Strikes leave Memphis defenseless

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Heavily-armed National Guard troops replaced striking police and firemen in this near-defenseless city Monday, helping to enforce a curfew that turned Memphis into a ghost town after dark.

With the guard troops standing by, non-union officers arrested 14 more strikers outside four precinct buildings Monday night, bringing to about 75 the number of pickets arrested for curfew violations.

Mayor Wyatt Chandler warned Monday that anyone found on the streets after 9 p.m. would be arrested, and it appeared all but the pickets took him at his word. The streets of this river city, normally active even on a Monday night, were eerily deserted.

Small patrols of guardsmen moved along the streets, supplementing the scanty police patrols.

"The fire is quiet out there tonight," said Inspector Jewell Ray of the East Precinct. "It's too bad the guard's not here all the time."

Only one fire of any significance was reported, and it was quickly extinguished with equipment manned by fire department supervisors.

The city's 1,400 union firemen Monday joined the 1,100 policemen detouring court orders and striking in wage disputes. One fireman said, "If Memphis goes up in smoke, it won't be our fault."

The firemen struck last month, and more than 200 fires ravaged the city before they returned to work under court order.

National Guardsmen, some in armored personnel carriers equipped with 50-caliber machine guns, guarded police headquarters, precinct stations. Some 50 pieces of firefighting equipment were moved to the National Guard Armory as a precaution against vandalism.

Chandler said two shifts were fired at Central Police headquarters and one at the north precinct during the night, and bomb threats were made to police headquarters and city hall.

An 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew was imposed when the police strike began Thursday, but apparently had little effect on the thousands of Elvis Presley fans flooding the city for the first anniversary of his death last Aug. 16.

But Chandler said Monday "anybody out on the streets after 8 tonight will be arrested."

Fresh units of the National Guard were ordered into the city to relieve troops on duty since shortly after the police strike began.

Officials said the troops would be used, if necessary, to assist about 250 non-union policemen and 150 supervisory firefighters remaining on the job.

City firemen, members of the International Firefighters

Union, had been working under court order since July 4.

Striking policemen, members of the Memphis Police Association, were handed a back-to-work court order Friday, and Saturday a judge, Chancellor George Lewis, told them to return to their jobs or turn in their badges.

Members of both unions have accused Chandler of taking a "paternalistic attitude" during futile attempts to negotiate a new contract, and men walking the picket lines

Monday vowed to remain off the job until their demands are met.

"It is going to be pretty bad," said Khuron Huddleston, president of the firefighters' union. "I've asked my family to leave town."

Chandler told a mid-afternoon news conference that some union police officers returned to work Monday but left after receiving "phone calls whereby their lives and the lives of their families had been threatened."

House ready to extend ERA approval deadline

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A key congressional supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment "preliminarily" said Monday the House will approve an extension of the deadline for ratification by the required 38 states.

The House is scheduled to act this week on a compromise proposal, worked out by its Judiciary Committee, which would give uncommitted states an additional 18 months for their legislatures to rule on the issue.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., floor manager for the administration-backed extension proposal, said when asked about the probable outcome,

"We think we have a majority of the full House."

Edwards expressed confidence the House would turn aside an effort by Republican-led opponents to require a two-thirds vote on the extension measure — the same margin required for passage of a constitutional amendment.

"We wouldn't be bringing this up if we thought the parliamentarian would rule that it requires a two-thirds vote," Edwards said.

And he said, "In the Senate, we think we have 50 votes right now."

The Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights has held hearings on a seven-year extension of the deadline. But the Senate leadership has said the issue will not be brought to the floor until the House has acted.

Thus, given the press of other legislative business, the final outcome remains very much in doubt.

Thirty-five states have ratified the amendment since Congress overwhelmingly approved it in 1972. But its backers see virtually no chance the additional three can be won over by the current deadline next March 22 — hence the push for extension.

Edwards said the Democratic leadership believes it has "a good majority — but a closer one," to defeat an amendment by Rep. Tom Rallsback, R-Ill., which would allow states which already have ratified to rescind that action.

Four of the legislatures that ratified the amendment — in Idaho, Kentucky, Nebraska and Tennessee — already have voted to reverse the decision, and part of fight is over the constitutionality of such action.

Carter won't talk much while visiting in West

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Neither the governor of Idaho or Wyoming has yet been asked to meet with President Carter during his upcoming vacation in the two western states.

Idaho's Gov. John Evans and Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler are both Democrats and both running for reelection this year.

Gov. Evans has relayed a message to the President that he "is interested in some contact with the President" but has not yet heard a response.

Herschler, who has been critical of Carter on a broad range of policy questions including water projects, a proposed coal slurry pipeline and agricultural issues, also has said he wouldn't mind talking to the President.

President Carter is scheduled to arrive in Idaho Aug. 21 and will visit Wyoming a few days later.

The western visit — Carter's first since he came to Idaho as the governor of Georgia in mid-1974 to attend a Pocatello fund-raising dinner for then-Gov. Cecil D. Andrus — is strictly a vacation.

So far, that means no discussions with the governors of Wyoming and Idaho and no news conferences.

According to Charles Goodwin, a staff assistant in the office of media liaison in the White House, Carter's schedule calls for him to arrive in Boise on Aug. 21 and head immediately to Boise's Rodeaway Inn, where he will spend the night.

The next morning the President will helicopter to a point near Dagger Falls on the Middle Fork of the Salmon River northwest of Stanley, where he will depart on a three to four day journey down the legendary "River of No Return."

After the trip Carter will fly to Jackson Hole, Wyo., for several days.

The president will be accompanied by his wife Rosalyn, his 10-year-old daughter Amy, Secretary of the Interior Andrus and his wife Carol.

The area through which Carter will be rafting has been the subject of heated debates in Idaho in recent months. Forest Service RARE II studies (Roadless Area Review and Evaluation) which will affect much of the land on either side of the Salmon River have been sharply contested and discussed. Critics have sharply disagreed over how much wilderness should be established in Idaho.

In addition to RARE II debates, Carter decisions on other Western issues have affected Idaho's waters and lands.

But regardless of the controversy his policies have stirred in Idaho, Carter's trip will remain a vacation.

"At the present time no press conference is scheduled or anticipated," Goodwin said.

Herschler said he received no invitation to meet with the president and thus far has made no indication whether he will try to arrange a get-together, according to his press secretary Richard Isonaker said.

Evans press secretary Steve Leroy said Monday he didn't think President Carter had yet determined who would be a part of the official greeting party at the Boise airport.

Same trucks smuggle men across border

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's top immigration official, citing repeated use of the same vehicles to smuggle illegal aliens into the United States, urged Congress Monday to pass a law permitting his agency to impound those vehicles.

In one case, a pickup truck engaged in smuggling operations was stopped 12 times by officers of the Immigration and Naturalization Service between April 1977 and March 1978 along the Mexican border, INS Commissioner Leonel Castillo said.

"Without new legislation, this inviting door phenomenon will continue," Castillo told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee, considering a measure to provide for the seizure and forfeiture of any vessel, vehicle or aircraft being used to carry aliens into the country illegally.

However, Castillo said he doubts the bill's constitutionality because it would not require a warrant worked out by its Judiciary Committee, which would give uncommitted states an additional 18 months for their legislatures to rule on the issue.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., floor manager for the administration-backed extension proposal, said when asked about the probable outcome,

"We think we have a majority of the full House."

Edwards expressed confidence the House would turn aside an effort by Republican-led opponents to require a two-thirds vote on the extension measure — the same margin required for passage of a constitutional amendment.

"We wouldn't be bringing this up if we thought the parliamentarian would rule that it requires a two-thirds vote," Edwards said.

And he said, "In the Senate, we think we have 50 votes right now."

The Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights has held hearings on a seven-year extension of the deadline. But the Senate leadership has said the issue will not be brought to the floor until the House has acted.

Thus, given the press of other legislative business, the final outcome remains very much in doubt.

Thirty-five states have ratified the amendment since Congress overwhelmingly approved it in 1972. But its backers see virtually no chance the additional three can be won over by the current deadline next March 22 — hence the push for extension.

Edwards said the Democratic leadership believes it has "a good majority — but a closer one," to defeat an amendment by Rep. Tom Rallsback, R-Ill., which would allow states which already have ratified to rescind that action.

Four of the legislatures that ratified the amendment — in Idaho, Kentucky, Nebraska and Tennessee — already have voted to reverse the decision, and part of fight is over the constitutionality of such action.

Abernathy claims conspiracy killed King

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Martin Luther King Jr.'s closest associate swore Monday that he believes King was killed 10 years ago by political conspirators, not by a single sniper acting alone.

But the Rev. Ralph Dabney Abernathy offered no new evidence to back up his assertion.

Abernathy, who held King's head as he died and succeeded him as leader of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, testified before a House investigation panel he believed King had been forewarned in a telephone call the night before he was shot.

He cited King's "troubled, nervous, even jittery" — at points frightened" behavior in the weeks preceding the slaying and a sermon King delivered the night before he was shot on a balcony of the Lorraine Motel in Memphis. The sermon seemed to anticipate his death.

"I think he had received some word from some source that he was going to be assassinated," Abernathy testified.

Question: "You have no knowledge?"

Abernathy: "I have no knowledge." Sitting alone at a felt-covered witness table, fidgeting with a purple ballpoint pen, the heavyset preacher was the opening witness at public hearings by the House Select Committee on Assassinations which are to stretch through December.

At the end, his testimony took on the quality of a prayer. He appealed to the committee to "raise the questions we cannot raise, ask the questions we cannot ask."

"Whomsoever slay the dreamer and sought to destroy the dream should be known," he said.

For two years, the panel privately has investigated the slayings of King and President John F. Kennedy. King's death never has been examined by a public body like the Warren Commission.

James Earl Ray, who pleaded guilty to killing King rather than risk a death sentence, will be brought from prison to testify Wednesday under intense security.

Serving a 99-year sentence and seized last year after a sensational escape from Brushy Mountain State Prison in Tennessee, Ray recently claimed he is innocent and that he has knowledge pointing to the killer.

The House members, in gentle questioning, did not ask Abernathy to name whom he thought were the assassination conspirators.

But Abernathy later told reporters he thought King's killers were helped by "people in high places." Asked if he would include the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, he said, "I wouldn't eliminate Mr. Hoover."

He said it was clear Ray got help "from the Memphis police, from law enforcement officers of Shelby County and from the FBI" in making his escape from Memphis on the evening of April 4, 1968.

From the witness stand, he did not go that far.

Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., a former federal judge, asked if he felt King was killed for political reasons or if the slaying were "the act of an unbalanced individual."

Abernathy replied slowly. "I believe very firmly the assassination was 'political assassination,'" he said. "I believe it was a conspiracy. I believe it was an assassination to kill the dream, the American dream of blacks and whites, rich and poor, brown and yellow."

Security was heavy. Only a few public spectators were admitted to the amphitheater-shaped hearing room. They had to pass through metal detectors to get in.

Ray's lawyer, Mark Lane, raised a fuss in the corridor before he was admitted.

Lane contends Ray was a dupe of the FBI. He says the FBI bears the true responsibility for King's assassination.

The committee will hold hearings this month and next, breaking off in October and then resuming work through November and December.

Tanks pulled off streets

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The shah's government Monday began removing tanks and heavy armor from the streets of Isfahan where the year's worst riot killed at least 11 people and prompted a martial law clampdown for the first time in 15 years.

Gen. Reza Najfi, the diminutive officer appointed martial law administrator for Isfahan Friday, ordered the tanks back to barracks apparently in the belief they were doing more to add to tension than to calm the city's 1.2 million residents.

No resignation by mayor Kucinich

CLEVELAND (UPI) — White Democratic party leadership called for his resignation, Mayor Dennis Kucinich indicated Monday he will make cabinet-level changes in the aftermath of his scant recall victory.

"At the moment I haven't made any plans for any particular member of the administration but will be assessing that in the next few days," said the 37-year-old mayor, calm and fresh after his 275-vote win.

"You could expect to see some changes in the administration at the cabinet level."

Backers of the recall movement had accused mayoral aide Bob Weissman of running city government in confrontation style and called for his firing. Questioned about Weissman's future, Kucinich said, "There is a possibility of change at a number of administrative positions. No one's immune."

But while he offered that olive branch, Cuyahoga County Democratic Party chairman Timothy Hagan and City Council Majority Leader Basil Russo asked Kucinich to resign, saying the closeness of the election proves he has lost the ability to govern.

Cuyahoga County election officials Monday began the tedious task of certifying the extremely close result from citywide voting and the young mayor's opponents prepared for a recount of the 120,000 paper ballots. The recount is expected to start Wednesday or Thursday.

The county board of elections listed the unofficial tally as 60,308 to 60,033. Kucinich had faced strong opposition from most of Cleveland's power elite — the City Council, the labor unions, both daily newspapers, and even his own Democratic party.

The drive to recall Kucinich began five months ago when he fired Police Chief Richard Hongisto. Hongisto had charged he was being pressured by Kucinich aides to commit "unethical acts."

Senate rejects Goldwater's tax credit plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Monday rejected a proposal by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., to give a federal income tax credit of up to $150 to every American homeowner whose residential property taxes support local public schools. Goldwater offered his proposal as an amendment to a bill carrying tax credits to help families pay tuition for their children in college and elementary and secondary schools.

Two space shuttles not needed by U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government auditors recommended Monday that Congress reject President Carter's request for a space shuttle launch site in California, unless there are compelling national security reasons for it.

In a report to Congress, the Government Accounting Office concluded that concentrating shuttle operations at the single base in Florida could save taxpayers anywhere from $2.3 billion to $3.5 billion through 1992.

"Unless there are compelling national security reasons for the West Coast site, the Congress should not fund VAFB (Vandenberg) modifications to accommodate the shuttle," the GAO report concluded.

Goldwater said 48 million Americans would have been eligible. He said 66 percent of American households own their dwellings and "I think it is high time that we provide federal tax relief to this growing class of citizens who are up against the mounting pressure of higher residential assessments."

The proposal would have cost $1 billion to $1.5 billion a year. Homeowners would have received the credit up to $150, or up to the amount their property taxes went to public schools — regardless of whether they had children. In some cases, other local taxes used for schools would have been qualified for the credit.

Goldwater proposed the same thing in 1961 and got 10 votes. The Senate recessed shortly before 8 p.m. Monday after its second day of debate on the tax credit bill, over which Democrats are split. Work on the tuition tax credit legislation was scheduled to continue Tuesday morning.

Texaco hits natural gas off New Jersey shores

NEW YORK (UPI) — Texaco Inc. announced Monday that a drilling platform 100 miles off New Jersey had made a "significant" discovery of natural gas, the first petroleum find off America's northeast coast.

But Texaco warned a lot of work would be needed to determine whether the find in the Baltimore Canyon area meant gas could be extracted in large enough quantities to make the project commercially feasible.

"We feel a lot better about the prospects today than we felt a few days ago," Texaco executive L. Weldon Calahan told a news conference.

The Texaco announcement said the gas, almost pure methane, flowed at an estimated daily rate of 7.5 million cubic feet from a 30-foot interval at depths around 14,900 feet.

