — SHOOT A COYOTE: Actor Bo Svenson — Sheriff Buford of the "Walking Tall" films — has explained why he was out with a loaded rifle, hunting coyotes inside the Los Angeles city limits. He wound up under arrest when a 15-year-old boy complained to police that Svenson pointed the rifle at him. Svenson is free on a $1,000 bond — on the misdemeanor charge of brandishing a weapon. And why does Svenson have such a vendetta with the coyotes? He says the critters have been killing his cats.

Trouble awaited from sun flare

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Government scientists are predicting a massive solar flare within 10 days that may disrupt power and communications across the northern part of the country and cause new problems for the Skylab space station. It would be the second major flare to occur this month. On Tuesday the largest flare ever seen on X-ray sent off record-breaking surges of ultraviolet radiation and blacked-out high-frequency radio communications in the North Atlantic and Europe.

"We're 70 percent certain it will occur, but it's like predicting the weather," Gary Heckman, chief of the Space Environmental Services Center at the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration, said Wednesday.

"We can't say exactly when it will happen," Heckman said the flare would affect the northern tier of the United States. He said electrical firms in the northeastern United States would suffer disruptions as well as power companies in Newfoundland.

Skylab controllers delay attempts for more study

HOUSTON (UPI) — Space agency officials, "learning as we go" in the struggle to save Skylab from crashing back to Earth, held off an attempt to restabilize the wobbling laboratory in order to study long term changes in the mission.

"We can't tell you now when that attempt will be," Johnson Space Center spokesman Charles Redmond said Wednesday. "I guess the phrase is 'within several days,' but I don't know what the definition of 'several' is."

Meanwhile, reports of record solar radiation — which increases outer atmospheric drag on Skylab — dramatized the problem of keeping it in flight until a space shuttle crew can boost it higher or crash it harmlessly.

A power failure Sunday allowed Skylab to drift out of a streamlined flight profile that minimized drag on its 240-mile-high orbit. It was the third such deviation in a month.

NASA Skylab Coordinator Robert O. Aller Wednesday said a third shift of flight controllers might be added along with a fourth tracking station to increase current 16-hour-a-day contact by units in California, Bermuda and Spain.

"We need the increased coverage so that we have a better handle on what our systems are doing at various points in the orbit," Aller said. "If you add another station, it fills a gap where you don't have coverage."

Aller said unusually intense solar radiation

"People operating communications, power and satellite systems will be aware of the flare," he said. "Those on the streets probably won't know what's going on."

Heckman said the flare would affect Skylab, the trouble-plagued, 94-ton orbiting space station that is already keeping NASA flight controllers busy trying to reorient it to minimize outer atmospheric drag.

"The flare will definitely slow down Skylab," he said. "We can't say what its exact impact will be, but the flare will slow it down."

Heckman said Tuesday's flare "principally affected ship-to-shore communication and some aviation communication."

He said a magnetic storm from the flare was expected within 72 hours but it was not expected to cause serious power-distribution problems because it was "too far from the East on the sun."

He said the magnetic storm's most noticeable effect would be the appearance of auroral displays.

over the long haul could complicate the save-Skylab mission.

"It (the solar flare Tuesday) dramatizes the problem," he said. "Our concern is the atmospheric effect that takes place over months. Suspects are our problem. One solar flare does not cause a problem."

Aller said a bigger immediate problem was perfecting new procedures for unmanned flying of an old manned space station.

"We're controlling Skylab in a mode we've never controlled it in before, unmanned and with a new set of equations set up to Skylab's computers. We've never seen the bird in these conditions and we're learning as we go."

Aller said there has been no discussion of exactly how much NASA is willing to invest in the save-Skylab mission, which he admitted might not in the end succeed.

"We have not discussed at what point does it cost too much. I don't know that limit," Aller said. "We're doing everything we can to maintain our potential for conducting a mission."

NASA hopes to keep Skylab orbiting until a space shuttle crew next year can use a remote control rocket to boost the $294 million hulk last captured in 1974 to safer orbit or direct it to harmless crash on Earth.

States balk at waste dump role

WASHINGTON — The resistance of a growing number of states to the Energy Department's search for an underground repository for nuclear wastes has become a matter of increasing concern on Capitol Hill.

If legislation pending before two House and Senate committees is any measure of things to come, Congress is likely to try to induce the states to cooperate by granting them a major voice in the site selection process and perhaps a qualified right of veto.

It also is likely that the selection of underground waste repositories will have to be accompanied by substantial federal impact aid or outright economic incentives for the states in which they would be located.

Sen. John H. Glenn, D-Ohio, chairman of the governmental affairs subcommittee on energy, plans to zero in on the nuclear waste issue with a round of hearings scheduled to begin July 25.

The hearings are expected to focus on legislation drafted by Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., that would guarantee the states a right of veto over the siting of waste repositories. Domenici is particularly concerned because the Energy Department already has selected a site near Carlsbad, N.M., for the first permanent repository for nuclear wastes to be established anywhere.

Some New Mexicans are flatly opposed to this project, known as WIPP (for Waste Isolation Pilot Project), and many others are apprehensive about it. Current WIPP plans call for storing military wastes in an underground salt formation beginning in 1983.

The consensus among scientists is that both military and commercial nuclear wastes can be stored safely. But they acknowledge that the technology for doing it has not yet been demonstrated sufficiently for public acceptance.

The House Interior Committee noted in a recent report on nuclear waste that even as things now stand, the states have what in practical political terms amounts to de facto veto power over the siting of repositories. "Public concern over the safety of nuclear waste facilities has been so great that it has become politically necessary to assure states that repositories will not be sited inside their boundaries if the states do not concur in the plans," the report said. It said that the Energy Department has given such assurances to New Mexico, Louisiana and New York, states where potential waste disposal sites are located.

When Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger appeared before the Interior Committee two months ago, Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., the chairman, told him: "We will probably have to give the states a veto... If we face this, and accept it, then we can go out and persuade them to accept a repository a little more easily. The hard way may be the easy way."

Schlesinger agreed that despite the general power of pre-emption conferred on the federal government by the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, it would be "inappropriate" or "impossible" to try to override public sentiment and place a repository in a state without that state's concurrence. But he disagreed with Udall's view that Congress should give the states a statutory veto right.

"As a practical matter, the states have a right of concurrence," he said. "Whether under the law that is the case, I think would be best left unresolved. It is a gray area of the law and I think it is more convenient to leave it there rather than to legislate it too precisely."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., a strong advocate of nuclear power whose views often dovetail with those of Schlesinger, plans to introduce a bill that would give a formal role to the states in deciding on repository sites as well as other aspects of nuclear waste management.

However, limiting the state's role to consultation may prove unsatisfactory.

Domenici, for example, feels it is vital for New Mexico and other states to have a right of veto because, in his view, it is not yet scientifically established that geologic disposal offers "reasonable assurance" of isolating wastes from the biosphere for the hundreds of thousands of years required.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., chairman of the nuclear regulation subcommittee, is ambivalent about giving the states a veto.

On the one hand, he finds the proposal appealing because of its potential for making members of Congress think through and reveal their attitudes about nuclear power. "A lot of people around here who have been voting nuclear subsidies may take a different attitude now that the chickens are coming home to roost," he said. But Hart is troubled by the possibility that all states might refuse to accept repositories even if they could be built without undue risk.

As an alternative to the Domenici proposal and a "safety valve," Hart has suggested that the states be given a qualified right of veto with the president authorized to override a state's decision should this be in the national interest.

To ensure adequate safeguards, Hart, along with Domenici and Udall, favors legislation that would place all geologic repository projects under the licensing authority of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC). Domenici regards this as particularly important because, as he sees it, formal licensing proceedings will afford the state governments the best opportunity to evaluate repository projects and decide whether they represent an acceptable risk.

Both the NRC and the Energy Department support legislation to close the gaps in NRC licensing authority, and it seems likely Congress will pass such legislation in the next year or so. Some opposition is expected, however, from the House Armed Services Committee, which does not want the military waste repository planned for New Mexico to be subject to licensing since such proceedings could lead to delay in disposal of the wastes.

A federal inter-agency review group created by President Carter in March to formulate an administration policy on nuclear wastes is due to complete its review by Oct. 1 and submit recommendations on how to handle all aspects of the waste problem. Carter has promised to arrive at an administration policy on the issue by late fall or winter.

However the nuclear waste issue is decided, there will remain the basic political question of whether a repository can be built in any state without a terrible fuss.

Udall has suggested "only partly facetious" that states that are found to have suitable sites be invited to compete for repositories on the basis of their minimum demands for jobs, tax breaks, and the like. To which Hart added, "The only way I can see it (the states' accepting repositories) happen is to sweeten it with jobs."

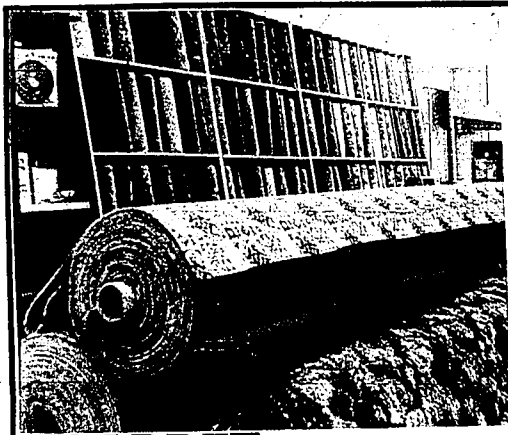

New Mexico Gov. Jerry Apodaca has already made it plain that if his state goes along with WIPP substantial federal impact aid will be expected for such things as housing and community facilities for construction workers, rerouting highways and railroads to avoid movement of wastes through population centers.

Nuclear test jolts Nevada

YUCCA FLAT, Nev. (UPI) — A nuclear weapon rated at up to 150 kilotons — a force equal to three times the yield of the atomic bombs dropped during World War II — was exploded Wednesday at the Nevada Test Site, triggering shock waves felt in Las Vegas, some 80 miles away.

The weapons-related device, code-named "Lowball," was set off 1,850 feet below the desert floor at 8 a.m. MDT and was the sixth announced underground nuclear blast by the United States in 1978.

Department of Energy observers about 10 miles from ground zero said heavy seismic motion was recorded following the blast and earth waves rolled across the desert as far away as Las Vegas, which is normal for such tests. No radiation escaped into the atmosphere, according to readings shortly after the test.

Toth denies secret line

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Los Angeles Times reporter Robert Toth wrote today that he received no "secret information" from Anatoly Shcharansky and "there is no basis in my experience with him to support conviction for treason."
 Contacts with Toth are an important part of the charges Shcharansky faces in a Moscow trial.
 Toth, for three years the Times' bureau chief in Moscow, was barred from leaving the country and was held for questioning by Soviet police in June, 1977, in an incident that drew protests from the United States.
 Toth said the charges against Shcharansky appeared based particularly on one article he wrote, published by the Times Nov. 22, 1976 under the headline "Russ Indirectly Reveal 'State Secrets' Gives In Denials of Jewish Vises."
 The story concerned the Jewish "refuseniks" who had been denied permission to emigrate to Israel because they had learned "state secrets" in their jobs.
 These included employees of supposedly open, non-military projects, such as oceanographic research ships and the Institute of the Chemical Ministry, Toth said.
 The refusal gave indications the "research vessels were actually spy ships," Toth wrote. The grounds cited contradicted Soviet officials who classified such operations as "open" when they wanted to buy U.S. technology, such as computers, which cannot be sold for Russian military use, Toth said.
 Toth said he did have help from Shcharansky in gathering facts for the story. Shcharansky and other Jewish activists supplied him with the names and former jobs of Jews denied exit permits because they knew "state secrets," Toth said, but "there was nothing secret about any of it. All the information I collected in the Soviet Union was for publication in the Times."
 The intelligence value of any information about the refuseniks' work "had long since perished," Toth wrote, since none "had worked at all for more than five years," because they were fired from their jobs when they applied for permission to leave the country.
 "Even under Soviet rules of what is secret information — traffic statistics, salaries of athletes, all information not officially released — there is no basis in my experience with him to support conviction for treason."

Resolution passes deploring trials

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House gave final congressional passage Wednesday to a resolution deploring Soviet trials of dissidents, rejecting attempts to tie the issue to arms limitations talks.
 The Senate had approved the resolution Tuesday.
 The resolution "reminde[d] the Soviet Union that it signed the Helsinki accord on protection of human rights, and continued: "It is the sense of Congress that the trials of Anatoly Shcharansky and others who have defended the Helsinki final act are matters of deep concern to the American people; that these deplorable events inevitably affect the climate of our relations and impose obstacles of the building of confidence and cooperation between our two countries."
 A persistent bipartisan effort to strengthen the resolution to a demand for a suspension of arms talks lost.
 Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House International Relations Committee and floor manager of the resolution, said the Soviets' actions in trials of Shcharansky, Alexander Ginzburg and Viktoras Petkus "raise a question of the credibility of the Soviet Union."

Israeli offer spurned

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman offered to meet with P. M. Menachem Begin, Mohammed Gammasy in advance of next week's London peace talks but Gammasy rejected the idea, the Middle East News Agency said Wednesday.

It quoted Gammasy as saying meetings between Egyptian and Israeli generals were unwarranted "as long as there is nothing new to discuss."

Gammasy and Weizman are co-chairmen of a joint military committee, which was charged with working out the details of an Israeli pullout from the Sinai desert.

The committee's work reached an impasse after Israel insisted on retaining about 20 Jewish settlements built along the Mediterranean in the peninsula's northeastern sector.

Gammasy's refusal to meet with Weizman was seen as a sign of Egyptian pessimism about the London meeting, particularly since the retired Israeli general has established a rapport with President Anwar Sadat and is considered one of the most acceptable Israeli officials to the Egyptian government.

The London conference, opening July 18, includes Egyptian Foreign Minister Ibrahim Kemal, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dyan and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

Recording ban suit not legal

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Houston television newsman Marvin Zindler had no legal authority to file suit preventing the American Nazi Party from recording offering a $5,000 reward for the killing of non-whites involved in attacks on whites, the Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The court, without written opinion, upheld a decision by the Houston Court of Civil Appeals denying Zindler's request for an injunction against the Nazi party and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. preventing the message from being played to callers who dialed the Nazi telephone number.

The message said, "In order to meet this problem head on we are now offering a $5,000 price for every non-white carcass killed while attacking a white person. We offer this reward in order to alleviate some of the legal problems of fellow white people. But we are encouraging L.S. executions of non-whites in order to make their stay in this country an unhealthy one."

Zindler filed suit against Southwestern Bell and the Nazis in November 1977 seeking to block use of the telephone recording.

A trial court on Dec. 8 issued a temporary injunction preventing the playing of the message, but the Court of Civil Appeals reversed that decision, saying Zindler had no legal standing to file the suit because he suffered no special injury from playing of the message.

The appellate court dissolved the injunction and dismissed the suit. The Supreme Court today upheld that action.

Benson hurt during ride

MIDWAY, Utah (UPI) — Ezra Taft Benson, 78, former secretary of agriculture and next in line for the presidency of the Mormon Church, was thrown from a horse Wednesday and broke his hip.

A church spokesman said Benson, who is president of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles, was riding about 11 a.m. at his summer home when the horse reared and rolled on top of him.

He was being transferred to LDS Hospital in Salt Lake City.

The president of the quorum of apostles has traditionally succeeded to the presidency of the Mormon Church.

Benson served as agriculture secretary in the Eisenhower Administration.

Heiress accused of death plot

DULUTH, Minn. (UPI) — One day after her husband was sentenced to two life terms for the murder of her adoptive mother and her nurse, heiress Marjorie Congdon Caldwell was charged with masterminding the slaying for an $12 million inheritance.

Mrs. Caldwell surrendered in St. Louis County Court Tuesday, accompanied by her attorney, Ronald Meschberger, and itchy Lefty, 17, her youngest son from her first marriage.

Mrs. Caldwell, 43, was taken to the St. Louis County Jail but posted a $100,000 bond and was freed.

The charge of conspiracy to commit first-degree murder calls for a mandatory sentence of life in prison upon conviction.

U.S. oil imports called key to summit

Paris paper Le Monde, echo a similar warning to Carter by West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in another newspaper interview earlier this week.

Taken together, these declarations by the two most important West European government heads attending the Bonn meeting, underline Europe's conviction that the key to any Western plan at Bonn for ending the world recession is immediate U.S. action to curb its oil imports and strengthen the sagging dollar.

"At the present time, an important reduction in U.S. oil imports is the precondition for an improvement in the world economy," Giscard said in the interview published Wednesday afternoon.

The French president displayed signs of impatience when the interviewer pointed to congressional opposition to higher oil prices as the mid-term election approaches.

"American internal policies are no concern of ours," he said at one point.

Grain safety moves in works

WASHINGTON — The grain industry was put on notice Tuesday that the Agriculture Department would "move" toward a ban on recirculation of grain dust, a practice suspected to be a cause of the explosions that pose a constant threat to grain workers and facilities.

The dust, which rises in potentially explosive clouds whenever large volumes of grain are handled, is frequently recaptured now and returned to the grain flow to avoid loss of weight.

"To reduce the amount of dust suspended in the air and on surfaces in elevators is to reduce the risk of explosion, and we must now begin to move in this direction in the hope that recirculation of dust in elevator systems can eventually be eliminated," P.H. Smith, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture for Market Services, said in announcing the policy decision to a symposium at the National Academy of Sciences

Auditorium here.

Smith also said operators of those grain elevators over which the department has jurisdiction would be required to submit detailed plans of their safeguards against explosions.

The two-day symposium, attended by industry, government and academic experts from across the country, was called after two explosions took 54 lives and destroyed two multimillion-dollar grain elevators on the Gulf Coast last winter. The meeting is being conducted by the academy's National Materials Advisory Board at the request of the Agriculture Department.

Smith's announcement about grain dust was underscored by John Graziano, director of the department's office of investigation, at a news conference. Graziano, who has been detached to lead an agency study of grain explosions, said: "It would be the stated objective that dust recirculation would be prohibited. It would be the policy of the department to move in that direction."

He noted, however, that the department's jurisdiction covers only the large grain elevators in major ports through which grain is moved for export. Elsewhere, the policy would require the concurrence of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. A representative of that agency said adoption of the policy was under consideration.

Smith's announcement drew generally favorable comment from experts accompanying Graziano at the news conference, but one industry representative expressed reservations. Pending further research, said James Maness, director of technical services for the National Grain and Feed association, a ban on recirculation of grain dust "may be presumptuous."

He questioned whether adequate proof existed that the recirculation practice was dangerous.

Researcher gets flirting roosters, double layers

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — A New Mexico scientist studying sex reversal has produced several effeminate roosters and a strain of chickens that lay two eggs a day.

Researcher David Zartman mixed the female hormone estrogen with corn oil and fed it to chickens, producing several white leghorn hens that consistently lay two eggs a day. The only trouble is the hens' eggs don't have any shells.

Zartman also conducted sex-reversal research on roosters.

He outlined his findings Tuesday during a joint meeting of the American Dairy Science Association and the American Society of Animal Science at Michigan State University.

Sex reversal research has gone on since the 1930s, but Zartman, an associate professor at New Mexico State University, said he decided to try it after reading a Japanese study on goldfish that had been sexually reversed through the use of estrogen.

Zartman said he injected estrogen substances into chicks at birth and at four and eight days old, attempting to change genetic males to females. He found extreme sex reversals in roosters.

The research produced nine "roosterettes" which have short combs, chuck sing and flirt with other normal roosters.

The researcher said he also found hens given extra estrogen began laying eggs at twice their usual rate.

Grain stocks up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There were more than 542 million bushels of feed grain and wheat in the three-year grain reserve as of July 7, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

The steadily growing reserve was 3 percent larger than last week.

The department reported reserves of 35.3 million bushels of wheat, 107.7 million bushels of corn, 25 million bushels of barley, 27.9 million bushels of oats and nearly 15.7 million bushels of sorghum.

The grain reserve takes wheat and other grains off the market for up to three years, or until market prices reach certain levels. Last week the department gave farmers storing barley an option of selling barley because the $2.20 price surpassed the release level of $2.04.

Filer girl competes

FILER — Sandra Yoder will represent the Idaho Junior Hereford association in the national showmanship competition of the All-American Field Day July 20-21.

The Hereford event will be conducted on the campus of Kansas State University in Manhattan. Representatives of 30 state organizations are expected to take part.

Miss Yoder earned the right to attend by placing first in the state showmanship contest at the Idaho Junior Hereford Field Day in Caldwell. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Yoder and will be a sophomore at the University of Idaho this fall.

Record onion acreage

BOISE (UPI) — Onion growers in Idaho and eastern Oregon expect to harvest another record acreage this year, the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said today.

This year's crop at an estimated 12,200 acres is 400 acres larger than last year's record harvest of 11,900. Planting of many acres was delayed for up to two weeks because of rain, resulting in a crop that is in several different stages of development.

