

Hansen and Kress win

MAGIC VALLEY — Rep. George Hansen lost six of eight Magic Valley counties, but apparently defeated challenger Jim Jones for the Republican nomination in Idaho's 2nd congressional district.

Jones conceded the race early today.

"It looks like Hansen has won. I'll support him in the general election," Jones said.

With 378 of 419 precincts reporting, Hansen tallied 32,438 compared to Jones' 25,988.

On the Democratic side of the 2nd district congressional race, Stan Kress had a substantial lead over Ralph Harding, 8,497 to 5,321.

Hansen won both Cassia and Mindoko Counties by wide margins, but lost Twin Falls County by more than 1,000 votes and trailed in other Magic Valley counties to newcomer challenger James Jones of Jerome.

Jones took his home county with 1,680 votes to Hansen's 978. He polled 1,324 votes in Gooding County compared to Hansen's 983. In Lincoln County the score was 464 for Jones and 341 for Hansen; in Blaine County, 438 to 269 and in Camas County, 127 to 103. Hansen took Cassia County by storm, however, with 1,021 votes to Jones' 842. He also won Mindoko County handsily with 1,541 votes to Jones' 1,066.

Jones won Magic Valley with 6,656 votes to Hansen's 7,263 votes, a margin of 8.7 percent, but was trailing in the district as a whole early Wednesday morning.

With a lead of nearly 4,000 votes in the district, Hansen appeared destined for victory early today.

Hansen said his lead indicated "the citizens of Idaho are very concerned about the issues that face them in the nation, which is the reason I've always carried primaries and general elections."

Hansen said the hotly contested governor's race caused a heavy democratic crossover in counties which are usually solidly Republican, which made his primary race "a lot closer than it normally would have been" and "gave them a chance to take two cracks at the incumbent."

He predicted the general election would be a "re-run" of his 1976 contest against Kress, and expressed confidence in his ability to beat Kress.

He said he would be able to campaign more in the general election because Congress will have some recesses during the campaign, and he warned his opponent, "Look out! We're going to be out here with both feet and both hands."

Kress said his chances in the general election against Hansen "look good," especially in light of the favorable results of polls taken to date.

He said Jones' strong showing in the Republican primary "shows the weakness of George Hansen, when you see how close Jones is coming."

Harding defeated Kress in Camas County, 32-14 but elsewhere in southern Idaho, Kress won:

- Twin Falls County: Kress 825, Harding 346;
- Lincoln County: Kress 62, Harding 37;
- Gooding County: Kress 226, Harding 157;
- Blaine County: Kress 272, Harding 140
- Cassia County: Kress 300, Harding 169
- Jerome County: Kress 224, Harding 169
- Mindoko County: Kress 388, Harding 266

Allan Larsen campaigning earlier this summer in the Magic Valley

Larsen closing in on GOP nomination

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Republicans appear to have nominated Allan Larsen as their challenger to Democratic Gov. John Evans in November.

With 629 out of the state's 849 precincts reporting early this morning, Larsen of Blackfoot held a 600 vote margin over Vernon Ravenscroft of Tuggle.

Larry Jackson of Boise, James Crowe of Coeur d'Alene and Jay Amyx of Boise were all far behind the three leading candidates.

Here were the candidates and their vote totals at 2 a.m. this morning:

- Larsen — 33,571
- Ravenscroft — 31,795
- Otter — 29,879
- Jackson — 13,237
- Crowe — 4,335
- Amyx — 4,793

The surprisingly close election came after a tight to moderate turnout in most parts of the state.

Larsen told the Times-News early this morning, "It's still too early to claim victory."

He added it was also too early to discuss a recount of the votes.

"I'm ahead, and if I win I surely won't ask for a recount. But we'll have to look at all the facts."

By telephone from Boise, Ravenscroft told the Times-News he would support a recount.

"With that few votes between us, if there are any indications of mistakes or errors, you bet, anything that justifies it," he said.

Ravenscroft said, however, he expected all Republican candidates would unite behind the effort to find an accurate count. "I would think from the standpoint of wanting to be positive about the result, the party and the candidates would unite (behind the effort of a recount)," he said.

Although most of Idaho experienced warm and sunny weather, turnout was nowhere near what was expected in 1976.

On the Democratic side of the ticket, incumbent Democratic Gov. John Evans was unopposed in his bid for election.

Evans said Tuesday night he would welcome a race against any of the three front-running Republicans, but said he was disappointed at the voter turnout.

Evans said he will consider proposing to the legislature changes in Idaho's primary election date to encourage more voters to go to the polls, Evans said, adding he favored a primary election in early September.

Larsen had been considered the underdog of the campaign until Monday of this week.

On that date a poll released by a professional polling organization in Boise showed him with a narrow lead over Ravenscroft and Otter.

Prior to that poll, Ravenscroft had been assumed to be the frontrunner. Ravenscroft said he expected to carry 35 to 40 percent of the primary vote, a total that eluded him. No governor in Idaho history has ever been from the Magic Valley, a record Ravenscroft

Ravenscroft — counted heavily on name identification acquired from a race for governor in 1970, a race for lieutenant governor in 1974, and two years after that as chairman of the state Republican Party.

Idaho Speaker of the House Larsen scored heavily in eastern Idaho and held his own in other parts of the state, while Otter was finishing a strong second or third place in many counties.

Jackson, a Boise state representative and former professional baseball player was the elections big loser.

A key lawmaker in the legislature, Jackson was the co-chairman — along with Sen. Richard High of Twin Falls — of the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee.

His defeat Tuesday means the next legislature will see a scramble to fill that post.

Crowe, a north Idaho land developer and former college professor held his own only in north Idaho, while Amyx showed little strength outside of Boise, the city where he served two terms as Mayor.

Barker rejects party challenge

TWIN FALLS — Incumbent Senator John Barker of Buhl beat back a sharp challenge from John Birch member and Republican Herbert Deuel Tuesday, winning his party's nomination and the right to seek a seventh term in the legislature for Legislative District 24.

Barker, who has served 12 years in the legislature, trounced Deuel better than two to one when the final returns were tallied. Barker received 1,896 votes to 841 votes for Deuel.

This means that Barker will face Democrat George Anthony of Castleford in the November general election. Anthony, who was unopposed in the Democratic primary, received 428 votes.

Carter may float through Idaho

BOISE (UPI) — President Carter may be coming to Idaho to float down the famous "River of No Return," KTVB television news reported Tuesday.

The station said the White House had an Idaho trip under consideration and under the preliminary stages of planning, but administrative sources refused to officially confirm or deny that an Idaho trip is a possibility.

KTVB said if the presidential visit does take place, it will be billed as a "rest and recreation" trip rather than a news-making appearance. Tentative plans include a float trip down the middle fork of the Salmon River during the third week of August.

If the presidential trip does materialize, it will include the first lady, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus and his wife, Carol.

Although the White House would not confirm the possibility of an Idaho visit, KTVB news was told the president's future vacation plans probably will be firmed up and announced later this week.

Meantime, The Lewiston Morning Tribune reported that the trip is scheduled to begin Aug. 21 near Dagger Falls northwest of Stanley and will take three to four days — ending at the confluence with the main Salmon River.

At Camp David in September Sadat, Begin and Carter to meet

Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Egyptian President Anwar el-Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin will meet with President Carter at Camp David, Md., Sept. 5 to seek a "framework" for a Middle East peace agreement, the White House said Tuesday.

In a terse announcement, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, in Alexandria, Egypt, Tuesday, after meeting with Egyptian officials, informed Carter that both Sadat and Begin "have welcomed this meeting."

The summit next month at Camp David will be the first face-to-face meeting between the two leaders since their Christmas Day talks at Ismailia, Egypt.

At the White House briefing for reporters, a high-level administration official said the meeting could achieve "a great deal in narrowing down the differences" between the two sides.

However, the official stressed that "we have no illusion that the meeting at Camp David itself will produce a settlement."

Powell said Carter is "gratified" by the response to his invitation. The press secretary said each leader will be accompanied by a small delegation of aides to help in the negotiations. No specific timetable for the talks has yet been set, Powell added.

Prior to Tuesday's White House announcement, Carter briefed House and Senate leaders and members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the coming Camp David summit.

Senate Majority Whip Alan Cranston, D-Calif., later told reporters Carter expressed "his great concern about the deteriorating situa-

William Murphy beats Eld

BOISE — Incumbent Lieutenant Governor William Murphy of Wallace soundly defeated his opponent Ray Eld, mayor of Garden City, in Tuesday's Democratic primary race for lieutenant governor.

In November, Murphy will oppose Idaho Senate President Pro Tempore Phillip Batt of Wilder who ran unopposed in the Republican primary.

Murphy, who formerly served as Governor Cecil Andrus' special liaison officer to the Idaho Legislature, assumed duties as lieutenant governor in 1977 when Andrus' successor John V. Evans appointed him to the post.

In Tuesday's primary race, Murphy trounced relatively unknown Eld in all areas of the state. With 541 of 849 precincts reporting, Murphy had gathered 22,541 votes to Eld's 4,066. Batt, running unopposed, drew 68,517 Republican votes.

Bell wins nomination

TWIN FALLS — Incumbent Senator John "Jock" Bell, a Rupert Democrat, won his party's nomination for the Legislative District 21 post.

On the Republican side of the ticket in that district, which contains all of Blaine County and parts of Lincoln and Mindoko County, Blaine County Prosecuting Attorney Maurice Ellsworth of Halley has narrowly defeated former Rupert Mayor Wendell Johnson.

With all precincts recorded, Bell had 669 votes to 329 for Johnson. Ellsworth had 1,478 votes to 1,407 for Johnson.

Richard High wins big

TWIN FALLS — Republican voters in the 25th legislative district chose incumbent Richard High as their candidate for the state senate with an overwhelming vote of confidence Tuesday.

High received 2,231 votes to opponent Howard Buhler's 924 votes. High totalled nearly 71 percent of the vote to Buhler's 29 percent.

Upon hearing the results, High commented, "I'm very pleased to get just kind of a vote of confidence. I presume its some form of approval of what I've tried to do in the past. I will follow through on what I said I'd do in the campaign."

Buhler said he would endorse High for the office in the general election, and added that he wasn't running against a personality but against a principle.

He noted that he had based his campaign around his support of the 1 percent initiative, and that it's more important that the spirit of the initiative be preserved than that he win an election.

Buhler added he thought he was hurt by democratic crossover in the election.

High said he expects primary opposition from the democrats in the general election.

Evans knocks off Nelson

BOISE — Jerry Evans defeated Dick Nelson by a wide margin in the Republican primary for state superintendent of schools.

The final results showed Evans getting a large majority of votes and Nelson conceding at a late hour Tuesday night.

Evans, a Boise resident who is the current deputy school superintendent, ran on a platform of maintaining local control in the school districts and instituting proficiency testing for high school diplomas.

Nelson, director of the Moscow office of the state department of education, also supported local control but opposed proficiency testing. Nelson pledged to seek harmony in relations between teachers and school boards.

Griffin wins big in Michigan

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
UPI Political Writer
Sen. Robert Griffin R-Mich., easily won renomination to a third term Tuesday, Georgia Democrats gave landslide primary victories to Sen. Sam Nunn and Gov. George Busbee and Missouri voters resoundingly joined the tax revolt.

In Georgia, Betty Talmadge, former wife of Sen. Herman Talmadge apparently was defeated in her bid for the House seat vacated by Rep. John Flynt, D-Ga. She trailed two state senators, Virginia Shapard and Peter Banks, with about a third of the vote counted.

In another Georgia contest, two-term Rep. Larry McDonald, one of the most conservative members of the House, appeared headed for an Aug. 29 runoff. He was running even with wealthy businessman Smith Foster, and two other contestants in the race could force a runoff Aug. 29.

Michigan Democratic Rep. Charles Dingler lost in an election on charges of misappropriation of public funds in a payroll kickback scheme, was heavily favored to win renomination in a Detroit district where primary victory is tantamount to election.

Tax revolt fever swept across Missouri as voters on an unexpected proposal to raise the state's gasoline tax by three cents a gallon. The vote was running 89 percent against the tax hike with more than a third of the vote counted.

Sen. returns in the Idaho Republican contest for governor, state GOP chairman Vernon Ransavickoff had 311 votes to 191 for former state Rep. C.L. "Butch" Otter, with four other candidates trailing.

Voters in Georgia, Idaho and Michigan all nominated candidates for governor and Senate. Those three states and Missouri also nominated House contenders.

With Griffin winning easily and Republican Gov. William Milliken unopposed, the big races in Michigan were on the Democratic side.

Early returns showed former Detroit City Council President Carl Levin leading five Democratic primary opponents in the race to take on Griffin this fall.

Sen. William Fitzgerald of Detroit took a commanding lead over three opponents for the Democratic nomination to oppose two-term GOP Gov. William G. Milliken in November. Milliken had no primary opposition.

The races in the three states for governor and Senate took a back seat to the more interesting House contests, mainly because all incumbents were either heavily favored or had no opposition.

There are the races at a glance: Georgia — Busbee and Nunn overwhelmed nominal opposition in light voting and were favored to win the fall election. Busbee defeated five opponents including self-declared "white racist" J.B. Stoner, Sen. Roscoe Deane, the only state lawmaker ever censured by his colleagues, and Nick Belluso, who tried to hypnotize voters in his television ads.

Nunn also had five opponents, most of them conservatives who attacked his support of the Panama Canal treaties.

Michigan — Griffin got almost 80 percent of the vote in Oakland County Prosecutor Brooks Patterson. Griffin's partner in the Michigan GOP establishment, Gov. William Milliken, had no primary opposition and was favored to win a third term in November.

Idaho — Gov. John Evans, a Democrat, was unopposed. Idaho's version of Proposition 13, which will be the November ballot, was the main issue in the six-way Republican race for governor.

Missouri — All 10 of the state's incumbent congressmen were favored to win renomination.

Otter's bill worth more than expected

ELK RIVER, Idaho (UPI) — The 1 percent property tax revolt finally caught up with Mr. Jarvis not Howard of California's Proposition 13 fame but Robert of Elk River.

To embrace Idaho's version of the initiative with more vigor than his five opponents for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, candidate C.L. "Butch" Otter had printed 120,000 imitation dollar bills with his picture prominently displayed instead of George Washington's.

On Saturday a campaign worker distributed some of Otter's bills at Elk River. On Sunday morning, Robert Jarvis, who operates the Elk River Shell station, discovered that his automated gas pump had accepted 30 of them for payment of gasoline during the night.

"I wasn't so much surprised as plumb mad," Jarvis said. "I got plumb ripped off."

It cost Jarvis about 43 gallons of gas.

That's enough for every kid's car in town," he said.

Jarvis said he cannot use the automated pump after dark now. He said he will lose about $40 a night in sales as a result. And he said he will send Otter a bill for the $30 by registered mail.

Foreign register needed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A measure requiring foreign buyers and owners of American farmland and forests to register their holdings with the federal government was approved Tuesday by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Committee approved a similar bill with 73 House sponsors.

Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate committee, introduced the bill on Aug. 3, just a day after the House Agriculture

Moving quickly, the Senate committee dispensed with hearings and approved the bill less than a week after its introduction.

Talmadge called the bill an "interim step" in the committee's study of the impact of foreign ownership of American farmland.

Lebanon attacks deplored

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States Tuesday deplored Lebanese Christian attacks on regular Lebanese army units and for the first time publicly criticized the Israeli-supported Christian militia units as "reckless."

Calling the situation in Beirut "extremely dangerous," the State Department also renewed its call for the Christian forces and Syrian troops to end their fighting in the Lebanese capital.

In southern Lebanon, the Lebanese army Tuesday reported losing its first soldier to shellfire from Christian militiamen who are trying to keep the central government from reestablishing authority along the border with Israel.

"We strongly deplore this firing and the killing and injuring of the Lebanese soldiers," State Department spokesman Tom Reston said. "These reckless actions by the militias must stop."

Up to now, the administration had limited its comments to appeals for restraint by all sides.

"The situation in southern Lebanon is extremely complicated and we are doing what we can to facilitate the re-establishment of the Lebanese government's central authority in southern Lebanon," Reston said.

He said Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin discussed the situation in Lebanon during Vance's weekend visit, but he declined to confirm reports that Israel has been supplying arms to the Christian militia units.

Despite a lull late Monday in a 37-day stretch of violence between Christians and Syrian peacekeeping troops, sniping and sporadic shellfire has reportedly killed 14 people and wounded 27 in Beirut.

"We note the slight immediate improvement on the ground in Beirut today," Reston said. "But the fighting must now be stopped and the ceasefire must be scrupulously observed by all."

Compromise sugar bill passes House committee

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Agriculture Committee Tuesday voted final approval of a compromise sugar bill backed by sugar growers and the corn sweetener industry.

Final vote was 37-7 on the bill, which was amended earlier to set an initial price objective for raw sugar at 16 cents a pound. The price was reduced from an original proposal of 17 cents a pound.

Legislators from sugar-producing states have argued that the price objective was needed to maintain a viable domestic sugar-producing industry. The national average cost of production is 15.2 cents a pound. The corn sweetener industry, which has cornered about 25 percent of the sweetener market, were winners with passage of the bill.

Prices for corn sweeteners range from about 12 cents to 14 cents a pound so that higher prices for beet and cane sugar will enable them to undercut their competition.

Cane sugar provides half of the sweeteners sold in the United States and beet sugar another fourth.

Under the bill, prices for raw sugar would be maintained with a system of "import quotas" and "import fees" to regulate the supply and price of foreign sugar entering the United States.

Imports account for as much as 45 percent of the nation's cane and beet sugar consumption.

Prior to final passage, the committee rejected an amendment by Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., to exempt sugar used for baby foods from import quotas. On a motion by Rep. Henson Moore, R-La., the committee deleted a section which would have allowed exemptions for sugar used in livestock and pet food.

The committee also approved an amendment to maintain as a fallback the existing price support loan program for the 1978 crop. It would be used if the raw price of sugar failed to increase and prices fell below the loan rate of 14.6 cents a pound.

The compromise delayed implementation of any price adjustments until Oct. 1, 1979.

Another compromise provision of the bill raises a current $3 minimum wage for sugarcane and sugarcane field workers by 20 cents a year, until the hourly wage would reach $3.80 by October 1982. Field equipment operators would be paid at least 10 percent a year more.

Two boats go down in stormy Gulf of Mexico

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A 166-foot fishing boat with a crew of 15 and a smaller offshore work vessel sank Tuesday in separate incidents in the stormy Gulf of Mexico. One man drowned and another was missing.

The Coast Guard said one crewman drowned when the fishing boat R.L. Haney Jr. capsized in rough seas about nine miles south of Gulfport, Miss.

The dead man was identified as Wendell Hubbard, no age available, of Mess Point, Miss. He was the fishing boat's pilot.

Another man was missing after the 65-foot Jamile Jim sank while moored to an unmanned oil rig at the mouth of the Mississippi River, about 30 miles southeast of New Orleans.

Social security taxes Burke says Congress made a big mistake

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Released from a hospital and speaking from a wheelchair, Rep. James Burke, D-Mass., challenged Congress Tuesday to "admit we made a serious mistake," and roll back the increased Social Security taxes passed last December.

"I believe we should be honest enough to admit we made a serious mistake last year when we raised Social Security taxes to the heights we did," Burke said, wagging his finger at members of the House Rules Committee.

