

Is Henry Jackson crowning an energy czar?

By LEONARD CURRY
Washington Star

WASHINGTON—Sen. Henry M. Jackson and the head of his 1972 presidential campaign—drafted legislation at Jackson's home here that would make the former aide an "energy czar" in four northwestern states, according to conservationists and industry sources.

Jackson, a Washington Democrat, and Sterling Monro denied through spokesmen that anything improper was involved in the shirt-sleeves session in which they designed guidelines for the bill the senator introduced two weeks ago.

Monro is now administrator of the Bonneville Power Administration. He previously had served for 22 years as Jackson's top Senate aide and headed Jackson's ill-fated campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1974. BPA is a federal agency that controls electric power production and distribution in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and parts of Montana.

Terry R. Lash of the Natural Resources Defense Council described the bill-writing session as "cozy." If the bill is enacted into law, Lash said, it would set a precedent that could spawn nuclear power plants and strong centralized energy directors in other regions of the country.

Jackson energy aide Joel Merkel said the bill will probably be revised because of the "vague" wording that potentially creates broad new powers for Monro. Besides increasing the BPA administrator's authority, it offers the potential of benefits for the aluminum industry, a major employer in the region. Packaging industry sources said these benefits include low-interest government-backed loans and ending the threat of an energy curback the aluminum companies expected in the mid-1980s. The aluminum companies in the Northwest account for 30 percent of the nation's output. They consume about one-third of all electricity generated by BPA.

Monro "protested at the draft session that the bill was too vague and gave him too much authority," Monro's BPA assistant, Earl Gjeldre, said. "He isn't worried about himself but about possible abuses in the future." Monro could not be reached for comment.

The bill-drafting was at Jackson's home in Spring Valley here the weekend of Aug. 12-14. Monro and two assistants flew in from Portland, Ore., for the session. Jackson introduced the bill at a news conference Aug. 14 and completed Senate hearings 11 days later. Hearings are scheduled in the House next week.

Washington State Sen. Earl Gjeldre is pushing it through the Legislature during a period when most people are on vacation, Lash said. He complained that Jackson's Energy Committee conducted hearings so soon after the bill was introduced that witnesses had little time to prepare adequate testimony.

Gjeldre and Merkel said the bill has been under widespread debate in the Northwest for two years and extensive hearings were conducted in the region last spring.

But Lash said the new bill is "dramatically different" from the one presented in Oregon and Washington. Nancy Oster of the Washington State Public Interest Research Group said the bill would "create a federal energy czar in the Northwest. . . . It would be a very powerful job."

Walter Mitchell checks leaking pipes two hours before canal break

Break thwarts King Hill canal for the sixth time this year

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

BLISS—Water from the King Hill Irrigation District canal spouted 30 feet in the air Friday afternoon when a slip joint in a 78-inch pipeline separated.

The canal failure was the sixth setback since early August for nearly 10,000 farmers who water about 10,000 acres of crop land with water from the canal.

The soft hillside, as it slips out from under their canal into the Snake River at the rate of about three inches a day, is causing the emergency pipeline to leak at several points along its length. Further leakage threatens to curtail the remainder of the irrigation season.

Although the irrigation district literally doesn't have a leg to stand on, it faces legal trouble from yet another quarter.

The Bureau of Land Management, across whose land the canal easement lies, has filed an open trespass complaint against the irrigators for damages to federal land caused by leakage and repair work.

A BLM official says the agency will force the farmers to restore the land outside the 50-foot easement to its previous condition after repair work ends.

The pipeline broke about 4 p.m. Friday just where maintenance man Walker Mitchell of Glens Ferry expected it to. River water had been flowing to irrigators in the district only since Tuesday after Mitchell and others finished repairing the previous break.

Mitchell immediately crossed the river via the bridge which carries the pipeline and shut off the system.

He was stationed at the sight to monitor several leaks caused by earth movements under the pipeline. "As nearly five million tons of earth and rock slide toward this river, the emergency pipeline, installed when the canal first broke, is gradually being pulled apart. Cracks in the hillside have widened about six feet since Aug. 2."

In addition, the bridge which supports the pipeline where it crosses the river is being bent like a bow as the hillside pushes it into the river.

Stress on the pipe has caused several leaks, one of which finally broke open Friday when the hillside pulled a slip joint apart.

Damages have not been estimated, but the canal company has reportedly spent all its reserve funds making repairs to the system and engineers have estimated $2 to $3 million may be needed to restore operation of the system for the 1979 irrigation season. Workmen will continue attempts to repair the system in an effort to continue water delivery to farmers until about Oct. 12.

James Russell of Glens Ferry, chairman of the board of the Irrigation district, said all farmers on the tract have suffered damage to their crops as a result of canal shut-downs. He said sugar beet farmers stand to suffer a severe loss if they cannot make two more irrigations before the season ends. The growers have about 1,200 acres of beets which may be too dry to harvest.

Beet growers on the tract have made arrangements to purchase extra water from the Black Mesa project, a pumping project near Glens Ferry. If their canal system cannot be operated until season's end, Russell said.

He said the cost of the water is prohibitive and will bite deeply into annual profits of the farmers involved.

In addition to naturally occurring troubles, the Bureau of Land Management will probably seek reparations for damages to BLM lands near the canal right of way, according to Michael Ford, BLM really specialist.

He said his agency is concerned about heavy erosion damage to the hillside from canal leakage. "We have had an open-trespass against them since Aug. 2," Ford explained. "They will have to restore that land when they are done."

Ford said other agencies are concerned about damage to the river and wildlife if the slide area slips into the river.

He said siltation is already occurring on the river bottom and gets worse with each leak. Water from the leaks is also helping undermine the hillside and hastening the slippage, he said.

Ford did not enumerate other action the BLM might take against the district.

Idaho breeder reactor receives Carter's OK

IDAHO FALLS (UPI)—Senator James McClure said Friday President Carter has agreed for the first time to go ahead with construction of three critical breeder reactors.

McClure said one of the liquid metal fast breeder reactors will be at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory near Idaho Falls. The other two will be located in Hanford, Wash. "These three facilities are considered to be absolutely essential to any aggressive future commitment to the LMFBR option in the United States," McClure said.

Raft River management reassigned

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

MALTA—Management of drilling procedures at the Raft River Geothermal Project will be reassigned, Department of Energy officials in Idaho Falls said Friday afternoon.

The reassignment will relieve EG&G Idaho of the management responsibilities but will continue the contract with that firm for the remainder of the geothermal research and development program in that area.

"This action in no way reflects any loss of confidence on the part of the department in the firm's capabilities of managing the geothermal project," said Richard Blackledge, DOE, Idaho Falls. "We just feel we need someone with a little more expertise in this special area to handle drilling management. This effects only about three workers."

Blackledge said the recent difficulties in which a drill was lost in well No. 5 and the dumping of 167 tons of salt into the well to stabilize the well in the decision.

He said a consultant, Ray Steadham, who has been on the project, is temporarily in charge of the drilling.

Blackledge said to his knowledge the casing on well 5 to seal off the salt and prevent any contamination of the two upper aquifer levels has been completed. He said there is very little drilling yet to be done at Raft River. Well No. 7, the last of the test wells to be drilled, is now nearly completed.

After that time, efforts will be directed toward the operation of the five megawatt geothermal plant which will be served by the four 6,000-foot wells, and development of another plant some 100 miles larger, which will be added at the site.

Blackledge said the project will continue in the coming year with additional drilling and development with at least another several years in the future planned for research and development.

Goal of the project is to determine the supply of moderate geothermal water under the ground in areas such as Malta. "To see if the water at a ground 800 degrees is suitable generating electricity."

EG&G Idaho of Idaho Falls was attempting to recover a 2,000-foot length of broken drill-bit which was lost in well no. 5 in June when it pumped salt, mixed with water, into the well to kill the flow and facilitate recovery of the equipment. Casing of the well was then undertaken as far as the 3,000-foot level to prevent any pollution of the Raft River aquifers. Blackledge said irrigation wells and domestic wells for ranches and farms in the area are largely from the upper level aquifer going down no more than about 1,000 feet while the geothermal water is not encountered until reaching the lower of three aquifers at a much deeper level. Most of the geothermal wells extend to about 6,000 feet.

The senator said he spoke with President Carter for ten minutes Thursday night when the President telephoned him from the Lewiston airport during a brief layover on a flight from Spokane to Boise.

"I received every indication that our understanding involving breeder reactor research and development over the next three years is intact," McClure said at an Idaho Falls news conference.

McClure said the agreement involves "several important and unprecedented elements in our nation's nuclear power program."

He said the understanding involves a compromise whereby the President agrees to accept a fully expanded three-year liquid breeder reactor program with total funding of over $1.5 billion in exchange for a congressional promise to suspend most activity on the Clinch River breeder reactor during that time period.

"Importantly, the President's agreement is in the form of a commitment not to veto an authorization of the full three-year program, nor to veto appropriations for the program in this year's appropriations bill and the bills in the next two years," McClure said.

"Consequently, the President is agreeing to accept the full funding for this program through October of 1980."

The Idaho senator said the three-year program includes several key elements necessary to prepare for a national decision in 1981 on actual construction of a liquid breeder demonstration plant.

He said in the three-year period approximately $150 million will be spent in conceptual work for an improved design for such a demonstration project. He added the base technology program would also be funded by approximately $450 million per year to develop all technical, environmental, licensing, economic, non-proliferation and other information needed to begin the construction phase of an improved liquid breeder reactor by the end of 1981.

"The combination of the design effort and base technology program during the three-year period would insure that the current LMFBR national laboratory and contractor team would remain actively and positively at work on this nation's LMFBR energy options for the future," McClure said.

He added since the Clinch River reactor is only suspended and not terminated, it's possible a decision could be made in 1981 to proceed with the Clinch River reactor at its Tennessee site, incorporating technical advances developed during the three-year period.

"The time has come to end the impasse over the Clinch River Breeder reactor project and to move forward aggressively with a national commitment to develop a viable United States LMFBR technical option for our energy future," McClure said. "I sincerely hope that the many strong supporters with me of the Clinch River breeder reactor and the LMFBR program ultimately will find that this agreement will support the strongest possible U.S. LMFBR program during the next three years."

Evans' committee says it favors Gooding prison

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

GOODING—The Gooding citizens named last June to study possible uses of the former state tuberculosis hospital here favor putting a female prison at the site, despite the fact that Gov. John Evans, who appointed them, has come out against the proposal.

Heads of the two separate committees charged with studying the prison issue both said Friday they will continue their work as scheduled, despite statements this week by both gubernatorial candidates opposing plans to put a prison in Gooding.

Andy James, Gooding attorney who heads the local citizens study committee named by Evans, announced Friday that his group will recommend use of the facility for housing female offenders but that present tenants be permitted to continue use of the facility on a rental basis with the alcohol treatment center occupying the east building, the former Tyler Hall.

He also criticized the governor for reportedly telling Archie Walker of Bliss in Salt Lake City last week that he (Evans) had not "heard a word" from James.

"Either Mr. Walker is in error, or the governor does not know what is going on in his own staff," James said. "The attorney said he 'has a complete record' of all calls and correspondence he has had with Pat Rice, Evans' legislative aide."

"You don't call the governor, you work with his special assistants," James said. The local committee finalized its recommendation Thursday night.

Edith Klein of Boise, chairman of the committee named by the Idaho Legislative Council last spring to study the issue, seemed unconcerned Friday about the comments by both Evans and Allan Larsen, his Republican opponent, against the proposal.

Los Angeles police with batons move in to arrest a demonstrating Iranian students

Iranian students in Los Angeles melee

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — About 200 Iranian students shouting for the downfall of the shah clashed in a bloody melee with Los Angeles police on a main street in the Civic Center area Friday, attracting a midday crowd of thousands.

More than 120 of the students were arrested. At least 20 were bleeding from head injuries after a force of more than 100 officers waded between the Iranians charged into a police cordon line.

Ambulances were summoned into the Broadway area which was closed to traffic for two blocks.

Ella strengthens

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (UPI) — Hurricane Ella slowed down and began strengthening southeast of Cape Hatteras Friday night but forecasters expected the storm to curve northward and spare the Carolinas coast a direct blow.

At 9 p.m. EDT the National Hurricane Center in Miami reported that Ella was centered about 300 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras and moving northwest about 5 mph.

Biggest robbery

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The FBI Friday night arrested two young men and said they would be charged with the biggest bank robbery in Utah history.

Jack Egner, special agent in charge of the Salt Lake FBI office, called a news conference Friday night and announced the arrest of two suspects while sitting behind a pile of bills that represented about half of the $180,000 taken from the Bank of Utah Thursday.

Two kidnap suspects

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Police detained two suspects in the kidnap murder of the son of Mexico's U.S. ambassador, who bled to death after fighting his abductors, police sources said Friday.

The sources also said four paste-on mustaches, a woman's wig and blankets were found in the getaway car used by the kidnapers of 35-year-old Hugo B. Margain Jr., eldest son of Ambassador to Washington Hugo B. Margain.

Indictments issued?

CHEMUNNE, Wyo. (UPI) — A Wyoming grand jury investigating charges of corruption in the arid boom city of Rock Springs was believed to have issued sealed indictments during an afternoon session Friday.

Officials, however, declined to confirm the report. The grand jury's presiding officer — Laraine County District Judge Joseph F. Moler — entered the grand jury room at the close of the panel's session Friday. He emerged five minutes later with two sealed brown envelopes of approximately legal size.