The report said pinto and great northern beans showed a marked increase in acreage this year. Pinto continues to lead the others at 69,500 acres or 45 percent above last year's acreage. Great northern beans are planted on 29,500 acres, up 37 percent, while pinks at 24,300 acres are down 30 percent.

Grain lodges

RECENT high winds have lodged ripening grain fields in Magic Valley. This field between Castleford and Buhl has large sections where the wind has bent and twisted the grain stalks, making it difficult to combine when harvest time arrives.

Missouri farmers refuse crop-cutting pesticide

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Missouri's corn farmers are refusing to use an effective pesticide to avoid a repetition of last year's $1 million loss to cutworms.

The state Agriculture Department obtained clearance for use of the pesticide and David Ramsey, supervisor of the department's bureau of pesticide control reports, "Every field of seedling corn north of the Missouri river has some degree of cutworm infestation."

The pesticide is heptachlor, which the federal Environmental Protection Agency had banned because of tests indicating it caused cancer in laboratory mice. However, the agriculture office in Missouri obtained an order from the EPA allowing the use of the pesticide for agricultural purposes on a restricted basis for three years.

The problem, said Jack Runyan, state director of agriculture, is that the restriction interrupts Missouri farmers' rotation of corn and soybean crops.

If a farmer uses heptachlor on a corn field, Runyan said, he cannot plant soybeans the following year. And if he were to plant corn again, he could not use the pesticide. The reason for the restriction is the long-lasting effect of the pesticide.

"They're afraid to buy it; that's the scuttlebutt we get," Runyan said of farmers' reaction.

"They're hesitant to commit themselves for more than a year at a time."

"But I think they're not going to have any choice before long."

Ramsey said only about 2,500 acres have been treated with heptachlor, hardly a drop in the bucket compared to the 2.8 million acres of corn expected to be planted this year.

Heptachlor must be applied before the corn is planted. Runyan said there are alternatives — commonly called rescue treatments — that may be applied after the corn develops but they are more expensive and not as effective.

At the end of the three-year period, Runyan said, those in agriculture hope an effective substitute for heptachlor will be available.

"By that time, surely they'll have something else. But I sure wouldn't guarantee it."

The cutworm is a larva that grows up to two inches in length before it develops into a moth. Control is most effective when it is destroyed early in the larva stage, or less than an inch long.

If it is not killed at the beginning of the season, attempts by farmers to replant fields destroyed by the worms will be frustrated by later generations of them.

Sidney Milner of Montgomery City, a representative of a company that makes heptachlor, was pessimistic about the use of the pesticide.

"It's due to the restrictions placed on it," Milner said. "Farmers want to go to soybeans but can't do it."

"They can't live with that restriction. That's all there is to it."

Milner said he has seen infested fields given the rescue treatments, but they still have cutworms.

"It's just not doing the job. They're just eating that corn up around Mexico, Missouri."

"I talked to one farmer yesterday who replanted," Milner said. "They're not treating with heptachlor. They just don't know what to do."

Milner said he was not using the pesticide on his own corn.

"I guess my corn will be eaten up with cutworms also."

Idaho crop prices drop; livestock changes mixed

BOISE (UPI) — Prices received by Idaho farmers and ranchers as of June 15 generally were lower than the previous month for crops and showed mixed changes for livestock, it was reported today.

The Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said wheat, barley and oat prices were down from the previous month. Compared with a year ago, wheat and barley prices were up but oats prices were down.

June potato and dry pea prices were lower than a month earlier but dry bean and alfalfa hay prices were higher. Compared with June last year potato and dry bean prices were higher but alfalfa hay and dry peas were lower.

The price of all beef cattle at mid-June was up 20 cents from May and averaged $53.79 per hundredweight. This compares with $36.80 per hundredweight last year. Cows, at $38.50 per hundredweight, were down $1.40 during the month while steers and heifers were up 90 cents at $53.70.

During the same period, calf prices dropped $5.10 to $28.50. A year ago calves averaged $37.80.

Lambs registered a decrease of $4.60 from the previous month to $60.70. This compares with $49.50 a year earlier.

Prices for milk, milk cows and wool were unchanged from the previous month but higher than last year.

Meantime, prices paid by farmers for selected feeds showed increases from a month earlier for cottonseed meal, dairy feed and laying feed. Bran decreased in price while other prices were unchanged.

Aspirin cuts stroke risk

BOSTON (UPI) — Taking four aspirin a day cuts the risk of death or crippling by stroke in half for men — but not women who have had warning signs of an impending seizure, the New England Journal of Medicine reported Wednesday. The study, made over six years to two dozen Canadian hospitals, provided the first statistically solid evidence of the value of aspirin in preventing stroke — the third-leading U.S. killer disease.

Such a role for aspirin has been hinted at in recent studies but never proven. Aspirin is also under investigation as a possible preventive of further heart disease in people who have already had one.

The study means aspirin has the potential for saving thousands of lives a year from the disease which kills one in five people in North America and Western Europe, more than any other disease except heart disease and cancer. Stroke occurs when the blood supply to the brain is choked off either by a sudden clot or a gradual clogging of the arteries, causing parts of the brain literally to die of starvation.

Stroke-caused disability puts more people out of work than any other disease. Nearly 5 million Americans are afflicted by strokes and almost 200,000 die of them every year.

What aspirin apparently does is make the platelets I (thickens in the blood which cause clotting — so slippery that they can't stick together and form a clot. Aspirin is safer and cheaper than anti-coagulant drugs which also inhibit clotting but carry the danger of uncontrolled bleeding.

The study was headed by a "major contribution" in an editorial in the prestigious medical journal. Dr. Henry J. M. Barnett, a neurologist at the University Hospital, London, Ontario, headed the study of 586 patients in hospitals all over Canada. The patients all had had what doctors call transient ischemic attacks, loosely translated as mini-strokes.

Such mini-strokes occur in one of every 1,000 elderly Americans. But major strokes happen frequently to people with no warning from a mini-stroke. One group of patients was given a standard-sized aspirin tablet four times a day, another was given an anti-clot drug called Angaran, and a third was given a dummy tablet.

The researchers had hoped Angaran would work to prevent stroke, but it didn't. Nor were women helped either by Angaran or aspirin. But the number of subsequent major strokes or death among men took aspirin daily was 40 per cent lower than men in the other groups.

Why aspirin doesn't help women — perhaps risk of stroke decreases 25 per cent greater than men — is the study's biggest unanswered question. Dr. Barnett said the only obvious clue in the biggest chemical difference between men and women — their hormones. Even in rabbits, he noted, clogged arteries can be cleared somewhat in males with aspirin but not in females.

In a telephone interview Barnett cautioned that aspirin is no panacea. "People who haven't got threatened stroke, for them to start taking four aspirin a day would be foolish in my opinion," Barnett said. "People shouldn't start using aspirin unless their doctor advises it and unless they've had threatened stroke."

The Canadian study also illustrates the ethical dilemma of medical research. Of the 586 patients studied, 85 had subsequent strokes and 42 died. Those who died were taking the dummy tablets or the Angaran might have lived had they been taking aspirin. But if the study did not have such "control" groups, researchers would have no way of knowing for sure that aspirin worked.

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened mixed Thursday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average was up 1.12 points to 825.30 shortly after the opening. Advances led declines, 211 to 200, among the 612 issues crossing the NYSE tape at the outset.

Brokers said many investors would be waiting for the Federal Reserve to report on the nation's money supply later in the day. A large increase could force the Fed to tighten credit and drive interest rates already at 3 1/2-year high, even higher.

Early in the day, Fed Chairman G. William Miller said the economy should grow at a moderate rate in the near future, but said he was concerned inflation could hurt it in the long term.

In an interview with foreign journalists Wednesday, President Carter said he did not foresee the economy drifting into a recession. Charles Schreier, chief Carter economic adviser, nevertheless said Congress would have to approve a significant tax cut in 1979 to prevent an economic slide.

Carter also said late Wednesday the United States would not intervene to artificially influence the dollar on foreign markets. As a result, the dollar was lower in Europe and Tokyo early Thursday.

NOTE: Merrill Lynch, the largest financial services company in the U.S., is now actively recruiting women brokers at all 500 branches for a nationwide campaign.

NOTE: Pitney Bowes, one of the country's top manufacturers of business systems—and mailing equipment, reports that today 11.1 percent of its 2,700-person sales force is female, up from a mere 3.4 percent as recently as 1974.

If you are a career-oriented woman, concentrate as never before on sales as your entry into the business community, for today, the traditional roles for women in sales (in real estate, in retail stores) have been vastly expanded. You are just as likely to be selling manufactured and wholesale merchandise, stocks and bonds, consumer goods and consumer services.

white, we the women, have a long way to go before we come even near to parity—only 20 percent of all manufacturing and wholesale companies employ women sales representatives and less than 10 percent of all sales representatives are women—our progress is appreciable.

Are you the right person for sales? Honest answers to the following questions will give you the guidance you seek.

"Can you handle rejection, cope with occasional "dry spells"? You must be able to handle the inevitable and keep yourself going when sales aren't good.

"Women must be able to accept criticism and not take it as a personal defeat," adds Judy Werblit, a stockbroker teacher who has been a Merrill Lynch stockbroker since 1974.

"Can you work effectively without supervision, arrange your own schedules, make your own customer calls?" "I like being in business for myself," Bynum says. "After all, I'm in control of my own destiny. I'm a teacher in the New York City school system."

"Can you fit into an area that interests you? Do you feel comfortable about the products and the company, and that makes them? "The growth area is definitely marketing," insists Margaret Stern, brand manager for Marquis de Coudaine wine. "I would encourage women to get solid marketing skills before going into the sales end."

"Can you handle whatever travel allowances you may be required? Are there adequate travel allowances for you? How will your travel affect your family relationships?"

If you are deeply concerned about your earnings potential, the only square answer is: It can vary widely. At Pitney Bowes, for instance, if you are a sales representative and you meet your assigned quota, you can earn in excess of $20,000 per year. The company also will pay you a salary during your training period.

At Merrill Lynch, Judy Werblit says "no limit on my potential. I enjoy sales, I set my own goals, provide my own incentives."

"And how do you prepare for a career in sales? While few companies require a college degree, many women who are successful in selling urge you to go to college.

"Get a bachelor-of-arts degree and start as a salesperson with a distributing house," Stern says. "Then move over to the importing firm. Along the way, gather as much knowledge as you can about wines."

Stern is an acknowledged wine expert who has served as press liaison for the Italian wine producers and the Italian government's wine interests in the U.S. She also has represented the wines of France, Spain and Germany.

"I would suggest that women who want to go into sales should study business administration. This can help them begin their sales careers on an equal footing with their male counterparts," Lillian Benich, another Pitney Bowes sales representative, declares in an exclusive agreement about the value of college.

Teaching is a excellent preparation, says Bynum and Werblit, both of whom had teaching backgrounds. As Werblit explains, "Teaching helped me understand how to communicate, how to sell ideas to students."

stockbroker teacher who has been a Merrill Lynch stockbroker since 1974.

"Can you work effectively without supervision, arrange your own schedules, make your own customer calls?" "I like being in business for myself," Bynum says. "After all, I'm in control of my own destiny. I'm a teacher in the New York City school system."

"Can you fit into an area that interests you? Do you feel comfortable about the products and the company, and that makes them? "The growth area is definitely marketing," insists Margaret Stern, brand manager for Marquis de Coudaine wine. "I would encourage women to get solid marketing skills before going into the sales end."

"Can you handle whatever travel allowances you may be required? Are there adequate travel allowances for you? How will your travel affect your family relationships?"

If you are deeply concerned about your earnings potential, the only square answer is: It can vary widely. At Pitney Bowes, for instance, if you are a sales representative and you meet your assigned quota, you can earn in excess of $20,000 per year. The company also will pay you a salary during your training period.

At Merrill Lynch, Judy Werblit says "no limit on my potential. I enjoy sales, I set my own goals, provide my own incentives."

"And how do you prepare for a career in sales? While few companies require a college degree, many women who are successful in selling urge you to go to college.

"Get a bachelor-of-arts degree and start as a salesperson with a distributing house," Stern says. "Then move over to the importing firm. Along the way, gather as much knowledge as you can about wines."

Stern is an acknowledged wine expert who has served as press liaison for the Italian wine producers and the Italian government's wine interests in the U.S. She also has represented the wines of France, Spain and Germany.

"I would suggest that women who want to go into sales should study business administration. This can help them begin their sales careers on an equal footing with their male counterparts," Lillian Benich, another Pitney Bowes sales representative, declares in an exclusive agreement about the value of college.

Teaching is a excellent preparation, says Bynum and Werblit, both of whom had teaching backgrounds. As Werblit explains, "Teaching helped me understand how to communicate, how to sell ideas to students."

Beekeeper puzzled by dead, dying bees

BUHLL BEEKEEPER FRANK ZAGATA AND DEAD BEES IN FRONT OF HIVES
... encapsulated pesticide suspected of killing helpful insects

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

BUHLL — Honeybees are dying mysteriously in the Magic Valley and local beekeepers suspect an encapsulated pesticide of poisoning their hives.

Several beekeepers in the Buhl and Twin Falls areas report thousands of their bees have died in recent weeks and more are dying. Hives which should be raising young bees are barren of larvae.

One Twin Falls beehive keeper blames his dead bees on "microencapsulated methyl parathion, the same chemical blamed for killing thousands of hives of bees in north Idaho in 1976."

Methyl parathion was blamed for wiping out 3,000 hives of bees and partially affecting 3,000 others near Lewiston that year.

After some of his bees died suddenly this spring, Twin Falls beehive keeper Charles Miller sent a mailgram to Idaho Director of Agriculture Wilson Kellogg asking why methyl parathion, sold under the brand name Pennacp-M, is being used near Idaho bee yards.

Kellogg, in a letter to Miller, said the Idaho Department of Agriculture successfully got a court order banning the chemical after the Lewiston disaster in 1976.

But that order has since been overturned by Pennwalt Corporation, manufacturer of Pennacp-M, and Kellogg said his department is now enjoined from discussing the particular pesticide with farmers.

"We have done about everything possible to assist the beekeepers in the long battle with new chemicals," Kellogg added. "...our hands were tied by the court order regarding Pennacp-M."

Although Miller says only one yard of his bees were hit by the pesticide, other two Buhl beekeepers, Frank Zagata and Bill Lemmons, say 15 of their yards may have been affected by pesticides.

Since their bee yard contains 50 to 60 hives, they estimate about 1,000 hives will be affected. They are unsure what caused the kill, but suspect Pennacp-M.

A few of Zagata's hives were destroyed when the pesticide was reportedly first sprayed on pea fields in the Buhl and Twin Falls areas in mid-June.

During ensuing weeks, many bee colonies have continued to lose bees, Zagata said.

A healthy hive, worth about $50, usually contains a minimum of six pounds of bees, according to Zagata. About 3,500 dry bees are needed to make a pound.

Zagata and Lemmons say their big economic losses are in the young bees, which would have been generated by the devastated hives.

A total of nearly 20 million bees may be affected by the outbreak of pesticide poisonings.

A hive which loses many of its workers will fail to make enough honey for the winter and the bees will starve to death when cold weather sets in.

"It will be a long time before we know what our losses are," Zagata says. "We got a pretty damn good dose of it. It's not ordinary stuff."

He says he has lost four hives outright and others are sadly short-handed for feeding and raising new young. Combs which should be full of white larvae remain empty and dwindling numbers of bees crawl across the bee boards.

Pennacp-M, the brand name of microencapsulated methyl parathion, is highly hazardous to bees according to three University of California researchers who recently published their research findings in the American Bee Journal.

E.L. Atkins, D. Kellum, and K.W. Atkins, entomologists at the university, studied the effects of both liquid methyl parathion and Pennacp-M on bee colonies and determined the capsules, though safer for the user, are about 13 times more lethal to nearby beehives.

A second writer, P.F. Thurber of Kirkland, Wash., explained Pennacp-M contains microscopic bits of porous plastic which are filled with pesticide and put in a carrier medium which keeps the deadly chemical inside the capsule. When the medium dries out, the insecticide slowly comes out of the plastic and becomes active.

The capsules are both good and bad. They are good for farmers beset by bugs because of a "timed release" of the chemical which stops large hatches of insects in a single, long-lasting application.

For honeybees, however, the tiny capsules are exactly the same size as a grain of pollen. A foraging bee, covered with coarse fuzz, picks up encapsulated poison along with pollen when he crawls into a flower and unwittingly carries it back to the hive.

Worker bees store pollen in honeycomb cells as food for young bees and the deadly capsules can remain incidentally pigeon-holed in the hive for months.

If the capsules end up in a cell with a larvae which feeds on pollen, the result is immediate death. Stored pollen, is also lethal to young bees when faced with the capsules.

That is why many of the larvae in area beehives are being found dead, according to local apiarists. And many bee boards have no larvae at all because the bees which ordinarily would nurture the young have died off.

Pennacp-M is registered with the Environmental Protection Agency for use on alfalfa, peas, beans and other crops. On peas, it is used to control the pea weevil, the pea aphid and the pea leaf weevil.

The label on the chemical, however, warns the applicator not to apply the spray near wildlife or adjacent to a body of water because "birds and other wildlife feeding in treated areas may be killed."

Gubernatorial candidates and the issues

Seeking power isn't just a political trip

Editors Note: This is the fifth in a series of articles examining the issues and candidates in Idaho's race for governor.

TWIN FALLS — By all rights Idaho should be energy self sufficient.

Spit by a hundred falling rivers with almost unlimited hydroelectric potential, resting on top of vast, geothermal fields, and home of Arco's pioneering nuclear power plants, Idaho seems a state with every energy advantage.

Yet in 1978, worries are increasingly expressed over future energy supplies. Energy experts point out Idaho's population increased better than 14 percent between 1970 and 1975, soaring from 715,000 inhabitants to better than 815,000. Some studies say Idaho will have a population of 1.5 million by the end of the century.

At that rate existing power supplies may run dry.

Few persons are more aware of the power problem than Idaho's seven candidates for governor. All agree additional energy sources must be developed.

All agree Idaho has the potential to become energy self sufficient and perhaps an energy exporter.

And there is at least some agreement on what sources should be developed first.

The seven candidates — Democrats and Republicans alike — all argue Idaho should immediately develop additional hydro potential.

They point out "low-head dams" are largely untapped power sources in Idaho. Low-head dams are those less than 25 feet in height. Most were built during days of energy surplus and were not originally intended for production of electricity.

But in many cases alteration of these dams to allow power production is a simple procedure. While the smaller dams will not individually provide great amounts of power, collectively they can provide an important supplemental source of electricity.

A 1977 Department of Water Resources inventory listed 437 dams in Idaho.

Most produce no electricity.

Five of the seven candidates, Democrat John Evers and Republicans Vernon Ravenscroft, Allan Larsen, James Crowe and Jay Amynx also say they could support construction of additional large dams in Idaho.

Rep. Larry Jackson, a Boise Insurance executive, says he isn't necessarily opposed to large dam construction in Idaho, or for that matter construction of any other power producing facility. But he questions whether a layman should be passing judgment on the technical scientific questions of energy production. His first step as governor, Jackson says, would be appointment of a board of energy "composed of energy experts from government, private industry and the universities." Their task would be to formulate "an energy plan for Idaho for the next 50 to 75 years," Jackson says.

"I'm not an energy expert," Jackson adds. "I'm probably as confused about what forms of alternative energy make sense in Idaho as anybody. I'm not sure what the recommendations of the energy board would be, but they would be experts and I would go along with their recommendations."

Former State Representative and Republican C.L. "Butch" Otter, an officer in the J.R. Simplot Company, says he would support additional hydroelectric production, but warns

Idaho might be relying too heavily on power produced from falling water. "I don't care how the 1977 drought," Otter says, referring to the dam there's no water to turn the turbines. We have to diversify our energy supply."

There is also more agreement than disagreement on nuclear and coal fired power plants. Although all candidates expressed concern at pollution and waste disposal problems these plants might create, most said they expected those problems to be eventually overcome. And six of the seven candidates said they could support construction of either type of power plant in Idaho if determined economically and environmentally feasible.

While some states have been ripped by anti-nuclear demonstrations, the Idaho nuclear debate appears low key. A major concern of the Gen. State gubernatorial candidates is what they see as Idaho's ever growing need for power.

According to the candidates, environmental concerns about certain forms of energy production, whether nuclear or coal fueled, will have to be weighed against increased consumer demands for power.

Migrant housing dispute heard

BURLEY — A five-year dispute between the owner of the land on which the American Falls labor camp sits and the farmers association in charge of the camp is delaying needed repairs, according to the camp manager.

Maria Castillo, testifying before the Idaho Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights today, said repairs to the 32-unit labor camp near American Falls are not being made because of the dispute.

Castillo and an attendant at the camp, Irma Gomez, testified that 11 families living in the camp are forced to live in brick-walled rooms, some of which have broken doors, broken locks, and cracks in the walls. A communal bathroom at the camp is also in disrepair.