At the moment the gas is being burned off in a 60-foot flare from the semi-submersible drilling rig Ocean Victory floating in 432 feet of water.

Richard B. Palmer, senior vice president and director of worldwide exploration at Texaco, said the current well would now be tested at several levels to determine the possible depth of the gas reservoir.

"Then we will drill two or three more wells in the area to determine the extent of the find," he said. "Since each well takes about four months, this will mean eight to 12 months before we can decide whether this is a commercial find."

Palmer said that for the find to be commercially viable, Texaco has to discover sufficient reserves to cover the cost of setting up a production platform.

A single platform handling 24 separate wells would cost around $250 million, and that would not include the cost of a pipeline to get the gas ashore.

"This find is significant because it is the first indication of natural gas flowing from a reservoir off the northeast coast of the United States," Palmer said.

Palmer did not rule out the possibility that oil might still be found but said Texaco had always expected gas. He said the discovery should give hope to other oil companies drilling in the Baltimore Canyon area despite the fact two other wells have been dry.

"The outlook has become moderately encouraging," Calahan said.

The successful well was drilled on block 536, a 5,093-acre tract 30 miles east of the area where the two dry wells were drilled.

Texaco has a 31.5-percent interest in the block and is operator of the drilling rig. Other partners are Getty Oil, 20 percent, Sun Oil, 16 percent, Allied Chemical 12.5 percent, Transco Exploration Co. and Freeport Oil each 10 percent.

On Wall Street, the news of the gas discovery sent Texaco's stock significantly higher in heavy trading. Texaco finished the day up $1 to $26.50 on the New York Stock Exchange. Other oil companies' stock also rose.

Reports that Texaco encountered significant amounts of gas in this well have persisted for some weeks but the company had announced only the discovery of "hydrocarbon indications."

It is the first finding of gas in the Baltimore Canyon after several dry holes drilled in the general area by other oil companies. It is the first real indication of petroleum in commercial quantities in the North Atlantic after years of aerial and seismic exploration. The well is located in 432 feet of water.

Dr. John Lichtblau of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation Inc., said the Texaco announcement is "quite significant and opens a new frontier" for the petroleum industry.

Lichtblau pointed out that the announcement confirms the long-expressed opinion of most geologists that gas was more likely to be found in the North Atlantic than oil.

Americans like tax cut idea

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Harris poll showed Monday that Americans are solidly behind efforts to cut the maximum federal capital-gains tax from 49 to 35 percent, a proposal President Carter has opposed and says he may veto.

A nationwide survey of 1,238 adults last July 25-27 found a 66-28 percent majority in favor of the move. By 70-19 percent, the sample agreed the cut was needed "to provide incentives for people to want to invest their money."

By contrast, only a 50-53 percent plurality agreed with Carter's claim that "the small investor would not get more than two bits from a capital-gains tax cut."

Tomorrow

Among the stories in tomorrow's Times-News:

Twin Falls county officials are still searching for a way to please everybody on matters of land use planning. The county's comprehensive plan is stalled once again following the failure of the most recent compromise to gain acceptance from either side. County commissioners want to wait until after the election to try again. One idea is to use a "point system" to determine which farmland can be broken up for housing.

A diaper derby, a firemen's beer barrel water contest, kiddie races, arm wrestling, a log sawing contest and more are in store for those who attend this year's Wendell Fun Day — the community's biggest annual affair. The theme of the parade is "Unlily Is Serving Our Neighbors," and the people of Wendell will prove it by getting up a beef barbecue and other food for the main event of the town's festivities. Read it in tomorrow's Times-News.

Wilderness preservation knocked by oil executive

BOISE (UPI) — The chairman of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana accused the government Monday of hanging "no trespassing" signs on vast tracts of federal land potentially rich in petroleum at a time the nation should be exploring and developing new supplies.

John E. Swearingin told the National Association of County Agricultural Agents meeting in Boise the federal policies to lock up 90 million acres of land as wilderness areas and force them to mineral exploration and development are "totally irrational."

Swearingin said the language of the Wilderness Act, which provides the Forest Service with its operating directive, implies that "man is an intruder on nature — in fact, perhaps even an intruder on the planet itself."

"But much of the land under consideration is neither pristine nor primeval, nor does it offer much in the way of natural beauty," he said. "And in fact, in many cases, such lands actually stand to be improved by the activities of man."

The oil executive told the county agents the government was considering withdrawing millions of acres of prospective oil and gas lands in the Overthrust Belt, which runs through Utah, Wyoming, Montana and southeastern Idaho.

Several important discoveries have made this area a petroleum province of great potential, he said, adding "none of us, be we oil men, miners, ranchers or farmers, want to plunder or despoil the planet."

"All we ask is a sensible balance between preservation and use, a balance which acknowledges that man's activities are not necessarily sinful and predatory, but are in fact useful and necessary."

Swearingin said this lack of balance is especially evident in the activities of new regulatory bodies in Washington, most of them formed in the 1970s.

As an example, he cited the EPA's refusal to allow farmers in four Midwest states to use more powerful pesticides to stop an infestation of grasshoppers. As a result, he added, "In four of our most important agriculture states, farmers are suffering and food supplies will be reduced."

Cooler, cloudy weather ahead

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and Northside areas: Sunny today, increasing clouds tonight with a chance of scattered showers Wednesday. Highs both days in mid-70s and overnight lows in 40s.

Camas-Prater, Halley and upper Wood River Valley: Sunny today, increasing clouds tonight with a chance of scattered showers late tonight and Wednesday. Highs both days 70 to 75 and lows 35 to 45.

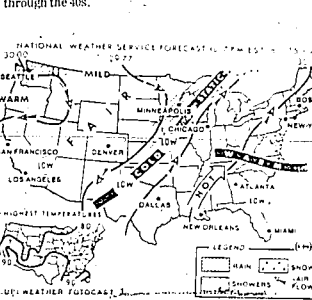

Synopsis: Sunny skies were common around southwestern Idaho Monday afternoon, with cloudy skies and a few mountain showers in northern and eastern parts of the state. Temperatures again were on the cool side. Afternoon highs ranged in 60s to lower 70s, with 50s common in the mountains.

These cool temperatures will remain over the area for the next few days as a cool northwesterly flow of air will continue over Idaho. Overnight lows will be mainly in the 40s, with a few 30s temperatures in higher areas.

There is a weak Pacific Ocean storm expected to move over southern Idaho by tonight, which will spread clouds and light showers late tonight and Wednesday.

The extended outlook for Thursday through Saturday is forecast as continued unseasonable cool weather, with scattered showers Thursday. Highs will be in mid-60s through the 70s and lows in the mid-30s through the 40s.

Feeble cardinals confer on pope

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Ninety-four cardinals held a secret meeting Monday to discuss who should be the next pope but others who were invited to attend were to feeble to do so.

Vatican officials said at least five of the 115 cardinals entitled to vote in the Aug. 25 conclave may be unable to attend.

The cardinals — including those over 80 who will be barred from voting in the decisive conclave — are meeting daily for discussions on candidates. In line with their vow of secrecy, the 94 cardinals who met for two hours Monday had no comment on their talks.

The health and personal circumstances of the cardinals have become a subject of interest here since the political makeup of the conclave will have a bearing on the result.

But Vatican-watchers said the possible absence of the five cardinals being mentioned probably would not affect the conclave because they are of different views and backgrounds and could offset each other.

American Cardinal John Joseph Wright and Pole Boleslaw Filipiak notified their colleagues in writing Monday that they will be unable to attend.

Filipiak, 76, gave poor health as the reason. Wright, 69, prefect of the Sacred Congregation for the Clergy, wrote from Boston that he had successfully undergone one cataract operation but had another one scheduled.

India's Cardinal Valerian Gracias, 77, was reported seriously ill in Bombay, Vatican officials said.

Italian Cardinal Mario Nasalli Rocca di Corneliano, 75, a former papal master of ceremonies, was reported recovering from what was believed to be food poisoning, but may not be well enough by the time the conclave starts.

Another Italian cardinal, Pietro Palazzini, 66, was at the bedside of a seriously ill brother and his presence was also uncertain.

Baby boys survive 36 hours in rubble

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Rescue workers Monday retrieved two infant brothers from the wreckage of a demolished apartment complex where they had lain buried for 36 hours.

Palestinian rescue teams, working around the clock since Sunday, pulled two brothers aged three and four from the wreckage — badly hurt but alive.

"It's a miracle. That's all there is to it," an official of the radical Palestine Liberation Front said.

"They were badly dazed as you can imagine but otherwise fine," a rescuer said.

An explosion and fire apparently triggered by a bomb on Sunday morning leveled the nine-story building, which housed two rival Palestinian guerrilla factions as well as many Palestinian civilians.

Palestinian officials repeatedly denied the blast was part of a bitter, worldwide vendetta between Palestinian moderates and radicals aligned with Iraq. But Monday they privately acknowledged the possibility for the first time.

In addition to 87 confirmed deaths, Palestinian officials said at least 98 others were being treated for injuries in five Beirut hospitals. The death toll was expected to surpass 100.

In Washington, the State Department today expressed "deep regret over the loss of innocent lives among a population which has already suffered greatly."

Spokesman Hodding Carter III said at this point, "It is not clear to us who is responsible" for bombing the apartment building.

The building had 25 civilian apartments and included offices of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization Fatah group and the rival Palestine Liberation Front.

Two Croatian bombs fail to explode in N.Y.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Croatian terrorists Monday planted dynamite bombs on a United Nations window ledge and in a Grand Central Station locker to demand the release of a Croatian accused of the trying to kill the Yugoslavian ambassador to West Germany, police said. Neither device exploded.

Two notes found with the bombs claimed they were planted by the Croatian Freedom Fighters, who seek the separation of Croatia from Yugoslavia.

Chief of Detectives James Sullivan called the group "very well-schooled bomb makers." A UN spokesman said the bomb found on a window ledge of the Dag Hammarskjold Library was "enough to blow up the library."

The notes, written in Croatian, denounced "the terroristic ways of Yugoslavia dictatorship and its genocide of Croats," according to police who admitted they had made only a rough translation.

"Our decision is Kamikazi (Japanese for suicide)," the note said.

The notes demanded the release of Steve Bilandic, a German citizen of Croatian birth who was arrested in Dusseldorf, Germany for attempting to kill the Yugoslavian ambassador to that country.

The first of the two bombs was discovered about 3:10 a.m. by a routine security patrol on a UN window ledge on First Avenue. Bomb Squad members, summoned by the security guards, removed the bomb 35 minutes later.

Sullivan said the bomb, which consisted of five sticks of dynamite, a blasting cap, battery and wristwatch timer, did not go off "for some unexplained reason."

Funzi Tieri labeled top mobster in U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank "Funzi" Tieri, low-key 74-year-old head of the Genovese crime family, has emerged as the most powerful Mafia chieftain in the nation, a highly placed police source said Monday.

Since the death of the Carlo Gambino in October 1976, organized crime investigators have been attempting to pinpoint the top boss of the nation's 24 crime families, the five most powerful of which are in New York.

The most powerful mob chief used to be called the "boss of all bosses" but because of the way organized crime operations overlap, the source said, there had been no such leader in "the last couple of decades."

"Organized crime is too widespread, too complex to have a boss of all bosses," he said.

But of all the family heads, one is always the most powerful. And Tieri, the source said, "has emerged as the leading crime figure in the United States today."

Tieri's operation, he said, is primarily involved in gambling and loan sharking; but also includes labor racketeering, narcotics, prostitution — "the whole spectrum."

With almost 1,000 members, 600 or 700 of whom are so-called "made men" or fully initiated members, the Genovese family's "tentacles go down to Florida, Las Vegas, California — they reach most parts of the United States," the source said.

Kennedy leads Carter in time poll

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy is no longer hampered by public doubts raised by the Chappaquiddick incident and is favored by Democrats over Jimmy Carter for the 1980 presidential nomination, according to a poll published Monday in Time magazine.

Time said a telephone sampling of 1,004 registered voters showed Kennedy leading Carter among Democrats by 58 to 30 percent.

The poll also showed Kennedy leads when compared to Carter and California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. The Massachusetts senator had the support of 49 percent of the sample to 21 percent for Carter and 19 percent for Brown.

Kennedy would beat former President Gerald Ford 47 to 41 percent in an election today, the poll showed, but the Republican would defeat Carter 44-35 percent.

The poll also showed a lack of public concern over the July 1969 accident on Chappaquiddick Island, Mass., that killed Kennedy's aide, Mary Jo Kopechne.

Seventy-nine percent of those interviewed thought it was time to put aside the incident and judge Kennedy on his performance in the nine years since. Among Democrats, 86 percent supported this statement, compared to 68 percent of Republicans and 81 percent of independents polled.

Three-quarters off all those surveyed said Chappaquiddick would not be enough to sway their vote if they thought Kennedy the best man.

The poll was conducted Aug. 2 and 3 by the opinion-research firm of Yankelevich, Skelly and White Inc.

Israel to build big atomic plant

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Energy Minister Yitzhak Moda'i said Monday Israel is going ahead with preparations to build an atomic plant despite the lack of promised U.S. funding.

"At this point we are still hopeful that a way will be found and that eventually we'll get a plant and finance it from the United States," he said.

Nuclear fusion A recent breakthrough at Princeton University may lead to an unlimited energy supply for U.S.

ANALYSIS BY JOHN WILFORD
N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — A major technological breakthrough at Princeton University last week that confirmed the scientific feasibility of controlled nuclear fusion—the taming of the hydrogen bomb—has strengthened hopes that this could be a source of virtually inexhaustible energy sometime after the year 2000.

But the Princeton scientists and Department of Energy officials cautioned that they were “still a long way” from the commercial production of electricity with fusion reactors. A test reactor, under construction at Princeton, is scheduled for completion in late 1981. Working reactors might be another 10 to 15 years away.

In the Princeton experiments, a beam of hydrogen atoms was shot through the core of a reactor to produce sun-like temperatures for a moment inside a magnetic field. The magnetic field served to contain the extremely hot plasmas of the reaction and keep them from touching metal walls that they would otherwise melt.

There were reports Saturday that the Princeton scientists had achieved temperatures of 60 million degrees centigrade for one-tenth of a second, which would be well above the temperature needed to produce self-sustaining fusion processes.

Dr. Melvin B. Gottlieb, director of the Plasma Physics Laboratory at Princeton, declined to confirm the reports, saying that scientists were “still verifying” the most recent test results. He said that a full report should be ready later this month.

However, Stephen Dean, director of the Department of Energy’s magnetic confinement systems division, called the results “a very big scientific breakthrough.” He added:

“For the first time in history, the actual conditions of fusion have been produced in a fusion reactor in scale model. Experiments at Princeton University which began three weeks ago and are now in progress are the most significant development in the 27 years of the fusion program. It has laid to rest the question of whether fusion is feasible from a scientific point of view.”

Dean said that “there is now a scientific basis for embarking on engineering development” of fusion reactors. Scientists in the field have said that such an effort would involve expenditures of more than $1-billion a year within a few years. The Department of Energy is supporting the Princeton experiments as well as work at other universities and its own laboratories.

But the advantages of fusion power, combined with the threatened shortages of conventional energy sources, could make the research costs worth the investment.