Nicaraguan troops seize city without resistance

MATAGALPA, Nicaragua (UPI) — National Guard troops, advancing behind armored cars and jeeps mounted with heavy guns, seized this city without resistance Friday when an army of students gave up their rebellion.

Doctor Cesar Amador Kuhl said at least 50 persons were killed in five days of insurrection against the Somoza by a ragtag army of about 500 students who held National Guard units at bay with pistols and rifles from behind barbed wire and garbage can barricades.

Another doctor at a Red Cross clinic said he saw 14 bodies, some of women and children.

Col. Aquiles Aranda, the National Guard's chief information officer, said there were no new casualties but gave no further details of the operation to re-establish control over the city of 50,000 shortly after dawn.

Aranda said one guardsman was killed Thursday but he had no information on civilian casualties.

In Washington, the State Department said it was "increasingly disturbed by ... the prospect of an ever-increasing cost in human suffering" but declined to say what President Carter may do to stop the bloodshed.

The rebellion finally ended Friday when some 300 National Guard units advanced into the city behind one tank, and jeeps mounted with 30-mm machine guns. They encountered no resistance.

One student who said he had not participated in the rebellion said the students, many of whom were in their teens, were "in the hills, waiting for the National Guard to leave."

Another resident also said he saw the students flee into the surrounding hills of this northern coffee-growing center. But other residents said many of the students simply gave up their posts and went home.

"We all want freedom, but no more bloodshed," said one old woman who was one of about 40 fugitives still left at the downtown San Jose church.

"Children don't have the guns to fight the National Guard," she said. "To fight on would only mean slaughter."

The few people left in Matagalpa — hundreds had been evacuated by Red Cross trucks or had fled the city on foot during the rebellion — could move about freely Friday.

Within hours of the National Guard's entry, the town's central market reopened. However, a newly arrived load of bananas was only food available.

Gooding prison wanted

She said the purpose of the public meeting scheduled for 8 p.m. Sept. 7 in the Gooding High School is "to obtain information about the arguments for and against the proposed prison."

"Hopefully we will obtain enough facts to make a sound decision," the veteran legislator said.

She declined to speculate what could happen if the Legislature favors moving the 27 women prisoners from their present quarters in Coltonwood to Gooding, while whoever is elected governor in November could influence the State Land Board against the proposal.

"I've seen people change their minds before," Klein said.

Larsen said Thursday that converting the Gooding building into a women's prison "wasn't feasible then (during the last legislative session) and isn't feasible now."

"It seems strange," the GOP candidate said, "to think he (Evans) wanted the prison so badly he sent a recommendation to the House, asking for an appropriation and then appointed a citizens committee. But before the committee makes its report he's changed his mind."

Larsen said some of his reasons for opposing the placement of women prisoners at the Gooding site is because the "location does not meet any of the requirements of a prison."

"It's too close to the road and too close to the town," Larsen said, "and the buildings do not lend themselves to remodeling for such use."

The candidate said in a recent conversation with Eric Cennarus, secretary of state, that officials had agreed with Larsen's position, adding that "it would cost the state an estimated $60,000 to rent comparable space for the state agencies now located in the Gooding facility."

The fate of the state-owned facility, technically will be decided by the State Land Board which is charged with the maintenance but any funding for remodeling to make the prison a reality must come from the Legislature.

Unemployment falls

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate dropped three tenths of 1 percent from May to June ending at 4.9 percent, the Idaho Department of Employment has announced.

The unemployment figure was the lowest of the year and compared with a 1978 high of 5.5 percent in January and a runnerup low of 5.2 percent in May. The June rate last year was 6.2 percent.

Alert in Beirut

BEIRUT (UPI) — Syrian and Palestinian forces in Lebanon went on full alert Friday in anticipation of an attack by Israeli troops and Lebanese rightist militia, a senior Palestinian source said.

"We have information from foreign sources and high-ranking Arab diplomatic sources that Israel will try, in coordination with the Phalangists and Chammounists to launch a big attack," the source said.

Kremlin request denied

OSLO, Norway (UPI) — Norway Friday denied a Kremlin request to help salvage the wreck of a Soviet spy plane that crashed on a rocky Norwegian island in the Arctic Monday. All seven crewmen aboard were killed in the crash.

The plane was thought to be a Tupolev 126 turboprop, nicknamed "Moss" by NATO, but officials said that because of the amount of weapons and ammunition found in the wreck the plane might have been a Tupolev 16 "Badger."

Firefighters return

ANDERSON, Ind. (UPI) — Striking firefighters returned to work Friday rather than pay a $500-a-day court fine, then rushed to douse a flareup at a downtown block they watched burn earlier in the week.

The city's policemen, involved in a separate salary dispute, ended their work slowdown and set a vote on a tentative settlement calling for a 6 percent pay hike.

Anderson's 140 firemen voted to accept an interim agreement calling for a 6 percent immediate raise, an additional $200 clothing allowance, one extra paid absence day and another week of vacation for those with 15 years experience.

Not much point to go underground

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — California authorities have decided that there would not be much point in requiring that future atomic power plants be put underground for safety.

The precaution, an exhaustive study by the State Energy Commission concluded, would be unduly expensive and time-consuming and probably would not yield significantly better results than two other safety strategies now being followed. One of these is simply the siting of nuclear power plants in remote areas upwind from population centers. The other is an arrangement called "controlled filtered venting."

Under the latter system, the radioactive gases from a power plant accident would automatically, by a complex of pressure-sensitive and heat-sensitive valves be dispersed through a tunnel or conduits packed with earth and rock which would absorb much of the radiation before it could get into the open air.

The finding against "undergrounding," substantially eliminates one of three obstacles that have confronted atomic power growth in California for the last two years.

Two of the measures enacted by the legislature in 1976, and which still are blocking new atomic power plants, said that there should be no further licensing until a nationwide system for reprocessing nuclear fuel units had been developed and until a national system of radioactive waste disposal had been devised. The most optimistic forecasts for that set a date no earlier than 1985.

A third law called for a study of the feasibility of requiring that nuclear generating units be put underground.

The energy commission's staff studied two types of undergrounding — putting plants in 100-foot-wide caves hollowed out of solid rock, and "berming," putting them all the bottom of 100-foot-deep craters dug in the ground, with the removed earth piled on top of the completed structure in beehive form.

Both innovations would be technically feasible, it was concluded, but for a typical generating unit would cost 15 to 40 percent more than conventional construction and would add up to 100 years to the current 5 year construction time.

Spy suspect under fire

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The West German parliament, called back from summer recess into emergency session, voted unanimously Friday to strip immunity from a member suspected of being involved in a spy ring.

Within minutes of the vote, police searched the offices of Uwe Holz, 34, a member of the ruling-Social Democratic Party and expert on economic relations with the Third World.

Holz also voted for the resolution stripping him of immunity, but denounced reports of his involvement in a spy ring as "evil suspicions." He said he would cooperate fully with investigators in an effort to clear his name.

Called back early from his summer recess, the Bundestag's vote took less than five minutes. Police then entered the Holz's offices on the 28th floor of the Bundestag office building and searched it.

The affair was biggest political scandal in West Germany since an East German spy was found in Willy Brandt's office, prompting Brandt's resignation as chancellor four years ago.

Government spokesman Armin Gruenewald told reporters Friday the investigation of the prosecutor general was based on information relayed by American intelligence agencies to Bonn.

Death caused by Anthrax

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Department of Agriculture said Friday tests it performed on tissue samples from two Carbon County cattle carcasses indicate Anthrax organisms caused their death.

The tests were performed at the Department of Agriculture Disease Control Laboratory.

Department Director Wilson Kellogg said the cattle were part of a herd grazing on a ranch near Wayan, west of Soda Springs. Some five to eight cattle were reported lost by the ranch and other losses had been reported by ranches in the area, but Anthrax apparently is responsible for the deaths.

Mediator predicts 'tough' going in postal talks

By GREGORY GORDON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Harvard professor assigned to mediate talks Friday there would be "tough" going because of inflationary pressures on the government and the workers.

James J. Healy, a labor relations expert, said he asked the negotiators for the U.S. Postal Service and three unions representing 500,000 workers to return for "exploratory" talks on Saturday and again on Labor Day.

Healy, who is to act as a mediator in the initial phase of the talks, said he would alert the two sides he was prepared to switch to binding arbitration if agreement were not reached within 11 days.

"My present feeling is that it's going to be tough (to reach a negotiated settlement) because of the multiple pressures that are at work," Healy told reporters.

He referred to previous insistence from Postmaster General William Bolger that the Postal Service can afford no more than the proposed three-year 19.5 percent wage and cost of living increase, rejected by the rank-and-file of the three unions.

President Carter is pushing for an anti-inflationary settlement, while AFL-CIO President George Meany has criticized the contract.

But in New York the leaders of 50 postal worker union locals from across the country voted to strike if they get a contract through binding arbitration and are denied the right to ratify it.

"We don't want a contract shoved down our throats," said Moe Biller, president of the 23,000-member Metro Area Postal Workers Union, representing postal employees in New York and New Jersey.

Meeting for three hours, the union leaders representing a total of 100,000 postal workers from 100 localities of the American Postal Workers Union voted unanimously to demand the re-opening of negotiations covering the entire contract.

Fugitive caught in North Carolina

WOODLAND, N.C. (UPI) — Police chased down and arrested Friday a 30-year-old man wanted for killing two women, a rape, kidnapping and robbery in North Carolina and Virginia.

A spokesman for the Northampton County sheriff's department said a Woodland policeman spotted an auto driven by Norris C. Taylor. He asked for help from the county and they eventually forced Taylor to stop his car a mile north of the town.

No further details of the arrest were immediately available, but police said at about the same time Taylor was captured, Patti Bazemore, a girl he was believed to have kidnapped and killed, returned home safely.

Friday morning in Fayetteville, 120 miles south of here, Taylor was accused of killing a pregnant woman in order to steal her car.

Dixon described Taylor as a "very sick person" and authorities had issued a warrant charging him with killing Mildred Murchison, 30, outside a Social Security Administration office as she was arriving for work. Dixon said Taylor's fingerprints were found in Mrs. Murchison's car, which was stolen and then quickly abandoned.

"He has nothing to lose now and will stop at nothing," said one police officer.

It was in Woodland that 17-year-old Miss Bazemore was believed to have been abducted Wednesday by Taylor. The girl disappeared Wednesday when she left home for the post office in the family car.

Congressmen accused of violating ethics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Ethics Committee staffers Friday repeated their charges that two current congressmen, California Democrats John J. McFall and Edward Roybal, violated congressional ethics in the South Korean scandal.

McFall, once the assistant Democratic leader, Roybal and Reps. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., and Edward J. Patten, D-N.J., all sent the committee lengthy legal arguments last month, urging the panel to dismiss charges relating to their dealings with South Korean socialist and businessman Tongsun Park, who testified that he gave more than $50,000 to present and former House members as "campaign contributions."

In statements released late Friday afternoon, the committee's chief counsel, John W. Nields Jr., said McFall's defenses had "no merit. Nields and his deputy, Jeffrey Harris, said Roybal's motion to dismiss his charges should be denied. Also released were the congressmen's defense statements, which already were issued by their offices.

The committee staff members apparently left immediately after the report was released and were not available for further comment.

The committee said McFall accepted $1,000 cash and a $500 tea set from Park in 1973 and $3,000 in 1974.

The committee accused Roybal of lying under oath to investigators when asked about receiving money from Park.

Wilson was charged with giving false answers on a committee questionnaire, failing to disclose that Park gave him a $1,000 wedding gift in 1975.

The committee said Patten, a senior member of the House Appropriations Committee, received $500 from Park over five years to buy tickets to a Democratic fund-raiser in New Jersey.

Supply stores probed

BALTIMORE (UPI) — U.S. Attorney Russell Baker disclosed Friday that his office is conducting a grand jury investigation of supply stores run by the General Services Administration, a federal agency already subject to another corruption probe.

Baker said his office, assisted by the FBI, is reviewing procurement policies of 30 GSA stores situated in states throughout the Middle Atlantic region, some of which have allegedly paid contractors for goods never received in return for kickbacks to store officials.

He said his investigators began work in June 1977 and have subpoenaed records from all 30 stores, some of which have been turned over to a federal grand jury.

The grand jury has also heard testimony from GSA employees and from representatives of several supply firms, Baker said.

The GSA is the central house-keeping agency for the federal government. It maintains federal buildings and provides supplies for federal offices everywhere through stores located throughout the country.

The Baltimore News-American quoted its sources as saying Baker's investigators have turned up evidence of misuse of supplies and equipment and the receipt of kickbacks for materials ordered but never delivered to the GSA.

The Washington Post quoted its sources as saying up to one-fourth of the $37.6 million worth of office supplies purchased each year by the GSA's Middle Atlantic stores may never be delivered to federal agencies.

McFall argued that he never "unconditionally accepted" Park's $3,000 campaign contribution in 1974, and placed it in his office account unostentatiously. "This argument is completely without merit," Nields said. Since Park made the payment as a campaign contribution, Nields said, McFall should have reported it regardless of what he did with the money.

McFall said he deposited $2,400 to his own account and used $1,505 to help his daughter buy a car, but said he later repaid it all. Nields said McFall at least violated a House rule requiring members to keep official and personal funds separate.

