

Papal policy may tip scale to Communists

NEW YORK (UPI) — A long-time Vatican watcher and scholar believes the political future of some Western European democracies rests with the policies of the successor of Pope Paul VI.

Malachi Martin, a former Jesuit professor and author who left the priesthood with Pope Paul's permission in 1964, said in an interview Monday that Paul's 15-year reign marks an end to the "cold war" between the Catholic Church and officially atheist Communist regimes.

"The emerging feeling within the Catholic church is that Marxism is already here or will be soon, and to survive the church must learn to live with — that is reach an accommodation with — these regimes."

In countries such as France and Italy, Martin said, the church's traditional stand against Communism kept many voters from supporting the Communist parties in their countries.

But despite strong Catholic disapproval, Eurocommunism has slowly built its strength among voters.

In Italy the Communists are the second largest political party and won 40 percent of the vote in the last election. In France the Communists still have substantial voter appeal and power, though torn by internal strife because of its loss in the last election.

Martin said, "If there's such a thing as the traditional Catholic anti-Communist vote, then a mere nod is all that's needed in many cases to sway that vote for the Communists to win — just a signal from the Vatican process begins for real that Communists sharing power is not such a bad thing."

Martin has written eight books on the Catholic church and religion in general. This year he published "The Final Conclave," which deals with selecting Paul's successor.

"They have been picking the pope for the last five or seven years," Martin said of the 115 Cardinals who will elect Paul's successor. "Once a pope offers to resign, as Paul did twice, or his health deteriorates, the process begins for real

Governor race tops in primary

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Voters will be electing candidates for almost every Idaho state and national office today, and it may be difficult identifying the names without a scorecard.

Today marks the final stage of the piling down process. After the primary election, voters will have a clear choice in November between one Democrat and one Republican (with the addition in a few cases of an American Party candidate) for each office.

Working as a developer and real estate salesman Amyx soon met many of the Boise residents — and in 1966 they elected him mayor. Four years later he was re-elected to that post. Because of his two terms as mayor, Amyx insists he is "the only Republican candidate for Governor who has administrative experience as an elected official."

James Crowe, another native Texan, Crowe, 46, settled in Cour d'Alene in 1961. A former college instructor who taught history and government at North Idaho College, Crowe now works as a home builder and real estate developer. Crowe has said he is "the only non-politician in the race," and would bring a businessmen's experience to the statehouse.

With the spotlight on nominations for governor and Congress, an estimated 190,000 Idaho voters are expected to cast ballots. Because of vacations and voter apathy and despite some hot, local contests expected to boost the turnout in some areas, Secretary of State Pete Cenarusa predicts only 25 percent of the electorate will vote. Polls in the state's 649 precincts will open at 8 a.m. and close at 8 p.m.

Larry Jackson, a former major league baseball pitcher, the 47-year-old Jackson was born in Nampa, Idaho. Retiring from pro ball in 1969, Jackson settled in Boise where he worked for the Boise Cascade Corp., and for an insurance and brokerage firm. In 1970, he was elected to the first of four terms in the Idaho House of Representatives. Jackson has served as the executive director of the Idaho Republican party and is presently co-chairman of the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee.

Democrats have fielded no primary candidate for the post of secretary of state and Republicans have no candidate for auditor or treasurer. But officials in both parties say they will have candidates for those offices before the general election.

Though every office is open this year — except the Senate post now held by Democrat Frank Church — most of the 1978 election excitement has focused on the race for governor.

Incumbent Gov. John Evans, a Democrat, is facing his first election for governor. A former lieutenant governor, Evans assumed gubernatorial duties when Frank Church — who died in 1972 — resigned. Evans has no Democratic opposition today, but six Republicans are vying for the right to challenge him in November.

Allan F. Larsen, a Blackfoot farmer and 12 year veteran of the Idaho House of Representatives, Larsen was born in Ritz, Idaho, in 1919. The son of J. Berkeley Larsen, a former Idaho lieutenant governor, Larsen is serving his second term as Speaker of the House. Larsen has also served as president of the National Potato Council and president of the Potato-Growing and Marketing Association of Idaho. Larsen is also president of the Rocky Mountain Machinery Company.

S.L. "Butch" Otter, 41, is also expected to be the youngest governor of Idaho if elected. A Caldwell native, Otter has served two terms in the Idaho House of Representatives. Otter is the son-in-law of industrialist J.R. Simplot, and serves as the Vice President of the food division of the J.R. Simplot Company. Otter has also run the longest campaign, announcing his quest to become governor 14 months ago.

After some election day campaigning, the six are planning to end up at the same place, the Sheraton Downtown Hotel in Boise.

Despite some last minute mudslinging, the candidates have agreed to support whoever wins the primary, and they are expected to make a show of unity when the results are known.

The front-runner, according to most polls, is Tuttle rancher and businessman Vern Ravenscroft. Ravenscroft, who will campaign in the Magic Valley today in Wendell, Jerome, Twin Falls and Burley, told the Times-News Monday night he is "fairly optimistic" of winning the nomination.

The former Idaho GOP chairman said a large turnout today — in the neighborhood of 116,000 Republicans — will favor his campaign and that his party workers have been focusing for the past week on getting out the vote.

The six Republican gubernatorial candidates are:

Jay Amyx, a 54-year-old Texas native, Amyx settled in Boise shortly after the end of World War II. Working as a developer and real estate salesman Amyx soon met many of the Boise residents — and in 1966 they elected him mayor. Four years later he was re-elected to that post. Because of his two terms as mayor, Amyx insists he is "the only Republican candidate for Governor who has administrative experience as an elected official."

James Crowe, another native Texan, Crowe, 46, settled in Cour d'Alene in 1961. A former college instructor who taught history and government at North Idaho College, Crowe now works as a home builder and real estate developer. Crowe has said he is "the only non-politician in the race," and would bring a businessmen's experience to the statehouse.

Congress battles heated

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The race for the second district congressional seat has attracted nearly as much attention as the gubernatorial race in southern Idaho.

Incumbent George Hansen, R-Pocatello, is being challenged by Jerome Republican Jim Jones, while Hansen's 1976 opponent, Stan Kress, D-Firth, is opposed in his bid for a rematch — with Hansen — by former congressman Ralph Harding, D-Boise, in his bid.

George Hansen, 47, has served Idaho in the House of Representatives since 1974. He also represented the second district in the House from 1964 to 1968. Hansen's political career has been marred by criticism of his income tax filing practices and large personal and campaign debts. Hansen says his problems are now at an end and his anti-big government campaign has begun to bear fruit with victories over OSIA and reductions in the number of government regulations.

Jerome attorney Jim Jones, 36, is a

Magie Valley native. He is campaigning on his support for strengthened national defense and his understanding of the problems of farmers and ranchers. He also claims he is running to salvage the congressional seat for the Republicans, because he feels Hansen will not survive a Kress challenge in November.

Stan Kress, 34, lost a narrow decision to Hansen in 1976. Polls show that Kress is not only the favorite to win his primary contest but should also win the November election, if Hansen is his opponent. Kress is superintendent of the Firth School District, and served one term in the Idaho legislature.

Ralph Harding, 48, represented the 2nd district in Congress from 1960 to 1964, and has served in the Idaho legislature. He also served as special assistant to the Secretary of the Air Force in 1965 and 1966. Harding says his experience and independence make him the best candidate for the office.

House keeps big carrier

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Monday night rejected an attempt to cut from a $19.2 billion defense appropriations bill a $2.1 billion nuclear-powered aircraft carrier the administration does not want.

The 156-216 vote came after the lawmakers overwhelmingly rejected efforts to make other, across-the-board cuts in the bill as a means of responding to anti-tax feelings across the country.

Final action on the bill is expected today.

Rep. Sidney Yates, R-Ill., sponsored the amendment to cut funds for a fifth nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, backed by a bipartisan group of lawmakers opposed to high weapons costs who maintained one additional carrier would not be "a decisive element" in any war with the Soviet Union.

One supercarrier opponent, Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., told the House that based on past cost escalations, the new ship "would cost close to $3 billion" rather than the $2.1 billion provided by the bill.

Supercarrier supporters said the ship is needed to assure continued U.S. naval supremacy and dismissed arguments it would be a sitting duck for Soviet missiles. "It's still the most invulnerable piece of geography on the earth," said Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla.

In other votes, the House agreed to delete a total of close to $170 million that included 15 Harrier attack jets for the Marines and six Corsair carrier-based Navy attack planes.

The action on the across-the-board reductions was in sharp contrast to the House's willingness to make such cuts in other big spending programs as a result of the taxpayer revolt that has emerged in California and other sections of the country.

Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., proposed 2 percent reductions in sections of the bill, the largest single appropriations measure before Congress this year. His first amendment to reduce personnel expenditures was defeated 327-53 on a roll call vote.

A similar attempt by Volkmer to reduce operating funds for the services was shouted down by voice vote after Rep. George Mahon, D-Texas, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said it would be "very unwise to cut back portions of the bill that would allow the armed forces to do their job."

Earlier, the House agreed in a surprise 237-121 vote to approve $15.5 million for educational benefits and other recruiting incentives for the manpower-strapped military reserves.

The reserve proposal, offered by Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., would increase from $10 million to $15.5 million the total provided for paying bonuses to reserve enlistees and for the first time allow payments for college tuition to attract young recruits into the reserves.

Montgomery said the plan would be to sign up college students who could be given their basic military training during summer vacations and attend monthly drills of reserve and national guard units during the school year. The reserves have been plagued with a shortage of manpower since the draft ended in 1972.

Yates, in a letter to other members urging the nuclear-powered warship be deleted from the bill, said that "apart from its enormous expense there are many who think the carrier may be 'obsolete' before it is even completed."

The administration did not ask any funds for an aircraft carrier this year and had planned to request a smaller, conventionally powered aircraft carrier next year to keep the nation's fleet of flattops at 12 until the end of the century.

King conspiracy charged

©New York Times Service

ST. LOUIS — An attorney for James Earl Ray, the convicted killer of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., said Monday that the House Select Committee on Assassinations had violated the law and its own rules as a part of a "conspiracy" to prevent a fair investigation of the assassination, which took place in Memphis 10 years ago.

The lawyer, Mark Lane, said in a statement issued here that the committee's investigators and their agents had suborned perjury, criminally received stolen property and monitored and tape-recorded telephone conversations.

In addition, Lane said that the committee had "violated their own rules" by secretly seeking to set up a conference between one of their agents and a reporter for The New York Times in an attempt to plant false information about the investigation.

A spokesman for the committee said, "The allegations are serious and they will be examined carefully and completely." He said the committee would have no other comment now.

At a news conference here, Lane distributed a statement by Oliver Patterson, who identified himself as a former informant for the Federal Bureau of Investigation who most recently had been working as an undercover agent for the House committee.

The body of Pope Paul VI lies in state at Castel Gandolfo

Interregnum begins in Vatican

©New York Times Service
ROME — The "Regime of the Vacant See," or interregnum between the death of one pope and the election of his successor, started formally Monday as Cardinal Jean Villot, the second-ranking prelate of the church, acceded to the Apostolic Palace of the Vatican.

Villot, who holds the post of Cardinal Camerlengo, papal chamberlain, called the first meeting of the Sacred College of Cardinals, the body that will elect the new pope.

The cardinals ordered that the body of Pope Paul VI be brought to the Vatican Wednesday from Castel Gandolfo, the summer papal residence in the Alban hills 15 miles southeast of Rome, where he died Sunday night following a heart attack.

The pontiff will lie in state in St. Peter's Basilica, the biggest and most famous church of Catholicism, Thursday and Friday, and will be buried in the crypt beneath St. Peter's on Saturday, the cardinals decided.

Only a handful of prelates — those already in the Rome region when the pope died — attended the meeting. The number was not announced. There will now be daily meetings of the college. Cardinals from Italy and some European countries started arriving Monday.

The members of the Sacred College will set the date for the start of the conclave in which the cardinals from all over the world — all those under 80 years of age — will elect the new pontiff in secret balloting.

The conclave of the cardinals will begin at the earliest on Aug. 21, 15 days after the death of the pope. The precise date has yet to be fixed.

Trial unlikely

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. (UPI) — Top Rock Springs policeman Ed Cantrell will likely jump bail and never be tried for first-degree murder, predicts the widow of the city narcotics agent he allegedly shot to death.

Rebecca Rosa, widow of undercover agent Michael Rosa, believes Cantrell should not have been released on bond because he is likely to disappear.

Cantrell, charged with the July 15 shooting of Rosa, was released last week on a $35,000 property-bond posted by three Rock Springs couples, including a policeman and city councilman.

"I don't feel anyone is ever going to see him again in Wyoming... he has been allowed to slip out of our clutches," Mrs. Rosa said.

Rosa died two days before he was to testify before the statewide grand jury investigating allegations of official corruption and vice in Rock Springs.

Prosecutors claim Cantrell, who presided over Rock Springs police as the city's public safety director, feared Rosa would incriminate him.

Today's weather

If you like it hot, it's ideal

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and Northside areas:
 Sunny, hot days and fair, mild nights, through Wednesday. Highs 95 to 102 and lows in the mid-50s to low 60s.

Camas Prairie, Halley and Upper Wood River Valley:
 Sunny, hot days and fair, mild nights through Wednesday. Highs 90 to 95 and lows in the upper 40s to low 50s.

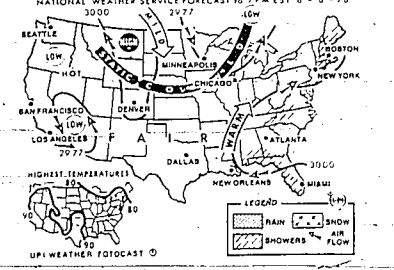

Synopsis:
 More hot summer weather is in store for Idaho. The warm ridge of high pressure responsible for the current hot weather remains entrenched over the western U.S., thus little change in the weather pattern is expected through Wednesday.

Temperatures in the 90s to low 100s were commonplace across the lower Idaho valleys Monday, with the mountain areas hitting mid-80s to mid-90s.

Weiser recorded the highest temperature at 104 degrees. Other high temperatures recorded included Caldwell at 103, 101 at Nampa, Lewiston and Parma and an even 100 at Mountain Home and Gooding.

However, Idaho is cool compared to Red Bluff, Calif., where the mercury rose to a sizzling 119 Monday!

In addition, Monday was the 21st consecutive day in which the temperature was 100 or more at Bakersfield, Calif. This unbroken string of baking temperatures isn't the longest Bakersfield residents have put up with, however.

House cool to funding death probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Assassinations Committee got a cool reception Monday when it asked a House administration subcommittee to approve an extra $790,000 above the $4 million it has already spent investigating the murders of President John F. Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Committee Chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, drew subcommittee fire when he told an open session he had only enough money from this year's appropriation of $2.5 million to last through next month. Otherwise, he said, the panel would have to go out of business.

Rep. Joseph Minish, D-N.J., asked Stokes: "Will this investigation change the course of history in your opinion?"

Stokes replied, "I'd be pleased to try to answer but would like to do so in executive session."

The subcommittee met behind closed doors for 2½ hours.

"I don't think I got an answer to my question," Minish told reporters on emerging. "I'd rather not say whether it is worth the money."

However, Rep. Robert Badham, R-Calif., said, "We had not been given a shred of evidence until today. I'm much more comfortable today than I ever was before."

Chairman John Dent, D-Pa., of the administration subcommittee, said Stokes gave some "very interesting information."

None of the members disclosed Stokes' evidence.

Dent said no money decision had been taken and the full administration committee would have to decide at a meeting Tuesday morning, "with or without our recommendation."