ALMO — The sudden closure of Almo's one-room schoolhouse this week by the Cassia County District is causing shock waves of anger in this tiny farming community.

The board of education Monday night voted 3-1 to shut down the 62-year-old school, and residents say they weren't notified in advance that the closing was being considered. The agenda mailed out prior to the meeting did not include discussion on the Almo School.

Residents say they will meet next week to discuss what they can do about the closure. Almo is about 50 miles southeast of Burley.

Plans call for the students to be bused to Malta, which is about one and a half hours by bus.

Vaudis Ward, mother of two children at Almo School last year, said Wednesday: "We aren't going to sit back and let them close it this easy. To read it in the paper! This is the information we get. We read it in the paper that all at once they are going to close the school."

"Two or three of us just talked this morning. We have not made any plans yet what we are going to do or when we are going to meet. But we are not going to sit back and let it slide by," Mrs. Ward said. "We are going to meet with the school board and talk with them."

Mrs. Ward estimates some 15 students from the valley could attend elementary classes at Almo School if the parents would send them there.

Another Almo resident, Doris Tracy, sent four of her five children to the first eight grades at Almo School, and a fifth youngster now goes to Malta after spending his first four grades at Almo. The boy, Michael, has spent the last two years at Malta schools.

Mrs. Tracy said she hates to see the school shut down and would support it remaining open if more children attended it than the six to eight students predicted for next year.

"Michael was the only child in his grade and he's gotten kind of lazy. He needed the competition," she said for the prosecuting attorney in the Aug. 8 primary, Severt (Swede) Swenson, criticized what he termed the large increase in the prosecutor's budget over the past few years and said he would take a close look at the fiscal situation.

Shaw said for the past two years the budget for his office has increased only 10 per cent and the proposed budget for next year will have only a 4 of a percent increase. He said all budgets but the proposed one were prepared by his predecessor, Phil Becker, who is now magistrate.

Much of the evening's discussion centered on incumbent County Commissioner Jim Wilkin's defense of the savings the commissioners have made this past year by cutting the solid waste collection service and eliminating spraying from the weed department program.

The four candidates running for the two commissioner posts all spoke on a series of questions posed by moderator Gerry Feustel.

They include Will Thomas who's opposing Wilkin in his bid for re-election in the first commissioner district, and Archie Walker, Bliss, and Larry Crutchfield, Hagerman, both seeking the second district post now held by John LeMoine who is not running.

Whoops!

Piped dream nears reality

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Unusual dust storms and strange thundering sounds have filled the air at Ketchum this summer as construction crews construct a $2.4 million public water system for the city.

North American Contractors Inc. of Portland, Ore., won a $180,500 contract to build a one million gallon water storage tank for Ketchum, and Shun Construction of Ontario, Ore., has a $1.2 million contract to lay more than 17 miles of pipe for the public water system.

Builders and dinosaur-like hydraulic powered shovels have been tearing up the streets of Ketchum as work crews each day lay hundreds of feet of blue plastic pipe for the water system.

Ketchum City Administrator Jim Jacquet said he expects it will take Shun Construction crews through October to lay the underground pipe throughout Ketchum.

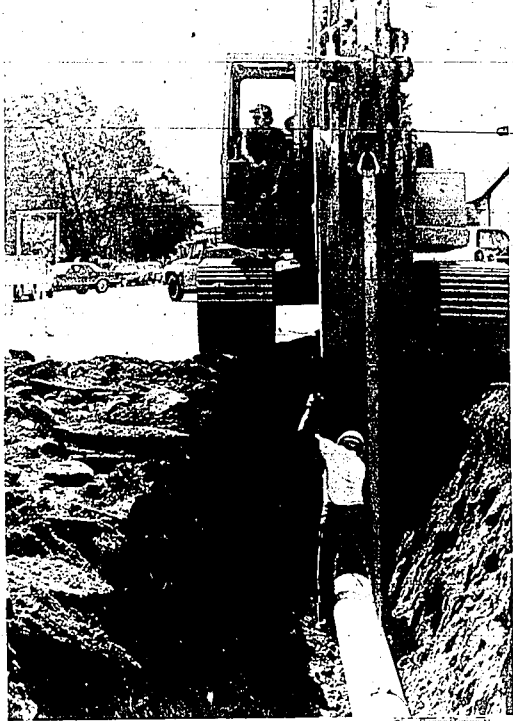

Officials for North American Contractors are targeting to complete the huge water storage tank, located on Warm Springs Road, in about 12 weeks.

City work crews excavated a 19-foot deep crater to contain the million gallon storage tank, which is about 95 feet in diameter and will have 20-foot high concrete walls.

The public water system is funded by a $2.4 million federal Economic Development Administration public works grant.

The project is four-phased, and Ketchum officials say all work should be completed by December, 1978.

The system will serve the Warm Springs area and parts of the Ketchum city center with domestic and fire hydrant lines.

Candidates talk on power

Former Boise Mayor Jay Amyx was the only candidate interviewed expressing strong reservations about nuclear energy. While saying Idaho would probably need a coal fired power plant to meet immediate power needs, Amyx questioned existing methods of nuclear waste storage. "I don't believe I would give the go ahead right at the moment on construction of a nuclear power plant without knowing more about the waste disposal," Amyx said.

But while the seven candidates sound similar chords on developing existing fuels and energy sources, they split into sharply divided camps over the governor's DERPA proposal.

DERPA is an acronym for Domestic and Rural Power Authority, an agency Evans sought to establish with the goal of obtaining for Idaho a larger share of the power generated by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA).

In his January State of the State address Evans pointed out the seven federal dams in Idaho "have a capability of producing over 700 megawatts of power" for BPA. But the governor noted better than half that "is being exported, much of it for use in Oregon and Washington direct service industries."

Evans urged the legislature to take steps to gain for Idaho "access to a rightful share of the inexpensive electrical energy produced in our state." Establishing DERPA was one of these necessary steps, Evans said, because law regulating BPA power dedicates much of that energy to customers of municipal and cooperative utilities. DERPA would most legal require power to purchase energy at wholesale from BPA and market it retail to Idaho domestic and rural consumers, Evans said.

But the Evans proposal immediately drew sharp criticism from the Republican legislative majority. Unlike Oregon and Washington, "public" power has never been a popular concept in Idaho. Few advocates of government controlled power production have ever been elected in Idaho — or remained long in office.

Not only did the legislature refuse to approve DERPA, it never let the bill out of committee.

In the gubernatorial election, criticism of Evans and DERPA is also sharp. Jackson is the only Republican who says he might have voted for DERPA in the legislative arena, but he is quick to add the measure is not a long range solution. The answer to an energy shortage is production of more energy within Idaho, Jackson says, not just redistribution of existing energy supplies already designated for sources in other states.

All five of the other Republican candidates flatly reject DERPA.

Amyx condemns Evans for "wanting to put the state in the marketing of power," and says the plan is "socialistic."

Other says the plan would result in Idaho being run by a federal regional commission, and not by Idahoans.

Coeur d'Alene realtor James Crowe calls the idea "stupid," and says all existing BPA power is already being used.

Tuttle farmer and businessman Vernon Ravenscroft says the plan is "socialistic" won't produce "a single kilowatt of new power," and would amount to near theft of power from BPA. "Taking power just because we say we need it is a precedent that could be used against Idaho's water," insists Ravenscroft.

House Speaker Allan Larsen, of Blackfoot, says it's irrelevant whether Idaho is getting a "fair share" or not. Existing BPA power supplies are being used, Larsen says, have been designated to Oregon and Washington sources for some time, and Idaho has little chance of changing the situation simply because it feels left out.

The Republicans and Democrats also sharply differ over the energy policies of the Public Utilities Commission. That agency, charged with setting "just and equitable" utility rates, has been the focal point of controversy since the 1976 appointment to the board by then Gov. Cecil Andrus of former Bannock County state legislator Robert Lenaghan.

All six Republican candidates for governor were critical of Lenaghan, saying he has been "unfair," and unduly hostile to utilities and private enterprise. Several criticized the PUC commissioner as a "Democratic party hack" unfit for the job he holds. Not one Republican gubernatorial candidate said he would reappoint Lenaghan to the PUC. Several said asking for his resignation would be among their first duties if elected. Lenaghan's term expires on Jan. 8 of next year.

Evans, however, praised Lenaghan for having done "an outstanding job of representing the consumers of Idaho." Lenaghan was "principally responsible for telling our utilities to hold down their rate increases," Evans said. "He has been the protector of the consumer's interests and has been condemned by industry and supporters of special interests. Obviously he's a people's man."

Evans said he would reappoint Lenaghan to the PUC if elected.

Several projects planned for Jackpot

JACKPOT — Improvement projects now underway at Jackpot, Nev., represent several million dollars in expenditures and include everything from a 30-unit studio apartment complex to a new surface for U.S. Highway 93 through town.

The projects include:

- * 32-unit expansion of Cactus Pete's.
- * An additional 23 rooms to Danny's Motel to bring the total accommodations to 60 units. The studio apartments will be on the same property as the 32-unit Cactus Pete's motel project.

* A new laundromat by Richard Carson, owner and operator of the Blue Sky Trailer Court.

* An 11-mile Highway 93 improvement project beginning on the northside of town and continuing south by Pete Klewitt and Sons Construction Co. The same firm has a contract to pave the roadway from U.S. 93 to the Jackpot Golf course and from U.S. 93 to the Jackpot school.

A long-awaited construction project scheduled later this year will be a courthouse and jail facility. Jackpot is in Elko County and a long way from the Elko County Jail. Officers making arrests in Jackpot, have no place to confine prisoners on a temporary basis or pending additional investigation.

Youths apprehended

TWIN FALLS — Two alleged burglars, ages 11 and 15, were apprehended in Century Automobile, 261 Addison Ave. W. at about 11:40 p.m. Wednesday.

Twin Falls police found the building had been entered and discovered small footprints inside and outside, near the entrance of the building. When a search of the building was made, officers discovered two young boys hiding in the shop area.

On further investigation, two motorcycles were found outside the building near where the youths' bicycles had been. Police said apparently the two had moved the motorcycles from the building but had not been to start them without keys and may have returned to the shop to look for the keys.

Log-a-thon money still coming in Money continues to pour in for the log-a-thon, with more than $100,000 raised so far.

Airport proposal reviewed

The Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce board of directors is set to begin reviewing today a comprehensive report on the feasibility of a regional airport.
The chamber has not yet taken a position for or against a regional airport but is expected to after reviewing the report.
The report was prepared by chamber members John Roshell, a Twin Falls attorney, and Dick Durwell, a Twin Falls businessman.
A chamber of commerce manager Jay Hoyer said the report will be a comprehensive study of transportation in and around Twin Falls, dealing with the airport and all ground transportation.
Hoyer said he expects the report to be detailed and accurate enough for the chamber to take an informed position on the question of a regional airport.
The board of directors will either accept or reject the recommendations in the report and then act to achieve whatever solution they think will best meet Twin Falls transportation needs, Hoyer said.
Hoyer said if the directors think the area needs a regional airport, then they will probably "push for one."

Push urged for new tennis courts

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Tennis enthusiasts have urged Twin Falls school trustees to increase their efforts to build new tennis courts at the high school.
Joan Edwards and Bob Hoag, Twin Falls residents, asked board members Tuesday night why nothing has been done with court funds raised this spring in a jog-a-thon by high school students.
Newly-elected board chairman, Ruth Day, said the board has never been notified of the amount of pledges raised, and no definite plans can be initiated until a report is received.
Dr. James Sawin, superintendent, told the Times-News Wednesday "the board learned that the second-billing for the site coming in. High school Principal Frank Charlton is to make a report at the August board meeting."
Trustee Bob Knighton said the board's position is that "the students said they wanted to raise some money and we said 'Fine. Go ahead,' but that is the last we've heard about it."
Edwards, whose tennis playing son attended the meeting with her, also urged the board to launch a tennis program at the high school.
Hoag and Edwards said there are adult tennis players in the area who would gladly coach without pay and establishing a school tennis team need not be expensive.
Chairman Day said since she has been on the board girls' basketball and track have been launched and adding another lifetime sport means additional money.
Dr. Sawin said other parents also are pushing for swimming and rodeo in the high school sports activities and launching a tennis program would have to be weighed along with them.
Tennis fans, according to Edwards, were told three years ago tennis could not be initiated in the high school that year because the budget was already set, but action was promised for "next year."
No action was taken by the board on either issue.

Henson on trial later in month

TWIN FALLS — Former Magic Valley YWCA director Deborah Henson will stand trial again later this month on embezzlement charges in connection with the disappearance of $2,600 from YWCA accounts.
County prosecutor Frank Dykas refuted the charges against Henson, according to Henson's attorney William Hofffield, of Twin Falls, after the suit was dismissed in April by Magistrate Court Judge Paul Smith on the grounds the magistrate court had no jurisdiction over the case once it had been dismissed in district court.
Hofffield said a preliminary hearing is set to begin July 25 on whether there is probable cause to remand Henson to district court for trial.
Judge Ronald Bruce of Rupert will hear the case.
Hofffield said he has not yet seen the complaint, but he said he thinks Henson will again be charged with 11 counts of embezzlement, as she was in the last trial.
Dykas could not be reached this morning for comment.

Small farms conference set

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman George Hansen has announced a Small Farms Conference for the Northwest area will be held Aug. 22-23 in LaGrande, Ore.

The Small Farms Conference will take place as a series of two-day sessions in each of five geographic regions, sponsored by the Community Services Administration and the Department of Agriculture. They provide an opportunity for more than 400 small farmers in all areas of the country to discuss and advocate issues of priority concern.

The Community Services Administration has awarded an $8,500 grant to the Eastern Oregon

Community Development Council to help cover expenses at the conference. Hansen noted that the funds will also be used to pay for the travel and daily expenses of the small farm delegates who attend. Delegates will be selected at the state level jointly by CSA and USDA and community-based organizations representing them.

Regional sessions will be directed by low-income small farmers and community-based organizations representing them. Major topics on the agenda are access to capital and credit, production and management, marketing, energy needs, farm family living and land use.

Bids exceed estimate

RUPERT — All three bids submitted to build a new elementary school in Paul replacing one destroyed last summer by fire exceeded the $1,650,000 estimate and are being studied for 30 days, according to a Minidoka County School District official.

Superintendent Wayne Fagg said the bids are being studied by the district's architectural firm of Kolbo, Bowman, Smallwood and Associates of Twin Falls.

He said they will be looking at how to trim the lowest bid down by at least $138,000. That is how much the bid is too high even after alternate items are deleted from the contract.

If the architects find the bids unacceptable, then the school district would have to readvertise, Fagg said.

Low bidder was Brennan Construction Company of Pocatello at $1,938,800, followed by Clark Brothers Construction of Idaho Falls at $1,975,000 and Nielsen and Company of Twin Falls at $2,083,600.

Board chief named

FAIRFIELD — Tommy Spackman is the new chairman of the Camas County School board. He replaces Leroy Packham, who did not seek re-election.

Lowell Ruby was named vice chairman. New trustees sworn into office were Melvin Fletcher, Bill Simon and Boyd Eklund.

Trustees will continue to hold monthly meetings at 8 p.m. the second Monday. A contract was offered to Mary Flinn, of Piler, to teach here this fall.

Chairman re-elected

BLISS — Larry Graves was re-elected chairman of the Bliss School board at the annual business meeting Monday night.

Rhonda Wood is vice chairman and Mick Hobbey was elected treasurer. Wood was sworn in for a new term.

The board approved hiring of two new teachers, Mary Lynch of Boise for a combined first and second grade classroom, and Tom Henderson of California for social studies.

Dick Flores, superintendent, said the year end fiscal report shows a carryover of about $4,000. He said at a special board meeting July 6 a contract was awarded to Idaho Electric of Jerome to rewire the Bliss school building for $13,900.

Evening with GOPs

FILER — Vern Ravenscroft, Republican gubernatorial hopeful, is inviting the public to an evening of entertainment and an opportunity to get acquainted with a number of republican candidates Saturday at the county fairgrounds.

The event begins at 7:30 p.m. and continues until 9:30 p.m. with time for questions and answers for Ravenscroft and other candidates who will be attending.

Members of the Idaho Old Time Fiddlers will be playing for the group and refreshments will be served.

All interested persons are invited to attend and participate in questions and meet with the candidates.

Refreshing afternoon

CARL Oneida, 13, Shoshone, found the Little Wood River which runs along side of Shoshone City Park to be a refreshing spot on a recent hot day in the Magic Valley. Youngsters like Oneida have been taking to the water in increasing numbers to escape the 80-plus temperatures. More hot weather is forecast this weekend.

Five judges selected for pageant

TWIN FALLS — Judges for the Miss Twin Falls Pageant, Saturday night in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium have been selected.

Naming the new Miss Twin Falls and runnersup from the 14 contestants will be five outstanding Idaho residents and leaders in their communities.

They include Elaine Evans Dilley, Boise; Dr. Larry E. Stokes, Preston; Rhonda H. Terry, Rexburg; Jack Henrius, Boise, and Myrle Seehusen, Iona.

Mrs. Dilley has worked with pageants the past 21 years and has been active in the Miss Rodeo America contests. She is a member of the board of directors of the Miss Idaho Scholarship Pageant and has judged many contests. She is purchasing director for the Mountain States Tumor Institute, Boise.

Dr. Stokes, a Preston dentist, is former president of the Preston Lions Club and has served as a leader of the Latter Day Saints Church Regional Cultural Arts Festival. He has been active in a number of summer theater organizations. He works with the Boy Scouts of America leadership training program and has served as chairman of the Miss Franklin County pageant the past two years.

Ms. Terry, a former Miss Idaho, won the $1,000 talent award in the Miss America pageant for her talent in sewing. She attended Utah State University to major in fashion merchandising and now works for Block's Clothing Store. She has judged a number of pageants in the past several years.

Mrs. Seehusen has served as co-chairman of the Miss Idaho Falls Pageant and has judged many other area contests. She has been affiliated with the pageants for the past 10 years and is an accomplished vocalist. She has performed with a number of musical groups in her area in recent years.

Jack Henrius is the owner of Intermountain Glass Co., Boise. He is a past president of the Miss Boise Pageant Inc. and was executive director of the Miss Idaho Pageant in 1965. He has judged state and local pageants in Idaho, Montana and Oregon and has worked as associate producer of several Miss Idaho pageants. He is also president of the Boise Music Week organization.

J. Dee May, member of the sponsoring Twin Falls Lions Club, is general chairman of the 1978 Miss Twin Falls Pageant. He said the competition will be exceptionally keen with 14 talented and beautiful young women competing.

Don Rahe, who assists May as publicity chairman, said the Miss Twin Falls event is a preliminary to the Miss Idaho and Miss America pageants and will be conducted with the same standards.

The pageant opens at 8 p.m. in the CSI auditorium with Burt Hulsh as the singing master of ceremonies.

Tickets are on sale in advance by the 14 contestants and by members of the Lions Club. They may be picked up at Alexander's men's stores in Lynnwood and on the Downtown Mall or at the door Saturday night.

A total of $2,450 will be awarded to the winning girls.

A scholarship of $450 will go to Miss Twin Falls. She will also receive a $125 wrist watch and an expense paid trip to Boise for the week-long Miss Idaho event.

The pageant is open to the public and will include appearances by the contestants in evening gown and swimsuit competition and in talent competition. Contestants this year include Teresa Assendrup, Barbara Beckstead, Peggy Eden, Sandra Kaye Graves and Ronda Bowlin, all Twin Falls; Denise Nadine Weaver and Darlene Wort, both Wrmadell; Brenda Bragg, Jerome; Jennifer Bara, Valerie Adams and Kathryn Louise Hamilton, all Buhl; Tina Louise Brutke, Hazelton; Mary Jo Byrne, Sun Valley, and Dell Diane Haffin, Kimberly.

A different look at history

KENNEWICK, Wash. (UPI) — At first glance, Robert Watts nearly threw out the old newspapers that he found while cleaning his mother's home, but decided to untie the string and take a closer look.

As he started reading one of the yellow and aged papers, Watts came across a story that began:

"This evening about 9:30 p.m. at Ford's Theater the president sitting in a private box with Mrs. Harris and Major Rathburn, was shot by an assassin who suddenly entered the box and approached behind the president."

What Watts had found was an extra edition of the New York Herald dated April 15, 1865. The 113-year-old newspaper was found wrapped in a 1928 edition of the old Seattle Star newspaper.

Watts said both papers were yellow and aged, but the 1865 paper was in remarkably good condition. He has framed the newspaper to preserve it.

After living in the same house for 51 years, Watts' Mother, Emily, decided to move in with a daughter, prompting the house cleaning and discovery of the newspaper.

Anna Watts said her mother-in-law is a collector and "never throws anything away," adding that she considers the newspaper a "valuable find, a different look at history that most of us never have a chance to see."

The 1865 newspaper also described the stabbing of Secretary of State William Seward, but the main story dealt with the Lincoln assassination and continued: "The assassin then leapt upon the stage brandishing a larger dagger or knife and made his escape in the rear of the theater."