Mass details announced

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II will pray over the tomb of St. Peter in the Vatican Grottoes before officiating his own inaugural Mass Sunday in a 1200-year-old ceremony before an anticipated 250,000 people in St. Peter's Square, Vatican officials said Friday.

They said the ceremony worked out for the unprecedented rite — the first time in eight centuries that a pope is not formally crowned — is a combination of solemnity and simplicity.

The pope will drive a few hundred feet from the papal palace around the apex of St. Peter's basilica inside Vatican territory and will enter the largest church in Christendom through the side door of St. Martha.

From there, he will walk to the Altar of the Confession, in the center of the basilica under the Bernini bronze canopy, and will descend the white marble stairs to the niche in the Vatican Grottoes that Roman Catholic theologians say is the tomb of the Apostle Peter.

Middle age: what's it all about?

By JOEL GREENBERG

Neglected for years — as perhaps too normal or merely psychologically uninteresting — the middle-aged adult now is the subject of an explosion of books, research papers and scientific conferences that examine what happens between the young adult and Social Security years.

"The middle-aged male," said psychologist Douglas Bray, "seems to have replaced the white rat and the college student" as the psychological research world's foremost subject.

Researchers are finding that middle age appears to have stresses that can lead to emotional difficulties peculiar to those years, but it is far from established that every person or even the majority, experience what has been termed the "mid-life crisis" — gut-wrenching conflicts, identity crises or other forms of devastation.

The work of Bray and colleague Ann Howard constitutes one of the few long-term studies of the evolution of the middle years. A 20-year follow-up of more than 200 employees who began working for the Bell System in the 1950s, the study examines what factors contribute to or detract from occupational and overall life satisfaction and how the two areas affect each other. The first reported results, on 80 subjects, were presented at the Vermont Conference on the Primary Prevention of Psychopathy. Assessments consisting of wide-ranging interviews, observations and psychological measurements were made when each person first joined the company, again at eight years and finally at 20 years.

The study's general conclusion thus far is that a person's total satisfaction and happiness with life appear almost totally unrelated to whether he or she is successful in work. "Career success is not a predictor of life satisfaction," Howard said. "But there is not necessarily a negative correlation, so you might just as well be successful because there's no assurance you're going to be happy another way."

However, the researchers did find a negative correlation — among men: Those who scored highest in heterosexuality and mental ability turned out to be less happy and well adjusted than most of the other Bell employees studied.

According to Bray, the great majority of people in the study — including the well-adjusted and happy — have IQs above average, "well above 100. We're not talking about dumb-bells," he said. He suggested that extreme intelligence, however, might work against a person's happiness in many cases. "The people who were better adjusted may not be quite as introspective. They don't worry about what life is all about, they are less questioning," said Bray.

The results, he said, do not imply that heterosexuality is bad for mental health. The relative unhappiness and poor adjustment was found among those who scored well above the norm on "interest and concern for the opposite sex." This indicates a possible "over-dependence" on the opposite sex, Bray said. When this happens, a person's occupation with the opposite sex may put him or her, from pursuing other sources of satisfaction and happiness in life.

In terms of career alone, the "successful" subjects (upper-level management) showed increases over the years — and middle- and lower-level managers showed decreases — in:

- Importance of work.
 - Identification with the professed values of the Bell System.
 - Occupational involvement.
 - Forcefulness and dominance.
- The successful managers did show increased involvement with their marriages and families, but at a lower rate than the "unsuccessful."

Upper managers remained fairly constant in community involvement — participated in fewer recreational activities over the years. In contrast, the lower-level managers increased their recreation and decreased community involvement.

A significant number of those classified as "unsuccessful" in work scored high in life satisfaction. These persons, though slightly less intelligent and knowledgeable, were nevertheless self-confident, optimistic, unselfish and relatively less cynical than the others in the study. But the "satisfied" group also included some who were successful in their occupation — a finding that confused Bray and Howard until further analysis yielded a "common ground."

The most happy persons overall were not necessarily the successful or the unsuccessful, but those who were "satisfied" with their careers regardless of their status on the management ladder. "This appears to bridge the gap" between career and life satisfaction, Howard said.

Finally, the Bell study reveals that only 22 percent of the subjects were undergoing a "mid-life crisis." Bray said. Other research presented at the conference seems to corroborate that impression.

In a study of 160 middle-aged women, Lillian Rubin of the Institute for Scientific Analysis attempts to debunk what she calls "the myth... of the empty nest syndrome." "This is a large lie, a myth that a shattered and depressed woman lives inside the shell of an empty nest" after her children leave home, Rubin said. "It's a distorted view of womanhood."

In her research, Rubin looked at women (average age 46) whose children had either left the nest or were in the process. More than half were "homemakers," while others had returned to school or work. All had given up jobs for at least 10 years following the birth of a child.

"Except for one," Rubin said, "none of these women suffers from the classical symptoms of empty nest syndrome. In fact, just about all of them responded to the departure of the children with a decided sense of relief... although a few were ambivalent with the time of departure came close." The problems of experiencing the child's departure "are short term and limited," Rubin said. "They usually do not approach depression."

The effect of the women's movement may be a factor in helping mothers to better cope with loss, she suggested. "The Revolution in the rising expectations in mid-life women" has enabled many mothers to view the empty nest as "an opportunity for freedom and to claim themselves," Rubin said. "For most mid-life women, becoming a mother means they aborted their own hopes and dreams. It should come as no surprise that the end of the mothering function should come with relief."

Rubin did find that conflict, including a sense of failure, with the youngster can make the departure more traumatic by leaving the parent with a feeling of an unresolved problem. But she also found that returning to work can help alleviate some of that pain by giving the woman a "sense of self that lives apart from the children."

The study results show that working-class women "sometimes find the transition easier because they have more options" than middle- and upper-class mothers, Rubin said. "They are willing to take lesser jobs and probably worked at some point (previously in the marriage) for financial reasons." In addition, she noted, working-class families generally stay closer to each other, geographically, and provide considerable support.

Ironically, she found that some husbands were more likely than their wives to get depressed when the children left. "Often, the father never had a lot of time for the kids in previous years; he didn't share as much as the mother in their development, and suddenly, they're gone..."

The importance of employment for women is also reflected in a Brandeis University study of 142 white, married, middle-class Boston-area mothers who have at least one child in preschool. Researchers Rosalind Barnett and Grace Baruch compared mothers employed part- and full-time (83 percent of the sample) with those who did not work outside the home.

They reported no significant difference between the two groups in role satisfaction, self-esteem or confidence — more than 85 percent of all women said they were moderately or very satisfied. However, they found that the "at-home" women were considerably more dependent for their own satisfaction and esteem on how they perceived their husbands felt about the women's roles. More than half the unemployed women expressed such dependence, compared with 30 percent of the working mothers. The prestige of the husband's occupation, however, was not found to be connected to the wife's esteem and satisfaction.

Baruch and Barnett also reported that the non-working mothers seemed more concerned with choosing a role model that met the approval of their own mothers.

Their results tend to refute a number of previous studies that indicated that multiple roles might be emotionally detrimental to women bringing up children. "Our data suggest that well-being may be enhanced by commitment to work and satisfaction with a job," Barnett said. "Involvement in multiple roles need not result in a debilitating state. In fact, it may be a good preventive factor for later years when the woman may be alone (following a divorce or death of the husband)."

The attitudes of both women and men were analyzed in a study of predictors of life satisfaction conducted by John C. Flanagan of the American Institutes for Research. In one of the most comprehensive studies of its kind to date, Flanagan surveyed 2,800 people from around the United States on various "quality of life" aspects and on how their attitudes and expectations measured up to their actual life satisfaction levels.

After sifting through mountains of data on 30-, 50- and 70-year-old men and women, Flanagan has drawn some conclusions which he said are well-substantiated by the size and representativeness of his sample.

The two major factors in life satisfaction appear to be money and health care, he reported. "People are coping pretty well, but there certainly is a significant-sized minority who just don't have the finances and resources to get the food, shelter and health care they need. Money isn't the only thing in the world, but it's way ahead of whatever's second." Beyond that, the best predictors of overall quality of life, according to the study, are work, active recreation, learning, expressing yourself creatively, having close friends, understanding yourself, socializing and (except for the 70-year-olds) close relationships with a spouse.

The importance of active recreation — even among the 50- and 70-year-olds — was the "biggest surprise among the predictors," Flanagan said. "It seems plausible on reflection that an activity that lacks deep commitment and satisfactions may still be a very important contributor to one's own feeling of well being."

The poorest predictors of quality of life at ages 50 and 70 included having and raising children, participation in local and national government, helping and encouraging others, relationships with relatives.

The data on the process of middle age are still rather haphazard and preliminary, most scientists concede. While cause and effect relationships do appear to exist, it is still not certain that the research will spawn a picture of well-defined and structured mid-life development "stages" — along the lines of the strict developmental models of children.

But a picture is emerging, and behavioral scientists believe whatever insights they can develop might help a significant number of persons better cope with the transition from child to geriatric.

A citizen's view on taxes

A man walked into the Times-News the other day and asked how the "average citizen" in favor of the 1 percent initiative could go about getting news space with his views on big spending in government.

His contention was that the anti-1 percent initiative groups — city, county, and state government, colleges, and schools — were getting all the publicity. He claimed, too, the "average citizen" could never get the inches and bold headlines that these other groups receive in the paper.

The man, John T. Walker of Twin Falls, who once ran for the state legislature, makes a good point.

Anti-1 percent groups have been dominating the news pages lately with a barrage of news stories on what they claim will be drastic cutbacks if the initiative is passed in November.

The latest was a group calling itself COIN, Citizens Opposing the Initiative in November. The Magic Valley organization hopes to convince farmers and other residents of the dire consequences which might occur should the initiative pass.

In some instances, they claim, taxes may even go up, and cutbacks in schools and local services will be inevitable.

Other stories have been done by reporters on possible reductions at the College of Southern Idaho and personnel cutbacks in the school district.

While the anti-initiative side has been grabbing a lot of attention, the man is right when he says reasons for supporting the initiative have been given little attention.

Those who pushed for putting the initiative on the ballot have been relatively quiet since attaining that goal. As yet, there has been no big mass media push for the 1 percent idea.

Walker's views deserve attention because he expresses the feelings of a lot of people who are upset with government spending.

Here's a sampling of some of the concerns of "average citizens" he wished politicians would heed:

- The rising cost of government, and the failure of those who run government to put the brakes on it. As an example, he offered the proposed drastic rate increases for sewer, water and recreation in Twin Falls, and the $33,000 salary of the city attorney.
- The escalating federal and state taxes in the nation that deplete a person's paycheck to almost nothing.
- The failure of government leaders to even acknowledge that government waste is getting out of hand.
- The possibility of a nationwide tax revolt, as expressed by Gov. Jerry Brown of California, if politicians don't start moving to reduce taxes.
- The scare tactics by government employees who are fearful that if the 1 percent initiative passes, their job might be eliminated.
- The erosion of confidence in government with scandals like the General Services Administration discovering that millions have been spent on services only to not have those services performed.

Front page headline or not, the man is saying things that the "average citizen" expresses every day in restaurants, coffee shops and in homes with his neighbors.

It may not be ideas anti-1 percent initiative groups like COIN want to hear, but like Gov. Brown said, these expressions of discontent could form the basis of a nationwide tax revolt in the future. It would be well worth it for COIN and similar organizations to lend an ear.

Turin shroud draws 30,000

TURIN, Italy (UPI) — More than 30,000 people viewed what many believe is the burial shroud of Jesus Christ Wednesday as Turin buzzed with speculation that Pope John Paul I and other leaders — possibly even President Carter — may come to view the relic.

Roman Catholic authorities who put the shroud on display in the Turin cathedral said the pope has been invited, but there was no word on whether he would come. They had no comment on speculation about possible visits by Carter or King Baudouin of Belgium.

Many Christians venerate the cloth as a relic and believe it shows an image of the crucified Christ with virtual photographic clarity.

Vatican sources said Pope John Paul I, who was elected Saturday, the same day the shroud went on display, still has not made up his mind about coming to Turin. Before his election, when he was patriarch of Venice, he had planned to come to see the shroud. Sept. 21 at the head of a Venetian pilgrimage.

"There is speculation about visits by prominent personalities," said Turin's La Stampa, Italy's second largest newspaper, "ranging from King Baudouin of Belgium who will be in Rome Sunday for official celebration in honor of the pope, to President Carter, who is a Baptist minister and has held catechism classes with documents and images relating to the shroud."

The shroud, brought to Europe in the Middle Ages by crusaders, is a linen cloth 14 feet, 3 inches long and 3 feet, 7 inches wide — bearing the negative images of the front and back of a man.

Scientists who have studied the cloth say the man who was wrapped in it was about 6 feet, 1 inch tall and had apparently been crucified with nails through its wrists and feet.

The Roman Catholic Church has never taken an official stand about the authenticity of the shroud but several popes have expressed veneration for it.

The cloth is being displayed in the Turin cathedral for six weeks to commemorate the 400th anniversary of its arrival in Italy from Chambery, France.

Some Roman Catholics said they feared a papal visit might offend non-Christians who do not believe the shroud is authentic.

The Waldensians, a small Italian Protestant group, criticized its display earlier this month, saying the shroud is not mentioned in any early Christian writings.

In contrast, the Russian Orthodox church adopted an attitude of veneration towards the shroud. Roman Catholic sources said Russian Orthodox Metropolitan Nikolod of Leningrad is expected to come to Turin in a few days.