But his chances of success appeared dim. Earlier Tuesday House Speaker Thomas O'Neill told reporters he was opposed to the House even considering any legislation that would offset the increased Social Security taxes, let alone roll them back.

Burke claimed the increased Social Security taxes, which are borne equally by individuals and corporations, could result in the loss of 1 million jobs.

Burke, who had a foot amputated last year because of advancing diabetes, was released from a hospital to make his appearance and was returned there when he finished testifying. He urged the committee to let the House debate his legislation that would reduce the Social Security tax rate to 3.9 percent by 1980. It currently is 6.15 percent.

Claiming 198 Congressmen have endorsed his legislation, Burke said, "We should have enough courage in this Congress to vote it up or down."

"How long do you think the steel industry is going to be able to pay $1,500 more per person next year?" Burke asked. "We place a burden on industry they can not bear," he said, noting that 116 shoe factories already have been closed in the northeastern states because of economic problems.

"I have been loyal to the Democratic Party," Burke said. "But I think the Democratic Party is wrong on this issue."

He said he had nothing to gain politically by his position because he was not seeking re-election.

Burke — fared when some Republicans chided him for having voted in favor of the increased Social Security taxes.

"Some Republicans wanted to scuttle the entire Social Security system, and I wasn't going to let you do it!" Burke shouted back.

TV in the 1980's, or, Orwell's revenge?

By LES BROWN
New York Times
NEW YORK — George Orwell's prophecy of an advanced electronic society in 1984, in which the television set may watch as well as be watched, could be fulfilled right on schedule.

In the next five or six years, a substantial part of the country may be served by a form of two-way cable television that is linked to a set of computers.

These computers, sweeping each subscribing household every six or seven seconds, can take orders for merchandise purchased during television commercials, provide burglar- and fire-alarm protection, read gas and water meters, take public-opinion polls and deliver to the television set new movies and other types of programs the viewer might choose to buy.

But desirable as these services may be, and most of them are, "already being offered in Columbus, Ohio, on Warner Communications' futuristic cable system known as Qube — the form of television that provides them raises some difficult questions in a free society.

For the computer also records what every household is watching and buying and how each household votes in a poll.

To the extent that computerized television "watches" the household, even as the viewer is watching the screen, it presumably can be regarded as invading a citizen's privacy.

A political candidate would find his or her campaign devastated, for example, if computer records that fell into the hands of an opponent should reveal excessive viewing of erotic or pornographic films.

Having found no solution to the privacy question, Gustave Hauser, president and chairman of Warner Cable, and the man who is behind Qube, maintains that his company keeps the viewing records under tight security and uses them internally only for market analyses and audience-research purposes.

"People who buy the service will simply have to accept that they give up a bit of their privacy for it. Beyond that, we'll try to protect their privacy all we can."

The privacy problem, and others raised by the new communications technologies, have brought a note of caution to the plan of some Washington officials to eliminate most Federal regulation so that the new developments might compete unhindered in an open market with the established commercial television system.

Charles E. Ferris, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission and an advocate, with reservations, of open competition, said that although he believed Qube added a "fascinating dimension" to television, he was uneasy about how the polling capability of the two-way system might change the political process.

"People will be giving their opinions even before they are informed on the issues, and no Senator or Congressman is going to go against what becomes publicly known about, the consensus of his or her constituency," Mr. Ferris pointed out. "Can you imagine, if the whole country had Qube, how the voting would have gone on the Panama Canal treaties?"

Some in public office find it disturbing that pornography may be brought into homes on a large scale through video cassettes, video disks and the new forms of pay television that permit viewers to buy the individual programs they want.

Others fear that an open communications market in the 1980's, one that gives television equal freedom to the print media, will be a kind of electronic anarchy in which political propaganda of every sort will flow freely through the television sets.

Yet another concern is that the owners of cable-television systems will be able to control the flow of electronic communications in their communities. Although a system such as Qube gives the viewer the ability to "talk back" to television by pressing buttons on the console, the fact will remain that those who own the systems will control the questions asked.

Partly for this reason, Henry Geller, the new assistant secretary of commerce for telecommunications and chief adviser to the White House on communications issues, proposes that new laws be adopted to prohibit cable operators from making any programming determinations.

Geller would have cable systems operate as common carriers, like the telephone or telegraph, divorcing those who control the technology from the messages conveyed. Under this plan, the cable companies would have to lease the channels on a first-come basis to those who wish to present programs.

"I'm very strong on this issue," Geller remarked. "If we don't separate the owner from the broadcast, we will have to have regulation. When the structure is right and working for you, then you don't need the government's involvement, and that's desirable."

Geller, who describes himself as a staunch advocate of First Amendment principles, says he is not troubled by the prospect of pornography expanding to the home market through the new media. In his view, pornography should be permitted to be as long as it is not forced on others.

That view is far from universal, however, and a debate is looming over how free the new media should be.

Crane's presidential bid

©New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — Suddenly presidential politics is bustin' out all over.

Rep. Phillip Crane of Illinois has announced for the Republican nomination and made a ritual first trip to New Hampshire.

Ronald Reagan, undermined by this conservative challenge, has declared in an interview with U.S. News and World Report: "You know and I know that this is not time for someone to make a declaration," "My options are open."

And Edward Kennedy, appearing on ABC's "Issues and Answers," said of President Carter that although he would have Democratic opposition in 1980, "I think he will get renominated and get re-elected." Then he offered the ritual disclaimer: "I have every intention of supporting him."

Translation, for those who sleep 1976 may have grown fuzzy on the vocabulary and moves of the presidential game:

Crane's 67 now, 70 in 1981. If I show some early foot and lock up some conservative support, the old geezer might have to back out or at least take me for vice president. Since the feds will subsidize me in the primaries, and at worst it's a head start for 1981, what's to lose?

Reagan: "The kid's showboating. The old pro will move in when the time is ripe and you better believe it if you want to be with a winner."

Kennedy: "I'd be an idiot to say anything that would hurt Carter or divide the party. If he can't make it again, fine, I can wait. If he can't, I'll have to make a decision."

Crane, it says on this form sheet, is to be taken seriously. He is young and attractive to Republican conservatives, a new face in a party that needs one, and Jimmy Carter concedes he'd be delighted to see the kid get on.

an early start in a multi-candidate, multi-primary, federally subsidized race. Reagan would be the oldest president ever inaugurated, and the Crane candidacy is something he did not want — indeed, had planned an early 1979 announcement of their own partially in hopes of forestalling.

Kennedy's situation and purposes are more obscure. While he is not publicly forecasting a candidacy in 1980, and the reliable Saul Freedman of the Knight-Ridder newspapers recently wrote that "belief is growing among Democratic political leaders" that Kennedy will be at least reasonably well-informed by the senator himself, among others — is that he has made no judgment of any kind about his course of action in 1980.

For one thing, he is looking forward with anticipation that borders on excitement to his becoming chairman, next year, of the important Senate Judiciary Committee, following the retirement of James O. Eastland of Mississippi. For another, he genuinely believes what he told the television audience Sunday — the Carter's relatively limited achievements and his low standing in the polls might be more the fault of Congress than the president.

"It's the power of special interests that have subverted the president's program," he said.

This does not appear to be standard, semi-populist Democratic party rhetoric. Kennedy speaks frequently these days about the recently enhanced clout of the lobbyists now swarming over Capitol Hill — reflecting not only sympathy for Carter but possibly also concern about wading himself into what he sees as an almost hopeless situation for an activist president.

Kennedy knows, moreover, that his active or even allegedly presidential candidacy would bring his "negatives" into play — Chappaquiddick, his family problems, allegations against his personal behavior. What these might do to his current high poll standing in the long and bitter campaign that assuredly would result, he is too realistic not to weigh carefully. What they might do to his family is another profound consideration, and as the last of the Kennedy brothers, the danger of attempts on his life is serious.

On the other hand, with federal subsidies and 31 primaries available, Democratic opposition against a president perceived as weak politically and personally is certain. If such opposition — say from Gov. Jerry Brown of California or, despite his denials, from Sen. Pat Moynihan of New York — became a serious threat to Carter, Kennedy would surely have to consider his own political future. As chairman of an important Senate committee, he can easily wait four more years of an incumbent president; but could he risk eight years of a new Democratic star without seeing his own wane and disappear?

The strategy of "being available" so the party could draft him if it wished is not realistic, as Hubert H. Humphrey learned in 1976. Reformers have concentrated delegate selection in the primaries and Democratic party leaders no longer have much power to deliver blocs of delegates to non-primary voters.

But if Carter were eliminated or badly damaged, Kennedy probably is well-enough known to enter only the later primaries and still defeat any other Democrat.

For Edward Kennedy, then, the real question may be whether in his own mind he has put aside any ambition to be president: If, as I believe, he has not, the circumstances of 1980 might well push him into the primary campaign even though, as I also believe, he now has no intention of running.

Thoughts on the price of skiing Sun Valley

That group of anti-skiflation Ketchumites who have fought against rising ski lift prices won a victory of sorts this week.

The U.S. Forest Service, while approving two-thirds of Sun Valley's new ski lift rate schedule, decided the Skiflation Committee was right on seven counts and ordered Sun Valley to reduce prices of some ski packages.

The reduction of some of Sun Valley's rates represents a timid first step on the part of the forest service to more actively regulate the cost of skiing in the West.

In the past, a ski resort could automatically expect the forest service to approve a rate increase on ski lift prices.

Now, that has changed.

But, interestingly, Sawtooth Forest Supervisor Ed Fournier didn't make a point of saying the forest service had reduced some rates because they were unfair to the public.

Instead, Fournier made it clear the decisions to allow some rates to rise and some to fall were based on prices charged by other ski resorts.

Unfortunately, that criterion doesn't consider the possibility that ski prices throughout the West could get out of hand as long as everybody charged the same sky high price.

For now, that doesn't seem to be a problem.

A $15 a day charge for a single lift ticket will be absorbed without much more than a frosty stare by the sking public.

But as prices continue to rise, the forest service will have to take a more active role in deciding what is a fair price for a day of

Oh, the fights waged by congressional wives

By STEVEN V. ROBERTS
N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — Carmala Walgren is a teacher and a law student, an ardent advocate for the equal rights amendment, a thoroughly accomplished 45-year-old who also happens to be married to a United States Congressman.

She definitely does not fit the popular image of the political wife doll: Wind her up and she smiles bravely and says "thank you."

During the morning Mrs. Walgren had been watching a Congressional committee debate the ERA and now she was sitting in the members' dining room, sipping iced tea, describing the "unnatural" life of a Congressman's wife. One thing that bugs her is the mail addressed to The Honorable and Mrs. Doug Walgren. "What does that make me?" she laughs. "Dishonorable?"

"I don't define myself by my husband or my husband's job," she said quietly. "But it's not that I'm taking a back seat to my husband. Doug and I are both in the back seat. It's that position 'Congressman' that takes up the whole front seat." Washington wives have been taking a back seat for years, but now they are starting to get out.

Kennedy is on more magazine covers this week than Farrah Fawcett. Majors, discussing her alcoholism, her escape from Washington, her solitary life in Boston.

"It's strange," she told McCall's, "but for some reason the times of crisis and expectation I could rise to the occasion and not take a drink. But then the show is over, and you are left with no goal to go back to and you feel desperately let down and unneeded."

Betty Ford admits that she, too, was an alcoholic. Pat Nixon has been quoted as saying that when her husband entered politics, "I gave up everything I ever loved." Time reports that Betty Talmadge "came down with the Washington-wife blues and started seeing a psychiatrist."

People in this city have long repeated an old line: "Washington is full of ambitious, successful men and the women they married when they were young." That remark was always cruel and often unfair. These women have always stood behind their men, propping them up, managing home and office and campaign, nursing the bodies and souls that were bruised by too many smiles and handshakes and speeches. But as the male egos grew, the female ones shriveled. There was often not enough room in one house, or one town, for both of them.

Now there seems to be a few changes in the air. "It's not that the younger wives are suddenly more courageous and assertive," says Carmala Walgren. "But now society is giving people an opportunity. The world is different, not the people."

Many of the younger Congressmen did not come up through the political ranks. Spurred by Watergate and Vietnam, they are more independent and skeptical of authority, less tied to traditional patterns, and their wives

More women puff away

By DON GRAFF
(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

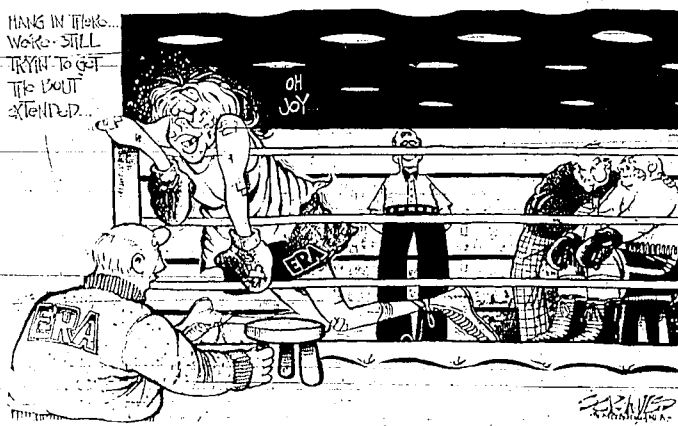

The going may be slow on the Equal Rights Amendment and in some other areas, but women are making rapid strides toward equality with men in one category.

More women are smoking more and the consequences are showing up in health statistics, according to the latest annual report on smoking and health from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano, an ex-smoker who has turned a congressionally-mandated duty into something of a personal crusade, notes that the trend among women smokers is toward taking up the habit at an earlier age and becoming heavier smokers. Since 1950, the lung cancer death rate in the 45 to 64 age group has doubled for men while it has quadrupled among women. Similar increases were cited for heart disease and problems during pregnancy, including miscarriages.

The report also noted statistical differences among forms of smoking, pipes being rated most hazardous. It's doubtful, however, that that bit of information will have much appeal in terms of minimizing risk.

Women may have come a long way, but not many of them are prepared to go that far yet.

What will Christiana do next?

By NICHOLAS GAGE
 (N.Y. Times Service)

ATHENS — Christiana Onassis, sequestered in her aunt's villa outside Athens, now feels that she does not want to return to Moscow, where her husband of a week, Sergei Kauzov, is waiting for her, a friend said here Tuesday.

Although she still has affection for Kauzov, said the friend, in whom the helress confided, she is unsure whether she wants to resume the marriage. The friend added that the 27-year-old Miss Onassis' doubts about the wisdom of marrying Kauzov and living in Moscow began before the wedding, were increased by the ceremony itself, and culminated in her sudden flight here four days later.

Although she confessed to having doubts before the ceremony, she apparently felt compelled to go through with it because of the momentum that had built up. She fled Moscow on impulse, the source said, and might impulsively change her mind again, although he did not believe it likely.

He said that Miss Onassis still cared for her husband, but had become extremely "tense and nervous" during her stay in Moscow. "She needs time to think," the friend said. "At the moment she doesn't know herself whether she will patch things up with Kauzov."

 (In Moscow, Kauzov said reports that Miss Onassis was having second thoughts about the marriage and might not return to Moscow were wrong.)

Since her arrival on Saturday, she has been discussing her problems with her nearest relative, Artemis, the sister of the late Aristotle Onassis' father, the late Aristotle Onassis, and with other relatives in her aunt's seaside villa at Glyfada, outside Athens, while newsmen and photographers crawled around the garden walls and were at one point drenched with a waterhose by an irate gardener.

Mrs. Garofalides announced Sunday that Miss Onassis had cut short her honeymoon because an "urgent business matter" required her presence in Greece. But the top executives of the Onassis empire, including Louis Anderson, head of Olympic Maritime S.A., the operating arm of the empire, based in Monte Carlo — have not yet come to Greece to meet with her.

Mrs. Garofalides also said at that time: "She is like our own child. If she has found someone who makes her happy, it makes us even happier."

A friend of Miss Onassis, however, confirmed Tuesday that business was not the reason for her sudden departure from Moscow, which caused cancellation of the couple's announced plans to honeymoon in a restricted section of Siberia. The friend said that although Miss Onassis became aware of the difficulties of living in Russia during her six-week stay there, and also felt a "cooling" in her feelings for Kauzov, she was carried along by the momentum of her wedding plans and went through with the marriage.

The brief and colorless civil ceremony in Moscow's Palace of Weddings last Tuesday, with none of her close friends or relatives present, depressed her and added to the tension created by the worldwide commotion surrounding her wedding plans, the friend said.

Her uncertainties increased after the wedding, not only because she realized that some relatives and business associates disapproved of the match, but also because some friction developed between the newlyweds, the friend said. When Miss Onassis learned that Yiannis Fotopoulos, the first secretary of the Greek Embassy in Moscow, who had given her away during the wedding, was scheduled to return to Athens with his wife on Saturday for home leave, Miss Onassis abruptly decided to accompany them.

Friends of Miss Onassis describe her as an extremely sensitive woman who is at first cautious with people; becomes wildly enthusiastic about those she likes, and feels deeply hurt if they don't respond to her as she expects.

NBC suit dismissed by judge

By DONALD B. THACKREY
 SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A judge Tuesday dismissed an $11 million lawsuit against NBC that charged a prime-time drama showing a sexual assault of a young girl led a gang of youngsters to commit a similar attack.

Judge Robert L. Dossee granted a motion by NBC lawyer for "non-suit" after defense attorney Marvin Lewis, representing a 13-year-old girl subjected to the assault four years ago, had finished his opening statement.

The judge ruled earlier that Lewis would have to show "incitement," which he had not done. Thus, he ruled, the show, "Born Innocent," is protected by the First Amendment.

The judge ruled that in order to collect damages, the plaintiff would have to prove that NBC intended for viewers to imitate the assault.

Lewis said he would ask the California Court of Appeal to overturn Judge Dossee's ruling within a few days.

Lewis had admitted that he could not show that NBC actually intended viewers to imitate the sexual assault on a young girl portrayed in the drama but charged the network was "negligent and reckless" in putting on the show during a time when children might be watching.

Lewis asked the judge to rule that "stimulus," as well as "incitement," was also grounds for removing the program from the protection of the First Amendment.

NBC lawyer Floyd Abrams asked the judge at the conclusion of Lewis' opening statement to dismiss the case. Dossee excused the jury until Thursday and listened to arguments by both sides. He then retired to his chambers for 30 minutes after which he rendered his decision.

On Sept. 10, 1974, NBC presented at 8 p.m. PDT, the drama of a runaway girl in which actress Linda Blair was portrayed as being sexually attacked in a shower by delinquent girls using a plunger. Four days later on San Francisco's Baker Beach, Olivia Niemi, 9, was similarly attacked by three young girls using a beer bottle.

Lewis brought suit for $1 million compensatory damages and $10 million punitive damages on grounds that NBC was negligent and accountable in civil court for the predictable consequences of showing the film.

NBC countered that the sexual assault scene was a dramatic necessity in a drama portraying a little-known problem of American social life, namely the confining of runaway children in the same facility with hardened juvenile delinquents.

Embryo transplant shocked professor

NEW YORK (UPI) — An expert in the field of human reproduction testified Tuesday that she stopped Dr. Landrum Shettles' plan to implant a test-tube embryo into the womb of Doris Del Zio in 1973 because she felt it was her duty as a physician.

