

The Beans Inc. warehouse is back in business now after a license suspension

Bean warehouse in Filer gets in, and out, of trouble

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

FILER — State agriculture officials found a shortage of high grade beans at Beans Inc. in Filer two weeks ago and temporarily suspended the company's operating license.

The Times-News has learned inventories at Beans Inc. were short approximately 10,000 one hundred-pound sacks of number one grade beans at the time of the inspection in late August.

After the discovery, the department temporarily suspended the California-based bean dealer's bonded warehouseman license until Beans Inc. could "get its house in order."

About ten days later, after requiring Beans Inc. to double its operating bond, agriculture officials restored the warehouse's license.

The Times-News has learned other irregularities have occurred at the Filer warehouse over the past four years.

Shortly after okaying a train carload of number one grade beans this summer, an inspector discovered part of the load had been replaced with number two grade beans.

Ski price probe urged

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — The Skiflation Committee Thursday requested an investigation by the U.S. Justice Department into possible price fixing at Sun Valley and other ski resorts but blamed the problem on the U.S. Forest Service.

The Ketchum-based group made its request in a letter to John Shenfield, the chief of the department's anti-trust division, asking that he begin an "immediate investigation" of ski areas on public lands.

Further, the group charged the U.S. Forest Service is sanctioning "the monopolistic use of public lands."

The committee had drafted its letter earlier and this week has been debating before taking action Thursday.

The Skiflation Committee's letter asserts the forest service has failed to regulate ski lift rates charged on public lands and that the Forest Service's current regulation policy assures "inadvertent price fixing."

The group, which is fighting lift rate increases at the Sun Valley resort this winter, claims that public ski areas, among which the Sun Valley resort is specifically named, share a monopoly over the ski industry. The committee argues this "shared monopoly" enables ski resorts to avoid true market competition and in effect fix their own prices.

Sun Valley Co. General Manager Wally Huffman declined Thursday to comment on the Skiflation Committee's charges, but he characterized the group's legal theories as "academic gymnastics."

Depending on the variety, number two beans could have sold for from 50 cents to $1 cheaper per hundred-weight than the number ones, which originally made up the entire carload.

Also this summer the Idaho Crop Improvement Association revoked the right of Beans Inc. to participate in Idaho's certified seed program because the company had allegedly mishandled beans, according to G.E. Choate, district fieldman for the ICIA.

And more than three years ago Beans Inc. reportedly sold bean seed to growers which had not been tested for bacterial blight while representing the seed as tested for disease.

In the wake of difficulties at his Idaho warehouse, James Woods of Salinas, Calif., owner of Beans Inc., filed a $3 million civil suit against three of his former employees and their alleged associates charging they caused certain of the problems at the warehouse. Woods refused to talk about the lawsuit with the Times-News.

The employees however, denied the charges and said they plan to file a counter suit for damages against Woods for attempting to defame them and ruin their new bean business.

About the bean shortage, Jerry Williams, administrator of bonded warehouses for the Idaho Department of Agriculture, said his department treated Beans Inc. like any other company which is "out of position."

"Their license was temporarily suspended," Williams said. "Their inventories were a little bit out of position, but they have done whatever we asked them to and they are now prepared to operate a business as far as the law is concerned."

After contacting Woods' office in California, the Times-News was referred to Martin Taylor, a spokesman for Beans Inc., who said this week, "Everything is fine at the warehouse."

Wilson Kellogg, Idaho director of agriculture, said another mix-up occurred this summer at Beans Inc. when the dealer "changed a load" of beans which had already been inspected. The inspector involved "complained about it," Kellogg said.

The Idaho Crop Improvement Association's Choate said Beans Inc. violated rules of handling certified seed beans to insure varietal purity this year.

"We don't kick anybody out unless it is a last resort," Choate said. "If they don't qualify for our standards, we just kick them out."

Choate said Beans Inc. accepted seed earmarked for certification by the association in bulk trucks instead of in separate bean boxes as dictated by the rules.

"If we can't trust the seed warehouses, we don't have a seed program," Choate said. "If they can't play by the rules they get out of the game."

He said the suspension of the privilege of handling seed in the state certification program could be restored after a certain period of time if the warehouse demonstrated compliance with the rules. Other warehouses in Magic Valley have undergone similar disciplinary actions in the past.

More than three years ago, in what Kellogg called a "screwball way of doing things," Beans Inc. reportedly sold seed to growers which had not been inspected for bacterial blight.

Kellogg said the incident was not malicious. It involved a "screwball misunderstanding" in which a quantity of beans inspected and found free from blight were being sold. As the lot of beans dwindled, Beans Inc. employees added more beans which had not been inspected cleared of blight.

Owner Woods of Beans Inc. filed a civil suit Sept. 7 in Twin Falls Fifth District Court charging Larry Corlgat and Sue Christmann of Twin Falls, Ralph Taylor of Filer, two more Beans Inc. employees in Salinas, Calif., and several alleged associates of the three Idahoans.

Woods charged various defendants with ten different civil offenses including allegedly taking business opportunities from his company while still employed by him. He charged defamation of his business and other damages.

The Idaho defendants averred the falsity of all charges and said they will file a counter suit based on documentary evidence which disproves all Woods' charges.

Corlgat, a former manager at Beans Inc., said a state inspector checked the Filer warehouse just before he resigned his post and found the house entirely in order, indicating missing beans have become a problem since his departure.

Communists can't fence in their insecurity

©N.Y. Times Service
HOF West Germany — The East German government with the advice and support of the Soviet Union has finished the frontier fence that runs 635 miles from the Baltic Sea to the Czechoslovak frontier.

To the touring American soldier from Kansas or California the fence is a terrifying testament to the power of totalitarian rule. But with its watchtowers, its lethal devices, its constant patrols it is also a reminder of the fundamental insecurity of communist governments.

For the fence, constructed at an estimated cost of half a million dollars a mile, was built not to bar entry by the United States or other armies of the North Atlantic Alliance but to prevent East Germans escaping to the West.

Since they began building the fence early in this decade the Germans have added a murderous device to discourage would-be escapees.

At intervals of six meters along the fence are innocuous looking white boxes. Each of these contains a firing mechanism for what the second armored cavalry patrols here describe as shotguns.

When an electric trip wire is activated by an East German seeking to cross the fence, the shotgun discharges 80 balls about the size of a large ballbearing.

"They got one a while back," a trooper of the second said. "It took the East Germans damn near two hours to get up what was left and cart it away."

As an added disincentive to escape, the East German government has ringed every village and town near the frontier with a fence. Permission to enter the village or town is granted by police at the main gate only during daytime hours.

Yet long before these fences, similar to that which runs along the frontier, were erected the East German Communist government said "it had evicted all "politically unreliable" persons and sent them and their families to the interior of the German Democratic Republic.

The East Germans have added a last refinement to the wire fence. The upper edges of the wire are razor sharp. Any escapee trying for a handhold would lose his fingers and, when he had activated the shotgun, his life.

Despite these hazards 7 East German border guards and 11 East German civilians have managed to pierce the fence to freedom in the last nine months by various means. They defied not only the shotguns, the razor-sharp edges of the fence and ravenous German shepherd dogs left to run loose in certain sensitive areas.

New process may negate plutonium's big threat

Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — A panel of nuclear experts who support the disputed plan to build the Clinch River breeder reactor says a newly developed concept in breeder technology could help limit the threat that nations or terrorists might divert plutonium to make weapons.

The concept, known as the Civex nuclear fuel cycle, would produce plutonium that could fuel conventional reactors of the type in operation at nuclear power plants across the country. Concern about the misuse of plutonium has prompted President Carter to oppose development of a prototype breeder reactor at Clinch River, Tenn.

To prevent plutonium from being diverted for weapons production, researchers propose to contaminate the material with radioactive elements at every step of its fabrication and reprocessing. A Civex fuel cycle thus would make efforts to modify a facility to produce weapons-grade plutonium so difficult that a country eager to obtain nuclear weapons would be discouraged from using this approach, the panel said.

The panel of industrial experts said the concept appears technically feasible and worthy of further development.

It said that breeder reactors combined with Civex plants could be deployed in countries such as Brazil and Pakistan that lack their own enriched uranium or plutonium supplies without adding to the risk of nuclear weapons proliferation.

The mice have taken the floor in the Senate office building

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hordes of brazen mice have invaded a Senate office building, "striking fear into a thousand hearts," Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., declared Thursday in a call-to-arms worthy of a Roman senator during the barbarian invasion.

Come to think of it, said Proxmire, "Just as the barbarians descended on Rome, this wave of rodents, this pestilence, this Sodom and Gomorrah of the mouse world, now gnaws at the very foundations of the Senate."

"Unless we act now," he continued in speech prepared for Senate delivery, "the Dirksen Senate Office Building, like Rome, may fall."

Proxmire, whose office happens to be in that same Dirksen Building, said he was not talking "about a few mice, a solitary Mickey Mouse or Minnie Mouse."

"I mean legions of mice. We have brown mice, white mice, soft furry mice, fat, satisfied, arrogant, omnivorous mice."

"You do not know mice," he said, "until you have seen one devour a full bowl of poison and look for more."

Israelis reported agreeing to return Arab territory

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — Egypt's President Anwar Sadat met twice with President Carter Thursday and then huddled with Israel's foreign and defense ministers amid reports the Israelis may be ready to agree in principle on eventual withdrawal from Arab territories.

White House press secretary Jody Powell, saying "more progress and more flexibility" were needed for agreement on a peace formula, said Carter and Sadat took an hour-long stroll together Thursday morning and met again for an hour at Sadat's lodge in the afternoon.

In addition, Powell said, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman visited first Carter and then Sadat.

The 75-minute Sadat-Dayan encounter was the first reported at this 10-day old summit between the Egyptian president and the former Israeli general, hero of Israel's 1967 war effort and architect of the military strategy that brought the West Bank, Gaza Strip and Sinai Peninsula under Israeli control.

White House officials insisted there was nothing unusual in the fact that Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin had not taken part in the meeting. "You don't put two principals head on head until its the right time," he said.

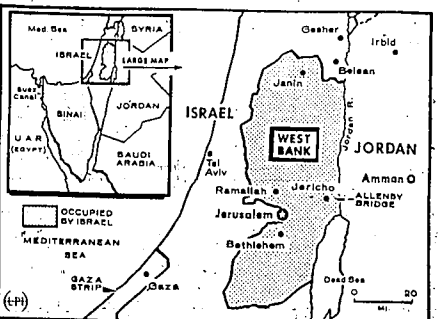

A number of signs suggested the secretive mountaintop summit was coming to a head after 10 days. Vice President Walter Mondale's office announced late Thursday that Mondale had canceled scheduled political appearances in Nevada and California Friday and Saturday, at Carter's request, and would join the Camp David parleys Thursday night.

Summit conference sources, meantime, said the Israelis appear willing to promote an overall peace blueprint by agreeing, in principle, to withdraw in due course from the West Bank and Gaza Strip as part of a general settlement.

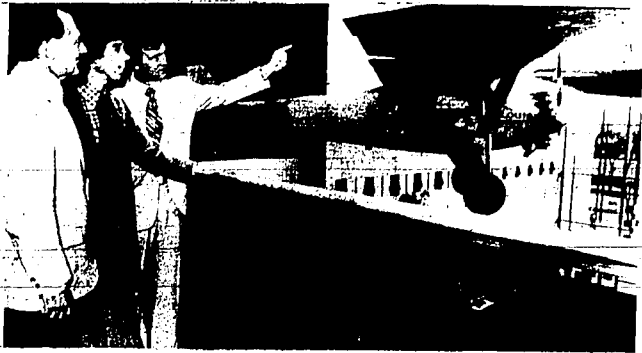

Their comments provoked immediate denials from the Israeli summit delegation, which asked Powell to squelch the report publicly.

"They have asked me to deny it, which I now do," Powell told reporters.

He took pains to caution reporters against "over-optimistic reports" without throwing cold water over the optimistic, upbeat mood that seems to have come over the mountaintop meeting since President Carter, Egypt's President Anwar Sadat and Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Canadian elections planned for spring

TORONTO — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau revealed Thursday that he planned to call nationwide parliamentary elections next spring in this economically and politically troubled land.

Toronto, ended months of political suspense but also set the scene for additional suspense. By law, Trudeau must call elections before his five-year parliamentary mandate expires next July 30. But no Canadian government has ever emerged from a five-year election with a majority.

L.A. boycott continues

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — More than 2,000 additional students showed up at schools directly involved in the mandatory court-ordered integration program Thursday, but nearly 17,000 expected students were still missing from classes in the Los Angeles city school district.

No new money

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The full Senate voted 63-21 Thursday to insist that no new money be included in the 1979 federal budget for two federally funded public works programs, and House-Senate negotiations on the budget were recessed indefinitely.

His statement, made at an Ottawa news conference before his departure for political appearances in Toronto, ended months of political suspense but also set the scene for additional suspense. By law, Trudeau must call elections before his five-year parliamentary mandate expires next July 30. But no Canadian government has ever emerged from a five-year election with a majority.

Two captured

CALICO ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Two of the four armed convicts who shot their way to freedom in Tennessee were captured Thursday after colliding with a police car in northeast Arkansas but the other two remained at large amid growing concern for the elderly couple they held hostage.

Unless the chief negotiators — Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and Rep. Robert Glinco, D-Conn. — can work out some compromise in "informal" talks during the weekend, the budget will go back to the House "in disagreement" and even issues the negotiators thought they had settled could be reopened.

There was some confusion. Capt. Buddy Thompson of the Arkansas State Police at first said the two at large had stolen yet another vehicle, and had wrecked it near Calico Rock in northern Arkansas about 40 miles from the Missouri border.

New military bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Armed Services Committee Thursday approved a new $35.2 billion military authorization bill, deleting the $2 billion nuclear carrier President Carter had vetoed but dashing his hopes for getting additional defense funds this year.

Innocent mistake?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Calif., told the House ethics committee Thursday he made an "innocent mistake" in not reporting a $1,000 cash wedding gift from South Korean businessman Tongsun Park.

The action could have the effect of reducing the overall defense budget by about $2 billion and giving it less buying power than the present year's, after adjustments are made for inflation.

During an evidentiary hearing, Wilson denied charges that he willfully or deliberately tried to deceive the committee in July 1977 when he answered "no" to a question asking if he knew or received anything worth more than $100 from Park.

Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., got unanimous consent to have a vote at 3 p.m. Tuesday on the bill's first big test: a motion to send it back to committee for major repairs.

Near the end of 7½ hours testimony over two days before the House Assassinations Committee, Marina Oswald Porter conceded she now believes her husband assassinated the president on Nov. 22, 1963 in Dallas and acted alone because "I do not believe he would confide in someone."

A negative tax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate committee Thursday proposed the nation's first negative withholding tax — money actually added to each paycheck instead of withheld — as part of a $1.8 billion expansion of tax cuts for about 7.6 million working poor with children.

The finance committee also appeared ready to approve an additional $2 billion individual tax cut atop the $10.8 billion already approved by the House as part of its $16.3 billion bill.

Ski probe requested

Skifitation Committee member Brad Roos, however, commented, "I think the price fixing is really a relevant point of view and I don't think we are out of line asking them to look at price fixing in the ski industry."

Roos and other committee members are in Ogden, Utah, today appealing a local Forest Service decision to allow Sun Valley to raise most of its ski lift rates. It would be the fourth increase in the last six years.

Sun Valley, along with the Aspen and Vail, Colo., resorts, plan to raise their lift rates to $15 this winter. The Skifitation Committee has noted that Sun Valley and other resorts often seem to raise their rates at the same time and by the same amount.

Huffman, however, argued the closeness of pricing proved there was competition among the top resorts, rather than proving price fixing.

He said, "The only way the prices would spread would be to allow a free-floating price system."

The Skifitation Committee noted in 1977 the forest service issued Sun Valley "30 year permits" to operate lift and other ski facilities on Bald Mountain without holding any public hearings or providing any way for competitive groups to apply for permits.

"The effect of this is that the U.S. Forest Service has granted a virtual 30-year monopoly to a private operator who is secure in the knowledge that pricing may be established and levied by the operator without any effective competitive environment whatsoever," the committee stated in its report.

The group also observed that the forest service's lift rate approval policy does not provide any meaningful regulations to assure "a competitive pricing environment to protect skiers using public land."

War now envelopes six Nicaraguan towns

Sandinista guerrilla looks skyward as National Guard planes fire on Leon

By PIETER VAN DENNEKOM
LEON, Nicaragua (UPI) — About 300 National Guard troops on 20 trucks rolled into Leon Thursday vowing to wipe out all guerrilla resistance, and groundfire immediately broke out. Government forces launched a second offensive in Diriamba, spreading the fighting to a sixth town in war-ravaged Nicaragua.