New Pope was surprised

Pope John Paul I listens to cardinals' views at meeting outlining papal policies. The pope said he was still surprised and confused by his election as pontiff. He said he was counting on their support because he knew little about running overall church machine. (UPI)

Catholic bishops to meet new pope

SPOKANE (UPI) — Roman Catholic Bishops from Idaho, Montana, Alaska, Washington and Oregon will meet with Pope John Paul I in Rome Sept. 21.

The bishops from the northwest will be the first group of American bishops to meet with the new pope in "ad limina" visits.

Study of shroud shows man theorized as Jesus

Many believe shroud shows the face of Jesus Christ

- Slood 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighed about 175 pounds.
- Had a forked beard, a mustache, long hair and a ponytail-like lock of hair at the back of his head.
- Had marks that indicate he was lashed, perhaps as many as 120 times, with the whipping done from behind on both the right and left sides.

Had scalp wounds that could be interpreted as showing a crown of thorns — but not the usual circles of thorns shown in pictures of Jesus' crucifixion. Instead, some interpret the wounds to indicate a cap of thorns.

At the time of Christ, kings in the Middle East wore cap-like crowns.

• Had other marks that could be interpreted as nail marks through the wrists (not the palms) and the feet. There is a lance mark in the side.

Lutherans select leader

PORTLAND — The president of the Northwest District of the Lutheran Church, Dr. Emil Jaech of Portland, was re-elected to a third 4-year term as jurisdictional leader of some 90,000 baptized members in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Alaska, when the 31st biennial convention of the district met at Concordia College in Portland.

The district, one of 39 in the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, made up of 230 congregations and lay and clergy delegates, returned Dr.

Jaech to his post by giving him 208 out of a possible 385 votes.

The church leader, who celebrated his 65th birthday recently, is a native of Billings, Mont. He entered the Lutheran ministry after graduation from Concordia Seminary in Springfield, Ill., in 1938. He was awarded the doctor of divinity degree by Pacific Lutheran University in recognition of his leadership in the Northwest in 1974. He served parishes in Spokane and Seattle from 1938 to 1970. His first term as president of the district began in 1970.

Twin Falls LDS Stake forms Jackpot branch

JACKPOT, NEV. — This entertainment community south of the Idaho-Nevada border now has the first Mormon church in its history.

While informal meetings have been held for several months, the group was formally organized as a branch of the Twin Falls West Stake last month, according to Milo Price, Twin Falls, church public relations official.

Nephi Carlson of Twin Falls is the new branch president, with Frank Tingey, a Jackpot area rancher, as counselor.

Sacrament services and Sunday school are held from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Sundays in the convention center of Club 93.

Carlson said the branch now has about 75 members and plans are under way to have a double-wide trailer where both worship services and primary sessions for children can be held.

Arrangements are being made to lease land for the trailer facility.
"Our biggest opportunity is for the children in the area," the branch president said.

He estimated this casino-dominated community and the surrounding ranchers constitute a population of some 600 persons although probably 50 employees commute from Twin Falls.

Cactus Pete employs some 200 persons, he said, and with the enlargement planned, another 100 will be working here, while Club 93 also employs about 200 people, according to the church official.

Jackpot is quite a transient place, he said, with many of the people working here coming here because they have had personal or social problems in their lives.

"They come here because jobs are easy to get and there's not too many questions asked about their past," Carlson said.

He said part of the ministry of his church will be in providing counseling for individual members.

The presence of a Mormon church at Jackpot will be a good influence on the community, according to Price.

Hounded?

BOSTON (UPI) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis may have been pleased with her new hairdo, but she got fed up with the photographer and reporter who tracked her down at Boston's Ritz Carlton "early" Saturday.

"It's an imposition that you follow me to the hairdresser," she told a reporter for the Boston Herald American Thursday. "But I think you're nice." She even took a pink carnation offered to her by a reporter.

Grandma released

RACINE, Wis. (UPI) — Ellen Corby, who portrays Grandma Walton on the television series, "The Waltons," was released from St. Mary's Medical Center Friday. A Racine native, Miss Corby had been "near exhaustion" when hospitalized Thursday night while visiting friends in Racine, but was in good condition Friday, a spokesman said.

Red douses another

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — A crew led by oil well troubleshooter Paul "Red" Adair Friday snuffed out a towering gas well fire that had raged since June 4 in one of Southeast Asia's biggest oil fields.

Adair's men dug two 10,000-foot deep relief wells near the blazing well. Streams of acid and water at high pressure poured into the wells Thursday night to put the fires out and mud was then pumped on top to keep natural gas from escaping.

$7 million gift

ATLANTA (UPI) — Philanthropist Robert W. Woodruff, who has given millions of dollars to education in Atlanta, donated $7 million worth of Coca-Cola Co. stock to a library campaign at the predominantly black Atlanta University Center, it was announced Friday.

The gift by the 89-year-old multi-millionaire raised his total contribution for the library to $10 million.

Poetry plug

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Susan Quist put a portable microphone on top of a trash can and the "World's Longest Poetry Reading" went rhyming into its third straight day Friday.

Ms. Quist had rounded up lawyer Chase Shafer and 16-year-old high school junior Willie Tremble to read poetry to the milling crowd for the noon hour — one of 56 straight hours that poetry has been read throughout the city.

Amateur astounds

BAY CITY, Mich. (UPI) — An amateur stunt man Friday climbed 150 feet up a steel electrical tower and performed daring aerial acrobatics for about two hours to the delight of a large crowd of gawkers and the dismay of the police department.

Assistant Police Chief Bob Bauer said the man, Maurice D. Jackson, 27, of Mount Pleasant, evidently was a skillful climber.

Five new versions of old tunes

Appearing under the banner 'Rock 'n' Roll Heaven, these five singers have been "clipped" in the likeness of dead famed rock performers unveiled their new faces Friday. The "new" versions of the performers are (front row, left to right): Mona Moore as Janis Joplin, Mark Hazenbrouk as Jim Croce, Duke O'Connell as Jim Morrison; and (standing) Erin Ryan as a female Elvis Presley and Jesse Bolt as male Elvis Presley.

'Traveling clone show' is uncovered

By RICHARD BEENE
ATLANTA (UPI) — Sandwiched among the cotton candy stands, livestock exhibits and popcorn vendors, Danny O'Day unveiled his $500,000 "traveling clone show" Friday.

"Now Elvis over there is our biggest attraction," he said, pointing to an impersonator of the late singer. "You know how people are about Elvis? Well, even have a female Elvis. The sex doesn't matter."

O'Day is a 38-year-old, fast-talking promoter who has invested "at least" $500,000 into what he jokingly calls "my traveling clone show." Appearing under the banner "Rock 'n' Roll Heaven," it features five singers who hope to turn borderline professional careers into instant successes by impersonating dead singers — all in the name of profit.

On the very day his new proteges appeared, O'Day heard from an old one, Dennis Wise, who under O'Day's management had his face remodeled earlier this year to look like Elvis Presley, filed suit against O'Day. In a $250 lawsuit filed Thursday in Orange County Circuit Court, Wise claimed that act has been damaged.

"(O'Day) ... has wrongfully, unlawfully and maliciously endeavored to destroy the plaintiff's career by creating an army of clones to undermine and to berate the plaintiff's image ... diminishing the unique character and marketability of the plaintiff and his performances," the suit said.

The "unveiling" came when the five — Janis Joplin, Jim Croce, Jim Morrison and the Elvis — appeared during the Southeastern Fair and took off masks to reveal what plastic surgery can do to make one look like someone else.

It was the first of a series of promotional appearances for the troupe which will be followed by a blitz of Europe — "where they really get off on this stuff," said O'Day.

Even before the group's opening show, O'Day's singers acknowledged they have been criticized for trying to profit off someone else's glory and accomplishments.

"A lot of people tell me it's morbid to do something like this," said Mona Caywood Moore, a 27-year-old Californian who had plastic implanted in her cheeks to more closely resemble Janis Joplin, the raucous, gravel-voiced rock singer who died of a drug overdose in 1971.

Early Elvis recording reported found

DALLAS (UPI) — A 24-year-old recording made in Phoenix, Ariz., may be one of the earliest efforts of a young singer and guitar player named Elvis Presley. At least that's what three Dallas businessmen are hoping.

Under the name "International Classics Productions," the three are planning to distribute the record to local radio stations on Sept. 5, with public release set for Sept. 8.

The song, "Tell Me Pretty Baby," reportedly recorded in Phoenix in 1954, was written by Pete Falco, founder of the Red Dots, a Phoenix band.

One of the businessmen, Don Reese, a disc jockey in Los Angeles in the 1950s, said he was in Phoenix in 1954 when he was invited to sit in on a recording session with a young singer named Elvis whom Falco had met.

Reese, who was moved to Dallas in 1967, said he was contacted recently by Andrew Jackson, a record company owner for whom Falco once worked. Jackson had bought a tape from Falco that supposedly was of Elvis, which Falco had tried to sell in the early '50s, but couldn't because rock 'n' roll was too new.

Reese said, "We lost touch until four months ago when Andrew looked me up and asked me to come over to the house to hear this master recording of Elvis singing 'Tell Me Pretty Baby.'" He said.

"He said he bought it off a friend of his, Pete Falco, who was in Phoenix. We got together with Pete, got his affidavit and took the tape to the Center Center for Communication Disorders, part of the University of Texas in Dallas, and had a spectrograph done."

Korchnoi fails to present appeal

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — World chess challenger Victor Korchnoi, a Soviet defector, was rebuffed Friday in an attempt to appeal to an international meeting of lawyers for help in getting his family out of Russia.

"I told him unless you're a member of the International Law Association you cannot address the association," said an official who declined to be named.

He said he told Korchnoi to appeal to the United Nations to ask the Soviet Union to release his family on humanitarian grounds.

Korchnoi, 47, left a wife and son behind when he defected to the West two years ago.

Korchnoi confirmed that he met privately with Indian and Yugoslav delegates to the conference of the International Law Association in Manila. One of the top items on its agenda is human rights.

"They promised they will discuss the fate of my family," Korchnoi said.

A senior aide said the delegates told him they would refer Korchnoi's case to Amnesty International, the London-based organization that champions human rights.

But the official said Korchnoi's case was not brought up at the conference's discussion of human rights Friday.

Later, Korchnoi left for Baguio, 120 miles north of Manila, for the twice-postponed 19th game of the championship match with Soviet chess player Anatoly Karpov.

Hearst wants Patty out

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst's father said Friday he hopes guilty pleas by William and Emily Harris to her kidnapping will help convince people that she should be released from prison.

"Perhaps now that the Harrises have confessed to being part of the political terrorist group that kidnapped Patty, her long ordeal will finally end," said Randolph A. Hearst, president of the San Francisco Examiner and chairman of the Hearst Corp.

The Harrises, the last remaining of the eight-member "Symbionese Liberation Army" which kidnapped Miss Hearst in 1974, entered surprise pleas of guilty Thursday to reduced charges in the abduction, which touched off one of the most bizarre cases in U.S. criminal history.

Eggs that sprout

The eggs of the jellyfish don't hatch the way most eggs hatch. They fall to the sea bottom, take root, and sprout like plants. From said sprouts develop growths called hydrozoa, stems that branch out with buds on their ends. These buds turn into jellyfish that eventually twist free and swim away.

SPORT

Q. "What was the most popular sport on this continent before the American Revolution?"

A. Horse racing, in most places. But not in New England. Puritans there pitted horses against horses in sled-pulling contests and team tug of war. But not in races.

Q. "Which of the big gambling games in the casinos can be classified as a game of skill?"

A. Blackjack, it's said, is the only one. Simple luck rules in the other four: craps, roulette, keno and slot machines.

Q. "What proportion of the people in this country's jails have been convicted of some sort of crime?"

A. Only about half.

BETLES

True, West Germany no longer exports those Volkswagen "Beetles." None are made there anymore. But it imports a lot of them. From Mexico.

Probers push for Firestone radial tire recall

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Firestone 500 steel belted radial tire poses an unreasonable risk of death and injury, and all 13 million still on the road should be recalled, congressional investigators said Friday.

The recommendation came from the House Commerce oversight and investigations subcommittee that conducted hearings into the situation earlier this summer. Chairman John Moss, D-Calif., called Firestone's conduct in the matter "reprehensible in the extreme."

"The Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. is and has been for some time in a position to avoid the devastating toll of human destruction which it knew its tires could cause," Moss said. "The exercise of clear and conscious choice, it nonetheless permitted this destruction to take place."

In a related development, Ralph Nader charged that Firestone is saving $125 million in potential costs each week that goes by without a recall. He said 125,000 of the tires are being scrapped each week and the longer the matter is delayed the less Firestone will have to spend.

Just in the time since the government announced its investigation, Nader said, the number of tires still on the road has dwindled from 15 million to where it is now nearing 12 million.

The congressional report said accidents linked to the tire, which Firestone no longer makes, "number in the thousands, injuries in the hundreds and known fatalities as of August 1978 are 34."

It said the tires "present an unreasonable risk of continuing accidents, injuries and death to the motoring public and should be immediately recalled."

"The performance of other lines of steel belted radials should be monitored to determine whether future recalls are warranted," it added.

Firestone, in a statement, called the committee findings unjustified and said the company "will continue to work with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration in seeking a resolution of the matter which will be fair to the public and to our company."