Stokes complained to the subcommittee he originally asked for $2.3 million to carry the investigation through 1978 and had only received $2.5 million. He said the fund now is running dry despite recent cuts in staff from 118 to a current 90, members — 23 of whom make salaries ranging from $30,900 to $47,500 a year.

"Every other committee in this House has to live with its budget," Rep. Mendel Davis, D-S.C., said, charging Stokes' committee had never intended to adhere to the $2.5 million appropriated last March.

Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., a member of the assassinations panel, rejoined: "This is not like building a bridge. It's more like drilling an oil well. Every now and then you have a dry well, then a gusher. So there has to be an exception."

According to the committee's budget officer, the panel up to the end of July had spent more than $1 million since it was created two years ago.

Stokes plans four months of open hearings starting Aug. 14, which he argued would justify the additional funds.

Business court jam draws slap

©Newhouse News Service
NEW YORK — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Monday blamed the three branches of government and the bar for equity contributing to deficiencies in the legal system, adding that business has been permitted to grow so big that there is increasingly little room in the courts for small individuals.

Kennedy addressed the opening assembly of the American Bar Association's 100th annual convention by calling for a reduction of government regulation and urged legislation that would reorganize conglomerates in an effort to encourage small business competition.

Kennedy, while he stated that "all is not well in America's modern house of law," added that "I reject the notion that all of the problems and deficiencies of the system can be laid at the door of lawyers."

"If we are over-lawyered and over-litigated, the Congress, the executive branch and the courts must share the responsibility... for the failures of our legal system," Kennedy charged.

He then launched into an attack on big government and big business, contending that while President Carter's worldwide concern for human rights is shared by Americans, "they also believe that human rights begin at home."

On that basis, Kennedy equated the denial of human rights with the average American whom he characterized as victims of big government and big business, asserting that the legal system has failed the public in this area.

On the basis, the legal system is in part responsible for their very size and growth. And too often when the individual finds himself in conflict with these forces, the legal system sides with the giant institution, not the small businessman or private citizen," Kennedy said.

He added that the attitude by government to big business is a "mentality that sees regulation as the natural order of the universe, that equates the Federal Register with Holy Writ, and that believes that anything the marketplace can do, government can do better."

Better way suggested

NEW YORK (UPI) — Leon Jaworski, who has twice served as a special federal prosecutor, said Monday there must be "a better method" than the current one for conducting inquiries into the misconduct by high government officials.

Jaworski suggested before the annual American Bar Association convention that a commission system be considered for future cases.

"There should be... a better method of conducting inquiries into alleged wrongful conduct of high officials in our three branches of government than to resort to self-investigation," he said.

He said the current system has "inherent shortcomings." When Congress investigates a member of Congress—for instance, there are likely to be questions about its integrity and charges of a cover-up.

Tobacco industry fumes over AMA report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The tobacco industry Monday accused the American Medical Association of lying in its report on health hazards of smoking to "conclude with a trade secret." President Carter's weekend visit to North Carolina's tobacco belt.

An AMA executive denied the allegation "in the strongest possible terms."

The charge was made in Washington by the tobacco industry group representing growers and cigarette manufacturers, which also claimed the AMA findings were outdated.

Institute president Horace Kornegay, a former Democratic congressman from North Carolina, issued a statement saying: "The only real news in the AMA document is the contrived timing of its release to coincide with and discredit President Carter's trip to visit tobacco growers in North Carolina."

The fact that a copy of the document was released on Friday, Aug. 4, in Charlotte, N.C., appears to be an obvious attempt to embarrass the president in tobacco country."

In Chicago, AMA executive Vice President James H. Simmons responded in a statement: "It was to deny the allegation in the strongest possible terms."

Simmons said the results of the 14-year study, linking cigarette smoking to irreversible heart damage and other ailments, had been scheduled for release in May, but "due to a series of unforeseen circumstances, it was not released until the week of July 24."

He said those circumstances involved difficulties in getting the report printed, packaged and into the mails — due partly to strikes in supply industries.

"I want to again emphasize that the release of this book was in no way related to President Carter's trip," said Simmons.

Carter flew Saturday to Wilson, N.C. in the heat of North Carolina's main tobacco-growing period, where he attended a tobacco warehouse and a political rally.

At the warehouse, the president told a gathering of growers, "A good sound education program can maintain good health and stable production of our farm products, including tobacco."

Kornegay's statement said of the AMA findings: "The report itself represents compilations of abstracts of studies that are from 6 to 12 years old. These studies were funded from 1964 to 1972 and most, if not all, have already been published in the literature or presented at meetings."

"The joint tobacco-industry-researcher project was concluded in 1972 by mutual agreement. The cigarette manufacturers continued to compile research dollars, increasing their funding of the Council for Tobacco Research and to large university-based research programs. The total commitment to smoking and health research to date is $75 million."

Violence standard hit in trial over TV drama

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — NBC, the network being sued for $11 million dollars by a 13-year-old girl who was sexually assaulted in an alleged imitation of a televised drama, was accused in defense arguments Monday of setting hypocritical standards on violence in programming.

The girl's attorney, Marvin Lewis, told the jury of six men and six women in opening arguments he would prove the network "negligently and recklessly showed a standard book-type scene of violence they knew or should have known to cause psychological excitement in someone who would later go out and imitate what was shown."

Judge Robert J. Posner, ruled earlier in the day the damage suit against NBC, and its San Francisco affiliate KRON-TV, over the show, "Born Innocent," would be decided on the issue of "incitement." He said the issue was whether the program was "directed to incite or produce imminent lawless action or likely to incite or produce such action."

But Lewis, who from the start has said he has no evidence of "incitement," told the jurors, "We will not prove NBC intended to encourage anyone to go out and rape a young girl."

Instead, Lewis said, he would present evidence of negligence by the network. He said he would also prove NBC made false statements to the government concerning its program editing procedures and violated its own standards code.

Lewis is representing Olivia Niemi, who claims she was sexually assaulted by children imitating a scene from the television drama shown four days before the attack. Olivia was 9 at the time.

Lewis said a graphic rape scene was shown during prime time, when children were watching. He also charged many words that were to have been deleted from the program were left intact.

He questioned NBC's claim the program was presented to reflect the reality of life in juvenile institutions and said a documentary on the subject was presented just a few weeks before the show.

He also criticized a one-time visual advisory about the nature of the program, saying that now such advisories are broadcast every 15 minutes and are audible as well as visual.

The attorney said the "hypocrisy of the NBC Standards Department" is reflected in its refusal to show "Police Story" before 9 p.m. because of its sometimes violent contents but showing the graphic rape scene during prime time.

He said one advertiser that asked to buy time during the program was Walt Disney, "signifying the program was aimed at children."

Lewis said NBC has "lied to the government" about its handling of violence in programs. He said many programs are not as well scrutinized as the network-telvised before various commissions on violence in television.

Slaughter bill passes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Monday passed and sent to the House a bill to require that humane methods be followed in the slaughter of animals carried out under federal and state inspection.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and co-sponsored by Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., also would apply to foreign countries certified to export meat to the United States.

It would extend requirements of the Humane Slaughter Act of 1958, which applied only to livestock slaughtered for sale to the federal government.

Under the bill, approved by voice vote, animals would have to be rendered insensible by a single blow or gunshot, or by electrical, chemical or other quick means, before being shackled and hoisted, thrown or cut.

As in the 1958 act, slaughter according to religious ritual would be exempted.

Inquiries interesting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, who has been at odds lately with the Jimmy Carter White House, said Monday he had an "interesting conversation" the other day with Sen. Edward Kennedy, the avowed non-candidate for president.

"How's your pal Jimmy doing, Tip?" Kennedy asked.

"Fine. How's your campaign going?" O'Neill responded.

Housing secretary cancels testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Housing Secretary Patricia Harris canceled a scheduled appearance before a congressional committee Monday in an apparent dispute with the White House over her testimony.

Press secretary Jody Powell confirmed that Mrs. Harris did not testify on monetary policy before the House Banking Committee because the White House did not approve her statement due to "differences" in interpretation.

"She had missed the last Cabinet meeting" where the monetary policy apparently was outlined, said Powell.

Powell explained that Mrs. Harris "had missed the last Cabinet meeting," where the monetary policy apparently was outlined, and that her Capitol Hill appearance was canceled so that she could attend Monday's Cabinet session and get a fill-in. He said there was not sufficient time for her to make both appearances.

"Clearing testimony has always taken place," he said. "It happens all the time."

A committee spokesman said Mrs. Harris told the committee Friday she was canceling her testimony on the effects of Federal Reserve Board policy on housing.

She frequently stated the board's tight money policy has hindered the mortgage market, in turn making it harder to obtain housing.

In addition, a recent HUD report indicated the department, and not the board alone, should have a say in monetary policy.

Other clashes with the White House included Mrs. Harris' efforts to fire the chairman of the Federal National Mortgage Association. Several of her proposed spending program also never made it out of the White House.

Now you know

The shortest run in television history befell the comedy series "Turn On" which was seen just once, on Feb. 5, 1969, before it was cancelled on grounds that it contained too many double entendres.

Invitation to summit falls flat

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met President Anwar Sadat Monday, but apparently failed to persuade him to resume direct peace talks in a three-way summit.

Egyptian sources said Sadat bluntly reiterated his opposition to a resumption of direct negotiations with Israel until the Jewish state indicates a willingness to give up the occupied territories.

Sadat's attitude — and Egyptian Prime Minister Menachem Begin's apparent refusal to budge on the issue — left Vance's mission to close the Middle East peace talks closer than ever to disaster.

Vance and Sadat met for more than two hour hours at the Egyptian president's sumptuous Mansoura summer home on the outskirts of Alexandria.

Vance handed Sadat a handwritten message from President Carter — a message believed to include a suggestion that Carter, Sadat and Begin meet in a summit conference, possibly in Washington.

Sadat's press secretary, Saad Zaghloul Nassar, responded with "no comment" when asked to characterize the meeting. When pressed whether he considered it "negative or positive," he replied, "cordial."

He said Vance and Sadat will meet again Tuesday evening.

At an earlier meeting with Foreign Minister Ibrahim Kamel, Vance said Washington wants more direct talks between Israel and Egypt. Kamel replied that enough talks have been held but the situation has not changed.

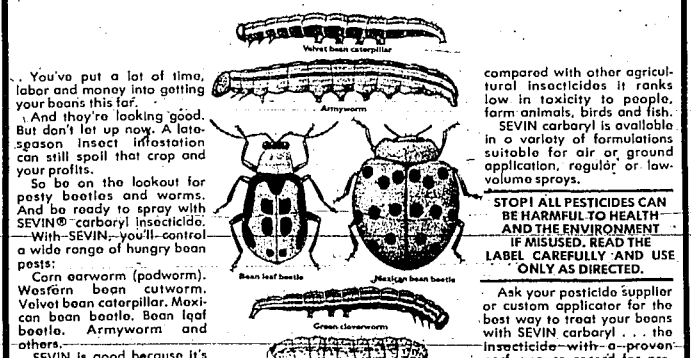

Trial TV foes yield

WASHINGTON Star — A key group within the American Bar Association has decided to drop its firm opposition to the idea of televising criminal trials.

The decision over the weekend by the Criminal Justice Section Council, dominated by defense lawyers, may assure that the ABA this week will endorse some use of cameras and sound equipment in courtrooms.

The main opposition to such use had been coming from the council, which voted to keep intact the 41-year-ban on broadcasts of trials.

The Farber case

Free press, courts and public interest may suffer because of reporter

By ANTHONY LEWIS
N.Y. Times Service

The jailing of M.A. Farber, The New York Times reporter who refused to submit his notes to a New Jersey judge, is one of those hard cases that seems destined to make bad law.

Freedom of the press, respect for the courts, the public interest: All are likely to suffer. When the press and the courts clash — and that is happening more and more often — the press sometimes sounds as though its constitutional position must always prevail. I think there are important values on both sides. Whenever possible, therefore, confrontation should be avoided. What makes the Farber case so unfortunate is that this confrontation was unnecessary.

Farber uncovered suspicious circumstances in a series of hospital deaths years ago. As a result a doctor, Mario E. Jaselevich, was charged with murder. At his trial his lawyers asked to see all of Farber's notes of interviews.

The judge ordered them submitted to him, so he could look at them in private and decide whether they should be made available to the defense. When Farber and The Times refused, he sent the reporter to jail and fined the paper $5,000 a day to force compliance.

A defendant charged with a serious crime may have good reason to see the notes of a reporter who stirred up the case against him. For one thing, not all reporters are as scrupulous as Myron Farber, nor all papers as respected as The Times.

Suppose that, during the McCarthy period in the 1950s, a red-baiting magazine ran an article charging some man with illegal Communist activity. The man is tried. His lawyers have reason to think that the witnesses against him, in talking to the writer for the magazine, made statements inconsistent with what they are now saying on the stand. Shouldn't the lawyers be able to probe those inconsistencies?

One of the great libertarian decisions of the Warren

Court, (Jencks v. U.S.), held that those prosecuted by the federal government must be able to check the prior statements of government witnesses for inconsistencies. Soon after the decision in 1957 Congress wrote that principle into a statute, providing that sensitive material go to a judge first for his private scrutiny.

Against that interest of a defendant the press asserts its interest in keeping the government out of its business — particularly when the names of confidential sources may be disclosed. That is a powerful interest. But under our law, even strong claims do not usually result in an absolute privilege against being required to produce important evidence.

The Nixon case is the decisive example. A president's private conversations would ordinarily be regarded as immune from forced disclosure. Indeed, in the tapes case, the Supreme Court said they were covered by a constitutionally based privilege. But the privilege was not absolute. It was overridden, the Court held, by the particular needs of law enforcement.

Those are the kinds of claims that might have to be balanced in an ultimate resolution of the Farber case. But they did not have to be resolved now, and the confrontation might have been avoided altogether. That is clear from an aspect of the case that not everyone has noticed.

In showing for the reporter's notes, defense counsel made no asking of why particular things might be useful. They asked for everything. And the only reason they gave for needing it was an unsupported charge that Farber had conspired to "concoct" the murder charges. Their subpoena had the ring of the sort of fishing expedition that wise judges refuse to allow.

Here again the Nixon case is illuminating. Archibald Cox, the first special prosecutor, gave specific reasons for wanting to hear particular conversations the very first time he asked for any tapes. Leon Jaworski did the same. And the foundation they laid was crucial to the Supreme Court decision.

Election day a great tradition in Idaho and the nation

Idaho's candidates for governor and Congress spent more than a half a million dollars to get people to the polls today.

But predictions by the secretary of state are that voter turnout around Idaho will be low, something like 35 percent of the eligible voters. After the election, the political commentators of the state will undoubtedly lament the danger of low voter turnout.

They will grumble of how the majority view of Idahoans is not represented by the winner of today's vote.

Certainly there is that danger. It's possible the winners today will be elected only by political zealots.

But the victors of today's primary can be rightly proud of their accomplishments and should not be ashamed or question their victories.

Because, they will have salvaged a bit of political respectability in this age of apathy. They will be able to point to a constituency who believes in them enough to go the polls and vote.

Politics comes down to people believing enough in a candidate to work in his or her campaign and then vote.

Regardless of how low the turnout today, the winners of the Idaho primary are upholding the best American tradition of all, the right to choose our leaders at a polling booth.

Changing of a pope will affect world history

Within two weeks, Catholic cardinals from around the world will gather at The Vatican to consider a replacement for Pope Paul VI who died Sunday.