"The pistol ball entered the back of the president's head and penetrated nearly through the head. The wound is mortal."

"The president has been insensible ever since it was inflicted and is now dying."

Hopkins heads board

BUHL — Howard Hopkins, serving his first term as a member of the Buhl School Board, was elected chairman Tuesday night during the board's annual meeting.

He succeeds Richard Norris who has served the past year.

The board also elected Kathleen Lunte as vice chairman and Lila Bell as clerk.

Board members voted to change the regular meeting date from the second Tuesday to the last Tuesday of each month.

This will avoid conflicts with other meetings in Buhl.

In other business, the board approved the firm of Hepworth and Nungester as legal representatives again and discussed teacher vacancies.

Superintendent Robert Pratt said there are only three to four positions to be filled and many applications on file.

Upcoming report to help Americans fight health wars

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The surgeon general will issue a major report this fall designed to help Americans fight their wars against fat, alcoholism and many other costly, everyday health problems, HEW Secretary Joseph Califano said Wednesday.

He said a sweeping report — the first of its kind by the surgeon general — will try to help people avoid all types of health dangers, in the preventive medicine manner.

"It will be based on studies of how healthy individuals manage to stay that way and what the government can do by way of public education."

"It will be the first surgeon general's report in that area," Califano said. "I have asked him to work on it with care. I think it will be an important part of our program to cut health care costs."

In an interview, Califano also:

- Accused Congress of becoming increasingly vulnerable to special interest lobbyists.
- Said his Health, Education and Welfare Department is ready to crack down on colleges that lack equal sports programs for women, although those schools probably will not lose federal funds in September.

The upcoming report by Surgeon General Julius B. Richmond would appear to be the government's most comprehensive health report since the surgeon general's office issued its controversial study of smoking and health 14 years ago.

"It will cover nutrition, obesity, alcohol, environmental health and other problems," Califano said.

He said it would also touch upon the hazards of smoking, but that subject will be dealt with in much greater depth by a follow-up smoking and health report to be issued next year.

On this fall's report, a spokesman for Richmond said a preventative health task force is busy analyzing, for example, the effectiveness of sickness prevention in neighborhood health centers and migrant worker programs.

The spokesman also said much of the new effort will be devoted to educating both health officials and the public on everything from childhood immunization to the detection of such diseases as high blood pressure and some forms of cancer.

On another subject Califano noted that many members of Congress charge HEW with reluctance to give up power and funds.

"But... there are hundreds of special interest groups in this city," he countered. "And there are now literally hundreds of subcommittees in the House and the Senate that are responsive to their interests."

"I did not notice the House of Representatives cut specific programs in the HEW appropriations bill. That didn't happen. That, they leave up to the executive branch and the secretary to do because they're not prepared at this point to take on these (special interest) groups."

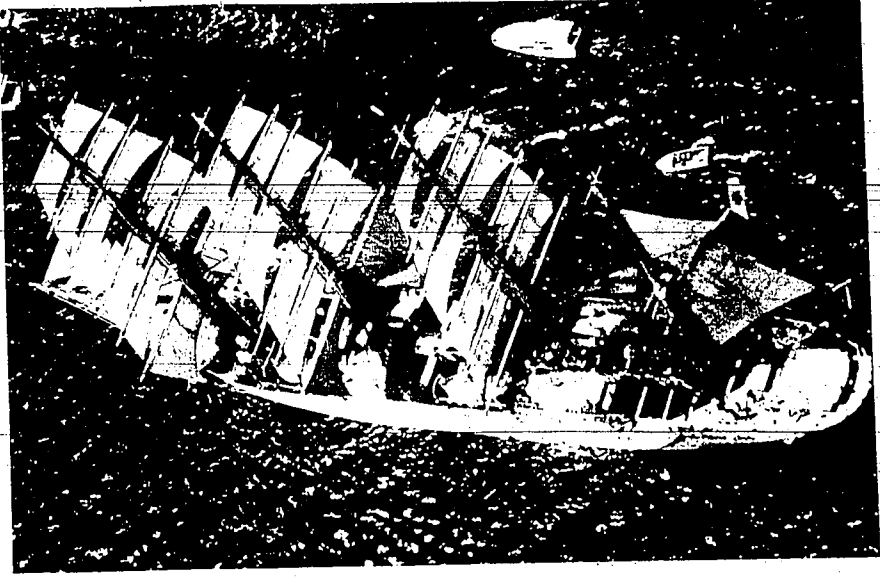

He said new House rules on appointing subcommittee leaders have "weakened the power of the House leadership to lead and strengthened the ability of lobbyists to fight."

Califano also said the nation's colleges have until July 21 to comply with the Title IX amendment to the National Education Act by providing equal sports programs for women and men.

"But it's unlikely that any college or university will lose funds because of due process under the law to appeal any HEW ruling," he said. "Almost certainly, if they have reasonably good lawyers, they will have time to come into compliance."

Meanwhile, Califano said, he expects HEW to sign a contract within a couple of weeks with the American Council on Education, under which the council would advise colleges on how best to stop slighting girls and women in sports programs.

"My own judgment," he said, "is that, over the long, happy, most effective thing for making Title IX 'fit' in the athletic area in colleges and universities is getting the AEC deeply involved on our side."

Tall ship calls

THE Japanese training ship Nippon Maru enters Puget Sound under full sail to begin a five-day stay in the Seattle area. The bark, four masted, full rigged, carries 20 officers, 40 seamen and 78 cadets.

Utility looking for wrecker ball

DALLAS (UPI) — For two weeks Trinity Utility Services Inc. has been running a dissection, looking for something that fell off one of their trucks: a 400-pound wrecker ball.

Company officials said the ball was last used June 29 to help tear down a building, but somewhere between the building and the company's garage the ball fell off the crane that was being transported on a flatbed truck.

The officials said they retraced the route the truck took and stopped on a road called Shady Grove, where they found a huge crater in the street — but no ball.

"We also saw a small trench where someone obviously dragged the ball to the side of the road," said office manager Jack Clifton.

Tobacco industry upset by anti-smoking effort

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has upset the tobacco industry by aiming its anti-smoking campaign at teenagers, the same group the cigarette companies try to get "hooked," HEW Secretary Joseph Califano Jr. said Wednesday.

Califano said the anti-smoking crusade has not come under political pressure from President Carter or his administration to ease it for fear of alienating tobacco state voters.

"There's no single thing that Americans can do that will better improve their health, their longevity, reduce cancer, reduce heart disease, reduce emphysema, than quit smoking," Califano said in an interview. "Take the Social Security disability program alone," he said, "it is costing the American people $15 billion dollars this year in disability payments and $1 billion dollars of these payments are attributable to cigarette smoking, to heart disease, cancer and respiratory diseases, like emphysema and chronic bronchitis, caused by cigarette smoking."

As for allegations HEW is paying oil lip service to the anti-smoking campaign because of political considerations, Califano said:

"No. Last year the budget for the Office of Smoking and Health was $90,000. The budget that I've asked for will be roughly $6 million in fiscal 1979 and I expect to get that from the Congress."

"That's an increase of more than six times. A lot of that money will be targeted on teen-agers. I think the reason we've had the severe reaction from the Tobacco Institute and tobacco companies is because we're now targeting on the same audience that they're targeted on."

"Seventy-five percent of the people who smoke begin to smoke and acquire the habit before they're 21 years old, and that's the group we're going to target on. Every year that goes by beyond 21 it becomes less likely that you'll smoke, and virtually nobody in this country smokes after age 25 or 30."

"It's a myth that people make a conscious adult decision on whether to smoke or not to smoke, weighing the risks of cancer and heart disease. The people that begin to smoke in this country are 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 years of age. That's when the tobacco companies get them hooked."

Califano said Carter personally supports the program.

He also said part of the research money will go to study how young people behave and to see which approaches, including hypnosis, are effective in getting smokers to drop the habit.

Tarantulas get new image

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (UPI) — Dale Lund eyed the tarantula spread menacingly across the expanse of his hand and said: "Eventually, they just look like an eight-legged hamster."

Lund, 29, is helping develop a new image for the large spiders traditionally cast in the villain's role in jungle and horror movies as an evil lurking on the wall or at the foot of the bed.

"They're really very docile," he said, adding that tarantulas are becoming increasingly popular as pets.

Lund has been developing his curiosity about the huge spiders since he bought his first one 14 years ago in an effort to overcome a childhood fear of creepy, crawly things.

Certainly the spider was the most frightening living thing he could think of, he bought the tarantula but kept it for two years sealed behind heavy glass and wood with a double padlock on the door, just to be safe.

But when Lund set about attempting to learn what he could about his new house guest, he found there was little known about the creatures.

Since he could find only one book written on tarantulas 1 that one out of print —

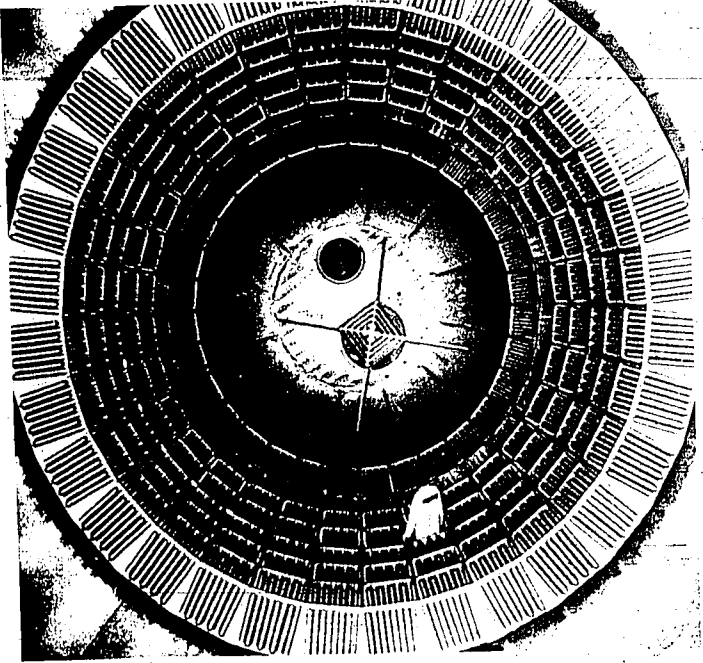

Lund decided to write one himself. He titled the book, published in 1977, simply "All About Tarantulas."

Now the tarantulas have brought Lund, who makes his living as a bank teller, a degree of fame, at least among tarantulaphiles.

He began publishing early this year the "Tarantula Times," a newsletter to share information on the spiders.

He's also formed the American Tarantula Society, a club which now has 61 members.

Lund admits he's still squeamish about the large spiders.

Feds review irregularities in pap tests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department is investigating alleged irregularities in some 640,000 pap tests conducted for the Air Force and a few suspected cancer cases have turned up in samples rechecked so far, federal officials said Wednesday.

The tests under review were conducted by a private medical contractor, from 1972 through 1977, on Air Force women and female service dependents at bases around the nation.

Col. William Cowan, an Air Force pathologist, told reporters a spot check of 1,200 of the tests — reported "normal" by the contractor — has already turned up "major discrepancies" in about 3 percent of the cases.

He said about one-third of the discrepancies, or roughly 1 percent of those checked so far, involved abnormalities that might be linked to cancer.

Pap smears are used to detect vaginal and cervical cancer. Cowan said the Air Force has contacted the women whose rechecked tests indicate abnormalities, but does not yet know the results of their re-examinations.

He said doctors will recheck some 32,000 tests done by the contractor between June and September 1977, when the contract expired, because these would involve women least likely to have had a repeat examination.

But Cowan said the Air Force is also urging that anyone who had a pap test at one of the 94 U.S. installations involved since 1972 contact a doctor if she has not had a succeeding test at a base not served by the contractor in question.

The company was identified as Automated Medical Services of Ohio Inc., headquartered in Mansfield, Ohio.

Officials said its contract was not renewed when it expired last Sept. 30 because of allegations that improperly trained employees were analyzing the tests and acting in supervisory roles.

There was no immediate explanation of the nine-month delay in rechecking tests. But Air Force officials said it had been necessary to subpoena the pap smear slides from the laboratory, a step taken only last Monday.

A Justice Department spokesman would say only that the department is looking into the case.

Other officials said a federal grand jury in Cleveland was hearing testimony.

In Cleveland, U.S. Attorney James R. Williams declined to discuss the grand jury case, but said the FBI is investigating.

Cowan said the company was hired to assist Air Force clinics overburdened with pap test requirements, and had analyzed about 20 percent of all such Air Force tests over the five year period.

The Air Force requires its service women to have pap tests once a year and performs them on a voluntary basis for dependents of servicemen.

PARAMEDICS WORK OVER JUANITA RUIZ ... after she was buried in trench

Child, 3 1/2, buried

SOUTH GATE, Calif. (UPI) — Little 3 1/2-year-old Juanita Ruiz, South Gate, was found buried in a shallow trench Tuesday and was in critical condition.

A spokeswoman at Martin Luther King Jr. Hospital in South Gate said the little girl was in the intensive care unit of the pediatric ward and was in a coma and may have brain damage.

The child was found face down in a three-foot trench behind a neighbor's house with dirt dumped on her body. Her clothing was found in a nearby trash can. She was completely nude when she was found.

The police are questioning two boys in the burial.

Envoy Young under fire

PARIS (UPI) — U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young said in an interview published Wednesday that while the Soviet Union puts dissidents on trial, hundreds of "political prisoners" are held in U.S. jails.

The remarks were branded as "lies" by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who said Young should be fired if he could not substantiate the charge.

The Paris newspaper Le Matin interviewed Young in Geneva, where he was attending a meeting of the U.N. Social and Economic Committee.

He was asked about the trial of Soviet dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg on the eve of the Geneva SALT negotiations between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Young was quoted as responding, "Oh, that (trial) certainly is a gesture of independence on their part. But that will not hinder the SALT negotiations."

"And then one does not know what can happen to dissidents. After all, in our prisons also there are hundreds, perhaps even thousands, of people whom I would call political prisoners." He did not elaborate.

"Ten years ago I myself was tried in Atlanta for having organized a protest movement," Young said. "And three years later I was a legislator from Georgia."

"It's true that things do not change so quickly in the Soviet Union but they change also. I think the current Soviet dissidents could well be the salvation of the Soviet Union, that they are a natural development of Soviet society, but that the leaders still have not understood."

Goldwater said in a speech on the Senate floor Young's statement was a case of "the U.N. ambassador telling the Russians we do the same thing" as they do.

Hagerman re-elects school board chief

HAGERMAN — Dean Williams was re-elected chairman of the Hagerman school board Monday night.

In other reorganization at the annual business meeting, Leu Koopman was retained vice chairman.

Jim Hendee was reappointed treasurer. Other trustees include Vern Mavencamp and Kilty Jones.

Trustees decided to keep the same book and hot lunch fees as last year. Students are charged 45 cents in the grade school, 50 cents for high school and teachers pay 75 cents for the school lunch.

Ken Black, superintendent, said with the exception of carpet cleaning and general cleaning, all summer repair work is completed. This includes painting and asphaltting of the parking lot.

The board will advertise for a person to wash dishes in the hot lunch program. The post will be filled at the August board meeting.

Open house slated at canning kitchen

TWIN FALLS — An open house at the Twin Falls Canning Kitchen is planned for Friday to allow the public to inspect canning facilities.

Mildred Eslinger, kitchen manager, said guided tours will be conducted through the kitchen during the day for interested persons.

The kitchen is community owned and open to anyone wishing to can by using commercial type facilities.

A $5 fee entitles any individual to use the kitchen any day it is open during the entire season. In addition the patron then pays a fee per can to cover cost of the cans and provide maintenance of the kitchen.

Reservations must be made for canning chili, pork and beans or ham and beans. Recipes for these items, pickles, jams and other canning items are available at the kitchen.

Boston, 'Frisco take different routes into second half

The major league baseball season resumes Thursday with the Boston Red Sox poised to stay the New York Yankees and the California Angels and San Francisco Giants hoping to prove they are the best remaining clubs.

The Philadelphia Phillies, with a 4½-game lead in the National League's East are the only defending division champions and pre-season favorites who reached the All-Star game break in first place. The defending champion Kansas City Royals and Los Angeles Dodgers are each second in their divisions but the New York Yankees — ah, yes, the New York Yankees.

The plight of Manager Billy Martin's Yankees is so severe that the world outside George Steinbrenner's jurisdiction may decide to move his New Year's Eve celebration up to mid-August. Or more exactly, that hoped-for giddy hour when the Red Sox mathematically eliminate the Yankees from the race.

The Red Sox will be at home to Texas Thursday — with Chicago at New York, Detroit at Seattle, Toronto at California, Kansas City at Milwaukee and Minnesota at Baltimore in the American League. National League games have San Francisco at Pittsburgh, San Diego at Chicago, Los Angeles at St. Louis and New York at Cincinnati.

The Red Sox, traveling at a pace that would threaten the 1934 Cleveland Indians' AL record of 111 victories in one season, hold a nine game lead over the second-place Milwaukee Brewers and 11½ big ones over the Yankees. With Jim Rice heading the toughest top-to-bottom batting order in the majors and an apparently steady if uninspired pitching staff, the Red Sox don't look like a team which is about to fold.

The Yankees, on the other hand, look like one that may already have folded. Torn by internal strife, rocked by injuries and struggling with highly-paid pitchers who can't or won't pitch, the Yankees hardly look like a team about to stage a formidable second-half drive. That "peculiar relationship," which goes to the heart of the team, was even evident during the All-Star game festivities. The Yankees proved an embarrassment to the league as a whole as they carried their clubhouse squabbles into the public forum.

The Angels hold a one-game lead in the American League West but most baseball men agree that the Royals are the team to watch. The two-time champion Royals are rated the class team of the division. They have failed to live up to their potential in virtually every phase of play this year, however, and there also are signs of behind-the-scenes kicking.

In such an atmosphere, the division championship is considered "up for grabs" among the Angels, Texas Rangers and Royals with the Oakland A's and Minnesota Twins currently close but still considered outsiders.

The Giants are on top in the National League East primarily because of an excellent pitching staff headed by 12-game winner and All-Star pitcher Vida Blue. Their lead over the Dodgers and Reds is only two games and three games, respectively, so they can expect to have severe pressure exerted on them.

In the case of both the Dodgers and Reds, the performance of one key pitcher could make the difference. Don Sutton, one of the premier pitchers in the league, has a 9-6 record and 3.91 earned run average for the Dodgers while Tom Seaver, a three-time Cy Young Award winner, has a 6-7 mark for the Reds.

The Phillies, gunning for their third straight National League East title, have a 4½-game lead over the Chicago Cubs and a seven-game lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Phillies got off to a slow start with the game along fast in late June and July and are expected by baseball men to win the division race handily.

RACER Chuck Swift, Seattle, will be one of the featured wheelstanders this Saturday night at Intermountain Raceway in Pocatello. Swift's 1,000-horsepower hemi-powered Dodge Challenger travels the entire quarter-mile on only the rear wheels at nearly 130 miles per hour.

Special attraction

Wheelstanding exhibition to highlight Pocatello races

POCATELLO — The Northwest's two top wheelstanding machines will highlight this Saturday night's drag races in Intermountain Raceway, three miles west of Pocatello.

Jerry McBoe, Walla Walla, Wash., will be competing against Chuck Swift, Seattle, in an event that will see both automobiles roar off the starting line in the 1,000-horsepower machines and remain on the rear wheels only through the quarter-mile at nearly 130 miles per hour.

McBoe, a junior college teacher, drives a 455 cubic inch supercharged Vega valued at over $25,000. Swift, a nationally known wheelstanding pilot, handles a Dodge Challenger powered by a 44 cubic inch Chrysler supercharged engine.

Saturday's event has been titled the Intermountain "Fox Hunt" by track owner Jim Hennessy. All women, aged six to 65, will be admitted free.

Utah dragsters have again begun to dominate the competition bracket. However, in the modified division, Twin Falls' Dave Austin has emerged the strongest runner in his E/modified production 1957 Chev, an entry that runs through the standing quartermile in 11.40 seconds at 120 miles per hour.

Super stock action has been dominated by Dan Brown, Salt Lake City, in a Camaro and Keith Lynch, Granger, Utah, in a '69 Nova. Stock eliminator has been a wide open affair with strong entries from four different states.

Pocatello favorite Al Stelmets, driving an Olds 442, is still looking for his first stock trophy of the season.

Gates will open Saturday at 1 p.m. with eliminations and wheelstanders scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Eight-year-old son dominates Rose's working, playing hours

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you asked Pete Rose to choose between his kids, like most fathers, he wouldn't.

He'd tell you he's crazy about them both, Fawn, his 13-year-old daughter, and Pete, Jr., his 8-year-old son.

But all his hopes, all his dreams, are clearly entwined with devilish, capricious young Pete, who wears a replica of his father's Cincinnati uniform, practically to bed with him and is a major league in the making if ever you saw one.