Rep. James Collins, R-Tex., the ranking Republican on the subcommittee, issued a dissenting report, saying "the evidence I have seen has not shown them (the tires) to be unsafe or defective."

But the report concludes "neither the federal vehicle safety standards nor the federal safety recall systems have served well to protect the public against the hazards of the Firestone 500 steel belted radial."

It recommends that Firestone recall all the tires immediately, and if it does not, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration should do so and press for the maximum civil penalty possible.

NHTSA's recall authority, however, allows it to go back only three years and the report recommends the law be changed to allow the agency to recall as from as far back as five years.

The subcommittee said more than 2.1 million of the 2.5-million Firestone 500s produced over the years suffered tread separations, a type of failure that frequently causes blowouts. It also said Firestone failed to warn drivers that underinflating the tires by as little as four pounds per square inch can cause irreparable damage.

It also said Firestone's adjustment rate for the 500 is running at 17.5 percent, three times higher than that for any other steel belted radial made by the company and "considerably higher than the 7.4 percent rate previously disclosed by Firestone."

Business

Women, teenagers find work, reduce jobless rate to 5.9%

WASHINGTON Star — The unemployment rate last month dipped to 5.9 percent, with some 6 million people still out of work, the Labor Department reported Friday.

August's level was down from the 6.2 percent recorded in July but slightly higher than the 5.7 percent level registered in June. For most of this year, unemployment has hovered around the 6 percent plateau.

A year ago it was 7 percent.

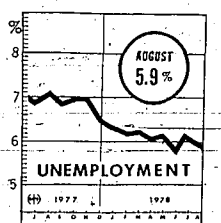

The government reported that most of the improvement in the job picture last month occurred for adult women. But for the first time in more than a year, there was also a dramatic drop in the unemployment rate for black teenagers.

While still high, that rate was off nearly five percentage points, dropping to 22.4 percent in August. In July it was 37 percent and a year ago 39.4 percent. Such a sharp drop is unusual and could be a statistical quirk.

The Carter administration has begun to redirect its public jobs program toward tackling the persistent problem of joblessness, particularly among teen-agers.

The jobless rate for all teen-agers last month was 15.6 percent, down slightly from July's 16.3 percent level but higher than June's 14.2 percent.

Among white teens, the rate was 15.8, about the same as July's 13.4 level.

July's 5.6 level. For adult black and minority women the rate was 11.7 percent — the lowest in a year and down from June's 12.5 percent level.

The overall unemployment rate for adult men was 4.1 percent last month, the same as July's figure but slightly higher than June's 3.9 percent figure.

For adult white men, the rate was 3.1 percent, the same as in July. Unemployment among black and minority adult men, however, increased last month to 9 percent. That figure is up sharply from July's 8.4 percent level and June's 7.8 percent figure.

In other worker categories, unemployment declined among persons looking for full-time work, women who head families, and persons unemployed less than five weeks.

The total civilian labor force last month was estimated at 105.5 million people, virtually unchanged over the month but 2.7 million larger than a year ago.

The government excludes certain people from its monthly unemployment report, including so-called discouraged workers — those who have been on the unemployment rolls for some time and are no longer looking for a job because they believe no jobs are available. If those persons were included, the unemployment rate would be about a percentage point higher.

Sylvia Porter Analyze insurance need

How much life insurance can you afford?

Even though you may find a fairly satisfactory answer to yesterday's nagging question on how much life insurance you need, there are no hard and fast answers to help you with the second question of how much you can afford, no "light" rules of thumb that afford no "right" rules of thumb that lead directly to the right answer for you.

You must start by asking and honestly analyzing what are your family's values in terms of financial security — as well as knowing what budget your family has.

If, for instance, your family is thinking of its future, it will try to cooperate to find the means to afford the protection you all want, more than another family that thinks in terms only of its immediate or short-term needs.

After analyzing your family income and how you spend it, you will be on your way to determining what you can budget for life insurance. And always keep in mind: there are no rules of thumb, and any salesperson who tells you otherwise is to be avoided.

If your family maintains a visibly high standard of living, you may find allocating 1 percent of your gross earnings to insurance to be a financial hardship (if you won't give up anything).

If your family has a more sober life style, you may find allocating 5 percent or more a reasonable share, even if the life insurance protection does mean additional sacrifices.

It comes down to your values.

The costs, though, can be translated into straight figures and presented in simple words.

(1) Term insurance is pure protection. It costs less when you, the insured, are young, covers a set period and, when renewed, costs more merely because you are older.

(2) Whole life, also called straight, permanent, or cash value insurance, is more expensive than term in the beginning. But the costs are level and the policy builds a cash value.

(3) Endowment insures you for a fixed period, at the end of which you receive the face value amount of the policy.

question: what is your family's security worth to you?

If you are buying insurance to protect your family, if you are a young family, and if you are on a tight budget, then buying term insurance in face amounts several times your yearly salary is a good start. You may decide to convert to another form of insurance later, but term is right for you now.

If you are looking beyond your immediate needs and a growing family, whole life — combining insurance with some investment values (although inferior to other forms of savings) — does give you an increasing cash value, and excellent source of borrowing at relatively inexpensive rates assuming you choose your company carefully, and it does help you build a nest egg.

If you live to spend it, an endowment policy's advantages are fairly clear — but do not ignore the "living long enough" angle.

Simplified though these columns' reports on your needs and buying capacities for life insurance have been, it's abundantly obvious that no honest reporter can give you guidelines or recommendations that can be an adequate substitute for your own and your own family's thinking about your protection now and in the future.

Only in the privacy of your own home and without outside pressures, can you determine what you need for life insurance and how much your family is willing to spend to cover those needs.

For more information, on both these questions of how much life insurance do you need and how much life insurance can you afford, write to: Consumer Services, The Bankers Life, Des Moines, Iowa 50307, for a pertinent booklet. It's free.

Maine potato futures slip; cattle gain, grains mixed

CHICAGO — Potato futures slipped into the minus column Friday while meats and grains wound up mixed.

Commodity News Service said Maine spuds closed with 7 to 14 cent losses after a late sell-off. Volume was 2,473 lots. The May contract closed off 2 cents at 7.74 per hundredweight.

Live cattle sustained strong gains, with settlement prices 10¢ to 20 points higher after a trade of 21,610 contracts. Strong buying was spread among all interests but late selling brought prices off the day's highs.

Cattle calves closed slightly under the day's high, up 10¢ to 45 points on a trade of 1,222 contracts. Market strength was attributed to ideas producers may start holding back heifers and calves this fall to build herds again.

Live hogs lost early modest gains after pre-weekend profit taking developed. Final prices were 7 to 75 points down on a trade of 3,593 contracts.

Late buying brought pork bellies out of the minus column to close with 5 to 27 points gains in a light trade of 2,770 contracts. Pre-weekend profit taking produced a low close in the day.

Profit taking, last minute evening up ahead of the holiday weekend, and commercial selling shaved gains in wheat during the final minutes of trading. Prices were 4¢ to 1 cent higher for September through July with lightly traded September 1977 at the low end of the range, down a quarter cent.

Corn opened fractionally easier, then edged lower until speculative short covering inspired by buying in soybean oil generated gains with December through July leading. The close saw prices 1¢ to 10¢ lower to 1¢ cent higher.

Oil provided a strengthening element in the soybean complex with some short covering helping provide initial strength. Beans settled half a cent to 4 cents higher with oil up 40 to 60 points and meal 80 cents higher to 20 cents higher.

New York Sugar 11 staged a strong advance as the technical uptrend continued, with closing advances of 31 to 45 points.

New York Comex silver closed 650 to 710 points higher on heavy local short covering, after a gold rally boosted the market. Volume was 9,000 lots.

New York Comex gold rallied on afternoon arbitrage buying and resulting short covering for gains of 490 to 560 points. Volume was 15,000 lots.

Utility seeks higher rates

BOISE (UPI) — Intermountain Gas Co. filed an application with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission Friday for a 3.4 percent residential rate increase.

The firm said the application stems from increased costs from its natural gas supplier and not an increased cost of Intermountain's service. The hike amounts to about 1.2 cents per therm.

A spokesman for the company said Intermountain's supplier customarily increases its cost to distributors in April and October of each year.

The estimated cost to the company's average user will be less than $1 per month.

Teacher strikes continue in eight states

By JACK LESAR
United Press International
Teachers' strikes canceled or curtailed classes for more than 200,000 students in eight states Friday. Contract snarls in several cities threatened massive strikes after Labor Day ends the summer recess for tens of millions of students.

A UPI count showed walkouts affected 184,000 high school and elementary school students and 112,000 junior college students in Illinois, Idaho, Louisiana, and Indiana.

Teachers struck in advance of scheduled class resumptions in Michigan, Washington, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island. And transportation contract disputes halted school bus service in parts of two other states, Tennessee and New Mexico.

Striking Philadelphia school teachers shout at administration in Philadelphia

Bus drivers joined 4,700 teachers on the picket lines in New Orleans, where the combined walkouts curtailing the education of 91,000 students. Teachers, in the third day of their strike, are demanding wage increases totaling $3 million. The drivers want a 7 percent raise.

Attendance estimates ranged from 15 percent to 30 percent. Children who did make it to school sat idly in classrooms.

Teachers strikes halted classes for 45,000 students in three Illinois school districts — including Rockford, the state's second largest. The Illinois Education Association said strikes could begin next week in 31 other districts where contract talks were described as "critical."

Chicago City Colleges was in its third day. Classes were called off for the system's 112,000 students.

Talks broke down between the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers and the city Board of Education and teachers began picketing the schools, where classes were to begin for 250,000 students next Friday.

Contract talks also ran aground in Cranston, R.I., where classes were to open next Wednesday. The city's 741 teachers set up picket lines at locations where coaches held practice for fall sports teams.

Seattle teachers picketed schools this week and threatened to strike when classes began next week if contract demands are not met. Teachers in the Connecticut cities of Bridgeport and Norwalk also threatened to hold post-Labor Day walkouts.

Police in Marion, Ind., arrested nine striking teachers Friday for refusing to move a picket line from a school bus garage. Eight leaders of the walkout, which began Monday were jailed Wednesday for ignoring a judge's back-to-work order.

Marion Schools were kept open on a staggered schedule but only about 25 percent of the district's 9,800 students showed up for classes.

A teachers' strike closed schools to 9,900 students at Richmond, Ind., and a strike by 38 teachers in Arco, Idaho, forced cancellation of classes for 850 students.

Safety officials scrutinize mopeds

By MICHAEL F. CONLAN
Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — The moped, a cross between a mini-motorcycle and a beed-up bike, is the target of two new federal safety studies.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is concerned that not enough is known about the frisky little two-wheelers, which have been putting along American streets and roads in growing numbers.

While mopeds (for motor-pedal) have been commonplace in much of the world for years — half of the estimated 20 million are in Western Europe — as recently as 1974 there were only about 50,000 here. Now there are almost half a million and some are predicting twice as many by 1980.

According to the Moped Association of America, 38 states have enacted special moped laws in the past few years. Generally they waive requirements for special licenses, liability insurance and helmets. More than a dozen states do not require registration and a number of those that do charge $5 or less.

"There is not very much accident data, and we don't know what the scope of the problem (here) may be," said Lewis Buchanan, a motorcycle safety specialist at NHTSA.

All but one of the moped states clearly spell out speed limits ranging from 20 to 30 miles per hour. Maryland is without one, but sets the engine size at 1.5 horsepower — mechanically creating a speed limit of 25 m.p.h.

He said the agency is studying 200 moped accidents in depth to determine what the causes were and what types of injuries resulted. Separately, the agency is examining the handling, stability and other features of the vehicles, which must be pedaled to start their one-cylinder motors.

Even the biggest moped has no more than a two horsepower engine — about half that of the average lawnmower, says the association.

"We are already noting a visible increase in mopeds in such places as Seattle, Portland, Ore., and St. Louis," reports the association's executive director, M. Paul Zimmerman. The cities are the largest in the three largest states without moped laws.

"Our experience has been that while mopeds gain in popularity, specific moped laws can't be far behind," says Zimmerman.

Ironically, it was an NHTSA decision in 1974 that lifted a significant U.S. roadblock to the sale of mopeds, most of which are foreign-made.

While not predicting when additional states would get behind mopeds, Zimmerman does say: "I would be very surprised...if any state would be without a moped law by 1980, when most observers estimate that there will be more than one million mopeds on U.S. roads."

Exemption from several motorcycle safety standards such as turn signals and brake-lade performance gave importers their first real chance to crack the American market, where mopeds now sell for $300 to $650.

Beyond the changes in safety standards and state laws, the popularity of mopeds has climbed because of their high gas mileage and easy-riding image.

Another crucial factor has been the decline of state legislatures to Mandatory busing to stop in L.A.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The California State Court of Appeal Friday ordered an indefinite halt to mandatory busing in the Los Angeles school district, the nation's second largest, pending court hearings on a suit by anti-busing organizations that could take a year.

mediate appeal to the state Supreme Court, however, and said they were hopeful that the cross-town busing program involving 30,000 students would begin as scheduled Sept. 12.

District officials planned an anti-busing rally for Sept. 12.

Attorney General Evelle Younger, who earlier in the week said he supported the suit brought by a group called Bustop against the district's integration program, applauded the appeal court decision and said his office would defend it before the state Supreme Court.

Davis ordered to stay in jail

School Superintendent William Johnston, meanwhile, said the district was prepared to open school as scheduled with or without mandatory busing.