The troop reinforcements, wearing green camouflage uniforms and black berets, roared into southwest Leon shortly after the Guard had announced it was going to drive the Sandinista rebels out of Nicaragua's second largest city, 50 miles west of the capital of Managua.

Witnesses heard heavy gunfire a short time later but there was little information about the fighting. A government helicopter circled overhead but was not using its guns, apparently fearing it might hit its own men.

One resident said National Guard soldiers were pouring mortar fire on the Subtlaba working class neighborhood, a stronghold of the Sandinistas, from a hilltop fortress outside the city.

He said one explosion killed five people, including men, women and children.

"The blast lifted them in the air and their bodies came down in pieces," he said.

A fire ravaged a two-block area in Leon's business district early in the day and some reports said guerrillas had set fire to several stores.

Red Cross spokesmen said 1,600 civilian refugees were holed up in St.

Vincents Hospital in the northwest sector and he was trying to evacuate them. One journalist said Costa Rican Airlines had established an air shuttle from Leon to Costa Rica and 2,000 people had lined for seats at the airport.

Residents of Managua heard sporadic gunfire and bomb blasts Wednesday night but reported the capital was extremely quiet Thursday, in part because of the start of Nicaragua's three-day independence celebrations and in part because of a nationwide martial law order.

Opposition sources said eight opposition leaders met with U.S. diplomats in the morning and asked U.S. help in bringing about mediation through a foreign ministers meeting of the Organization of American States.

The embattled city of Masaya, the scene of heavy fighting for five days, was quiet but Red Cross President Adan Sanchez said heavily armed National Guard troops had entered the central Red Cross station overnight, lined up refugees against a wall and searched the building.

Soldiers opened up Masaya's Omimbo Indian neighborhood for the first time and it appeared calm, although the National Guard barracks had been burned to the ground.

Esteli, Chindanega and Managua have also been the scene of heavy fighting since the guerrillas launched a coordinated offensive last weekend aimed at bringing down President Anastasio Somoza Debayle.

Another government topples in Portugal

By NAT GIBSON

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — A hostile legislative assembly toppled Portugal's third government in two years Thursday without offering any alternative to fill the vacuum.

The vote against the program of the technocratic cabinet of Prime Minister Alfredo Nobre da Costa was pushed through by an alliance of the dominant Socialists, the conservative Center Democrats and a handful of Marxist leftists.

The Communists abstained from the balloting while the centrist Social Democrats voted for the government, appointed by President Antonio Ramalho Eanes.

The rejection opened the prospect for early general elections, although most politicians expected Eanes to try other alternatives first.

It was the collapse of a coalition between the socialists and Center Democrats two months ago that provoked the crisis that led him to resign to a technocratic government outside the party ranks.

In the final debate, both of these parties voiced their strong disapproval of the president's solution, but neither offered an alternative.

"The Socialist Party will not take any initiative to solve the political crisis. It will wait for the president to say something about it," a Socialist spokesman said.

The fall of the government by a vote of 141 against 71 with 40 abstentions came at the end of four days of debate over its program.

Nobre da Costa climaxed the discussions with a cutting attack against the shifting positions of the parties that drew laughter from the galleries.

He questioned whether they were worried more about "power" for themselves than solving the nation's worsening economic problems and said his program followed the policies adopted by the two previous socialist-dominated governments.

"We decided to adopt these programs because we did not find any big mistakes with them and we also decided to respect the policy of continuity," he said. "I am sorry we did not ask the ministers about their copyrights."

Nobre da Costa, describing himself as the "overthrown prime minister," said he feared for the future of Portugal.

"How is this poor country going to survive? How is our economy to resist if we continue postponing solutions? The assembly is going to postpone this country once more," he said.

Slip of the tongue

Red Brigades leader under heavy interrogation

By CHRISTOPHER P. WINNER

ROME (UPI) — Corrado Alunni, leader of the Red Brigades terrorists, gave himself away with a slip of the tongue and underwent intensive police interrogation Thursday.

Alunni, believed by police to be the mastermind behind the kidnapping and killing of former Premier Aldo Moro, was captured Wednesday night when officers who had been watching his Milan apartment for a week moved in.

The 30-year-old fugitive at first said he was an architect named Massimo Turicchia, but slipped up when police asked him who should be notified of his arrest.

"My mother, Liberata Alunni," police quoted him as answering.

Alunni, realizing the error, then gave his correct name and called himself a "fighting Communist" and a "political prisoner."

Police said they found 14 hand guns, two submachine guns, seven rifles and boxes of plastic explosives in the apartment. They also found false documents and Red Brigades literature.

Alunni was considered the heir to the Red Brigades leadership after its founder, Renato Curcio, was captured in 1975.

The capture of Alunni was considered a major breakthrough for police investigating the March 16 kidnapping of Moro. The former premier and president of the Christian Democratic party was held for 55 days before his body was found May 9.

Alunni also was sought in connection with the shooting deaths of the president of the Turin Lawyers Guild, Fulvio Croce, in 1976, and of Turin newspaper editor Carlo Casalegno last year.

Police had been watching the garden apartment where Alunni was staying for more than a week, taking films of everyone who entered and left the building, officers said.

Americans arrested in Uruguay

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (UPI) — The American general manager of the Ford Motor Co. in Uruguay and 19 other Ford officials were arrested Thursday and charged with "illegal economic activities," diplomatic sources said.

The sources said that Ford General Manager Roger Hawkins, a Missourian-born American national, was arrested after police accidentally discovered a warehouse full of Ford automotive parts allegedly smuggled into Uruguay to avoid payment of customs duties.

Three other company executives and 16 Ford employees were also arrested, the sources said, but their names were not immediately available.

Right on, Skiflation committee

The Ketchikan Skiflation Committee has done the right thing by asking the Justice Department to investigate price-fixing in western ski resorts.

To date, the policy of the U.S. Forest Service has been to allow resorts to regulate prices themselves on the ski slopes, cutting through public lands.

This system may very well be in need of revision.

Self-regulation within the ski industry has worked well enough in years past to make skiing an affordable middle-class recreation.

The Skiflation committee's intent is to see that skiing stays within the price-range of the middle class.

Today, throughout the West, major ski resorts charge almost identical prices for their ski packages. The forest service has assumed this pricing is the result of natural competition among the resorts. But this philosophy doesn't take into account the realities of the ski resort industry.

This is an oligopolistic structure where a few resorts control all the western ski market.

There exists an opportunity for these resorts to one-day, by silent agreement, begin charging the same higher-than-necessary prices for their services.

The intent of the Skiflation committee mustn't be to harass the ski industry into prices so low the industry cannot survive a bad year.

But the Skiflation committee can bring a degree of evaluation to the ski-pricing system in the West by asking the Justice Department to investigate the current pricing structure at the major resorts in the West and by helping the forest service draft new guidelines for setting the ski rates.

Cheers for civil service reform

Thursday, the Congress did something right. On a vote of 385-10, the House of Representatives passed a bill—giving managers of federal government offices more latitude in the firing, hiring and promotion of civil servants.

The vote struck a serious blow at the remnants of the spoils system where federal employment was based on who you knew, not on what you could do.

More than two million Americans work for the federal government. Until now, their jobs were good from cradle to social security age once they began their feed at the federal trough.

Plus, top workers couldn't be rewarded with merit pay raises and slots were automatically given a raise simply because they slugged along from year to year.

The old system will change dramatically once the House and Senate iron out minor differences in the just-passed civil service reform bill.

When the new federal employment rules go into effect next year, government employees will be treated more like workers in the private sector.

One will be automatic raises, in will come raises based on merit, not longevity. The federal bureaucracy will emphasize productivity and try to streamline its operations.

To his credit, 2nd District Rep. George Hansen voted for the civil service reform bill even though it was backed by a Democratic President Carter and Hansen is a Republican.

Passage of the civil service reform bill gives President Carter a major victory in Washington and could signal the beginning of the President's rebound in the public polls.

From the President's perspective, and from the taxpayer's viewpoint, the actions by Congress this week are commendable.

Canada's press

NEW YORK — The American press has been having a bad season in court. If it's any comfort, journalists have even worse troubles in Canada — a nation in which, as I learned during a recent visit, the civil liberties seem to be viewed with somewhat less sensitivity than they are here.

In the United States in recent months, the Supreme Court has made clear, both in the Stanford Daily case and in one involving press access to a California county jail, the Court's emerging view that reporters have no special rights in gathering the news.

And a New Jersey judge has fined The New York Times and sent one of its reporters to jail for claiming that under the First Amendment and New Jersey statutes the reporter is not required to turn over his notes to the defense in a criminal trial.

In Canada, the Trudeau government has brought the first prosecution in that country's history of a journalist and a newspaper under the Canadian Official Secrets Act. Peter Worthington, a reporter for the Toronto Sun, and Douglas Creighton, the Sun's publisher, were charged with breaching the act after the Sun carried an article by Mr. Worthington last March 7 in which he quoted a "Top Secret" government document citing numerous specific instances of Soviet espionage against Canada.

Both men could be sentenced to 14 years in prison but that's not necessarily the worst of it. Under the Official Secrets Act, the trial could be held entirely in secret — and parts of a preliminary hearing were. And, as is often the case with "Top Secret" documents in any country, the one in question may not even have been all that secret — or important.

One of the instances cited by Mr. Worthington, for example, was the expulsion of a Soviet journalist from Canada after he had allegedly persuaded a Canadian journalist to "act on behalf of Soviet interests."

But the government's refusal to permit the Soviet "reporter" to return to Canada after a home leave in Moscow was fully reported in the Canadian press in 1974 — among others, by Peter Worthington himself on Jan. 22, 1974, in the Toronto Sun.

Another item Mr. Worthington reported from the "Top Secret" document was that "since 1970, five Canadian corporations have become partners of the Soviets in selling and servicing Soviet goods." But on Nov. 28, 1977, the Regina Leader-Post, in an editorial based on a report in The New York Times, commented on "five Soviet-Canadian joint-equity firms."

The original Times report was based on information made public by the C.I.A. — information that still was marked "Top Secret" in Canada in March, 1978.

An Opposition member of the Canadian Parliament told me, moreover, that "fifty-odd" copies of the document had been distributed to government offices in Ottawa — a sure prescription for a leak and hardly the way to handle a really "Top Secret" copy. Another Opposition M.P., Tom Cassell of Leeds, quoted liberally from the same document on the floor of Parliament well before Mr. Worthington quoted it in a print. And five weeks before his March 7 article, a program called "Operation Code Blue" on Canadian television broadcast much of the information in the same document to a national audience.

The federal Minister of Justice, Ronald Basford, has announced that it would be proper to prosecute Mr. Cassell for his statements in the House of Commons. As for the CTV program, neither Mr. Basford nor anyone else has said why no prosecution has resulted — or why the government has not even requested a tape or a transcript of it. A widely held theory is that the decision not to prosecute Mr. Cassell was unpopular with security "hawks" in the Trudeau Cabinet and with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and that the Worthington-Creighton prosecution was undertaken as a sort of compromise on the issue.

Ironically, Mr. Cassell and Mr. Worthington both are known as strongly anti-Communists. Mr. Worthington received the secret paper in the mail, held it for six months, then published it — he told other reporters — only after Mr. Trudeau made statements suggesting, at least to Mr. Worthington, that the prime minister did not take the threat of Soviet espionage very seriously.

Mr. Worthington said he believed it was more important for the Canadian people to have the information in the document than for him to worry about technical violations of the Official Secrets Act — an argument not unfamiliar to journalists in the United States. But Mr. Basford, sounding rather like Chief Justice Burger, contends that "the press is not in a somewhat special position in our society." Journalists, he insists, "are in no different a position than anyone else."

That seems obviously to be the case in Canada. The Canadian Official Secrets Act, for example, prohibits not just the possession of secret documents but the "communication" of any part of such a document. So, conceivably, Peter Worthington — or any reporter — could be tried in secret and sentenced to 14 years in prison for "communicating" material that already had been widely communicated, in other publications, on national television and in the House of Commons.

The real question, in Canada as in the United States, is whether the public is better served by such restrictions on news gathering than it would be by a press free of them. And those in this country who favor an Official Secrets Act, even though it would surely differ from Canada's, might ponder the difficulties of writing such a statute without raising the specter of a Worthington case in this country.

The Northern Tier

WASHINGTON — Members of a wandering House subcommittee, trying to do something about the energy mess, turned up in San Francisco the other day. California's Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr. gave them a hard time. He said the West Coast is drowning in a glut of Alaskan oil, and he blasted federal red tape that has snarled a solution.

What is needed, said the governor, among other things, is a pipeline to ship the oil east.

Mr. Brown seldom has been more absolutely right. The West Coast is up to its ears in oil. One proposal is that some of our Alaskan oil be swapped to Japan in exchange for some of the oil Japan otherwise would get from the Middle East and Indonesia, but almost no one is happy with that arrangement. The key to the problem, said Rep. Don Clausen of California, lies in solving the "transportation deficit."

The Northern Tier Pipeline Company is now laboring honestly to do precisely that. This consortium of eight partners wants to build a pipeline that would run for 1,560 miles between Port Angeles, Wash., and Clearbrook, Minn. The venture ranks among the boldest engineering projects of this decade, but surprisingly little has been written about it.

This is American capitalism in the grand tradition of John Bunyan. With pardonable chauvinism, the builders are promoting an all-American project. "It will be built with American labor, American capital, American know-how and American products. And it will be built entirely on American soil. It will always be under American control."

It will be built, that is to say, if the law's delays let it be built. Northern Tier was organized in 1975. In April, 1977, it filed its application for federal authority to lay the line. Special permits are required to cross about 200 miles of federally owned land. A general permit is required, depending on the company's environmental impact statement, before it can proceed.

The preparation of an environmental impact statement, required under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1970, is a task of unbelievable complexity. The standing joke is that if Moses had had to file an EIS, he'd be in Egypt yet. Northern Tier must provide detailed estimates on the biological, geological and archeological impact; the company must describe the trees that would have to be cut down, the streams that must be tunneled under, the fish, birds and animals that might be inconvenienced. It must also estimate the socio-economic impact of building the billion-dollar line, and it must examine the alternatives.

Unless the company can be relieved of some of this monumental burden, the first draft of an EIS will not be ready until May of next year. Then many months must be allocated to governmental review. The Departments of Energy, Commerce, Labor, Defense and Transportation must be consulted. Five states will have to be satisfied. A deal has to be worked out with the Flathead Indians of Montana. With every month of delay, inflation will push the costs of construction higher and higher.

Congress and the Carter administration could make a major contribution by cutting through the red tape and speeding this project along. Once completed, the pipeline will move 93,000 barrels of oil a day from the West Coast to the Midwest. The entire line will be underground, half of it on an existing pipeline, railroad and utility corridors.

other people who did not know her at all, attended a healing arts workshop on a farm near Buhl. During the workshop, they formed a circle, holding hands, and performed a healing ceremony for Sonja.

The day after the workshop was the first time Sonja exhibited any reaction to pain since her accident. And within 24 hours, Mickey recalled, "flinching started in one eye, her normal skin color returned, and her temperature stabilized."

Pegan Venzon, a friend of Sonja's who participated in the healing ceremony, described what happened. "Everyone was concentrating on Sonja. You could feel the energy going around the circle. One boy said he actually saw this woman in the circle in a green dress with dark curly hair. (Sonja has dark curly hair.) I felt like I saw her there in the middle. Every time I think about it now, I get chills still. There was a lot of power there."

and she cried real tears. Mickey attributes much of Sonja's recovery to her lifelong dedication to physical fitness. She exercised every day, jumping rope for an hour and running for an hour. She also swam three times a week, and she watched her diet religiously.

"It's really paying off for her, and it's been a lesson for me," Mickey said. In the accident, Mickey recalled, one of Sonja's lungs collapsed, but before doctors could treat her for that condition, the lung repaired itself. Sonja has never needed the help of life support systems, other than feeding and eliminating waste, and she has never suffered from the infections common to patients in her condition.

Mickey considers Sonja's recovery remarkable, but he's no more remarkable than some of the events surrounding her recovery. About one month after the accident, a group of Sonja's friends, and some

Not long after that, four of Sonja's women friends went to her room and performed another healing ceremony, without touching her. Venzon recounted. They simply stood at the four corners of her bed and passed their hands over her. That was the first time Sonja displayed muscular response in the right side of her body, Venzon said.

Mickey has also been amazed at the changes he has undergone since the accident. "The sensitivity that's in me now from this accident is something I've never experienced before," he said.