Dr. Gertrude Jagiello, a professor of obstetrics and gynecology and human genetics at Columbia University's medical school, said she was "stunned" when she learned of Shettles' plan.

She said she immediately informed Dr. Raymond Vande Welle, chief of gynecology at Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital, of Shettles' plan and he ordered the contents of the test tube destroyed.

"We had moved beyond the experimental into the question of patient care," she testified. "I felt it was my duty as a physician" to inform Vande Welle.

Dr. Jagiello was the first witness to testify for the defense at the jury trial in U.S. District Court in Manhattan of the Del Zios' $1.5 million damage suit against Vande Welle and the hospital.

The lawyer for the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., couple rested his case Tuesday after three weeks of testimony. A defense motion for dismissal was denied by Judge Charles Stewart.

Dr. Jagiello, who worked with Shettles at Columbia and Vande Welle's hospital, said that on Sept. 12, 1973, Shettles showed her a test tube containing a "murky, red-brown, opaque liquid."

She said she did not learn until later, in a conversation with another colleague, that Shettles "planned to re-plant the contents of the tube into a patient at another hospital."

The test tube contained an egg taken from an ovary of the 34-year-old Mrs. Del Zio which had been fertilized with sperm from her 59-year-old husband.

Dr. Jagiello, who specializes in raising ova in artificial systems, said that while doing research at Guy's Hospital in London in the 1960s she had learned that test tubes such as the one used by Shettles' caused sterilization problems.

She added that the incubator he used had no capacity to regulate the acidic fluids used to maintain ova and the test tube's rubber stopper was toxic to ova.

Suit filed against Chilean government.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Relatives of Chilean dissident Orlando Letelier and a woman assassinated with him in 1976 filed a damage suit Tuesday against Chile's government, four of its former secret police officials and five others implicated in the slayings.

The federal court suit asks unspecified compensatory and punitive damages in excess of $10,000 for survivors of Letelier, a onetime Chilean ambassador to Washington and a critic of Chile's right-wing military regime, and Ronni Moffitt, Letelier's colleague at Washington's Institute for Policy Studies.

which they were riding was destroyed by a bomb in Washington's Embassy Row district Sept. 21, 1976.

The suit, filed under a statute that took effect in 1977, is believed to be the first ever brought against a foreign nation for a wrongful death — in this case the government of Chile's President Augusto Pinochet.

"The Pinochet government has taken the people we loved from us," relatives of the two victims said in a statement. "As we said on the day of the murders, we hold Gen. Augusto Pinochet and his government directly responsible."

Mia Farrow hurt in filming 'Hurricane'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actress Mia Farrow suffered a gash on her chin in an accident during the filming of the movie "Hurricane" on a South Pacific island and shooting has been suspended for a week, Paramount Pictures reported Tuesday.

The frail actress also suffered bruises on her right arm and on her chest when she was thrown against the side of a lifeboat during night filming of a simulated hurricane at Bora Bora. The boat was on a hydraulic rocker.

Miss Farrow was flown to a hospital at Papeete, Tahiti, for x-rays which disclosed no fractures. Doctors ordered her to rest for a week, and work on the $20 million film was halted, a Paramount spokesman said.

Wallace to hospital

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George C. Wallace said Tuesday he will enter University Hospital in Birmingham Wednesday for tests he said he had put off previously.

Press Secretary Billy Joe Camp said the tests were routine, but he said some of them would deal with problems that paraplegics encounter.

"There are some tests that I am supposed to go through annually and semi-annually," Wallace said in a statement. "I have been a little lax and now I have to do them all at once."

Ford talks

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI) — Former President Gerald R. Ford Tuesday charged President Carter's armaments policy will have a "serious impact" on the nation's future defense posture.

"I believe today we are strong," Ford told a hometown breakfast gathering of Republican leaders. "But decisions made in the last year and a half will have serious impact on us in a few years."

Ford said Carter made a mistake when he decided to cancel the B-1 bomber program and rely on the B-52.

Nevada court upholds brothel assessment

RENO (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Robert J. Kelleher Tuesday upheld the Internal Revenue Service jeopardy assessment of $5.6 million against brothel operator Joe Conforte, effectively tying up all his property and resources.

It marked another lost round in Conforte's continuing battle with the IRS over taxes due from his legal brothel east of Reno, and came less than a week after a ruling denying him a new trial on tax charges. The decision also moved IRS auditors step along in its campaign to force detailed record keeping and disclosure by Nevada brothel operators.

But IRS spokesman Harold Ward quickly explained that the decision does not put IRS into the brothel business. He and Conforte's attorney Star Brown said the decision is designed to protect IRS interests in the tax case against Conforte by preventing him from disposing of any assets. They said it does not take away any property from Conforte and does not take operation of the brothel from his control.

IRS filed the jeopardy assessment Feb. 17 claiming Conforte owed the money-in-back-taxes-from-income earned through his Mustang Ranch Brothel. IRS officials said a smaller portion of the earnings came from Conforte's interest in the Starlight Ranch near Carson City.

Conforte sued in April to get the government legs prohibiting him from selling any of his property lifted. His attorneys claimed that the government had no logical, reasonable explanation for how they came up with the $5.6 million figure.

Kinsey Institute report says homosexuals aren't misfits

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Kinsey Institute Tuesday released a major new report contradicting the idea that all homosexuals are misfits obsessed by sex and hidden by guilt.

Commissioned by the federal National Institute of Mental Health and under preparation since 1967, the report, "Homosexualities: A Study of Diversity Among Men and Women," maintains there is no such thing as a single stereotyped homosexual.

Alan P. Bell, one of the investigators, said the report shows "that homosexuality is not a pathological and that all homosexuals cannot be lumped together."

Homosexuals, like heterosexuals, differ widely in their living arrangements, occupations, social activities and personal relationships, it was found. And, the study maintains, most homosexuals have come to terms with their sexual-orientation and are no more psychologically at odds with the world than heterosexuals.

The investigators propose a new system for classifying homosexuals to take into account the many dimensions of homosexual lifestyles. The categories include:

"Close-coupled" — who live like heterosexual marrieds and are stable, contented; "open-coupled," less satisfied but on the lookout for new partners; "functionals" or swinging singles, sexually active, gregarious and self-assured; "dysfunctionals," active but less confident about their homosexuality; "asexuals" — sexually inactive, regretful of their homosexuality.

The new report of the Institute for Sex Research founded by Alfred C. Kinsey, is expected to have considerable social consequences. Two previous major reports, on male sexuality in 1948 and on female sexuality in 1953, were credited with touching off the current "sexual revolution."

The new study by Bell and Martin S.

Weinberg, is based on extended interviews with 1,500 men and women from all walks of life — black and white, heterosexual as well as homosexual — from the San Francisco Bay Area.

Highlights from the report: —Only about 75 percent of the homosexual males and 50 percent of the homosexual women interviewed considered themselves exclusively homosexual.

—Virtually all homosexuals, male and female, had been in at least one relatively steady relationship, which included emotional and sexual commitment. Most of these lasted a year or more.

WED. THURS. FRI. SAT.

BOISE (UPI) — After nearly 1 1/2 hours of discussion, the state Land Board delayed action Tuesday on a request for support of a water quality study in connection with all exploration in the Bear Lake area of southeastern Idaho.

Other than Gov. John V. Evans, board members were reluctant to give a stamp of approval to a request by the Bear Lake Regional Commission for a study in order to get federal funds from the Environmental Protection Agency.

Board members expressed concern that involvement with the EPA would delay or completely halt drilling by the Hunt Oil Company.

Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa also said it would be like "pouring money down a rat hole" without accomplishing a purpose.

Cenarrusa asked that the board postpone action on the commission request. This failed on a tie vote, with Evans and Superintendent of Public Instruction Roy Truby voting against the motion and Cenarrusa and State Auditor Joe R. Williams in favor.

After another tie vote on a motion of Truby to support the request with the stipulation that the state could withdraw if the contract with EPA resulted in "unnecessary delays," Evans submitted Cenarrusa's original motion and it received unanimous support.

Cenarrusa started the fight against supporting the proposed study, which would cost $28,150, saying it was an unnecessary expense. He said millions of dollars have been spent on other EPA studies and they haven't accomplished anything.

The secretary of state said there already was sufficient protection of the lake.

But Allen Harrison, executive secretary of the commission, said the study was necessary so the commission and the state can be "wiser and smarter about oil" before it can become a threat.

"We should be aware of what oil is all about," Harrison said.

Williams called the study "more or less a delaying tactic. If we go through all of this, we won't be able to drill for 40 years."

Truby wondered whether involvement with the EPA would not end up in a "paperwork nightmare."

Attorney General Wayne Kidwell was not in attendance at the meeting.

Gem board approaches land swap

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Land Board cleared the final hurdle Tuesday to obtain 24,000 acres of land owned by the federal government.

By a 3-1 vote, board members agreed to withdraw previous land applications, which Land Director Gordon Trombley said was necessary so the Bureau of Land Management could turn over title of 10,000 acres in North Idaho and 14,000 acres in the southern half of the state.

The bureau requires no conflicting applications, Trombley said.

Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa voted against the withdrawal, saying the state "is getting shortchanged."

Cenarrusa said the state should be able to select prime land. He said he had flown over the land the state would obtain in the Little Salmon River area and he was disappointed. "It won't even grow trees for commercial purposes. We would have been better off in taking desert land in South Idaho."

Superintendent of Public Instruction Roy Truby said although the state was taking the good with the bad, the board constituted a deal it hasn't been able to accomplish in the past 25 years.

But Cenarrusa said he wished the state could "select some areas of more value."

Papal mass Thursday

BOISE (UPI) — Bishop Sylvester Treinen will be the principal celebrant Thursday evening at a special celebration mass for Pope Paul VI at St. John's Cathedral in Boise.

Mass of Resurrection will involve many of the priests in Idaho, Bishop Treinen said. He said the celebration "shows the unity of the priesthood, one heart, one voice and one mind."

He said each parish also will hold its own masses for Pope Paul.

Back to nature group members surrender to police after shootout

Anarchist group jailed after eviction battle

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Police and firemen armed with teargas and water cannon Tuesday fought their way into a squalid mansion housing a tiny group of back-to-nature anarchists, touching off a gunbattle that cost the life of one policeman and wounded 12 other persons.

Gunshots were fired from the aging Victorian building housing the bizarre group called MOVE after firemen began pouring streams of water into its upper stories.

"There are carbines inside! Move back!" one policeman shouted as four shots rang out from the house.

Policeman Joseph Ramp, 52, was killed and 11 firemen and policemen were injured, one critically.

A member of the MOVE group was treated for gunshot wounds and another for teargas.

Police then shot tear gas into the house and some MOVE members began surrendering. The first was a woman carrying two naked babies. Other naked children followed.

After the teargas barrage, firemen continued pouring water from the water cannon into the home.

"We gave them numerous opportunities to come out and surrender," said Police Commissioner Joseph O'Neill.

Police said that before the shootout MOVE members held a naked baby out a window in an attempt to use it as a shield and prevent police from firing on them. Police grabbed the baby, unharmed.

Ten MOVE members were arrested, along with five other people in the area sympathizing with the group. Most were expected to be arraigned on murder charges, as well as weapons and other offenses.

Eleven children — six girls and five boys ranging in age from 11 months to 8 years — were taken to hospitals by police where they were washed, examined and turned over to welfare officers.

The confrontation began when the members of the MOVE group refused a court order to leave the West Philadelphia complex after the city attempted to starve them out last spring.

The back-to-nature group advocates the overthrow of society and shuns the use of modern sanitation facilities.

Neighbors had complained that the group dumped garbage in the yard and it was overrun with dogs and rats.

Loan guarantees lauded

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Carter said Tuesday the new $1.65 billion program of federal financial guarantees for New York City is in the national interest, is not a handout, and should not "cost the American taxpayer a cent."

The president — in a prepared speech before signing the legislation at a ceremony in front of City Hall — called the federal loan guarantees over the next 15 years "a crucial step in New York's long and difficult climb back towards solvency and independence."

Carter led his speech with praise for Mayor Edward Koch and Gov. Hugh Carey, both Democrats. Carey is up for re-election this year.

The legislation, approved 247-155 by the House and 58-35 by the Senate, marks the first time the federal government has underwritten credit for a major city. It replaces a direct federal loan program for New York, enacted in 1975 and which expired June 30.

Specifically, the law guarantees increased loans to the city from its municipal employee pension funds. Private banks have made that a condition for unguaranteed loans — all contributing to a $4.5 billion, four-year package to help the city back on its feet.

The federal guarantees will be issued over the next four years and could run until 1997. During that time the city will submit to unprecedented federal oversight of its finances.

Bell raps defender plan

©Newhouse News Service
NEW YORK — U.S. Attorney General Griffin B. Bell said Tuesday he is opposed to an American Bar Association proposal that calls on the federal government to provide money for public defender systems in all states.

Calling such a plan a form of "federalization" and "regulation of the courts," Bell told a news conference he also differs with White House counsel Robert Lipschutz who Monday urged the ABA to accept an alternative plan, under which lawyers would privately be assessed to support such a program.

Bell also differed sharply with former Watergate and Koreagate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski, who Monday proposed that an independent commission be established to investigate allegations of official misconduct.

Front wheel drive car may replace Nova

By DAN JEDLICKA
 ©Chicago Sun-Times
 The word is out that Chevrolet's venerable Nova will be replaced next spring by a radically revamped model with front-wheel drive that might not even carry the Nova nameplate.

The Nova is similar to the other General Motors "X-body" cars—Pontiac Phoenix, Oldsmobile Omega and Buick Skylark. They also will be revamped and introduced with the new-generation Nova and will continue to be similar to the latter auto.

In discussing the current Nova, we're covering to a large degree the above-mentioned autos. All are outstanding compact cars because the Nova is just such a vehicle.

It is dated when compared to Ford Motor Co.'s new Fairmont and Zephyr models, but this doesn't mean it's not a good buy.

The no-nonsense Nova has a boxy shape that allows plenty of interior room for four adults. The space-saver tire is strongly recommended; the standard spare gobbles up too much trunk room. The standard front bench seat is miserable, offering little support in the right places. Optional front bucket seats make the car much more enjoyable to live with.

Even with the standard suspension, the Nova is a good-handling car that offers a decent ride. Add radial tires, and it handles even better.

With the optional F-41 suspension, it is one of the world's best-handling cars. I wouldn't consider ordering a Nova without the relatively inexpensive F-41 option.

The car last underwent significant modifications for the 1975 model year and will remain basically unchanged until the new one is unveiled.

The base engine is a 230-cubic-inch six, but order the 305-cubic-inch V-8 unless you just intend to scoot around town in the car. A 350-cubic-inch V-8 is offered, but it is intended for those who primarily are performance-oriented.

Only people who insist upon a manual transmission should bypass the slick-shifting automatic transmission.

The 305 coupled to the automatic gets 22 miles per gallon on the highway and 17 in the city, says the Environmental Protection Agency. This engine with a manual transmission actually gets lower mileage (21 highway and 15 city), according to the EPA.

The Nova comes in two forms: The base model, which has a $3,702 list price, and the dressed-up Nova Custom, which lists for $3,960. Even with the options I've recommended, you can buy it without fear of declaring bankruptcy.

Even though people know it's on the way out, the Nova is selling well. The Fairmont and Zephyr have hurt its sales, and Chevrolet has cut back on its production. Still, Nova sales from the beginning of the 1978 model year through July 31 totaled 214,808 units. Sales in the comparable 1977 model-year period were 272,532 units, but any car that racks up 200,000-plus sales is doing well.

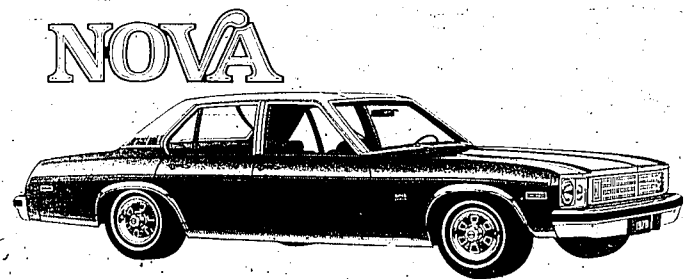

It's remarkable how long the Nova has been around. It was called the Chevy II when introduced in the fall of 1961. The car even had a four-cylinder engine that is basically the same 151-cubic-inch four-cylinder motor that GM now is using and plans to use for years.

The Nova name came when Chevy rolled out its new models in the fall of 1970. Ironically, it then dropped the four-cylinder and replaced it with the 250 six—only to bring back the four-cylinder in late 1976 because, it's a strong, economical motor that has been put into a good number of racing cars.

This may make you laugh, but industry sources say that the revamped Nova will be powered by the four-cylinder engine.

The new X-body cars will be considerably smaller on the outside and lighter than the current ones. This fact, alone, may prompt many people to buy the current Nova and its "sister" cars from the other GM divisions before they are buried.

Business

Tractor company's exports single aspect of U.S. trade

(Editor's note: The United States at the midpoint of 1978 is on the way to posting another huge trade deficit, on the heels of last year's record gap. The trade picture isn't a simple one of stepping up exports or cutting back imports. Trade affects U.S. workers, thousands directly and indirectly.

The Chicago Sun-Times went behind the deficit figure to look at different dimensions of trade: a business that exports one that sells licenses, one bought by a Japanese veteran, and one part of an industry seeking government relief to reduce imports. The following is the first of five.)

By JEROME IDASZAK
 ©Chicago Sun-Times

PEORIA — Eight foreign flags fly on poles in front of the headquarters building here of Caterpillar Tractor Co.

A few miles away, inside a new 730,000-sq-foot plant on 650 acres along the Illinois River, invoices trace giant earthmoving tractors to destinations in Mexico, Saudi Arabia, and Calcutta as well as Kansas City and Las Vegas.

The people in this town know about the importance of Caterpillar, and the people at Caterpillar know the importance of exports. The company employs 40,000 people in Illinois alone, including 6,000 in Joliet, and 6,000 in Aurora. Two of every five Caterpillar workers rely on exports for their paychecks.

Inside the company's headquarters in downtown Peoria, executives point to what they call their "wow sheet," a single page showing Caterpillar exports to eight nations. The totals show one dimension — exports — of the U.S. trade picture:

- Caterpillar exports sales in 1950 were $9 million; Cat's U.S. employment that year was 27,104, and none overseas.
- Export sales in 1977 were $1.9 billion; U.S. workers were 62,891, with another 18,300 overseas.
- The United States sold more than $120 billion in goods abroad last year, and Caterpillar's $1.9 billion made it the nation's No. 1 exporter.
- Despite Caterpillar's efforts, U.S. balance of trade is awash in red ink for the second straight year. Through the first six months of 1978, Americans are buying $16.6 billion more than they're selling, after posting a balance-of-trade deficit of $26 billion in 1977.
- "That deficit will bring serious consequences," said Clifford Hathaway, Caterpillar's vice president of employe relations. "The declining deficit means the dollar continues in value, and it buys less than in the past," added Roger Kelley, vice president for public affairs and personnel development. "Eventually, jobs and the standard of living in this country have to suffer."

Amid the worry over the statistics and the debate over what to do, Caterpillar employees recognize that trade is essential to them. A group of men who work in the shipping department say Cat's workers are well aware of how big a role exports play in their lives.