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — T. Cullen Davis, who has fought for his freedom since he was accused of murder and assault two years ago, Friday was ordered held in jail pending trial on a new charge: solicitation of capital murder.

"My hope," he added, "is that we will be allowed at this late date to go forward with our program. But in any event, we'll go forward."

Judge Arthur Tipps, relying on the state's show of video-taped and recorded evidence, denied Davis' request for bail soon after testimony and final arguments in a lengthy bond hearing that ended midday Friday.

Johnston heard of the ruling moments before he started to speak to a group of 2,000 administrators about integration plans for the school district. He told them of the order and added:

Prosecutor Tolly Wilson, wrapping the state's case into a phrase, said Davis "is someone who must consider himself above the law." Wilson said Davis should be kept in jail to protect society.

"As I understand it, the stay is to allow a hearing to take place next week."

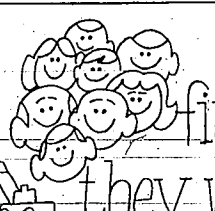

Davis' defense attorney, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, and the millionaire industrialist's staunchly loyal family and friends, said the evidence was manufactured and suspect, and that the key state witness was of such a low character that he should not be believed.

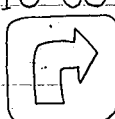

"Our game plan of course is that we're planning to be ready to begin integration Sept. 12."

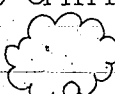

Defense lawyers met with Davis two hours in the jail after Tipps' ruling and emerged describing the defendant's outlook as "fine."

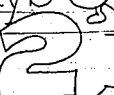

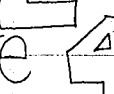

The suit claimed that the massive mandatory busing program was not a "reasonable or feasible" solution to de facto segregation in the sprawling district, saying it cost too much money and wasted too much time. The suit also claimed there were not enough white students to provide "meaningful district-wide" integration.

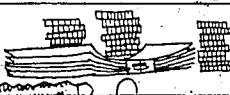

Haynes said they had decided after conferring with Davis to prepare for trial rather than appeal the bond decision to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

TWIN FALLS — For Labor Day there will be no garbage pick-up in Twin Falls and the Twin Falls County landfill will be closed. Sanitation pick-up will resume on Tuesday, one day late. Residents should place trash and garbage out by 7 a.m.

Charges filed

HAILEY — A 49-year-old Jerome man has been charged in the Fifth District Court in Hailey with statutory rape of a 17-year-old Blaine County girl.

Blaine County Deputy Prosecutor Keith Hoark recently filed the criminal complaint against Lewis Onelda.

Onelda denies the charges and the Jerome resident and his attorney say he voluntarily underwent polygraph (lie detector) tests which support his innocence.

Hoark says the girl will also take the polygraph tests and until then his office will continue with prosecution of the case.

'Crib death' ruled

FILED — A seven-week-old Filer baby was dead on arrival at the hospital late Thursday of what authorities say was a "crib death."

Sheriff's officers reported receiving a call Thursday morning from George Quintana, a resident of the Casa Grande apartments here.

The father told police the infant had been put to bed about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday and was fed some oatmeal cereal before going to sleep.

He said the child was sleeping in a bassinette beside his bed and when he awoke the baby was not moving and appeared to have stopped breathing.

Quintana said he took the baby from the crib into the living room, and attempted mouth to mouth respiration but was unable to get any response from the infant.

Officers said they believed the baby had been dead for a time before it was discovered by the father and had apparently died of a crib death sometime during the night.

Buhl school construction halted

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BUHL — The Vocational education building at the new Buhl high school will probably not be completed until Sept. 25 as a result of orders for revamping of some electrical installations in the building.

The remainder of the new school plant is complete and in use and school officials had expected to be in the vocational building within a week or so.

School Superintendent Robert Pratt said general contractor for the school building, Nelson and Co., asked for an extension to Sept. 25 after it was found some of the electrical outlets and electrical panels had not been installed to meet the code as it applies to wood working shops and mechanical repair shop areas.

Pratt said the school was concerned about the cost of reworking the electrical installations. In a school board meeting earlier in the week, school trustees agreed the district should not be responsible for any additional cost on the matter.

Edmond Peterson of CTA Architects and Engineers, said there was a difference in interpretation of the code and not actually an error on the part of the contractor, sub-contractor or designer.

Artie Barker, Boise, of the electrical division, Department of Labor and Industrial Services, said the installations were made to meet classroom structure but did not meet wood mill or mechanical shop requirements of the code, which he said must be applied to classroom construction where this type of training is going to be offered.

"This was a routine matter, much like those we run into on other construction projects. It has been found out and I think everyone is happy," Barker said.

He said the cost of revising electrical outlets will be billed to the architect and engineering firm, and he said the firm is aware of this and has agreed to it.

Pratt said he understood the outlets and electrical panels had to be sealed to be made dust proof in the wood working area and sealed against gasoline fumes in the mechanical area in order to protect the building from fires.

As of Friday no estimates of the cost for sealing and in some cases relocating the electrical panels and outlets was not available. Guesses on the cost ranged from several hundred to several thousand dollars.

Wheeler Electrical Co. Inc., Idaho Falls, is the sub-contractor for the project, Pratt said, and will be doing the work, but will have to be paid for the additional effort since the original installation followed specifications.

Name change to end calls

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — A man bothered at home and at work for four years by telephone calls from his former wife can have a little rest now — she won't know who to call.

The man has changed his name. Judge Richard Armstrong said it was the first case he can remember in which he was asked to approve a name change because of harassment from a former spouse.

Twin Falls students number 6,249

TWIN FALLS — Enrollment in the Twin Falls school district is up this year by approximately one classroom over the final figure last year.

Dr. James Sawin, superintendent, said there were 6,249 students in the district's classrooms Thursday. This figure, he said, will probably increase by Tuesday by about another 100 students but will decline again before spring. Dr. Sawin said last May 18, the figure was 6,224.

As of Thursday there were 3,279 elementary students, 1,491 junior high students and 1,449 senior high school students.

The superintendent said school officials are watching the kindergarten and lower elementary grades closely because of increases there. Kindergarten, for example has 455 at this time, compared to 431 children last year. Special education this year includes 30 youngsters.

There are more than 500 pupils in each of the first two grades but decreases are showing up in the third through sixth grades.

Dr. Sawin said the district hopes to add two new classrooms in the near future to each of the elementary schools with the exception of Bickel where there is not room for expansion. Most of the classrooms have less than 30 students, he said, and five classrooms are below 20.

"We aren't hurting at this time, but if the increasing kindergarten, first and second grades enrollment continues, we will need these extra classrooms very soon. Elementary, other than kindergarten, is pretty much stable, while secondary shows some increase," Dr. Sawin said.

Boy Scouts go into the trout farm business

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Snake River Area Boy Scout Council is planning to enter the trout farming business.

Scout council President Gordon Beckstead, of Twin Falls, said Tuesday the scouts plan to divert the water from Banbury Springs, which flows across the Camp Roach boy scout camp into the Snake River. The camp is across the river from Banbury Hot Springs, between Buhl and Hagerman.

The diverted water will be used to supply a trout hatchery, which will be operated for the council by a local trout raising company.

Two members of the scout council and Buhl trout grower Ken Ellis have filed an application with the Department of Water Resources for the rights to 200 cubic feet per second of water from the springs.

Their application will be protested by the Idaho Fish and Game Department, according to the department's regional director, William Webb.

Webb said his department will protest on the grounds that diversion of the water will deplete the 12-acre lake on the Boy Scout property (100 acres the scouts lease from Idaho Power Co. for $1 per year), adversely affecting fishing and waterfowl hunting.

Webb said the protest will be filed under the criterion of local public interest, which was added to the list of criteria under which water rights applications may be protested when the legislature passed the state water plan earlier this year.

Webb said the scouts have applied for nearly twice as much water as the springs actually produce. He said the year-round, average flow of the springs is 108 cfs, according to United States Geological Survey figures.

Beckstead, however, vowed the scouts will not divert the water if it will result in the destruction of the camp environment. He said the lake and the vegetation in the spring area will be preserved.

He said the scout council plans to enter the fish raising business for two reasons, to protect the boy scout camp and to raise revenue.

The council first decided to file for rights to water from the springs out of fear that someone else would file on the water and ruin the scout camp, Beckstead explained.

Beckstead said the council heard that "several parties" planned to file for the first two grades but some rights. "Somebody was going to use it (the water), if we didn't," he stated.

One of the parties considering filing for the water is the federal government, which has been inspecting sites along the Snake River in an attempt to find locations for federal steelhead and salmon hatcheries. The hatcheries are part of a planned mitigation program to compensate for fish lost when dams were built on the lower Snake River.

Webb confirmed Banbury Springs is one of the sites the federal government has been considering for a hatchery.

Beckstead said when he heard the scouts might lose their water, he called Ellis, and asked how the water could be saved for the scouts.

Ellis said the scouts could file for the water for fish propagation, Beckstead said, and offered to help the scouts set up their hatchery.

Webb pointed out that under the new state water plan, the scouts could also have filed for the water for purposes of recreation or fish and wildlife habitat preservation.

Beckstead said donors have been found to put up the money to build the hatchery for the scouts, and once the hatchery is built, the scouts will contract with a local trout producer to raise the fish for the scouts on a profit sharing basis.

Beckstead said no members of the scout council will realize any profit from the arrangement. Beckstead said Ellis predicted the scouts' share of the profits from the hatchery could be $25,000 to $50,000 per year.

Ellis said Tuesday his company, Valley Trout Farms, Inc., has no interest in the water rights. His name is on the water rights application as an individual and a friend of scouting. He said it is his impression that the scouts intend "to try to water a deal" with his company to raise fish for them, but he added, "they may talk to others (trout producers)."

"I don't care who runs the thing," Ellis stated, and added that if he wanted to make money off the water on the scouts' property, he could have filed on it long ago.

Ellis said he could not predict how much revenue the scouts can realize from the hatchery until it is determined how much water will be left after water is taken out to preserve the lake and vegetation of the spring area.

Beckstead said the water will be collected high up the canyon wall where the springs originate, and the diversion itself will be barely visible from the camp on the canyon floor. The natural vegetation of the area will be preserved by means of a sprinkler system, he added.

Beckstead said the council hopes, by securing the water rights, to convince Idaho Power Co. to give the land to the scouts. If the scouts can secure the land from Idaho Power, they will build a hatchery on that land. If not, Beckstead said, they will build their hatchery on land they have leased across the river and downstream from Banbury Hot Springs. If the latter course is necessary, the scouts plan to run water from the diversion downstream through a dirt ditch and then run it across the river via a pipe beneath the surface.

Idaho Power official Bob Brown said Tuesday the company is not prepared to comment at this time on "what might or might not be done" with the property.

Individuals who wish to protest the scouts' water rights application have until Sept. 11 to file written protests with the Department of Water Resources.

Standing up, a big change

MIAMI (UPI) — Waitress Carol Williams thought the man seated at the luncheonette table looked like a typical tourist — baseball cap, no shirt, and camera slung over his shoulder.

She told him the Key Biscayne luncheonette had a policy against serving shirtless patrons. The man said he was sorry and stood up, whereupon Miss Williams realized he not only had no shirt — he was wearing nothing but the cap and the camera.

None of the other customers, sipping coffee and reading newspapers, had noticed.

Beckstead said when he heard the scouts might lose their water, he called Ellis, and asked how the water could be saved for the scouts.

Ellis said the scouts could file for the water for fish propagation, Beckstead said, and offered to help the scouts set up their hatchery.

Webb pointed out that under the new state water plan, the scouts could also have filed for the water for purposes of recreation or fish and wildlife habitat preservation.

Beckstead said donors have been found to put up the money to build the hatchery for the scouts, and once the hatchery is built, the scouts will contract with a local trout producer to raise the fish for the scouts on a profit sharing basis.

Beckstead said no members of the scout council will realize any profit from the arrangement. Beckstead said Ellis predicted the scouts' share of the profits from the hatchery could be $25,000 to $50,000 per year.

Ellis said Tuesday his company, Valley Trout Farms, Inc., has no interest in the water rights. His name is on the water rights application as an individual and a friend of scouting. He said it is his impression that the scouts intend "to try to water a deal" with his company to raise fish for them, but he added, "they may talk to others (trout producers)."

"I don't care who runs the thing," Ellis stated, and added that if he wanted to make money off the water on the scouts' property, he could have filed on it long ago.

Ellis said he could not predict how much revenue the scouts can realize from the hatchery until it is determined how much water will be left after water is taken out to preserve the lake and vegetation of the spring area.

Beckstead said the water will be collected high up the canyon wall where the springs originate, and the diversion itself will be barely visible from the camp on the canyon floor. The natural vegetation of the area will

Early fumble helps Beavers beat W.R.

HALLEY — American Falls scored on a 73-yard fumble recovery run in the first quarter to point the Beavers to a 19-0 victory over the Wood River Wolverines Friday afternoon.

The game-changer came after the Wolverines had marched to the 27-yard line. Wood River, shaken by the situation, wasn't able to get that close again.

"I felt defensively we just didn't play that badly. But that fumble mentally destroyed us," Coach John Hopkins said. "That's something that we're just going to have to learn to shake off. But I know we're going to show a lot of improvement because this is a young, experienced team, and we're going to come back strong against Kuna next week."

American Falls added a second-quarter touchdown on a 19-yard pass and then ground out the third score with a fourth-quarter sustained march.