Nuclear reactors now in use operate on the principle of fission, or the splitting of atoms. They depend on uranium, which is in short supply. And they produce large amounts of radioactive wastes, the disposal of which is an unresolved problem.

Fusion, on the other hand, is considered “clean.” Its various processes either produce no radioactive material at all or they involve tritium, which most specialists believe, can be recycled through the system without significant hazard. Since fusion would use as a fuel forms of hydrogen derived from sea water, it would provide virtually unlimited energy.

The problem with fusion, which makes its control one of the most challenging technological endeavors of modern times, is to get the atomic nuclei close enough together for long enough for them to fuse. The nuclei have strong electric charges by which they naturally repel each other. Scientists have known for some time that fusion should be possible in a very hot gas, or plasma, in which the atomic nuclei have been stripped of their electrons.

The plasma must be dense enough, held together long enough and at a sufficiently high temperature, so that thermal motions will overcome this electric repulsion. The so-called ignition temperature for fuels using hydrogen atoms is approximately 60 million degrees centigrade, which is the temperature the Princeton scientists are believed to have achieved. A reactor’s operating temperature is expected to be around 100 million degrees, well in excess of temperatures in the sun’s interior.

Tuition tax credits a bad idea

The cost of sending a high school senior to college has risen about 100 percent in the last decade.

Tuition at an average private university now costs $2,500 a year compared to less than $1,300 a year in 1967.

At state colleges and universities, tuition costs now average $549 a year compared to only $283 in 1967.

In the next 10 years, the cost of sending a kid to college is expected to double again.

For this reason, the U.S. Senate this week will debate a bill giving middle class American families an income tax break on the money they spend sending educating their children.

The tuition tax credit bill would allow middle class families to subtract up to $250 a year from their income tax bill in 1979 and $500 off their taxes in 1980 and beyond.

While well-intentioned, the bill shouldn't become law.

It shouldn't become law because, quite simply, the U.S. government can't afford to be so generous.

If passed, the tax credit bill will add $7 billion to the federal debt by 1983.

Besides these additional billions of federal deficit, the bill will make everybody's taxes go up — including the taxes of those who don't want to have kids in college.

One out of three American families never send a child to college. Yet these families, if the tax credit bill passes, will get not a penny of tax relief and will end up paying higher taxes to finance the tax credit program.

The tuition tax credit bill goes counter to the mood of the nation right now. People are crying for lower taxes, for fewer frills in government.

Families who want to send their children to college have managed for years to do so without tax credits and they can manage in the future either by borrowing money, by having their children work while in college, or urging their kids to work for scholarships.

President Carter, an opponent of the tax credit bill, has urged the Congress to increase the funding for student loan programs. This approach certainly is better than giving a tax credit.

Tide may be turning on 1% initiative

Idaho's governmental bodies are drawing up contingency plans for the passage of the 1 percent initiative this fall.

Yet there seems to be a growing feeling around the state that the property tax cut measure might not breeze into the law books as easily as everyone thought it would a few weeks ago.

Backers of the initiative, a measure that would limit the property taxes of Idahoans to 1 percent of a property's market value, had no trouble getting enough signatures to put the tax-cut plan on the November ballot.

But the initial blush has worn the rosy cheek of what is now known as Proposition 1, and some farmers, parents and recreation-minded people are beginning to cast a more skeptical eye at the proposal.

A very real sign that the 1 percent initiative may not be as strong as it once was appeared in the aftermath of the Idaho primary election.

Pro-initiative candidates around the state generally lost their bids to be the new leaders of Idaho.

Taxpayers here are realizing that, unlike California, the Gem State isn't blessed with a billion dollar surplus in revenue to keep the Idaho education system, the state's recreation programs and the basics of local government going if the initiative passes.

Officials around the state are beginning to show people that the 1 percent initiative will, indeed, reduce the number of teachers in Idaho, increase the cost of city recreation programs, and pinch fire and police departments.

The last word has yet to be spoken on the 1 percent initiative. But the word now circulating in Idaho is that Proposition 1, while a blow for less government, will also be a blow for the quality of Idaho's public institutions.

Canada's health plan works but it fuels inflation

WASHINGTON — The Canadian experience with national health insurance offers some good news and some bad news as a model for any similar American system.

The good news is that Canada's Medicare program has made care available to those who, because of income or residence in remote areas, had limited access to health services.

The bad news is that Canada's physicians are ordering more — and costlier — services for their patients, a trend that fuels inflation just as rising health care costs has emerged as a major stumbling block to national health insurance in the United States.

These are the major conclusions of a study by the consulting firm Mathematica Policy Research, done for the federal government's National Center for Health Services Research.

Both the good and the bad of Canada's Medicare program stem from things inherent in a system of universal insurance that pays first-dollar coverage for patients on a fee-for-service basis to physicians.

The study in Quebec province from 1971 to 1975 showed that while the number of patients per practitioner declined during this period, the costs of each visit increased.

“In Quebec, we observed a substantial shift over time from ordinary office examinations to the more expensive complete and major examinations,” the study said. “The relative ease of upgrading the mix of types of visits produced by the physician suggests that the control and specification of such categories of visits (under national health insurance) is important in the control of the overall program costs.”

It was not clear, the study said, whether it was patients or physicians (or both) who created the pressures for more and more elaborate services, the study said.

For example, despite a big jump in the number of physicians in Quebec, far outstripping population growth, doctors did maintain their income by ordering more services for fewer patients.

“This phenomenon is consistent with the theory that physicians can and do create demand for their services,” the study said, especially when they know they will be reimbursed for each service rendered, rather than paid a flat annual salary, for instance.

At the same time, the fact that patients knew that the insurance system would pay every dollar of their medical care “may have led to large increases in patient demand for medical care, and that the increased utilization was merely the result of physicians fulfilling that demand,” the study said.

“In other cases, we believe that a universal health insurance which has both fee-for-service and first-dollar coverage can control aggregate costs only by controlling the number of physicians providing medical care.”

“The Quebec experience suggests that the level of utilization can grow without many natural limits as long as physicians are available and patients have little disincentive not to see the physician.”

“In a fee-for-service medical system with zero co-payments by the patient, the definition of medical procedures and the enforcement of the rules governing billing for such procedures are very important items in controlling program costs.”

Not only must the system have fairly rigid definitions of what kind of services should be offered for given medical conditions (an intrusion into American medicine's jealously guarded right of the physician to practice as he sees fit) but existing fees should be closely scrutinized to make sure they are in line with the actual cost of any procedure, the study said.

Now, a trivia quiz on 1968 Democratic convention

Return with us now to those glorious days of yesterday, when men were men and a fellow never knew if the next sunrise would be his last. I refer, of course, to the summer of 1968, when the Democratic National Convention came to Chicago.

It has been 10 years since those wonderful days — 10 years of history that has become rapidly clearer and more boring. Who among us does not feel a quickening in his bloodstream at the thought of that '68 convention? Perhaps never again will we witness such excitement and derring-do at a political gathering.

Surely, as the anniversary of the convention approaches, it is right for us to commemorate it here. Thus, the following 1968 Democratic National Convention Trivia Quiz.

The quiz has been adapted with permission by this column from a full-length test compiled for Quiz magazine by historian Robert S.

Wieder. The full test appears in the August issue of Quiz. If you enjoy the quiz, credit this column; if you hate it, blame Wieder.

Here's a warmup: Who were the presidential and vice presidential nominees at the '68 convention?

That's an easy one. Hubert Humphrey and Edmund Muskie.

Now on to the real quiz. Do your best. The whole world is watching.

QUESTIONS:

1. What did Time magazine urge the "foresighted Democratic delegate" to go to the convention equipped with?
2. Why did the Yippies choose the name "Youth International Party"?
3. What was the official Yippie slogan?
4. Who were the eight men tried for conspiracy to provoke the Chicago riots?
5. When the antiwar platform plank was defeated and peace delegates sang "We Shall Overcome," what three songs did the convention hand try to drown them out with?

6. What was Abbie Hoffman doing when he was arrested?

7. As they faced off the National Guard in front of the Conrad Hilton Hotel on TV, what three phrases did demonstrators chant?

8. At the conspiracy trial, who said, "I am a poet, songwriter, leader of a rock and roll band, publisher, editor, recording artist, peace creep..."?

9. Who said, "Facts are nothing but their nuance, sir"?

10. Who said, "You are a rotten, fascist pig, racist liar"?

11. Who said, "I like being here. It's good theater"?

12. Who said, "It's part of being a media unknown that even the judge finally forgets you're here"?

13. Who said, "Judge, you represent all that is old, ugly, bigoted, and repressive in this country"?

14. What four performers did Judge Julius J. Hoffman prohibit from singing or chanting what four compositions in court?

15. Because files from the stockyards adjoining the convention site were so thick, what were all speakers ascending the convention platform ordered to do?

16. According to the polls, what percentage of Americans supported the Chicago police?

17. Why was the chairman of a state delegation dragged from the convention floor?

18. What ABC television program outdrew the convention coverage on CBS and NBC?

19. Why did Rennie Davis first come to Chicago?

20. Who said, "We couldn't agree on lunch," and what did it mean?

ANSWERS:

1. Goggles, Vaseline, wire cutters,
2. John Frolines
3. "Happy Days Are Here Again," "The Marine Hymn," and "This Could Be the Start of Something Big."
4. Eating bacon and going "Oink, oink."
5. "The Whole World Is Watching," "You, LBJ," and "Sieg Heil."
6. Ed Sanders
7. Norman Mailer
8. Bobby Seale
9. Jerry Rubin
10. John Frolines
11. Rennie Davis
12. Phil Ochs, "I Ain't Marching Anymore"; Arlo Guthrie, "Alice's Restaurant"; Allen Ginsburg, "Om"; Country Joe, "Vietnam Rag."
13. Be sprayed with bug repellent.
14. See what he sees fit, but existing fees should be closely scrutinized to make sure they are in line with the actual cost of any procedure, the study said.
15. To compete in a chicken-judging contest.
16. Abbie Hoffman; he was asked in court if he and the other defendants had agreed to provoke violence.
17. If you got all 20 questions right, you are entitled to a free drink at the Hyattmark Lounge of the Conrad Hilton Hotel. Simply report to the front of the hotel and ask a traffic policeman to throw you through the window.

Truby wants issues debated with Symms

BOISE (UPI) — The Democratic candidate for Idaho's 2nd District congressional seat said Monday he is looking forward to an issue-oriented campaign now that the Aug. 8 primary is history.

Roy Truby said Republican Rep. Steve Symms does not have all the issues on his side and criticized the incumbent for supporting coal-fired power generation plants.

"I support low-head hydroelectric dams as a short term answer to our energy problems and solar research and development as a long term solution," Truby said. "Symms is committed to coal-fired plants."

Truby said the federal government should turn over functions of the Environmental Protection Agency to the states, and he said Symms has wrongfully advocated the abolition of the EPA.

Truby, agreeing with Carter administration policy, said the cruise missile should be deployed as a less costly, more effective alternative to the B-1 bomber. He blasted Symms for his backing of large-scale construction of the B-1, a move which was set aside by President Carter last summer.

According to Truby, Symms was one of four congressmen to vote against the School Lunch Act and one two to vote against the Child Nutrition Act. Truby said if he is elected he will work to support such legislation.

North Idaho Press editor, writer fired

WALLACE (UPI) — The North Idaho Press was without its regular editorial staff today in the wake of a policy dispute between the staff and the owner of the small daily newspaper.

Mike Green, editor of the press for the past 20 months, said he and reporter Jim Fisher were fired during the weekend by Harry Magnuson, the newspaper's owner. The third member of the editorial staff, Nancy Lee Hanson, was on vacation and was not affected by the action.

Green accused Magnuson of subverting accepted journalistic standards by influencing the newspaper's coverage of the recent primary election.

When reached for comment, Magnuson said his decision was based on a "long-standing disappointment on my part that the editorial staff did not concur with the owner."

In the newspaper's Aug. 7 edition, a letter appeared in the newspaper, signed by all three members of the editorial staff. It read, in part:

"In the past two weeks, the editorial staff of this newspaper has allowed commonly accepted journalistic standards to be subverted by those involved in an effort to unseat certain incumbent county officials."

"This effort has included granting prime exposure to at least one candidate over others, publishing a so-called third person report which was nothing more than a political trade and suppressing responses written by persons who had earlier been attacked in these pages."

The letter went on to state that the undersigned assumed responsibility for this situation and wished to apologize to the newspaper's readers. Magnuson said the dispute was not anything that developed from recent events; but noted the newspaper's election coverage was a factor.

"We found their bias and reporting with regard to the campaign-to-be totally biased and I was embarrassed by some of their stories," Magnuson said.

A long ride on vacation

Jody Foss of La Canada, Calif. and Dwight Smith of Spring Valley, N.Y. had a vacation they won't forget. The two rode horses on a six-week vacation from Park City, Utah to Spokane, Wash. Here, they are trotting through the Northern Idaho panhandle.

Wyoming grand jury resumes

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Wyoming's specially impaneled state grand jury resumed its work Monday for what investigators said probably will be a two-day session.

The grand jury was scheduled to complete its work in July, but extended its term when Rock Springs undercover detective Michael Rosa was killed. Rosa died two days before he was to have testified before the grand jury. His boss, Rock Springs Public Safety Director Ed Centrell, has been charged with first degree murder in the death.

It was not immediately known who testified before the jury Monday.

The grand jury is again focusing on the ramifications of the Rosa slaying, but other areas also will be covered, said Frederic C. Reed, grand jury staff attorney.

Reed said 10-15 witnesses were scheduled to testify during the session. Reed said it was doubtful the meeting would extend beyond Tuesday. Before the Rosa slaying, the grand jury had been investigating allegations of corruption in Rock Springs, but the killing gave new impetus to the jury.

Special prosecutor Lawrence A.

Yonkee, who directs the grand jury, has said he will need additional funding from Gov. Ed Herschler's emergency contingency fund. After Rosa died, Herschler offered the grand jury more money from the fund.

Church wants BPA power spread

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Energy Committee members from the Northwest agreed Monday to sponsor legislation which would spread benefits of public power generated in the region to all consumers in the area, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Monday.

Church said a common piece of action will be drafted based on information gathered at public hearings in the past year.

According to Church the committee wants to mandate a five-year transition period to allow the Bonneville Power Administration time to make electric power available to consumers at that its relatively lower rates by reaching an agreement with private utilities.

Church said the intended legislation would "preserve the rights of Idaho's existing power entities," while at the same time allow private power consumers to share in public investment in the BPA.

Larsen supports right-to-work

BOISE (UPI) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Allan Larsen said he would sign a right to work bill and if he is elected he might even propose one to the Idaho Legislature.

Larsen made that remark on the KTVB-TV "Viewpoint" program.

"I would eagerly sign a right to work bill, not because I am against unions, because I've seen unions render a real service," Larsen said. "I'd like to see a right to work bill because it gives the unions back to the people."

When asked whether he would propose a right to work bill in his first state message, Larsen said, "I surely haven't thought in those terms yet. I have always thought the Legislature would initiate those, but since you've given me the thought, we could consider it."