"All the workers know about exports," said Doyle Fitch, a 30-year veteran. "The company newspapers keep us informed about that."

John Ray Childers has worked with the company in Peoria for 23 years, about the time when they began their export push.

Sometimes, he said, the company buys foreign steel. "If it's good steel and if we can buy it cheaper over there, it keeps our costs down," he said. (Steve Hasty, visitor service representative at Caterpillar, said foreign steel is used by the company's overseas divisions, but American steel is used for manufacturing here in rare cases, he said, parts from overseas divisions are sent to U.S. plants to meet a production schedule.)

Bill Morgan, a 23-year Cat veteran, has a friend working at a Peoria steel mill who's been laid off three times. "He says foreign steel's to blame," Morgan said. He added that they don't talk much about exports.

Caterpillar was founded officially in 1925. At the end of World War II, it had one plant in East Peoria and one other, in California. Caterpillar's decision to establish manufacturing plants outside the States in 1950 was "a major turning point," said former chairman William L. Nauman.

Growth came easier then. There were more vacuums to fill. Komatsu (the Japanese heavy equipment maker) wasn't terribly significant then outside the Far East. Now it's a sizeable challenger in the heavier product line.

A key to Caterpillar's success is the company's strong dealer network. The company has 268 dealers operating from 975 outlets around the world, ranging from 2,000 employees in one instance to 13 in another.

Caterpillar benefits because it takes time to develop a successful piece of earth-moving equipment, unlike steel, for example, which is a basic industry that can be developed quickly.

In addition to sending its product overseas, Caterpillar follows a plan of sharing its technology with overseas employes in foreign nations where Caterpillar has divisions.

"Our strategy is to share it. We start with a cadre of managers overseas and train local nationals to replace them," Hathaway explained.

So far, that hasn't led to an exporting of technology. "Ours is a high technology business, but it's not static. You don't have it and then it's gone. It's continually developing. If we gave the D-9 plans to someone else, by the time it was going, we'd be four or five generations beyond it," Hathaway said.

The choice of which nations to invest in is determined by several factors, Hathaway said.

"We need a significant supply of energy. We need raw materials, principally high-grade steel plate and forging ability." Caterpillar also needs a potentially large market for its product as it rolls off the line because of heavy capital investment.

"You need volume to give reasonable economy of scale."

Next: Licensing abroad.

Hearing Friday on power line

BOISE (UPI) — The Public Utilities Commission will conduct a further hearing Friday on Idaho Power Co.'s application to build and operate a 345-kilovolt alternating current transmission line across southern Idaho.

The proposed line would pass through portions of Twin Falls and Jerome and cross the Snake River at a point southwest of Eden. The hearing will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the commission's hearing room at Boise.

Ellis elected to bank office

POCATELLO (UPI) — Directors of Idaho Bank & Trust Co. have elected Ted E. Ellis executive vice president on Idaho Power Co.'s application to build and operate a 345-kilovolt alternating current transmission line across southern Idaho.

Ellis joined IB&T more than a year ago after a 30-year career with First Security Bank in which he rose to the position of senior vice president. Until his promotion at IB&T, that bank did not have a chief operating officer position.

Grains dip, meat contracts mixed

 CHICAGO — Grain futures showed some recovery Tuesday but meats were mostly weaker.

Commodity News Service said a late recovery in live cattle lifted settlement prices to the high end of the day's range but most contracts were lower for the day. Prices were 55 to 12 points down at the close for all but nearby October which was up 2. Volume was 28,556 contracts.

feeder cattle closed off 107 to 55 points on a trade of 1,263 contracts.

Limit down pork bellies brought live hogs off to a close 37 to 100 points down although the spot contract had some support. Volume was 4,728. Bellies were locked limit down the permissible daily limit of 200 points with pressure coming from 52 deliveries against August. Volume was 722 contracts traded.

Profit taking in wheat was absorbed and while prices closed slightly off the highs they were up 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 cents as export prospects provided support. Corn sagged to lifetime lows in the morning but recovered for 2 1/2 cent gains in September but unchanged in July. Commercial selling whittled the advance slightly in some months.

A mixed trade in the soybean complex saw beans finish 1/2 cent weaker in the spot contract to 4 cents up in next summer's deliveries. Meats finished 40 to 80 cents down with oil up 19 to 10 points.

New York Sugar 11 showed improved tone and closed unchanged to 3 points lower, recovering most of the day's losses on late trade buying.

Maine potatoes settled 3 to 6 cents higher, May leading at 7.02 per hundredweight. Volume was 454 cars.

New York Cotton silver closed 30 to 70 points off following gold movement and with a volume of 12,000 contracts. Gold rallied in the afternoon on short covering and speculative buying before selling off but the market ended with 99 point gains across the board. Volume of 22,500 contracts was among the best on record.

Accident cause clearly defined

WINONA, Minn. (UPI) — Police usually don't reveal the cause of accidents in the community because of liability considerations.

But they announced Monday a two-car accident in the city Sunday was caused by a combination of rain and speed.

Duane Speed and Chester Rain, that is.

PEORIA — Eight foreign flags fly on poles in front of the headquarters building here of Caterpillar Tractor Co.

A few miles away, inside a new 730,000-sq-foot plant on 650 acres along the Illinois River, invoices trace giant earthmoving tractors to destinations in Mexico, Saudi Arabia, and Calcutta as well as Kansas City and Las Vegas.

The people in this town know about the importance of Caterpillar, and the people at Caterpillar know the importance of exports. The company employs 40,000 people in Illinois alone, including 6,000 in Joliet, and 6,000 in Aurora. Two of every five Caterpillar workers rely on exports for their paychecks.

Inside the company's headquarters in downtown Peoria, executives point to what they call their "wow sheet," a single page showing Caterpillar exports to eight nations. The totals show one dimension — exports — of the U.S. trade picture:

- Caterpillar exports sales in 1950 were $9 million; Cat's U.S. employment that year was 27,104, and none overseas.
- Export sales in 1977 were $1.9 billion; U.S. workers were 62,891, with another 18,300 overseas.
- The United States sold more than $120 billion in goods abroad last year, and Caterpillar's $1.9 billion made it the nation's No. 1 exporter.
- Despite Caterpillar's efforts, U.S. balance of trade is awash in red ink for the second straight year. Through the first six months of 1978, Americans are buying $16.6 billion more than they're selling, after posting a balance-of-trade deficit of $26 billion in 1977.
- "That deficit will bring serious consequences," said Clifford Hathaway, Caterpillar's vice president of employe relations. "The declining deficit means the dollar continues in value, and it buys less than in the past," added Roger Kelley, vice president for public affairs and personnel development. "Eventually, jobs and the standard of living in this country have to suffer."

Amid the worry over the statistics and the debate over what to do, Caterpillar employees recognize that trade is essential to them. A group of men who work in the shipping department say Cat's workers are well aware of how big a role exports play in their lives.

"All the workers know about exports," said Doyle Fitch, a 30-year veteran. "The company newspapers keep us informed about that."

John Ray Childers has worked with the company in Peoria for 23 years, about the time when they began their export push.

Sometimes, he said, the company buys foreign steel. "If it's good steel and if we can buy it cheaper over there, it keeps our costs down," he said. (Steve Hasty, visitor service representative at Caterpillar, said foreign steel is used by the company's overseas divisions, but American steel is used for manufacturing here in rare cases, he said, parts from overseas divisions are sent to U.S. plants to meet a production schedule.)

Bill Morgan, a 23-year Cat veteran, has a friend working at a Peoria steel mill who's been laid off three times. "He says foreign steel's to blame," Morgan said. He added that they don't talk much about exports.

Caterpillar was founded officially in 1925. At the end of World War II, it had one plant in East Peoria and one other, in California. Caterpillar's decision to establish manufacturing plants outside the States in 1950 was "a major turning point," said former chairman William L. Nauman.

Growth came easier then. There were more vacuums to fill. Komatsu (the Japanese heavy equipment maker) wasn't terribly significant then outside the Far East. Now it's a sizeable challenger in the heavier product line.

A key to Caterpillar's success is the company's strong dealer network. The company has 268 dealers operating from 975 outlets around the world, ranging from 2,000 employees in one instance to 13 in another.

Caterpillar benefits because it takes time to develop a successful piece of earth-moving equipment, unlike steel, for example, which is a basic industry that can be developed quickly.

In addition to sending its product overseas, Caterpillar follows a plan of sharing its technology with overseas employes in foreign nations where Caterpillar has divisions.

"Our strategy is to share it. We start with a cadre of managers overseas and train local nationals to replace them," Hathaway explained.

So far, that hasn't led to an exporting of technology. "Ours is a high technology business, but it's not static. You don't have it and then it's gone. It's continually developing. If we gave the D-9 plans to someone else, by the time it was going, we'd be four or five generations beyond it," Hathaway said.

The choice of which nations to invest in is determined by several factors, Hathaway said.

"We need a significant supply of energy. We need raw materials, principally high-grade steel plate and forging ability." Caterpillar also needs a potentially large market for its product as it rolls off the line because of heavy capital investment.

"You need volume to give reasonable economy of scale."

Idaho unemployed ranks thin down

BOISE (UPI) — Insured unemployment in Idaho dropped to 5,987 during June, the lowest point in seven months and the lowest June figure since 1974, the Department of Employment reported today.

In its monthly newsletter, the department credited excellent working conditions during the month for helping construction, lumber and wood products industries achieve record claimant lows. At 771 claimants, the construction industry recorded its lowest monthly figure since October, 1977, and the lowest June figure since 1973.

Manufacturing industries as a whole have shown improvement across the state with claimant levels falling more than 29 percent from May, the report said. But food processing industry claimants have increased nearly 30 percent because of potato warehouse closures.

Mining claimant levels were up to 61 persons, a normal level for June. Retail and wholesale trade industries were up from May but down from the past three years. Service industries reported increases of 4.6 percent.

"State and local government entities posted claimant levels at the lowest monthly figures of more than 3 1/2 years. Transportation, communications, utilities, finance, real estate, and insurance industries also reported declines in claimant levels.

County results

Twin Falls County picks Stoker

TWIN FALLS — Jeff Stoker, young Twin Falls attorney, defeated Len Ettinger, a Shoshone resident and practicing attorney in Twin Falls, in the race for the Republican nomination for prosecuting attorney here Tuesday.

Stoker polled 3,511 votes compared to 1,726 for Ettinger in the complete unofficial returns Tuesday night from the 48 Twin Falls county precincts.

In the other county race, Tommy Walker Sr., a retired businessman defeated William Buhler, a realtor from Twin Falls, for the second district county commission post on the Republican ballot. These were the only two races in the county offices in the Tuesday election. Walker polled 3,553 votes and Buhler received 1,950.

Results of the voting for other county offices, all unopposed, included:

County commissioner, first district, Merl Leonard, Republican, 4,931; Clerk, Richard A. Ponce, Republican, 4,501; County treasurer, Juanita Stettler, Republican, 4,500 and Marjorie Sumnerfeld, Democrat, 947; county assessor, George Clark, Republican, 4,523; county coroner, Cloyce Edwards, Republican, 4,987.

Unusual events occur on primary

TWIN FALLS — Several Twin Falls residents were surprised this morning when they arrived at their polling place after 8 a.m. and found someone had forgotten to open the door.

The voters, in Precincts 7, 9, and 24, had to wait for about one-half hour at the Episcopal Church of Ascension before the janitor arrived to open the door and let the people in to vote, according to local election judges. The doors finally opened about 9:30 a.m.

"The janitor just didn't get there in time," one official said.

One resident told the Times-News that he got so disgruntled that he finally went home.

A state election official said if someone wanted to file a complaint he would have to "show that it affected the election."

Other polling places were open for business on time, but voters evidently forgot about the election or didn't care as they didn't go to the polling booths in record numbers. Turnout was light to moderate, although there were some pockets of heavy voting.

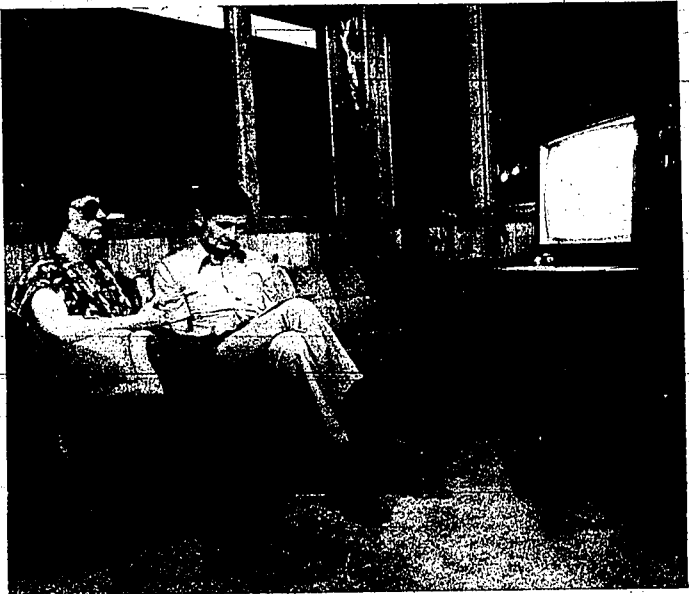

Secretary of State Chief Deputy Ben Youson reported the first complaint of the election — senior citizens in Shoshone County whose card room was taken over for a polling place.

In Ada County, voters complained in at least three precincts that numbers on the punch-card ballots did not line up with the numbers of the candidates. However, closer checking showed that when they were punched the correct hole was made in the ballot.

Meanwhile, Republican gubernatorial candidate, C.L. "Butch" Otter found himself receiving a warning about his passing out of "greenbacks" to promote his candidacy.

The U.S. Secret Service warned Otter to cease passing out "greenbacks" because he copied parts of the $1 bill in reproducing his campaign gimmick. The secret service said in using the campaign device he violated federal law and is liable to a maximum of $500 fine for each violation.

Max Richardson, resident agent for the secret service in the Boise office, said he considers the matter "a technical violation" and is not inclined to seek prosecution if Otter stops distributing his dollar bills. He said Otter promised him he would.

No upsets in Rupert area

RUPERT — A computer problem delayed final tallies for Minidoka County from being compiled until 12:45 a.m. today but the end results saw no upsets in the four contested county races.

The vote totals, with the four races up for grabs listed first, are as follows: District 1 Commissioner-

Republicans: (incumbent) Max Garner 1,478, Elmer Ketterling 1,012, and Democrat George Suchan 503; District 2 — Commissioner Republicans: (incumbent) Lyle Barton 1,307, Glen Hawkes 1,130, and Democrat Lynn Tomlinaga 503.

Treasurer-Republicans: (incumbent) Phyllis Norby 2,077, W. Monte

Robinson 453; Assessor-Republicans: Cecil Diebold 1,329, Dale Leslie 918, and Democrat Audrey Nelverth 541; County Clerk-Democrat Gus Bethke 599, Republican Donald Mayes 2,039; Coroner-Democrat Kim Christensen 570; Prosecuting Attorney-Republican Henry W. Manning 2,978, Democrat Donald Workman 570.

Howell, Jepson win in Jerome

JEROME — Russell Howell narrowly defeated Charlotte Bell in the contest for the Republican nomination for county commissioner in Jerome's second district.

Final vote totals show Howell with 973 votes, Bell with 873 votes and Michael Dahmer, the third contestant, with 464.

In the Republican race for county assessor, incumbent Howard Jepson beat James Coakley by 1236 votes to 1047.

In other Republican contests, Virginia Ricketts, incumbent county clerk, ran unopposed and received 1936 votes; James Babcock, incumbent coroner, unopposed, received 1984 votes; Eugene Fredericksen, incumbent county prosecutor, unopposed, received 2193 votes.

On the Democratic side, incumbent 1st district county commissioner Mel Grindstad, unopposed, received 293 votes; Henry Reid, unopposed challenger for county commissioner from Jerome's 2nd district, got 256 votes; Carl Stephens, incumbent treasurer, unopposed, received 300 votes; William Kersey, unopposed candidate for county assessor, received 304 votes; and write-in candidate for county clerk, Glenda Mogensen, received 48 votes.

"We had a good turnout for a primary," county clerk Virginia Ricketts said. 2800-2700 voters came to the polls, or 36 percent of the 7300 voters listed on the register.

Gooding incumbent defeated

GOODING — Gooding County Commissioner Jim Wilkins after one term in office was defeated over two to one by Will Thomas, a newcomer to local politics, Tuesday.

Thomas, who farms east of town, polled 1,514 to 797 for Wilkins in his first try for public office to win the Republican nomination for first district commissioner. Wilkins was challenged on his eligibility to hold office but was upheld in district court. The case has been appealed to the Idaho Supreme court.

The three Gooding County commissioners, including Wilkins, were the object of an unsuccessful recall movement last winter over a decision to "take" the county out of the commercial weed spraying business. Thomas was active in criticism of how the weed issue was handled.

In the GOP nomination for second district commissioner, Lawrence D. Crutchfield, of Hagerman, a retired Navy man, defeated Archie D. Walker, of Bliss, 116 to 64. Thomas will compete with Democrat J.W. Leabo in November, while Crutchfield will be opposed by George H. Lemmon, of Hagerman, who won the Democratic nomination Tuesday.

Lemmon nosed out Anita J. Standal, Bliss school district clerk, 188 to 126 in the only race on the Democratic ticket in the county.

In another contest, Severt (Swede) Swenson, won over Gary W. Shaw, for the Republican prosecuting attorney nomination.

Unopposed GOP candidates were Doris O. Robertson, treasurer, polling 2,942 votes; Wes Truinson, assessor, 2,076; James L. Molchan, coroner, 1920. Unopposed Democratic candidates were J.W. Leabo, first district commissioner, 254, and county clerk Margaret Clements, 326.

Cassia County chooses Heiner

BURLEY — Cassia County Assessor Calvin Heiner survived a strong challenge from Republican challenger Woodrow Barlow in Tuesday's primary and he will meet Democrat Max Brown in the fall election.

Heiner tallied 1,492 votes in Cassia's 25 precincts, 213 more than Barlow.

In the only other contested county race, Republican Clive Holland earned the right to take on Democrat Dallin Reese in November by beating R. Hilton Critchfield for the District 2 County Commissioner's seat.

Holland received 1,435 votes to Critchfield's 1,222. On the Democratic side, Reese got 339 votes.

In the unopposed races, the vote totals read: county clerk-Republican

Frank Kearns 2,540; coroner-Republican Bruce Young 2,411; District 1 Commissioner-Republican incumbent J. Weldon Beck 2,603; Democrat Thomas Jones 385; prosecuting attorney-Republican Alfred Barrus 2,513; Democrat Michael O. Douglas 396; treasurer Shirley Poulson 2,560.

Politicians settle in to wait

TWIN FALLS — Many of Idaho's political office-seekers opted to stay near home to wait and see if they would be carrying the Democratic or Republican banner in the fall.

James Jones, who waged an uphill battle against Rep. George Hansen, watched returns on television Tuesday night at the home of his brother-in-law, Don McFarland, of Eden. Jones, a Jerome lawyer, is a newcomer to the political battle.

Hansen was at his home in Pocatello waiting to see if he would be able to wage another campaign this fall against the Democratic frontrunner.

The Democratic opponents in the primary, Ralph Harding of Boise and Stan Kress of Firth, visited the Bannock Hotel in Pocatello to receive election returns at what has become a traditional "election central" for the district. Harding earlier in the evening was at some friends' home in Blackfoot, just north of Pocatello.