Reflecting on the 15-year reign of Pope Paul, the Catholic hierarchy probably will remember the deceased pope as a man who determinedly held to the conventional doctrines of the Catholic Church.

When choosing a new pope, one of the central debates will be whether the new pope will be an innovator or continue on the traditionalist course set by Paul.

Whatever the political and social views of the new pope, his views will alter the world scene as few other ideas can do.

Although he was the most widely-traveled pope in history, Paul was not an innovator as was his predecessor, Pope John XXIII.

Paul tampered little with the fundamental tenets of Catholicism.

It was Paul who 10 years ago issued a letter to the Catholic world outlining the church's official opposition to use of birth control pills and to abortion.

And throughout his reign, Pope Paul never modified the Catholic cold war against communist regimes around the world.

Because of these traditional stands, the Catholic Church lost some followers under Paul's leadership.

Around the world, the church's anti-birth control doctrine opened a serious rift among priests who supported the pope's anti-birth control stand and those who opposed it. It also put millions of Catholic women in direct conflict with the pope.

A Princeton University survey on Catholic birth control found 9 of 10 Catholic women now use some kind of artificial birth control measure, mostly the pill.

And the continuing battle against communist regimes around the world, while admirable, has cost the church some support and weakened the political leverage the church exerts.

In Italy itself, the Communist Party is the second largest in the country and many Italians are forced to choose between their church and their party at election time.

Voting records show fewer Italians are willing to abandon the Communist Party simply because the church says so.

In France and other European countries, South America and Africa, communist regimes are coming to power and playing a role in the formation of national governments.

The growing rift between the Catholic Church and the rising tide of Marxism almost unavoidably will lead to additional losses of church support or to armed confrontation between pro-Catholic anti-communists and Marxists.

Unhappily, there isn't much evidence the anti-communist Catholics can prevail.

The new pope must decide whether Catholicism should become more accommodating to Marxist regimes in an attempt to maintain some degree of influence in those countries, or whether the church should hold out against spreading communism and risk the loss of followers.

Most certainly the new pope will be forced to reassess the church's position on birth control.

A world rapidly becoming over-populated could welcome a Catholic Church that was an advocate rather than an opponent of birth control.

Regardless of how a new pope equates these issues, it is clear even into the late 20th century, the changing of a pope will affect world affairs the way few other events in the course of history can do.

Airlines asking government for tax money

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)
WASHINGTON (NEA) — The nation's airlines are promoting an audacious scheme calling for the imposition of a special federal tax whose only purpose would be to collect almost $2 billion for the purchase of new passenger planes.
The government's role would be limited to levying the tax on airline customers, then turning over the money to the airlines to finance the replacement of hundreds of aging aircraft with a new fleet of commercial jets.
Consigned to the corridor outside the hearing room were representatives of Ralph Nader's Congress Watch, who distributed literature describing the proposal as "a subterfuge to underwrite a new jet fleet at taxpayer expense."
The bill, the "Noisy Aircraft Revenue and Credit Act of 1978," justifies the unique taxation scheme on the grounds that the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) has imposed a 1985 deadline for jet engine noise reduction.
The industry argues that since the FAA is requiring quieter aircraft, the government should pay at least part of the bill by establishing a special 2 percent tax on all passenger tickets, then distributing the proceeds to the airlines.
The federal tax on airline tickets now is 8 percent. The bill technically would reduce the rate to 6 percent, then immediately add back the new 2 percent levy.
The noise abatement requirements are hardly a surprise to the airlines, since the basic legislation was approved by Congress 10 years ago. The most recent FAA regulations, issued in 1976, gave the airlines more than eight years to bring their planes into compliance.
The airlines originally told the FAA they could meet the new standards by retrofitting planes with sound-absorbing material at a cost of $250 million.

Trucker warns summertime motorists of driving risks

Editor, Times-News:— Being a concerned truck driver, the article in the Monday paper of the tractor trailer, collide with the Falls has prompted me to write: With the vacation season in full swing and the harvest season coming on, I felt a timely reminder to the people of this area is necessary.
During the time of year, the number of near misses between trucks and cars and recreational vehicles seems to increase. Whether this is due to the hot weather and fatigue or just plain inattentive driving, I have not been able to determine. When you are wheeling a 40 ton rig down the road at 50 or 55, it is an impossibility to stop in the same distance that a car is able to, yet people on vacation or the farmer gazing out his window at his neighbor's crops fails to take this into consideration. They seem to be oblivious of the danger of a truck coming up behind them. With the larger engines that trucks of today are equipped with, a car does not have to hurry and pull out ahead of a truck. Usually the trucker driving will be going as fast as you will want to go anyway. As a driver, I feel I can speak for a lot of other drivers and ask that before you pull out in front of a truck be sure you have time to get up to the speed limit so that we won't have to burn up our brakes and tires, much less run off the road or run into you or another vehicle.

Also if you will please pay attention to your rearview mirror and give us a turn signal or a brake light a couple of hundred yards before you turn, we will be able to slow down in time.
We do not want to ruin your vacation, nor do we want to damage or ruin our rigs. We want the road to be a safe place for you and your family. We also want to be able to return home at night to our families, so please, be a little more attentive, as we will try to be a little more attentive. Together, we can make the roads a safer place to drive.

Jerome tax group talks of 1 percent initiative

Editor, Times-News:— The following is an open letter to the citizens of Jerome County.
As a citizen of Jerome County we are sure you are as concerned as we are over the effects the one percent initiative might have on our county. According to the State Tax Commission, enactment of the initiative will slash existing 1977 property tax rates on some people in Jerome County by at least $14 million on an average of 66 percent statewide. Such radical and sharp reduction in property tax revenues will have a disastrous impact on our schools, police and fire departments, emergency medical services, street and road maintenance operations, libraries, parks and recreation services, senior citizens services, and other public services. This is only part of the problem, our committee believes passage will also create a burden on some people in Jerome County because their property taxes will not be decreased but rather increased.
In section 2, paragraph 1 of the initiative it states, "The actual market value shall be determined by the County Assessor but where, real property is concerned it shall be the actual use of the real property." This is a very critical section of the initiative and will have to be changed by the state legislature, we are assuming that the sponsors did not intend to disrupt the existing, real property distinction in the appraisal of real and personal property from operating property. Real and personal property is and has been appraised by the county assessor, operating property is appraised by the state tax commission.
We have tried to point out a few of the problems our state and Jerome County will be facing with passage of the one percent initiative. It would take a full page in this paper in order to point them all out, this is why we feel it is important that we elect candidates in the August and November election who have the background, experience and knowledge to deal with the problems.

Because of this our committee is supporting Charlotte Bell for Jerome County Commissioner and Howard Jepson for re-election as Jerome County Assessor. We feel these two individuals have been involved with the problems of Jerome County for so many years no time would be necessary for training them. They have the background, knowledge and experience to do the job right.
We feel that Mr. Jepson has made every effort to provide as equitable appraisals and assessments as possible under the present limitations and restrictions that are mandated to him by the state. He has always provided information to any query from a Jerome resident about their tax assessment.
The state legislature this year set up a Legislative Council Interim Committee to study county government financial controls and the one percent initiative and make recommendations to the next legislature. This committee has asked for an opinion from the Attorney General on what authority county commissioners have to see to it they will in fact be able to exercise complete control over the budgets of schools, cities, highway districts, water and sewer districts, library districts and all other local taxing districts.
If the attorney general rules that they do it is very important that ever that we elect Charlotte Bell because she has spent 13 years attending the meetings of all our local taxing districts and she knows their problems.

Mrs. Bell has also been working with tax experts on the one percent initiative and is attending the legislative interim committee meetings.
She has resigned her job in the news media because she feels that the job of county commissioner in Jerome County is no longer a part time job.
Won't you join with us in support of these candidate ana a better, more secure future for Jerome County?

Panama canal follow-up

Editor, Times-News:— Remember when the State Department said all those who favored giving away our Panama Canal to Panama suggested that such a gesture would buy their friendship? Well, last week the marxist Panamanian government called for the U.S. to give up its Guantanamo naval base in Cuba and give self-determination to Puerto Rico (as if they didn't have it).
The points were made in a 14-page document intended to lay the groundwork for a future foreign policy. "The centerpiece of our foreign policy has been the canal," noted Foreign Minister Gonzalez Revilla. "Now that an agreement has been reached with the United States, we felt we needed to redefine our foreign policy." Apparently, it is redefining it against the U.S.

Star attractions

Comedian Joey Adams talks about eccentricity and how some troubled stars turn to God

When show folks get set to toast their own, watch out — the "compliments" could be rather scalding.

In this last of a funny, two-part series, well-loved author-comedian Joey Adams tells why stars like Frank Sinatra, Jerry Lewis and Phyllis Diller are so keen for jumping out of the frypan into the fire... when someone else is doing the jumping. And he tells how show stoppers from Henri Bailety to Pat Boone have each done the "God bit" in their own way — only to find themselves with no place to go but up.

Part II: No Place to Go But Up
By JOEY ADAMS

If you think show people are eccentric, you ain't heard nuthin' 'un. You watch them roast their own. Some of the nicest murders I've ever pride themselves on is the massacre of their honored guests. The idea is, if you can't think of something nice to say about the guy, let's hear it. Like so:

• Frank Sinatra introducing Johnny Carson as "a legend in his own mind."

• Bob Hope at a luncheon dishonoring Howard Cosell: "Everybody is always picking on poor Howard, spitting on him, abusing him, insulting him — and rightly so."

• Cosell, in turn, embracing Sinatra as "an antique relic of yesteryear — the Paul Anka of the menopause set."

LOVE YOU TO DEATH

That's the way it is with the show business fraternity — they do you in to you to praise.

In this era of masculinist comedy, some of our greatest personalities have accepted honors just to be carved to pieces by friends who don't unintentionally hurt the ones they love. It's all premeditated murder — especially written and rehearsed for the occasion. And you can bet it's opening night for everybody on the dais until they get that first laugh, until the applause at the end.

Don Rickles, head executioner at many such roasts, is a very gentle man until he faces an audience, and then he makes Hitler sound like a Boy Scout. As soon as he's introduced at a roast, Don starts shooting from the lip: "He hooked Orson Welles with, 'Who makes those tents you wear?'" To Ernest Borgnine: "Oh, my God, look at you — anybody else hurt in the accident?"

Milton Berle said to Sinatra: "Don't just sit there, Frank, enjoy yourself — hit somebody." Jan Murray said, "What a crowd is here to honor Frank. I would say mob, but you know how sensitive he is."

This was at the Friars Theatrical Club Roast and fundraiser in honor of Sinatra and was the most expensive in history. A whopping $1,400 for the first-class seats and $200 per in the economy section. About $300,000 was raised and over a thousand humans of various shapes, sizes, billings and bankrolls came out of their homes from all over the world not to praise Caesar but to bury him.

But why Sinatra? Because he'll flush out the biggest names and the best spenders. So he's a little temperamental. So he's flattened a few critics. So he declared war on Australia.

THE MONROE MAGIC

It reminds me of the time I was on the set with Marilyn Monroe. She was always late and invariably blew her lines. I asked Billy Wilder, the director, how he could take her temperament. Billy said, "I have an Aunt Sylvia in Cleveland. She's always on time, makes a wonderful chicken soup, never forgets your birthday — but who would come to see her?"

So that's why it's Sinatra. Like it's been Hope, Jack Benny, Barbra Streisand, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis and so many others down through the years. But, if it all sounds like fun and games, look again. Every performer who sits on that dais is prepared. It costs a veritable fortune to do it all up right — for writers, for new gowns or tuxedos, arrangements, giving up paid jobs to do all this for free... why?

I've sat on the dais so many times, asking myself that very question. What do I need it for? What the hell am I doing, thinking up louse-ups for somebody I love? Why? And, on top of it all, I could be a flop. And, if I'm not a flop, I might offend a good friend or his family or manager.

At one dinner for a famous television host, I was toastmaster. We were pretty good friends until I said about him, "Success hasn't changed him — he's still the same arrogant bastard he always was — he's got a tremendous laugh, but I haven't been on his show since."

That was one bit I couldn't wait to do... or get away from. Like they say, be careful what you pray for — you might get it, in spades.

GOD GETS INTO THE ACT

But, don't think that little scenario stopped me from praying. Never! There are no atheists in dressing rooms. You read soon enough in show business that you can't do it out there alone — God is your co-star. Even a card-carrying non-believer who wouldn't be caught in church — even on bingo night — will look for a little help on opening night. It's Philadelphia, the first act is weak, the audience is tight, it's raining. At the very least, he (or she) will say, "Please, God, make the critics be in a good mood."

Or, if he sees a skinny little chorus girl rubbing her rabbit's foot or saying her bead, he'll say, "Put in a good word for me." At the very worst, it can't hurt.

I recall taking a whole group of stars to Birmingham, Ala., to help my friend Martin Luther King Jr. with his Freedom March. "How do you handle the haters?" I asked him. "Easy," he said, "love the hell out of them."

That's the idea — not to keep the faith but to spread it around. Walt Frazier, the great basketball star, says, "Everybody goes to God when they're doing bad. I go to him when I'm doing good. When I don't need him is when I thank him the most."

It's the story of Muhammad Ali who blames losing his title on "not being prayed up" and of Kathy Crosby, widow of the great Bing, who lives by a saying told to her by her

There are no atheists in dressing rooms; God is the co-star

Show business people like to 'roast' their own mother: "Living, Kathy, is giving."

SINATRA ON RELIGION

Sinatra talks about religion as "a deeply personal thing in which man and God go to it alone together." He reminds me of the little girl who was told the same thing — "Just you and God." Well, this particular little girl was in her room when her dad walked in and asked, "What are you doing?" She said, "I'm praying." He said, "I can't hear you." She said, "I wasn't talking to you."

My old pal, the late Jack Benny, always told me, "God doesn't lay out your life. Does he lay out wars? Sickness? Accidents? Of course not. He only lays out good — but you have to accept it and make your own life. Nobody can do it for you. You've got to make your own deals."

That's what my friend Bishop Fulton Sheen said when he addressed the state legislature of New York: "I'm not doing for myself. He has to blow his own nose, make his own love and say his own prayers."

"Faith is a star, and each terrestrial star has his own philosophy. Tim Hines claims he lives each day as though it's his last day on earth. When I told this to 84-year-old George Burns, he said, 'I live each day as though it's my first day on earth.'"

You don't have to be a star to believe. How about the unemployed hooper who came home singing and dancing and filled with joy, and his wife asked, "Why are you so happy? You know we have nothing in the house." He replied, "I know we have nothing to eat — but thank God I have a good appetite."

One superstar who loves to kid about his religion and everything else you can think of is Sammy Davis Jr. One day, he was on the golf course with Hope, who asked, "What's your handicap?" Sammy quipped, "Are you kidding? I have one eye, I'm black and I'm Jewish. Any more questions?"

The way I see it, all roads lead to God. If you believe, there are no dead end streets. It doesn't matter if you are Catholic, Protestant, Jew or come-as-you-are believer. If you're looking for God, he will build a path to your door and personally take you all the way as he has so many of my friends. For instance:

• Humorist Sam Levenson says, "My wife and I and our children like to believe that God dwells in our house, so we feel it is only proper that on the Sabbath we should return the courtesy of visiting him in his house."

• Pearl Bailey says, "My church is where I am. See this ground? That is my floor. See the mountains? They are my walls. And the sky? That is the ceiling of my church."

THE GOD BIT

In show business, such talk is called doing the God bit. Everything in show business is a "bit" or a "thing." Doing the God bit means doing your thing with the Lord or getting on the faith kick — each in his own way.