Six bodies found in wreckage

FAIRFIELD, Utah (UPI) — Searchers found the bodies of six Nevada residents Monday in the wreckage of a twin-engine plane that crashed during stormy weather on a flight from Salt Lake City to Las Vegas.

The dead were identified as R.C. Johnson, the pilot; Brad Blume; Steve and Susie Straub; and Jerry and Rhonda Griffith. All were from Las Vegas.

Mrs. Straub was the daughter of the pilot. No ages were listed for any of the victims.

Utah County Sheriff's Deputy Dean

Kirkham discovered the wreckage about nine miles southeast of Fairfield Monday morning. He and other members of the sheriff's search and rescue posse were combing the area in four-wheeled drive vehicles.

The plane, a twin-engine Beechcraft, left the Salt Lake Airport at 9:09 p.m. Sunday and disappeared from the control tower's radar screen at about 9:40.

Bundy trial set Nov. 1

LAKE CITY, Fla. (UPI) — As the victim's father sat quietly in the back of the courtroom, Theodore Bundy pleaded innocent Monday to charges he killed 12-year-old Kimberly Diane Leach.

Circuit Judge W.M. Jopling set Bundy's trial for Nov. 1 — about the same time two murder trials involving the 31-year-old defendant are expected to be completed in Tallahassee.

Bundy is charged there with beating and strangling Florida State University coeds, Lisa Levy, 20, and Margaret Bowman, 21, of St. Petersburg, in the Chi Omega sorority house.

Bundy is currently defending himself on those charges, Atlanta defense attorney Millard Farmer said he will ask the state Supreme Court to let him represent Bundy in that case.

Jopling allowed Farmer to represent Bundy during Monday's arraignment, and gave him 15 days to file a motion seeking permission to represent Bundy during the murder trial.

The judge's decision is a switch from that of Leon Circuit Judge John Rudd who refused to let Farmer, who only defends indigents in death penalty cases, represent Bundy during any of the Chi Omega murder proceedings.

Farmer needs permission from the presiding judge to enter cases tried in Florida since he is not a member of the Florida Bar.

Housewife sells 'glass plate' for $40; worth $1,700

MORTON GROVE, Ill. — The story of a small fortune, lost because a housewife had no idea her glass plate was a collector's item, recently came to light.

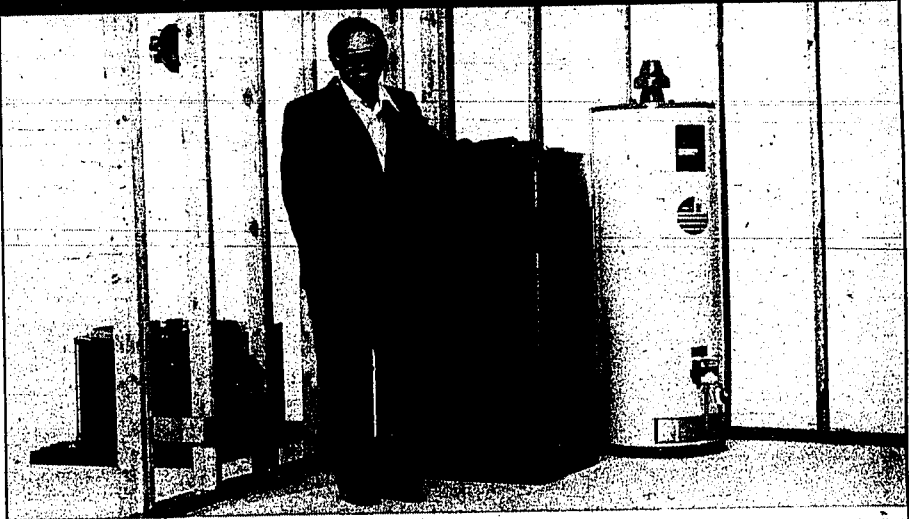

In a letter to J. R. MacArthur, chairman of the Bradford Exchange, world's largest trading center in collector's plates, a Madison, Wis., woman wrote: "I had a Lalique 1965 plate, which I sold to a friend for $40. I had not heard of you at that time."

The plate she sold is actually valued at more than $1,700. Although MacArthur points out that this price is exceptionally high, he said, "I'm afraid others may be losing hundreds or thousands of dollars by not knowing what their plates are worth."

To aid in identifying valuable plates, the Exchange issues a report that includes current prices on more than 900 plates, guidelines on what to look for and when to buy, and the plate evaluation checklist used by the Exchange.

Gas or electric?

Gas is best for heating and water heating.

We all should conserve energy and get the most value for our dollar. That's why you should use gas for water heating and heating your home. Electric energy in this area costs up to 30 percent more than gas. Gas is more efficient as a heating fuel and less expensive under today's energy rates.

Electric is best for air conditioning.

Electric air conditioning offers a very efficient way to cool your home in the summer. Heating and cooling are the big energy jobs. When gas is used for heating and water heating and electricity for cooling, the end result is a balanced use of energy for maximum efficiency, economy and lifetime operating costs.

Idaho can't make it on one energy source.

Intermountain Gas has planned ahead. Idaho's gas supplies are in good shape now and for many years to come. But that doesn't mean we should waste energy. It means we should use both energy sources for the best efficiency and greatest economy. Gas for heating and water heating. Electricity for cooling. The balanced energy concept for today and tomorrow.

California earthquake hospitalizes 40

Train jolted off its tracks as Santa Barbara quake hits 5.1 on Richter scale

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — Windows shattered, power lines drooped, shelves emptied, water and gas lines erupted and a train was jolted off its track Sunday during a moderate earthquake that hospitalized at least 50 persons.

There were no reports of death or heavy property damage.

The quake, the largest in Southern California in five years, registered 5.1 on the Richter Scale and was centered in the ocean floor about six miles south of Santa Barbara. There were several aftershocks, some as strong as 3.75.

Hospitals said about 50 persons were brought to their emergency wards for treatment, but only about 10 major injuries were reported. These included several cases of broken bones, one heart attack and a dislocated hip.

One girl was cut by flying glass when a roof collapsed at her home. A roof also collapsed at a downtown restaurant.

The earth shook for one minute starting at 6:54 p.m. EDT and could be felt in Los Angeles, some 100 miles to the southeast. Residents in nearby Ventura County said water slopped from their swimming pools.

"My stereo fell on the floor, my refrigerator slid across the floor and spilled out all the food," said California Highway Patrol Officer Gene Hunt, who was called to duty after the tremor.

Streets in downtown Santa Barbara, the scene of the devastating 1925 earthquake, were littered with broken window glass and supermarket shelves were emptied by the sharp jolt.

Water and gas mains also ruptured and power lines snapped or drooped over roadways. Power was lost in the Isla Vista neighborhood adjoining UC Santa Barbara, and General Telephone reported damage at its Goleta station.

Numerous fires resulted from the broken power lines but fire officials said all had been dealt with in less than 30 minutes.

The rumbling earth also sent automobiles careening into one another.

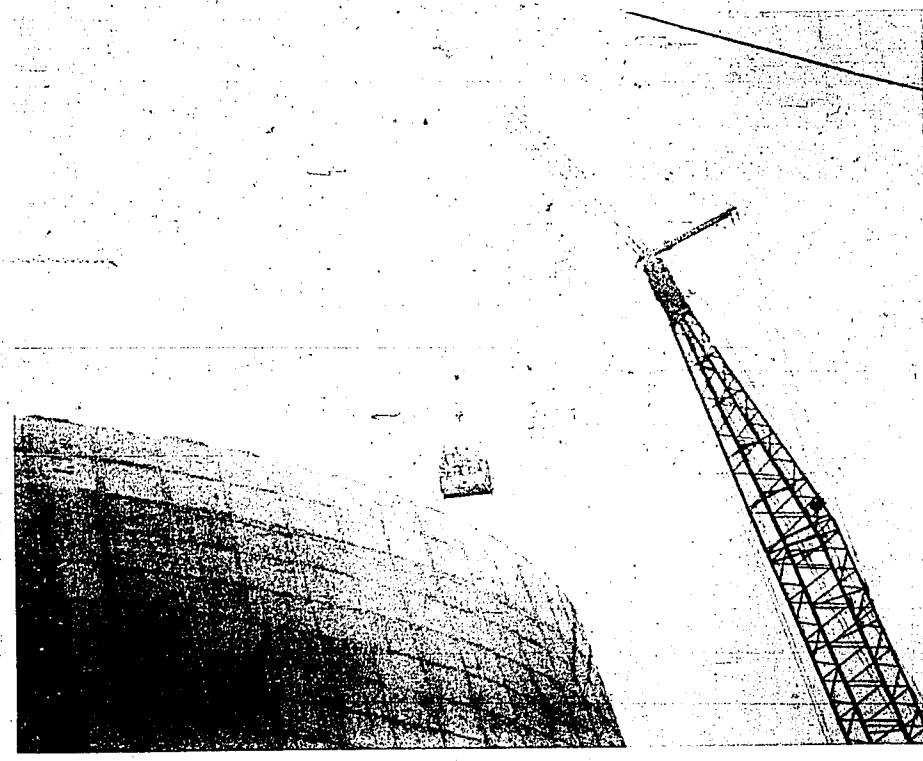

Police also reported cracks in several bridges over the U.S. 101 freeway and said a two-foot-wide fissure opened in one roadway.

Ten cars and a diesel engine derailed blocking the main north-south coastal railroad route. The blockage stranded 358 Amtrak passengers on a train southbound from San Francisco forcing them to board buses for Los Angeles.

"It felt like I was inside of a box someone was rattling around," said Police Officer Mike Warren.

The earthquake was the largest in Santa Barbara in more than 20 years and the largest in Southern California since the Pt. Mugu quake, which measured 6.0 on the Richter Scale. The disastrous San Fernando Earthquake near Los Angeles in 1971 measured 6.4.

Long, tedious task ahead

Workers hanging in a construction bucket begin a long and tedious task at the cooling tower in Willow Island, W. Va., where 51 men died in April following the collapse of a scaffolding around the lip of the huge structure. Debris from the accident has not been disturbed since it fell on April 28.

Industries battle beetle epidemic

DENVER (UPI) — Colorado and other mountain states are in the midst of a pine beetle epidemic that threatens several industries with financial disaster but will take years to clear up, the U.S. Forest Service said.

"There is a bark-beetle epidemic, and it's going to get worse before it gets better," Craig Rupp, regional forester for the service, said Saturday.

Officials said that the Colorado timbering industry appeared to be one of the hardest hit by the disease, which turns forests reddish-brown with dead trees. Mark McGregor, a bark-beetle specialist in the service's Missoula, Mont., office, estimated that the infestation is killing 2 million ponderosa pine trees yearly in Colorado.

"It is a tremendous loss," said McGregor. "They're knocking the hell out of us."

Another segment of the economy hit by the epidemic is the mountain real estate industry, where officials estimate beetle-damaged trees cause property values to drop 15 to 40 percent.

"If you lose all your trees, you are really detracting from the value," forester Dave Sonnen said. "Property owners are telling us it's a lot harder to sell the property if the bugs are there."

Aside from the monetary loss, the beetles also cause damage that is not so easily measured, dollar-wise.

"It's impossible to take a picture of dead trees in the background," said a Forest Service official at Wyoming's Yellowstone National Park, where beetle infestation has spread over 200,000 acres.

Maine 'smokies' receive truck drivers' top vote

BANGOR, Maine (UPI) — A survey of 12,000 truckers shows the nation's truck drivers like rural Maine — because they say the state has the most lenient enforcement speeding laws in the nation.

The four-month survey was conducted by Mother Trucker News, a national magazine of the trucking industry.

The study indicated Saturday Maine state police are the easiest to get along with. It also said truckers say Ohio "smokies" are the most hard-nosed, handing out tickets for traveling 57 miles per hour in a 55 mph zone.

Seventy-nine percent of the truckers named Ohio as the strictest state for traffic law enforcement, followed by Virginia, (77 percent), Missouri (69 percent), Pennsylvania (56 percent) and California (54 percent).

But Maine State Police Lt. Col. Ronald Hiltz told the Bangor Daily News that truckers are not getting preferential treatment in Maine.

Hiltz said state police issued 1,415 tickets last month and truckers got 96 of them. But he also said Maine is a large, sparsely populated state and there are long stretches of road patrolled by only one trooper.

"We have about 250 people on traffic duty," Hiltz said. "At any one time a third of them are off duty or on vacation."

When it comes to savings, we wrote the book.

How to make your "somedays" come a little sooner.

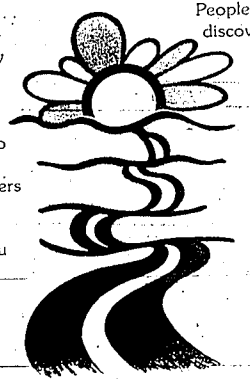

Believing in tomorrow is the way most people live their todays. "Someday" will always seem far off unless you do something to make it come a little sooner.

An Idaho First Savings account can be opened for as little as $10.00. Not only is your money there when you need it, but it earns money for you, too... the highest bank interest permitted by law, compounded daily!

Save-O-Matic is another way Idaho First can help. It automatically transfers checking account dollars into your savings account. You pay yourself first.

That's the real secret to saving. People who use Save-O-Matic discover that they don't miss the money they've tucked away, and they have the satisfaction of knowing that they are doing something to make their somedays come a little sooner.

Here's a way to make your money make more money.

Idaho First has a variety of Certificates of Deposit and Investment instruments to enable you to relax and know that your money is hard at work for you!

When you purchase a Certificate of Deposit, you promise to leave your money on deposit for a fixed term. We promise to pay you more interest. The longer the term, the more money your savings dollar earns. CD terms range from 30 days to 8 years or more, and pay up to 7.75% interest.*

You have worked hard for your money. Now make it work hard for you. Whether it's a college education for your children, a vacation home, your retirement fund or just more money, Idaho First can help make it happen.

Here's short-term, high earning power in Money Market certificates.

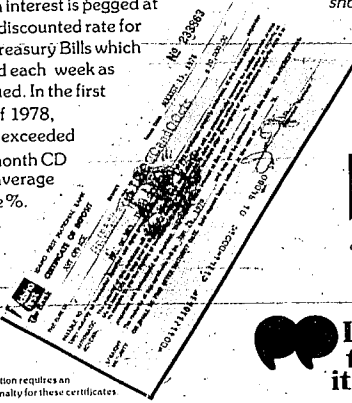

It's just human nature to expect more from big things. Similarly we can expect larger sums of money to work harder than lesser amounts.

They can. They earn at much higher rates of interest than regular savings accounts. They're called Money Market certificates* and they are issued in minimum $10,000 denominations with a six-month maturity.

The high interest is pegged at the average discounted rate for Six-Month Treasury Bills which is established each week as they are issued. In the first six months of 1978, T-Bills have exceeded regular six-month CD rates by an average of nearly 1 1/2%.

So make your money work at least as hard as you did to get it. It's the best of both worlds because with the long gain, you retain short-term flexibility and control. Money Market certificates... that's the long and the short of it.

The what, why and how of savings in our free book.