The two kids could be one of the reasons Pete Rose and his wife, Karolyin, are back together again. They had broken up briefly, but the Reds third baseman says the problem is all over.

"It was my fault," he admits. "She's a good lady. Sometimes I think she's too good for me."

Rose's wife was with him for the All-Star Game in San Diego and so was Pete, Jr., wearing his uniform that Frank Torre, vice president of Rawlings, had specially made up for him.

Young Pete was never more than a few feet away from his father's side in the clubhouse before Tuesday night's contest in San Diego and for that, the man the Reds' switch-hitter had to thank was National League manager Tom Lasorda.

"He let my little boy come into the clubhouse and I'll never forget him for that," said an appreciative Rose, shining his baseball shoes in front of his locker before the game. "I told him (Lasorda) I didn't want Pete to get in the way and I'd be bald to me. 'I love you sure it's no imposition for him to be in the clubhouse, because I can understand how it would be if all the batters brought their kids in,' but he told me it was perfectly all right."

Until this season, Pete Rose's boy had been a familiar figure in the Reds' clubhouse in Cincinnati, but now it's different. Sparky Anderson, the Reds' manager, laid down a rule whereby the players' children are allowed in the dressing room only after a game, and then only if the Reds win.

"I don't blame Sparky," Rose said. "I have a lot of respect for him, but I think this new rule of his all goes back to winning and losing. One day last season after we lost a ballgame, Sparky walked through the clubhouse and saw 25 people in it he didn't even know. He said, 'That's it. From now on, no unauthorized people in the clubhouse. No exceptions.' I told him I didn't think he could put a member of my family in the same class as outsiders. He said if he made an exception for one, he's have to do it for all and he wasn't going to do that."

"Look," Rose added, getting back to the present, "I want my boy to be a ballplayer. Why would I want him to be anything else? It was good enough for me, wasn't it? It's a great life."

At that moment, Pete, Jr., walked over to his father. He had just come from Lasorda's private office in the home team dressing room in San Diego Stadium.

"Mr. Lasorda's gonna make a trade for you," the boy told his old man.

"You want me to go?" Rose asked, still shining his shoes.

"No," said Pete, Jr.

"When the locker room ran off again, Rose put the shoes inside his locker and talked about his boy some more.

"Pete said he wants me to be a Dodger instead of a Red. I never heard him say a thing like that before. Kids are really something, aren't they?"

Kansas St. begins rebuilding program

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — For Kansas State, a school where nothing comes easy, something finally came easy.

The troubled Big Eight university Wednesday named DeLass Dodds as the seventh full-time athletic director in its history, to replace John "Jersey" Jermier, who was asked to resign last May when irregularities turned up in the football program.

Dodds is an alumnus of Kansas State who spent 14 years as the track coach of the Wildcats and three months as the acting athletic director before leaving to join the Big Eight office as the assistant commissioner in August 1976.

The 41-year-old Riley, Kan., native was the logical choice to sort out the plethora of problems in the Kansas State athletic department.

"This was an easy decision for us," said Kansas State President Duane Acker. "DeLass Dodds is highly respected by all who know him. He is a demonstrated winner and as a coach he did it by hard work. His experience in the Big Eight assignment will serve him well here."

Kansas State has had problems on the football field for quite some time, having won only five games during the last three seasons, with a string of six straight last place finishes in the Big Eight. The Wildcats have not won a conference game since 1974.

But an investigation by the conference office this spring turned up irregularities off the field as well. Kansas State was found to have used 20 football scholarships over the NCAA limiting the three-year coaching tenure of Ellis Rainsberger.

As punishment, the Big Eight placed the school on indefinite probation, stripped away $125,000 in conference-generated revenue for each of the next three academic years and reduced football scholarships by 20 over the next three years.

Rainsberger was fired, as was Jermier, with Jim Dicke taking over as football coach and now Dodds as athletic director.

As an athlete at Kansas State, Dodds captured the Big Seven 400-yard dash title as a junior in 1958. He also anchored two conference champion mile relay teams.

"I'm looking forward to helping develop a total athletic program at Kansas State," said Dodds.

"Athletics is an important part of a major university like Kansas State. I will work closely with the faculty, students and alumni to ensure that intercollegiate athletics makes the maximum contribution to the development of men and women athletes and to the pride and spirit of the total university."

"I have great admiration for DeLass' abilities and I applaud Kansas State University in selecting him to be its director of athletics," said Big Eight Commissioner Charles M. Nelms.

"He enjoys the respect of everyone associated with the conference."

Rockies move to New Jersey

NORTH BERGEN, N.J. (UPI) — The new owner of the Colorado Rockies says the hockey team will be playing two years from now in a newly completed arena at the Meadowlands Sports Complex.

The announcement was made Wednesday by Arthur Imperatore, president of A-P-A Transport Corp., who bought the team for $7 million. He said he reached an agreement to move the team to New Jersey when an arena is finished.

At a news conference in Denver and through a spokesman in North Bergen, the trucking firm president said the Rockies will stay in Denver for the next two seasons.

Imperatore added that the move is subject to the approval of the National Hockey League's board of governors, which meets July 25 in Toronto.

The New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority will build a basketball and hockey arena for use by the Denver club and the New Jersey Nets of the National Basketball Association.

Imperatore's spokesman said the decision for the Rockies to remain in Denver for the next two years was based in part on the lack of an existing facility in New Jersey and the lack of adequate, available playing dates in Madison Square Garden.

The news conference was attended by Denver Mayor Bill McNichols and Jack Vickers, head of the Colorado Rockies.

Imperatore said the decision provides Denver with the opportunity to prove to the satisfaction of the league that it can support an NHL franchise either through expansion or transfer.

"I'm buying the team with the expectation of bringing it into my home area, which is New Jersey," said Imperatore. "I was born there, grew up there and became a hockey nut there."

Vickers said he had no bitterness about the financial losses he incurred or the lease dispute with the city.

"I regret that things didn't go better for us. We lost more money than we ever dreamed of," said Vickers. "Mostly it has to do with professional sports and player salaries and all that."

Police seeking Reggie Jackson

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police Wednesday night said they were seeking to question New York Yankee star Reggie Jackson over a charge by a woman that he struck her at a Manhattan movie theater.

Det. Michael Levine said 23-year-old Cassandra Small of the Bronx charged she suffered scratches and back pains after the outfielder hit her at a Loews Theater.

According to police, the woman said she went up to Jackson for an autograph and he refused. She climbed the wall slapping her, causing her to fall and suffer her alleged injuries.

Levine said police were looking for Jackson for questioning, adding that if it were determined that the Yankee did in fact fight with the woman, he would not be arrested but would be given a desk summons to appear at a later date.

Miss Small went to Metropolitan Hospital.

Det. Michael Levine, Jackson was acquitted on a harassment charge stemming from an incident outside Yankee Stadium following the All-Star game in July, 1977.

Chris Howe, a 14-year-old youth, had charged Jackson stomped on his right wrist, causing a small cut.

Jackson, taking the stand in his own defense in Manhattan Criminal Court, said Howe had made vulgar remarks to him after he had signed autographs. The ballplayer said he then chased the youth, but never touched him.

Judge Harold Enten, presiding at the non-jury trial, found Jackson innocent.

Offshore racing attracts crowd

POINT PLEASANT BEACH, N.J. (UPI) — Over 100,000 spectators jammed the Jersey Shore Wednesday as racer Bill Martin steered his sleek "Bounty Hunter" to victory in the world's largest offshore power boat race — the 1978 Benihana Grand Prix.

"It was a rough race, a smooth race — it was a great race," the Chief said after the race. Two-time national champion and last year's winner Joel Halpern of Bronxville, N.Y., was leading at the halfway point in his new experimental, 38-foot, Cougar Calamaran named "Beep Beep," when he blew an engine and was forced to drop out.

"It's tough when a $50 part brings down a quarter-million-dollar boat," Halpern said afterwards. "But I guess that's the story of racing."

At that point, Martin commandeered his 39-foot, gold-colored cigarette into the lead and kept it in front for the remainder of the two-hour race.

The race which drew 57 boats, the largest turnout of this season's U.S. circuit, was run in two parts: the open class course for larger boats and the performance class for smaller ones.

The open class boats, between 35 to 40 feet, raced for national points over a 178 mile course that consisted of several laps between Asbury Park and Barnegat. The performance course extended between the same two points but was only 100 miles.

Finishing first in the performance class was A. T. Smith, Gross Pointe Shores, Minn., driving his 29-foot "Wolverline."

Bulls will remain in turbulent WHA

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — The Birmingham Bulls' ownership decided to keep the club in the turbulent World Hockey Association for another season rather than playing minor league hockey in the Central Hockey League, Bulls President John Bassett said Wednesday.

Bassett also announced he is renewing efforts to land a National Football League franchise for Birmingham.

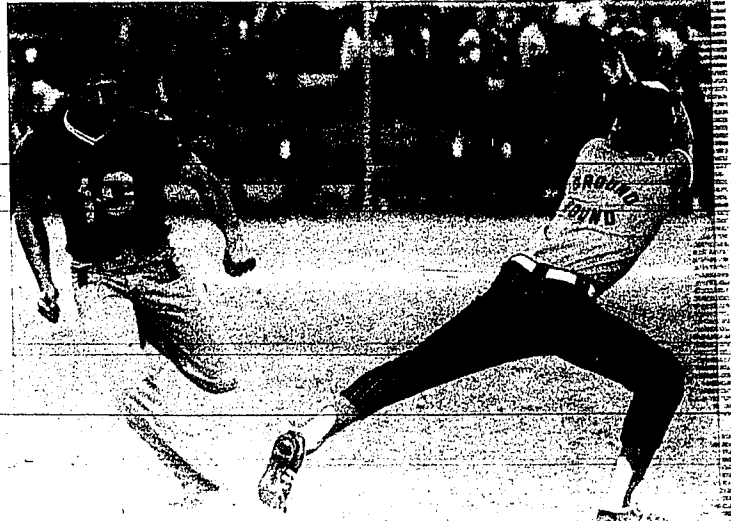

The Bulls had considered affiliating with the Central Hockey League, a minor league, next season because of the uncertainty in the WHA. For the past two seasons several WHA teams have sought to enter the more prestigious National Hockey League, which would have left Birmingham without a league in which to play. Bassett said the 34 limited partners voted unanimously to stay in the WHA.

"I don't think we're a minor league city, and I don't want us to be second class in anything," said Dr. Walter Pittman, one of the limited partners.

Bassett said as far he knows, all of the players who have not been released will return to the squad.

"The limited partnership, which comprises in my view many of the community's leading citizens, has basically reaffirmed their faith in the city of Birmingham and have decided to continue in their efforts to make this a major league sports town," Bassett said.

Farmer's night slated for Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds and New York Mets are set to milk cows, throw eggs and race wheelbarrows and play some baseball — during a four-game series at Riverfront Stadium starting Thursday night.

The Reds, three games back of the division leading San Francisco Giants, will send Tom Seaver to the mound and Pete Rose to the plate Thursday. Seaver is looking for his 10th season win against seven losses, while Rose is hoping to extend his consecutive-game hitting streak beyond 25. Shenanigans are set for Saturday, the Reds' annual Farmers Night attraction. Mets and Reds players will join fans in the farm festivities, with prizes totaling $25,000 awarded to fans after the game.

Rose, who slugged his 3,000th hit earlier in the season, is two fruitful games away from tying the club record of 27, shared by Vada Pinson (1965) and Edd Roush (1920, 1924).

However, the switch-hitting third baseman still is far from the cherished 56-game hitting streak set by Joe Mamma in 1941.

Nagging injuries have characterized the Reds' season thus far. Joe Morgan, with muscle pulls, is hitting only .254 while missing a dozen games. Johnny Bench, meanwhile, has missed 31 contests and carries a .224 average with 11 homers and 30 runs batted into the second half.

Manager Sparky Anderson maintains the Reds must win at least 47 more games to take the division title.

White doesn't mind playing second fiddle to Nancy Lopez

DUBLIN, Ohio (UPI) — LPGA rookie Donna Horton White doesn't mind being caught up in all of the fuss over fellow first-year player Nancy Lopez.

White, a 24-year-old University of Florida graduate, hasn't done too badly in her first year on the LPGA tour and, without Lopez, probably would have been Rookie of the Year.

She has won more than $27,000 going into this week's $85,000 Classic, but Lopez, who has won seven events — including five in a row during one stretch — is the hottest thing to hit the women's tour in the last 20 years.

"Nancy is a good friend," said White, the 1976 women's U.S. Amateur champion and former Curtis Cup and World Amateur teammate of Lopez. "I'm glad to see it happen to her. She's good for the game."

An all-around athlete, it wasn't until just before her junior year in college that she decided to devote full time to golf. She transferred from the University of North Carolina-Greensboro to Florida so she could play year round and it proved to be a worthwhile move.

White at Florida, she also met her husband, Michigan, a West Palm Beach coach and teacher, who has now joined her on the tour.

"It is a very lonely and demanding life," White said of the LPGA tour. "I'm just thankful Mike is able to be with me."

Her best finishes so far are a second at Houston, a third in the Peter Jackson Classic in Canada and a tie for first at HERSHEY, Pa. "I who could really help my confidence," said White, a native of Kingston, N.C. "I'd love to win, but I don't want to put pressure on myself. I want to be patient."

White would like to "settle down some day, have a family and do some teaching and coaching," but right now it's all golf. "Mike and I are both young," she said, "and we're just going to enjoy it a little."

A field of 91 pros and five amateurs will tee up Friday morning at Riviera Country Club in the Columbus suburb of Dublin. The field includes defending champion JoAnne Carner and former winners Judy Rankin, Carol Mann, Sharon Miller and Kathy Whitworth.

Also on the scene after a week off is Lopez, who has won more than $133,000 in 16 events this year.

Only four of the top 30 money winners are about "fresh" in the case, including No. 2, Jane Blalock, the winner of the last two LPGA events, and No. 4, Jan Stephenson.

Ford, Aaron head celebrity list for memorial tournament

BOISE (UPI) — Former President Gerald R. Ford and home run king Hank Aaron head a list of celebrities who will participate in the second annual Danny Thompson Memorial Golf Tournament at Sun Valley and Eldhorn Aug. 18-19.

Boise businessmen Harmon Killebrew, a former Minnesota Twins star, and ex-Congressman Ralph Harding, organizers of the tournament, made the announcement at a news conference Wednesday in Boise.

Killebrew and Harding said they hope to raise at least $30,000 for leukemia research through tournament proceeds. The tournament is held in memory of Killebrew's former teammate Danny Thompson, a player with the Twins and Texas Rangers who died of leukemia in 1976 at the age of 28.

Scheduled to attend are New York Yankee Hall of Famer Mickey Mantle, Bob Allison of the Minnesota Twins, Texas Rangers owner Brad Corbett, Twins owner Calvin Griffith, American League President Lee MacPhail, St. Louis Cardinal great Stan Musial, and Los Angeles Times sports columnist Jim Murray.

Killebrew said other representatives from the worlds of sports, politics, and entertainment will participate in the tournament, and that their names will be announced as confirmed.

The first tournament was held in 1977. The goal was $10,000 and a total of $21,000 was turned over to leukemia research.

Europeans offer to buy Rams, keep Rosenbloom as president

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A European financial syndicate has made an offer to buy the Los Angeles Rams as an investment and keep owner Carroll Rosenbloom as president of the professional football club on a lifetime contract, a Beverly Hills real estate dealer said Tuesday.

Jack Heller, a broker who said he usually handles deals involving foreign investments in U.S. shopping centers and other land developments, said he was not at liberty to disclose details but he declared, "Money is no object."

Rosenbloom was not available for comment on the offer. He has a reputation for going it alone in his many financial dealings.

He was sole owner of the Baltimore Colts and made an $18 million deal for the Rams in 1973, maintaining an intense personal interest and close control of the team. The Rams are money-making at the gate and Rosenbloom is not hurting for cash, it is certain.

Heller said he had no idea why his European contacts would want to invest in the Rams.

"It is a serious offer," he said, "it does include keeping Mr. Rosenbloom on a lifetime contract. We're early in our conversations. My people would like to pull off a deal. I can't disclose the amount of money but money is no object."

"It is a European syndicate that has a tremendous financial capacity. Frankly, I don't know why they're interested. But Europeans are interested in sports too. There's been a lot of publicity about the Rams and my people are enamored of the whole idea."

ST. LOUIS BLUES center Red Berenson, a 16-year veteran in the National Hockey League, announces at press conference that he is retiring as a player to become an assistant coach of the Blues.

Berenson retires to become coach

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — St. Louis Blues' center Red Berenson, a 16-year veteran in the National Hockey League, announced Wednesday he is retiring as a player to become an assistant coach of the Blues.

Berenson will be assistant to Barclay Plager, who was named coach of the team with 26 games remaining last season. "Red has had a magnificent career," St. Louis General Manager Emile Francis said. "He typified what a player should be. I don't think you could find anyone more dedicated or determined."

Exciting his retirement at a news conference, Berenson said "I just don't want to coach anybody older than he."

Berenson, 38, began his professional career with the Montreal Canadiens in 1962. He was the first college player to go straight to the NHL. He played nine games for the Canadiens in the spring of 1962 before returning to the University of Michigan to complete his college degree.

The veteran center also played for the New York Rangers and was traded to the Blues in a Nov. 1967 deal that also sent Plager to the Blues. Berenson was traded to Detroit in 1971 but returned to the Blues in another trade in Dec. 1974.

Berenson played in 987 NHL games, scored 261 goals and had 658 points. On Nov. 7, 1968, he scored six goals against the Philadelphia Flyers to tie a NHL record for most goals in a game. The record was set 24 years earlier by Detroit's Syd Howe.

"I wasn't playing much last year and I figured I was being phased out," Berenson said. "Later in the season I was on a line with Bill Fairbairn and Inga Hammarstrom and we were playing well but it was fruitless because the team didn't make the playoffs. You can't build a team around a 39-year-old hockey player."

Ashe tops Santana

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — In a battle of former Wimbledon champions, top-seeded Arthur Ashe of Miami defeated Manuel Santana of Madrid 7-5, 6-2 Wednesday in the second round of the Hall of Fame tennis championships.

"I'm more of a full-time player, so I guess it's more important for me to win," said Ashe, the 1975 Wimbledon champion.

Santana, who won at Wimbledon in 1966, was playing in his first professional tournament since last year's Hall of Fame matches. Ashe blasted eight aces past his 40-year-old opponent, six of them in the first set to establish command of the match.

"I was serving real well," Ashe said. "I think my serve would have been difficult no matter who was on the other side of the net."

Two other seeds weren't as fortunate as Ashe.

Third seed Hank Pfister of Los Gatos, Calif., a finalist last year here, was beaten by Russell Simpson of New Zealand 6-3, 6-4. Number four Victor Amaya of Holland, Mich., lost to John James of Australia, 6-3, 2-6, 7-6.

In other singles matches Wednesday, No. 2 seed Tim Gullikson of Ocala, Fla., the defending champion, beat Dick Bakstoft of Redlands, Calif., 6-1, 6-3, 6-2.

Sixteenth seed Bob Gittinan of Australia defeated John Austin of Hilling Hills, Calif., 6-1, 6-2 and eighth seeded Tom Gullikson, Tim's brother, of Easton, Pa., beat Mike Machette of Pacific Palisades, Calif., 7-6, 6-2.

Season extended

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission has increased spring chinook limits from four to six and extended the chinook salmon season from July 16 to July 31.

Fish and Game Department officials told the commission the stretch of the chinook run has been better than anticipated and there has been a light catch because of high water.

The extensions apply to waters already opened for fishing.

In addition, the commission extended falconry seasons for waterfowl game bird hunting from Sept. 1 to March 31, 1979. The commission, in making its decision, heard testimony from representatives of the Idaho Falconry Association.

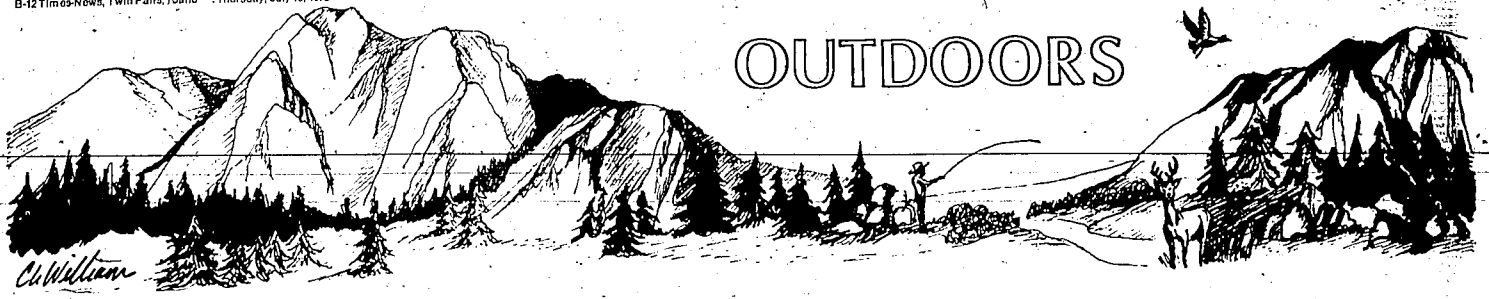

Seasons were set by the commission for:

• Morning doves, Sept. 1 to Oct. 20.