Part of the change has come from caring for Sonja, and "doing all these things a husband doesn't normally do for a wife," he said.

Sonja's recovery has been very gradual, say the friends who have stayed with her the most, but she's come a long way. "Her intellect is all there. She just can't let you know it." Mickey described Sonja's condition today. As he put it, the signals originating in her brain are not yet getting through her brain stem.

According to Mickey, the neurosurgeons are now saying that Sonja is "capable of complete recovery," but they won't "guarantee" anything. "I didn't ask how long," Mickey said.

Mickey realizes Sonja is a long way from being well. "She's not out of the woods yet, but she's definitely on the right road," he stated.

And though he admits, "I don't know where I'm at in relationship to the end of it," Mickey is willing to wait. Sonja still needs all the support she can get, but too many visitors have caused some problems at the hospital. But don't be afraid to get involved. You can help just as much from a distance.

The long road back for Sonja Joelson

TWIN FALLS — This is a very personal subject. I was reluctant to write about it at all. But Mickey Joelson thought the story of his wife Sonja should be told.

Apparently, lots of people are interested in what is happening to Sonja. Mickey says every day people stop by his store in downtown Twin Falls to ask about Sonja.

And every day, he said, many people stop by Sonja's hospital room to visit her. In fact, he said, the nurses have told him they've never seen anything like it.

"Everyone's just so dynamically involved with her. It's just so beautiful," Mickey said with a touch of awe.

At first he was surprised at that news. He thought only a few faithful friends were looking in on Sonja, helping her battle back to consciousness from the June 16 car accident which damaged her brain stem.

But in retrospect, nothing much about Sonja surprises Mickey any more. "I always realized that I had an extraordinary lady," he said. "But this experience has confirmed that she reached out and touched many people I hadn't been aware of. And now she's getting it all back."

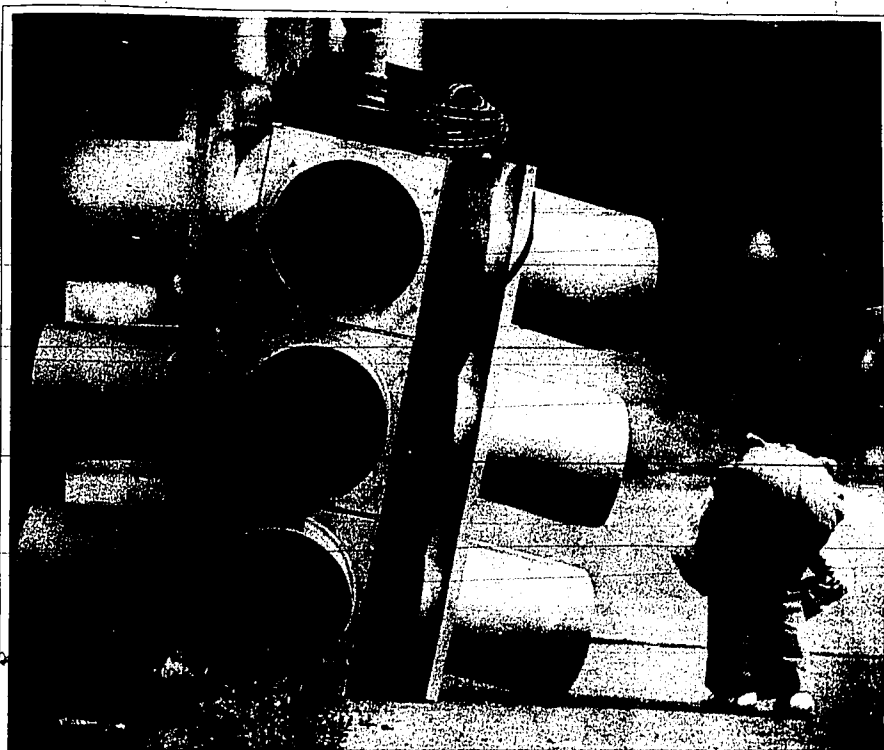

At first, after the stray horse carved in the thin protection of her Volkswagen van, Mickey wondered if Sonja would ever get it back.

In the beginning, there was nothing, no brain readings, no movement. The doctors didn't expect her to last much past September, Mickey said.

Now, he said, Sonja's eyes are open about 40 percent of the time, she has movement in all her limbs, and her brain functions read normal.

Besides that, Sonja makes attempts to communicate, Mickey said. She tries to talk. And she shows emotion.

Last week Mickey brought their 18-month-old son Durban to see Sonja for the first time since the accident, Striking Bridgeport, Conn., teachers were carted off to jail by the busload Thursday for refusing to obey a judge's back-to-work order, and Dayton, Ohio, teachers ignored a judge's order to halt picketing at schools.

 Cleveland schools were closed while school officials juggled the budget in a court-ordered effort to find money to fund raises for striking teachers and non-teaching personnel. The city's 101,000 public school pupils were among more than 400,000 students jailed or otherwise affected by school walkouts in nine states.
 A judge in Bridgeport ordered 62 more teachers jailed for defying an order to end their eight-day walkout.
 The teachers were loaded on buses for the 54-mile trip to the Connecticut National Guard barracks at Camp Hartel, where 76 other teachers already were confined. Those jailed include the teachers' 13-member negotiating team.
 Dayton teachers ignored a court order to stop picketing schools. The judge who issued the order said he would take no action until school officials seek contempt citations.

By United Press International
 "Threatened with jail and dismissal, striking Manchester, N.H., firemen Thursday asked local schools which the teachers' union requested be closed Friday to avoid a further escalation of this crisis."
 City officials in Wichita, Kan., met with National Guard commanders to determine how and when to deploy 120 guardsmen to help fill the void left by striking firefighters.
 There are about 150 firemen in Manchester with a population of 92,000 and about 300 firemen in Wichita with a population of 276,000.
 Firemen in both cities have ignored back-to-work orders and are on strike illegally.
 Faced with the pullout of National Guard troops ordered into New Hampshire's largest city eight days ago, city officials say they will dismiss firemen who don't return to work by Friday midnight.

American crime rate decreases 2% but rape, other violent crimes rise

By GREGORY GORDON
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Crime in the United States decreased 2 percent during the first half of 1978, but there was a substantial increase in reported rapes and a slight rise in other violent acts, Attorney General Griffin Bell announced Thursday.
 Most of the increase in violent crime came in the West and in middle-sized cities, according to the FBI's Uniform Crime Report. Rapes reported to police rose in cities of all sizes and in most parts of the country. The report is based on a composite index of total crimes reported to police in more than 150 cities.
 The total of reported crimes, according to the index, fell 2 percent during the first six months of 1978 compared with the first six months of 1977. The overall drop, resulting mainly from fewer property crimes and thefts, continued a trend that started in the first quarter of 1977.
 Bell cited the report as "evidence that progress is being made in the fight against crime."
 "However," he said, "the volume of violent crimes rose by a small margin, emphasizing the need for persistence in our crime prevention efforts."
 The index showed a 1 percent increase in violent crimes of all types, caused mainly by a 5 percent increase in rapes and a 3 percent rise in aggravated assaults.
 Murder showed no change, while robbery offenses dropped 2 percent.
 Studies have shown rape victims are often reluctant to go to police, and it was not clear whether the increase in rapes resulted from additional reporting or a rise in the actual number of offenses.

Togethermess takes dad, son into law school in Carolina

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — The Pattersons, father and son, enjoy doing things together. Bill F. Patterson, Sr. and his son, Bill Jr., are first-year law students at the University of North Carolina, share a house and keep in shape with a four-mile jog between study sessions. Both were political science majors at the University of North Carolina and both graduated Phi Beta Kappa.

Patterson Sr., 63, graduated in 1950; his son, 23, in 1977. Both Pattersons said they had wanted to go to law school for some time. The younger Patterson was accepted by seven law schools, but delayed his entrance for a year to work in an election.

Patterson Sr., a retired city employee, said his decision to apply to law school was made after his wife's death two years ago.

"I decided I was going to have to Karpov has edge in chess game

BAGUIO, Philippines (UPI) — The 2nd game of the world chess championship was adjourned Thursday at the end of the five-hour time limit with defending champion Anatoly Karpov in a winning position.

"It looks grim," said the chief aide to challenger Viktor Korchnoi, already down by two games in the $50,000 match.

Karpov, 27, showed up for Thursday's game in a new blue-gray suit. It was the second time he had changed his outfit in nearly two months — and both times he changed after Korchnoi beat him.

restructure my whole life after that," he said.

The law school has assigned them to different classes, which makes it difficult to share notes and study groups.

The elder Patterson said he finds law school a fascinating challenge.

"I'm staying up with the class, but not really getting ahead," he said. "I haven't had any problems with the professors — maybe it's my tender years. I'm not sure how to judge, but I think I'm doing as well as most students."

The Pattersons said they don't know what they will do after law school. The younger Patterson is interested in government service and is just discovering an interest in both civil and criminal cases.

His father has adopted a wall-and-sea attitude.

"I'll have to see what's open to someone my age, since some doors may be closed," Patterson Sr. said. "I would like private practice. I would like to be a defense attorney."

"I'll probably stay in North Carolina where I have six lovely grandchildren and my two daughters to stay close with."

VELMA, Okla. (UPI) — Jeanetta Arnett gave her 23 fourth-grade students an assignment to complete age-old proverbs and familiar sayings.

She listed the first parts, such as "A penny saved ... " or "A bird in the hand ... " and left the rest to the pupils.

"A few students quoted them fairly correctly, but very few," she said. "They were very serious and they didn't realize they were funny."

Surely everyone knew "A penny saved is a penny earned," it might be assumed.

Mrs. Arnett, instead, received: "A penny saved is one cent."

"A penny saved is a plain old penny."

A pragmatic student wrote that "A bird in the hand is caught."

A compassionate one said such a bird "is a pet to you."

But one suspicious child, perhaps more knowledgeable about the subject, wrote: "A bird in the hand is trouble."

Nancy Drew, Hardy Boys tales dismissed as 'mediocre' work

NEWTON, Mass. (UPI) — The chief librarian in this Boston suburb says the popular Nancy Drew and Hardy Boys mystery books are not worth putting in the stacks because they are "mediocre" and lack "literary merit."

Mrs. Virginia Tashjian says she doesn't want to spend city funds to purchase the books, even though some parents have requested them and the Board of Aldermen says it doesn't see anything wrong with children reading them.

Mrs. Tashjian explained she is not acting as a censor or banning the books and is following the popular opinion of many librarians who feel the mystery novels do not rate having city money spent to purchase them.

However, Mrs. Tashjian did tell members of the Board of Aldermen earlier this week the library carries Playboy magazine (even in braille), but she said the magazines are usually stolen.

"We've never carried them since the books were first published years ago," she said. "Professional children's librarians generally agree that the books do not have literary merit. And we're certainly not the only library system that has chosen not to stock them."

One librarian at Newton Public Library who asked not to be identified Thursday said she supports her boss. "It's ridiculous. We are not censoring anything. We are not banning the books. They are just bad literature, and most librarians still feel that way."

Mrs. Tashjian said because of the recent success of the Nancy Drew-Hardy Boys TV series, many parents and children have asked for the books, which have been published since 1927. The author of the series is Mrs. Harriet Stratemeyer Adams, a grandmother from Maplewood, N.J., who writes under the pseudonyms Carolyn Keene and Franklin W. Dixon. She took over writing the series from her late father, Edward Stratemeyer.

Mrs. Adams conceded many of the early books were badly written, but she said she has rewritten more than 30 of them and added several of her own. She defended the books saying they have no sex or drug abuse in them.

"I'm not about to present that kind of stuff to children up to the age of 13," she said.

Cuban-Americans end wait, reach Miami

Tears of joy mark elderly woman's arrival from Cuba

MIAMI (UPI) — A New York congressman led a group of 132 Cuban-Americans from Havana to an emotional reunion with American relatives Thursday, ending for some of the repatriates a 17-year wait to return to the United States.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., who helped negotiate the repatriation of "dual nationals" with Cuban President Fidel Castro in June, stepped off a charter jet holding the hand of 7-year-old Alma Valcarcel. He called on President Carter to make a positive step toward improving relations with Cuba.

Alma's mother, Gladys Valcarcel, said she was "very glad to be here. I like Cuba and I will miss it, but I'm so glad to come here. We've been waiting 12 years to get out."

About 200 persons gathered at Miami's International Airport to greet the repatriates and an even larger group greeted them at a downtown Miami hotel, where most of them will be housed overnight. When Alba Ceballo, 62, spotted her sister, Mirta Ceballo, waiting for her at the airport, she screamed, burst into tears, ran to her and sobbed: "This is the most wonderful thing in my life... I can't describe how I feel."

Miss Ceballo said she had gone to Cuba to be with her parents, but they died several years later "and I was left alone."

"I tried and tried and tried to get out, but Castro wouldn't permit it. I don't like Castro, but that's all behind me now," she said.

The repatriates — 64 persons with dual Cuban-American citizenship and 68 members of their families — were the first group of 480 "dual-nationals" Castro agreed in June to allow to leave the Communist island. Another repatriation flight is scheduled Oct. 4.

Although the U. S. State Department declined to attach diplomatic significance to Castro's decision to repatriate Cuban-Americans, Rep.

Solarz said this "decision by the Cuban government shows that it is possible to make policy resolutions on differences of opinion between the countries."

"I have asked President Carter to consider some action that we can take on our own. No. 1, lifting the trade embargo at least in terms of medical supplies. No. 2, establishing regular, scheduled commercial flights, and No. 3, establishing commercial, cultural and scientific exchange programs." Ruffalo Solo, a bookkeeper who married his American-born physician wife Conchito in Cuba, said they had been waiting 10 years to leave the island.

"My wife and I just worked, ate and slept waiting for the day we could come to this land," he said. "I'm not bitter that Castro wouldn't let us out. I don't like him, but he is a very intelligent man."

Underground plants refused

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The State Energy Commission Wednesday adopted a staff recommendation against building nuclear power plants underground in California.

The commission was directed, under law passed in 1976 to examine the feasibility of underground nuclear plants. The staff recommendation was based on a year-long study that cost about $1.2 million.

Although the study found that underground plants were probably the safest kind, cost made them unfeasible.

Mail strike threat alive pending vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Leaders of the largest of four postal unions have decided to submit a "final and binding" arbitrator's decision for another contract vote by rank-and-file members, keeping alive the threat of a national mail strike, sources said Thursday.

Officials of the 280,000-member American Postal Workers Union said the union's mail ballot will begin as soon as possible after special mediator James Healy issues his arbitration verdict on a contract for the APWU and two other unions.

Healy was forced to decide unresolved issues in the five-month-old dispute when the Postal Service and three unions representing 500,000 workers failed to reach agreement in a novel 15-day bargaining process.

No more negotiations were scheduled, and under an agreement between the two sides, Healy must either bring about a negotiated accord or issue his own ruling by 10 a.m. Saturday.

He will decide two key issues: Whether to improve on the Postal Service's proposed three-year contract calling for a 19.5 percent wage and cost of living increase, and whether to retain a "no layoff" clause the Postal Service wants to eliminate. An APWU official said "the arbitrator's decision will be final and binding" and that the ratification vote was required under a resolution adopted by the union's national convention last month.

But the APWU official said if the union gets a "bad decision" in the arbitration process, and the contract is rejected again, it could lead to an illegal strike.

The union, which voted against the latest offer by 94,000 to 78,000, will require about two weeks to vote, the union official said.

But officials of the APWU, the 180,000-member National Association of Letter Carriers and the 40,000-member National Post Office Mail Handlers union have expressed confidence Healy's decision will strike a compromise satisfactory to union members.

House grants airlines funds to reduce noise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House passed legislation Thursday to give air carriers up to $4 billion in tax refunds to make their aircraft operate quieter in keeping with federal anti-noise standards.

The administration-backed measure would reduce the current federal excise tax on passenger and freight fares by 2 percent and create a new 2 percent tax to be used by the airlines for anti-noise activity.

"House approval of the aircraft noise bill brings us a step closer to the day when commercial airports will again be good neighbors socially, as well as economically," said Transportation Secretary Brock Adams.

"I'm hoping for quick follow-up action by the Senate so this long-standing problem can be finally resolved."

The House voted 272-123 to approve the bill when supporters overcame criticism of the bill as a "sweetheart deal" and a "Christmas tree" for the airlines.

The bill also authorizes money for airport development and safety measures.

Estimates of the amount of tax money that would be available for airlines to finance modification or replacement of aircraft not in compliance with federal noise standards ranged from $2.5 billion to $4 billion, depending on increases in air traffic.