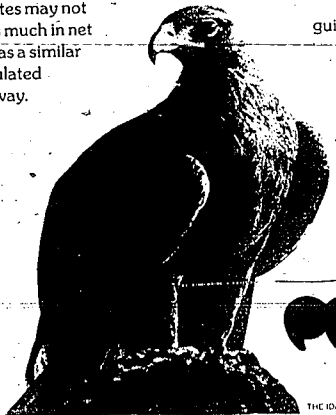

It's handy and fits in your pocket. Yet it has essentially what you want to know about the many savings plans available... how interest is figured... when it is credited... how it grows.

It outlines the many savings plans available and tells you the advantages and disadvantages of certain types. It can tell you where your money works most efficiently... for you... in your situation.

It explains interest rates, shows how advertised high annual rates may not deliver as much in net earnings as a similar rate calculated another way.

It points out what you should look for when considering Credit Union and Savings & Loans as well as The Bank. Easy to carry. Easy to read. Easy to interpret... a guide to savings plans and other information. It's yours for the asking at any Idaho First Office.

World's longest bath ends after 48 hours

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Bruce Wecker showered, pulled up a deck chair and sat in the sun to dry out Monday, taking a break from the rigors of the "world's longest bath."

Wecker, a 25-year-old Army veteran, spent 48 hours in a tub displayed in the window of a cosmetics shop.

Monday, he was basking in the sun and reflecting on the decline of shy women.

"I didn't get any proposals — I don't need that stuff," he said after he reached dry land, "but I got propositioned several times. And one woman offered to get in the tub with me. Another tried to get me to take off my trunks."

More than 800 persons signed the book attesting that Wecker had completed 48 hours in the tub at the Garden of Eden, a shop that deals in exotic oils and creams and other cosmetics.

"The first thing I'm going to do is to take a shower and wash all this oil out," he said as he slid out of the tub Sunday afternoon.

Wecker wore red trunks for his "bath" and was allowed out of the water for five minutes every hour.

"My feet shriveled up and I got pretty water logged, but there was always something happening," he said. "The funniest thing was the people walking past, embarrassed and afraid to take a good look at me."

"I don't think I want to do it again," he said. "But it sure was an eye-opener."

Balloonists wing it across sea

BEDFORD, Mass. (UPI) — The Double Eagle II, with its three-man crew, passed the one-hundred mark Monday in a bid to become the first balloon to cross the Atlantic.

The 112-foot-tall balloon was seen at mid-day Monday about 45 miles northeast of St. John's, Newfoundland, attempting to alter its course southeasterly in order to establish a more direct route. David McClure, spokesman for the crew at its command headquarters at Weather Services Corp. in Bedford, said the helium-filled balloon, when last reported at 11:30 a.m., was sailing at about 16,000 feet and moving about 18 miles per hour.

Three Albuquerque, N.M. men — Ben Abruzzo, 46, Maxie Anderson, 44, and Larry Newman, 31 — are aboard the craft.

Last September Abruzzo and Anderson failed in an attempt to reach Europe via a northern route. Bad weather, including subfreezing temperatures, forced them down north of Iceland.

Seventeen attempts by other balloonists over the past 100 years all ended in failure. The most recent took place late last month when two Englishmen ditched at sea only 117 miles from the French coast.

Newsweek says Abbie Hoffman to surface

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's been more than four years since Abbie Hoffman went underground to beat cocaine-selling charges, but the ex-Yippie plans to surface incoognito at a rally of supporters next week, Newsweek reported Monday.

The magazine said Hoffman sent word to friends he will show up at the rally, called to demand that authorities reduce or drop charges against him.

But organizers of the event don't want Hoffman caught at their shindig, so they're lining up a series of Abbie look-alikes to confuse police and FBI agents, Newsweek said.

Rep. J. Herbert Burke pleaded innocent Monday to misdemeanor charges of disorderly intoxication, resisting a policeman and witness tampering that stemmed from an incident at a nude go-gobar.

The Florida Republican was arrested in the parking lot outside the Centerfold Club in Ft. Lauderdale May 27 after the manager of the nude go-go bar phoned police to complain that a "Senator Blake" was causing a disturbance inside.

Burke, a member of a House subcommittee investigating narcotics traffic, said he followed two suspected drug dealers to the club's parking lot in order to collect evidence. He denied entering the night club.

But club employees said Burke had been in the Centerfold, pinched a dancer and got into an argument with other patrons.

The witness-tampering charge stemmed from an alleged attempt to persuade club manager Joseph Dangles to change his account of the incident.

President Carter's apparently no big hit on the Cook County rubber-chicken circuit, as his appearance at an annual Democratic fund-raiser last May drew the smallest paying crowd in four years.

Few people note V-J Day

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The smallest state in the nation Monday was the only one to officially observe "V-J Day" — when Japan stopped fighting and ended World War II.

The rest of America went about its business.

Japan capitulated Aug. 15, 1945 and two weeks later signed a formal surrender aboard the battleship USS Missouri anchored in Tokyo Bay. Germany had surrendered on May 8 of that same year.

"I hope they continue it (the holiday), but I don't think they will. Many men fought for the country, why should we forget it?" said Vernon Angell, 58, a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"The way things are going, we won't be remembering anything any more."

In nearby Warwick, the city government and Veterans Council Monday sponsored the annual Victory Day-parade.

Parrish: art and secret passages

By D'VERA COHN

PLAINFIELD, N.H. (UPI) — Maxfield Parrish left thumbprints on his paintings and his name firmly imbedded in art history. But he was more than an artist.

His most famous work, "Daybreak," sold more than a million copies in the 1930s and some claim it is the most reproduced work in the history of art.

But he also was a tinkerer who built elaborate locks, placed his home with secret passages and imbedded empty brandy bottles in the masonry around it.

Not strictly a mechanic who paints, Parrish once said of the intricate touches he applied to his home, The Oaks, which he built on 50 acres of wildflower-sprinkled Plainfield countryside in 1898.

The late afternoon sky outside the rambling house is a deep, sharp blue. The artist captured the electric tone and it became so popular it was named after him: Parrish blue.

His fairy tale paintings and brooding, romantic portraits hang in the best art museums. But they also decorated millions of calendars, candy boxes and magazine covers.

Parrish lived at The Oaks until his death in 1966 at 96. The house takes its name from the huge, centuries-old oak trees that shade it. It is now a restaurant and country inn. It costs a visitor $54 to stay a night in Parrish's master bedroom, which provides an open 20-mile mountain view.

His studio opened this summer as the nation's first museum of his work.

"We're trying to create the atmosphere as it was when Mr. Parrish was alive," said Alma Gilbert, who runs The Oaks with her husband, Maurice, and is one of the nation's largest dealers in Parrish paintings.

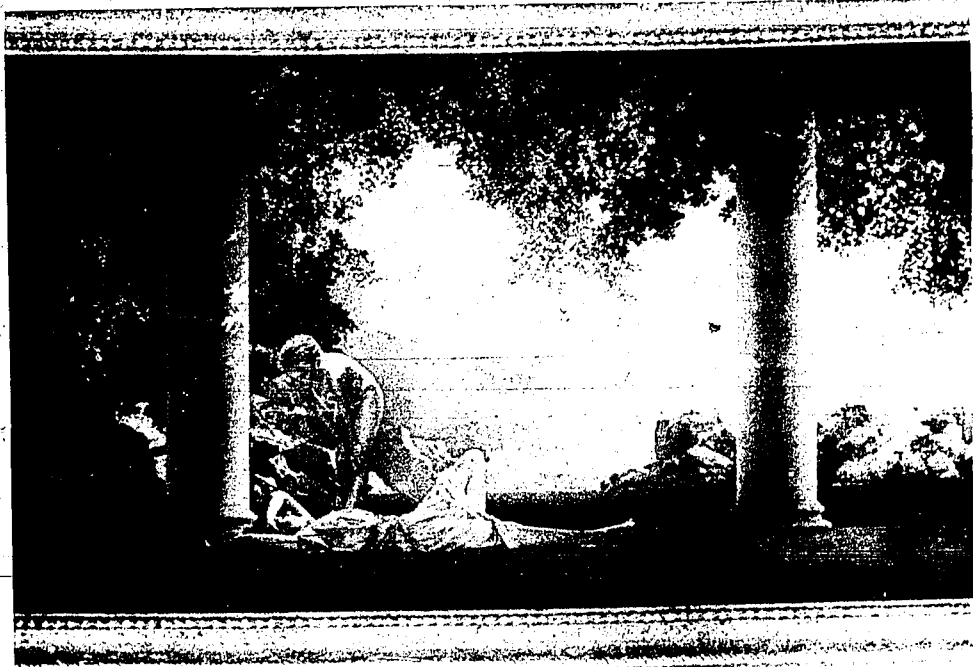

Parrish was born to money and made more. He was used to the trappings of wealth and included Woodrow Wilson, William Jennings Bryan and Justice Learned Hand among his summer colony neighbors.

Parrish gained his first notices with fairy tale illustrations and eerily ill portraits of young women outdoors. He switched to landscapes in the 1930s. "I'm done with girls on the rocks," he said.

"Daybreak" was painted just before he switched to landscapes. It sold more than a million copies in three years and is the most reproduced painting in the history of art, Mrs. Gilbert said.

The painting vanished from sight for 50 years, but reappeared several years ago when it was sold by the estate of Kilty Owen, Bryan's granddaughter and one of the models for the picture. Bryan had bought it and hidden it from public view.

"Daybreak" now hangs in the museum on loan, as do dozens of other Parrish works, including his well known "Garden of Allah."

Michael Miller, 7, shows 'Elvismania' look-alike suit

Anniversary of Elvis' death draws fans to his mansion

By SUSAN WHITE

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — The sobbing and hysteria of a year ago are gone, but thousands of Elvis Presley fans, still clutching flowers and memories, plan to gather outside the home of their musical king to pay a quieter kind of homage on the first anniversary of his death.

It will be a year Wednesday that the man, adored by millions, was found alone on a bathroom floor of Graceland, his 18-room mansion — the victim of a heart attack.

The death of the 42-year-old Mississippi farm boy — whose legend made him seem bigger than life — stunned a world of Presley fans and touched off a period of mourning almost unrivaled for any entertainer.

Radio Luxembourg cancelled all commercials the night of his death and played nothing but Presley albums in Tokyo, television announcers wept as they read the news of his death. Tributes to the man, who left the United States only when he served in the Army in Germany, were aired from Tel Aviv to Uruguay. His obituary was run in Moscow.

Because of the outpouring of worldwide grief, Vernon Presley, the 63-year-old father of Elvis, decided that his son should be shared with his public.

The musical note gates of Graceland, that had once guarded the Presley privacy, were thrown open, and the world — who had tried every imaginable way to enter the grounds during Elvis' lifetime — were allowed to walk up the winding driveway to the white-columned house.

More than 20,000 were taken, four at a time, into the music room of the mansion, where the superstar — lay in a simple copper coffin.

Another 60,000 mourners — some of them screaming, sobbing and fainting in the 90-degree-plus heat — never made it inside. A police helicopter hovered over the 14-acre estate as officers with bullhorns begged the crowd to stop shoving as the wrought iron gates swung shut, ending the public portion of the funeral.

Hundreds of transistor radios blared the songs that carried Presley's rise to fame during the 1950s, such as

"Hound Dog" — which sold 11 million copies — "Don't Be Cruel" and "Heartbreak Hotel."

Some of the fans refused to leave, maintaining an all-night vigil on Elvis Presley Boulevard, a heavily-trafficked street that runs in front of the mansion. The wait cost two young women their lives when they were struck by a car driven by a drunken teenager.

As time for Elvis' funeral grew closer, the crowd of wailing fans grew larger. An estimated 100,000 mourners clogged the four-mile route from Graceland to Forest Hills cemetery where Presley was to be entombed in a mausoleum.

Celebrities like Ann-Margret, Burt Reynolds and George Hamilton, as well as Presley's former wife, Priscilla, and his 9-year-old daughter Lisa Marie, attended a private service in the home.

The rose-covered coffin of Presley was then carried by six pallbearers to a white hearse, which joined a 49-car funeral procession for the drive to the cemetery. After another brief, private service, the coffin was sealed. Later, the body of Presley's mother, Gladys Love Presley, would be moved to the gray marble mausoleum.

Several months later, following an unsuccessful attempt to snatch the entertainer's body and hold it for ransom, the bodies of both Elvis and his mother were moved to Graceland on orders from Vernon Presley.

They were buried in a courtyard adjacent to a swimming pool at the side of the house. A small fountain, religious statues and a stone wall containing stained-glass depictions of religious scenes encircled the simple bronze plaques that mark the gravesites.

The inscription on Elvis' grave is one written by his father. "He became a living legend in his own time, earning the respect and love of millions," the grave marker says.

A year after his death, the Presley legend is even greater than in his lifetime.

More than half a million fans have walked through the tiny meditation garden to see his grave which is always adorned with flowers from fans across the world.

Dear Abby

Fling with a minor turned serious

Dear Abby,
About a year ago my wife seemed to turn frigid, and last week I learned the reason why. She's been having an affair with a friend of our son's!
My wife is 38 and very well built, and this kid is 16 and big for his age. (He was 15 when it started.) He hung around our house a lot, but I always thought he came over to see our boys. (We have three, ages 10, 12 and 16.) It never dawned on me that something was going on until I saw my wife kissing him goodbye in the yard. Then she said, "I love you." (I read her lips.)
I had a long talk with her and she admitted that she was having an affair with this kid, but she said she still "loved" me and I was only a harmless little fling. (How "harmless" can it be if they are having sex?)
I told her I didn't want to see that boy around our house anymore. Should I tell his parents? What should I do now? We've been married for 18 years, I'm 39 and have never been unfaithful in my life. We had a wonderful marriage until she started fooling around with this kid. Please advise me.

Can't Sleep In Vegas

Dear Can't,
You can't tolerate an extramarital affair, whether you call it "fooling around," a "fling" or whatever. Nowhere in your letter do you say that your wife has agreed to stop seeing this boy. If she insists on seeing him, you should insist that she get counseling. And remind her that she is contributing to the delinquency of a minor!
Dear Abby,
Lately I've been finding a lot of stuff in my mailbox that has not been sent through the mails. I'm referring to religious tracts, political propaganda, all kinds of advertisements, and even business cards soliciting business for house repairs, real estate, etc.

I don't want my mailbox cluttered up with all this junk, and I would like to put a stop to it.
There ought to be a law against it!
Cluttered Mailbox In L.A.

Dear Abby,
Someone wrote to ask what you would think of a woman who would take a job as a live-in housekeeper for a single man, and you replied, "I couldn't care less. But if I were to give it one moment's thought, I would assume that the housekeeper was KEEPING — not PLAYING — house."
God bless you, Abby, for keeping alive the supply of live-in housekeepers for the rectories of celibate clergymen! A man pays a housekeeper; he supports a wife.

Technicians at Goodyear's Tire proving ground near San Angelo, Texas get ready to destroy a stack of new elliptic tires by driving them over tire-slicing probes in an evaluation of the tire's

Industrial firms meet water pollution deadlines

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — Fewer than 675 of the 4,500 major American industrial firms using processes that can pollute water supplies failed to meet the federal deadline last summer for putting in suitable cleanup equipment.