• Cottontails, Mar. 1, 1979 to Aug 31, 1979.

• Crows, Oct. 1 to Jan 31.

The commission ordered a daily bag limit of three in the aggregate of migratory game birds, with a possession limit of six in the aggregate after the first day.

OUTDOORS

Pheasant wintering areas provided by BLM, F&G

By DOUG TULLIS
Times-News sports writer

BURLEY — Pheasant hunters who have hunted the birds in the Magic Valley for years have expressed a hope that the number of pheasants have dwindled drastically in the last 10 years or so but area farmers and two government agencies are attempting an experiment to reverse that trend.

The Bureau of Land Management and the Department of Fish and Game are working with some area farmers to provide 5600 acres of winter cover for pheasants to keep the bird populations from continuing to decrease.

Wildlife Biologists credit modern technology in the way of clean farming methods as the reason much of the winter cover for pheasants has been lost.

"Clean farming techniques including burning ditch banks, cement ditches and circular irrigation systems have eliminated much of the wintering cover for pheasants," BLM District Biologist Kurt Kotter explained.

He explained that in the past when open unfilled ditches were used, the brush and grasses on those ditchbanks provided excellent summer and winter cover for the pheasants but with the introduction of better farming methods, the excellent breeding and wintering grounds were lost too.

In an effort to provide some of the lost winter cover for pheasants and other species of animals, Kotter said his office has identified 57 isolated tracts of BLM land totaling 5637 acres in Cassia and Twin Falls counties which have been used by farmers for raising crops or for storage or for other uses which could be used for the pheasant wintering grounds.

"We really got a handle on it when we held the public meetings in 1974 and people said no to private ownership of the tracts," Kotter said. "That's when we thought, no, maybe we'd better manage them."

As a result, BLM employees began identifying the tracts and work began with the farmers to clear up the right of ownership and use.

"I'd be less than candid if I didn't say the farmers weren't 100 percent in agreement with the program," Kotter added.

Much of the land had been encroached on or been used by area farmers and stockmen as crop lands or grazing lands for years. "Some tracts were used for 30 years or more for farming. Some were used since day one for grazing, so the farmers were not too excited about giving that up," he added.

A game management plan was written jointly by the Fish and Game Department and the BLM and is now being put into effect by Linda Parsons of the BLM and Gary Godwin of the F&G.

The BLM began by developing a map of the tracts of land owned by them. The parcels of land were then examined to determine if farmers and ranchers were trespassing on the land by using it. Farmers and ranchers are still being contacted, Parsons said, but after that is settled, two different routes can be taken.

The first is that the land can be fenced off and signs put up identifying it as public lands and that can be used by the public for hunting. The problem with that, according to Kotter, is that without water, some of the land would not produce much food or cover.

The second alternative is for the farmers to sign a cooperative agreement in which they agree to farm some or all of the land but leave a certain amount of the crops for cover and food for the animals.

Those cooperative agreements provide benefits for both farmers and the public at large, Kotter pointed out. It helps the public to know where their land is; it increases the birds available for hunting; and it allows the farmers to continue to farm the land without having to pay taxes on it.

While the farmers who have used the land for years are not too happy about the changes, Fish and Game Conservation Officer Gary Godwin said the sportsmen should see the pheasant populations holding their own with the help of the tracts.

"What we need is baseline data on what kind and what species are there and what the possible increases will be," Godwin said. Kotter said a study done by the BLM and the Fish and Game Department helped put a peg on just what benefit the protection of the tracts would have on hunting pheasants.

In the study, the benefits were translated into hunter days. A hunter day is one day a hunter will spend in the field hunting pheasants. Using the 5600 acres of land for wintering grounds would provide about 18,000 to 20,000 hunter days, he said, and each of those days is estimated to be worth $19.

"In many instances, the isolated tracts of land will provide the only available native vegetation and if you eliminate native vegetation which some of the species feed on, you eliminate the species," Kotter said.

Of the 57 tracts of land, only 10 will not be accessible to the public, Kotter said that if the tract is an island surrounded by private land, the landowner can legally keep the public out. However, most of the tracts can be reached on a public road or highway.

Kotter said there are things that farmers can do to provide more wintering grounds for the pheasants but they are not economically feasible. "They could leave vegetation along the ditch banks but they can't afford it," he said, because the water can be better and more economically used on crops.

"The only other alternative is for the private sector to do it and they won't out of the goodness of their heart," Kotter explained. He said private companies and individuals could provide the wintering grounds by leasing or buying land but none have approached the agencies about that possibility.

"The pheasants are not native to Idaho or to North America, as a matter of fact, and if it were not for agriculture, they wouldn't be here. Now it seems that agriculture, because of its efficiency, is getting rid of the pheasants. But both governmental bodies there is a time and a place to try to stop the loss of one of Idaho's favorite hunting species. Now is the time and the isolated tracts of public lands are the place.

Good sign

HUNTING should be good where these signs are posted in the Magic Valley as they designate areas that are being specifically used for wintering and nesting grounds for pheasants.

Commission extends salmon season

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission this week extended the chinook salmon season from July 16 to July 31 and increased spring chinook limits from four to six.

Fish and Game Department officials told the commission the stretch of the chinook run is better than anticipated and there has been a light catch to date because of high water.

The extensions apply to waters already opened for fishing.

The commission also took under advisement a request by the Post Falls School District for 40 acres of department land the district wants to use for a future school site.

The land is known as the Ross Point property at Post Falls. The commission agreed to review the request although it has not decided what to do with the property.

In other action, the commission increased its current fiscal year budget to include $20,000 provided by Monsanto and FMC Corp. for continuation of a wildlife study in the phosphate mining area of southeastern Idaho. It also approved disposal of some surplus property.

The department's engineering bureau told the commission it is developing a plan to repair some leakage in Winchester Dam in northern Idaho. It is regarded as good fishing water.

In addition, the commission extended falconry seasons for upland game bird hunting from Sept. 1 to March 31, 1979. The commission, in making its decision, heard testimony from representatives of the Idaho Falconry Association.

Seasons were set by the commission for: —Mourning doves, Sept. 1 to Oct. 29.

—Cottontails, Mar. 1, 1979 to Aug. 31, 1979.

—Crows, Oct. 1 to Jan. 31.

The commission ordered a daily bag limit of three in the aggregate of migratory game birds, with a possession limit of six in the aggregate after the first day.

ORV rules proposed in Interior

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Department of Interior has proposed regulations to control the use of off-road vehicles by designating what areas are open, limited or closed to off-road vehicle use.

The proposed regulations would control the use of four-wheel drive vehicles, dune buggies, motorcycles, snowmobiles and other cross-country machines.

The regulations, if adopted after public comments are received and reviewed, would establish standards for which areas could be designated as open to ORV use, limited and closed. The regulations would cover some 473 million acres of land controlled by the BLM and all the lands would receive one of the three designations.

"Off-road vehicle travel is a recognized use of the public lands, and will continue — there is no blanket closure," Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus said. "These rules, if adopted, would allow us to give careful attention to the benefits as well as the environmental costs of off-road vehicle use in an area by area basis," he added.

Andrus added that comments have been received from groups using ORV's including hunters, stockmen, federal, state, county and local governments and those interested in using the land.

"Those areas designated as 'open' would be those where off-road vehicles may operate subject to operating regulations and vehicle standards to be established under the regulations. A 'limited' designation would mean an area where the use of ORV's would be subject to specific types of vehicle use, times and numbers. The closed designations would mean no off-road vehicles could be used. The 'closed' designation would not be permanent, however, and when conditions permitted, the area could be open again.

Just what a specific area would be designated is dependent on what the character of the land is, what resources need to be protected, public safety and whether there were other uses that conflicted with the ORV use.

"In making the designations, the BLM would be required to minimize damage to resources, harassment of wildlife and other uses," Idaho BLM director William Matthews said. He added that species on the Endangered Species Act list of endangered or threatened species would receive consideration when deciding whether an area would be open, limited or closed.

"The public will have 60 days to comment on the proposed regulations and then the comments will be sent to Washington to be incorporated into the regulations if necessary.

The goal of the BLM is to have 60 percent of the land classified by 1981 and the rest by 1987.

Primitive areas and wilderness areas would be closed to all ORV use permanently. Those areas now under consideration for inclusion in the wilderness system will be open to ORV use if designated by the BLM until designated by congress as wilderness.

Off-road vehicle enthusiasts interested in making comments on the proposed regulations should mail their comments to Director (210), Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240.

F&G to query fishermen

BOISE (UPI) — It soon will be question and answer time at the State Department of Fish and Game, but the end result could mean improvements for thousands of Idaho fishermen.

Some 7,000 anglers soon will be asked what they like and dislike about fishing in the state. Jerry Mallet, fisheries research supervisor, said replies to questions in the "Angler Preference Survey" will help guide the department in setting goals for the management of fishery resources.

The last survey, conducted in 1968, resulted in the establishment of the department's catch-and-release-only program. Such surveys since have become a management tool for improving quality fisheries and preserving species.

The 1978 survey will be a three percent sample of 1977 resident and nonresident license holders. It will ask where and when the angler fished in 1977, what kind of fish were caught, and the type of fishing preferred — lakes and reservoirs or rivers and streams.

Fisheries manager to speak

TWIN FALLS — Local fishermen will have an opportunity to find out just how extensive the warm water fisheries are in the state Tuesday night when the state fisheries manager for the Department of Fish and Game speaks on the subject.

State Fisheries Manager Herb Pollard will address members of the Magic Valley Fly Fishermen and the general public. Tuesday night at 7:30 in room 115 of the Shields building on the CSI campus.

The meeting is open to the public and there is no admission charge.

Copter offers million dollar vacation

TWIN FALLS — While rambling about for ideas for inexpensive outdoor vacations, I came across a little report in one of the science magazines which offered a huge helicopter decked out in the fashion of a motor home.

The copter offered living and sleeping areas along with a bath, toilet facility with a holding tank and room for four.

While inexpensive vacations were the watchword, the customized flying machine could be had at a reasonable $1 million or so. Now that was a couple of years ago and inflation would have increased that considerably.

The advantage of having a large helicopter is that you could go to your favorite lake or stream, find a field and scare everything away while setting down. Your camp is ready to go, you don't have to pack anything for miles over steep trails and the fish just long to be caught.

For the imaginative, the flying machine offered a way to get to the outdoors quickly and without having to wonder if the trail you're on is the right one or whether the bugs will eat you alive along with your Off no. 5.

The one disadvantage offered by the craft was, of course, cost. While a backpacking trip could be had for less than $100, the trip in the copter would run somewhere near $100 a minute. But for the adventuresome soul, what's one or two million?

Along with the helicopter vacation idea, I ran across another wild idea for a vacation in the form of a trip along the Can American or Pan American Highway.

Much of the trip would be paved or nearly paved roads, with the exception of a 250 mile stretch of jungles, swamp and hilly country between Panama and Columbia.

There are roads through that area, if you can call them that. A person can get an idea of how rugged the area is and how difficult it would be to cross it by reading about a group of 23 British troops who did the task in 1972. After the whole ordeal was over, about 100 men finished the trip. Since that time, others have made the trip.

In that beautiful land are foot-long spiders, biting ants, poisonous snakes, electric eels along with such joyous diseases as malaria and cholera.

If that little adventure doesn't appeal to you, for a few bucks, a ship will take you and whatever you are driving or riding around the gap and plant you in just about any port in Panama.

If you can't stand the spiders and snakes of the Darien Gap, settle on a little fishing in Redfish Lake or the Snake River or your fish bowl at home. At least there you are half way safe.

New job

PENSIVE DeLoss Dodds is somber at a press conference Wednesday morning when he was announced as the new Kansas State athletic director.

Let 'em be kids a while longer

FALLS — As surely as the sun was going to set, it was only a matter of when Saturday that someone would get caught up in the great track fever.

The occasion was the Utah-Idaho AAU track meet, which pitted the supposed best out of Idaho and Utah, in five different age classes for both boys and girls.

It was a fun thing to watch — at least for a while but you know, 10 straight 100-yard dashes tend to get a bit boring, especially when they are followed by 10 straight 220-yard dashes and 10 straight 440-yard dashes, etc.

Of course, Meridian had its track club there, the Boise Breezes were there, Rexburg had a team, a couple of Utah towns had teams. Inevitably, someone went up to Coach Jerry Kleinkopf, Twin Falls track mentor, and suggest quite vehemently that he stir himself around and get a Magic Valley track team started.

It was pointed out to him that it would be a boon to himself and his program with all the experience, etc.

Coach Kleinkopf doesn't fire back. He has solid self control. But when we asked him if the question has been asked yet, he acknowledged that it had.

"There are a couple of things that come to my mind when I consider something like that. I know it is unusual and fun, maybe, to see a nine-year-old out running the halfmile and the mile. But, darn it, I feel like these kids have to have some time to play. To play play. I feel like there are so many various clubs and sports and teams that our poor kids are really over organized," he said.

"I look at a track meet like this and I can enjoy things I see just like anyone else. But at the end of it it just comes down to a matter of how much good it is doing the boy or girl. Starting out young undoubtedly is helpful in the technique events, like hurdles, high jumping or something in the weights. But I think nine years old is a little young to start thinking about what a boy or girl is going to be physically best adapted to when he or she is 18. A 5-foot, 4-inch, 120 pound discus thrower who has been throwing for 10 years may have the best form but he's not going to beat a 6-3, 200-pounder whose major problem is overpowering the discus.

In the other things Kleinkopf said, the matter of what the Lord put into the bodies of the athletes will make all the difference. Some people can run fast and some people can run long. Training and conditioning help, of course, in all things but those that have the special speed of the body as well conditioned and get the best out of each athlete. What they did 10 years ago isn't going to help them as seniors in track, I don't feel."

Across the track, Boise State Coach Ed Jacoby similarly enjoyed watching the meet but expressed similar feelings to Coach Kleinkopf. "Everything is so organized in the Boise area that these poor kids don't have a chance to be kids. There being pushed in everything, baseball, basketball, football and now track not counting the many other things like gymnastics," he said. "I often wonder how long it can last" before there is a children's rebellion.

The other thing about summer track is that it definitely is a rich man's game.

Having a meet in Twin Falls is a good break of area youngsters. But considered the speedster from Cedar City, Utah. He traveled from there to the Utah state meet, went home and the next week came to Twin Falls. This weekend he travels from Cedar City to Boise for the sectional. And very probably, next month he will travel to Lincoln, Neb., for the nationals. Now, you are talking about some bucks there because in most cases he's looking at a minimum of three days and two nights on the road. Very probably four and three because he would want to "work out" on the meet track the day before. Usually mom and dad and the little brothers and sister come along and the expenses treble.

It costs $2 per event to enter one of these AAU things. Good things doubtlessly can happen because of the program but just because some 10-year-old might win a 100-yard dash at Lincoln next month doesn't mean he's the best 10-year-old in the nation. What it actually means is that he is the fastest among 10 years olds who parents have the where-with-all to see that he can attend all the pre-national qualifying meets. The actual honor belongs to some share-cropper's son in Tennessee.

or the special endurance are always going to win. For that reason, the coach feels that junior high is plenty early enough to give the athletes a taste of track — and then only for an eight to 10-week period.

"Our kids (that come out for track) work very hard. A large number of them come out for cross country and they run hard and competitively from the middle of August to late October. We try to give them a little time off or some breathing time but generally from the middle of August through May they will be running or working out a lot. That's a long time. Our workouts are more strenuous each year. Our girls have tougher workouts now than our boys had 10 or 15 years ago. We have two days — before school and after — for a large part of each competitive season. I know that is enough to get

Ambro Tiger pointed toward 3 races, one million dollars

NEW YORK (UPI) — Trainer Lou Meitlinis watched Ambro Tiger draw the No. 2 post Wednesday for a July 16 trial race at Monticello Raceway and thought the 3-year-old pacer was in an excellent position for advancing into the fourth running of the $300,000 Gold Rush final and a crack at earning a million dollars for three races.

Ambro Tiger, lightly raced as a 2-year-old, won the Cane Pace at Yonkers last weekend and a victory in the Gold Rush would make him the heavy favorite for the $500,000 Meadowlands Pace on Aug. 3.

"He's proven himself," said Meitlinis. "He wasn't strong enough as a 2-year-old and we didn't want to hurt him. But we thought enough of the horse to keep him eligible. He was in four races, with a second as his best finish." Ambro Tiger, winner in 5 of 13 starts this year, is in a 21-horse field of New York-bred pacers looking to move up to the Gold Rush final. There will be three elimination heats of seven pacers on Sunday, with the first three finishers moving up to the July 23 main event. The fourth place horse with the best time also qualifies for the rich Monticello classic.

Herv Fillion, a 38-year-old Canadian who has won 6,500 races and $24 million in purses, will be in the sulky behind Ambro Tiger.

Listed in Ambro Tiger's division, by pole position, are Kindergarten, No. 1; Happy Reynolds, No. 3; Happy Playboy, No. 4; Gregory Fox, No. 5; Magic Carpet, No. 6, and Flying Sparks, No. 7.

In the first elimination heat, Ram O.J. drew the pole, followed by J.S. Skipper, Four Four Byrd, Bruken, Marty DeTray, Play It Again and Ziggy the Pianist.

Happy Lady, a $15,000 supplementary nomination, has the pole in the second heat. Lining up next to the fast-stepping filly, who has won 13 of 16 career races and is 7 for 9 this year, are Nicky Lou, Vassilis Gern, Bitter Truth, Happy Blue Chilly, Happy Escort and Farr Hanover.

J.S. Skipper and Ziggy the Pianist were the other supplementary entries in the Gold Rush qualifying.

Silk Stockings won the first running of the Gold Rush in 1975 and eventually retired with earnings of $69,894. Oil Burner captured the 1976 race and has been syndicated for $2.7 million. Big Tower scored last year.

Co-favorites win, Walker coppers lose in Trans-Miss

DALLAS (UPI) — Medalist Bob Tway and co-favorites Lindy Miller and Doug Clark won their matches as expected in the opening round of the 75th Trans-Mississippi amateur golf tournament Wednesday, but the event lost its Walker Cup members.

Tway, a member of the NCAA champion Oklahoma State team who won medalist honors by four shots, was in command all the way in eliminating Bob Dickerson of Dallas, 3-and-2.

Miller, a collegiate teammate of Tway's, had to play a under-par golf to dispose of Ted Ferguson of Midland, Tex. Ferguson won three matches in this year's British Amateur.

Clark, winner of this tournament two years ago and a sophomore at Stanford University, played poorly but still survived with a 1-up victory over UCLA's Tom Perince.

The 100-degree heat that baked the Brook Hollow Country Club course took its toll on the older players. Former Walker Cup player John Farquhar, 40, lost to Wake Forest's Gary Pinns, 1-up, and another Walker Cupper — John Grace, 35, of Fort Worth, Tex., lost to Joe Stansberry of the University of New Mexico, 4-and-3.

The day's last two matches had bizarre twists. George Creagh of Nashville, Tenn., knocked a putt in the cup at the 15th hole, but it bounced out. If the ball had stayed in the cup Creagh would have won the match, 1-up.

But after 18 holes the match was tied and Creagh eventually lost to Dale Blackburn of Conroe, Tex., in 21 holes.

And in the final match, Mel Calleder ricocheted his ball off that of his opponent on the 18th hole to tie the match and then beat Bill Holstead of Wichita Falls, Tex., on the first hole of sudden death.

The second round will be played Thursday with the 36-hole finals match set for Sunday.

Clark won't be unknown long

SAN DIEGO — All the big hitters brought their bats here for Tuesday night's all-star game. Jim Rice, George Carew, Pete Rose, George Foster, Joe Morgan, Greg Luzinski, Steve Garvey, George Brett, Carlton Fisk, Richie Zisk and Jack Clark.

Jack who? To some baseball followers, it might be "Jack Who" now but not for long. Jack Clark is the new name in the game. Clark is the 22-year-old right fielder for the Giants who is third in the National League in runs batted in with 61, fifth in homers with 15 and fifth in batting with a .309 average. If the Giants stay in first place in the NL West, he would be a deserving contender for the most valuable player award.

But unlike Reggie Jackson, he won't have to play in New York to have a candy bar in his honor. The orange-wrapped Clark bar was on sale long before the major league scouts checked him out as a high school slugger and pitcher in Azusa, Calif.

"But," he said with a smile, "I was a Giant fan surrounded by Dodger fans. Mays, McCovey, Cepeda, Marichal, Gaylord Perry, the Alou brothers, Jim Ray Hart. That was my team. Being drafted by the Giants was the biggest thing in my life. "No," he added with a pause, "finding the Lord has been the biggest thing in my life."