And I'm sure God doesn't mind our language. Prayer is love. It's not important to say "beseech" when you mean "ask" or "thy" when you mean "you." If it comes easier for you to say, "I'll do it your way," instead of "thy will be done," you can bet that the God who loves will dig it. I kept laughing at Bert Wheeler's great vaudeville act line when he said, "Don't worry — the man is coming with the quill," and his partner replied, "You mean the comforter cometh."

In showbiz circles, Pat Boone is known as a "square"; the word's out that he's a "God nut." Backstage talk is that he's a "faith bug." Don Rickles at various times has introduced him as "Mr. Clean," "Pat Bland" and "Goodie White Shoes." I once introduced him at a benefit: "Pat's so religious he wears stained-glass spectacles."

Pat laughs at all these "compliments" now. But not long ago he had a drinking problem, he was bankrupt, his life was mixed up and nobody loved him. "The trouble was," Pat says, "I'd lived in God's house for years without meeting and knowing my landlord. Now I've met him and I'm 'high.'"

Pat's 21-year-old daughter Debbie, who has a hit record, is praying as well as singing in her father's footsteps. Ten percent of everything she earns goes to the Baptist Church, of which both daddy is a trustee.

Then there are the Osmonds, Mormons all, who don't drink or smoke or cuss and go to the church regular as rain. And John Travolta, the scientist-guy... He says it cured his Saturday night fever, so he, in turn, tries to cure everybody who comes near him.

Show people are the greatest salesmen for the God bit — so, come on in and have your faith lifted, whether you're a star or sitting in the balcony. No matter how high you are or how far down, you can reach God. As Ethel Waters said, "He's only a prayer away."

Dear Abby

Dear Abby, My wife and I have been married for 10 years and have two children, 6 and 8.

My wife works outside the home, and I am in charge of the household duties. It has worked out very well for us, but our children's friends think we are a weird family and they tease our kids, and therein lies our problem.

We have explained to our kids that we are a normal family except that Mother works and Dad takes care of the house. They understand it, but their friends don't, and they keep ridiculing our kids mercilessly. We have even asked the parents to explain the situation to their children, but it seems that the parents themselves have a prejudice against us and consider us oddballs.

Any suggestions? Househusband

Dear Househusband: If others aren't able to understand your lifestyle, that's their problem. Don't worry about your children. They'll survive. In time, when they see how well your arrangement has worked out, they'll become impervious to the taunting. Never apologize for being "different."

Dear Abby: Ralph and I are both 23 and we've been happily married for 18 months.

My problem is my father-in-law. He's a golf nut, and he keeps inviting my husband to go on these fabulous golfing vacations with him. They are always held at fancy resorts, and Ralph (who is also a golf nut) finds these trips hard to pass up. I'm glad he and his father have such a good rapport, but I hate being left alone for long weekends every few months.

Please don't suggest that I go somewhere with a girlfriend, nor do something with my mother-in-law, because I'd rather not.

Ralph and I are usually very open and frank with each other, but I can't bring myself to tell him how unhappy I am when he takes off on those golfing vacations. Am I being selfish?

Girl Widow

Dear Widow: No. After only 18 months of marriage, you're still honeymooners. Tell Ralph AND his father that you're frequent golfing vacations are handicapping your marriage. And drive your point home now before those golfing vacations become a habit!

Dear Abby: I think your response to RED IN REDWOOD CITY was 18th century. Red said every man she met made a pass at her, and she was sick of it. Then you put the blame on her, and she must be sending out signals. And you topped it saying she should be sending out signals. And you topped it with, "No man in his right mind would make a pass at a statue."

Abby, why should women have to go around acting like statues? You should have told Red not to feel guilty about being attractive — or even flirting a little.

So about some helpful advice for a change, instead of trying to turn women into cold, unresponsive statues? Animated in L.A.

Dear Animated: I am NOT trying to turn women into cold, unresponsive statues. But I certainly would not advise a woman to "flirt a little" unless she was ready, willing and able to deal with the men who rise to the bait.

It's more 18th century to tease a guy into making a pass, and then to act insulted when he does.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular: You're Never Too Young Or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 1323 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Baby daughter's return lifts mother's burden

SPOKANE (UPI) — Catherine "Katy" Senske is a whole woman again. She and her husband, Chris, have their three-week-old baby daughter, Sara, back with them. Last Wednesday Katy made a mistake she felt she would have to live with the rest of her life. And the guilt was tearing her apart. She let a stranger into her house, a nice sounding, nice talking, heavy-set woman.

The woman, about 35 and weighing about 200 pounds, offered to watch the baby while Katy visited her doctor. She said her name was Chrissy DeVoe. She was at ease with herself and handled the baby like her own.

Ms. DeVoe told Katy she was from an organization offering free babysitting services to women who had recently given birth.

It all seemed like a wonderful arrangement. This was 1:30 p.m. Aug. 2.

It was the last time Katy saw Chrissy DeVoe and she thought it was the last time she would see Sara, whom she had carried inside her for nine months but who she had only known for 14 short days.

And for five days Katy agonized over her decision to leave Sara with a stranger.

She and her husband several times consented to do television interviews, pleading for the safe, "anonymous, return of their daughter. They promised not to file charges if only Chrissy DeVoe would call them and make arrangements for Sara's return, or just to tell them she was okay.

Each time the camera would turn to Katy, she would be leaning heavily on her husband and others, staring downward in disbelief and grief.

She hadn't the strength to say anything. The shock of it all was too much.

And the waiting was worse. For not once in five days had the woman contacted the distraught family. No ransom demand. Nothing.

The weeks bright spots in that that agonizing period.

The day after the infant disappeared, a baby was found in Golden Gate Park. The Senske's hopes rose for about 12 hours while police in both cities arranged for footprints of the found child to be sent to Spokane.

But there the bubble burst. It was not Sara.

And the Senske's friends often stopped by to make the vigil with Katy and Chris. They prayed together and talked to her about God's will and Sara's possible part in that unknown.

The weekend was a long, hot one. One day had been like the next, Ninety degrees in the shade.

Like her guilt, the scorching sun wouldn't let up. And the anxiety that Sara might be dead, and then the anxiety of not knowing. And hoping.

Sunday afternoon the silence was broken.

About 3-p.m. someone—a woman—telephoned Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, police and told them they could find a baby near the post office.

Police found a little girl asleep inside a shopping bag behind a garbage can.

It was Sara, the unperturbed pawn in the grown-up chess game. She had on a new nightgown and a clean diaper, none the worse for her parents' worry.

She had apparently been well cared for.

Monday, Katy Senske was her old self. It suddenly seemed like months had passed.

Brightness had returned to her face. She was relaxed, smiling a lot. The weight of the world—that awful decision—had lifted.

More consumer time bombs

Q: What happens to you, a consumer, if you buy a big-ticket item such as an automobile or refrigerator and then find that your expensive possession doesn't work?

A: Under the Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act of 1975, there has been a vast improvement in disclosure of warranty terms to you. But nothing has been done to compel companies that give warranties actually to fulfill them.

Individual problems, each with different facts, with the mass of problems adding up to a nightmare which scares over the brave.

"Are you and I licked at the start, as a result, and would it not be the better part of wisdom to admit it?"

Not necessarily, although it would be the height of folly to minimize the difficulties.

(1) If the filthy practice of "sewer service" (throwing a summons in the sewer instead of serving it) and other procedures which penalize the poor or near-poor just because they are at the bottom of the income pile could be faced honestly and tackled with determination to eliminate the discrimination, consumers who have been cheated on a warranty might be able to refuse to pay and fight the issue in court. Today, as the landmark study by David Caplowitz, "Consumers in Trouble: A Study of Debtors in Default," documents, millions of poor and near-poor don't even get a court trial even though they have legitimate complaints.

(2) Enforcement proceedings could be brought by state or federal agencies against corporations which show a systematic pattern of ignoring obligations under warranties given to the public. Or, perhaps a government body or private organization might "rate" manufacturers on their warranty performance.

If, for instance, Company One receives an "A" for warranty fulfillment, while Company Two is publicly awarded an "F," you, as a consumer, well might tend to buy only from Company One and bypass Company

Two. Competitive pressures then would force Company Two to improve its performance to try to earn at least a "B" or "C" or to rate an "A-plus" to surpass Company One.

In this way, the free market's unsurpassed competitive system would be able to function properly. You, the consumer, would be the main beneficiary. And there would be no cause for additional mandatory impositions of government regulations — with their usual heavy load of new costs and overkill.

The consumer movement has slowed in recent years — and for sound reasons. Many of its most ardent advocates are going far beyond steps to protect the consumer and entering into the realm of undermining the very private-enterprise system they professed to love so much and want to protect.

But the consumer's rights are not fully safeguarded, not by any stretch of the imagination. Rights of lower income groups, particularly, are being either pushed aside because these consumers don't know how, to whom or where to appeal, or because legal experts in the nation ever refuse to admit that these are the consumers most viciously victimized.

"The poor do pay more. The poor and near-poor frequently subjected to the ugliest of ugly abuses. The Caplowitz study is supposed to be slowly and quietly dying in the archives. But you who have read these two columns now are aware of it. You can act, you can fight and win — if you care enough. Do you?"

Northwest utilities draft conservation plan

SPOKANE (UPI) — Private utilities in Washington, Oregon and Idaho Monday announced plans for a multimillion dollar conservation program which, if approved, will include interest-free loans to electrical customers to insulate and protect their homes.

The plan must be approved by each state's regulatory agency.

The utilities are Puget Sound Power and Light, Bellevue; Pacific Power and Light Company, Portland; and the Washington

Water Power Co., Spokane, which also serves north Idaho.

"The reason for the conservation program is a concentrated effort to lessen the impact of future electric load growth on all electric customers," said Wendell Satre, whose company is seeking permission to loan $21 million beginning about 1983.

He said the cost of loaning the money would be far less than the cost of providing new generation.

Customers would be required to repay their loans within ten years or prior to change of ownership, whichever occurred first.

Satre said work would include caulking and floor insulation, storm door weather-stripping, storm window installation and water heater insulation blankets.

Only dwellings using electric heat as a primary heating source prior to August will be eligible for the program.

Curb on American loans to some nations lifted

©New York Times Service.

MEXICO CITY — Mexican officials are expressing confidence that the United States comptroller of the currency has quietly shelved a controversial plan to curb loans by American banks to developing nations with heavy debt burdens.

Mexico, with foreign debt exceeding $30 billion and 60 percent of the placed with American banks was one of several governments to criticize the comptroller's call last year for stricter interpretation of a law that forbids nationally chartered American banks to lend more than 10 percent of their capital to any single country.

And several American banks, including the Bank of America and Citibank, which have large foreign loan portfolios and earn a significant share of their profits abroad, have also been sharply critical of the plan, foreign banking sources here say.

As a result of the wave of opposition, Comptroller John G. Heimann has withheld making his proposals formal through an interpretative ruling of the so-called "10 percent rule" and, according to banking sources, is now in the process of reformulating his initiative.

Some sources also suggest that the comptroller was under less pressure to act since the departure early this year of the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Arthur F. Burns, who had frequently warned of the dangers of large loan portfolios in potentially unstable developing nations.

The critical issue in Heimann's proposal was interpretation of the concept of "single client." In Mexico and many other countries, state-owned agencies and utilities borrow as individual entities. If those loans were added to government debt, total borrowings would often exceed 10 percent of the capital of the major lenders.

To determine whether a state entity should be treated as a single client, Heimann proposed a "purpose and purpose test" — whether the government agency had the "means" on its own to generate income to pay its debts and what was the "purpose" of production.

Interest rates near peaks

Newhouse News Service.

WASHINGTON — Government economists and money-market experts are now concluding that the interest rates available on long-term investments — such as U.S. Treasury notes or corporate bonds — are at or near their peaks for this cycle.

This is only a prediction, of course — not a guarantee. Forecasting interest rates is always a risky business, and doing so in the current period is no exception.

In fact, some interest rates could well move higher in the months ahead, such as so-called short-term rates which have returns on obligations issued for a year or less. These could edge up, say, another half-point or more, even if the economy slows down from its second-quarter surge as expected.

But yields on securities sold for six, 10 or as long as 30 years don't seem likely to rise that much, if at all. The experts see a number of reasons for thinking why such rates may be in the area of their peaks. These include:

- The slowing in the economy from the spring surge should reduce the demand for credit from businessmen and consumers and by more than the expected increase in the Treasury's cash needs.
- As a result, the nation's money supply should be rising at less inflationary rates, and the credit-controlling Federal Reserve System won't have to tighten much more, if any at all.

"The current high level of interest rates could soon begin to brake economic activity further, if, indeed, it has not already begun to do so. The costs of borrowing money — an increasingly onerous burden — will decline, and as the demand for funds eases, the cost of "renting" it (interest rates) supposedly also would do so.

Recent spurts in corporate profits have generated substantial flows of internal funds for much of industry, making it possible for many companies to meet what needs they do have from their own resources, rather than borrowing.

"Hopefully, the rate of inflation is beginning to decline. Food prices, the major cause of the 10 percent-plus rise in the index so far this year, seem likely to level off soon and move down. Farm prices were off 1 percent between mid-June and mid-July, as the Agriculture Department has just reported. This change could be showing up at the supermarkets next month.

The forecasts of government officials, such as Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller, seem to be having a calming effect on the credit markets. Miller keeps saying that interest rates should be peaking by the end of the year.

Falling coffee prices may bring contract cut

NEW YORK (UPI) — Membership complaints about falling coffee prices and declining open interest have prompted New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange officials to consider halving the size of the coffee "C" contracts to 125 bags from the current 250 bags, according to Commodity News Service.

The exchange's coffee committee already has discussed the matter and polled some trading members, sources here said.

Last week the exchange sent out a letter asking commission house members for their views on the proposed reduced contract, which would amount to 18,750 pounds compared with the current 37,500 pounds, the sources said.

For some months now, the "C" contract has fallen victim to the twin ills of lower prices and falling open interest. Even speculative elements have become wary of buying.

A July 1975 frost in Brazil damaged 73.5 percent of the coffee trees in the largest coffee-producing nation and sparked a meteoric rise in green coffee prices on world markets.

From a post-frost high in early 1977 of about 12.90 contracts, open interest in coffee "C" had plummeted to 3,298 at Friday's close, according to exchange figures. Open interest is the accumulated total of all outstanding contracts that have not been liquidated.

The trend in futures prices has been no less reassuring to exchange officials. On April 14, 1977, a September 1978 contract traded at $3.40 but settled last Friday at $1.2256.

Trade and commission house sources contacted by CNS have mixed feelings about the proposed halving of the contract size, but all agreed it could be a case of late loss of its clout as a speculative and hedging vehicle.

Some sources termed the proposed cut "ridiculous," and one said it would deal "with the symptoms not the disease."

They said the coffee trade is the dominant force behind the contract and that the trade tends to strongly resist changes.

One source pointed out the current contract of 250 bags is about one truckload. He said the trade still would have to pay full-truck shipping charges for the proposed "half-contract."

Retorted one trade source: "That's ridiculous. You can buy or sell two (of the proposed) contracts. Let's face it: Something has to be done. The contract is no good any more."

He pointed out the size of the London futures contract is less than one-third of the current coffee "C" contract.

Sources familiar with the exchange's letter to commission house members said it asked members to submit their views on cutting the contract no later than last week in August.

Rear-end crash study extends to more autos

©Newhouse News Service.

WASHINGTON — Rear-end collisions that can result in fiery fuel tank explosions, a problem previously associated only with certain small cars, are being studied in an extensive range of passenger vehicles by a federal safety agency.