By contrast, two-thirds of 4,300 cities and towns whose sewerage systems were polluting streams still are doing so, the federal government reports.

The offenders include such huge metropolises as New York, Los Angeles and Detroit. Government agents can haul industrial polluters into court and have them fined; political considerations make it hard to do that to municipal bureaucrats.

Congress has done what it considers the next best thing — made almost $25 billion in federal funds available for water cleanup by municipalities over the next five years. As matter of fact, federal funds for this purpose have been available all along.

The catch was that the municipalities had to match 25 percent of the federal money and many just couldn't do it. Now Congress has added a sweetener by providing a way for localities to borrow their 25 percent of the funds with a federal guaranty.

The water pollution equipment manufacturers, which include such firms as Fischer & Porter Co. of Horsham, Pa., Ecodyne of Lincolnshire, Ill., Envirotech of Menlo Park, Calif., Dorr-Oliver division of Curtiss-Wright, Stamford, Conn., General Signal of New York, Neptune International of Atlanta, Rexnord of Milwaukee and Peabody International of Stamford, see a bonanza of $6 billion to $7 billion in municipal orders in the next few years for pumps, aerators, filters, settling tanks, sludge incinerators and controls.

The business will be a little slow to get rolling because municipalities can't or won't do things as rapidly as private industry. Nevertheless, Peter Lorenz, a Boston consultant who specializes in the field, thinks the market for municipal water cleanup equipment will reach at least $750 million a year by the mid-1980s.

Chairman Jay H. Tolson of Fischer & Porter said sales of water and waste treatment equipment contributed substantially to a rise in the company's incoming orders to a record of $81 million in the first half of this year. Fischer & Porter makes flow and control systems for the paper, petrochemical, metal, mining, food and other industries.

A number of the companies in the water treatment equipment business have additional reasons to welcome the move by Congress to give municipalities more financial incentive to clean up their water systems. Some of these firms also make air pollution control equipment and Wall Street analysts say this market will be pretty flat for the next few years.

Trade winds

- Rogers director
- SBA to visit
- Hadfield eligible

TWIN FALLS — John E. Rogers, Jr. of Twin Falls was elected to the board of directors of the Sheet Metal Contractors of Idaho, Inc. at their recent convention at Elkhorn.

Other officers named were Robert W. Taylor of Boise, president; Con Mahoney of Idaho Falls, vice president; Gale M. Sasserof Boise, secretary-treasurer; and directors, Gary Blanchard of Pocatello, Clifford E. Hobson of Boise and C. Delbert Marcum of Boise.

TWIN FALLS — Sharla Edgar, loan processing assistant from the Boise Office of the Small Business Administration, will be in Twin Falls Aug. 25 to provide information and to assist area farmers, ranchers and business people with SBA programs.

Ms. Edgar will be available for appointments from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Chamber of Commerce office, according to Jay Hoyer, Twin Falls chamber manager.

TWIN FALLS — Dean I. Hadfield of Twin Falls has qualified to attend a five-day educational conference in Miami, Fla., based on 1977-78 sales performance, as a member of New York Life Insurance Company's 1978 President's Council.

The insurance company's president's council includes the top 600 agents within the company's field force of 10,000 in the United States and Canada.

Bond sale rises

TWIN FALLS — P. J. Hamilton of Twin Falls, county volunteer chairman for U.S. Savings Bonds, reports July sales of Series E-II Bonds amounted to $39,219 bringing year-to-date sales for his county to $366,166.

Idaho sales were $956,098 for July making a total of more than $7 million for the year. Sales are $205,000 above the same period last year.

SBA guaranteed loans are made through banks to qualified agricultural and commercial businesses, Hoyer said. Loans may be guaranteed for establishment, acquisition, operation, or expansion of profitable ventures. Funds may be used for land, improvements, equipment, inventory, or working capital by the borrowers.

Building drops

BOISE — An abrupt construction slowdown was evident in Idaho in July reflecting primarily the impact of the 10 percent usury ceiling on mortgage interest rates, said Kenneth J. Newman, vice president and manager of First Security Bank of Idaho.

Quoting the Idaho Construction Report, a publication of the bank, the report says basic sources of funds for mortgage-granting institutions from the secondary mortgage market have exceeded 10 percent. The high cost of this capital has effectively prohibited construction in July was $36,428,005 or 33.7 percent below 1977.

Total construction value for authorized building permit construction in 54 major Idaho locations in July was $36,428,005 or 33.7 percent below 1977. New residential construction for 733 dwelling units totaled $22,232,725, a decrease of 42.8 percent in number and 35.3 percent in value compared with a year ago. Non-residential construction valued at $5,096,578 was down 25.3 percent from last year, while alterations and repairs totaling $8,239,702.

Bailey in charge

TWIN FALLS — R. Hal Bailey, 30, former Twin Falls resident and now of Valencia, Calif., is in charge of Bank of America's credit and account relationships with mortgage banks and insurance companies in the southwestern United States.

Formerly a corporate finance officer with the bank, he has been promoted to assistant vice-president of the corporate-services office in Los Angeles. He was born in Idaho and obtained his bachelor's and master's degrees in business administration from Brigham Young University.

Craig and his wife Janis, the former Janis Victor also of Twin Falls, have four children.

Licenses issued

BOISE — Two Magic Valley men have recently been issued licenses from the Idaho Bureau of Occupational Licenses of the Department of Self-Governing Agencies.

The Idaho State Board of Podiatry Examiners instructed the state license bureau to issue a Podiatrist license to Howard Gary Corless, D.P.M., of Burley.

Jon Murray-Gowbe, D.C., of Hallett, received a chiropractic license from the bureau when the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners met in July.

Landmark status sought for ballroom

Larry Shaeffer stands in front of Tulsa ballroom

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Historians will determine whether the Cain's Ballroom is to be designated a national historical landmark, but the decision will be academic.

For many, Tulsa's most famous honky-tonk is history, but it is history that lives. Every Friday and Saturday from September to mid-June hundreds of people cram into the ballroom that once served as the showcase for Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys. There they dance and holler to the music of progressive country, rock and jazz bands.

Owner Larry Shaeffer calls it "high energy."

"The magic thing about the Cain's audience is that it is a human wave of spirit," he said. "You can whoop and holler. You can dance in the rooms, in the lobby or on the tables. It's a kind of therapy. This is one place where you can really let go."

The place is constructed in a way that invites the rowdy. The spring-loaded maple dance floor was built in 1931 at a cost of $11,000. Not one board has ever been replaced.

Behind the stage can be seen pictures of Bob Wills and the legendary Hank Williams. Pictures of other stars who have played the Cains are around the walls. There are Roy Rogers, Gene Autry, Hank Snow, Hank Thompson, Ray Acuff, Little Jimmy Dickens, Eddie Arnold, Tennessee Ernie Ford, Red Foley, Tex Ritter and others.

"I've never seen an act leave here unhappy," said Shaeffer, a rock music promoter whose long blond hair and mustache belie his 30 years. "A lot of musicians who are into music history are overwhelmed."

Shaeffer has tried to keep the old ballroom as near as possible to its original condition. There is no air conditioning, even in his wood-paneled office that once served as the hat check room. The heating system works best when the crowd is large enough to generate body heat.

but Shaeffer likes it that way and no historical landmark designation will help keep it that way. Mike Stewart of the Tulsa Historic Preservation Office said Cain's will be considered this fall for inclusion in the National Register for Historic Preservation.

To gain landmark status, the old ballroom will have to gain the approval of the Oklahoma State Historic Preservation Society and the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Christina abandons plans and rejoins her husband

In an interview with an Athenian daily, Christina said Sunday that she intended to return to her husband, but she had not indicated when. She also asked newsmen to leave her alone and also not to pursue her to the island of Skorplos, which her father, the late shipping tycoon Aristotle Onassis, left to her.

She said Skorplos was a sacred place because her father and her brother Alexandros were buried there.

The shipping heiress' action in leaving Moscow shortly after her marriage to Kauzov, a former Soviet shipping official, had touched off rumors that the marriage was already on the rocks. But both she and Kauzov persistently denied the reports as well as rumors that Kauzov was a KGB agent.

PUC OKs low-head dams on Snake

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two low-head hydroelectric dams proposed for the Snake River near Bliss are over the first hurdle toward adding extra power for Idaho in the 1980s.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission Monday gave its "blessing" to the H.J. Wylie and Dike dams proposed by Idaho Power Co. and backed by the state Department of Water Resources, Commission president Robert Lenghen said.

The blessing means Idaho Power Co. will be granted a certificate of public convenience and necessity to build the two dams and their power plants if all goes well. Total cost is estimated at about $150 million, and total generating capacity will be 125 megawatts.

Still to be completed by the power company are environmental impact statements and engineering studies. Lenghen said it is conceivable these items could influence the final outcome of the PUC's decision.

The two dams, along with several other Idaho Power Co. proposed projects, should enable the company to meet future power needs until about 1987, power officials have said.

Only a smattering of protest accompanied hearings in June before the PUC on the proposed low-head dams. Lenghen said those interested have until Sept. 3 to ask for a rehearing. If a rehearing comes about and protestors are still dissatisfied they can appeal the PUC's decision to the Idaho Supreme Court.

Protestors have said the dams' reservoirs will destroy the habitat of Sturgeon and perhaps other species of fish in the Snake River. They have also questioned the feasibility of the construction sites for the dams, claiming a possible lack of solid rock foundation.

Construction of the Wylie and Dike dams must be approved by the U.S. Energy Regulatory Commission.

The estimated $96.1 million Wylie project, which will be located in Gooding and Twin Falls counties upriver from the present Bliss Dam, will have a generating capacity of 75 megawatts and a 600-acre water storage area, according to the PUC. The reservoir behind the dam will flood out at least three property owners in Hagerman Valley.

Elmore County will be the site of the Dike facility downriver from the Bliss Dam. Dike will have an estimated price tag of $55.7 million, a generating capacity of 50 mw and 475 acres of water storage.

The PUC said construction costs of the two dams are comparable to those of coal-fired generation plants but annual operating costs will be lower because the hydroelectric dams will not be subject to rising fuel costs.

Lenghen said the PUC is working closely with Idaho Power, the state Office of Energy and the Department of Water Resources on several projects to "take care of problems until the late 1980s, assuming everything goes smoothly and according to plan."

He said the projects proposed by and for Idaho Power include a 10 percent share in the Boardman, Ore., coal-fired plant, purchase of 125 mw of electricity from Sierra Pacific Power and Light Co. in Nevada, a half interest in that company's proposed coal-fired plant near Winnemucca, the Swan Falls-Guffey project on the Snake River and low-head hydro dams on the South Fork of the Payette River. Lenghen said if power generating facilities can be installed in Lucky Peak Dam near Boise and Pallsades in eastern Idaho, then Idaho Power could meet its customer needs beyond even the late-1980s forecast.

Defeat blamed on poll workers

TWIN FALLS — The head of the Twin Falls County Democratic Party Monday charged election polling place workers with defeating the campaign of Democrat William Smazal for District 25 state senator.

Smazal received 31 votes in last Tuesday's primary election in Idaho. The campaign to gain the Democratic nomination. No Democratic candidate had filed for the position, and Smazal fell short of the required 50 write-in votes needed to be his party's candidate. The District 25 state senate post is now held by incumbent Richard High, R-Twin Falls.

Monday, County Chairwoman Marjorie Slotten of Twin Falls said several voters had complained to her that election workers didn't understand the write-in procedure, discouraged write-in votes because of their failure to understand the law and failed to provide pencils for write-in votes.

"The number of complaints Democratic headquarters heard all during election day causes me to believe that many more than 19 voters were unable to or discouraged from writing in Smazal's name due to the simple problems of finding no pencils in the voting booths," Mrs. Slotten said. "Many voters who complained to us they asked for pencils and were told varying stories why none were available."

An estimated 25 persons complained of polling place problems when they attempted to write in Smazal's name, and others encountered polling place workers who didn't understand the write-in procedure, Slotten said.

School's here already

Mrs. Pat Stanley registers her agonizing son, Doug, into the fourth grade at Filer school district registration Monday at the junior high school. Doug apparently was thinking like many Magic Valley youngsters that summer just couldn't

School lunch aid offered

FILER — Ray Baker, superintendent of the Filer School District 413, has announced the district's policy for free or reduced price meals for children under to pay full price of meals served under the national school lunch program.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents, and additional copies are available at the principal's office at the high school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only to determine eligibility, Baker said.

Children from families whose income is at or below an announced level are eligible for free or reduced price meals. Also, families not meeting these criteria, but with other unusual expenses due to high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 percent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size changes, the family should file a new application. Such changes may make children eligible for the program or for additional benefits. No child will be discriminated against because of race, color or natural origin.

Maureen Fleener, director of the hot lunch program, said lunches will be served at the schools in the district beginning Aug. 21. Children's meals will be 50 cents, adults 45 cents and reduced meals 20 cents.

Minidoka County gets a comprehensive land use plan

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The Minidoka County Commissioners passed a resolution adopting a comprehensive land use plan Monday afternoon.

The final version is a more stringent version of the proposed plan drafted and sent to them two years ago by the county planning commission. Despite the inclusion of several strict standards — including a minimum lot size requirement — the final approval came without much discussion.

Two summers ago, sharp objections were voiced during the four public hearings.

Monday's vote was anti-climatic, following two sparsely attended public hearings in July and August before the planning commission and the commissioners, respectively.

Key changes in the plan approved and the original draft included:

- Settling a one- and two-acre minimum lot size when agricultural land is developed into residential housing. The former standard applies to land with low subwater levels and the latter regulation applies to land with a high water table. The original plan had no minimum requirement.
- Defining a tract of land in agricultural areas as 40 acres or less. The original had no definition.
- Requiring platting anytime a tract of land is divided five times in a density of more than one dwelling for five acres or the parcels are closer than 500 feet. The land owner must get a subdivision plat before a fifth home can be built. No previous requirement had been included.

Commission Chairman Lyle Barton said he was glad the plan had taken so long to finish because it seemed like the compromises worked out were beneficial to more county residents.

Barton said the adoption of the resolution Monday clears the way for work to be finalized on Minidoka County's zoning and subdivision ordinances.

He said it will probably be a couple of months before they are drafted and presented to the commissioners by their former legal counsel, Rupert lawyer Robert Nielson, who was retained to complete work he had begun on the land use plan and the ordinances.

The two-year delay in adopting the land use plan resulted when Nielson had advised them the above changes would have to be included or the plan might be declared if challenged in court. However, Nielson was slow in getting the revisions to them after they cut his position.

The county has been without a land use plan since March when it lost a second court battle on the old county land use plan. A Cassia County magistrate judge ruled the plan was illegal because it had not been printed in full in local newspapers after adoption.

Democrats to meet

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Democratic Central Committee will meet Wednesday at 8 p.m. in their county headquarters on the ground floor level of the Rogerson Hotel. The public is invited to attend.

TWIN FALLS REPUBLICANS

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Republicans from both Legislative Districts 24 and 25 will meet Thursday at 8 p.m. in the county Judicial Building in Twin Falls. The public is invited.

Show to include variety of rocks

BELLEVUE — The Wood River rock and gem show will take place Saturday and Sunday at the Hatley Armory.