Republicans planned a big rally for late Tuesday evening where the losers in the governor race would gather around the winner to show party solidarity. Those expected to show up were former Boise Mayor Jay Amey, Hayden Lake Builder James B. Crowe, State Rep. Larry Jackson of Boise, State House Speaker Allan F. Larsen of Blackfoot and former Reps. C.L. "Butch" Otter of Caldwell and Vernon P. Ravenscroft of Tulle.

Incumbent Gov. John Evans, unopposed on the Democratic side, was at his home in Boise.

Helsley takes Lincoln post

SHOSHONE — Mrs. Imogene Helsley, a county employee, defeated two men in Tuesday's primary election to win the Republican nomination for Lincoln county assessor.

She polled 308, compared to 244 for Wayne Sorenson, and 222 for Burton Thorne. There is no Democratic candidate for assessor. Republican Incumbent Ed Savaria did not seek re-election.

The assessor's nomination was the only contested primary race Lincoln county.

Unofficial complete returns from the county's six precincts for unopposed GOP candidates show Burrell Williams, first district commissioner, with 614; Joy McClure, clerk, 683; Douglas F. Rose, treasurer, 656; Dr. R.G. Neher, 669, and Jack M. Murphy, prosecuting attorney, 611.

Incumbent County Commissioner chairman, Everett Ward, polled 81 for the unopposed second district Democratic nomination. He was the only Democrat on the county ballot.

Blaine County races easy

HAILEY — With no contested races in Blaine County's primary election Tuesday, voter turnout was slight and polling was slow throughout the county.

A final tally Tuesday night showed 1,242 people voted.

Incumbent District 1 County Commissioner Ray Sweet of Carey is a Democrat, receives 377 votes. His Republican challenger, Bellevue building contractor Robert Rafto, received 425 votes.

In the district 2 county commissioner race, Democrat Bill Burt received 258 primary votes, and Republican Charles Corwin of East Fork received 493 primary votes.

County clerk Marie Iviya, a Democrat, is seeking her third term in office. She drew 371 votes and will be unchallenged in the general election.

Deputy prosecutor Keith Roark running for prosecutor won 315 votes. Republican Steve Boller, a former Blaine County prosecutor and now a Hailey lawyer, received 513 votes.

Marilyn Lanier, a deputy in the county clerk's office running for treasurer on the Republican ticket garnered 572 votes and will be unopposed in November.

County assessor Delmer Nicholson, who is seeking a third term, received 513 votes and will also be unchallenged in the general election.

Colter wins nomination

FAIRFIELD — Wilma Colter defeated Audrey Kelley, 120 to 80, to win the Republican nomination for Camas county treasurer in Tuesday's primary election.

The contest was the only contested primary race in the county. The GOP nominee will face incumbent Loy VansSike in November.

Complete unofficial returns from the county's two precincts gave unopposed Republican candidates, Allen Bauscher, first district county commissioner, 181 votes; Claude Blodgett, second district commissioner, 196; George Gill, 205; William A. Stewart, assessor, 145; John F. Varlin, prosecuting attorney, 200.

Unopposed Democrats were W.I. Wilson, first district county commissioner, with 47 votes; L.W. Baldwin, second district commissioner, 40; Loy Van Skike, treasurer, 40; Everett V. Reagan, assessor, 33.

In the valley

Mass to be held

TWIN FALLS — St. Edward's Catholic Church will offer a memorial mass for Pope Paul VI Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the church, Father Perry W. Dadds announced Tuesday.

The Twin Falls church's mass will be part of a worldwide testimonial of respect for the religious leader who died Sunday.

Water restored

KING HILL — A small amount of irrigation water was expected to be turned into the King Hill Irrigation District's canal system Tuesday night, and if all goes as planned a full head will be turned in this morning.

Some 10,000 acres of farmland between Bliss and King Hill have been without water since a break occurred in the canal Friday. Crews worked over the weekend to pour concrete boxes connecting to a temporary bypass pipe line. Friday's break occurred when a concrete flume cracked open when the hillside began slipping into the Snake River.

Directors of the Irrigation district have said if water can be back into the canal by today crop damage will be minimal. Beans and potatoes are the most critical crops to be without water at this time of year. There also is some sugar beet, sweetcorn and hay acreage in the district.

Negotiations stall

HAILEY — Blaine County teacher and school board negotiators returned to the bargaining table Monday but broke off after six hours without a resolution.

Still unable to agree on teacher salary raises negotiators for both sides made contact offers and counter offers but could not reach a mutually acceptable salary figure.

The teacher negotiators made two offers paving down a $176,672 total salary figure to $150,000. The school district's negotiator raised the school board's salary offer from $94,000 to $98,000.

But at the $98,000 figure, he told the teachers he had reached his "parameters" and would have to return to the school board for authorization to go higher. Negotiations broke off at this point to be resumed Aug. 17.

Speeder chased

GOODING — A 19-year-old California resident who led a state police officer on a chase Monday in a car allegedly stolen from West Yellowstone, Mont., was in custody here Tuesday, charged with reckless driving and possession of a stolen vehicle.

State police officer David Rich said he was attempting to stop the Lotus sports car driven by Augustine Manuel Garcia, 19, Hayward, Calif., about 11:30 a.m. Monday on Interstate 80-N in Gooding County for speeding.

But the driver took off, traveling at speeds over 100 miles per hour.

Trestle fire probed

RICHFIELD — Lincoln County sheriff's officers are investigating the possibility of arson in a fire which destroyed a Union Pacific Railroad Co. trestle over the Little Wood River causing an estimated $20,000 in damage.

The fire spread to state land nearby, charring some three acres before it was extinguished by a fire crew from the Shoshone district Bureau of Land Management, Lincoln County Deputy Sheriff Jack Olson said Tuesday.

He said a witness notified him about 5:30 p.m. Monday that he had seen a wisp of smoke, which within a few seconds erupted into a huge cloud of smoke, making officers suspicious that it was set.

The railroad trestle is located nine miles east of Richfield on the Ketchum branch line. The branch is not used regularly but a train had gone over it last week, a UPRR spokesman said.

The fire was still burning at midnight Monday and crews were still patrolling the site Tuesday.

$100,000 exemption proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church introduced legislation Tuesday to provide a $100,000 exemption from the federal capital gains tax for persons who sell their residences.

"The major beneficiaries would be older homeowners who no longer have a need for a large house once they retire," said the senator. "When they enter their retirement years," Church said as he introduced the bill.

The House Ways and Means Committee has approved similar legislation in the House of Representatives.

Church, who chairs the Senate Aging Committee, said that under existing law a homeowner 65 or older may exclude the gain on the sale of a personal residence, provided the adjusted sales price does not exceed $50,000.

But he added, "Many older Americans must still pay a capital gains tax when they sell their homes since the price of most houses today is well above $35,000 due to rapidly escalating real estate prices."

Church also said existing law permits individuals to defer the tax on the gain from the sale of a home if they purchase a replacement house costing as much or more than the present one.

"This provision works well for individuals who are on their way up the economic ladder," Church said. "It is ideally suited for persons earning more money who may want a larger house because of a growing family or rising lifestyle."

Gooding adopts budget 30% below last year's

By LORAYNE O. SMITH Times-News writer

GOODING — Gooding City Council members Monday night adopted a $1,079,046 budget for the 1979 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

No citizens attended the hearing to discuss the budget.

The new budget is nearly 30 percent lower than last year's budget of $1,523,222 because two federal grants to the city have expired. The city had received funds to remodel the old Safeway building into a city hall-library complex and repair water lines, according to city treasurer Sue Wilson. The grant money for the past year's budget was $234,500 or nearly half the total city expenditures.

Expected expenditures for 1979 under general fund are set at $263,766, compared to $550,091 for 1978. Last year's figure included the building grant of $200,000 for the new city hall. The general fund includes city clerk, police, fire departments, building and food control.

The $40,000 in revenue sharing Gooding expects to receive this year will be allocated to the building fund under the general fund.

Other budget categories, compared to last year's figures, include street department, $176,850 and $136,250; airport, $219,950 and $20,455 ($200,000 of this year's item is a federal grant); recreation, $23,700 up from $18,000; library, $22,100, compared to $20,520; sanitation, $57,690, up from $45,000; irrigation, $59,630 down from $114,100; water, $82,000 down from $260,310; and sewer, $171,450 up from $99,500.

The city treasurer said the sewer item includes about $110,000 in federal funds.

In other business Monday night the council took under advisement two bids on the old library which has been appraised at $22,800. One bid, from Tom Jones and Autry Haws, is for $18,000, and the other, entered by Dick Strickland for Dick and Fran Graves, was a term bid of $22,000.

The council will make a decision on the bids at its Aug. 21 meeting, according to Councilman Bob Molline who conducted the meeting in the absence of Mayor Don Morrow.

No bids were received when the city first called for them on the old library building.

City officials hope to be able to move into the new city hall about Aug. 15. The remodeling project is nearing completion, but the carpet has not yet been installed.

Councilmen decided to close the city swimming pool Aug. 12, about eight days earlier than normal because of lack of funds.

A letter was read from the city planning commission recommending approval of a zoning variance requested by the senior citizens on city owned lots they have leased with plans to construct a new building to house senior activities.

Joni James of Jerome and 'Rocky' won high point youth title

Appaloosa show high points

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

FILER — High Point performance horse of the annual Southern Idaho Regional Appaloosa Horse Show in Filer last weekend was D. J.'s Count Teko, owned by Don DePew of Jerome.

DePew also took first place in the open jumping competition with Count Teko, and placed in a number of pleasure events and other competition.

Junior high point performance horse was Pat's Promise II, P., owned and shown by Carol Feugh of Richfield.

Show secretary Melody Brown of Kimberly said about 430 horses were entered in the annual show and sale at the Twin Falls County fair grounds in Filer. Entries represented nine western states. The show was hosted by the Magic Valley Appaloosa Horse Club.

The Magic Valley club crowned a new queen, Lee Martin of Salt Lake City, Utah. She will represent the club in regional competition. Kim Hornack of West Point, Utah, last year's Magic Valley Appaloosa Horse Club queen, turned her crown over to the Salt Lake City rider. Miss Hornack won first runner-up honors in the national Appaloosa queen contest in Billings, Mont., earlier this year.

Joni James, 11, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry James of Jerome, won all around youth championship honors in the show, winning first in her own age group and again with young riders from 10 to 19 years of age.

Joni and DePew each received trophy saddles for their efforts.

In the annual sale, featuring 55 high quality Appaloosa horses, Mindoka War Lance, Consigned by L. William and Neva Moore of Hansen, brought the highest price, selling for $2,250. The yearling stallion was purchased by Raymond Gardner of Buhl.

Karen James, sale secretary, said the top mare sold Saturday night was Peace Lady, consigned by Claude Bruce of Payette and purchased by Don Winchell of Auburn, Wash. The mare brought $1,200. The top gelding of the sale was Dutch Smuck, owned by Dwight Ferguson of Bonners Ferry, and sold to Dr. Dick Oylor of Pocatello for $1,625. Mrs. James said a total of 55 horses sold, most of them yearlings or two-year-olds, averaging $608 and bringing total of $34,600.

Daughter of WWII romance meets father for first time

BOISE (UPI) — Sergio Fabbian and his daughter of a World War-II romance, Susanna Pember, 32, Glenn Ferry, are together for the first time.

Fabbian, who met Susanna's mother while he was a prisoner of war interned at an Ogden, Utah, camp, arrived Monday night from Italy, Susanna, who just learned of his whereabouts seven months ago, was at the Boise airport to greet him.

"I was emotional and excited to think we were going to meet as we flew in," Fabbian said, through an interpreter.

Susanna had studied her father's picture but when he stepped from the plane a friend had to point him out to her. She nervously introduced herself and then the two embraced and cried. Susanna's three daughters also cried when they met their grandfather for the first time.

After her parents met during the war, a romance developed but their plans were crushed when Fabbian was sent back to Italy in 1945. Susanna was born a few months later and sent to live with her grandparents.

She first tried to contact her father in Italy last December although years before someone had told her he was dead. The U.S. Embassy in Rome helped them make contact and later arranged the visit to Idaho.

Fabbian, who was accompanied by his wife, Lola, plans to stay in Idaho three weeks. Susanna and her husband, Dave, and the children plan to show them around Idaho and Dave's family is planning a reunion in Buhl later this week.

New CSI program to train interpreters for the deaf

TWIN FALLS — A new program to train persons to become interpreters for the deaf and hearing impaired will be offered beginning this fall at the College of Southern Idaho.

Interpreter students will be awarded an associate of arts degree upon completion of the two-year program.

CSI, as a center for educational training of deaf and hard of hearing students for six years, will provide practical experiences for students in the interpreting program.

"Trainees will receive instruction in sign language communication with the deaf, and interpreting in various settings such as legal, educational, medical, social work, religious, vocational rehabilitation and employment.

Jim Palmer, director of the Vocational Technical Center at the college, said special seminars will be held throughout the program with guest lecturers emphasizing communication, human relations in interpreting drama and body language. Each student will serve an internship at the end of the training program in a setting which meets the individual student's needs.

"Interpreting for the deaf is an emerging profession due to the new legislation being passed for the handicapped," he said. "Interpreters are in constant demand for the courtroom, in churches and in the doctor's office."

CSI has a staff of six interpreters who are educational specialists translating for deaf students in the regular classroom and in lab areas.

Students taking the new degree program will fulfill the general education requirements of the college as well as the specialized coursework in sign language communication and interpreting.

To initiate the new program, the college was granted $30,000 by the Idaho Department of Vocational Rehabilitation. The grant will fund two instructors.

According to Dr. Roy Strawser, academic dean, and Orval Bradley, director of the vocational school, the college had to establish the need by working with the Magic Valley Vocational Advisory Committee on Programs for the Deaf, the Magic Valley Vocational Rehabilitation agency, the Idaho State School for the Deaf and Blind, and other interested agencies.

Based on enrollment and completion of an American class that has been offered at CSI for three years, it is felt that between 12 and 15 people could enroll and complete the initial two-year program.

The grant will be for the 1978-79 academic year only.

Female climbers reach for top

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — The main climbers of an all-American woman's expedition, including its leader Ariane Blum, biochemist at University of California, Berkeley, arrived here Tuesday for an attempt to scale Annapurna's 26,545-foot peak.

Ms. Blum told a news conference, "We hope to make the first attempt by a three-member summit party by the first week of October. Ideally, we would like to put all 10 members on the top."

Annapurna has never been climbed by an American or a woman.

The team includes Joan Flery, 50, a physical therapist from Seattle, Wash., and mother of three and LE Kloubitzky, a married and living in Burbank, West Germany.

The women are climbing with the slogan, "A Woman's Place Is On Top," printed on their official T-shirts.

Scientists search for meteorite

DENVER (UPI) — Staffers from the Denver Museum of Natural History plan a trip this week to southeast Wyoming to search for the help of ranchers in finding fragments of a meteor that fell to earth last week, museum curator Jack Murphy said Tuesday.

Murphy said several hundred persons in Wyoming, Colorado and Nebraska saw the meteor explode 11 miles over southeast Wyoming the afternoon of Aug. 2. He said the object probably fell to earth northwest of Pine Bluffs, Wyo.

Museum officials have offered $100 to anyone who provides the first sample of the meteor. They also have receded anyone with information about the meteor to call the museum collect at (303) 575-3923.

Murphy said a pair of two-staffer teams and a photographer, five persons altogether, would travel to Pine Bluffs, Wyo., late Tuesday or Wednesday and set up an exhibit of meteor fragments at the Farmers State Bank so Laramie County residents will know what the objects look like.

Murphy has asked Laramie County ranchers and farmers to look for charcoal-like crusted stones, along with other evidence such as fresh craters and holes in small buildings.

Celtics decline dupe tag

BOSTON (UPI) — New Boston Celtics owner John Y. Brown Tuesday objected to statements by San Diego owner Irv Levin that he got the better of a six-player swap with Brown last month.

Levin, former Celtics owner, and Brown, former owner of the Buffalo Braves, swapped franchises in June. Levin, a Hollywood movie mogul, acquired the Braves and immediately moved them to San Diego.

He was quoted last weekend as saying he "took" the Celtics in the six-player deal that netted him Kermit Washington, Kevin Kunnert and Freeman Williams for Marvin Barnes, Billy Knight and Nate Archibald.

He said he learned about such moves from Celtic General Manager Red Auerbach.

"He must have been out of his tree when he said that," Brown said. "He traded, let's see, Nate Archibald, a proven NBA star, for a rookie. There weren't many rookies who played in the NBA last year."

"And then, he traded for Kevin Kunnert. He's been a backup center. Kunnert's not the answer to rebuilding the Celtics. And Washington, he's a good player but hasn't reached the potential either Marvin or Billy has reached."

"I think we got a great deal," he said.

Concerning forward Sidney Wicks, who has been an object of dissatisfaction 2 Boston fans for two years, Brown said "more than likely, we'll be sending Wicks to San Diego."

Englebert nabs second

KETCHUM — Bodybuilder Jerry Englebert placed second in the Mr. America over 40 competition held recently in Los Angeles.

Englebert, who was crowned Mr. Idaho this spring, placed second in the competition behind the runner-up in the Mr. America competition.

"This is the first year I've entered, it," he explained from Ketchum where works as a policeman.

The competition was divided into short, medium and tall divisions and he competed in the medium height class.

Along with being the runner-up in his division, Englebert was judged to have the best legs of those competing.

"It's hard to assess because of the judges," he said of the reason he received the second place award and not the top spot.

The next goal for Englebert is to win the contest next year but that will take a lot of work and effort.

"I'm working out with weights three days a week and running three days a week, alternating each day," he said of the new training regimen.

For next year, that training will go to five days a week weight training with some running along with it.

"I was pleased with it," Englebert said of the second place award, "because it was the first of this kind of thing I've entered."

The next step is to enter some of the regional and local contests and to work hard to get the body in the right shape, he concluded.

All persons planning to certify this fall should attend this meeting, Oslyn said.

Folks sue on TV disclosure

CHICAGO (UPI) — The parents of a 12-year-old boy who learned he was dying of cancer last summer from a nationally televised broadcast of a Chicago Cubs baseball game filed a $1 million suit Tuesday in Cook County Circuit Court.

The suit, filed by Dwight and Mary Crull of suburban Calumet City, named as defendants the American Broadcasting Co., ABC-TV announcer Keith Jackson and Cubs public relations director Buck Peden.

The Crulls said in their suit they still suffer "severe emotional distress" because Jackson unwittingly announced during a Cubs-Pittsburgh game Aug. 8, 1977 that their 12-year-old son, Scott, was dying of bone cancer.

Fidrych done for season

It's a rare sight now!

DETROIT (UPI) — Mark "The Bird" Fidrych, Detroit Tigers' 1976 rookie sensation who only last week appeared nearly recovered from tendinitis in his pitching arm, was sidelined Tuesday for the rest of the year.

General Manager Jim Campbell said the celebrated right-hander, who underwent knee surgery last year before he injured his arm, was placed on the 60-day disabled list.

The announcement was expected to trigger mass refunding of tickets for the Tigers' Wednesday night home game against the Texas Rangers. Fidrych tentatively had been scheduled to make his first appearance on the mound since mid-April.