Twin Falls jayvees topple Filer 18-0

FILER — Gary Krumm hit Greg Scheer with two touchdown passes and sneaked a yard for another Friday night to lift the Twin Falls sophomores to a penalty-marred 18-7 decision over Filer's Wildcats.

Filer dominated the first quarter and a half but went behind with 6:35 left in the half when Krumm and Scheer hooked up on a 52-yard bomb. Scheer ran for most of it. Just before halftime Twin Falls made a goal line stand inside the five-yard line to protect the lead.

Midway through the third period, after a long pass from Krumm to Scheer set things up, the combination struck for nine yards and the second Bruin score.

But Filer roared right back, scoring on a pass from Tracy Heaps to Monte Marshall. Jon McGregor booted the point after.

But Twin Falls held the ball most of the fourth quarter on a series of penalties and a couple of good runs. But the big break came with 4:25 left when Filer fumbled a Bruin punt and Twin Falls recovered on the 13. After one first down, Krumm sneaked in from about a foot away.

Bonneville rolls past Burley 29-7

IDAHO FALLS — The Bonneville Bees scored in the first two minutes of the game Friday and went on to topple the Burley Bobcats 29-7 in the season grid opener for both teams.

There were still 10:18 left in the first quarter when Vance Richardson broke away on a 38-yard gallop. The teams settled down after that but with 3:02 left in the first half, Bonneville moved ahead 19-0 when Jeff Berger capped a drive by getting the last three yards.

Early in the third quarter Bonneville went marching again and four minutes into the half Ken Bame banged across from the five.

Burley then replied with its highlight of the night as Don Conrad broke loose through the middle, shook off a couple of tacklers and then showed good foot in sprinting into the end zone to complete an 88-yard romp. Bonneville nullified that with a quick reply drive and 4:38 later Jim Thain punched in from the one for the final touchdown of the night.

Bonneville's final points came on a safety when John Hohn tackled Jones in the end zone.

Aberdeen surprises Declo in 12-6 upset

DECLO — Aberdeen — coming within a last-second foolish mistake of ruining an impressive season opener — outlasted the Declo Hornets 12-6 Friday night in what was considered a surprise by Magic Valley football watchers.

Aberdeen, after picking up the lead in the first half, tried a silly flat pass with five seconds left in the game and almost paid for the mistake. Declo linebacker Robert Hess picked it off at his own 30 and sailed 60 yards before the sixing quarterback saved his mistake by managing a shoestring tackle that saved the touchdown.

Aberdeen got its first touchdown on a 15-yard pass to Jeff Paul. A fake kick conversion failed, making it 6-0 at halftime.

Aberdeen came out in the second half with a good march with Paul culminating things on a 15-yard off tackle splash.

Declo replied with its first solid drive of the night but fumbled that away at the Aberdeen 10. The Hornets forced a punt and then drove for their only score. It came on an eight-yard strike from Dale Darrington to Curtis Richens with 4:16 left in the game.

Kimberly hits early to top Oakley 20-8

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly Bulldogs, anchoring its attack on the running of Mark McKinlay, scored three first-half touchdowns Friday night to defeat the Oakley Hornets 20-8.

Kimberly forced a punt soon after the opening kickoff and went marching. The march went a few plays but ended suddenly when McKinlay broke a 29-yard scoring scamper. Dave Hanchey threw to John Coates for the two-pointer.

Midway through the second quarter, Kimberly picked up six more points when Hanchey sneaked across from the one to end a 63-yard drive. The point-after missed.

On its next possession, Kimberly struck largely with McKinlay and he replied with runs of 29, 19 and 11 yards to help set things up for Ed Overacre's three-yard touchdown dive.

The second half had no scoring until late in the fourth quarter when Baker kicked a 20-yard drive by scoring on a one-yard buck. He also added the two-point conversion.

McKinlay ended the night with 226 yards to kickoff his senior season.

Pirates edge Wendell

HAGERMAN — The Hagerman Pirates scored twice in the second quarter but then had to fight tooth and tongue to pull off a 14-12 victory over the Wendell Trojans last night.

The first quarter was spent by both teams testing defense and offense and neither team could muster much of scoring punch until Hagerman put on a drive that resulted in a touchdown on the first play of the second quarter.

The Pirates got the ball when the center snap was over the Trojan kickers held and they recovered it at the 15. Dave Andrus reached the end zone on a five yard run to make the score 6-0.

The Pirates second score came on a 35-yard pass play from Jim Keppeler to Andrus. The extra point try was no good and the half ended with Hagerman on top 14-0.

In the second half, the Trojans got the ball about mid-field and used a constant drive to reach the end zone with Alan Lancaster going three yards off tackle for the score. The extra point attempt failed and the third quarter ended 14-6 with Hagerman in the lead.

In the fourth quarter, the teams exchanged punts before Wendell put together another constant drive which was capped with 4:25 left in the game when Bill Bunn scored from the six yard line to make 11-14-12. The extra point attempt again failed.

On his way to three scores

Halfback Mark Schaal sweeps past Madison defenders on his way to the second of three touchdowns he scored for the Buhl Indians

Friday night. Schaal had two runs and a pass reception to contribute to the Indian winning cause.

Schaal-led Buhl tips Madison

BUHL — Junior Mark Schaal scored three second-half touchdowns — two of them on long gallops — to lift the embattled Buhl Indians to an 18-7 victory over the big Madison Bobcats Friday night.

Schaal broke a scoreless duel with a short burst in the third quarter and then pushed the Indians out of reach with scoring romps of 66 and 79 yards.

Randy Wilson, after being on the receiving end of a couple of key passes from Merrill, got Madison on the scoreboard in the closing minutes with a three-yard burst.

Between time it was a lot of hitting. Buhl controlled the statistics in the first half but went into the dressing room with only a tie. The Indians' best threat came in the first quarter when they pined together a drive that carried to a first down on the 12-yard line. But two plays later a fumble cost them possession on the seven.

Over the rest of the half, Buhl seldom on any kind of field position, taking over deep in its own territory twice and punching out in good shape before losing the drive. At the end of the half the Indians held an 11-3 first-down advantage as Madison's defense refused to yield in crucial situations.

The Indians thus posted their 33rd victory in 34 outings in the past three years, not having lost since a playoff, in 1975. They have been undefeated in regular season play going on their fourth year.

Shelley passing sinks Jerome

JEROME — The Shelley Russets used the passing combination of Paul Schless to Mike Mathews to score twice and take a 20-12 decision over the Jerome-Tigers in both teams' openers Friday night.

Jerome received the opening kick off and only managed six yards in three downs before being forced to punt the ball away but that punt proved costly.

The center snap was over the kickers head and Shelley got the ball on the Jerome 15 yard line and a first down and five plays later scored when Darin Sparks pushed over from the four-yard line for the score just four minutes into the game.

The two teams exchanged punts to start the second quarter and Shelley almost pulled off an 85-yard scoring run but a clipping penalty nullified the run and the scoring drive.

Shelley got the second score with about two minutes left in the half when quarterback Paul Schless hit Mike Mathews for a 15-yard scoring strike. That play was set up by a fumble recovery at mid-field by Mathews.

Not to be outdone, the Tigers put on their own drive and with 4 seconds left on the clock reached paydirt when Tom Garrison swept around the left side to score from the 10 to put Jerome on the scoreboard.

Shelley opened the second half and drew the next blood when they took the ball on their own 43 yard line and marched it down the field for their third and last touchdown. They got new life during that drive on a facemask penalty against Jerome that gave them a first down at the Jerome 41 yard line.

The combination of Schless to Mathews proved the scoring touch again as Mathews stole the ball from two Jerome defenders for the score.

Jerome bounced right back with a score of their own at the end of the third quarter when Tiger John Bird took a handoff at the 20-yard line and rambled 80 yards for the Jerome score.

The fourth quarter was another battle of three downs and punt with the Shelley kicker constantly keeping punts high in the air to keep Jerome from threatening.

Jerome was on the march with a

Penn State gets scare from Temple Owls

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Senior Matt Bahr kicked a 23-yard field goal with 10 seconds to play Friday night to lead sluggish third-ranked Penn State to a 10-7 victory over fired-up Temple in the opening game of the 1978 college football season.

The unpredictable Owls, who have two one-point losses to Penn State, "their credit since the resumption of this series four years ago, had the Nittany Lions on the ropes after quarterback Brian Broome hit running back Zachary Dixon with a 21-yard touchdown pass with 10:49 left in the game.

But Penn State's offense, which had trouble getting into gear all evening, finally felled after linebacker Lance Mehl recovered a fumble on his own 42. From that point, Booker Moore ran for 26 yards and Matt Suhey for 21, but the big play in the drive was a third-down pass from quarterback

Chuck Fusina to Scott Fitzkee. Then on a fourth down from the sixth, Bahr, who spent the summer playing in the North American Soccer League, calmly booted his three-pointer to give the Lions the victory.

Penn State, which never crossed midfield in a scoreless first half, scored the game's first touchdown on Moore's 26-yard bolt over left guard with 56 seconds to play in the third quarter.

But the Owls did not give up as Broome passed 17 yards to Steve Watson and Anthony Anderson dashed 15 yards to put the ball on the Penn State 19.

Two plays later, Broome hit Dixon, streaking down, the left sideline for a touchdown with 10:49 remaining.

The brilliant bunting of Temple junior Casey Murphy kept the Nittany Lions backed up most of the night.

Valley stops Murtaugh

EDEEN-HAZELTON — The Valley Vikings rolled up 427 yards of total offense in taking a 28-14 victory over the Murtaugh Red Devils Friday night.

Valley's Tracy English opened the scoring in the first quarter on a 25 yard run and then backed that up with a 65 yard pass interception in the second quarter.

Valley fumbled deep in their own territory and Murtaugh recovered the fumble. Bill Buckley passed to Rod Stanger for the touchdown and Kip Perkins kicked the extra point to make the score 14-7.

Valley took the kickoff and marched to the 25 where English took a 25 yard pass for Valley's third score to make the score 22-7 at the half.

Valley took the second half kickoff and marched down field to score their last touchdown. Murtaugh added one more. In the fourth quarter when Buckley scored from the two yard line to make the final score 28-14.

Indians win in overtime

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone Indians kicked a 20 yard field goal in overtime to nlp the Hansen Huskies 9-6 Friday night.

Shoshone's Alton Haysler picked up a Husky fumble on the 25 yard line and rambled 75 yards to put Shoshone ahead in the first quarter.

Neither team scored in the second or third quarters but with three minutes left in the game, Hansen recovered an Indian fumble and pushed over by Wad quarterback, sheeking the ball four yards for the score.

Regulation time ran out and in overtime, Shoshone held Hansen on four downs at the 10 yard line before Bart Koobek kicked the field goal to give Shoshone the win.

Top tennis players have easy rounds

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jimmy Connors cruised into the third round of the U.S. Open just one hour before his 26th birthday Friday night and closed a 12-hour show of spectacular tennis before record day-night crowds totaling 23,801 fans.

Connors, defending women's champion Chris Evert and top-seeded Wimbledon guest Martina Navratilova avoided the narrow escapes and upsets of several other high seeds.

Vitas Gerulaitis, Guillermo Vilas and Roscoe Tanner all flirted with elimination but managed to stay alive with three-set victories.

Former champion Manuel Orantes and seventh-seeded Corrado Barazzutti were too lucky.

The record third-day afternoon crowd of 14,779 was treated to some memorable matches on a warm, sunny afternoon. Even the noise abated to tolerable levels as the wind shifted and jets from LaGuardia Airport took off away from the stadium. At night, the record crowd of 9,022 enjoyed balmy weather and more fine tennis.

Walton seeks Blazer reconciliation

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Bill Walton is having second thoughts about leaving the Portland Trail Blazers and in the next few days will sit down privately somewhere in California with Blazer President Larry Weinberg to discuss the possibility of remaining with the club.

Walton's friend and confidant, Jack Scott, said Thursday night that a Walton-Weinberg meeting will be held, with no agents — including himself — present.

Just Larry and Bill, one-on-one," said Scott. "Personally, I think it would be wonderful if Bill stays in Portland."

Walton broke his silence on the matter in Denver, where he had gone to hear the Grateful Dead rock group. He is a close friend of drummer Bill Kruetzmann.

Walton said, "I'll be leaving Friday... back to California."

He offered no comment about the meeting with Weinberg, but said only that the Golden State Warriors are a team 14 to play for. Negotiations are going on right now. But you just never know how those things will turn out."

Walton, who has been on crutches since he broke his left foot in the second playoff game against Seattle in the NBA quarterfinals in late April, said, "I don't know when I'll be able to play but I'm feeling pretty good about it now."

Walton asked Weinberg to trade him a meeting in Chicago in early August, at a time the Blazers were ready to sign a new long-term contract with the NBA's most valuable player. He was disenchanted, Scott said, with the Blazers' medical practices, which Walton believed led to his injury.

The 6-foot-11 former UCLA All-American, who led the Blazers to the NBA championship in 1977, had been playing about a year in league healing his foot. He had hurt the foot against Philadelphia Feb. 23 and was sidelined for the final 23 games of the regular season. But he took pain-killing injections to compete against Seattle, and broke the foot early in the second game of that series.

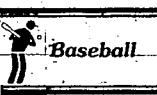

Walton was given permission by the Blazers to pick a team he'd like to be traded to and he chose Golden State after conferences with officials from San Diego, Philadelphia, New York and the Warriors.