The show, which is sponsored by the Wood River Gem and Mineral Society, will open the doors to exhibits from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Admission is 50-cents for adults and 25-cents for children.

In the valley

Immunization lesson

JEROME — Representatives from Magic Valley school districts will be briefed on Idaho's new immunization program today at 1:30 p.m.

Dr. Wayne Carte of the regional health department and Arlyn Bodily, Valley school superintendent, will explain details of paperwork required under the new mandatory immunization program for Idaho school children beginning this fall.

Today's meeting will be held at Jerome High School on East Main Street.

Under the mandatory immunization program enacted by the Idaho legislature last spring all public school students must be immunized against certain diseases. This year only new enrollees require immunization but by autumn of 1979 all students must be immunized.

School districts just received word in an August 11 letter that certain elements of the new immunization law have been changed. Percy Christensen, Jerome school superintendent, said the changes are the result of protest by school officials.

One major revision in the law is a change in penalties. In the original law a child who didn't get the required immunization would have been expelled. The state Health and Welfare Department now says the student's parents will be contacted and asked why the child wasn't immunized. Further action will be determined by the school board.

NBA players coming

KETCHUM — The Nike Pro Club, comprising 16 players from the National Basketball Association, will be in Ketchum Thursday, but the all-star gathering won't be shooting hoops.

The NBA players and their wives will be taking on a local team of men and women in a benefit slow-pitch softball game to raise money for the Ketchum Park Fund.

The game will begin at 6:30 p.m. at Atkinson's Park, with warm-up and batting practice at 6 p.m. for what has to be the tallest softball team in the West.

If basketball all-stars like Elvin Hayes, Spencer Haywood and Calvin Murphy can hit homers as easily as 15-foot jumps, it ought to be quite a game.

The 16 NBA stars, who are all player reps for the Nike sneaker and running shoe company, will be vacationing for the week in the Ketchum/Sun Valley area, according to Ketchum city administrator Jim Jaquet.

Jaquet said Nike officials contacted the city to set up a benefit game with some men and women players from Ketchum's A League softball team.

In addition to Hayes, Haywood and Murphy, the other pros scheduled to play are Alvin Adams, Austin Carr, John Drew, George Gervin, Lionel Hollins, Leonard Robinson, Phil Smith, Gus Williams, Paul Westphal, Rudy Tomjanovich, Phil Chenier, Mychal Thompson and Michael "Campy" Russell.

SIRRA board sets deadline for election petition drive

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

GOODING — This month will be the deadline for collecting signatures to place a question before Magic Valley voters in November on whether Twin Falls and Blaine counties should join the Southern Idaho Regional Airport Authority.

Meeting in Gooding Monday night, SIRRA's board of directors agreed to try to have petitions collected by Aug. 31.

In other action the board adopted a $57,000 budget for next year.

The SIRRA petitions are being circulated in seven counties to get the regional airport question on the November general election ballot.

SIRRA's members are Gooding, Lincoln, Jerome, Minidoka and Cassia counties. If either of the two non-members, Twin Falls and Blaine counties agree to join, SIRRA leaders believe they can proceed with plans to build a regional airport in the Magic Valley.

"Five percent of the registered voters in each county must sign the petitions to get the question on the ballot. Once on the ballot, the question of whether Twin Falls and Blaine counties should join SIRRA must be approved by a majority of those voting in each county. The same approval must come from the five counties already in the authority.

C. Bruce Young, SIRRA administrator, said the petition drive to date has collected 230 of the necessary 500 signatures in Jerome County, 150 of 400 in Gooding County, 100 of 150 in Lincoln County, 250 of 600 in Minidoka County, and 250 of 600 in Cassia County.

Young and SIRRA board members were not sure how many signatures have been collected in Blaine and Twin Falls counties. SIRRA attorney Pete Snow said Blaine County signatures to date appear to be only 30 short of the necessary 400. In Twin Falls county 1,200 signatures are needed. Dr. James Taylor, who is in charge of the Twin Falls County drive, was out of town.

The board adopted a $37,125 budget for fiscal year 1978. The regional airport authority will need to ask its five county member only for $19,700 since the remaining amount is already on hand.

The 1977 operating budget was $71,900. The difference, Snow said, was because $6,000 was budgeted but not spent for an executive director, who was never hired, and because the master plan has already been paid for. The biggest expenses were the upcoming election and legal expenses at $15,000 each. Young's salary is $8,250, a $1,000 raise over the previous year.

The board chose not to budget any money to hire a financial consulting firm. It rejected an offer by Loeb, Rhodes, Hornblower and Co., a San Francisco financial firm with an office in Twin Falls, to provide financial advice for $4,500 fee for the next four years. The consensus of the board was the offer was too premature and that SIRRA could do its own financial calculations for the time being.

Kimberly school district reduces deficit

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly School District is in good financial condition and has "whittled away" at a general fund deficit inherited from a previous administrator, auditors say.

"If you can do the same for the next five or six years, you'll be in good shape," Tom Jones, of Carrico, Oakley and Jones, the Gooding accounting firm which did the audit, told the district's trustees last week.

Jones said the books of school district No. 414 are in order, and he lauded a $19,000 gain on the district's deficit in the face of an unexpected drop in enrollment.

Vernan Exner, Kimberly superintendent of schools, was able to cut corners in district expenditures during the preceding school year after high school enrollment failed to meet the figures on which he had based his budget, according to Dr. J. Hamilton Smith, school board chairman.

Smith said Exner managed to squeeze in $8,000 under budget on plant operation costs and cut corners on textbooks and insurance to knock the general fund budget down to $61,900, a gain of 19,400.

Smith said the school district inherited the fund deficit several years ago after a previous school board and superintendent borrowed money to make needed improvements on parking facilities, fences and other items in the district.

Smith said reductions in enrollment are plaguing many small school districts and make budget planning difficult until children have actually entered school in the fall.

In Kimberly, elementary school enrollment has been going up as high school enrollment has been on the decline, according to the board.

As enrollment drops, so do funds available from the state of Idaho for materials, salaries and other expenses.

In spite of sliding high school enrollment, however, Smith said, "We are making good progress" in reducing the deficit.

In other business, the board voted to accept the hiring of two new teachers and to institute a management by objectives program in its administration.

The new program will include the school principals in the district and Exner. Each principal will outline goals he wants to reach during the school year and will discuss them with Exner both before and after the year. Each will work with Exner to evaluate the goals at year's end.

Twin Falls schools comply with privacy act

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls School District Superintendent Dr. James D. Sawin announced Monday the district is complying with the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974.

The federal legislation was passed by Congress to assure the privacy rights of parents and students pertaining to information contained in students' school records,

Dr. Sawin stated that parents of children attending the Twin Falls public schools need only contact the principal of the school in which their child is enrolled if they wish to review the content of their child's records.

Parents are entitled to have access to their child's records until the student reaches the age of 18, at which time the student has the right to deny or grant access to his or her records.

Dr. Sawin noted the school district releases student permanent record files where authorized by law without the consent of parents and/or students. Examples of releases are to other school officials when a student intends to transfer, the necessary officials in connection with a college student's application for financial aid, or to proper persons in a health or safety emergency. Otherwise, no student's school records will be released without the signed written consent of the parent or eligible student on file in the school offices.

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

True, all hearing problems are not alike... and some cannot be helped by a hearing aid. But audiologists report that many can. So, send for this free model now, and wear it in the privacy of your own home. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 2755, Beltone Electronics Corp., 4201 W. Victoria, Chicago, Ill. 60646.

Courtship's over; Walton says Warriors

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Bill Walton, spinning possibly more money from New York, has selected the Golden State Warriors as the NBA team of his future because he expects more compassion from the coach, owner and fans in the Bay Area.

The next step will be for the Portland Trail Blazers to effect the trade, and Harry Glickman, Blazer general manager, said "Golden State has players we're interested in, but no centers we want."

However, he said, "We'll have to go out and acquire a center," indicating the Blazers may move quickly to make the trade with Golden State for Walton.

The Blazers are negotiating with Myles Thompson, the 6-10 All-American out of Minnesota, but Glickman said "at the moment those talks are in limbo, and our intent, before the Walton matter, was to use him primarily as a forward."

Thompson's agent, Irwin Weiner of New York, has been holding out for more money for the Minnesota star.

Glickman and Warriors' General Manager Scotty Stirling began talks

Monday concerning the Walton trade.

"If finances were a problem, Bill wouldn't have chosen Golden State," said Scott. "But I think we've said before that money isn't the issue—Bill's health is."

Walton asked to be traded when he became disenchanted with Blazer medical practices and in the treatment of his broken left foot. He had taken a pain-killing shot to offset pain in the foot from an injury which sidelined him for the final 22 games of the regular season. He broke the foot in the second game of the quarterfinals of the NBA playoffs against Seattle, and he has been on crutches since.

Walton's representatives, Scott and attorney John Bassett, have said Walton would not be able to play basketball until sometime after the first of the year, missing at least half the season if not all the season.

Walton's foot was placed in a cast again last Friday.

David "Sonny" Werblin, president of Madison Square Garden told a New York TV interviewer Sunday he expected Walton to sign with the Knicks, but he also said the 6-11 center probably would not be able to play until March.

Werblin also had said he thought the Knicks were going to be Walton's choice, and as Scott said, "were it a matter of money, the Knicks would have gotten Bill. We were very impressed by the people from New York and Philadelphia and with the sincerity and firmness with which they treated us."

"It came down to Bill's familiarity with the Bay Area and the tremendous and very positive influence by Warrior Coach Al Attles and team owner Franklin Mieuli as people," said Bassett.

"Certain places are right for certain people," added Scott. "Golden State is right for Bill Walton. Golden State has met all the concerns Bill had, and his decision was based, in part, on the hopes that Walton would receive the same fan support he got in Portland."

As for Golden State's medical philosophers in treatment of injured players, Scott said, "It's not like you think. Golden State players have asked for shots and the team has refused to give them."

Jerome softballers earn area crown

IDAHO FALLS — The Jerome LDS Second Ward softball team grabbed the Area All-Church softball title last weekend for the second time in three years with a 7-5 victory over the Idaho Falls Seventh Ward team.

The Jerome squad won a four team round robin Thursday to move into the championship finals Friday and Saturday.

In the final game, Jerome tied with Idaho Falls in the first inning but came back after that to stay ahead until the final inning.

They had a closer call in the semi-final match against the St. Anthony Fourth Ward. In that game, it took a seventh inning three-run round-trip blast by Jerry Callen to move the Jerome team in front for the win and a shot at the championship.

Neither Idaho Falls or St. Anthony had been beaten this year.

Jerome captured the same crown last year and earned the runner-up spot the year before. In three years of play, Jerome holds a 61-4 record.

Twenty teams from Idaho, Montana, Oregon and northern Utah played for the top spot. A total of 1600 teams were involved in local and regional play for berths in the Idaho Falls tournament.

The Parma Ward won the championship in the junior division.

No change noticed in paralyzed player

CASTRO VALLEY, Calif. (UPI) — New England Patriots wide-receiver Darryl Stingley lay helplessly at Eden Hospital Monday and doctors said only time will tell whether he can resume the use of muscles paralyzed in a collision on the field in a weekend game against the Oakland Raiders.

A hospital bulletin said there has been "little change in the condition of paralysis since the time of the injury."

The 26-year-old athlete went down and lay motionless on the field for more than five minutes when Raider safety back Jack Tatum hit him as Stingley dove for a pass in the second quarter. When he arrived at the hospital, doctors diagnosed his injury as a fracture and dislocation of the vertebrae in his neck.

"He spent a restless night and remains in good general condition in the intensive care unit," the Monday report said.

But the doctors added that his condition had not improved from Sunday when he was able only to move his right arm slightly.

"He has sensation to a limited degree in the entire body," the doctors said. There was "no further prognosis" about his eventual recovery from the paralysis.

Dr. Manard Pont, a neurologist who performed a one-hour operation on the veteran Patriot receiver early Sunday, planned no further procedures pending observation of Stingley's recovery from the first surgery which corrected the dislocated vertebrae and put his neck in traction.

Stingley's wife, Tina, was at his bedside, and his visitors included Raiders head coach John Madden and a number of Oakland players.

The hospital said Stingley was awake and alert.

Malavasi silent on firing

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — If Ray Malavasi, the new Los Angeles Rams' head coach, had any clue about the shocking firing of George Allen by owner Carroll Rosenbloom, he wasn't saying Monday.

But there was speculation the latest Allen controversy with a National Football League owner boiled down to an old-fashioned personality conflict between two of the league's most strong-willed individuals — Rosenbloom and Allen — and the principal player involved was All-Pro linebacker Isiah Robertson.

"I have no idea why George was fired," Malavasi said Monday before supervising his first practice session as head coach. "I honestly can't answer the question why."

Robertson, the outspoken eight-year veteran who was at odds with some of his teammates because of things he said about them in an off-season magazine article, lost his starting job at the Fullerton training camp to second-year pro Bob Bruzdzinski after walking out of camp July 25 for 146 days. He played but did not start in the Rams' two exhibition losses — 14-7 loss to New England Aug. 6 and 17-0 to San Diego Saturday night.

The conjecture was that Allen repeatedly asked Rosenbloom to trade Robertson but the 72-year-old Ram owner declined. Although Robertson is having contract problems with the Rams, he remains one of Rosenbloom's favorite players because of his talent and candor.

"Isiah Robertson will start Thursday night at Seattle," Malavasi said. "I believe in starting the same players who were the same starters at the end of the previous season."

At the same time, there was speculation Allen did not endear himself to General Manager Don Klosterman, who has been working for Rosenbloom since 1970, when Allen convinced Rosenbloom to trade for punt return specialist Eddie Brown in a deal that sent Donnie Hickman, Jeff Williams and two draft choices to Washington, Allen's old team.

Klosterman reportedly was not in favor of the trade and assertedly pointed out to Rosenbloom that Allen had been hired as coach only and had promised to keep out of the front office.

Allen, 56, was sequestered at his home in Palos Verdes, Calif. He was the third head coach to go in Rosenbloom's seven years as the Ram owner. Tommy Prothro was fired after a 6-7-1 season in 1972 and Chuck Knox left, with Rosenbloom's blessing, after coaching the Rams to five straight NFC West titles but failing to get the club to the Super Bowl.

"I think he made a mistake and I told him that," Allen said. "I told him I had to offer what the Rams needed. But he's the owner and he makes the decisions. I felt I did everything I could. I can live with myself."

Viewers opt for football

RADNOR, Pa. (UPI) — Given the choice between the crack of the bat, the thwack off the backboards or the thump of toe against piggskin, most armchair sportsmen will pick football, according to a survey in the current issue of TV Guide.

The poll of 1,000 people also revealed that Howard Cosell was the best-liked sportscaster of 20 percent of those surveyed but for 39 percent he was the least liked.

The poll, conducted by Opinion Research Corp., found that while most people were satisfied with the amount of sport on television, the thing they hated most were the commercials, particularly when extra time-outs were called to cater for them.