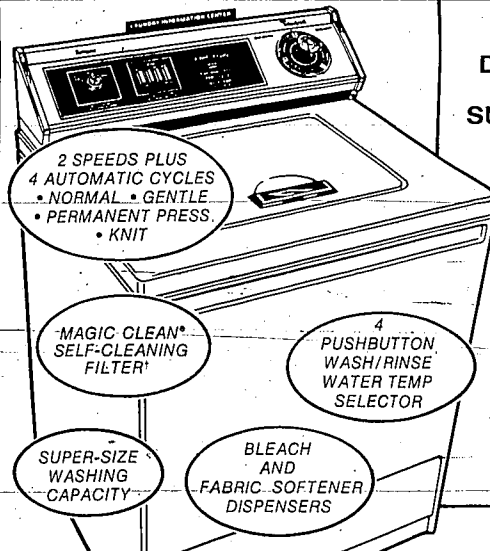

House Ways and Means Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., acknowledged the measure was unusual, but said it was necessary in order that airlines meet noise standards by the 1985 deadline.

The bill also would subject foreign aircraft to the noise standards and repeal the $2 headtax on international flight departure, replacing it with a $2 tax on fares under $100, and $10 on those over $100, and a new 5 percent tax on international freight departures.

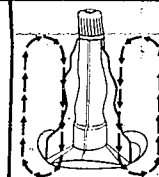

In an amendment authored by Rep. Joe Skubitz, R-Kan., at least $500,000 from the trust fund must go to each state annually for airport development.

Thain trial continues

Former aide says he brought codeine to Howard Hughes

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — An aide to the late Howard Hughes testified Thursday in the trial of Dr. Wilbur Thain, accused of supplying illegal amounts of codeine to the late Howard Hughes, that he personally delivered the drug to the recluse.

Often the prescriptions, written by Dr. Norman Crane, were made out in Holmes' name and he would pick the drug up and deliver it to Hughes, Holmes said. In August 1974, Thain, of Logan, Utah, took over the duties of personally procuring and delivering the codeine.

Darla Hall has liquid wallpaper service

Alternatives with liquid covering include matching blinds to walls

Liquid wallpaper goes on with flair

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

TWIN FALLS— If you need a wall or a room in bright color prints or maybe a print to match exact shades of drapes or a bedspread but don't like the permanency of wall paper, then Darla Hall has your answer.

Darla, a young Twin Falls housewife and mother, deals in liquid wallpaper.

She can almost instantly change a plain wall into a colorful print of up to six different colors and patterns.

She does it all with one small roller that rolls the pattern on the wall, door or panel. She can also design a room with a wide patterned border around a mirror, window, fireplace or book case.

In one bedroom in Twin Falls, Darla's customer selected a pattern and the paint was mixed to match the colors of curtains and spread. A bright green was used with a yellow floral design superimposed on it. The other walls and the pull shades for the windows were done in the yellow-only print to give the customer a one-of-a-kind room.

Mrs. Hall works for Liquid Wallpaper, the trade name of the product handled by Decor Wall Decorating Inc., the firm which developed the process of painting walls in a pattern.

The hard rubber roller with raised designs gets paint from several small wells under the roller, each of which can be filled with a different color which allows up to six or so colors in one pattern. If additional designs are needed, Darla simply takes another roller with a different design, some different shades of paint and goes over the wall.

Most of the Twin Falls homeowners and the many builders of new homes who use her services stick with two or three basic colors.

In a bathroom in a new modern duplex just completed in Twin Falls, Darla used a pattern of brown fern print over white walls. On two of the walls, she then went over the pattern with another design in gold, tying the entire room together in a single decor.

Mrs. Hall, whose title is "wall design specialist," says the new method also runs less in cost than most wallpapering and is much quicker.

After special training in Phoenix, Ariz., for several weeks, Darla can apply the designs to a room in about a half hour — if only one wall is done — or no more than two hours for the average bedroom. Most builders of new homes are using the liquid wallpaper on one wall only, just to give a bedroom or kitchen some special highlights.

Many homeowners, however, are doing the entire room, and are selecting their own favorite shades and patterns. There are some 400 patterns available from Liquid Wallpaper and Darla has 49 basic designs which can be combined into numerous additional patterns.

All the customer needs do is paint the wall a solid color in advance. The liquid wallpaper is not for the do-it-yourselfer, however, as applying the design takes training and practice. The method does give the customer a chance to work up his or her own design, to add an individual touch to the home.

Darla estimates an average bedroom wall can be done for $30, and on a recent tour of several of her happy customers, pointed out bathrooms which cost $32 to $70 depending on size and amount of wall space covered. Cost is figured on the basis of $2 to $3.50 per running foot, or on a 14-by-10-foot wall, a pattern costing $2.50 a running foot would be $25.

When Darla has an inquiry, she meets with the prospective customer, shows the wall pattern books, helps with color choices and then measures the area to be painted for an exact cost estimate. From there it's up to the customer to decide and make an appointment for having the painting done if everything is satisfactory.

The idea of liquid wallpaper is not new. It has been used in Europe for many years but has been in this country only about five years, starting in California and working up to Idaho.

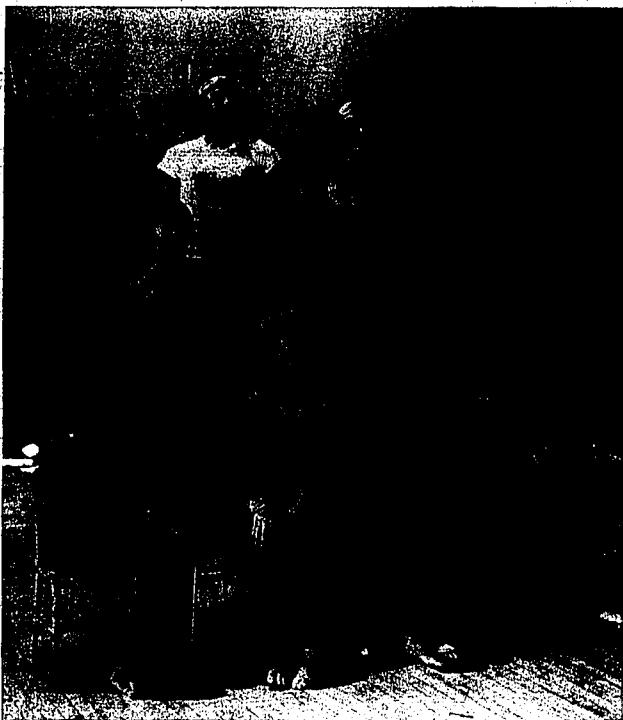

Darla, whose husband, Robert Hall, owns a dental lab, said she wanted a job that was fun and left time for her three children and her home.

She said the wall design work is ideal. She has met a lot of new people and although she is getting increasingly busy as word of her services spreads, she still has time for family, church and friends. She receives most of her orders by telephone, 724-5154. She works at the convenience of the customer and can usually finish a job in a day.

If she makes a mistake, like the day she fell off a ladder and streaked a wall, she simply does it over.

Darla says her customers like the idea of liquid wallpaper as it doesn't build up on a wall like regular paper and can be changed frequently as it costs only half to a third of most paper costs. If a room is finished or even a few strips on the wall completed and the customer decides she doesn't like it after all, or would rather have a different color, the wall can be quickly repainted in the solid background color and a new design applied.

As yet, Darla said she has had no trouble pleasing her customers and they are telling their friends and demands are increasing.

Women urged to pick career

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — What to do? Where to work? Whether and how to combine a home with a career?

Increasing numbers of women placement officers, employment counselors and successful professionals are pushing young girls to begin early to think about and answer these questions.

Field after field has opened up to female practitioners in the last few years, they say, but women won't fully benefit until they learn — like men — to plan out careers and to push for promotion once in business.

The new gospel, being preached through college placement offices, high school classes, YWCA workshops and numerous articles, has been spurred by some disturbing labor department studies.

Despite the women's movement, 90.8 percent of the lawyers and judges in America are men, compared to 85.9 percent in 1950. Today, 86.2 percent of all engineers and 87.2 percent of all doctors are still men.

Statistics in government are equally dismal. In 1975 women held just 35 percent of all government white collar jobs.

Dr. Lois Shaw, an economist with the Center for Human Resources in Columbus, also confirmed the studies. The center, with funding from the Department of Labor, is following 10,000 young and mature women through 15 years to chart their career attitudes and experience.

"The old-time typical housewife, the woman who never worked, is becoming a very small group indeed," Dr. Shaw said.

"When you get into an age group where the women's youngest kids are between 12 and 16, only one-quarter have never worked," Dr. Shaw said.

"But what are they working at?" "We have found little evidence so far," said Dr. Shaw, "that young women are planning their careers. When asked 'what would you like to be doing when you're 35?' between 33 and 45 percent of the non-college graduates responded working. It was only slightly higher for college graduates and for blacks, who have always worked more than white women."

The survey has also shown that most American women who want to work, still aspire to be teachers, nurses, technicians and office workers.

As for government, Becky Dickson, chief of women's affairs for the Ohio Department of Administrative Services, headed a 40-member task force study of women in state government.

The soon-to-be-released results show that upward mobility of women in Ohio government, probably like women in all state governments, is still a long way off despite considerable recruitment and placement, special training attended overwhelmingly by women, and administrative regulations generally clean of discrimination.

Only in clerical jobs were women not "underutilized," Ms. Dickson blamed poor career counseling, lack of an "old boys network" for women in which experienced workers help and push on new recruits and the need for consciousness raising of supervisors who hire.

"I don't see planning enough by women yet," said Carolyn Burkhardt, who has been researching barriers to women in vocational education administration for the National Center for Research on Vocational Education in Columbus. "Where women used to think, I don't have to work, I can get married, maybe now they are saying, I'll get a job but if it doesn't work out..."

"You have another problem," she said. "A lot of women, my age, 35 to 45, are re-entering the job market at a low level. They are not trained or they need refreshers. They are not confident and they are not willing to demand higher pay or promotions. They are so glad to get a job, they put up with crummy money."

"You'd think women would be furious — underpaid, underused and in lower prestige jobs, yet with the same qualifications or ability as their male counterparts," said Dr. Charles N. Weaver, a management professor at St. Mary's University in San Antonio, Texas, in reporting on a recent study.

Instead, he found women seemed not to be fully aware of job discrimination and un knowledgeable about effective methods of gaining parity with men.

Baby, mother stay together after birth

CHICAGO (UPI) — Lydia Dershwitz cuddled her 'day-old' baby and remembered how it was to spend the first hour after delivery with her husband and new-born daughter.

"I had her on the delivery table for a few minutes and then we went to the recovery room for an hour. There we hugged and kissed her and talked to her and fantasized — and just looked at the baby. It was fantastic."

Mrs. Dershwitz gave birth to her daughter, Dana Allison, at Michael Reese Hospital, one of an increasing number of hospitals across the nation with maternal-infant bonding programs.

The programs give mothers — and fathers — a chance to spend the first hour or so after birth with their new offspring.

Medical authorities say babies are awake and aware during their first hour of life, but then fall into a cycle of deep sleep. Interaction between mother and baby during this period, they say, could have an important impact on molding their relationship with each other.

"We think nature has provided this time for mother and baby to get to know each other," said Sarah Gold, coordinator of the bonding program. "In some mammals lasting together after birth makes a lasting impression. No one really knows with humans."

Some female monkeys will permanently reject their babies, she said, if they do not see them in the first few hours after birth.

Studies seem to indicate mothers with prolonged "early" contact with their babies, including a bonding session within the first two hours after birth, displayed different maternal behavior than a control group of other mothers, Mrs. Gold said. The studies showed women made more eye contact with their children, fondled them more and asked them more questions than other mothers, she said.

And other studies indicated premature babies that are separated for long periods from their mothers in hospitals statistically suffer a higher incidence of abuse than other children.

One study cited in a book on the subject indicated a group of children of early contact mothers had higher IQs and higher scores on some language tests at five years of age than a control group.

These findings suggest that just 16 extra hours of contact within the first three days of life affect maternal behavior for one year and possibly longer, and they offer support for the hypothesis of a maternal sensitive period soon after birth," wrote researchers.

The Michael Reese program, started recently largely at the request of consumers, is one of several in the Chicago area. Similar programs are spreading in "leaps and bounds" around the country, Mrs. Gold said.

Under the program newborn babies without complications are given to the parents in the recovery room for about an hour instead of being taken right after birth to the nursery for testing. The mother can breast feed and cuddle the baby skin-to-skin, Mrs. Gold said, while a nurse is stationed nearby.

"Normally what happened before was the baby was with the mother for 10 or 15 minutes in the delivery room," she said. "Then the baby was taken to the nursery and the mother didn't see it for a few hours. Many people weren't happy with that."

At Chicago's Prentice Women's Hospital a bonding program has been in effect for a year. Officials report most mothers with normal births in the hospital "go through" bonding sessions.

"We offer it to all our mothers," said Nurse Supervisor Bonnie Michaels. "A lot of women have trouble with parenting skills and this seems to help. We get less distress and problem calls later from mothers who handle their children right away."

When deliveries were done at home, immediate mother-baby contact was the norm, Mrs. Gold said. But as births moved to hospitals and doctors worried about infections, she said, it became common for babies to be immediately whisked away to nurseries.

"You had the whole thing of the protective nurse in the nursery considering the baby hers," she said. But with natural birthing methods and husband participation in delivery now in vogue, she said, the protective nursery idea is waning and people are demanding more contact with their babies.

Mrs. Dershwitz, herself a pregnancy counselor and the wife of a pediatrician, said the bonding session made her post-delivery experience different from the birth of her first child 18 months ago.

After her first birth, she said, she experienced a "lonely feeling" when her baby was taken to the nursery.

"After nine months of antipating and wondering you had it for a brief minute and then it was taken away. But now it (second birth) was a very warm and comfortable feeling. I think the bonding program combines the emotional benefits of home with the safety of the hospital."

Dear Abby

Grandma would like teen-agers to delay wedding

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
©1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have a wonderful 18-year-old grandson I'll call Sonny, who is going to marry an 18-year-old girl he's known two months!

Sonny was graduated from high school with honors, and got a job right away as an apprentice with a good company. They are sending him to school two nights a week. He makes good wages.

The girl he's marrying had a baby four months ago by a man who skipped the state. She and her baby are living with her parents. Sonny had dated her only a few times when he asked her to marry him. Her people grabbed on to him fast, hired a hall and made plans for the wedding which is coming off in two weeks.

My grandson never smoked, drank or messed with girls. He is an inexperienced kid, and I think he's being taken advantage of.

How can I break them up? Not forever, but just long enough for Sonny to get to know the girl better? It's all happening too fast.

DEAR GRANDMA: Where are Sonny's parents? If he has none, and you are looking after him, enlist the help of a minister, doctor, or a trusted friend to help the boy realize the importance of a marriage commitment. (If Sonny has parents, they should guide him.) If he's not being taken advantage of — and sincerely loves the girl — accept her, and hope for the best.

DEAR ABBY: I kept my mother in my home for nine years. She is senile, babbles endlessly and messes the floor, her clothes, and her bed regularly. What a chore!

When I told my sisters and brothers, who all live out of town, that I wanted to put Mom in a nursing home, you should have heard the howl!

They reminded me of how mother took care of me when I was a helpless baby, now it was my turn to take care of her.

Abby, to compare a child with an elderly senile person is ridiculous. A child can be dierped in public in a stroller. An elderly person cannot.

A child can be left in a playpen. An elderly person cannot. A child learns and matures in time. An older person becomes worse.

It's easy to get a baby sitter, but just try to get someone to stay with an old person. Even relatives won't help. So I went out and found the cleanest nursing home I could afford and took my mother there. I said goodbye with tears in my eyes to someone who didn't even know me.

Then I went home and started being a wife and mother again. I thanked my husband for his willingness to pay for the care of my mother. (It's not cheap.)

Then the letters started to come from my brothers and sisters who had never kept Mom in their homes for one day. They said, "YOU put Mom in a nursing home! How could you?"

I don't need an answer, Abby. I know I did the right thing. I just had to get this off my chest. If you print this, I'll carry it in my wallet forever.

DEAR HEAVY: Here's something for your wallet.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SHOULD I?" No, don't put him on the spot by asking him to tell you in so many words. When a boy stops calling a girl, he is silently telling her that it's all over. Accept it, and turn your attention elsewhere.

If you need help in writing letters of sympathy, congratulations or thank-you letters, get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (23 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Family ranks high with singer Chaka Khan

By CYNTHIA DAGNAL
©1978 Chicago Sun-Times

In Swahili her name means "fire" and "red" and "war." It's appropriate.