The Tigers extended by two hours the deadline for refunds—more than 50,000 fans had been expected to be on hand for Fidrych's return.

Fidrych won his first two starts this season before the shoulder problem flared again. Last year, he was 6-4 in a season cut short first by knee surgery and then arm trouble.

Last week, it appeared Fidrych was on his way back to the lineup after he pitched strongly in two games for the Tiger's minor league team in Lakeland, Fla. However, he was taken out of a Florida game last Saturday after one inning when he complained of shoulder stiffness.

Campbell said doctors advised that Fidrych, 19, two years ago when he was the American League Rookie of the Year, should rest his arm the remainder of the year. That also means, Campbell said, that Fidrych will not play winter ball, pushing his return to the mound back to next spring.

Campbell said the decision to sideline the popular pitcher was made after receiving reports from Dr. Edwin Guise, an orthopedic specialist at Ford Hospital who examined Fidrych Monday.

"The doctor said The Bird has made tremendous improvements from the tendinitis that has kept him from pitching for the Tigers since April 17," Campbell said. "He added, however, that Fidrych is still not in condition to pitch."

"He still has tendinitis and it is unwise for him to try and pitch at this time."

Guise told Campbell chances were good that "with prolonged rest and rehabilitation, Mark would be able to pitch next spring."

Walton mulls in secret

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Bill Walton and his advisors gathered at an unknown location Tuesday to discuss the bid by the New York Knicks for the NBA's most valuable player before entering negotiations with representatives of the Golden State Warriors.

The Knicks and Warriors have shown the most interest in Walton, the Portland Trail Blazers' center who has asked to be traded because of his disenchantment with the team's medical practices.

"We find the Knicks and Warriors have sent their top management to see Bill, indicating great interest to us," said Walton's representatives, Jack Scott and John Bassett, in a statement.

Scott, Bassett and Walton met with Knicks President Mike Burke Tuesday morning, but details of the discussions were not available.

"We'll have no major announcements to make until the meetings are completed and Bill plans to make up his mind quickly," said Scott earlier in the week. "We'll make an announcement of Bill's choice, then go over to the Blazers and make the trade."

After Burke finished his talks, Warriors General Manager Scotty Stirling and coach Al Attles were to see Walton and his representatives. Golden State President Franklin McCull had an appointment later in the week after completing business at Wednesday's owners' meeting in Chicago.

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham advised he would be in Portland Wednesday to talk to Walton. General Manager Pat Williams, who originally had been announced as a participant, will not come to Portland at this time.

The question of compensation to the Blazers in return for signing Walton, other than cash, again was put to Scott, and he said, "Bill's position is that he questions if there should be any compensation at all (meaning player or players as the Blazer Coach Jack Ramsay said he would like to have). Bill feels very strongly that he is not going to allow the team that he goes to to be damaged by his acquisition. He's leaving Portland because he feels mistakes were made by Portland. He does not believe he or the team which acquires him should pay for Portland's mistakes."

Meanwhile, in the heart of Bazaarman, two teen-age cousins, Jane Paulson, 13, and Jennifer Smith, 14, opened a Portland office for "Kids for Walton."

All-stars win two, league champs one

TWIN FALLS — The A and B league all-stars took victories while Beans-Inc-Payless Drug notched one for the champs in the C league Tuesday night when the Twin Falls women's softball season came to a close locally with three special games.

The highlight, according to the reaction of a good-sized crowd, came in the nightcap when the all-stars nipped Blue Lakes-Green Trout Farm 3-1 in a crisply played game.

The B league all-stars caught Me n' Ed's Pizza with their bats down and ran off with a 17-0 victory. Me n' Ed's, which won the league title, managed just three hits against the stars.

In the C league doings, the all-stars and the young Beans-Payless crew traded the lead and a lot of errors. The stars fell behind by five runs early, rallied into a brief 11-10 lead and then fell back for good in the sixth inning.

In the feature game, the A stars took an early lead when Carol Coonts led off with second inning with a single and scored on another hit by Hank Bulcher. The stars picked up a pair of unearned runs in the fourth to lead things. Schroeder lived on a fielder's choice and Tammy Stansell slammed a double. The runs scored on an error.

Blue Lakes-Green Trout, largely composed of last year's state championship roster, got its run in the fourth inning when Brenda Falash doubled and scored on Gale Hamby's hit. Over the last three innings neither team could score.

Thompson collects decathlon crown

EDMONTON (UPI) — Daley Thompson of England unofficially set the second-best decathlon score ever Tuesday to win the Commonwealth Games title with a total of 8,467 points.

But the mark, which also bettered the six-year-old European record set by Russia's Nikolai Avilov, will not go in the books because Thompson had too strong a following wind on his long jump.

Thompson's performance, bettered only by American Bruce Jenner's world and Olympic record at Montreal in 1976, was the highlight of track and field action at the halfway point of the Games.

Only two other gold medals were handed out during the day in the Commonwealth stadium, which remained more than half-empty. Australia's Gael Mulhull won the women's shot put title with a heave of 56-9/16 for a Games' record, with Carmen Jonesco of Canada, who Monday won the discus gold medal collecting the silver ahead of Judith Oakes of England. The 30-kilometer walk, raced in personal best by more than 200 points by England's Ollie Flynn in 2 hours 22 minutes 3.7 seconds. Willi Sawall of Australia finished 55 seconds back to take the silver ahead of teammate Tim Erickson.

Thompson bettered his own personal best by more than 200 points to take the decathlon gold and was more than 8,700 points ahead of silver medalist Peter Hadfield of Australia, who totaled 7,623. England's Alan Drayton won the bronze with 7,484 points.

The 20-year-old Englishman ran 10.50 in the 100 meters, cleared 26-7/16 in the windy long jump, heaved the shot 47-4, cleared the high jump bar at 6-9/16 and ran 47.85 in the 400 meters to close out the first day. On the second, he ran 14.92 in the 110 hurdles, threw the discus 136-9, pole vaulted 15-9, hurled the javelin 165-8 and made sure of his "record" by running the 1,500 meters in 4:25.78.

Overhead and gone

Long reach by Beans-Payless first baseman isn't long enough as the ball goes over her head and allows an all-star to reach safely. Beans-Payless won 17-13.

Three new Celtics promise to hustle

By STEVE BRADSHAW. BOSTON (UPI)—The three newest and possibly most controversial Boston Celtics promised Tuesday to hustle and play exciting NBA basketball.

Marvin Barnes, Nate Archibald, and Billy Knight were joined last month by Larry Levin and John W. Brown swapped franchises. Brown, the former owner of the Buffalo Braves took over the Celtics, while Levin gained the Braves and moved them to San Diego, Calif.

Optimism abounded at a meeting with the media with all three players expressing willingness to do anything necessary to contribute to a Celtics turnaround from their disastrous 1977-78 season.

"I'm happy to be a Celtic," said Marvin Barnes, who has played for the American Basketball Association and two National Basketball Association teams since graduating in 1973 from Providence College.

"I used to admire the Celtics as a kid, I admired Red Auerbach. Now, we have a good owner, and Red is the general manager in the game. (Center Dave) Cowens does everything well," he said. I always admired their (Celtics) pride. I hope me, Nate and Billy can help bring that pride back to Boston."

Barnes, who has had several scrapes with the law since he turned pro last month asked Brown to lift the no-cut guarantee from his three-year contract in an effort to make him play better.

"I want to earn my money," said Barnes. "With the long-term contract, I got a little backwards. I knew that if I showed up at the gym, good or bad, I still got my check. That wouldn't happen to Nate or Billy. They always give 110 percent. But it happened to me."

Brown said Barnes' action, "was one of the most refreshing things I've seen in sports. It doesn't happen in all cases, but most of the time, these youngsters take the incentive out of the game."

Archibald, who tore an achilles tendon in his foot last year, says he's fit and

Yankees post 3-0 shutout over Brewers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Willie Randolph hit a pair of run-scoring doubles and Dick DiGregorio's passages combined on a four-hitter Tuesday night in leading the New York Yankees to a 3-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Milwaukee's Mike Caldwell, bidding for his 15th victory, carried a two-hitter through the sixth inning by reaching second base when shortstop Robin Yount threw wildly past first base after fielding his grounder deep in the hole. Dent moved to third on a groundout before Randolph ripped a 3-2 pitch into the right field corner for a tie, putting the Yankees ahead 1-0. Randolph moved to third on a fly out and Lou Piniella singled past Caldwell, 1-4-6, to drive in another unearned run.

Randolph doubled home the Yankees' final run in the eighth — the first earned run by the Yankees off Caldwell in 27 innings.

Braves 6, Reds 5

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Phil Niekro, after pitching hitless ball for six innings, settled for a five-hitter and drove in two runs with an eighth inning single Tuesday night to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 6-5 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The veteran knuckleballer blanked the Reds without a hit through the first six innings and contributed a two-run single during a three-run, eighth inning that knocked in what proved to be the winning run. Niekro, 34, struck out six and walked three.

Boston 9, Indians 7

BOSTON (UPI) — Jim Rice led a long ball assault on Fenway Park's left field fence with a pair of homers to regain the major league lead with 27 Tuesday night and power the Boston Sox to a 9-7 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Rice, who went 4-for-4, was supported by Carlton Fisk's 16th homer and Dwight Evans' 21st as the power-laden Red Sox socked four homers in a game for the first time this season.

Cleveland started the fireworks in the first when Johnny Cuhel hit two-run homer — his 13th of the season and fifth at Fenway Park. Fisk's three-run shot put Boston ahead 3-2 in the bottom of the inning.

After Gary Alexander's 21st homer tied the score in the second, Boston exploded for five runs in the third on Rice's three-run shot and Evans' two-run blast off Cleveland reliever Paul Reuschel. Cleveland pulled to within 8-7 on RBI singles by Andre Thornton and Bernie Carbo and Alexander's RBI groundout in the fifth struck off Baltimore homer closed the scoring in the sixth.

Jays 5, Orioles 3

TORONTO (UPI) — Al Woods' first homer of the season in the fifth inning snuffed a tie and led the Toronto Blue Jays to a 5-3 victory over Baltimore Tuesday night for their sixth straight triumph over the Orioles at Exhibition Stadium.

The Orioles took a 3-0 lead in the first inning on a single by Mark Belanger, a run-scoring double by Rich Dauer and Lee May's 18th homer, but Toronto scored a run in the first on singles by Bob Ballor, Roy Howell and John Mayberry then tied the score in the third on a double by Howell and Rico Carty's 18th homer.

Woods' homer off Mike Flanagan, 14, led the Jays ahead 4-3 in the fifth and Toronto added an insurance run in the eighth on an RBI double by Doug Aull.

Expos 6, Mets 1

MONTREAL (UPI) — Larry Parrish and Warren Cromartie drove in two runs apiece in a six-run first inning Tuesday night and the Montreal Expos blanked out the New York Mets 6-1 behind the three-hit pitching of rookie Dan Schatzeder.

Tom Hausman, 2-2, started for the Mets and lasted only 1-3 of an inning as he was tagged for five runs. Montreal went ahead 2-0 on Parrish's bases-loaded single and Cromartie's single singled in another run and Schatzeder helped his own cause by doubling in the final run.

Twins 10, Seattle 2

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Minnie Miñoso slugged a pinch-hitter Mike Bergman slugged a bases-loaded homer to ignite a seven-run sixth inning and Rod Carew had four singles and drove in two runs Tuesday night to carry the Minnesota Twins to a 10-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Rick Honeycutt, 4-7, gave up an RBI single to Larry Waltz and reliever Mike Parrott walked Glenn Borgmann with the bases loaded in the sixth before Cabbage, batting for Bob Randall, connected for his sixth homer of the year and fourth career grand slam. Jose Morales knocked in the final run of the sixth with his second single of the inning.

Gary Serun, 5-5, scattered 10 hits in eight innings to get the victory before giving way to Mike Marshall in the ninth.

Willie Norwood hit his seventh homer for the Twins in the second and Carew drove in runs in the fifth and seventh.

Pirates 9, Cubs 5

CHICAGO (UPI) — John Milner hit his second grand slam homer of the year Tuesday and Dave Parker went 5-for-5, including a two-run homer, to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 9-5 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

Milner's homer climaxed a five-run fifth inning for the Pirates. Frank Thomas opened with a double and scored on Willie Stargell's single. Parker doubled to move Stargell to third and Willie Hernandez, relieving starter Rick Reuschel, walked Bill Robinson intentionally to fill the bases before Milner hit his 9-1 pitch into the right field seats.

The Pirates scored three runs in the third when Manny Sanguillen was safe on a fielder's choice and scored on Stargell's triple. Parker followed with his 17th home run. He also had two singles.

Don Robinson got his seventh win against five defeats, with Kent Tekulve relieving after the Cubs scored three runs in the eighth.

KC10, Chicago 4

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Clint Hurdle stroked four singles and Pete LaCock, U.L. Washington and Al Cowens contributed three hits apiece Tuesday night to pace an 18-hit attack that carried the Kansas City Royals to a 10-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Seven different batters drove home a run apiece as Kansas City scored four times in the second inning and added four more runs in the fifth. Hal McRae contributed a two-run homer, his 11th, to close out the Royals' scoring in the eighth.

Paul Splittorff, 13-9, picked up the victory, with relief help from Marty Pattin, who earned his third save by shutting out Chicago for the final 2-3 innings. Pattin took over for Steve Minger with the bases loaded and one out in the seventh and induced Lamar Johnson to ground into a double play.

Rookie Mike Colbern's two-run double gave Chicago a 2-0 lead in the second inning. Sacrifice flies by Don Kessinger and Eric Soderholm accounted for the other Chicago runs.

Cards sweep Phils

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Pete Vuckovich tossed a four-hitter in the opener and Tom Bruno, making his first major league start, allowed only four hits in seven innings of the nightcap Tuesday night to help the St. Louis Cardinals complete a doubleheader sweep of the Philadelphia Phillies, 2-0 and 6-2.

The sweep extended the Cardinals' winning streak to five games, their longest of the season.

In the nightcap, Bruno boosted his record to 2-0 since being called-up from the Triple 'A' Springfield farm club last Friday. Reliever Buddy Schultz finished up, allowing a solo home run to pinch-hitter Jerry Martin.

The Cardinals snapped a 1-1 tie with four runs in the third, battling around against starter and loser Jim Lonborg, 7-10, and reliever Warren Brusstar. Jerry Mumphrey led off the inning with a single, and after Lonborg walked Ken Oberkell, George Hendrick lined a double off the left field wall to score Mumphrey.

Keith Hernandez walked to bring in Brusstar and Oberkell scored when Philadelphia failed to turn a double play on Tony Scott's grounder. Steve Swisher and Mike Phillips capped the uprising with run-scoring singles.

St. Louis took a 1-0 lead in the second when Wayne Garrett led off with a single and eventually scored on a throwing error by first baseman Richie Hebner. The Cardinals added their final run in the fifth with the help of another Philadelphia error.

The Phillies tied the score in the third on base hits by Bud Harrelson and Bake McBride and sacrificed by Lonborg.

Vuckovich, who lowered his ERA to 2.26 to tie with Montreal's Steve Rogers for the National League lead, was helped by two double plays and a leaping catch at the left centerfield wall by Hendrick, who took away an extra base hit from Barry Foote in the eighth.

Texas 9, Tigers 4

DETROIT (UPI) — Bump Wills had four singles and drove in two runs and Bobby Bonds knocked in three runs with a double and a homer Tuesday night to spark the Texas Rangers to a 9-4 victory over the Detroit Tigers. The victory stretched Texas' winning streak to four games and snapped Detroit's at five.

Paul Mirabella, in just his second major-league start, got the victory to raise his record to 2-0. The left-hander allowed two runs in five innings before being relieved by Doc Medich, who finished for his second save.

Dave Rozema, 5-6, allowed five runs before getting knocked out of the game in a four-run fifth inning which was highlighted by Wills' two-run single and Bonds' two-run double.

KC may be majors' smallest city but its biggest at gate

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — In Kansas City, crowds do not roam the streets, every family does not own a tractor and the tallest building is not a silo.

So much for the popular myths. There are two million reasons Kansas City is not the "Cow Town" of national reputation and the baseball Royals are taking every one of those reasons to the bank.

Kansas City is major league baseball's smallest metropolitan market but the Royals, on the strength of an American League-leading 10,500 season tickets, are on their way to the first two million attendance in the city's history.

"It's the most phenomenal thing that's happened in sports," said Royals' General Manager Joe Burke. "To think that Kansas City — the 26th and smallest great city we have. This is not a little midwestern town: these people here are major league all the way."

The Royals can seat only 40,762 for any given game. But through 51 home dates this season, Kansas City has drawn 1,435,147 fans for an average of 28,148. That puts the Royals 301,170 ahead of their record attendance of 1,100,000.

"We've got the third smallest ballpark in all of baseball behind Boston and Chicago (Wrigley Field). That shows what great fans we have. This is not a little midwestern town: these people here are major league all the way."

The Royals can seat only 40,762 for any given game. But through 51 home dates this season, Kansas City has drawn 1,435,147 fans for an average of 28,148. That puts the Royals 301,170 ahead of their record attendance of 1,100,000.

"When I first came here, it was the consensus that the potential draw in Kansas City was 1.5 million people," said Burke. "They said we might draw 1.6 or 1.7 million if we won two world championships in a row."

"I thought we might have climaxed last year when we drew 1.8 million. But we began getting mail orders for the New York and Boston games back in February. And with all the season tickets we sold, we had a guaranteed one million by the time we opened the season.

"In April, we started envisioning two million. We didn't have any national reputation in baseball in April and May when we weren't playing well. When our average built up then, we could see the potential for June, July, August and September.

"They told us we couldn't draw, no one could draw, on Monday nights. That's been one of our best nights. They told us we couldn't draw on holidays. We have set records this year (40,030 on July 4 against California) on holidays."

The Royals have played before before crowds of 35,000 16 times and before crowds of 40,000 three times. Two of those 40,000 crowds came on Tuesday nights. The other sellout crowd was a franchise record 40,903 on May 13 (Saturday) against the New York Yankees.

"The thing to do in Kansas City is to go see the Royals," Burke said. "That's all I hear everywhere I go. People want to talk about the Royals. They want to see the Royals. The people here now buy their tickets in advance. They want that ticket in hand. They don't want to take the chance of being shut out."

"We might get up to 2.2 million this year. I think 2.3 or 2.4 million is the ultimate. That means you're averaging 30,000 a game. Then you start going to the point of no return. To think we could draw anything beyond that is not realistic, especially when you have those 10,000, and 15,000 crowds early in the season."

The reasons for the booming popularity of Kansas City baseball are numerous. The Royals won more games than any team in the major leagues last season and are in pursuit of their third straight division title. The Kansas City fans also know there is a very little chance of rain postponing the game of their choice. Because of the artificial turf, it can rain all day but the moment it stops, the field can be squeezed dry in 45 minutes. The last rainfall here came on Sept. 12, 1977 — the night of the Kansas City flood when 16 inches of rain fell. And the Royals didn't postpone that game until cars were practically floating in the parking lot.

"We couldn't draw two million if we depended solely on our local population," said Burke. "That would be too much to ask. The interest from the outlying areas has been astounding. We've had people drive down from Iowa just to see a Monday night game. Coming that far just to see one game. They come from Nebraska, Arkansas, Oklahoma — we're drawing more people from outside that 75-mile range than we ever have."