Pro football was the biggest draw on television, with 50 percent of those polled preferring it. College football, 25 percent, followed, then came baseball, 49 percent; college basketball, 43 percent, and pro basketball, 41 percent. Hockey polled 13 percent of the vote, while tennis rated 15 percent.

Finishing at the bottom was pro track and field which finished behind boxing, golf, auto racing, soccer, bowling, college track and field, skiing, swimming and pro wrestling in that order.

Last year, TV Guide reported, the three networks produced 1,175 hours of sport in 370 separate events, which attracted nearly five billion viewers.

One of the least viewed sports — golf — captured 123 hours of viewing time, largely because it's affluent audience was the fifth-ranked target for advertisers, who paid an average $20,100 fee for a 30-second spot.

Top-ranked in advertising revenue were the three most popular sports, with pro football commanding up to $62,000 for a one-shot 30-second spot.

The poll showed most fans prefer the creature comforts of home to watch their favorite game, except for baseball fans who prefer visiting the bullpark. The poll also found viewers generally are satisfied with the amount of slow motion, instant replay, split-screen and screened statistics that they are getting.

But they want more officials wired for sound, and they want more shots of halftime activities, including closeups of cheerleaders.

Most of those polled refused to take a stand on sportscasters, especially in the least liked category, but in the most liked section, Frank Gifford, Don Meredith and Joe Garagiola ranked behind Cosell.

Some regional preferences showed up: Pro football was a heavy favorite in the West and South; baseball was favored in the East and South; college basketball was a Midwest favorite and pro basketball was favored in the West.

Doctors test Archibald's eye

NEW YORK (UPI) — Boston Celtics guard Nate Archibald had his eyes examined Monday to determine the extent of an injury suffered Saturday in a summer basketball league game.

Doctors at Lenox Hill Hospital Sunday diagnosed the injury as a corneal abrasion of the right eye but told Archibald to return today for further tests.

If the cornea is scarred, Archibald's vision could be impaired, sources said.

"All I know is it hurts," said Archibald, who was injured in the first few minutes of play in the Bob Douglas League game at Brandeis High School.

"They never tell you how bad it is. Only what to do for it," said Archibald, who is wearing a white patch to keep his eye from moving. Archibald's injuries have kept him on the bench for most of his last two seasons in the NBA.

He was sidelined with the Buffalo Braves all of last season with a torn Achilles tendon. He missed all but 34 games in 1976-77 with the New York Nets because of a broken bone in his foot. And a torn Achilles tendon kept him out of 47 games in 1975-74 when he played for Kansas City.

Valley swimmers set records.

PAYETTE — Three Magic Valley Swim Team members set five new state records during the Idaho State Swim Meet here last weekend.

Tim Shaub set records in the 50 and 100 yard backstroke in the 9-10 boys division; Seneca Jones set a new state record in the girls 100-yard freestyle and Sherry Stalley set a new record in the girls 50-yard butterfly.

The Beta Y.M.C.A. team grabbed first place honors in the event and

Magic Valley club took third behind the Boise team and Coeur d'Alene.

Tim Shaub earned high point honors in the 9-10 boys division while Miss Stalley earned the same honors in the girls 11-12 division.

The Payette meet signaled the end of the season for the team which will take two or three weeks off and then begin practice again for the indoor season which begins in October.

Volleyball tryouts set Thursday

TWIN FALLS — Tryouts for the Twin Falls High School women's volleyball junior varsity and varsity teams will be held Thursday beginning at 10 a.m.

According to Coach Jim Ferguson, any girl in the 10th, 11th, or 12th grade is eligible to try out.

Those wishing to attend the tryout should have a physical and an insurance form or a parental consent form, Ferguson said. Those forms are available at the athletic director's office at the high school.

Georgia coach sheds hair and wishbone

ATLANTA (UPI) — You may not recognize Pepper Rodgers' Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets this fall. But, then, you may not recognize Pepper Rodgers either.

The Yellow Jackets have abandoned their wishbone offense. They have gone to the "I" and plan to make the forward pass an integral part of their offense. Now, that's really a change when "you recall" they averaged only two completions per game last year.

Rodgers' personal change is just as drastic. The previously flamboyant coach has switched to short hair, three-piece suits and a mustache.

Rodgers said he moved to the "I" because six years of wishbone is long enough. Anyway, I got tired of the wishbone when I kept finding my quarterback stuck with the ball.

Credit the personal change to Rodgers' wife. "She knows style, so when she says short hair is back in,

that's good enough for me."

Rodgers has had three winning teams in his four years at Georgia Tech, but the best of those was 7-4 and he has reason to believe that 1978 might be a bowl year.

"We've got the best team we've had," Rodgers says of a squad with 16 starters included among 30 returning lettermen. "Physically, we're certainly better, but before you start translating that into wins and losses remember that other teams may be better too."

Georgia Tech will have an experienced offensive line averaging about 255 from tackle to tackle. But Rodgers points out that coming off the wishbone means that line "has to learn to pass block."

Gary Hardie was a wishbone quarterback who spent the spring playing baseball, so Rodgers says sophomore Ted Peoples will be No. 1 at the start of preseason "and Hardie will have to beat him out."

Georgia Tech appears set at running back Eddie Lee Ivery, a 210-pound senior, set a school record last fall when he rushed for 900 yards, averaging nearly six yards per carry. And Rodney Lee, 205-pound junior, didn't start playing regularly until near midseason but still wound up with 780 yards.

How about the Tech defense? "I think we'll be quicker on defense," said Rodgers. "In fact, we have a chance to have the best defensive team Tech's had in four or five years."

Mind you now, Rodgers says that despite the loss of second-team All America linebacker Lactus Sanford and three starters from the defensive front.

"We've got some quality people playing defense," said Rodgers. "Especially Mackel Harris (who has been moved from linebacker to end).

Harris is an exciting defensive player, one who always seems to be in on every tackle."

Tech will have 275-pound Roy Simmons anchoring the defensive line at nose guard and he'll be flanked by Mike Blanton and Larry Reese who both top 250.

Tech's biggest defensive improvement over last season, when the Yellow Jackets went 6-5, should be in the secondary. Last year, Tech had no returning starters among its defensive backs. This time, all four starters return.

Georgia Tech has made three changes in its schedule this fall, giving up Clemson, Tennessee and Navy and adding California, The Citadel, and Florida. Seven of Tech's 11 games are at home with the last of those against defending national champion Notre Dame which terrorized the Yellow Jackets last season at South Bend, 69-14.

"Some schedule," grumbled Rodgers. "We end our '78 home stand against Notre Dame and open the '79 one against Alabama."

Pepper Rodgers has been under fire from some of the alumni, the most vehement remaining anonymous, but insists he's ignoring those attacks.

"While I'm coach at Georgia Tech, I'll coach my way," he said. "The day the school decides it doesn't want me as coach anymore, I'll go out and get another job. And, I'll tell you this: it won't be coaching."

"I'm really just trying to support the Games," he said. "I believe in the whole concept. Maybe if it was better publicized, we'd have a better and stronger field."

The Games Wednesday through Sunday will utilize primarily the facilities of Syracuse University. They are open to any amateur athlete who is a U.S. citizen and resident of the state. Out-of-state athletes attending school in New York also are eligible.

Most events will be free of charge to the public, with a top ticket price of $2 being levied on the basketball, soccer and boxing finals.

Beginning risky for NY games

United Press International
The Empire State Games, a bold experiment in intrastate amateur athletic competition, are set to open in Syracuse, N.Y., Wednesday, preceded by little publicity and faced with an uncertain future.

The 36-sport competition, patterned after the Olympic Games, is expected to draw close to 5,000 competitors from across the state, but organizers admit that its success or failure could well determine what direction, if any, future such gatherings will take.

Officials had hoped to spark enough statewide interest in the Games to garner a television package that would have broadcast highlights nightly. But not having enough sponsors willing to take a gamble on an untested project put an end to that dream.

"We just couldn't get the sponsors willing to take a chance," organizer Bob Arnold said. "Maybe we'll have better luck in the future if the Games go well this time."

Among those attempting to make the Games a success are world class athletes Al Oerter of West Islip, N.Y., who will be entered in the discus, and Dick Buerkle of Rochester, N.Y., who will run in a special invitational mile.

Oerter, who dominated the discus between 1956 and 1968 by winning the Olympic gold medal four times, is, at the age of 41, attempting a comeback.

So far, his training has brought him practice throws of well over 210 feet. And while he's still shy of the 235-foot, 6-inch world record of d by Mac Wilkins of the United States, he still threw 197-2, to capture the event in the recently concluded National Sports Festival held in Colorado.

Oerter, while admitting the Empire Games will probably offer him little in the way of competition, said he was making an appearance in the hopes of boosting the project.

Fatigue, jellyfish hamper swimmers

ABOARD THE MISS J.C. (UPI) — Diana Nyad began hallucinating and shivering uncontrollably halfway through her 130-mile Cuba-to-Florida swim Monday night and her support team asked the Navy to put a rescue helicopter on standby.

Ken Gunderson, a leader of the 23-year-old marathon swimmer's support team at Key West, confirmed he had requested the Navy to ready a helicopter but would only say that "We've got some problems out there. There's a chance I might have to use it to protect our interests."

The Navy said Gunderson had been talking to a base doctor, and there was an unfettered report that Miss Nyad's tongue was so badly swollen she could not withdraw it into her mouth.

The duty officer at Boca Chica Naval Air Station in the Keys confirmed that a medical helicopter was standing by. He said it could reach the area where Miss Nyad was believed to be in half an hour or less.

Earlier, observer Dan Levin, who sat above Miss Nyad's motorized shark cage Tuesday evening, reported her tongue "swollen to twice its normal size. Her hands look like claws — white and deeply furrowed from the salt water. She keeps running into the cage."

Despite the massive support effort surrounding her swim, it was reported that there was no doctor in the team.

The waters of the Florida Straits were measured at a seemingly warm 84 degrees, but that is still 15 degrees below body temperature and Miss Nyad's body was losing the fight to maintain its normal temperature after more than a day's immersion, Levin said.

At 6 p.m. EDT, Levin said she looked up and said: "Oh my God, I'm not even a third of the way and I'm losing my strength."

Actually Miss Nyad was about halfway through her journey, but apparently didn't know it. She was 60 miles south southwest of the Sandy Key Light that stands just off Key West.

Levin said as sunset fell over the choppy water, Miss Nyad was hallucinating, throwing tantrums and kicking erratically.

Miss Nyad's mother, Louise Nyad, was waiting at Key West and a spokesman for the group said she has already signed an authorization for emergency surgery, should that become necessary. The spokesman would not elaborate.

At 2 p.m. EDT Monday, Miss Nyad had completed her first 24 hours in the water and had reached a point just seven miles short of the halfway mark. Her progress was marked at 5.1 knots an hour on a northeast bearing. But the distance left to swim is hard to measure exactly because the wind pushes the cage and the Gulf Stream carries it northeastward.

Trainer Wendy Lawrence reported the boat leading the way for the swim was about 10 to 15 degrees off course "more westerly than originally planned" because of the 6 to 6-foot seas. They turned so that Miss Nyad could swim more between the swells than hitting them head on.

"When we come directly into the waves they throw her back," Miss Lawrence said.

"I could never even imagine it would be this hard," Miss Nyad told another trainer, Margie Carroll, at mid-afternoon.

Meanwhile, Former nun Stella Taylor prayed for herself and fellow marathon swimmer Diana Nyad and then slipped into the Atlantic to begin her attempt to swim more than 100 miles from Bimini to Florida — without a shark cage.

Miss Taylor, 48, said a rosary for Miss Nyad and then said the rosary twice for herself before she began her swim 10 miles south of North Bimini. She hoped to reach the United States before Tuesday evening.

By 3 p.m. Monday, she was 18 miles off Gun Cay, and planned to swim across the Gulf Stream until reaching the Florida coast.

During the hours of darkness — considered the most dangerous period for possible shark attacks — she relied on a pair of aides riding on surfboards and prepared to dive into the water and come to her assistance if sharks appeared.

"I'm okay. I'm going to do it," she said as she entered waters calmer than those Miss Nyad was struggling through in the Florida Straits. But a weather forecast said there was a good chance the waters and winds will pick up before Miss Taylor finished her swim.

Accompanying her on the large surfboards were Fort Lauderdale Beach Patrolmen Eric Jersted and Tony Bazant.

"If any sharks come around the men will chase them away," Taylor said, "but no killing them."

Taylor wore a bathing suit with a tee-shirt over it, goggles and a bathing cap. She was reported to be in good spirits, often chatting with Jersted and Bazant.

Miss Taylor said she had "my Bible with me" and planned to pray during the first hours of the swim, but the husky, blonde, blue-eyed former English nun said she feared she would be unable to remember her prayers after 20 hours of swimming.

She said she was near her final vows in a Roman Catholic convent in England before she came to the United States in the early 1960s.

Michigan youth wins Box Derby

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Gregory Cardinal was dwarfed by the trophy Division of the 41st All-American Soap Box Derby, but the eighth grader from Flynt, Mich., didn't mind it.

Cardinal, 13, posted an elapsed time of :27.61 in his gravely-powered car down the steep 954-foot Derby Downs track Saturday to win the trophy, a $3,000 scholarship and a kit for a "street-style" model car.

"I didn't even think I had a chance," said Cardinal, who has competed in the event three years but made it to the finals only this time.

"You have to be an extremely good driver and you have to concentrate."

Leo, get to work; Pisces, stand firm; Aries, make change

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, AUG. 15, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Except in the morning when a surprise benefit can be yours, this is no day to do anything that could cause disapproval by anyone in a position of authority. Follow rules that apply to you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A change of attitude in career matters can be beneficial at this time. Find the right appliances to make your work more profitable.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Those new projects you have been studying are now ready to be put in motion, so get an early start. Be careful in handling money.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't neglect to handle important financial obligations early in the day. Use tact with your mate who is apt to be in an irate mood.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be more considerate of associates and you automatically get good results. Make a sensible plan for the future.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get right down to handling all those tasks that await your attention and don't wait for others to help you. Use more common sense.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Take steps to improve your financial position. A charming person could be helpful to you now. Take no risks in motion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Keep poised at home where there are tensions. Anger on your part would only stir things up more. Be logical.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find the right way to alleviate tensions between yourself and others you come in contact with. Make plans for the days ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you put in economy measures now, you can soon build a reserve and have greater abundance in the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Quietly figure out a way to relieve tensions around you without causing any further rickus. Keep busy and you get ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You now have tasks to handle so don't waste time with less important matters. Discuss the future with associates.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't let a person berate you for some error he thinks you have committed, which you have not. Be more thoughtful of mate.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... ...he or she will do well in solving difficult problems, so be sure to provide a comprehensive education that will bring out this quality to a greater extent. Be sure to give praise when due in order to satisfy the ego and add to the success.

Snow White modeled after real woman

When you make a circle with your thumb and forefinger, you mean everything's all right. It's different in Japan. The sign means you're talking about money. And when you so sign in France, you're saying something's worthless. Don't even want to talk about what it signifies in Greece. Am I to be afraid?

Question arises as to whether Walt Disney's Snow White was modeled after a real girl. That she was, Marge Becker was the young lady. She later became Marge Champion of the Marge and Gower Champion dance team.