As a rookie last year Clark was impatient. The common

Tennis clubs merge

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The International Tennis Federation (ITF) decided at its annual meeting Wednesday to merge the ITF and the Davis Cup Nations organization into one world tennis body.

The ITF will organize the 1979 Davis Cup tournament, said David Gray, British ITF secretary general.

The draw for the 1979 Davis Cup tournament will be held at the two-day ITF annual meeting, but will be announced Monday after the next round of this year's cup, Gray said.

In the 1979 52-nations cup, 13 nations will participate in the American zone, 10 in the Eastern zone and 29 in the European zone.

Gray said Rhodesia, who entered an application for ITF membership after the country's white and black leaders agreed an internal settlement, withdrew its application when the country ITF would not accept it.

A Soviet proposal to ban temporarily South Africa from the ITF because of the country's racial discrimination laws will be dealt with at Thursday's meeting, Gray said.

Thursday's meeting will effort a definition of a tennis racket, after recent controversy over the double-stung "spaghetti" racket, which by its extra spin can turn mediocre players into championship contenders.

Shavers slates match

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (UPI) — Heavyweight contender Earnie Shavers will fight a little known Alabama boxer at the Virginia Beach Dome next week, local promoter Ed Owens said Wednesday.

Owens said Shavers, 33, who boasts a 54-6-1 record, 52 by knockouts, will meet Harry Terrell, 23, of Birmingham, in a 10-round main event July 20.

"Terrell is no world beater, but he is a good fighter and it should be a good match," said Owens, who is hoping for a sellout at the 1,700 capacity Dome.

Terrell has a 1-1 record, including a second round knockout April 28 of Canadian champion Horace Kessler.

Shavers lost his two last fights, by decisions to then world champion Muhammad Ali and to Larry Holmes, who last month won a split decision over Ken Norton to win the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship.

Saints sign trio

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The New Orleans Saints came to terms Wednesday with their last three unsigned draft choices while rookies, free agents and veterans streamed into training camp for the first day of physicals.

Contracts were signed with defensive lineman Barry Bennett, the Saints' No. 3 choice; defensive back Eric Felton, their No. 5 choice; and linebacker Francis Chesley, their second selection in the sixth round.

The signings completed negotiations with the team's 12 draft choices.

Marathoner honored

BOSTON (UPI) — Marathon runner Andy West, 19, of Farmington, Conn., jogged into Boston's Faneuil Hall Wednesday in his 2,500 Maine-to-Florida run for muscular dystrophy.

West arrived in the historic "cradle of liberty" at noon Wednesday, where city officials held ceremonies for him and pledged money for his cause.

West is 475 miles into the trip. He was to be in Norwood Thursday, Providence, R.I., Friday, and Hartford, Conn., next Monday.

West took off from Caribou, Maine last weekend. He is running at a 45-mile-per-day clip, and averaging six to eight hours. So far he is running on schedule.

Owner defends Munson

NEW YORK (UPI) — Catcher Thurman Munson had "every right" because of injuries to skip the All-Star Game, New York Yankee principal owner George Steinbrenner said Wednesday on his return from San Diego.

"If the fans really knew the pain that Munson has been playing with, they'd feel he had every right not to try to play in the All-Star game," said Steinbrenner. "Thurman has been playing hurt all year. It's that kind of player. You can never question his desire if you know anything about the man."

The National League scored a 7-3 victory over the Americans when they tallied four runs in the eighth inning off the Yankees' Rich Gossage. The Nationals have won seven straight All-Star games, 15 of the last 16 and have a 30-16-1 edge in the overall series.

Rams sign rookies

FULLERTON, Calif. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams Wednesday signed two rookie free agents with Southern California backgrounds — running back Mark Davis and offensive tackle Tony Rice.

Davis, 21, attended Westminster High School and Golden West College in Orange County where the Rams have their training camp before going on to Colorado State. He weighs 195 and stands 5-9.

Rice, 22, went to Compton High School and Compton Community College in the Los Angeles area before attending San Jose State. He weighs 235 and is 6-2.

Ex-champ ousted

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Therese Hesston of Indianapolis, Ind., Wednesday upset Lancy Smith, the 1974 champion from Snyder, N.Y., in the second round of the 78th annual women's Western Amateur at the Fox Chapel Golf Club.

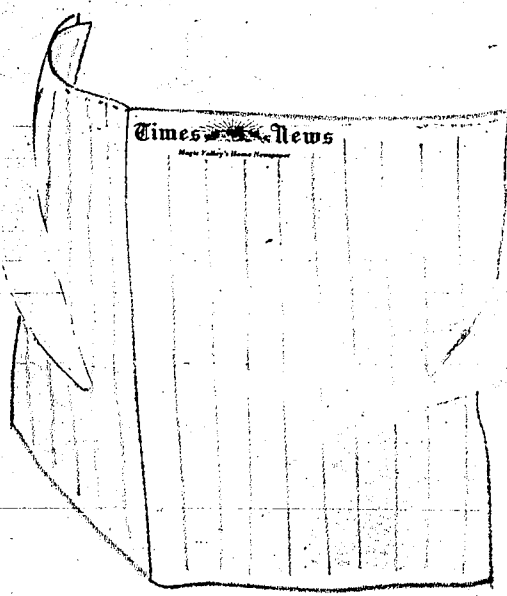

Hesston defeated Smith, one of the last surviving Curtis Cup players in the field, 2 and 1 to move into the third round.

In another upset, Julie Cole of Orlando, Fla., scored a 4 and 3 win over Kelly Fuchs of Phoenix, Ariz., winner of the last two national Public Links Championships.

Beth Dandel, the reigning U.S. amateur champion from Charleston, S.C., scored the day's biggest win by dropping only one hole in defeating Sally Austin of Southern Pines, N.C., 7 and 6.

Carol Scoble, the former U.S. and British champion from Pittsburgh, scored the second round's other big victory when she defeated Debbie Raso, Cape Coral, Fla., 5 and 4.

Small Cassia County town outlives economic upheavals to observe centennial year

OAKLEY — July, 1978, means a hot time in the old — one century old to be exact — town of Oakley.

This southern Cassia County town of 800 persons is the focal point of numerous celebrations this month honoring the 100 years spanning the time since Thomas and Matilda Dayley became the first white settlers in the Oakley Valley.

Following last Saturday's initial festivities, highlighted by a visit from Gov. John Evans, five more days filled with varying activities are on tap for visitors to this farming community.

The first three days include the town's annual Pioneer Days celebration for the Mini-Cassia area, honoring the early Mormon settlers. Many of them settled the region on the orders of Mormon Church patriarch Brigham Young when it was virtually a treeless, arid, sagebrush-filled valley.

The economic impact of agriculture didn't surface in the valley until the early 1950s, according to Bob Archibald, a longtime, retired farmhand, when farmers began drilling wells.

Archibald, who moved to the valley from Utah after the 1929 stock market crash, recalls the 20s and 30s: "The Oakley Valley was mostly sagebrush then. Between Oakley and Burley, especially."

The memory stands out in Archibald's mind because he worked on crews clearing a path for what today is Highway 27 between the two towns.

But Oakley experienced boomtown mining days before the turn of the century when the lure of silver from the nearby South Hillis saw 2,000 people flock to town.

It was a short-lived boom period, however, when the American monetary system was changed in 1893 from a silver and gold standard to just gold.

Oakley's eight elementary schools, one high school, nine churches, two railroads, two banks and two lumber yards dwindled away during the depression and drought of the 1930s.

Oakley survived a rugged period in the early 1900s when the Twin Falls-Oakley Land and Water Co. used townspeople to build the earthen Oakley Dam south of town.

Finished in 1913, the dam stands 143 1/2-foot high and stockpiles water from nearby creeks.

Engineers had estimated a farmer could irrigate an acre of ground with just 1 1/2 acre feet of water stored behind the dam, and it was thought the valley could be turned into a farmer's paradise because of those calculations.

Unfortunately, those numbers proved false. It took twice as much water as had been estimated.

Instead of irrigating 50,000 acres, only 10,000 acres were irrigated with dam water. It wasn't until the advent of the wells Archibald spoke of that the valley economy stabilized once more.

Rita "Skeet" Layton has been with the Oakley Canal Co. for 40 years as bookkeeper and secretary.

With the use of pumps and sprinklers to disperse the well-water, she said, farmers began working as many acres as the engineers had estimated the dam water would stretch five decades earlier.

Mrs. Layton, 69, recalls how the silver-prospecting Vipont Mine 30 miles south of Oakley in Corrine, Utah, was the focal point of the town's economy during the First World War.

Started by two brothers named Vipont during the silver boom days of the late 19th century, the mine switched hands after the gold standard was adopted in 1893. World War I saw the mine reopened and Oakley became a shipping point for southern Idaho. As many as 125 men worked in the mine and another 50 men worked the ore processing mill.

"I can remember we all traveled in buggies," Mrs. Layton said. "My first year in high school we did part of the time, until it got too cold."

That was 1924, she said, and several girls would rent a room in someone's home in town, away from their namilims during the winter months.

"There were two rooms. We slept in one and cooked in the other, our folks would bring most of the food up and we would cook it on a cook stove."

Despite the Oakley Valley's 49 years of up-and-down fortunes, Archibald explains why he stayed: "It seemed the most pleasant place to stay in from year to year. It's had the least disasters like floods, fires. The valley throughout has been pretty nice."

The retired farmhand observes the personalities of the valley people haven't changed through the years either. "No, not too much. There's quite a few new people moving in now and of course the old ones have pretty much died off, too...that's one thing."

The following are activities scheduled at Oakley the next five days in honor of its 100th birthday:

Thursday—

7 p.m. Gymkhana at Oakley Posse Grounds. All ages are invited to participate.

9 p.m. Centennial Committee sponsoring a dance featuring music from the 20s to the 70s. Music will be provided by Floyd White's Four Aces.

Friday—

7 p.m. Pony Express style relay race around the posse grounds' 2 1/2-mile track. Each rider must ride a horse one lap and change the saddle to another animal for each lap of the contest.

8 p.m.—Oakley Vigilantes Rodeo at Oakley Posse Grounds.

Saturday—

6 to 10 a.m. The Oakley Chamber of Commerce sponsors a chuck wagon breakfast in Oakley City park.

10 a.m.—Food and game concessions and an old-fashioned carnival open for the day.

Noon to 2 p.m.—A barbeque and pre-1900 fashion show will be held in Oakley City

Exterior reflects the age of the oldest establishment in Oakley to remain in the same family

Parade
2 to 3 p.m.—A Pioneer Days program in the Oakley Stake House features Cassia County Commissioner John Clark, Oakley.
3 to 6 p.m.—Funorama for Families. All families are invited to join in games such as volleyball, tennis, relay and sack races held at Oakley High School's football field.
6 p.m.—A parade down Main Street will honor the theme "Oakley's First 100

Fashion group hits strange encounters

NEW YORK (UPI) — The tall blond Englishman stood huddled in the doorway of the Daily News building, looking not unlike Michael Caine, British cinematic prototype of a professional spy.

Eric Hall had listened carefully to the voice on the phone:

"I have the goods. I don't want any reward — people are looking for me. Meet me outside the Daily News at nine o'clock."

Nothing to Hall's background had prepared him for the moment. Trained in special schools for art and display, he had always had his sights set on visual creativity. He had begun his career working for a chain of women's-fashion stores in Birmingham, England, finally becoming the display manager of one at the age of 21.

From there he had moved on to a "plum job" at prestigious Liberty's of London. Later, he formed his own company, Creative Display, and with his Dutch partner, designer Jan Van de Veld, Salvador, a high fashion house.

Now it is a Sunday night in New York City. The goods referred to are $40,000 worth of gowns by British designer David Sassoon, stolen as they were being unloaded the night before at the Hilton Hotel for a gala to present the elite of Britain's fashion talent to the fall '78 American market.

Hall, who had organized 15 of Britain's top fashion designers into a group, had brought the show to the U.S. under the sponsorship of the British government. As director of the British Fashion Designers group, he had appealed on television for the return of the pilfered collection.

"Crime is big business in New York City and I am prepared to pay a ransom," he had said.

As he waited, with the gentlemen not far away in case of trouble, Hall had time to reflect on his recent trip to Russia, where he had put together a major textile display for an English manufacturer. All "caviar and champagne," he had said of that trip. Now he was singing the Big Apple blues — a victim as much of his own naivete in not recognizing the man in the green satin shirt, when face to face with him, as an obvious thief as he was of the big town's rip-off artists. The thief had gathered up two cases of Sassoon's creations, hopped a cab in front of the hotel and took off.

Moments passed and finally Hall spotted a paper on the ground:

"Dear Designer: Walk to Second Avenue, turn right and I will be on the corner of 41 Street with the goods. Signed: The Unknown."

Hall persisted in his efforts that night to recover the stolen merchandise, but the thief — or benefactor? — failed to show.

Monday — 8:30 a.m.
Fashion entrepreneur Hall sits in a phone-booth-sized room on the 12th floor of the same Daily News building, still shaken by the events of the weekend, the man who just the year before had lost his passport, some jewelry and more than $3,000 in cash to New York's thieves, tries to compose himself for an interview that had been scheduled a week before his arrival in the "jungle of wolves."

An excited recitation of the weekend happenings and on to the first question: Is there any significant difference in British, American and continental figure types?

"I think it is generally known that the American woman is leaner and longer. And the European — when I say European I don't mean English — is slightly shorter and broader, and I think the English comes sort of in between."

He speaks haltingly — his thoughts obviously elsewhere. Then his professionalism takes over. The theft is temporarily forgotten.

"There is a general fallness about American people. I think they are a more flamboyant people — it goes through everything... this terrific striving to the future. The buildings are that much taller, the roads are that much wider, the cars are that much bigger.

"You have a flamboyance and a style. On the street, the average person has a lot more style.

"And you know, there is a feeling for clothes here."

Prosaic? Maybe. Prophetic? Yes.
That evening, just before the fashion show was to go on, some of those "tall" Americans returned a large part of the stolen collection.

They had bought the gowns off the street with their own money. Sassoon, whose American clients have included Candice Bergen and Elizabeth Taylor, was "delighted."

"No one can tell me that New York isn't a wonderful place," he said.

And the next night, a lone transatlantic, possibly not to be updated by the "straight" people of the city, showed up at the exhibit wearing one of Sassoon's stolen silk evening gowns, which he had bought from a street peddler.

He wanted the designer to see how marvelous he looked in the dress before returning it.

Bell Abell's first aide to the second lady

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When Boss Clements eloped with Tyler Abell after a New Year's party, he promised her that he wouldn't be like her father or his step-father.

Her father was Earle Clements, former congressman, former governor of Kentucky, former U.S. senator. His step-father was Drew Pearson, muckraking newspaper columnist.

Unlike them, Abell said, he would be a homebody, building his life around his family and his hobbies.

"I thought that was really neat," says Bess Abell. "I thought, 'I will have babies and raise the garden.'"

"Then suddenly I looked around. I had two babies and a couple of cats and a house in Alexandria (Va.), and a husband who was home about a day and a half a month. And I could carry on a conversation with no one over the age of 18 months!"

So she marched out and got herself a job. That was 1960. She went to work for the Democratic ticket of Kennedy and Johnson.

She was a typist. Her father had always insisted that she learn to type. A girl never knew when she may need a job, he said.

In an interview in front of her cluttered desk in the Executive Office Building, next door to the White House, Mrs. Abell told how she happened to become the very busy executive assistant to the very busy Jan Mondale, wife of the vice president.

"Spunky and joyful," Mrs. Abell is a Kentuckian born and bred. She learned to read the Racing Form while still a high school girl and it was at the Kentucky Derby that she met her lawyer-husband.

But she brings a touch of Johnsonian flavor to a Washington that has changed much since the Texans left.

She's spiky, too. Asked to complete the sentence, "If there's one thing I learned working in government..." she snaps: "no good deed goes unpunished."

These last few weeks she's been slowed down a bit by a knee operation that caused her to use a crutch. The operation came after she returned from an Asian trip with the Mondales — 27,000 miles in 30 days, covering much the same territory she'd covered on an Asian trip with the Lyndon Johnsons.

Mrs. Abell was honored a few weeks ago for her backstage skill at making things go right. In a ceremony of the North Carolina School of Design, actress Helen Hayes presented her with an "Iron Butterfly" award.

Joan Mondale sent word hailing "my dear friend and right arm." Lady Bird Johnson wrote to remind Bess that "Lyndon always said you were smart enough to be in the cabinet."

And Liz Carpenter, a former White House colleague in the Johnson years, sent an excerpt from her book with an ultimate compliment: "Tall, blond, poised... she is one of those women who wears clothes well and can tie a scarf artfully."

In that 1960 job hunt, Mrs. Abell recalls, she was assigned to the Lyndon Johnson speechwriting unit.

"Of all the useless offices that you could possibly imagine in a campaign, this was the most useless" because Johnson only gave a single speech in the campaign," she says.

(One version became famous: it ended with the train pulling out of Culpeper, Va., with Lyndon Johnson asking: "What has Richard Nixon ever done for Culpeper?")

With no speeches needing typing, Mrs. Abell looked around and found the mail addressed to Mrs. Johnson was stacking up, unanswered.

She ordered some stationery and took that task on. Some letters asked for Mrs. Johnson's chili recipe.

YUMMY ASPARAGUS SOUP
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup chopped green pepper
1 teaspoon paprika
Salt and pepper to taste

Place above ingredients in pan, cover with 1 quart of water and boil for 10 minutes.

Add 4 cups chopped asparagus and cook another 10 minutes on medium heat.

Add:
2 tablespoons butter
Shake well:
2 tablespoons cornstarch

mixture slowly over vegetables, stir and let thicken some but don't let stick to bottom of pan. Remove from heat and serve.

If richer soup is desired, add 3 cups of 2 percent milk and 1 cup cream or canned milk in place of the 1 quart milk.

'Jamboree in the Hills' all tuned up for '78 show

WHEELING, W. Va. (UPI) — Virginia and Guy Alderman are cleaning up their 250-acre homestead in the rolling hills of nearby Belmont County, Ohio, for a visit from Charley Pride, Roy Clark, Tom T. Hall and more than 30,000 country music fans.

"Jamboree in the Hills," sponsored by Wheeling radio station WVVA, the Northeast's leading broadcaster of live country music, established itself last year as the nation's biggest country music festival with a debut attended by 26,000 fans and headlined by Johnny Cash, Tommy Wymette and Donna Fargo.

The two-day festival will return July 15 and 16 to Brush Run Park, a grassy, forested outdoor arena on the Alderman property across the Ohio river from Wheeling. Headliners for the 19 hours of music include Pride, Clark, Hall, Barbara Mandrell, Mel Tillis, Dave Dudley and more than a dozen other leading country recording stars.

The Aldermans are taking it all in stride. In their 30-odd years as owner-operators of the area's largest private airfield, they've branched out into a dragstrip, stock car racing, skydiving — and now the music business.

Virginia Alderman had written about the Jamboree for music magazines and local newspapers for years. She and her husband offered the use of their land for the festival in 1975. At the time, a coal company that was surface mining on the Alderman property had not yet finished reclamation of the land.

"When we first looked at the property for the show, we had a mountain of dirt 50 feet high right out there in front of the main areas," said Virginia, a witty, silver-haired woman who hasn't lost the accent of her native Boston despite years in southern Ohio mining country.

"About where the stage is now, we used to have a lake — used to go swimming, ice skating. Basically, the land looks the same now as it did before the strip mining.

"We're looking forward to this year," she said. "I enjoy meeting people. I really do, or else we wouldn't be living in the place we are and we wouldn't be in the business we are. One of our neighbors came over during the first festival and called it, 'a few friends in for the weekend,'" she chuckled when asked her reaction to having tens of thousands of guests fill her backyard.

"After it was over, I thought it was sensational, really terrific. But at first I'd have to say Guy and I were apprehensive. We were concerned about our neighbors, to be honest," she said.

"You have to live in an area, and you don't want to make enemies. They might think, 'Those Aldermans are out to make a bundle, and they could care less about us.' And that's not true — I don't want anyone thinking that.

"Mostly, we'd been at the Jamboree enough to get a look and see what those people are like, and they're nice people. Quiet people. They're the kind of people who work, don't make waves, pay their taxes and support all the other people in the country.

"As one woman told me over the phone the other night, 'I kept thinking about it afterwards and I think, of everything that I've done, that's the greatest thing I've done in my life.' And that was nice. It's nice that you're able to make memories for other people."

COUNTRY MUSIC FESTIVAL WILL RETURN TO BRUSH RUN PARK THIS WEEKEND outdoor arena is located across Ohio River from Wheeling, W. Va.

World War II monuments attracts flood of tourists

SAINT LAURENT-SUR-MER, Normandy, France, (UPI) — The American Military Cemetery for World War II was having a busy day.