A special task force "is taking a good look at a wide spectrum of the vehicle population," a spokesman for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration conferred Thursday.

Both large and small models are involved, he said.

At this stage, the investigation is taking place on paper. Accident reports are being reviewed and engineering analyses of fuel-tank designs are being studied.

Based on those findings, the NHTSA spokesman said, a formal defect investigation could be launched leading to crash testing, vehicle recalls and tougher federal standards for fuel tanks.

The preliminary investigation follows initial findings by NHTSA several months ago that a safety defect exists in the fuel system design of 1971-76 Ford Pinto sedans and 1975-76 Mercury Bobcats.

NHTSA test crashes of 10 Pintos found that in low to moderate speed rear-end collisions, "massive" fuel tank leaks resulted. In two cases where the sedans were hit at 35 mph, fires broke out, the agency said, and sometimes doors jammed.

Ford has decided to recall some of the 1.5 million Pintos and 30,000 Bobcats. It has declined, however, NHTSA's contention that there is an unreasonable risk to safety involved in the cars' design. The company said it believes it can be demonstrated that in actual performance its vehicles are comparable to other compact and subcompact models during the years in question.

Whether Ford's proposed remedy and the extent of its recall will satisfy NHTSA has not yet been determined.

Still another fuel tank controversy exists with the some 155,000 Chevrolet Chevrolets manufactured in 1977.

According to NHTSA tests made to see if the car complied with new safety requirements, the 1977 Chevette struck in a 38-mph rear Impact leaked in excess of the one ounce of fuel per minute standard. General Motors' response to those tests still is being analyzed, the agency spokesman said.

In a related development, NHTSA recently rejected a call from the National Association of Attorneys General that all compact and subcompact cars with fuel tanks located behind the rear axle (which is the case with Pintos and Bobcats) be crash-tested for fuel tank integrity.

Camera inventor Hasselblad dies

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — Victor Hasselblad, inventor of the camera to which he gave his name, died Saturday in a Gothenburg hospital after a long illness, a company spokesman said Monday. He was 72.

Hasselblad gave his camera its debut in 1948 in New York. Its main feature was the interchangeability of lenses with different focal points. The United States has used Hasselblad cameras on all its space missions since 1962.

This stable raises cats and a few horses

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (UPI) — A racing stable that has horses as its sole occupants is a rare thing, indeed. Dogs, pigs, goats, chickens and even a full-grown cougar have made the rounds as stable pets, so there is nothing unusual about Calumet Farm's propensity towards cats.

“Oh, I'd say 18 came to dinner last night,” said John Velch, the personable young trainer who saddled Alydar to a 10-length victory in the Whitney last Saturday. “Sometimes it's a lot more, sometimes less. Most of them get dropped off by people who know they'll find a home here.” The cat population tends to be unstable, with cats disappearing, getting run over by careless drivers and horses, or even getting kidnapped.

Zorro, the furry gray watch cat who traveled with Alydar through the Triple Crown series, was stolen from the barn after the Belmont, while his black and white companion Blatta simply disappeared.

“I don't know where he went,” said Velch of Blatta, who with Zorro was the most widely photographed cat since Morris. “I do know Zorro was taken by someone, if only because he was such a pretty cat.”

Velch, who estimates his feed bill for the cats runs $150 a month, gives each cat a name as he does not believe in anonymity for any of his animals. Moreover, they all seem to know him, and the young trainer can often be seen in his canvas chair in the shed row with two or three purring on his shoulder or in his lap.

PTA, not the school kind gets 49ers into condition

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — It sounds innocent enough. Abbreviated, it's simply known as "PTA" — just like in Parents-Teachers Association. To the San Francisco 49ers, the 10-minute, 15-phase conditioning machine stands for "Pain-Torture-Agony."

The "PTA," a series of conditioning stresses designed to cut down on the number of injuries, was devised exclusively for the 49ers' players, who swear completing a cycle is more like a lifetime than 10 minutes.

"Football is a game of stunts and starts," Coach Pete McCulley said while watching a knot of players work on the machines. "With the PTA, you take the basic 'football' movements and stress them."

in great shape and it's hard, hard on your body. "Strength doesn't come overnight. You can't run and say, 'I'm going to get strong.' This is a long-range program. It takes time and dedication. What you try to do is reach a level and maintain it through the season and improve on it during the off-season."

When going through the program, according to Reese, "a player will bend his knees 144 times in exactly the same way he will while playing on the game."

During the past few weeks Campbell and the 49ers have gone through a rigorous training camp on the other side of Texas' Hill Country from Austin, where he built a reputation that earned him the Heisman after last season.

Campbell handles himself much like Colt. He appears mature and tough-minded in his business dealings. Before training camp began, Campbell dabbled into commercial endorsements. The list of endorsements included shoes, snuff, autos and furniture. His agent, Mike Trope, said Earl was paid $2,500 to sign autographs for 45 minutes.

Season ticket sales are way up. Oilers publicist Jack Cherry tells the story of the Houston auto dealer who had not renewed his large block of Oilers season tickets early this spring. The auto dealer heard the news of Houston's trade to obtain Campbell while on vacation in Hawaii, and when he did he called the Oilers offices long distance.

"Told the lines were busy, the auto dealer held for 20 minutes before placing his order," Cherry said. Campbell does not sell everything. He freely signs autographs after practice as he does his slow walk, the one that reminds NFL followers of Jimmy Brown.

"If I don't have time for the kids," Campbell said, "I'm spending too much time on unnecessary things." Although he has bought a three-bedroom house in Houston and he is working on buying a house for his mother in Tyler, Texas, Campbell said he does not have the urge to spend his bonus money.

Campbell has given back the $17,000 Columbia Blue Lincoln that Oilers owner K.S. "Bud" Adams "gave" him on signing day in May. "I didn't need a $289-a-month payment," Earl said. Despite the esteem in which his new teammates hold him, Campbell has not missed the hazing which is a small part of most NFL summer camps. He has stood on a chair in the Angelo State University dining hall and sung his favorite tunes for veteran players on a number of occasions.

'Old' Catfish comes on for Yankees

Cubs 5, Pirates 4

CHICAGO (UPI) — Bill Buckner's bases-loaded single scored Tim Lincecum and Ivan DeJesus to cap a five-run fourth inning Monday and lift the Chicago Cubs to a 5-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Lower Jerry Reuss was the victim of the Cubs' fourth inning. He gave up innings to Mike Vail and Manny Trillo and, after walking Dave Johnson, balked, allowing Vail to score. He walked Blackwell to load the bases and brought in reliever Ed Whitson.

Trillo scored on Larry Bihler's grounder and Whitson walked DeJesus and Rodney Scott to force in a glove-of-shortstop Frank Tomars sent in two runs.

Lincecum walked three runs in the fifth inning to Phil Garner, singles by Reuss and Tavaras for one run, a sacrifice to advance both runners, an infield out by Willie Stargell scored Reuss and Dave Parker singled to knock in Tavernier. The fourth run came in the sixth off Willie Hernandez when John Milner singled and was forced by Rennie Stennett. Garner walked and pinch-hitter Duffy Dyer singled in Stennett.

It was Reuss' second loss without a win—Donnie Moore's third. Bihler got his sixth win against the Pirates. Bruce Stettin got the last out to pick up his 22nd save.

Braves 5, Reds 3

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Dale Murphy and Rod Gilbreath each drove in a pair of runs Monday night to help the Atlanta Braves beat Tom Seaver and the Cincinnati Reds 5-3.

The loss knocked the Reds out of first place in the National League West.

The Braves scored four runs off Seaver, who was tagged with his 10th loss against 11 victories. Mickey Mahler picked up his fourth win in nine decisions with relief help from Gene Garber, who carried his 18th save.

The Braves scored twice in the second inning. Jeff Burroughs walked and went to second on a single by Joe Nolan. After both runners advanced on a wild pitch, Reds' catcher Vic Carroll was charged with a passed ball, enabling Burroughs to score. Gilbreath's sacrifice fly scored Nolan with the second run.

A walk to Nolan, Murphy's triple and Gilbreath's squeeze bunt gave the Braves two more runs in the fourth. Atlanta added a fifth run in the eighth off Manny Sarmiento on Murphy's sacrifice fly.

Mahler gave up two runs before leaving in the seventh after leadoff Braves two more runs in the fourth. George Foster, who carried his 20th win, added a two-run double during a five-run seventh inning Monday night which led the St. Louis Cardinals to a 6-5 victory.

Cards 6, Phils 3

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — George Foster led off the sixth inning and added a two-run double during a five-run seventh inning Monday night which led the St. Louis Cardinals to a 6-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Foster's leadoff home run in the sixth inning was the first of his career. He carried his 20th win and his 10th save.

St. Louis scored three runs in the sixth and four in the seventh. The Phillies scored twice in the eighth and once in the ninth.

Court rules against Kapp

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An appellate court Monday upheld a jury verdict against former quarterback Joe Kapp, who sued the New England Patriots and the NFL for $36 million.

Kapp left the Patriots' training camp in 1971 after three years with the Minnesota Vikings and one year with New England. He said he would no longer subject himself to the so-called "Rozelle Rule" and other NFL regulations regarding the movement of players between teams.

In March 1972 Kapp brought suit in U.S. District Court, alleging anti-trust violations and breach of contract. The case went to trial in April 1976 and the jury ruled in favor of the team and league.

Judge William Sweigert denied a motion for a new trial and Kapp took his case to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The circuit court, in unanimously upholding the jury verdict, said the Patriots had offered to allow Kapp to play without waiving any rights to sue in the event he was damaged by NFL rules.

The court also noted Kapp's decision to leave the football was, in part, prompted by a desire to pursue a less strenuous career in the entertainment business.

Chuck Sullivan, the NFL management council chairman, said he was happy about the decision but his joy was tempered by the fact that Kapp's career in football "was prematurely cut short by bad advice from an agent."

LA close to SF after Padre win

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Lee Lacy powered a two-run homer and Joe Ferguson had a solo shot Monday night to support the six-hit pitching of Tommy John and propel the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 3-1 triumph over the San Diego Padres.

The win helped the third-place Dodgers close to within two games of division leader San Francisco in the National League West.

The slump-ridden Ferguson, hitting a meager .195 prior to the game, staked John to a 1-0 lead with a two-out homer in the second inning off loser Bob Ojwinski, 8-8. Lacy, making a rare start on right field, homered with two out in the fourth after a single by Dusty Baker.

Improving his record to 13-8, John walked two and struck out three to gain his sixth complete game. Jerry Hairston homered in the third inning to load the bases on one out, before Mark Little got the final two outs of the inning to pick up his sixth save.

Lopez, 1-1, gave up four hits in seven innings. Roy Thomas started the eighth but walked three batters to load the bases on one out, before Mark Little got the final two outs of the inning to pick up his sixth save.

Larry Bova and Greg Luzinski hit ground rule doubles to give Philadelphia a 1-0 lead in the first inning. In the fifth, Bova hit a run-scoring double and scored on Reltz, throwing error as the Phillies made it 3-0.

Blue Jays stop Orioles in 2-1 battle

TORONTO (UPI) — Alan Ashby lined a run-scoring single to break a 1-1 tie in the seventh and Jim Clancy pitched a four-hitler Monday, giving the Toronto Blue Jays a 2-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Clancy struck out six and walked two to run his record to 8-9 and post his fifth complete game. He out-dueled Dennis Martinez, who allowed three strikes in dropping his record to 8-9. The loss was the third in a row for the Orioles.

"With the game tied at 1-1, John Mayberry led off the seventh with a walk, moved to second on a sacrifice and scored when Ashby lined a 1-0 pitch past first base.

The Blue Jays struck a 1-0 lead in the third when Dave McKay led off with a single, moved around to third on two infield outs and scored on an infield single by Bob Balor.

Doug DeGroot slugged his 20th homer for Baltimore in the fourth to tie the game.

Chicago 5, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Framar Johnson slammed a three-run homer in the seventh inning Monday night, enabling the Chicago White Sox to snap a four-game losing streak with a 5-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Trailing 3-2, Chicago got a single

Mariners 6, Twins 5

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Pinch runner Julio Cruz raced home from first base on a wild pitch by Tom Seaver to give the Minnesota Twins a 5-4 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

The Mariners scored three runs in the first inning off Dave Hightight, called up by Texas for the game from Class AA-Tulsa of the Texas League.

The all-stars scored on two walks and an inside-the-park home run by Charleston's Craig Coker.

The stars added three more runs in the third off Hightight in three hits, including a bases-loaded double by Syracuse's Gary Woods.

The stars finished their scoring with three unearned runs in the sixth inning—off-Ranger reliever—Len Barker, who got the loss. The runs came on a walk, two hits and an error by shortstop Jim Mason.

Texas pulled to within 6-1 in the fourth on home runs by Al Oliver and Gary Gray. Texas got two-run homers from Kurt Bevacqua in the sixth and John Lovatelli in the ninth.

Larry Bradford of Richmond got the win.

All-stars 9, Rangers 8

COLUMBUS (UPI) — The International League all-stars defeated the American League's Rangers 9-8 Monday night at Franklin County Stadium.

The all-stars jumped to a 3-0 lead in their first inning off Dave Hightight, called up by Texas for the game from Class AA-Tulsa of the Texas League.

The all-stars scored on two walks and an inside-the-park home run by Charleston's Craig Coker.

The stars added three more runs in the third off Hightight in three hits, including a bases-loaded double by Syracuse's Gary Woods.

The stars finished their scoring with three unearned runs in the sixth inning—off-Ranger reliever—Len Barker, who got the loss. The runs came on a walk, two hits and an error by shortstop Jim Mason.

Quarrie avenges Olympic defeat

EDMONTON (UPI) — Jamaica's Don Quarrie avenged his Olympic loss to Hasely Crawford of Trinidad Monday by winning his third straight Commonwealth Games 100-meter gold medal in a wind-assisted 10.03, the fastest time of the year.

Quarrie, who was edged by Crawford in the Montreal Olympics dash only to come back and win the 200, has won the 100 and 200 double at these games since 1970.

"I wasn't about to let Montreal happen again," said Quarrie, whose super-smooth action carried him first past Crawford and then Scotland's Allan Wells to break the tape one stride ahead in the outside lane. Wells took the silver in 10.07 and Crawford settled for the bronze in 10.09.

The event started everyone "except" the sprinters and long jumpers, prevented Henry Rono from breaking his own world record in the 3,000 meter steeplechase but the Kenyan still won the gold medal easily in 8:26.5.

Rono, who goes on to tackle the 5,000 meters Thursday, led a Kenyan sweep as James Munyala took second in 8:32.2 and Kiprotich Rono, no relation to the quadruple world record holder, won the bronze in 8:34.1.

England collected two gold medals in the women's track and set a first-day record in the 100.

Sonia Lannaman came thundering past the field to win the 100 dash in 11.27, thus depriving Australia's Raelene Boyle of equaling Quarrie's of three consecutive 100-meter gold medals in the games. Boyle took the silver in 11.35 and her teammate Denise Boyd the bronze in 11.37.

Doona Hartley, slicing through the headwind on the back straight, came off the bend to overhaul a luring June Griffith of Guyana and win the 400 meters from her teammate Verona Elder. Hartley clocked 51.69 for the gold while Elder was well back in 52.94 and Beth Nall of Australia collected the bronze in 53.06.

Daley Thompson, England's exuberant decathlon star, set an unofficial first day record in the decathlon which he has already wrapped up barring injury Tuesday. Thompson got the gold while Elder was well back in 52.94 and Beth Nall of Australia collected the bronze in 53.06.