Giants edge Phillies in eighth

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Jack Clark lined his 22nd homer with two outs and the bases empty in the bottom of the eighth inning Friday night to give the San Francisco Giants a 4-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The loss, coupled with Pittsburgh's double-header sweep of Atlanta, reduced the Phillies' lead over the Pirates in the National League East to 3½ games.

Gary Gavelle, with two scoreless relief innings, wound up with his 11th victory compared to nine losses, while Steve Carlton went to the distance for the Phillies and slipped to 12-12.

A triple by Tim McCarver and a single by Ted Sizemore with two out in the seventh tied the score at 3-3 after the Giants jumped Carlton for four hits and three runs in the third.

A walk to Bill Maddox after two out and Darrell Evans' 16th homer accounted for the first two runs and the third scored on a triple by Clark and a single by Mike Ivey.

Expos 3, Padres 2

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Sam Mejias, hitting .179, blooped a one-out single in the top of the 12th Friday night to score Larry Parrish from third and give Montreal a 3-2 victory over the San Diego Padres that snapped the Expos five-game losing streak.

Cubs 14, Astros 11

CHICAGO (UPI) — Bill Buckner drove in four runs with a homer and two doubles Friday to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 14-11 triumph over the Houston Astros in a slugfest that featured 31 hits by the two clubs.

Buckner's third homer of the season after a walk to Rodney Scott in the sixth put the Cubs ahead to stay 11-9 and they added a seventh-inning insurance run on Ivan DeJesus' double, a sacrifice and Jerry White's single.

Pirates sweep Braves

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Dale Berra clubbed a two-run, tape-measure homer and Kent Tekulovic earned his 22nd save in the second game Friday night to help the Pittsburgh Pirates defeat the Atlanta Braves 5-0 and complete a sweep of their doubleheader.

Dodgers 4, Mets 3

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dusty Baker's two-out single in the 12th inning Friday night scored Steve Garvey with the winning run and gave the Los Angeles Dodgers a 4-3 victory over the New York Mets.

Garvey singled to left with two out in the inning off loser Kevin Kobel, and after Steve Yeager walked, Baker lashed his third hit of the night to center field. Terry Foster, 5-4, worked the last three innings to get the victory.

Reds 5, Cards 2

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Ken Griffey, Dan Driener and Johnny Bench drove in runs Friday night, hitting the Cincinnati Reds in a 5-2 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Lucas, cash set for Barry compensation

HOUSTON (UPI) — Mike Newlin, the Houston Rockets' sixth man the past two seasons, is suddenly back into the starting lineup with the almost certain loss of John Lucas to the Golden State Warriors, Rockets Coach Tom Nissalke said Friday.

Lucas was the primary compensation awarded to the Warriors Friday by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien in exchange for Houston signing former Warrior Rick Barry, Golden State officials could opt for Houston's top draft choice in 1979 and $350,000 instead of Lucas, but officials of both NBA teams expected Lucas to make the switch.

"Mike and Calvin (Murphy) will be our guards," Nissalke said. "We've given a lot of thought to the possibilities and we were prepared."

Houston's depth at guard included Rudy White, Alonzo Bradley and Robert Reid, who was moved from forward to guard in a summer league as the Rockets prepared for the compensation decision.

The veteran pair of Newlin and Murphy operated as Houston's backcourt for a number of seasons, but when Lucas was drafted in 1976, he took Newlin's starting berth, one month into the season and helped the team to the semifinals round of the NBA playoffs.

"It's very important to us to have a ballhandler standing in," said Nissalke. "He gets the ball down the floor as well as and as quickly as anybody in the league. I'm sorry, to see him leave."

"Plus," said the coach, "I like him personally. We spent a lot of time talking about Lucas' (9.4 per game, second best in NBA) is not that worrisome, Nissalke said.

"I had always told John that assists were not important. I was more interested in the fact that we had problems getting the ball up the court," he said.

Ray Patterson, the Rockets' President and General Manager, said signs for agent Barry to a two-year, $1 million contract June 17 was more important to the team than retaining Lucas.

"The overriding need was acquiring a passing forward to pair with Rudy Tomjanovich. Rick Barry is the best that has ever been in the league," he said.

Patterson took the opportunity Friday to boast about his starting lineup featuring Newlin, Murphy, Barry, Tomjanovich and center Moses Malone.

"I think we will be a devastating offensive team. There's no question but that we will have as good an offense as any team in the NBA," he said.

Barry, 34, is a perennial NBA all-star forward who averaged 23.1 points last season.

Texas 5, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Toby Harrah's ninth inning homer proved to be the decisive run and Reggie Cleveland pitched out of a ninth inning jam to preserve Ferguson Jenkins' 13th victory Friday night and lead the Texas Rangers to a 5-4 triumph over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The victory was the Rangers' sixth in their last eight games.

Jenkins, 34, gave up nine hits, including a pair of homers by Don Money, before being relieved by Cleveland in the ninth when the Brewers put runners on first and third with none out. Cleveland came on to get the last three outs and record his 11th save.

Texas scored four runs in the third. Juan Berglund singled with one out and scored on Mike Hargrove's double to right field. With two outs, John Lowenstein singled home Hargrove and then scored on Al Oliver's double off the right field wall.

Indians 4, Twins 1

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Steve Kemp hit a three-run homer and Rudy Staub added a two-run double Friday night to give the Detroit Tigers a 6-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals behind the nine-hit pitching of Jack Billingham.

Billingham was for the 10th time in his last 11 decisions to boost his record to 15-6. Detroit turned three double plays behind the veteran right-hander.

Staub gave Detroit a 2-0 lead with his double in the third after a double by Alan Trammell and a walk to Lou Whitaker in handling Dennis Leonard's 16th defeat against 15 victories.

The Tigers added their final four runs in the fifth on a single by Trammell, a fielder's choice by Ron LeFlore, a walk to Staub, an RBI single by Jason Thompson and Kemp's three-run homer, his 11th.

Tigers 6, Royals 2

TORONTO (UPI) — Ron Jackson drove in three runs with a two-run homer and single and Brian Downing capped a three-run eighth inning with a two-run single Friday in leading the California Angels to a 6-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Paul Hartzell went 7 2/3 innings and gave up nine hits and four runs in raising his record to 7-8. Dave LaRoche picked up his 19th save in 1-13 innings of relief.

Lanning 4-3 in the eighth, Carney Lansford led off with a single and took third on a single by Lyman Bostock. Victor Cruz then relieved starter Jesse Jefferson and gave up a run-scoring single to Jackson which tied the game and a two-run single to Downing.

The Jays took a 3-0 lead in the third inning on a run-scoring double by Bob Billea, a run-scoring triple by Al Woods and John Mayberry's run-scoring double.

California rallied for three in the fourth on Bostock's fourth home run and Jackson's fourth homer of the season after Joe Rudi's one-out single.

Camas County blasts Castleford 75-14

FAIRFIELD — Defending, state champion Camas County welcomed Castleford into eight-man football with a rugged initiation Friday afternoon, running off with a 75-14 victory.

The Mustangs scored four touchdowns in the first quarter to indicate that they again will be a contender for the state title, which came as no surprise. Senior quarterback John Kirkland had a field day with rolls and passing while Keith Lemons piled up a lot of points and yardage.

Castleford, a very young team, simply wasn't a match for the Mustangs — but that's not problem because very few eight men teams will be.

The Mustangs roared 70 yards in four plays on their first possession, Lemons getting most of that with two big runs. Kirkland scored on a six-yard rollout.

On his next possession, Camas County collected on a 65-yard pass from Kirkland to Tony Dalin. Two plays after the ensuing kickoff, Kirkland intercepted a Castleford pass at the Wolfe 25-yard line. On the next play Lemons swept in for the touchdown. The ensuing kickoff fell into no-man's land at the Castleford 31 and the Mustangs got their first to claim possession. Three plays later Dave Ivel belted in from the nine. Ivel also added the extra points throughout the quarter to make it 36-0.

In the second period, Kirkland and Darrel Stewart hooked up on a 50-yard scoring pass and before halftime Kirkland turned to Lemons with a screen pass and he turned it into another 50-yard scoring play.

Kirkland started scoring in the third quarter with a 20-yard rollout and minutes later Lemons returned a punt for 65 yards. Castleford then replied with its first touchdown, Bob Bukdely going across from the four after a pair of passes that at top of most of the 65-yard march.

Camas County rebounded with another Kirkland rollout before Castleford would things up with a 50-yard end-around scamper

Richfield rolls to 34-0 win over Carey

CAREY — Quarterback J.R. Brown ran for one touchdown and three for another and Richfield's defense dominated the day Friday when the Tigers dropped the Carey Panthers 34-0.

The game, if nothing else, led to rest rumors that Carey would cancel the season due to a late coaching change and a light turnout. The Panthers had only 18 men in uniform Friday but anticipated a few more players coming out when school starts next week.

Richfield put together three drives and capitalized on a fumble recovery to take the victory. The fumble set off the first score, Scott Bowen getting it on a six-yard burst. In the second period Brown wedged in from a half-yard away and before halftime the Tigers added a safety.

Gordon Rogers' four-yard burst capped the third quarter drive that shoved Richfield out of the Panthers' reach. The final score was an eight-yard flip from Brown to Bob Naylar.

Carey was unable to threaten during the game, a non-conference meeting between the two Snake River eight-man conference members.

Stingley hit with lung complications

CASTRO VALLEY, Calif. (UPI) — A potentially life-threatening lung complication has slowed the recovery of New England Patriots wide receiver Darryl Stingley, who was left paralyzed after an exhibition game Friday against the Oakland Raiders Aug. 12.

"During the past three days, there have been significant complications and problems regarding Darryl's lungs," a hospital bulletin said Friday. "These problems, despite vigorous treatment, persist and are potentially life-threatening."

The statement also said, "His condition remains serious. Darryl remains alert, cooperative and in good spirits. His family, including his wife, mother and brother, are with him constantly."

At a news conference with his family Thursday, Stingley's brother, Wayne, said Darryl's optimism is not shaken — he's already talking about playing for the New England Patriots in time for the Super Bowl.

"Just before we came down here, he was talking about getting back on the field by December," said Wayne. "I could tell he was getting excited. He wanted to be moved so he could sit up some more."

Stingley, a member of the Patriots since being drafted on the first round in 1973, was severely injured when he collided with safety Jack Tatum during an exhibition game against the Raiders. He has since undergone two operations to relieve pressure on his spine.

"We've received calls and letters from people who were told they'd never walk again," said Wayne — running and dancing," and they're Stingley. "Darryl feels he'll be able to get up and play football again and so do we."

Prior to the news conference with Stingley's brother, mother, Hilda, and wife, Tina, Eden Hospital laid strict ground rules.

"There will be no interviews, or pictures of Darryl," said spokesperson Nancy Nickel, "and the family will not answer questions about his condition. The doctors will not be present either, because, as you probably know, they are shy of the press."

"I wouldn't say anything has come to an end," said Stingley's mother in reference to articles that have claimed the wide receiver's career is over. "I believe God will raise Darryl up again and make him a whole man."

"My faith in God has helped me through the years in raising my four children and each is successful in his or her field. I trust He will answer our prayers."

Stingley's wife "talked about the effect of her husband's injury on their sons, aged nine and seven."

"No, this won't change things," she said of her sons' involvement in little league football and basketball. "They were hurt about this at first, but they're adjusting to it."

"They haven't been here and I won't bring them out."

Stingley, whose condition has stabilized, undergoes daily physical therapy. Doctors, however, will not make any predictions of recovery although Stingley has limited arm movement and sensation over his entire body.

Ali has next title defense on his mind

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A relaxed and confident Muhammad Ali, who has yet to retrieve his World Boxing Association title from Leon Spinks, already is assuming he'll regain the crown and has decided who he'll fight next and how much the bout will cost.

All, relaxing with his legs propped on a small table following a workout "shortened by high humidity, said he may hold the championship for about six months and then take on Larry Holmes for $6 million for the undisputed world championship.

Just a few minutes before announcing that bout, however, Ali had said the Sept. 15 fight with Spinks in the Louisiana Superdome would be his last.

"That's my last one," Ali had said. "That's the only thing keeping me going. Knowing that this is the last one keeps me going."

Ali's statement also was re-emphasized that the promoter, Top Rank Inc., holds the rights to his next three fights if he beats Spinks. Hearing that, Ali said he may hang on to the crown for another six months and then fight Holmes.

"I would have a right to hold it for for a year before making a title defense," Ali said. "I still could take on Larry Holmes. I would need about $8 million because $3 million would go to taxes. I could fight him whenever."

Angels and demons of any future bouts would be up to Ali.

"Ask him tomorrow and you might get a different answer," Dundee said. "He's just keying on one guy and that's the Spinks. He's probably in as good a shape as he was against Frazier in Manila (in 1975)."

All was sweating profusely after working out in misty Municipal Auditorium, and he cut off his scheduled 10-round workout by only three rounds.

"I ran low hard this morning — about seven miles," Ali said. "It's so hot. It's going to take a couple of days to get used to this weather. But I'm in shape now. I took no chances with this bout — I started training five months ago."

All said he would try to spar 10 rounds Saturday if he felt well enough.

"That's the key to my longevity," Ali said. "I have no trainer and no bosses. If I don't want to run I won't run. Most trainers tell their man, 'Come on, let's go another round.' That's crazy. Nobody can tell me what to do."