A group of Belgian schoolgirls stared at a memorial statue to that war fought when their parents were young. Three busloads of American tourists pulled up next to a car from Germany and members of a French widows' club walked among the graves.

The cemetery director, American Marilyn Grove, watched the stream of visitors and said, "I've seen over the last couple of years renewed interest in the war, particularly among youth, wondering what this war was all about."

Thirty-three years after the guns fell silent across Europe, the battlefields, cemeteries and other grim sites of World War II are being overrun by new armies — this time of tourists from throughout the world.

From the D-day invasion beaches here in Normandy to Adolph Hitler's hideaway in the Bavarian Alps of southern Germany, operators of World War II monuments say tourist curiosity has been sharpened, particularly among youth unborn when the world's future was being shaped at these sites.

Groves said the U.S. cemetery welcomed a half million visitors in 1977 and "I'm looking for 750,000 in 1978."

The cemetery's French guide, Michel Hamanson, added that the number of tourists is soaring even more this year because of the January visit of America's President Jimmy Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing that was televised in North America and Europe. He thinks the TV and other news coverage jogged the memories of those who lived through the epic and stimulated interest among the young.

"The other day we had 27 busloads of tourists from Belgium, Sweden, Norway, Holland, France, the United States, Yes, Germany, too," he said. "Several people mentioned the TV show."

One of the French widows viewing the cemetery, Mrs. Anne-Marie Brior, said, "We decided to come after we saw the photograph in the newspapers of President Carter here on his knees. We came to give thanks to those boys who died for us. Now we're off to see a chateau," and she tied a plastic cap over her white hair against the Normandy drizzle.

The history class from the Mater Dei girls' school in Brussels examined with giggles the beach below the cemetery, named Omaha beach by the Canadian, U.S. and British armies who landed on D-Day, June 6, 1944, to liberate France from four years of Nazi German rule.

But American tourist Thomas Carr of Plymouth, Mich., and his wife looked with sadness on the still emotionally shocking scene of 9,355 simple white Christian crosses and Jewish Stars of David, row after row after row, on the cliffs above Omaha beach.

Weddings

MR. AND MRS. GLENN J. NELSON JR.

Burns-Nelson

TWIN FALLS — Dianna Burns and Glenn J. Nelson Jr. were married June 24 in the Christian Center by Rev. Wayne Hoag. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Burns, Moscow, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Nelson Sr., Twin Falls. The bride chose to be married in a white organza, princess styled dress featuring long sleeves, lace appliques with seed pearls and a pinafore bodice. She wore a matching pair of gold bracelets which had been a gift to her great-grandmother on her wedding day in 1891. Her bouquet consisted of white roses and blue and yellow silk flowers. Polly Burns, Moscow, was maid of honor and Marilee Burns, Twin Falls, was bridal attendant. Both are sisters of the bride. Mike Nelson served his brother and Carl Sweet and John and Scott Burns were ushers. Jimmy Nelson, son of the bridegroom, was ringbearer and Shannon Nelson, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl. Music was provided by Marilee Burns, Mrs. Nancy Hart and Marlon Nussbaum. The newlyweds were honored at a reception at the church following the ceremony. The three tiered cake was cut and served by Mrs. Carl Sweet and Mrs. Mike Drake. Mrs. Nancy Hart, Carson City, Nev., attended the guest book; Mrs. Dale Nilson, Spokane, poured coffee, and Mrs. Don Shrope, Pullman, Wash., served punch. Pre-nuptial showers were given by Mrs. Mike Drake and Mrs. Mike Nelson, both Twin Falls. The bride is employed by the Twin Falls School District at Lincoln School and the bridegroom works for Big Wood Realty. Following a trip to Coeur d'Alene and Spokane, the newlyweds will live in Twin Falls.

MR. AND MRS. ROGER ELDREDGE

Harris-Eldredge

TWIN FALLS — Nancy Marie Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Harris, and Roger Kent Eldredge, son of Beth Burton, Twin Falls, and Ed Eldredge, Canada, were married June 24 in the Ninth Ward Latter Day Saints Church. Bishop John Coleman performed the double-ring ceremony. Marge Coleman was organist, Heather and Lisa Arrington sang duets accompanied by Donna Cox and Gerald Thomas, uncle of the bride, gave a prayer. The bride was attired in a gown of bridal satin and georgette designed and made by the bride and her mother. It featured a high lace collar, flared bodice and a flounced hemline flowing into a chapel train. She wore a picture hat draped with bridal veiling. She carried a colonial bouquet of baby's breath, white silk roses and yellow daisies with blue streamers. Lorraine Short was maid of honor, bridesmaid was Debra Harris and flower girl was Tracy Swape. Best man was Joe Eldredge, Gary Short was groomsmen and ring bearer was Perry Pierey. Ushers were Dennis Harris and Larry Thomas. The reception line formed before an austrian curtain draped with blue chiffon. The matching bride's table featured swags over a blue chiffon skirt. The table was centered with a three-tier cake held by colonades over a blue fountain surrounded by hearts, decorated with blue and yellow roses and topped with blue satin bells. Theda Fink, Helen Thomas and Helen Harris served the cake. Cindy Parrish and Lisa McEwen assisted at the reception. Guests were registered by Vicki Eldredge and gifts were displayed by Becky, Becky, Karun Mahan and Stella Hadfield. The bride had been employed by Bert Insurance in Twin Falls. They will live in Royal City where the bridegroom is employed.

Prolific St. Bernard

LOCKWOOD, W.Va. (UPI) — Dutchess, a prolific St. Bernard owned by a West Virginia family, may well be on the way to fame and TV stardom for her achievements in motherhood. The friendly dog, owned by Richard Lewis of Lockwood, has given birth to a litter of 19 pups for the second consecutive year. The world record litter for a St. Bernard, according to the St. Bernard Club of America, is 20 pups. Eight of her pups survived last year and 11 of them made it from her latest litter. "Some die at birth, some are stepped on and others are just weaklings and don't make it," Mrs. Lewis said. But as Dutchess is only 4 1/2 years old, she should have several more good years of motherhood and may top the world record. Mrs. Lewis said she doesn't know why Dutchess is so prolific, but her pups are a profitable industry for the family.

Abby

Frank talk advised

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old woman keeping company with a 32-year-old man. I've known him for almost a year. (I'll call him Roland.) We are planning to marry as soon as he locates in a nearby city. (He's a professional person with a promising career.) I have never been promiscuous, but I did succumb at age 16, and fortunately became pregnant. I became engaged at 20 and had a brief sexual relationship, but we broke up when I discovered that my fiancé was a compulsive gambler.

Abigail Van Buren

My problem: Roland has never indicated by word or action that he would like to sleep with me. I would willingly agree, but I can't bring myself to lead the way. I am really concerned over his lack of interest in sex. I'm no sex maniac, but I think a compatible sex relationship is essential to a good marriage. What should I do?

CONCERNED IN COLUMBUS

DEAR CONCERNED: Have a frank talk with Roland. Ask him if he's indifferent about sex in general, or just with you. Also find out if he has refrained from mentioning the subject because he's saving himself until after the wedding—or if, perchance, there's another reason.

DEAR ABBY: My husband had an affair with a young woman at work, but it's supposed to be over now. I forgave him because I love him very much and we have children who need a father.

During the affair, his girlfriend gave him an I.D. bracelet and a cigarette lighter. He still wears the bracelet and carries the lighter even though I've asked him to give them back to her. He says he's keeping them because he likes them—not because she gave them to him.

Am I being foolish for insisting that he give these things back to her? Every time I see the gifts she gave him, I feel uneasy.

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: You have a right to insist that he either return the gifts or put them away where you won't have to look at them. And since he claims it's the jewelry he likes, and not "her," suggest that he replace those articles himself. Or you could offer to replace them.

DEAR ABBY: I am 12 years old, and my scout-troop recently made a visit to a nursing home to cheer up the old folks there. We made some colorful paper flowers beforehand, and we sang some songs to entertain the old people.

Abby, you wouldn't believe how hungry those old folks were for company. The first lady I handed a flower to, gave it back to me, saying she didn't have any money to buy it. Then I told her I was free, and her face lit up and she took such a long time trying to decide which color to take. I got the feeling that she was trying to detain me just to have somebody to talk to for a while longer.

I can't tell you how much our visit was appreciated. When we drove off, we could see the folks looking through the windows and holding on to their paper flowers.

Please put something in your column to get people to visit their local nursing homes, whether they have somebody there or not. They are all somebody's grandmothers and grandfathers and they are human, too.

GIRL SCOUT

DEAR SCOUT: Bless you for writing. And those of you out there who are interested in visiting nursing homes to cheer up the residents should telephone first and make arrangements with the staff.

your health

Vitamin ads queried

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb, I wish you'd set me straight on vitamins. All the health books I have read state that most people need all the vitamin supplements from A to Z at some time and some of them all the time even though they are in good health. Could such articles in health magazines be merely to promote the sale of these vitamins for the companies who advertise in the magazine?

I don't drink, smoke or dislocate in any way and follow a daily exercise program. I take vitamins A, B, C, D, E, nucleic acid, zinc, dried yeast and pollen tablets.

The thing that bothers me is that I don't feel any different when taking these vitamins than I do when I don't take them. I feel so good all the time I don't know how I could possibly feel any better. But if there is something I should be doing or not doing to obtain the maximum superb health I would like to know what it is. I'd appreciate your comments on this subject.

Dear Reader, My comment is to relax. I'm afraid you hit the nail on the head about advertising.

In fact, one well-known company that was selling vitamins and also publishing a nutritional magazine once approached me with the idea of writing their magazine for them. The stipulation was that I couldn't write anything or have an article written for the magazine that in any way was detrimental to the sale of vitamins and minerals that were advertised in the magazine.

Many of these magazines make most of their income by selling advertising space. That is one of the reasons why you have to look with a high degree of suspicion upon articles appearing in many health magazines that carry advertising material.

I wish I could tell you something different but that's the way things are. This is in contrast to true scientific journals which have editorial boards of reputable scientists who have no relationship to advertising and control the type of advertising that is permitted. But these scientific medical journals are not available to the public; they are found in medical libraries or are available to physicians and those involved in health care.

Most people who eat a good well-balanced diet and have no basic illness that would require an increased amount of vitamins do very well without taking any vitamin supplements. Those who for any reason aren't getting an adequate diet do equally well with a single uncomplicated cheap daily all-purpose vitamin pill with iron. Once you've taken one of those there isn't much else you can hope to achieve.

Count your blessings that you feel so good all the time and your good sense to be able to tell that you feel just as well without being hooked by some of the health frauds that are commonplace.

I'm sending you the Health Letter number #6, Balanced Diet, Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (RDA). It tells you what you should get from your diet. The recommendations are from the National Academy of Sciences, not a health magazine. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Divorce off if Medicaid follows through

DALLAS (UPI) — Although C.W. King, 78, says he won't claim victory until he sees the check, it now appears he has won his fight for Medicaid's continued care of his elderly wife, meaning he won't have to divorce her. The Kings' marriage of 49 years was within a few weeks of ending because Medicaid officials claimed the $2,716 in King's savings account was too much for Mrs. King to be eligible for continued Medicaid-funded treatment.

The maximum assets, King was told, was $2,250.

A lawyer advised King the only way he could avoid emptying his bank account to support the treatments was to divorce his wife — therefore making her penniless and eligible for Medicaid.

Now, after the case has received national attention, it appears Medicaid has changed its mind.

"Medicaid advised us to draw out the savings and put it under another name," said King's son, Herb. "They said there would be no problem from then on. ... There was a whole world of difference in the Medicaid people after the case got so much publicity."

The elder King is reasonably pleased with what appears to be Medicaid's change of heart, but wants to wait to the end of the month to make sure. "I think it's OK now, but I won't know for sure until the end of the month when I see for myself if they send the check to Mrs. King's nursing home."

The younger King also indicated his father's partial payments for Mrs. King's treatment might go up from $59 per month to $70, out of a pension monthly income of $280.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JULY 14, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Unexpected events may occur which give you the opportunity to find out just where you do stand in an unusual situation or with an unusual type of individual. Also you now will have the chance to express your talents and special abilities.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You now have a chance to handle some responsibility that needs good judgment and quick action. Attend a meeting that could bring fine results. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A sudden meeting with a partner could pose a problem that needs fast action, so handle it well and then take it easy. You also got the right solution to a community problem.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Work you have to do needs to be tackled from a different angle to get the best possible results. A co-worker comes up with a novel, workable idea.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take care of chores early and then be off to recreation that can bring you much joy. A loved one has a novel idea that brings more happiness. Go along with it.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Keep your cool at home and the condition there doesn't get worse. Do something quickly to improve it. Don't extend invitation to weird persons or you have trouble at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use utmost care on the highway. A good friend gives you wild ideas that can be whittled down to practical use. Listen carefully.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Use thought and good judgment where a monetary matter is concerned. Get rid of unnecessary items from your budget. Build up a reserve quickly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get together with those who have the information you need and which they now will give you. Take time to improve health and appearance in some way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Use that talent at which you are most proficient and get excellent results now. Get the information you need, but do not confide in others. Avoid one who is detrimental to your best interests.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Contact important friends early who can be of assistance to you in your career. Enjoy recreation with good friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A civic matter arises that requires your ingenuity to solve it. Put a new idea to work that will improve your career. Be careful of one who has done you harm in the past.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Find better ways of self-expression and get ahead faster than before. A trip you have been considering could materialize at this time.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have every capability of doing things in a most unusual way which yields good benefits. The unexpected is always happening in this life, so teach to be prepared for this.

PEANUTS

IT'S MATCH POINT, AND YOU STAND THERE LOOKING AT A LETTER FROM YOUR STUPID BROTHER!

NO WONDER YOU GOT ACED!

NOW WE HAVE TO GO AND CONGRATULATE "CRYBABY" BOOBIE! THIS IS GONNA KILL ME!

NICE MATCH, GUYS! LA DE DA DE DA DE DA

SHORT RIBS

I HAD THIS PATIENT WITH AN ABNORMAL FEAR OF LIONS.

DID YOU CURE HIM, DOCTOR?

YES, AFTER HOURS OF THERAPY.

ANY CHANCE OF A RELAPSE?

NO. OF A RELAPSE.

YESTERDAY A LION ATE HIM.

L.M. Boyd

Q. "Where in the Bible is any mention of potatoes?"
A. Nowhere. And that's the main reason potatoes were scorned as possible food for so many years. If they weren't identified in the Bible, they couldn't be any good—the folk figured. Big famine in 1740, however, turned the thinking around.

Q. "Ten years ago there were 13,000 derelicts in New York City's Bowery. Today there are 5,000. To what do you attribute this change?"
A. Welfare benefits.

Only three out of every 20 people in Japan subscribe to any kind of formal religion. And a majority of those polled there said they didn't even believe in a deity.

LOVE AND WAR

Our "Love and War" man, the cynic, evidently hasn't paid sufficient heed to the working ladies who complain about men who make passes at them on the job. What's meant by passes is uninvited advances, please note. Welcome overtures don't count. Surveys show that it happens to about 76 percent of the women who labor for paychecks.

No Andorra citizen under the age of 25 is permitted to vote in a national election.

Q. "Who was the first actor to make footprints or handprints or whatever in wet cement in front of Gruman's Chinese Theater in Hollywood?"
A. Credit Norma Talmadge with that distinction. She stumbled over a newly laid patch of concrete there in 1927, and the publicity boys thought it a fitly notion.

THORPE AND THE KING

After the 1912 Olympic games, Sweden's King Gustav V said to Jim Thorpe, "You, sir, are the greatest athlete in the world." And Thorpe said, "Thanks, King."

It's between the ages of 5 and 30 that the fingernails grow the fastest.

Not everybody realizes that you can't get a poison by rash on the soles of your feet.

Scientist studies brain of slug to find out about humans

PRINCETON, N.J. — Dr. Alan Gelperin, a Princeton University neurobiologist, is trying to find out how the brain works.

But instead of studying man's sophisticated organ of intelligence, he is examining the brain and nervous system of the slug, a relatively common garden pest that is close to the bottom of the intelligence scale.

The slug, Limax maximus, a slimy, six-inch-long, gray and black mollusk, looks like a snail that has lost its shell, which, from an evolutionary standpoint, is just what has happened to it. And though many gardeners think it rather disgusting, it has few attractions for neurobiologists, these scientists who study the brain and the nervous system that tie brain commands.

Aside from its availability in the gardens of Princeton, the slug has a brain and a nervous system that can be kept alive for several days in test tubes.

In addition, the neurons, or nerve cells of its brain, range from 200 to 300 microns (millionths of a meter) in diameter, making them suitable for the naked eye. In contrast, those of higher animals are microscopic in size and deeply embedded in the brain matrix, making them difficult to study as individual cells, especially when the animal is alive.

In slugs' brains, however, single neurons are easily accessible. Because of their size, scientists can implant electrodes in them under a microscope and measure the electrical and chemical discharges that trigger the living brain's messages to the body. But exactly how the electricity and chemicals in any creature's brain work to achieve feats of perception, memory and judgment has long been a mystery.

"We're trying to learn how the brain changes when it learns something or commits something to memory," the 36-year-old Gelperin said.

"These changes come just for days—weeks or months and they're generally electrical or chemical, but we want to know how they change."

For the last 10 years, in laboratories on the Princeton campus, Gelperin and his associates have been working with a veritable army of slugs—sometimes as many as 1,500 of them. When he started, his small supply was garnered by forays in local gardens at night, when the slugs come out from under rocks or trees.

He also advertised in local papers, offering $15 a pound for living slugs. "A good-sized one in good condition would bring about 30 cents," Gelperin said. "One woman showed up with a bucket of them and we paid her $50 for them. We eventually got enough slugs to get our own culture going."

Gelperin is focusing on how the synapses in the brain work in the learning process. A synapse is the point of contact between adjacent neurons where nerve impulses are transmitted from one to another by chemical or electrical means.

He and other neurobiologists have determined that the chemical properties of synapses change in the process of learning and remembering. Electrical activity in one neuron can cause it to squirt a certain amount of chemical onto another neuron, which stimulates the recipient neuron to perform some action.

But the Princeton group has found that a neuron does not always squirt the same amount of chemical in response to a given stimulus and that a repeated stimulus to the animal may lead to a waning chemical response by the neuron, resulting in a change in activity by the animal.

In this area of research, Gelperin's group was the first to demonstrate a behavioral trait in lower animals that had long been recognized in vertebrates: the ability to learn quickly to avoid food that does not taste good.

In his laboratory on a recent summer afternoon, Gelperin demonstrated the activity in the brain of a slug that learned to avoid unpleasant food.

He bent over a microscope focused on a Petri dish that contained the slug's live brain, complete with the tiny vermicelli-like strands of nerves that connected the brain with the lips.

Reporter ordered to jail

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — A reporter for the Sacramento Union was ruled in contempt of court Tuesday by a Superior Court judge for refusing to turn over subpoenaed notes and tapes in a story about a murder case.

Judge John J. Boskovich ordered John Hammyerly to be jailed until he agrees to release the material for an in-chambers review. But Boskovich stayed execution of the order for 30 days to allow the reporter to appeal. Hammyerly said he will appeal the case to district court.

The tapes and notes in question were of an interview with Edward Gonzales, an unindicted co-conspirator in the slaying of Ellen DeLia case. Four men, including Mrs. DeLia's husband, have been indicted for murder.

Mrs. DeLia's execution-style slaying in J. B. 17, 1977 in Sacramento.

Gonzales, Hammyerly he drove the car for the killers of Mrs. DeLia, whose body was found near Sacramento airport. The DeLias operated an East Los Angeles drug rehabilitation program for ex-convicts.

Public Defender Kenneth Wells said, "The right of a fair trial is more important than a reporter's right to keep private notes that may well mean the difference between an acquittal or a conviction."

Oregon rape law upheld by judge

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Circuit Court Judge Robert Jones ruled Tuesday Oregon's statutory rape law is constitutional although it applies only to men who engage in sexual intercourse with females younger than 18.

Attorneys for three men charged with rape involving underage girls had argued that the law was unconstitutional because women who engage in sexual intercourse with boys younger than 18 may be charged only with sexual abuse, a crime carrying less severe penalties than rape.

Jones said a 1976 Oregon Court of Appeals ruling that the Oregon law is constitutional is binding on the Circuit Court. He suggested the Legislature might want to review the law.

The attorneys for the three defendants filed arguments to the charges based on a 1st U.S. Court of Appeals decision that a similar New Hampshire law was unconstitutional because it applied only to men.

Jones' ruling clears the way for trial of Stanley Yates, James Shugar and William Clarkson, who are accused in separate cases. Their attorneys indicated if the men are convicted they may appeal on the basis of Jones' ruling.

East coast lures Mahen

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Former Howard Hughes confidant and business aide Robert Mahen is in Atlantic City checking out prospective casino and casino-related investment properties.

Mahen, a former FBI agent and a top aide to the late billionaire, once directed all of Hughes' casino projects in Las Vegas. He was later fired by Hughes.