Kenya's Fatwell Kimalyo, who won the gold four years ago in Christchurch, N.Z., was fourth in 13.75.

The women's discus was won easily by Carmen Gieseler of Canada with a toss of 129-11 (37.71) while Australia's Gael Mulhull taking the silver with 119 (57.60) and Canadian Lucette Moreau the bronze with 115-10 (56.64).

Canada's lead in the medal table began to shrink as the track events got into full stride, but the host nation still led with 16 golds, 10 silvers and 20 bronze medals. Australia's total was 9-12-11 and England's 6-7-7.

You can't beat me again

edged Crawford for the gold medal at the 1976 Olympic games. In the middle is Ernest Obeng of Ghana who placed last in the race.

Fitness needs more effort

CHICAGO (UPI) — Physical fitness buffs who work out less than three times a week are not achieving the best results, a committee of the American College of Sports Medicine says.

"Four different studies have found that two days are not sufficient to get the total fitness effect — body composition, weight loss and cardio-respiratory benefit," said Dr. Michael Pollock of Milwaukee, chairman of an ACSM committee working on sports fitness guidelines.

"This was true even among runners who did 4 to 4 1/2 miles per workout," Pollock said.

Pollock said committee studies have found it takes as much exercise to get into shape as to get in shape, but the workouts seem easier once the person is in shape because the body is conditioned.

He said even a two-week vacation from workouts will cause a loss in fitness. A byproduct of 4 to 12 weeks will cause a 50 percent drop and after that the person must start from scratch.

Luncheon ends up brag session

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — It was billed as the Big Eight Kickoff Luncheon but what it evolved into was a "testimonial" to the Oklahoma Sooners.

At least that's the way the seven other conference coaches made it sound Monday with their praise of the defending Big Eight champion. To a man, the seven agreed that Barry Switzer's Sooners should be the favorite in the 1978 race.

"If you don't pick Oklahoma," said Iowa State Coach Earle Bruce, "everyone here would just collapse. They have more talented players, more proven players than anyone else so I guess they should be favored."

"Oklahoma has an awesome football team," said Colorado Coach Bill Mallory. "I don't think there's a better team in the country. I don't think they have a weakness. I don't care what happened in the Orange Bowl — anybody can have a bad day."

"It seems rather ridiculous for me to even comment on the conference race," said Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne. "You people (media) pick Oklahoma and I can't quarrel with that. They had a good year last year and have the players back. I'm not going to concede anything to Oklahoma except that they deserve the role as favorite."

The Sooners have gone 51-5-2 in Switzer's first five years in Norman, winning outright or sharing the conference title in each one of those five years. His teams have lost only three of 35 conference games.

"I want to be as good as we can," said Switzer, "but the people at our place don't like 10-2 years. We've got to play well early. Last year we fumbled 12 times in our opener against Vanderbilt and lost seven of them. We should have lost the game (won, 25-23). But I felt at the end of the year against Oklahoma State, Colorado and Nebraska we were a very, very good football team."

Oklahoma outscored those three opponents 151-49 and was in prime position to capture the national championship with an Orange Bowl win over Arkansas. But the Sooners were shocked by the Razorbacks, 31-6, to finish the year 10-2. Oklahoma also lost to Texas, 13-6, on the fifth weekend of the season.

The Sooners have 43 letterman, including 16 starters, returning this season.

"There are so many variables in football," said Switzer. "Too many things can happen. I know Tom Watson can play better golf than he did on the final day of the PGA. He lost five strokes. Football's the same way."

Connors advances

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors routed Rod Frawley Monday night, 6-3, 6-2, in first-round play of the $210,000 U.S. Clay Court tennis championship.

Connors, seeking his third national clay court crown, made his tournament debut a few hours after the No. 1 and No. 3 seeds in women's singles, Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia and Kathy May of Los Angeles, were upset by unranked opponents.

Connors, of Belleville, Ill., needed just 70 minutes to eliminate his Australian opponent. Playing primarily a baseline game, Connors was broken only once, in the fourth game of the first set. He broke right back, however, for a 3-2 lead and ran out the set.

Fourth-seeded Corrado Barazzutti of Italy also won took his first-round match easily, 6-1, 6-3 over Patricio Cornejo of Chile, while No. 10 Jaime Filoli of Chile ousted Chip Tollson of Phoenix, Ariz., 6-3, 6-3.

Argentine's Viviane Gonzalez, who said her grandfather, Felipe Locletero, is her coach, ousted Jausovec, 1-6, 6-4, 6-0, while Carrie Meyer, Indianapolis, upended May, the 1976 champion, 6-4, 6-3.

Gonzalez, 20, a quarterfinalist at Hamburg, Germany, earlier this year, has been a pro for two years. She turned the match around in the second set and dominated the third.

Jausovec, 22, winner of the German, Canadian, French and Italian Opens over the last two years, arrived from Europe only 21 hours before her tourney debut at the Indianapolis Racquet Club.

"I'm very tired. It takes me a week to get adjusted, but I don't want to make any excuses because Viviana played well," she said.

Meyer, who has been competing in smaller tournaments recently, said her oversize racquet helped in defeating May.

"It's got a bigger hitting area and it's so important to keep hitting balls on a clay court," she said. "I just tried to stay with her. When I won the first set, I just tried to keep the heat on."

In a match featuring Australian veterans, Cynthia Doerner defeated Lesley Hunt, 7-6, 6-0.

June Jones directs Falcon win

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — June Jones came off the bench in the second half Monday night and directed three touchdown drives to rally the Atlanta Falcons from a 17-point deficit to a 20-17 victory over the New York Jets in the exhibition opener for both teams.

The officials called the game with 1:39 left when lightning and torrential rains drenched Giants Stadium.

Jones punched one yard for a score and threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to James Wright in the third period and put Atlanta ahead with 9:35 left when he hit Alfred Jackson for a touchdown on a fourth-and-nine from the Jet 31.

Jackson, a rookie from Texas, caught four passes for 105 yards.

Richard Todd and Pat Ryan threw TD passes and Nick Lowery caught a 30-yard field goal to give the Jets a 17-0 lead when Jones relieved starter Steve Bartkowski.

The Jets scored on their first possession, moving 67 yards in eight plays and going over after just 3:50. Todd threw a 22-yard TD pass to Wesley Walker for the score and a 7-0 lead.

Falcon 15 and Ryan hit Chuck White with a 13-yard TD pass.

But Jones, a second-year pro from Portland State, brought the Falcons back to 17-13 with consecutive TD drives of 71 and 70 yards.

Jones hit Jackson with a 46-yard pass in the first drive and went over from the one, then hit passes of 29 and 18 yards in the second drive before firing the touchdown pass to Wright.

Money thanks, doc

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eddie Dibbs, winner of Sunday's $175,000 Grand Prix tennis tournament in North Conway, N.H., may have his eye doctor to thank for his success on the courts.

Four years ago, a Miami Beach optometrist discovered Dibbs was nearsighted after the pro complained of difficulty in seeing the ball come off his opponent's racket. The doctor fitted Dibbs with soft contact lenses to correct the problem, allowing him to see things sharper at a distance.

Dibbs, 27, of Miami Beach, says the lenses make a big difference in his game, and help him compete against the top professionals on the tour. A member of the Bausch & Lomb Council — on Sports — Vision, Dibbs recommends an eye examination for all tennis players, both professional and amateur.

Football Giants down Browns

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Reserve running back Willie Spencer ran three yards for one touchdown and set up another with a 55-yard run to boost the New York Giants to a 21-7 victory over the Cleveland Browns Monday night in the exhibition opener for both teams.

Spencer burst off right tackle for a 55-yard gain to the Browns' 15-yard line early in the final quarter, setting up a 15-yard TD toss by reserve quarterback Jerry Golsteyn to rookie running back Billy Taylor for a 14-0 New York lead.

In the second quarter, Spencer capped an 8-play, 56-yard Giants drive with a 3-yard TD run. Joe Pisarcik, the Giants' starting quarterback, directed the club on its first scoring drive.

The Browns only score came when rookie wide receiver Keith Wright hauled in a 15-yard pass from reserve quarterback Terry Luck with 1:28 left in the game. The key play in the drive was a 29-yard pass from Luck to Keith Fimlan.

On the ensuing kickoff, the Browns recovered an onside kick and had an opportunity to tie the game. But defensive end Jack Gregory intercepted a tipped pass from Luck and raced 38 yards for the Giants' clinching score.

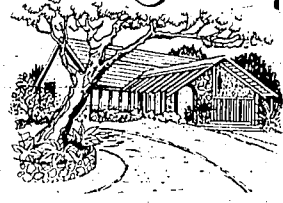

The game began with a heavy rain falling, but the precipitation let up as the first quarter progressed. The Giants drove to field goal range on their first series, but Oliver Davis blocked Joe Danelo's three-point try from the Browns' 40.

After a scoreless first quarter, the Browns drove to the Giants 28 early in the second period, but Don Cockroft's 45-yard field goal attempt was short.

The Giants followed with the only scoring drive of the first half, capped by Spencer's TD with 5:56 left in the half.

Baseball inducts Hall of Famers

Hall of Fame inductee

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn presents a plaque to all-time home run hitting third baseman Eddie Mathews during ceremonies at the baseball Hall of Fame Monday. Mathews and Pitcher Addie Jose and Larry MacPhail were also inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Mahaffey's luck looks better

OAKMONT, Pa. (UPI) — In 1975 he lost a playoff to Lou Graham in the U.S. Open.

In the 1976 Open, he led by two strokes with only two holes to play, but wound up a loser to Jerry Pate.

"After that, it only got worse. There were marital problems, resulting in a divorce, an injured elbow and finally a broken hand. His earnings as a golf pro last year amounted to a paltry $3,847."

IF the truth be said, John Mahaffey was on a five-year losing streak and was still talking downhill.

"I made up my mind a month ago not to talk about my past," Mahaffey said. "But I'll tell you this much. I had personal problems, injuries, a combination of events. That's why my game deteriorated."

"I'm healthy now with a happy marriage and a wife who works me. She makes me work till it's dark. She won't let me come home till I've worked enough."

At the age of 30, Mahaffey also has a new career. He certified this on Sunday when he charged from seven strokes off the pace and went on to beat Tom Watson and Jerry Pate on the second hole of a playoff. It was the biggest comeback in PGA history since the championship abandoned match play in 1958.

"Frankly, I deserve this," said Mahaffey as his second wife, Susie, sat beside him, clutching a bouquet of yellow roses. "I've been working awfully hard. It's been a long road back with a lot of disappointments, but this makes up for every bit of it."

Despite his own personal grief at missing out on what would have been his second major championship, Pate got into the spirit of things.

"I don't feel bad about not winning," Pate said. "You just don't know how much John Mahaffey deserves to win. I felt I put it to him in the U.S. Open. I feel I hurt his career. Something like this doesn't just turn your career around. It turns your life around."

"I'm only 24 and I have a few years in front of me. Hopefully I'll win the PGA one year."

lead over Pate into the final round, with Mahaffey seven back, also expressed satisfaction that his old friend had scored a major breakthrough.

"John and I were extremely close up to the time of his divorce," Watson said. "We've drifted a little because his new wife doesn't really feel comfortable with his old friends, and also we've been playing different tournaments."

"I'm really happy for J.D. He's an emotional and intense man. We've talked about winning a major before, and he did it in style. He went out and beat the golf course, he beat Jerry Pate and he beat me."

In addition to registering his first success since the 1973 Sahara Invitational, Mahaffey earned a check for $50,000, gained a berth in the lucrative World Series of Golf and won a 10-year exemption from qualifying for a PGA tournament.

His comeback was simply incredible, and actually started three days ago after a first round 75 that included four bogeys. In the last three rounds he bogeyed only two holes for scores of 67-68-66, giving him a 72-hole total of 276 along with Watson, who faded to a 73 and Pate, who closed at 63.

Although he birdied three holes on the front nine of the Oakmont Country Club course Sunday, Mahaffey still stood five shots behind Watson. But playing in the same trio with the leader, he kept up the pressure with birdie putts of 45 and 25 feet on 10 and 11, and suddenly found himself only one stroke behind as Watson picked up a double bogey on 10.

"It looked like it was turning around then," Mahaffey said. "I started thinking I had a chance when I made that putt at 11. It got the adrenalin going."

The 30-year-old Texan also birdied the 14th hole to take the lead for the first time, but then bogeyed 16, his first bogey in 32 holes.

In the playoff, all three parred the first hole, but Mahaffey won it on No. 2 with a 10-foot birdie putt.

"A foot from the hole I knew it was in," Mahaffey said.

And a quick hop, step and jump after that, Mahaffey was hugging his caddy, whom he borrowed from Allen Miller. In that foot, the past was forgotten and a new career started.

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (UPI) — Eddie Mathews, greatest homer hitting third baseman of all time, and Larry MacPhail, father of night ball, were inducted into the Hall of Fame Monday accompanied by a two-man "choir" of the golden voices of New York baseball.

Honored along with Mathews and MacPhail and commanding a major portion of the crowd's attention, were Mel Allen and Red Barber, former voices of the New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers, respectively, and Addie Jose, a brilliant pitcher of the early 1900s who died at the peak of his career at the age of 31.

Mathews, who hit 512 homers during a career spent mostly with the Milwaukee Braves, received the only standing ovation of the day when he accepted his plaque from Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. He drew an immediate laugh when he recalled that as a youngster his mother pitched to him and his father shagged files.

"As I got older and hit balls close to her, I found I got extra chores," Mathews said. "That's how I became a pull hitter."

Mathews, tied with Ernie Banks for No. 9 on the all-time homer list, said he was glad "Mel Allen and Red Barber are here to do the talking because this beat up old third baseman isn't gonna give you much."

A glance at the 22 Hall of Famers attending the ceremonies summed up his feelings.

"It would be impossible to explain my feelings," Mathews noted. "I realize I'm just a small part of a great game that goes back a long way and is a tremendous part of America today."

He closed his remarks with a special thanks to the fans who he said, "are what makes things go around."

MacPhail, who died at the age of 85 in 1975 after a career during which he pioneered night baseball in the majors and served as the president of the Cincinnati Reds, Dodgers and Yankees, was represented by his son, American League president Lee MacPhail.

One of the game's greatest innovators, MacPhail made enemies in baseball because of his unorthodox opinions and often-dominating personality, but his election to the shrine was considered long overdue by many.

"If my father could be here today he would enliven things," said Lee MacPhail as the crowd laughed. "He often said he wouldn't accept his plaque if he were elected but I'm sure he'd be up here putting in his two cents' worth."

"Neither I nor members of my family thought he was unfairly kept out. Even the most deserving must wait their turn."

After noting his father's influence in modernizing stadiums, introducing the player pension fund, organizing season and combination ticket plans and endorsing air travel as the club's method of transportation, Lee said, "If he could somehow see and know what is going on here today he would be very proud and happy."

The inductions of Mathews, MacPhail and Jose raised the shrine's membership to 166.

As recipients of the first Ford G. Frick Award for achievement in broadcasting, Allen and Barber held the audience spellbound with the magic of their voices. "Hello, there, everybody," said Allen employing his famous introduction. Then, recalling that he covered the dedication of the Hall of Fame on July 12, 1939, he added, "my heart beat as hard that day as it beats now."

Allen closed with the expression for which he is perhaps most famous. "I would like to place a copy of this plaque near my front door," he said, "so every day when I go to work I look at it in happiness and disbelief and say... how about that!"