Twenty-five-year-old Chaka Khan has been a rhythm-and-blues superstar for four years. She hit the big time in 1974 with the release of the single "Tell Me Something Good."

She has been on the go ever since. Call her liberated or call her free, she is one of music's most independent characters.

Last year she decided to have her own band (she had worked with a group called Rufus). She continues to battle against the Tina Turner-Diana Ross syndrome with her outlandish, daring fur halter tops and spontaneous stage moves. For a time, she tried wearing satins, tried to smooth herself out a bit. It didn't last.

"I'm not that refined," she said. Recently, she sang for Joni Mitchell, one of rock's high priestesses. To Chaka watchers it seemed like an unlikely combination. But she followed with an equally unlikely alliance with rock newcomer Stephen Bishop. Then there was Quincy Jones.

She always seems to be taking chances to extend herself. Her first solo album has just been released and it she matches talent with Phil Upchurch, George Benson and Hamish Stewart, of the Average White Band, and many more. They are people with whom she has as much talent as she has talent as much as they will compliment it.

The album was produced by Arif Mardin, the man who turned the tide for the Bee Gees, and has bands from the Brothers Johnson to Kiss buzzing with excitement.

While she continues this expansion, her record company is, in a word, nervous.

"Someone at ABC was just telling me, 'You can't be singing on everybody's albums.' Oversaturation is what they call it. But to me oversaturation is another Cheryl Ladd poster, or Farrah Fawcett commercial," Chaka said. "If they really love me, they want me to be happy. I just want to sing. And look how much more you can do if you learn more."

What matters to Chaka Khan and what drives the professional image-makers mad, is her independence.

She eschews the high life in Los Angeles, living not in a Bel Air mansion but "in the mountains in Malibu, just before you get to the ocean. I have horses and chickens and all of that. There are so many people in Hollywood who are on the edge of stardom, on the edge of everything. It's so tenuous.

"There are a lot of people pulling at you all the time. When I drive into the city, I can feel the smog, the vibe change. I get a headache.

"But at home I do the cooking. I go and get the food myself. I only have a housekeeper out of necessity when I'm on the road. Someone has to look after Malini (her 4-year-old daughter) and my husband (Richard Holland, a rock manager).

"It can get to be like the 'Stepford Wives' when you have the money and the fame. The perfect nails and all plastic and voguish. If the baby gets dirty, you can't ruin your manicure so you have to have someone to do it all for you."

As if on cue, daughter Malini's laughter could be heard in the hallway outside.

"She's the most important thing. That little loud mouth," her mother said. "I have this little person to deal with. That's my reality check. But there is another reality check outside her family that is keeping Chaka Khan acutely aware of her place in the musical world.

"Audiences are hipper now," she said. "Black people are into white music, white people are into black music, and that's the way it's supposed to be.

Religious cult tried for shooting child

JASPER, Ark. (UPI) — The mother of a 3-year-old girl shot to death in a ritual murder last April said she never condoned the slaying and lived in terror of the cult members who had condemned the child to hell.

Goldie Hall, 22, testified in her own defense Wednesday, directly refuting earlier testimony from Suzette Freeman, another member of the Church of God in Christ Through the Holy Spirit Inc.

Mrs. Freeman said Mrs. Hall nodded in consent when the killing of her child, Stephanie, was suggested.

But Mrs. Hall testified Wednesday, "I never agreed to nothing."

Mrs. Hall was one of four church members accused in the child's death. The others changed their pleas before testimony began Tuesday.

Royal Harris, husband of the church founder, pleaded no contest along with his son Mark, 18, the group's prophet. Winston Van Harris, 31, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 50 years in prison.

His lawyer said Royal Harris shot the child while Van Harris watched.

Mrs. Hall said she joined the church in April 1977, in Baton Rouge, La. The church taught that she should discipline her child, she said, and when asked if she had whipped the child to excess, as earlier testified, Mrs. Hall said, "Yes, Suzette Freeman told me I had to. They said I had to keep Satan out."

Mark Harris eventually proclaimed Stephanie was an anathema, meaning God had turned away from her and she would go to hell, Mrs. Hall said.

The group was camping in the wilderness of Newton County, planning to wait six years for the second coming of Christ, when Stephanie was killed. Mrs. Hall testified Royal, Mark, Van Harris and Mrs. Freeman had a conference, then Van Harris told Stephanie they were going to get water or berries.

The child said, "Mama, I'm going with Mr. Van," then he took Stephanie down the side of the mountain, the mother testified.

"Then we heard these shots, seemed like it was five," Mrs. Hall said.

When Royal and Van Harris returned, "I asked them where Stephanie was and they said 'they wasn't going to tell me,'" Mrs. Hall said. But later, she said, Van Harris told her, "She (Stephanie) wasn't going to make it in the wilderness, so we had to get rid of her."

Mrs. Hall's attorney, Buford Gardner, asked her how she felt at this time.

"I was scared of them," she replied. "I really thought they was getting that stuff from the father. They told me that I would be killed if I didn't do what they told me to."

But Mrs. Freeman testified Wednesday that the group approached Mrs. Hall about the girl's death and told her she would share the responsibility.

"She only nodded her head in approval and said nothing," Mrs. Freeman testified.

Health experts propose shots for insect stings

By CHARLES ALDINGER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Health experts on the sometimes-lethal stings of bees, wasps, fire ants and other insects planned today to recommend a protection program for thousands of Americans allergic to such stings.

The symposium at the National Institutes of Health was to check on the availability and effectiveness of epinephrine shots and other treatments for hyper-allergic persons who could die within minutes of being stung.

More than 100 paralysis deaths are believed caused by sting reactions in the United States each year. The number — of persons — dangerously allergic to the venom of insects is not known, but is estimated to be four out of every 1,000 population.

The death toll is a very loose one and does not take into account a number of fatalities which could have followed a sting.

"The number may be even higher because many summer deaths attributed to heart attacks or drownings, for example, actually could be due to allergic reactions to insect stings," according to an NIH announcement.

One of the problems the experts must solve is to find better ways of determining who is hyper-allergic to stings and who should carry around a kit containing the injectable drug epinephrine, which stimulates the body's adrenal flow.

Allergy and other specialists have for some time recommended that persons who are allergic to pollen, cats, dust and such, should be checked for dangerous allergies.

"It can happen very quickly — within minutes," said a NIH spokeswoman Wednesday. "That's why some people carry kits. But most people who are allergic to stings probably don't know it until it is too late."

The conference is one of a series of "consensus development exercises" by NIH to make useful new knowledge more quickly available to practicing physicians.

SBA aide will visit Twin Falls

BOISE — Russell W. Butler, Loan Officer from the Boise Office of the Small Business Administration, will be in Twin Falls, Friday, Sept. 22, to provide information and assist area farmers, ranchers, and business people with SBA programs.

Mr. Butler will be available for appointments from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at the Chamber of Commerce Office, according to Jay Hoyer, Chamber Manager.

SBA guaranteed loans are made through banks to qualify agricultural and commercial businesses, Mr. Hoyer said. Loans may be guaranteed for establishment, acquisition, operation, or expansion of profit-oriented ventures. Funds may be used for land, improvements, equipment, inventory or working capital by the borrowers.

To an eligible borrower, SBA may guarantee up to 90% or $50,000 of a loan, whichever is less, committed by a lending institution. This helps provide cash and loan terms which might not be available with SBA assistance.

People interested in talking with Mr. Butler should bring their most recent financial information, such as balance sheets, budgets, operating statements and earnings projections. Prospective operators should bring recent financial data and information about the proposed venture.

Appointments to visit with the SBA representative should be made in advance by calling the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, at 733-3974.

Pork leads meat futures up; gold, silver become erratic

CHICAGO — The pork complex led meats higher in commodity futures trading Thursday.
 Metals, which staged a strong advance Wednesday, turned erratic but Maine potatoes moved upward.
 Commodity News Service said live hogs moved to limit gains in the nearby months while other contracts closed from 150 to 35 points higher. Anticipation of a bullish pig crop report was a major factor in the advance. Volume was 7,534 contracts. Pork bellies moved 192 to 155 points higher with technical help from live hogs. Volume was 5,527 contracts.

 Live cattle advanced strongly but lost more than half the gains on evening up ahead of the August cattle on feed report, net gains ranging from 55 to 2 cents after a trade of 24,348 contracts. Feeder cattle set contract highs in all months with net gains of 142 to 52 points after a trade of 1,410 contracts.

 Maine potatoes gained 7 to 2 cents on a trade of 1,363 lots. May gained 2 cents.
 New York Sugar 11 staged a closing rally, settling with advances of 29 to 13 points on a trade of 7,600 lots.
 New York Comex silver fell back on erratic trading, ending 340 to 340 points lower, reflecting news about the dollar, gold and world politics. Similar factors saw Comex gold end 130 to 150 points lower on a volume of 14,000 lots.

Wheat closed on the lows under impact of liquidation after trading in a narrow, fluctuating range. Weakness in corn and soybeans was a key factor.
 Seasonal caution prevailed in the soybean complex, where beans finished 5 1/4 to 7 cents lower, oil was down 52 to 17 points and meal was off 1.10 to 50 cents.

Ford promotes Caldwell

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. Chairman Henry Ford II Thursday announced the election of Vice Chairman Philip Caldwell as president of the company.
 Caldwell succeeds Lee A. Iacocca, whom Ford ousted this summer. Caldwell will retain the post of vice chairman and deputy chief executive officer, keeping him second in command behind Ford.

Ford said Caldwell's appointment was approved by a vote of the board of directors today. Caldwell will assume the post effective Oct. 16, the day after Iacocca's tenure officially expires.
 Ford's selection of Caldwell for the presidency did not come as a surprise. The soft-spoken, 58-year-old executive was moved into the company's second slot ahead of Iacocca several months ago.

Squatter camp raid bloody

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — Hundreds of armed riot police swooped down on an illegal black squatters camp Thursday with tear gas and batons, killing several residents.

An infant tied to its mother's back was trampled to death by fleeing crowds.

The dawn raid on Cape Town's outskirts was the worst racial incident in many months of relative calm in the white-ruled republic and brought a chorus of protests from church leaders.

Police said one black attacked a policeman and was shot dead on the spot. Relatives of a second man said he died shortly after he was shot by police in the chest.

Police riot control chief Gen. Dawid Krige said his men were attacked with stones and sticks while on a "crime prevention" exercise at the makeshift swampland camp for 6,000 squatters known as "Crossroads."

The government has vowed to clear out the unsanitary collection of ramshackle tents whose dwellers are without running water or electricity. Many residents are illegal and have no "passes" — the document all adult blacks need to remain in "white" areas.

Philippine plane crash toll 24 dead

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — A plane carrying partygoers from Ferdinand Marcos' birthday celebrations crashed through a row of houses Thursday, killing at least 24 people.

The president's son escaped death by switching flights at the last minute. Witnesses said the prop-driven Fokker aircraft was trying to land in a monsoon downpour but clipped the tops off four coconut trees, plowed through 20 homes in a Manila suburb and exploded, flames in a fish pond a mile short of the runway.

The police and Air Force said 15 people aboard the plane and at least nine villagers on the ground died, but rescue workers feared the death toll could go higher. There were six known survivors, including a general who is a half-brother of Marcos' wife, Imelda.

"It was like thunder," said village chief Luis Marquez of the explosion. Philippine Air Force flight controllers said they were originally informed that Marcos' 21-year-old son, Ferdinand Jr., would be aboard the plane that crashed.

But the young man, nicknamed Bong Bong after his father's wartime code name, switched at the last moment to another flight that arrived in Manila safely, they said. His sister, Imee, flew to Manila with him.

Iran protest move quelled

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — An army officer with a gun in one hand and a flower in the other Thursday persuaded several thousand mourners to call off a planned graveside demonstration honoring anti-shah protesters killed by government troops.

"We are all brothers," he told the crowd, adding that his own brother was among those slain last week.

But a business strike spread from the religious stronghold around the sprawling bazaar to the elegant carpet shops and jewelry stores of the city center, despite orders to shopkeepers from martial law authorities to stay open.

The government, which has declared martial law in the capital and 11 other cities, announced the arrests of the former ministers of commerce and agriculture as part of a campaign against corruption, which was seen as a major factor in the unrest.

Shells whiz over UN post

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Heavy artillery whistled over the heads of U.N. peacekeeping troops in south Lebanon Thursday in an exchange of fire between Israeli-armed Christian rightist militiamen and Palestinian guerrillas.

Muslim leaders in Beirut called a general strike today to protest the disappearance of a religious leader.

At least two people were injured during rightist shelling of the Hasbani River basin, a Palestinian-controlled area of the southeast, residents said. They said the rightists fired on guerrilla positions from border encampments in the towns of Marjayoun, Klefa and Khiam.

Sheepmen and environmentalists talk peace

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

ELKHORN — Another kind of summit conference than the one just ended at Camp David is seeking peace between Idaho sheep producers and environmentalists is occurring this week.

Traditionally foes, the two groups have come to the Elkhorn resort at Sun Valley with white peace flags raised to discuss their common future in the Northern Rocky Mountains.

Sheep ranchers and environmentalists from throughout Idaho, Wyoming, Montana and Oregon are trying to work out a common ground on which both can stand during this 3-day conference entitled "The environmental and economic appropriateness of the sheep industry in the Northern Rockies.

Since Wednesday, when the conference began, members of the Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Wyoming and National Wool Growers Associations have been sitting in conference rooms and workshops with members of the Sierra Club, the Idaho Conservation League, the Audubon Society, the Oregon Environmental Council and other concerned groups.

As Bill Bryan, coordinator of the Northern Rockies Action Group, put it in an opening speech on behalf of the environmentalists, both sides share "one basic concern: survival!"

"I would like to see the survival of this region," Bryan stated. "If the sheep don't survive, what will replace them?"

Laird Noh, a Kimberly sheep rancher and chairman of the National Wool Growers Association's environmental committee, agreed in his opening speech for the sheep producers. Noh observed that this "need to survive" has prompted sheep producers throughout the Northern Rockies to begin a dialogue with environmentalists.

Ironically, the Elkhorn Valley, where the conference is being held, once was a prosperous sheep grazing area, but in recent years it has been removed from agricultural use because of the development of the Elkhorn Village resort and its surrounding condominiums and homes.

More important than any new proposals for range management or predator control, both groups have made good faith gestures toward each other and called for a coalition of sheep producers and environmentalists to fight for "a quality environment" that benefits both.

Noh observed that John Muir, founder of the Sierra Club, began his early life as a sheepman, while Bryan said one had "to favor (natural) fibers over synthetics made from fossil fuels" and he noted both groups are allied in their natural allegiance to "a life rooted to the ground."

Alvin Josephy, the editor of American Heritage magazine and a Western historian who delivered the conference's keynote address, called for both groups to end their long-standing adversary relationship and "forge a coalition of common goals and against common enemies."

Josephy emphasized that both sheep producers and environmentalists are "stewards of the land and its resources, not spoilers" of it.

Accepting "this charge to work together," Bryan proposed: An environmental advisory committee be created to work with the American Sheep Producers Council and the National Wool Growers Association; an agricultural advisory committee be established to work with state and national environmental groups; a list of contact people be created to prevent the circulation of inaccurate facts and viewpoints; a list of specific issues be identified on which both groups can work; the two groups together establish rapport with the Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Department of Interior; both groups work together to plan for the future of the Northern Rockies and finally both groups draft a statement of common purpose.

The first two days of the conference have been filled with workshops on land management issues, wool, meat, production, economics and other topics designed to help wool producers and environmentalists understand the sheep industry as it exists today in the Northern Rockies.

The most crucial meeting of the conference occurs today, however, when the two groups will sit down to discuss coalition possibilities, issues of common purpose and possible solutions to the region's problems.

It wasn't exactly what they planned

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Carleen Daley had planned to have her baby in a nice, sterile hospital delivery room with doctors, nurses and their expertise present.

But it wasn't that way at all.

Five pound, two ounce Brodie Mae Daley was born Sept. 3, shortly after her father knocked on the door of ranch house in the remote Big Lost River area and announced to the startled ranchers, "My wife is having a baby."

young nurse said. "They took me into their home and put me to bed. I asked them if anyone there had ever had a baby. Not one of us had."

"The couple with the Daleys drove on Sun Valley where they planned to find a doctor.

However, the doctor they contacted suggested they go back to the ranch and bring the mother-to-be to the Sun Valley Hospital.

When they returned with the report, the Isom's immediately found the plot for their ranch helicopter and sent for Dr. Bryah Stone, whom they knew. He arrived about 20 minutes before Brodie Mae did.