The six-year-old stadium, the only facility in the major leagues with its own waterfront, also plays a major role in the popularity of the Royals.

It's an intimate stadium," said Burke. "It comes alive after dark: the countryside, the scoreboard, the water, the lights — the fans are entertained by the animation. When the sun goes down, something happens in Royals Stadium. It's entertaining. People love the atmosphere of major-league baseball here. And you won't hear any complaints from me."

Among nation's best

McRoberts and Sherri Gillette. Those on the bottom are Tbonette Grindall, Susan Beckstead, Ari Harder and Julie King.

TF cheerleaders grab honors

BY VALEZ BIRD-PETERSON Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The football team at Twin Falls High School will be given a spirited kick off this year with an award-winning cheerleading squad.

The squad, composed of seven girls: head cheerleader Julie King, 17; Susan Sweet, 16; Susan Beckstead, 17; Molly McRoberts, 17; Tonette Crandall, 16; Ari Harder, 16, and Sherri Gillette, 17; won top honors in a National Cheerleading Assn. clinic in Corvallis, Ore., in July.

A cheer called "We're Truckin'" and a chant called "Wind Me Up" won the team the award of excellence. The squad's winning blue ribbons for superior performance in cheering competition each night of the clinic, the squad was one of five groups chosen by clinic teachers to compete for the award of excellence on the last night. Cheerleader Susan Beckstead said they were dance-up winners wanting to do a cheer and a chant learned at the clinic and judged on creativity, precision, timing, spirit and enthusiasm. The girls cheered their way to winning the award and also received a spirit megaphone after being judged by the 32 other squads present as maintaining the most spirit throughout the clinic.

Miss Beckstead said we were also really proud of individual achievement by squad members.

Each year 300 girls are chosen nationwide to compete for a 14-member squad which cheers each January at the National League Football Super Bowl. This year Miss Sweet was selected on the basis of spirit and gymnastic ability for this competition.

The National Cheerleading Assn. also invites outstanding cheerleaders to teach at "IMPROVEMENTS AND MISS" and Miss Sweet were the only two at the clinic who were asked to teach.

Miss Beckstead said it is an honor because they ask very few cheerleaders to be on the staff. The schedule at the clinic was grueling beginning at 7 each morning for breakfast and going to 9:30 at night with practice, work sessions and competition.

Miss Beckstead said a lot of the cheering is "boogie and funky" now. And many of the cheers they learned were patterned on disco.

The cheerleaders are planning to pass their talents along to junior high squads with a clinic to be held at the high school. Interested girls should call Julie King at 733-9257.

Affirmed shows winning form

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (UPI) — Affirmed caught the flying Sensitive Prince in the final strides of the $38,925 Jim Dandy Stakes Tuesday to post a narrow half-length victory in his first start since winning the Triple Crown in June.

Sent off as the overwhelming 1-20 favorite, Affirmed trampled Sensitive Prince by as much as 10 lengths in the 1 1/8-mile race but began closing the gap on the far turn and blazed down the stretch to catch the firing leader. Affirmed seemed to bolt in the final 100 yards in catching Sensitive Prince, the second favorite in the field of five. The two finished more than 20 lengths ahead of Addison, who was followed by Bound Green and Fool's Dance in the field of five.

The winning time of 1:47 4/5 over a muddy track was 4/5 of a second off the track record and was a stakes record, breaking the mark of 1:48 2/5 set by Foreelen in 1975.

Ridden by Steve Cauthen, Affirmed returned $2.10 and $2.10 to his backers in the crowd of 21,544, while Sensitive Prince also paid $2.10. There was no show wagering because of the short field.

Affirmed's trainer, Laz Barrera, was using the race as a tuneup for the Aug. 19 Travers Stakes in which Affirmed is expected to renew his rivalry with Triple Crown runnerup Alydar. Last Saturday, Alydar coasted to a 10-length victory in the Whitney Stakes at Saratoga in preparation for the rematch, a series Affirmed leads 7-2.

Affirmed, who carried 128 pounds, now has won eight straight races since finishing second to Alydar in the Champagne Stakes last year over a similarly muddy track. However, the foggy surface did not seem to bother the leggy chestnut.

Affirmed now has won $1,155,962 and is closing in on Secretariat's single season record of $860,404, a mark he could pass should he win the $100,000-added Travers on Aug. 20. It was Affirmed's 14th win in 16 starts, 13 of them stakes victories.

Tuesday it almost seemed as if the Allen Jerkens-trained Sensitive Prince would pull off a major upset when the colt, under Jacinto Vasquez, drove to the lead on the first turn and took the field through fractions of :23

4.5, :46 3/5 and 1:10 1/5 before Affirmed made his tremendous drive. Jerkens is noted for his ability to produce upsets, having defeated Secretariat with Onion in 1973 and Kelso with Beau Pulp in the early 1960s. Sensitive Prince had won six straight races before finishing sixth in the Kentucky Derby, then did not start again until July 22, when he was third in the Maryland Handicap.

"He was hesitating, I think because of the mud, so I had to settle as close as I could keep him," said Cauthen. "He had a lot going against him as this was his first time going against a top speed horse."

Barrera, who has been ill with bronchitis and appeared drawn after the race, said: "That's a good way to get a heart attack. He was back pretty far."

Sensitive Prince, like Affirmed and Alydar, is entered for the 1 1/4-mile Travers and if all three horses keep up their form, it could produce a memorable matchup.

Enjoy home canned jam all year round

By NORMA HERZINGER

Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — It's canning time again.

Since the season for fresh fruits and vegetables is so short, many homemakers take pains in preserving the sunny flavor to enjoy year round. I have always liked this time of year and take great pride in serving my home-canned food to family and friends. I especially enjoy making jams and jellies even though my diet and those of many of my friends won't allow for much. But wicked as we are, we always manage to slip in a little jam on breakfast biscuits or toast.

However, this is a strange year for fruit in the Magic Valley. Some of the early blossoms were nipped right in the bud, and those that came on later survived the early spring freeze.

The peach and the apricot crop doesn't seem to be as plentiful as usual, yet the trees that withstood the freeze are loaded.

For those of you who do have apricots you might want to try this new recipe we just received from the Washington State Fruit Commission that combines apricots, oranges and crunchy almonds. They promise it will brighten many a gray winter morning when served on toasted English muffins or hot biscuits.

ORIENTAL APRICOT CONSERVE
3 pounds apricots
2 oranges
4 cups sugar

2 teaspoons ground ginger
½ cup sliced almonds
Wash, halve and pit apricots. Peel oranges and cut into eighths. Put apricots and oranges through medium blade of food grinder. Place in large kettle. Add sugar and ginger. Bring to a boil. Simmer until thick, about one hour. Stir in almonds. Ladle into clean jars and seal according to manufacturer's directions. Process 10 minutes in boiling water bath. Makes about four pints.

Another way to set aside summer fruits for enjoyment later in the year is with easy-to-make freezer jam. The Consumer Service Department of Best Foods, a division of CPC International, Inc., supplied us with two freezer jam ideas that might be just what you ordered.

We suggest you might like to try the following recipes for peach and berry jam combination and check the instructions inside any two-ounce box of powdered jam and jelly pectin for basic one-fruit freezer jam recipes.

Select fully ripened, unbruised fruit and crush the fruit one layer at a time to let the juices flow freely. Choose one-half pint to one pint glass jars or plastic container with a tight seal for freezer storage of jams. Once the jam mixture has been ladled into containers, it can be stored in the freezer for several months. If it is to be eaten within a week or two, it can go directly into the refrigerator without freezing.

PEACH STRAWBERRY RASPBERRY FREEZER JAM

1 pound fully ripe peaches (2 large or 3 medium)
1 pint fully ripe strawberries
1 pint fully ripe red raspberries
½ cup lemon juice
1 package (2 ounces) powdered jam and jelly pectin
1 cup Karo light corn syrup
4½ cups sugar

Rinse, peel and pit peaches. Thoroughly crush peaches. Measure one cup. Rinse strawberries, remove stems. Measure one cup.

Gently rinse and thoroughly crush raspberries one layer at a time.

Measure one cup.

In large bowl or saucepan, stir together peaches, strawberries, raspberries and lemon juice. Slowly sift in pectin, stirring vigorously. Set aside for 30 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Add corn syrup, stirring well. Gradually stir in sugar. To hasten sugar dissolving, jam mixture may be heated very slightly, but do not heat more than 100 degrees F. (lukewarm). Ladle into containers leaving one-half inch headspace. No paraffin is needed. Cover with tight lids. Makes about seven one-half pint containers.

PEACH STRAWBERRY FREEZER PRESERVES

2 pounds fully ripe peaches
1 pint fully ripe strawberries
¼ cup lemon juice
1 package (2 ounces) powdered jam and jelly pectin
1 cup light corn syrup
4½ cups sugar

Rinse, peel and pit peaches. Thoroughly crush peaches and measure one cup. Wash and measure strawberries. Fully crush and measure one cup.

In large bowl or saucepan stir together fruit and lemon juice. Slowly sift in jam and jelly pectin, stirring vigorously. Set aside for 30 minutes stirring occasionally. Add corn syrup, stirring well. Gradually stir in sugar.

When sugar has completely dissolved, ladle into one-half or one pint freezer containers, leaving one-half inch headspace. No paraffin needed. Cover with tight lids. Makes eight one-half pint containers.

For Peach Raspberry Freezer Preserves, follow the basic recipe above. Use one pint fully ripe red raspberries. Omit strawberries. Decrease lemon juice to two tablespoons.

My co-workers contribution to the food page today comes from Lorayne Smith, a reporter in the editorial department. Mrs. Smith has raised four children and has done a lot of canning when the four were still at home.

A favorite jam in her family for two generations has been blackcap-rhubarb. Blackcaps (black raspberries) are hard to find now, but if you have a friend in the country or on an acreage who raises this variety of raspberry you are in luck. Lorayne's mother-in-law, Sigrid Smith, grew blackcaps for many years and Lorayne says the combination of the tart rhubarb complements the less acid berries for a very pleasing taste combination.

Blackcap Jam, as she calls it, was a favorite when her mother-in-law's family was growing up and several in the family have followed the tradition, making many batches over the years.

BLACKCAP JAM

1 pound of rhubarb
1 quart washed berries
5½ cups sugar

Chop rhubarb, crush berries and combine the two fruits. This should make four cups of prepared fruit. Mix fruit with one box (2 ounces) pectin in a saucepan.

Place over high heat and stir until mixture comes to a hard boil. Add sugar. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard for one minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Skim off foam. Stir and skim for several minutes to cool slightly and prevent fruit from floating. Ladle into glasses, leaving one-half inch space at the top.

Cover jam immediately with paraffin. Cool and cover with loose-fitting lids. Store in cool dry place.

Oriental Apricot Conserve is just what a hot biscuit ordered for a special breakfast

Set up your own wine-tasting party

There's an art to appreciating any fine food and beverage. And, that's done only by comparison. In other words, there's not any more difference in learning the variety of wine flavors than there is for orange juice or tomato ketchup. Wine may be a bigger investment, but well worth it if you want to convert art of serving and drinking the better-than-supermarket kinds.

Last Thursday, there was a wine-tasting party in Twin Falls. No, it wasn't a party to get soured! It was an educational evening about the exceptional wines Jim Olson has brought to sell in a section of his sporting-goods store. Wine for sale in a sporting-goods store seems rather incongruous but sometimes opposites collaborate.

Nevertheless, the Valley now has a large selection of fine wines from Idaho and other domestic ports as well as many imported from around the world. Whether it's a fine Montrachet, a macho man and some music you want or a Beauve Burgundy, good book and bed, Jim can get the wine if he doesn't already have it. Along with the wine, Olson can give alternate suggestions appropriate for the occasion and all sorts of printed material you can take with you.

If you want to make your own wine-tasting, it's easy. Invite your guests to bring a bottle of wine ... give them direction about the type so no wine is the same. Buy plastic (paper changes the taste) medicine cups for tasting, some sliced cheese and unseasoned crackers. Give each guest a pad and pencil to write down the wine's name and to have a general discussion of each wine. Go easy with the amount ... you'll lose your taste buds with too much sipping. A few sips for each wine are enough! The over 50 connoisseurs from Magic Valley who tasted about 15 different wines, did so expertly in the following fashion:

First, they rolled the wine in the cup and then smelled the flavor, then they sniffed again and took a sip, rolling that sip throughout their mouths. The aftertaste from the first sip was examined and another taste was made. That was the correct way to taste the wine. A piece of food was eaten—and another—wine-poured—it was a good—and professional wine-tasting.

As a good tomato sauce does for tomatoes, so does a good wine do for grapes. Gussled up, they both do better to perk up your culinary attempts. COOKED WINE IS IMPORTANT!

Wine is a newcomer to your household, you may be hesitant to open a new bottle for cooking. Save the dregs from bottles or glasses (cooking kills the germs) — don't mix wine flavors. Each wine has a unique taste. What kind of wine should you use? Try a dry white wine or a sherry with fish and poultry. Put dry red or rose into wild game, beef or lamb pot roasts, gravies, stews or whatever else you like to think of. Experiment! Everyone has his own preference and taste buds vary as much as fingerprints. Brandy, sherry make fine seasonings for desserts. Just use your imagination and don't let type or color make traditional decisions for you. Sometimes a dry, red wine makes a good sauce for chicken.

Treat wine in cooking purely as a seasoning. Don't pour it straight into the dish. One-fourth cup is plenty of flavor for 1 cup of sauce. Wine enhances saltiness of the dish if it is. Wine is a tremendous meat marinade because it not only tastes good but it also tenderizes. Another tip is to keep wine away from very tart or very piquantly seasoned foods, unless it's a marinade you're making. When using wine in your marinade, don't marinate in anything but a glazed, glass, enameled, teflon or stainless steel container. One tip exception is that marinades have more wine than sauces.

Since barbecuing, outdoor grilling, what have you, are still in order, we herewith offer you a yummy wine marinade for fish or poultry or lamb.

WHITE WINE MARINADE

½ cup vegetable oil
½ cup dry white wine
1 clove garlic, peeled
1 medium-sized onion, peeled and finely chopped
1 teaspoon powdered mustard
½ teaspoon celery salt
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon white pepper
¼ teaspoon crushed dried tarragon pinch powdered ginger
2 tablespoons honey

In mixing bowl or marinating dish, combine all ingredients. Cover with plastic wrap and chill at least 3 hours. Stir well and then combine with fish, poultry or lamb pieces. Cover with plastic wrap and chill at least 3 hours. Stir well and then combine with fish, poultry or lamb pieces. Cover and chill at least 3 hours, turning pieces at least twice during marinating. Marinated items are ready to cook now.

HOMEMADE WINE VINEGAR

You can make your own wine vinegar by making a combination to a good sharp vinegar with a good dry wine. Try making the combination to start with ½ part red or white wine. Of course, you should adjust the strength to your liking. This is a good recipe for leftover wine.

CHICKEN IN ORANGE-WINE SAUCE

½ cup vegetable oil
2 broiling chickens (2½ to 3 lbs. each)
2 cups orange juice
1 cup dry red wine
½ cup olive liquor (drained from a can pitted ripe olives)
2 medium-sized onions, peeled and sliced
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
1½ teaspoon powdered thyme
¼ cup sliced pitted ripe olives
Preheat oven to 350°.

In large skillet, heat vegetable oil; add chicken pieces and brown on sides. Remove browned chicken from skillet and place in large flat casserole. Add to skillet the orange juice, red wine, olive liquor, onions, salt, paprika, thyme and simmer 3 minutes. Pour sauce over chicken. Bake chicken 1 hour and then spread sliced olives over top; continue baking 30 minutes more, or until tender. Serves 6 to 8.

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUYS:

Nothing is running away! Most prices are the same and poultry is up in cost. Soft fruits — grapes, peaches and plums — are in reasonably priced abundance. Generic foods are getting more and more popular ... canned "no frills" tuna fish is worth investigating because of the saving. The generic tuna doesn't chunk but who cares with popular brands as costly as they are.

Japan faces inadequate sanitation facilities

TOKYO (UPI) — In Japan, the land of economic miracles where Guechli is more at home than in Italy and virtually everyone is well-fed, the flush toilet is still a luxury item. In the 33 years since its defeat in World War II, Japan has become one of the non-Communist world's top economic powers. But it still has no integrated sewer system.

Amongst the Toyotas and Datsuns, high rise buildings, fancy restaurants and deluxe hotels, "vacuum cars" move from wooden houses to wooden house siphoning untreated human waste from underground holding tanks. The fact is that Japan's sanitation facilities for its 113 million people are woefully inadequate.

The construction ministry publicly admitted recently that, despite Japan's wealth, only 26.6 percent of its 31 million households are equipped with flush toilets. Although the nation's sanitation limitations are more serious in rural areas, the nation's capital is not exactly up to modern standards. The ministry's white paper on "Nation building" released recently said only 37 percent of Tokyo's 3 million households have flush toilets. Only 3.4 percent of the government's $189 billion construction budget this year is earmarked for sewer building, with the rest to be spent mainly on highway, multi-story apartment buildings and infrastructure projects. Although $6.5 billion is more than the government normally spends on "social capital investments", it probably would not have been allocated if

Japan hadn't come under pressure to reduce its huge foreign trade surplus. Prime Minister Takao Fukuda pledged at the Bonn economic summit on July 18 that Japan would attempt to reduce its $20 billion trade surplus and achieve 7 percent economic growth by increasing consumer demand at home. One way Fukuda's conservative regime intends to live up to that pledge is to spend more money on construction projects. But under the present administrative set up, a national sewer system is still years away. Even when the national government has completed the major plumbing for an integrated system it will be up to local administrations and individuals to install flush toilets and go through expensive hook-up procedures. Most local governments offer financial assistance to home owners who want to link their houses to existing sewer facilities but it still costs the house holder about $1,500.

Fashion '78; Kooky or chic?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

Dear Abby,
I agree totally with your criticism of women's fashions this year. There is no match for today's tacky designs, tacky workmanship and tacky fabrics. Is it any wonder so many women prefer to wear last year's comfortable, flattering pantsuits? I remember the battle you put up against those crippling, pointed-toed, spike-heeled shoes some years back, and shortly afterward, they went out of style and were replaced with more sensible shoes. Perhaps if more women would refuse to buy the new ridiculous clothes, the designers will get the message and give us something more elegant and feminine again.

Not Buying in '78
Dear Abby,
Accelades to you for protesting the absurd new women's fashions! Like you, I am also wearing what I think becomes me even though it may be several years old. Let the fashion industry do their thing. Meanwhile, I'm sure that millions of style-conscious women will join you in protesting the new freakish-looking clothes by refusing to buy them.

Grandmother in Maryland
Dear Abby,
Three cheers for protesting the ugly, outrageous new fashions the designers are trying to force on women this year. I agree, the new clothes for women are a bad joke. Thanks for saying that you will either wear your old clothes or have something new made. Women my age (40) are not buying this year.

With You All The Way
Dear Abby,
Most of my readers were "with me" — but not all. Here's equal time for the other side:

Dear Tasteless Abby,
Why in the world would you want to perpetuate your antiquated ideas on the fashion-minded public? In today's market, with such a wide variety of soft fabrics and feminine styles, there is something becoming for every woman.