Barber, who became famous as a broadcaster for both the Dodgers and Yankees, said "the importance of radio and TV, added to the newspapers, has made baseball grow — has made it into a family sport." He also noted that broadcasting has poured $700 million into baseball broadcasting during the last 20 years.

Calling Graham MacNamee (who started to broadcast in 1923), "the greatest baseball radio ever had," Barber proudly proclaimed: "This (accepting his plaque) is for Graham MacNamee and the others who went into a new land called radio armed only with carbon microphones."

You may discover what other people think about you

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, AUGUST 8, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are able to find out exactly what associates or allies have in their mind regarding their association with you. Also a very good time to decide what relationship you want to exist between yourself and others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Have a conference with associates and know where you are headed, what your true position is. Deepen respect for your own philosophy of life and live a fuller and richer life.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get into work that requires precision-and-gain-the-right-benefits-from-it. A co-worker understands your ideas and offers complete cooperation. Make the evening a happy one.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get in touch with good friends and make plans to meet. Your creative ideas are good, so put them across intelligently.

MON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take part in community affairs that could improve your position in the community. Be aware of how you can improve career matters. Avoid one who is working against you.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Follow through on inspired ideas and gain much benefit from them. Be more willing to make necessary changes. Watch your credit standing.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can easily handle any situation that arises. Find a better system for taking care of routine responsibilities. Be efficient, enterprising.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Getting together with a close friend can bring fine mutual happiness. A fine evening for attending a group meeting you like.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact your good friend and adviser who can help you to make suggestions to make life brighter. A situation arises that can be to your benefit if you handle it properly.

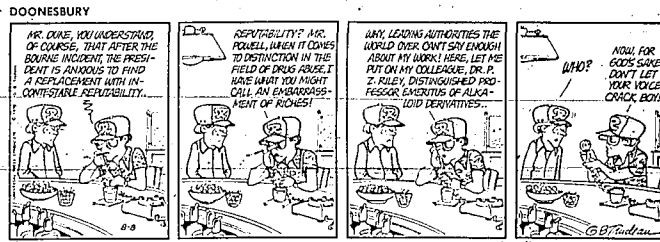

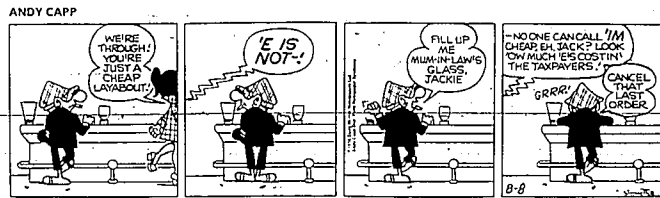

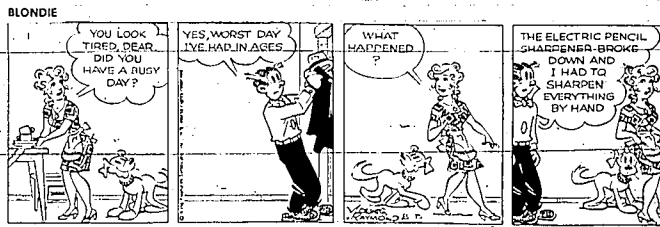

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Contact as many friends as you can today, since they hold the key to your future happiness. Study schemes that can prove lucrative.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) See a bigwig you know and get the support you need to improve your position in life. Make big strides in your career now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Out-to-new places where you meet people who can help you get ahead faster. Planning a trip for a right purpose is also good.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You now know what you want from a bigwig, so be sure to contact this person and gain your aims. You can later have more accord with mate.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will get along famously with others and should have the education slanted along lines of partnerships, working in large organizations, in peace-making areas. A fine organizational mind here and precision in all things is the forte.

What's what

Pipes, pipes and pipes

Every habitual pipe smoker has a favorite pipe. But no habitual pipe smoker owns just one. The one-pipe person is either a beginner or an irregular tinkerer type. Pipe smokers in general have been praised as a calm and thoughtful bunch. But they have something else in common, too. If men, they're highly conscious of their own appearance, of their presence, of the impression they make on others. If women, they're what you might expect, rather sure of themselves with a couldn't-care-less outlook. Or so a student of the matter contends.

Many of even the most traveled of travelers don't realize that Detroit leaves the east of some parts of Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia.

TOLL ROADS

Q. "Which of the toll roads nationwide costs the driver the most money?"

A. The Chicago Skyway. Its 35 cents for seven miles makes it a nickel a mile. Least expensive is the Spaulding Turnpike in New Hampshire. Its 23 miles for 25 cents amounts to 1.1 cents a mile.

Question arises as to which is the oldest specific sporting event in this country. Believe that might be the jousting tournament at Natural Chimneys in Virginia. Each summer, horse riders there peer not one another but their rings with their lances, I'm told.

How can you call yourself a real baseball fan, if you can't enumerate the 31 different ways a player can make an out? Three of the more obscure ways: Bunt the ball and fit it again on the way to first-you're out! You're on third and your third base coach runs toward home to try to take the fielder into thinking the play is at the plate-you're out! Run the bases backwards-you're out!

Catholics are still bitterly divided on 'the pill'

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It was 4 p.m. July 29, 1968, when the word was flashed from the Vatican that "the Pill," developed in 1962 with the help of a Roman Catholic doctor, had been banned as a legitimate birth control device by Pope Paul VI.

The papal encyclical — a letter containing authoritative teaching — hit the U.S. church in the middle of a summer that had seen other American institutions — political, educational, legal and religious — shocked by a wave of civil disturbances, assassinations, demonstrations and dissent that shook them to their very foundations.

No less so was the Roman Catholic church jolted by Pope Paul VI's encyclical "Humanae Vitae" — translated as "On Human Life."

For Catholics still high on the optimism and expectations of the reform-oriented Vatican Council II, the pronouncement of the encyclical came like a stunning blow.

The document, a theological treatment of the moral issues involved in love and marriage, reiterated the church's traditional bans on abortion, sterilization and mechanical forms of birth control, and added:

"Similarly excluded is every action which, either in anticipation of the conjugal act or in its accomplishment or in the development of its natural consequences, proposes, whether as an end or as a means, to render procreation impossible."

In these words, the contraceptive pill, developed in part with the aid of Roman Catholic Dr. John Rock and then being used by some 6 million women in the United States, was declared out-of-bounds for Catholics.

The Pope's action led to one of the most intense periods of dissent in the church's life since the Reformation of the 16th century.

"Humanae Vitae" was published in an atmosphere of speculation that the church would accept the pill because in previous years it had ruled out only those techniques that were "mechanical barriers" to conception. The pill was not a mechanical device but a chemical-suppression of ovulation.

In addition, a commission established by Pope Paul VI's predecessor, Pope John XXIII, had written a report in which the majority of commission members had recommended that married couples should be free to follow their consciences on birth regulation.

Despite the mood of optimism, there were hints during the summer before "Humanae Vitae" of what the Vatican would contain — and of the dissent it would provoke.

Washington D.C., days before the encyclical was issued, Cardinal Patrick O'Boyle issued guidelines on artificial birth control for the more than 300 archdiocesan priests to follow — guidelines restating the traditional position.

Some 140 of O'Boyle's priests protested the guidelines and in the furor that followed, 39 of them were later suspended by the Cardinal.

Within hours of the encyclical's publication, a group of 67 theologians, led by the Rev. Charles E. Curran, a moral theologian at Catholic University in Washington, issued a statement dissenting from the pope's teaching. "It is common teaching in the church that Catholics may dissent from authoritative, non-fallible teachings of the magisterium when sufficient reasons for doing so exist... "Therefore, as Roman Catholic theologians conscious of our duty and our limitations we conclude that spouses may responsibly decide according to their conscience that artificial contraception in some circumstances is permissible and indeed necessary." The statement was to gather the endorsement of some 600 theologians over the next few months and lead to an issue still unresolved: the role of dissent within the Roman Catholic church.

Jerome senior center opens

By LONNIE ROSEAWALD
Times-News writer

EDEN — "These old timers sure know how to have fun," said 71-year-old Elgie Wells as he watched a group of local senior citizens dine, dance and trade gossip at the inaugural dinner of Eden's new senior citizen center.

Last Thursday 65 seniors from the east end of Jerome County sat down to dinner together in a converted American Legion meeting hall which now headquarters the Silver and Gold Senior Citizens Center.

Joseph Nix, director of Jerome's senior citizen program, said transportation and companionship are the greatest needs of the seniors.

To meet the first-need, Nix's staff will transport seniors by bus or carpool from anywhere in the county every Thursday at noon for a meal.

As for companionship, there was plenty of it, as some seniors saw friends at Thursday's meal they hadn't seen in years.

Jesse Glendreeh, a 74-year-old woman who lives by herself in a trailer in Eden said she ran into friends whom she hadn't seen in four and half years.

Most seniors at the dinner live alone, don't get out much and cook for themselves.

"I get tired of cooking for myself," explained 79-year-old Ben Davis.

Local politicians took advantage of the situation to campaign or just to talk with their elderly constituents.

County commissioner candidate Bill Howell showed up and his wife Charlotte Bell helped serve the meal.

Commissioner Henry Shutte delivered a welcome address to an audience which included Eden mayor Claude Brown and the mother and uncle of Hazelton mayor Kermit Douglas.

If seniors had their blood pressure tested before Thursday's meal, Nix hopes this and other medical programs will continue at the center, which will be open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Sun Valley gets increases, 'poor image'

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer
SUN VALLEY — Sawtooth Fire Supervisor Ed Fournier approved Monday most of the Sun Valley Company's proposed ski lift price increases for the coming winter.

But the forest service official also rejected or modified several of the resort's proposed rate hikes and he admonished the company to improve its poor public image.

Faced with a "rain of worms" in deciding Sun Valley's much protested lift rate package, Fournier approved 16 of 23 proposed price increases and set seven rates at levels lower than Sun Valley Co. requested.

Neither Sun Valley Co. nor the Skiflatten Committee Inc., which mounted a three-month community campaign against the proposed rate increases, had decided Monday whether to appeal the middle-of-the-road decision.

Sun Valley Co. General Manager

Wally Huffman said he disagreed with the Forest Service's decision because he felt the company's proposal was "fair and equitable to the public as well as to the resort."

Skiflatten committee members were disappointed more lift rates were not rolled back but they were also happy the proposed rate package had not been "rubbed stamped." They said an important precedent had therefore been set.

The forest supervisor's decision will allow the daily lift ticket charge on Bald Mountain to jump from $13 to $15 this ski season.

Bald Mountain, where Sun Valley's primary ski facilities exist, is public land administered by the Forest Service.

"I deliberated a long time on this thing and made the fairest decision that I could arrive at, given the restraints which were placed on me," Fournier commented Monday.

"I cannot require Sun Valley Co. to charge prices lower than those charged by comparable or competing enterprises," Fournier stated. "This is a specific clause in the company's special use permit."

After evaluating Sun Valley's proposed lift price package, Fournier approved rates equal to or less than those charged at comparable resorts like Aspen, Vail and Jackson Hole, and he disapproved rates that were higher than at these areas. He also disapproved the company's proposal to raise the children's one-day charge from $8 to $11.

The forest supervisor said these rates were not reasonable and were higher than rates at comparable areas.

But Fournier did approve compromise increases, which were less than requested by Sun Valley, for the six-day children's rates, $48; the season pass rate, $50; and the one-day adult charge for discount card holders, $8.

Full increases, as requested by Sun Valley Co., were approved for the general one-day adult ticket, $15; the three-day ticket, $42; six-day ticket, $80; the seven-day ticket, $90; the 30-day nonconsecutive pass, $160; the three-day nonconsecutive pass, $42; the six-day nonconsecutive pass, $80; the Leap to Ski Better pass, $139; the 40 to 400 person group pass, $80; the half-day charge for discount card holders, $6.50; and the Blaine County ski student single-day charge, $6.

In a letter to the Sun Valley general manager, Fournier also said he received 34 letters from people concerned about the lift price increases and he chastised the company for its poor public relations.

"It appears that many of the quotes (from letters) reflect a poor local image for Sun Valley Co. — a local public relations program by your company that leaves something to be desired," Fournier wrote.

One letter excerpt stated angrily: "I'm very displeased with Earl Holding's proposed rate increases. I don't believe that an increase of 44 percent or 38.5 percent for the discount tickets that I would purchase is right! This man is stabbing the very people that make it possible for him to get rich!"

Another excerpt stated: "Taking into account the cost of living, return on investment, etc., the percentage increases are unreasonable."

In a letter to the Skiflatten Committee, Fournier explained, "I cannot require Sun Valley to charge the lower lift rates that you recommended in your June 29 memorandum. I also cannot require discount rates, season passes, or special rates for local children, although I would like to see their continuation."

The forest supervisor continued, "I sympathize with your concern about local economic conditions, and I sincerely hope Sun Valley's increased rates will not cause the adverse economic conditions you predict."

"I think we've proven a point here — that Sun Valley or any ski area cannot just walk over the public," Skiflatten member Brad Roos asserted.

Craven Young, another of the group's members, added: "I think we ought to be elated. I think we made a giant step forward." Young estimated the committee's work will save skiers between $75,000 and $100,000 over the course of next winter.

Fournier advised both Sun Valley Co. and the Skiflatten Committee of their right to file within 30 days an administrative appeal with the Forest Service's regional forester in Ogden, Utah.

Council pledges support to seniors, raps media

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council Monday night headed off a confrontation with senior citizens by telling an overflow crowd of seniors it never intended to cut back funding for the seniors' Meals-On-Wheels program.

Four council members blamed the media for "misrepresenting the council's intentions regarding the program, which provides meals to shut-in seniors."

The council then promised the seniors the program would receive the same appropriation it received last year, $1,600. The council refused to commit itself, however, to increasing the funding for the program if the cost of gasoline increased. Last year, $1,600 for the gasoline used to carry the meals to the seniors.

Before the seniors, who overflowed the council chambers at city hall, could voice objection to the council's earlier proposal to slash by 80 percent the funds allocated to social services, including the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center, Mayor Leon Smith said the situation had been "distorted by the press."

Smith explained his charge against the media by saying that no final budget has yet been set for the coming year and that funding for the program could come from sources other than revenue sharing.

The council last month, at the suggestion of Councilman Chris Talkington, had decided to cut social services funding from the revenue sharing portion of the city budget in an attempt to reduce city spending.

At the time, Talkington, a former director of the Senior Citizens Center, told the Times-News he had proposed the cut in social services funding in an attempt to institute a serious belt tightening by the city. He said he expected other councilmen to follow suit in their own areas of interest.

Monday night, however, Talkington said the media had created a misunderstanding and that he had always intended that the $1,000 left in the social services budget be allocated totally to the seniors matching their last year's appropriation.

He did not say if any money would be allocated from other parts of the budget to fund the programs which have shared social services funds in the past.

When the seniors finally spoke, Senior Citizens Center Director Kathy Fenton urged the council not to cut the Meals-On-Wheels allocation. Chuck Emmert of Twin Falls reminded the council that gas prices are expected to rise dramatically this year, and thus, matching last year's appropriation might not keep the meals rolling to shut-in seniors for the whole year.

Senior Citizens' center bookkeeper Clara Hine then asked the council if it would "see that we get gas when these people need the food."

Smith responded that the council could not make such a promise at this time.

County contests Showdown in Magic Valley

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Showdown-time begins around the Magic Valley at 8 a.m. this morning as the polls open for primary elections to settle numerous county political races.

Valley residents will be cast their votes for their local favorites until 8 p.m.