"While we were waiting for him, I kept thinking I was probably going to die of child birth in 1978 in old-west style on a ranch," Carleen said.

She had been in labor about three hours when the baby arrived and, relying on her nurse training and experience, had directed the others in what to do.

"I had them boll shoe strings to tie off the cord but I didn't know what to do about suction equipment for the baby's respiratory system, and I was worried about her," Carleen said. "I probably could have done everything myself except for that, but I was really glad to see that doctor. We spent a lot of time with me trying to keep the others calm and them trying to keep me calm."

Carleen Daley and her new daughter Brodie Mae who arrived unexpectedly

"The ranch is about 20 miles from Sun Valley and for a while it appeared there wouldn't even be a doctor there."

Robert and Carleen Daley, expecting their first baby about Oct. 1, decided to join some friends in a camping trip on the North Fork of the Big Lost River, about 20 miles off of U. S. Highway 93.

The group left on a Saturday night, pitched a tent and camped in the rain.

Carleen, a registered nurse at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, said she felt a little unusual Saturday night but didn't think too much about it until she woke up about 4 a.m. and got into the pickup truck to keep warm.

At 7 a.m. there was no question about it. She awakened her husband and told him she was in labor.

"He decided we had better get out of there, so we took the truck, our two bassett hounds and we all started out for the Sun Valley hospital," she said. "After nearly two miles over the rough mountain road, I knew I wasn't going to make it."

Because the baby was premature and very small, Carleen said she didn't have any real problems and very little pain. She was never hospitalized although she and the baby were taken to Sun Valley Hospital for the birth for exams.

The doctor who flew to the ranch had ordered an ambulance before he left Sun Valley and baby and mother rode to the hospital by ambulance shortly after the delivery. After about 15 minutes in the emergency room at Sun Valley, hospital officials said all was fine and they came home in the pickup truck. The couple had the baby examined at Magic Valley Memorial that night by their own doctor who had been called by Dr. Stone earlier in the day, but again everything was fine and they went home.

"I guess we saved a lot of money this way, but I don't think I want to do it again," the new mother said.

Carleen and Brodie Mae are doing well and Robert Daley has almost recovered, his wife said.

She said it was pretty difficult for her husband and probably for the young ranchers and their workers. It isn't every day someone drops in at the ranch and has a baby. The couple gave the Daleys a large aerial photograph of the ranch for Brodie's baby book.

Although she works at the hospital, the couple had not been able to arrange their time schedules to attend the parent-baby training programs.

A friend had given Carleen a book on natural child birth and after reading the first few chapters she decided this wasn't for her. If she had known, she says, she probably would have finished the book.

More careful handling of poisons ordered by state

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

GRAND VIEW — Hazardous wastes may be handled more carefully since a consent order was signed in Idaho this week.

The order, signed by the State Board of Health and Welfare, means waste disposal companies can be taken to court immediately if they violate safety regulations.

Right now only one place in Idaho serves as a dump for hazardous wastes. But another site will soon be opened and health officials expect the disposal industry to expand further.

Both the Health and Welfare Department and Gov. John Evans decided it's time to set strict legal regulations to monitor disposal of waste chemicals, pesticides and other toxic substance.

Right now the state's only hazardous waste disposal site, located in the barren sand dunes of southwestern Idaho, is regulated by a permit. The facility has a history of violations of safety rules, which have caused fires and one explosion. But charges have never been filed as a result of these incidents because the legal procedure has been a slow, three-month long process.

The old enforcement procedure was to report violations to the State Board of Health, which could bring legal action but never did, and then to tell the site's operator to correct it. Because the incidents didn't cause serious problems, the health department never took legal action.

After the first two fires happened at the Grand View site, the health department simply lightened up regulations in the operating permit they have issued to the Wes-Con company, operators of the facility.

"They indicated things would be changed and either it didn't happen or it happened much more slowly," said

Dr. Lee Stokes, of the health department.

But the third fire finally prompted Stokes to look for a better way to enforce the safety code.

"The last time there was a fire and small explosion it brought us to the point where we felt we should get the board order," Stokes said.

Stokes realized the casual enforcement process was no longer adequate for the extremely dangerous substances handled by Wes-Con. As the storage industry expands, he feels legally binding regulations will be needed.

"The storage of wastes is a serious matter," he said. "We're in support of developing sites to take care of those needs in the future, but not at the cost of creating risks."

Stokes noted operations have improved at the site since the most recent fire occurred there last spring but future accidents are always a possibility.

If another violation does occur, the health department can now act quickly to correct it. The consent order allows the department to bring civil charges against companies.

However, the order doesn't change the safety regulations.

Wes-Con began storing hazardous substances at an abandoned missile site near Grand View three years ago when Twin Falls businessman and former professor Gene Rinebold bought the site from the federal government for $25,000. This fall Rinebold plans to open the second site, an identical missile field near Brunau which Rinebold acquired for $50,000.

The health department is responsible for safety at the sites. Health officials regularly visit the Grand View facility, spot checking for violations and taking air samples.

In the three year history of storing hazardous wastes in 160-foot deep cement missile sites, there have periodically been complaints from nearby residents of unpleasant odors.

Murder suspects bound over for trial

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls men who were arrested by city police in connection with the stabbing death of Shannon Woodland, 27, last week, have waived preliminary hearings and were bound over to Fifth Judicial District Court for trial.

Gary Arnold Zierke, 34, a welder for a local sheet metal company, is charged with second degree murder.

Rodolfo Trevino, 36, is charged with being an accessory to murder.

Arraigned before Magistrate Paul Smith shortly after their arrests Sunday night, the men requested the services of the public defender and asked for preliminary hearings.

They have now, through the public defender, waived preliminaries and been bound over to district court for trial.

Bond remains at $100,000 for each and they are in the county jail.

Ms. Woodland was stabbed to death Sept. 6 and her body found in the restroom of S and G's bar, which she owned. The two suspects were arrested Sunday night.

Residents rush to protest Twin Falls improvement plan

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Property owners throughout Twin Falls are organizing to seek ways out of paying local improvement district bills which may amount to over $4 million.

It's not just that some property owners don't want the new sidewalks, streets, curbs and gutters and sewers the city council has planned for them. "We don't know how much it's going to cost us, and it scares us all to death," explained Mrs. Calvin Good, who helped organize a meeting in her neighborhood Wednesday night to discuss the proposed local improvement district (LID).

In addition, Mrs. Good continued, "Some of the things (improvements) we just don't feel are necessary."

The LID proposed by the council is designed to upgrade certain neighborhoods by installing or improving sewer systems, streets and curbs, gutters and sidewalks.

JUB Engineers, which designed the LID, predicted each homeowner who needs all the planned improvements may have to pay as much as $4,200.

From notions like that of Mrs. Good, it appears homeowners are uncertain what improvements they need, how much they will cost, and who will determine what is needed.

The city council has ultimate say over whether a particular improvement is needed on a particular street, but the LID process provides a mechanism for property owners to voice their opinions on what they need or do not need.

A protest hearing is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Robert Stuart Junior High School Auditorium.

The council is not discouraging homeowners from organizing in their neighborhoods to decide among themselves what their needs and preferences are.

On the contrary, Mayor Leon Smith said he hopes people affected by the LID do get together in their neighborhoods.

"It would be easier for the council to consider these written protests if they would do them on petitions of neighborhoods rather than a separate petition of each party," Smith said.

He drew the following example to illustrate his point: If a guy in the middle of a block decides he doesn't want a sidewalk in front of his house, while no one else on the block objects to a sidewalk, his chances for consideration are much slimmer than if everyone on the block decides they don't want a sidewalk.

Smith asked those blocks with common protests to pick a common spokesman for the block to address the city council, but he added that individuals who do not agree with the majority in their area may also be heard.

Smith said the morning after the protest hearing, the council, JUB Engineers and city administrators will tour the proposed LID area, taking into consideration the protests of the night before, and will make deletions for the preparation of the ordinance.

The final vote on the ordinance creating the LID will occur at the Oct. 2 council meeting.

If owners of two-thirds of the area (not two-thirds of the owners, but owners of two-thirds of the area) intended to be included in the LID protest the creation of the LID, then the LID can proceed only if a majority of the full council (four members) vote to proceed, City Attorney Chuck Brumbach explained.

Dale Riedesel of JUB Engineers tried to quiet the fears of those who are uncertain about how much they will have to pay.

He said JUB's cost estimates are purposely high, and they include costs such as bonding counsel and fiscal agent on top of actual construction costs.

The actual project costs "might not run that high, but I don't want to come in asking for additional money later on. We hope we're on the high side," he explained.

Riedesel also noted that people can try to protest out of the LID on the basis of inability to pay for the improvements.

Protests must be written, and must be presented to the council by Tuesday evening.

Information about what areas of the city are affected by the LID is available at the JUB offices or at City Hall.

Mrs. Good said information on how people can start their own petition in their own neighborhood is available from herself or from Mrs. Gene Baxter.

Magic Valley juvenile worker defends salary increases

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The head of a volunteer correctional service has defended the size of her budget from Twin Falls County, which recently came under criticism.

Marjorie Hoops, who heads the Volunteers in Correction and Juvenile Home Services for the Fifth Judicial District of Idaho, said it is difficult to compare her salary because hers is the only such position in the state.

In a public hearing last week on the proposed county budget, former Twin Falls County Clerk Gary Whitwell questioned the $12,500 annual salary for the program director as compared to the average $6,000 salary for county employees.

She said her expenses must come out of the $12,500 which she will receive from Twin Falls County under the new budget. Mrs. Hoops said she maintains foster home volunteers in Payette, Emmett and all areas of the Magic Valley. If she has a juvenile who needs a home in another community she transports them. Mrs. Hoops said she also makes home visits to determine how the juveniles are doing and to check on many of the parolees who are attempting rehabilitation.

Mrs. Hoops said, however, she serves the entire Fifth district and while Twin Falls county services represent full time work, she directs programs in all other Magic Valley counties and provides training for the volunteers of the program.

In addition to the $12,500 she receives from Twin Falls County, she receives $2,000 from Cassia County, $1,000 from Jerome County, $800 from Blaine County, $700 from Minidoka County, $100 each from Lincoln and Camas counties and $1,000 from Gooding County.

This makes a total of $18,200 for the year. Mrs. Hoops is furnished an office and telephone in the Twin Falls County Courthouse and a secretary whose salary is paid with CETA program funds. Health and Welfare provides some postage. Her other assistants are paid through Law Enforcement Planning grants or work on a volunteer basis without pay.

In Gooding County a $14,500 Law Enforcement Planning grant was used last year to conduct the Volunteers in Correction and Juvenile Home Service programs. In addition to this, the county will pay Mrs. Hoops $1,000 as program director for the next fiscal year. Gooding County officials say $4,000 has been budgeted there for October, November and December to fill out the calendar year for the change in the budget period. After this, the program will be discontinued because there is no further grant money available. The grant provides salaries and travel expenses for two full time women in Gooding County under the direction of Mrs. Hoops.

There are now 191 persons involved as volunteers in the program and 37 volunteer homes she is able to call on as needed. The foster home parents serve without pay. Mrs. Hoops says, and this, she feels, makes her program superior to those of institutions or the Department of Health and Welfare.

"I don't want to take anything away from Health and Welfare," she said. "We work together and I help them and they help me, but I think those who offer their homes to young people in need of housing and ask nothing in return, are just naturally more interested in the youth's welfare."

The Volunteers in Correction program and the Juvenile Home Services amount to a 24 hour job, Mrs. Hoops said and when she isn't finding a temporary home in the middle of the night for a displaced child, she is spending the evenings training volunteers for Magic Valley areas.

State law requires counties to provide housing for "status" juvenile offenders, and Mrs. Hoops said her volunteer foster parents not only save thousands of dollars a month for the counties, but they do a better job.

Status offenders, or the first time law breakers or those with minor crimes from running away from home to petty larceny, cannot be housed in a county jail, and when they are apprehended a suitable home must be waiting.

Mrs. Hoops said law enforcement officers as well as the courts use her services and magistrates judges who handle juvenile cases sing praises for the program in every county.

"I'm a taxpayer with lots of property in Twin Falls County," she said. "If I resign from this job I would never object to my successor earning $12,500 a year or twice that much. It's a hard job and a demanding one."

This year she had placed 114 juveniles in foster homes as of Sept. 1.

These youngsters stay from one to eight days usually, but many may stay as long as several months. Some counties are paying as high as $50 a day for foster home care, she said.

"If you figure this for 114 kids, you have some idea of what it could cost," she said.

Former clerk Whitwell charged U program began as a volunteer system and when Mrs. Hoops became director she was paid $5,000 a year which jumped to $10,500 the second year and $12,500 this year.

Mrs. Hoops said she served five years as a volunteer and then U program "just grew through demand for the services." In 1976 she began handling juvenile home service in addition to volunteers in correction. Last year she placed 136 juveniles homes, in the first full year of U program. She said the figure was more than double this year.

Jensen promises: no 'roman a clef'

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Dwight Jensen says his next book is going to be about politics.

"But it won't be about my Senate campaign, so the people I meet this year can stop worrying."

The Democratic Senatorial candidate was in Twin Falls Thursday to autograph copies of his recently published novel "There Will Be A Road." Set in Oneida County during the winter of 1928-29, Jensen's book is the story of two young men growing up in Idaho. Jensen is a native Idahoan and grew up in eastern Idaho.

The book has been chosen as the August selection by the Young Adult Division of the Junior Literary Guild and the January selection by the Christian Herald Family Bookshelf. Jensen said the book has sold 11,000 copies to date.

But while Dwight Jensen is a writer, a former newspaper man and television broadcaster, he's also a candidate for the Senate Seat held by Republican Jim McClure.

"And he took time out from his autograph session to criticize the Republican Senator as 'not representing the interests of Idahoans."

"He votes for big business and against the small farmer and the small worker who make up most of Idaho's work force," Jensen said.

Jensen acknowledged that it's not an unheard of occurrence, for an author to fill his books with thinly disguised copies of the persons he knows. But that won't happen after this campaign, he says.

"Sure I've kept some notes and taped some impressions of campaigning," he said. "But I won't write a book about the campaign. I doubt there would be a market for it."

But Jensen says he will use some of the events that have occurred during his campaign as "color" for a novel he has finished on Idaho politics.

"But I'm writing about politics of an earlier age," Jensen laughed. "The people I'm writing about have already made their mistakes."

Still, Jensen says politics will occupy only part of his future.

What happens if he loses the election?

"I'll stay in Idaho and continue writing."

And if he wins?

"I'll move to Washington and continue writing."

Kress to key campaign on population centers

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Congressional candidate Stan Kress says he must win two of the three major cities in the second district to defeat George Hansen in November.

In discussing his strategy for the upcoming campaign, Kress predicted he must carry two of the district's three major cities, Idaho Falls, Pocatello and Twin Falls, to win.

Not content to settle for just one however, Kress said his campaign goal is to carry all three of those cities, plus the portion of Boise and Ada County that is in the second district.

Kress pointed out that the portion of Ada County that is in the second district is quickly approaching the population total of the three major cities.

"If we can win all four big cities, we're in pretty good shape," he ventured.

Kress said he feels Idaho Falls is the city where the outcome of the election is most in doubt.

And that surprises him, he admitted, because "normally you would think that Twin Falls would be the toughest" for a Democratic candidate to win.

But the results of polls taken in Twin Falls County, together with the strong showing of Republican challenger Jim Jones in the county in the primary race against Hansen, have given Kress a better feeling about his chances in Twin Falls County than he has about the outlook in Idaho Falls.

Kress said his goal in Twin Falls is to poll 55 percent of the vote in the city and county.

In his 1976 race against Hansen, Kress polled 49.7 percent of the vote in the city and 48 percent in the county.

Kress said he will continue to "ignore" personal attacks his opponent may make against him in the campaign and "go on talking about the issues," an approach he said "worked very well in the primary."

District 4-H fair awards dominated by a few counties

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

JEROME — A few counties dominated the judging at the opening day of the Southern Idaho District III 4-H Fair Thursday.

Janet Taylor of Gooding County won outstanding quality trophies for home beautification, self-determined and veterinarian science projects.

In the horse show, Sally Whiting of Minidoka County took first place in the senior halter showmanship and also won the overall showmanship trophy. Her sister Penny won blue ribbons in the intermediate halter division and the three-year-old gelding or mare class.

Other horse show winners were Brenda DeLeon of Cassia County (class 1), Shelle Fender of Jerome County (class 2), Shannon Wodskow of Minidoka County (class 3), Jerry Robinson of Lincoln County (class 4), and Ginger Cutler of Cassia County (class 5).