Frankie in Phila.
After years of unkempt, sloppy, look-and-polyester-pantsuits, women are starting to dress and look like ladies again.

Dear Frankie,
Please tell me where to find these "lovely, feminine styles." All I've seen are the oversized Russian peasant styles that make most women (me included) look like "Mrs. Five-by-Five."

Dear Abby,
In reference to your swipe at this year's fashions: You said, "This year's fashions are intentionally kooky in order to make midlady's last year's clothes look completely outdated."

Likes The New Look
Where have you been? You seem to have overlooked many of this year's styles which are flattering and feminine. Oh, yes, there are a few far-out, unusual styles, but they are far from kooky and ridiculous as you claimed. A more appropriate description for them is "fun" clothes.

Dear Likes,
I'm not sure I know what "fun clothes" are, but I can tell you that it's not "fun" to pay the prices they're asking for shoddy, unflattering merchandise. Women of the world unite! Wear what you have as long as you can get the zippers up!

Rue moves into starring role

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Rue McClanahan, the feather-brained and oversexed Vivian Harman of the defunct "Maude" series, moves up from supporting actress to star this fall in the new "Apple Pie" series.

It's a felicitous career move for the blonde actress, but it may result in a disappointing — Christmas — for her friends.

Although shooting on the new Norman Lear show has been in progress only a week, Rue discovered quickly the big difference between starring in a series and being a supporting player is the amount of free time on the set.

As a member of the "Maude" cast for five years, Rue spent uncounted hours sitting around while Ben Arthur, the star, rehearsed. Ben was in almost every scene. Supporting players just hang around and wait for their scenes.

To keep from going bonkers, Rue began to crochet. Then she brought sewing along each day. Finally she found herself making handcrafted Christmas gifts for her friends and relatives.

Now that she is in almost every scene, Rue has a spare minute on the set and her friends will have to settle for store-bought gifts next year.

"I did a lot of piece work on 'Maude,'" Rue said in a clear and present Oklahoma drawl which surfaces only when she's relaxed.

"One of the great dilemmas of a supporting player in a series is finding ways to fill idle time while the stars are working. You can't read because you have to listen for cues. And I hate crossword puzzles. So what to do?"

"Some supporting players just sit around and go quietly crazy. I've known people to burst into tears out of boredom. It's a terrible frustration.

"During the run of 'Maude' I made two beautiful quilts, a lot of dresses and two three-foot-high stuffed chicken pillows. My first project was a crocheted bikini which grew and grew until it became a large shawl.

"The Christmas presents I made were stuffed dolls and personalized handcrafted things like golf tees.

"When I went to New York in 1964, I was too poor to buy clothes. I bought a used sewing machine for $40 and made my own wardrobe. The first thing was a copy of a Mexican wedding dress in white lace. People stopped me in the street to tell me how beautiful it was. You don't see too many of those in New York.

"I cut my own patterns. I made two copies of a Nigerian ceremonial gown and a 1930s dress pieced together like patchwork. My grandmother was a seamstress but I really taught myself to sew.

"I brought some sewing with me on the first day of rehearsals for 'Apple Pie' and I didn't have time to touch it, thank God."

Rue is delighted with her elevation to stardom and unconcerned that the success or failure of the series rests on her shoulders. Nor is she afraid viewers will continue to see her as Vivian when her new show debuts.

Her long blonde hair has been cropped and will be covered by a short red wig. Because "Apple Pie" is set in the Depression year of 1933, her wardrobe will be as dated as her tresses.

She plays Ginger-Nell Hollyhook, a spinster lady of Kansas City, Mo., a retired tap-dancer who advertises for a family. She winds up with a household of boarders — a son, 19, daughter, 20, a grandfather of indeterminate age and a guy who might, quality as a marital prospect.

Rue describes the show as something more than a situation comedy and something less than an urban "Waltons."

"I don't believe viewers will identify me with Vivian," she said. "Ginger-Nell is too strong a personality and much more colorful. Some people may not even know it's me in that wig."

"Vivian was a dumb blonde. Ginger-Nell is smart but slightly off center. She believes in ESP but she's not very good at it.

Paper dolls now collectible items

By RITA RIEF

NEW YORK — Paper dolls — those playthings for children meant to be thrown away — have become collectibles for 15 years.

But many enthusiasts have discovered these tabbed or slotted toys only in the last two to five years. What they respond to — other than their own delight in nostalgia — are the social changes and the fashion cliches incorporated in what most view as irresistible trifles, but some concede are pure trivia.

"Paper dolls satisfy every neurosis I ever had," reported Anne Tolstol Wallach, a vice president of Grey Advertising, who has passionately pursued period examples for two years. "They are small, flat and tidy. I absolutely love the cataloging of each acquisition. I even enjoy getting a little bit behind in this work. There is always something to be done. As for the correspondence, it's marvelous. I never had a pen pal when I was a kid — how I have many."

Mrs. Wallach recalled that she began collecting paper dolls after she saw a generous sampling of vintage versions in an antiques shop. The array to her was staggering. Since then, she observed, she has discovered that as enticing as that selection seemed, it was modest compared to what other dealers stock. Judging from the price tags, which even now range from a few dollars to, tops, $250, collecting paper dolls was, she decided, well within her means.

"Earlier I had collected doll-dolls," she said. "But the better examples of china heads today were $300 and up, and that's more than I can afford."

In two years Mrs. Wallach has amassed about 1,000 dolls. Her first purchase was a book of cutouts with which she was familiar — "First Ladies." In fact, she had owned that book not once but several times as a child in the 1930s. The acquisition was made, as are most of her purchases, by mail. Sometimes she finds dolls at flea markets and antiques shows. And she and her husband took a cruise from Copenhagen this summer. In part, she said, so she could shop at the book stores and antiques shops in the towns where the boat stopped. She bought stacks of period paper dolls — especially in Stockholm.

"Suddenly your mailbox fills with letters on stationery embellished with teddy bears and roses," she reported. And she has made it her business to meet many of the women who are the top collectors and dealers. Some also write books (Jean Woodcock, of Tulsa, wrote and published the "Encyclopedia and Price Guide of Paper Dolls"), or produce newsletters listing what they have available to sell. Mrs. Wallach mentioned two women who issue such quarters: Barbara Whitton Jendrick, 495 Mendon Road, Pittsford, N.Y. 14534, and Janie Varsolans, Box 131, Galesburg, Kansas, 6740. "Once I met these women. They were all sitting around discussing how to make nylon stockings from real ones for their paper dolls."

Mrs. Wallach knows that many of her experiences sound corny to outsiders. But she couldn't care less. She said that her interest in history, which she has indulged since her undergraduate days at Radcliffe, is one of the main causes for her compulsive chase.

Paper dolls date to about the 1780s, she said, and they may have been printed first in Paris, then as now, the fashion capital of the world. The earliest example in Mrs. Wallach's collection is a copy of "Little Fanny," a small British book of dolls that dates to 1810 — and is one of the all-time classics that has been reprinted.

By the early 19th century, paper dolls were produced and played with throughout Europe. "Some of the finest and most detailed are the German ones," she said, flipping through the huge scrapbooks in which the dolls are stored in plastic sleeves. In no time, she said, paper dolls were all the rage on the Continent, in England and the United States. The earlier ones reflected the public's consuming interest in royalty — the kings and queens of England, German rulers and the French emperors and their spouses dating back to Charlemagne.

Between 1850 and 1950 virtually every major celebrity in public life, the theater, movies, sports and politics, as well as fictional characters (Topsy appears in the 1860s), was documented in a paper doll. These toys also showed the subtle and dramatic shifts of social attitudes from the late 19th century on, when paper dolls began to register the growing interest in the upper middle classes. Royalty was upstaged by other heroines and heroes of stage and screen — Lillian Russell, Charlie Chaplin, Cary Grant, Errol Flynn, Charlie McCarthy and Rita Hayworth — as well as by fictional characters celebrated in comic strips, such as Flash Gordon.

Another trend is the family of dolls, seen from the turn-of-the-century on. Sets of dolls invariably include large numbers of children, a pompous-looking father, sometimes an Aunt Dinah or grandparents, and always attractive maids. At first these mother's helpers are young and extremely pretty white women, but later they are replaced by black women, some of whom are obviously borrowed from the fictionalized "mammites" of yesteryear.

Most of the paper dolls in Mrs. Wallach's collection are less than 50 years old.

Ticks invade Tulsa home

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — The war is over. The casualty list includes two dogs and thousands of blood-sucking ticks.

The shrunken bodies of the ticks that invaded the Ray Hubbard home during the weekend litter the property and the smell of insecticide permeates the area.

The odor is likely to be prevalent throughout the community for the next several days as homeowners purchase chemicals to kill the parasites or keep them away.

It will be an individual effort. Public health officials Monday recommended some pesticides, but stopped short of gearing up for a community eradication program.

Dr. George Frothro, director of the Tulsa County Health Department, said a community control program could cause additional problems through seepage of insecticides into streams and rivers.

The "mass migration" of ticks was first reported Saturday. The Hubbards' two dogs were dead, their bodies matted with ticks. Officials could not say whether the ticks had caused the deaths.

Frothro said he does not know what could have caused such a "mass migration" of ticks, as that reported at the Hubbard residence. "I could conceive it could have something to do with the weather we've had — a long dry spell followed by rain," he said.

Frothro said he does not expect any additional cases of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever — which is carried by some ticks — this year. He said most of the ticks found in the area are not disease-bearers.

Silverman changes his tune

NEW YORK — While he was the ace in the hole of a successful program chief of CBS and later ABC, Fred Silverman earned the reputation as a champion of sexually liberated television comedies and he defended those shows vigorously.

But now that he is president of the National Broadcasting Co., Silverman has turned against such programs as "Soap" and "Three's Company" and made it plain to Hollywood producers and his programming staff that NBC is taking a higher road.

Silverman had not yet arrived at NBC when the programs were selected for the fall schedule last spring, but he acted quickly to make changes when he took office. Before the first week had passed, a new program about the social lives of airline stewardesses, "Cosmocoast," had been dropped in favor of a medical documentary series, "Lifeline."

The focus of a situation comedy, "Legs" about Las Vegas showgirls, was ordered changed to that of the relationship between a chorine and her child. The series is now to be called "Who's Watching the Children."

Later, Silverman acted to tone down the series "Operation: Runaway," since retitled "The Runaways." He then terminated arrangements with Universal Television for a sequel to "79 Park Avenue," a serial adaptation of the Harold Robbins novel about a New York prostitute that had been one of NBC's highest-rated small series last year.

Since then, he has ordered the program department to negotiate the cancellation of several other projects with sexual themes, among them serial adaptations of Taylor Caldwell's "Glow and the Lightning" and Irving Stone's "Men to Match My Mountain." The project to adapt Susan Brownmiller's book on rape, "Against Our Will," was also dropped.

Silverman's actions have amazed the Hollywood production industry and frustrated the producers who embarked on sex-oriented program proposals they thought might appeal to the new NBC president.

Some surmise that Silverman, who is highly respected on the West Coast for his astuteness with program trends, has determined that the cycle of permissiveness has run its course in the popularity ratings and is headed for a decline. Others speculate that he is trying to alter his own public image to one more suitable to a company president and industry statesman.

Silverman was in Los Angeles last week and not available to discuss what appears to be a change in values, but members of his staff have offered some insights.

According to one executive, Silverman, after spending four and a half months in exile fulfilling his contract with ABC, came to NBC with a clear idea of what he wanted the company to be, "and that was that it is not to be ABC."

"Ever since Fred has been here," M.S. Rukeyser Jr., executive vice president of public information, said, "the entire emphasis has been away from permissiveness in programming and from pushing ratings. Instead, the concentration is on getting more news and programs of quality on the air. Fred has made it clear in various meetings that he believes it's possible to be successful — to get audiences — with decent shows, and that's the direction in which we're heading."

"Don't look for that to happen all at once," he added; "but that's the aim."

Ralph Daniel, vice president of broadcast standards, the department concerned with the moral content of what goes on the air, said Silverman had stressed to him and other executives an avoidance of "anything gratuitous or exploitative, or anything that might embarrass him or the network."

Weight-control survey explained in new book

By Dr. RICHARD STUART
Wives would rather go it alone than have their husbands' help in losing weight. This is the conclusion of a recent survey I conducted of attitudes toward weight-control programs.

More than three-fourths of the women who reached their goal weights through participation in a weight-control group said their dieting was simplified by their husbands not being involved.

Moreover, the women ranked the desire to please their husbands sixth in a list of seven reasons for wishing to lose weight. The list was headed by desires to improve personal appearance and health and to prove to themselves that they could do it.

While only one-third of the wives who succeeded in losing weight said they would have wanted their husbands to attend weight control classes with them, slightly more than half said their husbands had been helpful during their dieting. One-third of the women said they had also received help from their children.

These findings suggest that, while constructive interest from family members may help some women to lose weight, others succeed despite a lack of this support. Indeed, many of the women in the survey indicated that their husbands actually interfered with their weight-loss efforts.

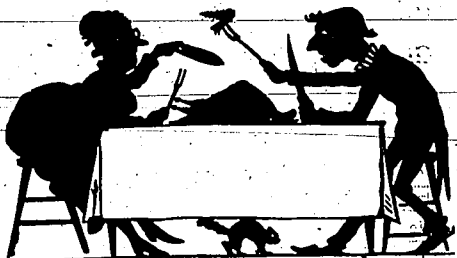

The survey, summarized in my book "Act Thin — Stay Thin" (Norton), offers some insight into how and why many husbands were not helpful.

Husbands are far more likely to comment on their wives' dieting failures than to praise their dieting successes. They are also unlikely to curb their own overeating to aid their wives' food-management efforts.

Few husbands deliberately try to sabotage their wives' efforts. Rather, they are often unaware of what they are doing and of the impact of their behavior upon their wives. Some husbands simply enjoy overeating with their mates and do not wish to lose that companionship.

Other husbands feel that excess weight prevents their wives from widening their social and work opportunities. They fear the stability of their marriages will be threatened if their spouses lose weight.

Still other husbands have entered into unspoken contracts with their wives. The husband is permitted his personal excess, such as heavy social drinking, in exchange for granting his wife permission to overeat.

Some husbands help their wives dieting

When the wife curbs her excessive eating, the husband often fears he will be expected to forego his self-indulgent pleasure.

Finally, some husbands seem to enter into undercover battles to subvert their wives' self-improvement efforts. The husbands are attempting to insure that they will be expected to forego his self-improvement.

Whatever the husbands' motivations — whether they are fully supportive of their wives or struggling to wreck their spouses' efforts — two tactics can help wives attempting to win the weight-loss battle:

First, wives should redirect their husbands' efforts along these three lines:

1. Husbands should be encouraged to set a good example by eating the proper amounts of carefully chosen foods.
2. Husbands should offer their wives gentle reminders of their new eating program. Helping their wives remember to plan for constructive eating can greatly aid long-range success.
3. Husbands should be ever ready to compliment their wives' successful efforts and to ignore their eating lapses.

This third step is contrary to most people's normal interaction style. It can be taken only with considerable effort. Sadly, we are all far more likely to take positive actions if granted, letting them pass without comment, while coming down hard on even the smallest mistake.

But remember that any time we pay attention to another's behavior — even to criticize it — we strengthen that behavior. That makes it more likely to recur. Thus, even negative attention can bring on problem behavior and retard progress toward behavioral objectives.

When wives understand these principles, they can often help their husbands interact with them in a new way. As an added advantage, the new style of interaction can also carry over into relations with their children.

When husbands become constructively involved in their wives' weight-loss efforts, they can often become their spouses' best allies. Changing a long-standing pattern of interaction is not easy, as we all know.

Therefore, it is important to build outside social support for attempts to change both problem eating and stressful marital interaction concerning management of food. That's the second tactic for wives seeking to lose weight.

Choosing a friend who will lend a word of encouragement and a sympathetic ear or joining a weight-management group are two ways to get this constructive support. Both friend and group provide opportunities to practice redressing husbands' actions. These sympathetic outsiders can also offer a lift when progress seems particularly difficult.

during the play. Five diamonds is an excellent contract. It basically depends on having one or both club honors in the East hand, a 76 percent likelihood. Even with both honors in the West hand, declarer will have some chances unless the defense is perfect.

The opening spade lead was ruffed in dummy and South drew trumps in two rounds. He led a heart to the queen which East won with the ace.

Many hands have a make-or-break moment. This was it for East. The correct play defeats the contract; an incorrect play — and North-South win the rubber.

The routine lead for East is a heart. If he makes the routine lead his side is defeated. Fortunately, he led a low club and declarer was out of business. Declarer finessed the club, losing to West's queen. West exited with a heart and had only to sit back and wait for his king of clubs to deliver the setting trick.

If East had led a heart instead of a club, South would have made the contract. He would have cashed all of his major suit winners and entered dummy with a trump. A low club to his jack, losing to West's queen, would assure the victory. In this position West would have the dubious pleasure of either leading away from his king of clubs or giving declarer a ruff and discard.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get the most important tasks done early. Wait for a better day to have that serious conversation with mate, loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to help a friend in need. Don't be so forceful with others in gaining a goal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take time to take care of civic, business or personal affairs. Don't annoy a community bigwig. A good evening for dancing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study any new interest well and know exactly what you are doing. You can have a better understanding with others, also.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You can get ahead faster if you are precise in all that work you have to do and handle responsibilities well. Be patient with mate, loved one who may be out of sorts.

What's what?

Two obscure mammals

Hardly anyone alive can identify a species of mammal with a name that begins with "N." Yet I'm told there are two such, one archaic and the other scientifically obscure. A "neot" once was a term for a head of cattle. Remember Neats Foot Oil? And a noctule remains a sort of night-flying bat. There just aren't any other "N" animals, evidently.

In the London actors' club, the City of Lushington, generations of drinkers really have put away the sauce. It was this particular distinction of Lushington that gave us our slang word "lush."

Hannibal, Mo., has the monument to Mark Twain, true enough, but Florida, Mo., was where he was born, remember.

Where you're least likely to go bankrupt, statistically, is South Carolina. Most likely, as is widely known, Nevada. But the bankruptcy news isn't bad. It's good. Fewer people have pulled that chain in each of the last three years.

CURRENCY

Q. "The 'colón' is the basic unit of currency in both El Salvador and Costa Rica. My question, Louie: Down there can you exchange one colón for two semicolons?"
A. All right, knock it off.

Q. "Where's Mt. Chomolungma?"
A. That's what the Tibetans call Mt. Everest.

Q. "Why is the little finger referred to as the pinky?"
A. Comes from the Dutch "pinkje" meaning exactly that, little finger.

THIEVES

That sort of thief who makes off with the most money, per offense on the average is the computer criminal. Known losses to date wherein computer programs have been changed to siphon off funds amount to $450,000 per case.

Four northern states—Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York—each has more than a million residents over age 65. Only three southern states—California, Texas and Florida can claim the same. So not everybody's retiring to the sun belt, please note.

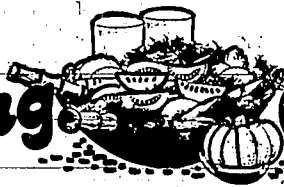

Did you not suffer from bromidrosiphobia, you'd probably never bother to buy deodorants. Bromidrosiphobia is the fear of body odor.