In Twin Falls County, the Republican race for county prosecuting attorney features Jeff Stoker, a Twin Falls attorney, and Len Elinger, a Shoshone resident whose law practice is in Twin Falls. Whoever wins the Republican nomination will be meeting Democrat Michael Powers, another Twin Falls attorney, in November.

In the other county race, two men are seeking the District 2 County Commissioner nomination on the Republican ticket. Tommy Walker Sr., a retired businessman, is opposing Will Buhler, a local realtor for the nomination. Incumbent Republican William L. Chancey is stepping down after years. The winner of Tuesday's Republican primary will face Democratic hopeful Opal Billings, a

Twin Falls housewife, in November.

In Gooding County, two county commissioner races and a contest for prosecuting attorney top the ticket.

In the first district, incumbent Jim Wilkins is competing with Will Thomas for the GOP nomination. The winner of that primary will face Democrat J.W. Leabo in November.

In the second district commissioner race, Anita Standal of Bliss and George Lemmon of Hagerman are seeking the Democratic nomination. The Republican opponents are Archie Walker of Bliss and Lawrence Crutchfield of Hagerman.

Acting Gooding County Prosecutor Gary Shaw is opposed by Severt Swenson. Both men are Republicans from Gooding.

There are no primary contests at the county level in Lincoln County and just one in Camas County, where Audrey Kelley is competing with fellow Fairfield resident Wilma Colder for the Republican nomination for treasurer.

In Jerome County, the second district county commissioner race pits Jerome Republicans Charlotte Bell, Michael D. Dahmer and Russell

R. Howell against one another.

In the Jerome County assessor's race, James E. Coakley and J. Howard Jepson, both Jerome Republicans, are running against each other.

In Cassia County, only two primary races are being contested, and both in the Republican party. Woodrow Barlow is challenging incumbent Calvin G. Helner for the assessor's seat.

R. Hilton Critchfield and Clive Holland battle it out to face Democrat Dallon J. Reese in the fall for the right to fill the District 2 commission seat being vacated by John Clark.

Across the Snake River in Minidoka County, four Republican primary races will be decided.

Dale E. Leslie and Cecil D. Dickson are aiming for the assessor's seat, Max Garner tries to retain his District 1 commission post over Elmer E. Ketterling, Lyle K. Barton does the same in District 2 against Glen E. Hawkes and incumbent treasurer Phyllis Norby meets W. Monte Robinson.

There are no contested primary races in Blaine County.

Three fires burn

BURLEY — Bureau of Land Management crews fought two range fires in the Mt. Cassia area Friday.

The first fire, located eight miles east of the Ogden interchange on Interstate 80-N, started about 3 p.m. on BLM land and burned about 700 acres of brush. About 31 men worked with six tank trucks and resorted to an aerial application of fire retardant to bring it under control. Estimated rehabilitation costs to the damaged area are $9,100.

The second fire, located started at 2:30 p.m. one mile southwest of Minidoka Dam, burned about 60 acres and took six men to control.

the original 35,000 acre area proposed was cutback at the behest of McClure and Idaho's other senator, Democrat Frank Church. Numerous complaints on the proposed site were aired in public hearings two years ago.

The smaller size for the historic area has been mapped out in conjunction with the National Park Service.

O'Leary damaged

TWIN FALLS — Fire damage to the new O'Leary Junior High School, now under construction, could reach $50,000, according to Twin Falls Police Chief Tim Qualls.

The possibility of arson in the Sunday afternoon fire is being investigated, Qualls said, but the cause probably won't be pinpointed for a few more days.

The fire occurred inside the east section of the building and burned stored crates containing surfacing material for the building's exterior.

The blaze is the second fire in about a month to strike at the construction site. The first fire damaged the building exterior and was ruled to have been started accidentally.

Park size reduced

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Legislation may be ready early in 1979 proposing that only 8,000 acres be included in the national monument proposal for the City of Rocks area south of Burley, a spokeswoman for Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, announced recently.

Yet another candidate tops Idaho voter poll

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — According to polls taken during the primary election, the Republican facing Democratic Governor John Evans in November will be either Vernon Ravenscroft or Tuttle, Allan Larsen of Blackfoot or C.L. "Butch" Otter of Caldwell.

If that sounds indecisive, it's because different polls have produced different winners. In the past two weeks four polls on the governors race have been taken. Two show the victory going to Ravenscroft and two show it going to Larsen. But most of the polls show Otter with surprising strength, and Larry Jackson of Boise as still a contender.

All of the polls have also shown large numbers of undecided voters. It is the people who haven't made up their minds who could decide the election today.

Monday, the Professional Resource Group in Boise, a non-partisan professional polling agency, released a scientific poll of the Republican gubernatorial contest. It showed Larsen finishing in first place with 20.9 percent, Ravenscroft in a close second with 16.6 percent, Otter in third with 14 percent, Jackson in fourth with 10.5 percent, James Crowe of Coeur d'Alene with 5.9 percent, and 2.8 percent for Jay Amx of Boise.

But in that poll 29.2 percent were undecided, and spokesmen for the polling organization said their margin of error was "between 6 and 7 percent," enough to throw the election to any one of the top four candidates.

But the Professional Resource Group poll was in sharp contrast to a poll taken during the same period by the Idaho Daily Statesman, a Boise newspaper. That poll showed first place going to Ravenscroft with 21.3

percent, 14.8 percent for Otter, 8.4 percent for Larsen, 6.1 percent for Jackson, 3.0 percent for Crowe, 1.6 percent for Amx and 41.9 percent undecided.

Only days before that poll, the Times-News polled voters in the Magic Valley. That eight county poll showed Ravenscroft would carry the Magic Valley with 40.4 percent of the votes cast. In that eight county poll Otter received 11.9 percent, Larsen 6.4 percent, Jackson 2.8 percent, Amx 9.9 percent and Crowe zero percent. Undecided voters made up 33.9 percent of those polled.

Shortly before the Times-News poll, an unofficial poll of Pocatello voters, the daily newspaper in that city, showed first place going to Larsen, with Ravenscroft and Otter fighting for second place. All other candidates trailed well behind the first three.

Jerome budget up 19%

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

JEROME — Next year's tentative Jerome county budget is $143,600 higher than the 1978 budget — a 19-percent increase.

The greatest increases in the tentative 1979 budget being prepared by the Jerome County Commissioners are in the department and courthouse building items.

The tentative figures were released Monday by commissioners in Jerome. Jerome County Sheriff Eliza Hall said his 40 percent budget increase, from $160,200 in 1978 to $140,150 in 1979 represents an added deputy who will be stationed in the Eden-Hazelton area and $5,000 to cover unexpected costs in transporting prisoners last year.

Hall said the $22,000 salary and expenses of the Eden-Hazelton deputy sheriff who was requested by those towns for fulltime coverage will be covered by matching funds from the towns and the federal government.

The 20 percent jump in the courthouse building budget from last year's $135,640 to next year's $163,000 was caused by provisions for the Murlaugh bridge.

County Clerk Virginia Ricketts said the money may not be spent next year.

The prosecuting attorney's office increased its allocation by 35 percent over last year.

Most of the $12,200 increase is for the salary of an additional secretary who will be hired.

The only decreased item in the budget was the recreation department's allocation, from $15,000 in 1978 to zero this year.

Besides that saving, the coroner's office's only cut: agency to hold the line in spending, at $3,550.

Utah coal miners set record

HUNTINGTON, Utah (UPI) — American Coal Company's mining operations near Huntington have set a record for a one-day output of 18,594 tons of coal.

Ray Christensen, American vice president of operations, said the firm's five mines in Emery County established the record coal output July 20.

Christensen said the record follows a single-day record for one mine of 10,466 tons from American's Deer Creek Mine on May 11.

He said in May the Deer Creek Mine produced 166,203 tons of coal. And the five mines — including the Beehive, Deseret, Little Dove and Wilburg — had a company-wide record monthly output of 312,178 tons of coal in May.

Now you know

WASH. D.C. — Pro-gun lobby groups spent $23.2 million to defeat anti-gun legislation the first three months of 1978, according to Congressional record figures.

The Citizens Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms released the figures, saying it topped the list by spending $150,050 in the first quarter.

TWIN FALLS The Walt Burdick family in Twin Falls probably holds the title as the most politically involved of any Magic Valley family and their front lawn will verify this.

Unlike most families who are solidly behind a certain candidate, the Burdicks do not agree on any one individual. In the gubernatorial race at least three of the candidates will get a vote, and they also expect to split on some of the other races.

Jeff Burdick, 18, an old campaigner of many previous elections, is throwing his support to Allan Larsen for governor, in the Republican primary. He is serving as a coordinator for Larsen in this area and his mother says he is working especially hard this year because he will be able to vote for the first time. Jeff supported Roy Truby when he first ran for superintendent of schools on the Democratic ticket and also supported Glen Wagener when he was 15 years old.

Another of the Burdicks sons, John, is working hard for Larry Jackson in the Republican gubernatorial nomination race and Walt Burdick is holding out for C.L. (Butch) Otter.

Donna Burdick, mother and wife of the other political workers says her sign in the lawn says "undecided."

"I'm trying to get along with everyone and I don't want to disappoint anyone. I guess I've pretty well made up my mind but I may keep it a secret," she said.

She said another of her sons, Doug Burdick, can't vote at all because he just arrived from California and cannot register here.

Each of the family members has placed campaign signs in the Burdick front lawn and from some unknown source a "Leroy" appeared Saturday morning. The family decided to adopt Leroy (David Leroy, candidate for Attorney General) since he's running unopposed on the Republican ticket.

In fact, Mrs. Burdick says she thinks the all of the family voters are also casting ballots for James Jones, Jerome, who is seeking the Republican nomination for Second District Congressman from Idaho.

In fact, Mrs. Burdick family talks politics at every meal and during all of their other get togethers. Mrs. Burdick says there aren't any real arguments or disagreements.

"Everyone has a favorite and the discussions are usually friendly but informative," says Mrs. Burdick, who happens to be an election judge this year.

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age

Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Truc, all hearing problems are not alike . . . and some cannot be helped by a hearing aid. But audiologists report that many can. So, send for this free model now, and wear it in the privacy of your own home. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 2755, Beltone Electronics Corp., 4201 W. Victoria, Chicago, Ill. 60646.

Two die in murder-suicide

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — Bonneville County sheriff's officers said Monday 2 persons were dead and a third in critical condition in what they believe to be a murder-suicide earlier in the day at Iona just east of Idaho Falls.

Officers said when Mrs. Henry Jackson returned home Monday morning, she found the bodies of her husband and a son and a second son beaten but still alive.

She returned from work to find her husband dead of suffocation and a 18-year-old son, Rickey Nessen beaten to death.

She found the body of her husband in the bathroom and the son's body was located in the hallway.

Badly beaten, but still alive was Ronda Mae Nesson. Officers said the Nesson girl was in extremely serious condition.

Church pushes for gasahol

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, Monday said at the opening session of two days of Senate hearings the use of gasahol can solve crop surplus problems and help eliminate the nation's dependence on foreign oil.

A Bill Church is sponsoring would require oil companies to market gasahol by 1991. It would also mandate that by 1990 all gasoline sold in the country consist of 10-percent alcohol distilled from renewable resources such as surplus grain and other crops.

There are extremely good reasons why a national requirement for using gasahol should exist," Church said. "The spectre of dwindling domestic petroleum supplies, and of another possible Arab oil embargo, coupled with the inescapable balance-of-trade deficit, all point to severe economic and transportation problems for America."

Church said the implementation of gasahol would provide the United States a buffer against an embargo or economic disaster.

Conversion of surplus crops would help farmers while providing additional fuel resources for the nation, Church said.

Gasahol, a mixture of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent gasahol, burns in all automobiles without adjustment, Church said.

Low salt diet urged for diabetics, the hypertense

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb,
I have to restrict my intake of sweets, fatty foods, salt and all fried foods as I am both a diabetic and a hypertensive.

why I think people with your kind of problems who need to restrict their salt would be better off to prepare their own foods from fresh fruits and vegetables.
For a food that provides a considerable amount of protein and is still low in sodium you can use mature bean seeds.

improve their flavor they can be prepared with a variety of spices. Of course, if you eat raw fruits such as raw apples they won't require anything to be added.
There are good studies that show that eating a raw apple will not raise your blood sugar and should be all right for diabetics.

depends entirely on how much your doctor wishes to restrict your sodium.
A baked breast of chicken with the skin removed, is an excellent source of protein and it is low in fat, low in calories and three-and-a-half ounces (raw weight of meat only) contains less than 60 mg of sodium.

Cornelia Wallace fighting for nomination

N.Y. Times News Service
BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — "I just want to see the people have a governor who doesn't have to worry about asphalt coats," Cornelia Wallace lectured a grumpy public relations man at the offices of the American Cast Iron Pipe Co. here.

cried with a burst of nervous laughter, feigning innocence when asked to explain her remark. Alabama's former First Lady, a tall, smartly dressed woman with scuffed, dowdy attire and sensible shoes favored by most female candidates in the South, squirmed in the seat of her campaign car.

Muncaster, Ralph Price, Fred Sander and Charles Woods.
Despite her claim of high name recognition, Mrs. Wallace's candidacy is ridiculed by other politicians. "People are laughing at her," a prominent state legislator said. "Nobody thinks she's serious."

yet to be tested on the campaign trail. Mrs. Wallace's trip here was one of her first full days on the hustings, and it was clear that this was unlike any previous Wallace campaign. For one thing, there is little money and no professional advance work. The campaign's only paid employee is Mrs. Wallace's driver and coordinator, a 22-year-old woman with no previous experience in Alabama politics.

Agents warned by Amin

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — President Idi Amin Monday accused the CIA and "spies of British imperialism" of spreading false reports that Cuban troops had been flown to Uganda and warned that any agents found in his country would "end up before the firing squad."

It is possible, she said cautiously, that neither her former husband nor her uncle, James Folsom, who served two terms as governor, personally participated in the "traditionally" corrupt operations of Alabama's highway, finance and liquor control departments. "I don't want to say that I have knowledge of George Wallace and Jim Folsom doing anything dishonest," she said.

Such statements have done little to tone down what Mrs. Wallace calls "my ray image." Rice, the Nashville book-agent-whose own-Tops-Billing Inc., has been unable to get Mrs. Wallace the lucrative engagements that he has arranged for the president's brother.

Before their divorce, Wallace had mentioned "that he would run me for governor when he couldn't run anymore," she said, just as in 1966, he had run his first wife, the late Gov. Lurleen B. Wallace, as his surrogate.

Several Ugandan refugee groups in East Africa said they were indications another shakeup was taking place within the army but could not confirm the presence of any Cuban troops.

But Mrs. Wallace acknowledged, it is a debt she can't collect. Wallace usually responds with "no comment" when asked about his former wife. "I've been campaigning for them all my life. They owe me a political debt."

"I think electricity should be free," Mrs. Wallace said. "I do, and water, too. Alabama Power Co. is' keeping people in this state from being able to put away money for their children's education—Some of my opponents may try to go out and drum up another issue with a little bit of demagoguery in it. But the real issue is the high cost of living, and the only thing the state can do is to get these electricity bills down."

As the afternoon wore on, Mrs. Wallace and her driver headed for a plant where the management had agreed to let her greet the workers at the shift change. Mrs. Wallace's thoughts turned to the subjects of image-and-publicity, which she considers her areas of expertise.

The Ugandan dictator, who came to power in 1971, has survived at least 13 assassination and coup attempts and in the past regularly has purged the army of suspected plotters.

Several of the attempts against him were led by army and air force officers. "Uganda does not have any foreign troops or hired mercenaries," Radio Uganda quoted Amin as saying.