Conie Wolverton of Lincoln County took the overall horsemanship trophy.

Other trophies were awarded to Kory Kopp (electricity, woodworking and welding), Kurrie Rose Gaeckner of Gooding County (family living and home improvement), Karrin Martin of Jerome County (child development, money management and health) and Trent Schoessler (crops, conservation and weeds).

Project exhibits at this year's fair varied little from previous years, although there were a few innovative exceptions. Alan Porter of Lincoln County designed the first orchid terrarium, which operates on a thermostat-controlled electric humidifier.

There were several entries in the new "heritage handwork" category, in which old designs are adopted in weaving, macrame and other craft projects.

Janet Taylor built a unique mailbox out of an old cultivator. An enterprising Cassia County entrepreneur who wants to become a pilot built a battery-powered model propeller airplane and a model rocket.

A Blaine County club entered a cheesecake and an ice cream parfait from Idaho's first "dairy foods" project.

There are nine counties in the district: Jerome, Elmore, Cassia, Lincoln, Twin Falls, Minidoka and Blaine.

Alan Andrew, head of the South Central District 4-H office, said this year's fair entries show a trend away from agricultural and home economics projects, which have traditionally been the most popular categories in this district. Andrews said more club participants are turning to craft projects.

Ali goes after title for third time

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — "The Battle of New Orleans." "The Third Coming." "The Last Waltz." "Ali Spinks II." It's all finally happening. Seven months — it seems like seven years — after Leon Spinks hit the jackpot in Las Vegas by outpointing a stunned Muhammad Ali, the 25-year-old champion is giving the 36-year-old ex-champ a rematch Friday night in the 15-round finale of four championship fights.

All, 211, predicts he will become the first man to win the world heavyweight championship three times, but his predictions have been like his jab in his last few fights — off-target.

Despite five months of training, All, 55-3, is only three pounds lighter than when he lost the title but he insists he worked the hardest of his life for this fight and says it is the last of his 18-year pro career.

Superdome may produce a record gate of $5 million — nearly twice the previous high of $2,638,660 in the 1977 Tunney-Dempsey fight.

In the United States, over 100 million may watch on home television — nearly half the total population in the country. The 3-1/2 hour show for which ABC-TV paid $5.3 million is scheduled to begin 8 p.m. EDT.

Three other title fights featuring some of the best fighters in the world will precede Ali-Spinks.

WBA light heavyweight champion Victor Galindez, a brawler from Argentina with 41 straight triumphs, defends against 22-year-old Mike Rossman, the "Jewish Bomber" from Turnersville, N.J.

Danny "Little Red" Lopez of Fort Duchesne, Utah, defends his WBC featherweight crown against Juan Malvarez, an Argentine who is undefeated in his last 27 fights. Jorge Lujan, Panama, also defends his IBA bantamweight title against Alberto Davila, a stablemate of Lopez from Olen, Texas.

All has been favored from 2-1 to 3-1 in the relatively heavy betting on the fight but Spinks has looked far more impressive in workouts. Spinks is loose and confident but not cocky. He skips rope to disco music for 40 minutes without breathing hard. He is still polishing his movements with advisor George Benton as if cramming in some final lessons, but he looks ready.

All got a boost at the rules meeting Thursday when the Louisiana Athletic Commission refused a request by Spinks' corner for a 16-foot ring. The ring will be 20 feet square between the ropes, plenty of room for All to move around.

Spinks will not be able to drink anything from a little black bottle this time. The commission rules specifically prohibit "any foreign substance" in the corner.

The three-knockdown rule has been waived and in the event of a knockdown at the end of a round, the fighter cannot be saved by the bell. Two ringside officials and the referee, all unnamed until Friday night, will score the bout on a round basis with no supplemental point system.

Six months later, three pounds lighter

Muhammad Ali had to fight his way through hordes of press and spectators as he weighed in at 221 pounds for his Friday night fight against heavyweight champion Leon Spinks

Thursday. All's weight was three pounds lighter than when he lost his title to Spinks last spring.

Ogden collegians share Cactus Pete's open lead

JACKPOT — A pair of Weber college students, Val Christensen and Tom Bashford, shared the first round lead in the opening phase of the Cactus Pete's $20,000 open golf tournament Thursday.

The two youngsters, despite a blinding wind that kept scores well above expected, managed to break par by a shot on the nine-hole course but things remained close in all four flights.

The amateur sweepstakes will conclude with a final 18 holes Friday with the professionals beginning competition — along with amateur scrambles — Saturday morning. The pros will compete over a two-day period while the amateurs will have two separate scrambles.

Christensen, a member of the Weber golf team, had it two under par at one time early in the round but ran into a double bogey and never was able to fashion another charge into the possibilities.

Doyle Morrill, claiming a couple of nines of putts and some unexpectedly good approach shots saved him 10 or 11 strokes during the day, stayed within one stroke at even par 72. It was easily the best competitive round for Morrill, Kimberly, who holds a nine handicap against two for the co-leaders.

Jack Ridd, Magna, Utah, one of the favorites, reeled off a near steady string of pars to wind up in fourth spot at 73 while three men, Verlan Gunnell of Preston; Carl Hoss of Twin Falls and Dr. Chick Cutler of Twin Falls, were knotted at 74. Phil McRoberts of Twin Falls was at 75 with Glenn Blakeley of Burley at 76.

In the first flight, Bill Brake of Filer put together his best round ever on the Jackpot course for a 74, giving him a one-stroke lead over Ogden's Terry Bliton. Brake three putted the ninth green both times to cost himself a par round.

Buhl's Andy Anderson, after a one-under par on the front nine, and Ed Lucas were tied at 77 while Chylos Livingston of Boise and Ron Johnson had 78.

Bob Rumbaugh of Colorado Springs took the second flight lead with an 81, one ahead of Ogden's Jack Millar. Winston Jones of Twin Falls and Holt had 83 while E.C. Watson and Jacques Roth of Boise carried 84s.

Carl Uhrich enjoyed the biggest lead of any of the flight leads as his 85 gave him a two-stroke advantage over Jack Kinyon of Castelford. Barry McLaughlin of Twin Falls and Dr. Jones of Ogden had 88s while Wheeler and Don Connell of Jackpot shared 90.

Promoters embarrassed by weigh-in chaos

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Local promoters of the Muhammad Ali-Leon Spinks heavyweight championship rematch, saying they were embarrassed by Thursday's chaotic weigh-in, plan to wrest authority for crowd control from Top Rank Inc., the fight's national promoters.

"We put the weigh-in in their hands," said Louisiana Sports President Don Hubbard. "They staged it all and it was a debacle and an insult. It was their show and they blew it."

Hubbard lashed out at the tumultuous weigh-in ceremonies, in which hundreds of tightly packed reporters, photographers and hangers-on nearly crushed the fighters as they tried to step on the scales. At one point, Bob Arum, president of Top Rank, warned that the weigh-in ceremonies would have to be held in private unless the crowd stopped pushing.

"We have been content to trust the experience and expertise of Top Rank in many areas of this promotion," Hubbard said in a telegram to Arum. "Your debacle at the weigh-in and unfortunate effort to pawn off the blame via (public relations man) Irving Rudd is reprehensible."

"Because Louisiana Sports must maintain order and effective coordination on fight night, we regret to inform you that Louisiana Sports will assume all responsibilities for the press and operation of the live gate facility (Friday) night."

Sherman Copelin, another Louisiana Sports official, said there would be no repeat of the crowd disturbances at Friday night's heavyweight championship rematch.

"The eyes of the world will be on New Orleans," Copelin said. "We cannot let such ineptness misrepresent us again."

Line holds key as Bruins invade Bonneville tonight

TWIN FALLS — The difference between winning and losing when the Twin Falls Bruins travel to Bonneville Friday night will be found in the line.

That's the opinion of head Coach Ed Knecht as Twin Falls becomes the third Magic Valley team to test the Bees in three weeks — and the last to have a chance of defeating the Idaho Fall team.

"If we play to our full capabilities the whole game, yes, we have a chance of winning. But if we play like we did last Friday night we couldn't beat the Little Sisters of St. Michael's." Coach Knecht said and he wasn't trying to be funny.

"Bonneville is a pretty good football team. They have good speed in Tim Payne and we will have to contain him inside. They have pretty good skill people and while they don't throw the ball a lot they throw it often enough to keep you loose. I would say that Bonneville is very well coached. They don't give you much to work against," Coach Knecht continued.

The one thing he did point out was that Bonneville had a pesky-type nose guard. "He's not particularly big but he has excellent quickness and 'swims' upfield very well. He was particularly effective against Burley — that's the film we've seen — and our scouting reports indicate he played in Minto's backfield some last week."

"That's not good news for us because the one thing we did very poorly last week was fill gaps and seal seams. We didn't pick anyone up all night. We have been working on that quite a bit this week," he promised.

Looking at last week's game, Coach Knecht said "we couldn't honestly rate the backs. Not even O.J. Stimpson can run with seven opponents hanging on him in by the second step."

The backfield, however, may be a problem as the coach's son reinjured the knee that was hurt last spring. "That leaves us without a six back," the coach said. "The reasons we haven't been starting Andy Watkins is that he's the only back who knows the plays for all three positions. I suppose it ends up that he plays more than anyone because he's providing relief for the other positions. But these means that Andy probably will have to start at the six back and that cuts away out depth in the other positions. We were pleased with the way Libert ran against Caldwell and he will give us some help there. Then, again, it is possible that Knecht might be able to play by Friday night, too. We just don't know how the knee will respond."

Biorhythms 'expert' maintains Ali will reclaim championship

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — If there is anything to the fad of predicting one's performance on the basis of biorhythms, former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali will regain his title in Friday's rematch with Leon Spinks, according to an expert who plotted both fighters' charts.

Bernie Gittelson, author of "Biorhythm Sports Forecasting" said Wednesday Ali will be on emotional and physical peaks Friday, but in the pits intellectually.

And Spinks will defend his heavyweight crown nearing the critical stage — of the low point — of all three indicators.

Biorhythms supposedly measure built-in natural cycles that register an individual's state. They are calculated by plotting a person's date of birth on a graph divided into the days of a month.

For believers in biorhythms, both fighters will be off their peaks as far as intelligence, memory, alertness, logic, reasoning and reaction are concerned.

"They both have split-second judgments to make and intellect does mean a great deal," Gittelson said.

"The problem for Leon, as I see it, is that Ali's low is other people's high. In another lighter, it might mean something, but not for Ali."

Spinks, who on Friday will be one day away from entering the lowest point of his emotional biorhythm, may be in trouble, Gittelson said.

"It could be crucial for him," Gittelson said. "If he was born late in the day, then he would be critical for the fight."

Horse sales set record

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — A total 1,062 horses were sold for a record-breaking $19,163,600, averaging $18,045 per head, by Thursday's seventh session of the week-long September Yearling Sale at Keeneland.

The previous record was $18,538,500 for 1,425 horses sold during last year's September sale, with two sessions each day Monday through Friday.

During Thursday's afternoon session, 212 horses sold for $1,518,000, averaging $7,159 per head.

A top price of $45,000 was paid by Don Rowe of St. Joseph, Mo., for a chestnut colt by Quack out of Frestia. The horse was consigned by Beacons Field Farm of Georgetown, Ky.

The next high, $40,000, was for a bay colt by Sadair out of Hall To Sis from the consignment of Stonehedge Farm of Paris, Ky. The colt was purchased by James Schenck of Lexington.

Miami seeks 17th straight win over Jets

By United Press International
When the Miami Dolphins bid for a record-tying 17th straight victory over Buffalo Sunday, Jack Kemp and O.J. Simpson will be in no position to help the Bills.

The last time Buffalo beat Miami, Bills' quarterback Kemp completed two touchdown passes to rookie running back Simpson to spark a 22-3 victory at Buffalo's War Memorial Stadium.

That was nine years ago (1969) and since then the Bills have been through four coaches, moved into a new stadium and had a complete turnover in player personnel. Kemp is now a gray-haired Congressman and Simpson is winding up a brilliant career with the San Francisco 49ers.

One thing that's remained the same, though, has been Miami's success against Buffalo. If the Dolphins open their home season by recording their 17th straight win over the Bills, the victory will tie a 32-year-old NFL record for most consecutive wins over the same opponent. The mark was set by Green Bay over the Chicago Cardinals from 1937-1946.

The Miami-Buffalo series, though one-sided, has not been without its memorable moments. Foremost in Miami Coach Don Shula's mind is a 1975 victory when the Dolphins had to score two touchdowns in the last 3:18 to pull out a 35-30 triumph.

"We've had a lot of games against Buffalo that have gone right down to the wire," Shula says. "But every game is a new experience. You don't win Sunday because you've beaten a team before or you don't lose an upcoming game for the same reason. There's a new situation this year in Buffalo with Chuck Knox as the head coach and they've got some good-looking young personnel."

Shula has his own new, and troublesome, situation this year without quarterback Bob Griese, out for the season with a knee injury. Griese's replacement, Don Strock, was impressive in Miami's 42-0 rout of Baltimore after the Dolphins were upset 33-20 by the New York Jets on opening day. Against the Colts, Strock completed 13-of-20 passes for 151 yards and three touchdowns.

Ironically, Strock has been most noticeable against Buffalo in an otherwise inconspicuous career. His first NFL start was against Buffalo in 1975 and he responded by completing 12-of-15 passes for 99 yards and two touchdowns in a 31-21 Miami win. Strock's performance included 11 straight pass completions and a 4-yard TD run.

The next year Strock's only starting assignment came against Buffalo and again he keyed a victory, passing for 219 yards and two touchdowns passes and running 2 yards for another score in a 45-27 win.

The Bills will be seeking their first regular season victory under Knox, who left the Los Angeles Rams for Buffalo. The Bills dropped a 21-20 decision to the Jets last week in the last minute of play. Quarterback Joe Ferguson had a big day against the Jets, may get to throw to his favorite receiver, Bob Chandler, against Miami. Chandler missed the first two weeks with a knee injury.

Elsewhere Sunday, Dallas visits Los Angeles, San Diego is at Denver, Oakland at Green Bay, Cleveland at Atlanta, Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, Chicago at Detroit, Seattle at the New York Jets, Washington at St. Louis, Kansas City at the New York Giants, San Francisco at Houston, Tampa Bay at Minnesota and Philadelphia at New Orleans. New England hosts Baltimore Monday night.

The Dallas-Los Angeles game matches the Cowboys' NFL-leading offense against the league's top defense. La Coliseum is sold out for the battle of unbeatens (2-0). Major injuries are Rams running back Lawrence McCutcheon (thigh) and Cowboys linebacker Thomas Henderson (ankle). Both are listed as doubtful. Dallas is seeking to extend a 9-game winning streak dating to the 10th week of last season.

Penn St. faces Buckeyes

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE
©NY Times Service
NEW YORK — Apart from his complaints about the mindlessness of the college football rating polls that determine which team is No. 1 (also No. 20), Joe Paterno is caught up in those polls. That is why the coach's Penn State football team will find itself playing against Ohio State at Columbus on Saturday before an unfriendly audience of 83,112. This will be a game for prestige first and the money second.

Woody Hayes' Buckeyes of the Western Conference, opening their season before the 51st consecutive home sellout in Ohio Stadium, do not need Penn State. But Paterno's Nittany Lions need the Buckeyes as a possible stepping stone to that elusive prize — No. 1 in the polls and the consequent national championship — which has always escaped Penn State. It is not necessarily whom one defeats but whom one plays that counts.

Penn State belongs to no conference, but to what commentators about college football in other regions refer to as "the effete East." The media people who ballot in the Associated Press poll and the coaches who do the same for the United Press International have such low regard for eastern football that Penn State cannot reach the top of the mountain no matter what it does.

The only eastern team in the past 18 years to be ranked No. 1 was Pittsburgh in 1978, and the Panthers got there because, by chance, they wound up that season as the only major team in the country to be undefeated and untied.

Penn State last season won 11 of 12 games, losing only to a tough but overlooked Kentucky squad, and then lost Arizona State in the Fiesta Bowl. What did that get the Lions? No. 5 in the AP poll, No. 4 in the United Press poll, and No. 11 in the Associated Press poll, was proclaimed the national champion with protests from supporters of Alabama, Arkansas, Texas and Kentucky, teams which had 11-1 records too.

Paterno's teams in 1968, 1969, and 1973 were all undefeated and untied but never No. 1. Ohio State, Texas and Notre Dame, respectively, were the choices of the pollsters.

The Lions believe they have a chance to win them all again this year and Saturday's game is the key to the schedule. The Buckeyes, co-favorites as usual with Michigan to win the Big Ten title, are prime contenders, too. Victory would be a tremendous boost for Penn State. Of the Lions' other opponents only Kentucky and possibly Pittsburgh are likely to rank in the top 10.

Penn State needs to look good because so far Paterno's boys have been just average. They edged Temple, 10-9, in the last minute and after beating Rutgers, 24-10, the coach was dismayed. Temple and Rutgers, of course, belong to the effete East and do not appear in the poll.

Nausea cops lead in LPGA meet

ALAMO, Calif. (UPI) — Young Martha Nause of Sheboygan, Wis., bone tired from all her other sports activities, picked a perfect golfing day Thursday to shoot one of her best rounds of the year — a 5-under-par 68 — and gave her the first round lead in the $100,000 LPGA name Opener.

The 25-year-old Nause, needing to win only $145.02 to retain her playing card in an otherwise disappointing rookie season, had eight birdies and three bogeys on a card of 33-35 over the Round Hill Country Club course.

That put her two strokes ahead of Sharon Miller, Kathy McMullen, Vivian Browlee, Sally Little and defending champion Jane Blalock.

Miller and McMullen eagled the par-5, 499 yard 18th while Browlee, Little and Blalock birdied the hole.

Donna Caponi Young and Betty Burelmeid were all alone at 1-under 70, another shot ahead of Lee Burke, Annalisa Forer, Judy Kimball, Kathy Whitely, Fred Meyers, Roberta Speer, Cathy Man, Joan Prentice, Peggy Conley and Sandra Post.

Nancy Lopez, winner of eight titles this year and more than $156,000 in earnings, shot a 76 and said she should have done better "considering the weather and the condition of the course."

Despite her fine round, Nause said, "I really didn't feel like playing. I'm so tired. I can hardly get up the enthusiasm to keep on going."

Later, after some second thoughts, Nause made a complete turnaround and said she "might go out and hit a few chips and then I'll run my usual three miles."

Nause, a graduate of St. Olaf who also plays basketball, volleyball and racquetball, and swims, skis and ice-skates, had her first bird in the par-4, 501-yard fourth, running in a six footer. She made a four-footer for her second bird on the sixth, a 12-footer for her third on the eighth and a seven-footer on the ninth to turn in 33.

Her birdies coming back were of four feet on the 11th, 15 feet on the 12th, five feet on the 17th and 10 feet on the 18th.

Bogeys on the fifth, 15th and 16th marred the round.

Nause won her playing card last January and has competed in 23 events thus far, earning only $1,654.96. Of course, she is disappointed in not doing better but Martha, one of those refreshing youngsters, said her long-range interests lie elsewhere and that she is playing on the Tour for experience.

Russians carved cannons out of ice—that worked

Anna Ivanova, the empress of Russia from 1730 to 1740, ordered her artisans to carve two cannons plus several cannonballs out of solid chunks of ice. Pretty things, but would they work? Fire the rascals, she said, or words to that effect. Remarkable! They worked just fine.

Zoologists say the male rhinoceros chooses one female rhinoceros rather than another largely on the basis of her physical appearance, her attractive features, her good looks. Shrug.

A. Not much different from the temperatures, say, in northern California and Oregon. Lot of good skiing in Japan. And warm sunshine, too.

Q. "Do Eskimos dance?"
A. They do. Each alone, traditionally.

Q. "Quick, quick, how many fins on the typical fish?"

INTELLIGENCE VS. TAPE
A national publication recently printed the claim that girls with big bustlines tend to be less intelligent than young ladies not so physically endowed. Horse feathers! cried our Love and War man, when he read that bunk. Still, the article quoted an eminent British psychologist named Jack Goodman as saying, "It's true. You can, in most cases, measure a girl's intelligence by the size of her bust." And the story cited a study of 200 coeds whose grades seemed to be in direct proportion to their tape measurements. How do you explain it?

Note a jail in Canada's Ottawa has been turned into a hostel. Can sleep as many as 135 at no more than $3 each a night. Excellent notion. No doubt it complies there with the law of supply and demand. To comply with the same law here, I imagine, you'd have to turn a hostel into a jail.

Slew must answer question Saturday

NEW YORK (UPI) — There have always been questions, and more questions, about Seattle Slew's capabilities, his class, and his courage.

On Saturday, he will have to answer them all. Last year's Triple Crown winner faces this year's champion, Affirmed, and seven other top handicap horses in a 3-year-olds-in-the-$300,000 Marlboro Cup at Belmont. It is by far the toughest race of Slew's abbreviated career, and one which will determine whether the seal-brown colt was really just the best of a second-rate lot or a true champion.

Affirmed, the golden colt who has won eight of his nine starts this year including the Derby, Preakness and Belmont, was tabbed as the 9.5 morning line favorite and will carry theoretical high weight of 124 pounds, three pounds over the scale weight for 3-year-olds. He is to be ridden by regular jockey Steve Cauthen and leaves from post No. 2. It is expected he will be the odds-on favorite by post time of 5:30 p.m. EDT.

Seattle Slew, who has started just three times this year and lost his last race to Dr. Patches on Sept. 5 at the Meadowlands, was rated the 2-1 second choice and will be ridden by Angel Cordero Jr., replacing Jerry Cruguet. The 10th horse to win the Triple Crown, Slew carries 123 pounds and starts from post No. 5.

The 1 1/2-mile Marlboro marks the first time two Triple Crown winners have ever met in a race.

The other starters are, from the rail out, Sensitive Prince (113), Jacinto Vasquez; Nasty And Bold (118), Jean-Luc Samyn; Uppr Creek (117), Jorge Velasquez; Darby Creek Road (118), Ruben Hernandez; Blue Baron (114), Jeff Fell; Cow's Ridge (129), Eddie Maple, and Text (118), Marco Casteneda, leaving from the outside.

Alydar, who finished second to Affirmed in all three Triple Crown races but was awarded victory in the Travers over Affirmed after the stewards reversed the order of finish, was not entered in the race because of a fractured coffin bone in his foot. Until the injury, he was expected to be in the middle of a stretch duel with Affirmed and Seattle Slew.

"With that, I'm only concerned with two horses," said Phil Johnson, who trains Nasty And Bold. "Affirmed, of course, and then Seattle Slew has only lost twice. The first time the trainer got tired, and the second time the jockey got tired."

"Who knows? Maybe if he loses again they'll give the horse away." Cordero, who ironically beat Slew in the colt for the first time Thursday morning, breezing in :49 2/5 and galloping out in :1:01 2/5.

"He rides like a Caullie," Cordero told owners Karen and Mickey Taylor after the workout. "He is a very happy horse, very smart."

The jockey change was not unexpected after Cruguet's derogatory comments following the Paterson, and is the second such move made by the colt's owners. Last year they fired Billy Turner as the trainer and replaced him with 26-year-old Doug Peterson.

"Jean had lost confidence in the colt," said owner Mickey Taylor, explaining the move. "If he's lost confidence, then there's no reason to be on him. He's 100 per cent, he's fit now — Dr. Patches and (trainer) John Nerud saw to that."

Affirmed, however, seems to be everyone's choice to lead Slew his second straight defeat. The gleaming golden colt has crossed the finish line first in all his starts this year and has won 15 of 18 races for earnings of more than $1.1 million for Lou and Patrice Wolfson.

He is training the way he trained for the Kentucky Derby, said trainer Laz Barrera. "At this moment he is doing better than he did for the Belmont. He's acting tougher now."

"Seattle Slew is one of the best horses in the country. But you have to be concerned with a lot of horses. It's not going to be an easy race." For anyone, it seems.

South has already decided there are enough points to a slam. He now is sure that there aren't two quick losers. He goes right into Blackwood and finds out that his side has all the aces. A conservative South might well just settle for six. His point count does not indicate that there is a grand slam, but this South decided to bid five notrump to show that all aces were accounted for.

When North responded to show two kings, South then settled for six. There was no play problem. South won the heart lead, drew trumps with three leads and went after diamonds. He discarded one heart on a high diamond, cleared the fifth diamond by ruffing East's jack and eventually lost a club trick.

Ask the Experts

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag
Every expert has been asked "Do you really use point count in your slam bidding?"

We certainly do find if a hand is in the slam zone. Thus, we try to find 33 points. After that, we check for losers. The 33 points mean we have the ammunition to do it. We can't make 12 tricks if we lose the first two.

South's four-club bid suggests slam possibilities. North's four-heart bid accepts the idea of a spade slam and announces a heart control.

Munson's ailment goes undetected

DETROIT (UPI) — Catcher Thurman Munson of the New York Yankees was released from a hospital Thursday after a series of diagnostic tests showed no abnormal results.

"His headaches are lessened," a Yankees spokesman said. "He'll see if he can play when he gets to the park."

The All-Star catcher batted in the first inning against the Detroit Tigers Wednesday night and then left the lineup, complaining of a severe headache and some dizziness.

Munson was hit in the head with a pitch Sept. 7 in Boston when New York was sweeping four games from the fading Red Sox. He said he had suffered from mild headaches since then.

The catcher swung and missed at a three-ball, one-strike pitch by Jack Billingham of the Tigers in the first inning and then stepped out of the batter's box as though hurt or dizzy. He put his left hand to the left side of his forehead and stood bent over for several moments.

Munson then completed his at-bat, grounding out Aurelio Rodriguez at third, and went back to the New York dugout on his catching equipment.

After taking a couple of warmup tosses from rookie starter Jim Beattie he decided he could not continue and removed himself from the game. Rookie Mike Heath replaced him.

Munson was taken to a Detroit hospital for overnight for observation and testing.

Ruthven feels talent belies his record

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Deep down, Dick Ruthven still believed he could cut it as a major league pitcher although a 2-6 record and 4.11 earned run average made him lose some of his faith in himself.

Then Ruthven was traded from the Atlanta Braves to the Philadelphia Phillies last June 15 and was reborn.

"I knew all along I was a good pitcher even though a lot of people wonder why I didn't win more," Ruthven, now 14-10 overall, said Wednesday night after throwing a six-hitter in a 6-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"It is satisfying to know when you throw your best you can win. It's also satisfying to know my confidence in myself was not misplaced."

Ruthven eagerly rejoined his first major league team — he played with the Phillies for three years before being traded to the Chicago White Sox at the end of the 1975 season — after a falling out with Atlanta owner Ted Turner.

"The misery he felt in Atlanta was compounded," he said, by advances Turner allegedly made toward his wife. Another part of the problem was the young and unpredictable Braves' defense, which made for some long innings.

But Ruthven says he is delighted to be back and a big reason is the Phillies' veteran defense.

"I was expected to pitch well when I got here but a big reason for my success is the defense," he said. "The defense here is absolutely great. I knew they were good but I never realized how good they were."

"I knew about (shortstop Larry) Bowa but I didn't really know how good guys like (center fielder Gary) Maddox and (second baseman Ted) Simmons were. It makes it easier to throw strikes when you have confidence in your defense."

Ruthven retired the first 18 batters to face him Wednesday night. In the seventh, Greg Gross led off with a grounder deep in the shortstop hole. Bowa backhanded the ball and made a jump throw to first that Gross just beat, although a replay showed him being nipped.

Davis has surgery

OAKLAND (UPI) — Clarence Davis has undergone knee surgery and will be lost to the Oakland Raiders for the remainder of the 1978 season, the club announced Thursday.

The veteran running back hurt his knee last week in a game against the San Diego Chargers.

The Raiders said Davis has been placed on the injured reserve list which means he cannot play against this season.

A running back, presumably, will be activated to take Davis' place on the 45-man roster. Terry Robiske, a second year man, already has been moved up into Davis' spot and it is believed the man who will be activated is free agent Harold Hart, who has been working out with the team.

The Raiders play the Packers in Green Bay Sunday and are favored by 11 points.

Meanwhile, quarterback Jim Plunkett worked out with the Raiders again and will accompany the team to Green Bay. He signed three concurrent one-year contracts with Oakland on Tuesday night.

THE INSTANT HERO

IF I'VE AGREED TO LEAVE AN ANTIQUE CAR PARADE, I PROBABLY SHOULD TURN 'EM DOWN COLD, BUT I'M A PUNISHER FOR PRETTY GIRLS WHEN THEY CRY!

A PARADE? I WOULD HAVE SENT MY CLOTHES OUT FOR A PRESS IF I'D KNOWN! WHAT WILL PEOPLE THINK IF THEY SEE A HOOPLE IN A RUMPLED SUIT?

IF IT HAS STAINS ON IT, THEY'LL THINK IT'S HIS BROTHER JAKE

Pioneers' music spans 48 years

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News Writer

JACKPOT, Nev. — There is a sports adage that goes something like this: It isn't how great you are over the short haul; it's important to be good and long-lasting.

And the well-known western vocal and instrumental group, the Sons of the Pioneers, is a prime, 48-year-old example of it.

The group, which is performing at Cactus Pete's Casino in Jackpot through Sunday night, became country-and-western music stars in Los Angeles shortly after 1930 when an unknown singer named Leonard Slye joined with Bob Nolan and Tim Spencer under the name of The Pioneer Trio.

Three name changes — not including the one when Slye became movie star Roy Rogers — and six years later, the Sons of the Pioneers decided to stick with the name they've had ever since.

Dale Warren, the senior member and spokesman for the five-man group today, isn't an original troupe member, but after 27 years with the group he knows the history inside out.

Warren chuckles reciting details about the group, who individually were "starving to death" when they met. During the radio shows of the '30s, the Pioneers used to traipse to different Los Angeles radio stations doing live shows under a different name each day to earn their keep.

"They'd be the Sons of the Pioneers on one radio show, the Rocky Mountaineers on another and the Gold Star Rangers on another," Warren said.

Their renowned harmony paid off for Roy when he landed a movie contract with his wife Dale Evans as a heroic couple in the old west fighting the bad guys.

The Sons of the Pioneers, which grew to six members during the '30s, '40s and '50s, cashed in on that move, too, by singing alongside their former sidekick in some 100 movies and, later, television.

The songs included their biggest hits, "Tumbling Tumbleweed" and "Cool Water," which Warren estimates have each sold 13 million copies, and an untold number of other tunes turned out for the potboilers.

The Colorado native declined to estimate the song total which has appeared under the Sons of the Pioneers auspices because of the way movies were made in the first days of Hollywood.

"Movies were made in five to six weeks then with three, four, five songs in each movie," he said. "They turned them out like popcorn."

Warren said the 17 men who have been in the Pioneers at one time or another since 1930 — other notable names include the late comedian Pat Brady, who played Roy's sidekick, and Ken Curtis, Festus Hagen on "Gunsmoke" — have tried to maintain the same sound through the years.

As a result, he proudly noted the act is busier now than ever, performing their old standards and adding in new works put out in their yearly album.

Spending 223 days a year doing shows on the road has cut down on the number of albums being done, according to Warren and other longtime Pioneers, Rusty Richards, 16 years, and Roy Lanham, 19 years. But they say it will pay off in the long run because it is developing a whole new following.

The harmonic ballads of the outdoors for which the Sons of the Pioneers are noted have been heard by thousands of college students in the 18 months since they started touring campuses.

The audience expansion effort isn't an original idea with the latest members of the group. Warren's first performance with the group when he joined in 1961 came during the first nightclub performance at the Riverside Hotel in Las Vegas.

The Sons of the Pioneers' famous white hats ringed with rhinestone husbands have been seen on college campuses around the country, showing the traditional hard-rock cultists another brand of music.

Warren said they got booked on playing the college tours last year at Iowa State University in Ames, Iowa.

"There weren't any cars in the parking lot when we drove up beforehand to do the show," he said. "There was a football game with Colorado on campus that night. We were the only ones there when we tuned up. But just as we were getting ready to go onstage, a guy came in and told us to hold up until they got everybody in."

Richards, who writes many of the group's songs, recalled the scene that greeted them when the curtain opened: "They were hanging out of the rafters."

A former rodeo rider and movie stunt man, Richards said college performances are much different than a show done for an audience like the Jackpot night club.

"Here we just come out and do a 40-minute show," he said. "They don't want us doing a longer one because they want people back out at the (gambling) tables. In a college concert, you can really get into the meat of things, and create a mood."

While staking out new territory among the record-buying public, the Sons of the Pioneers aren't forgetting their roots, Lanham said, and continue doing state fairs and rodeo performances.

The six days they just finished performing at the Minnesota State Fair saw them get a standing ovation at every show, he said, and that included up to three shows daily.

In July, the group busted the attendance record at the Salt Palace Rodeo in Salt Lake City. Ironically, Lanham pointed out, they topped the mark set by a former Pioneer member, Ken Curtis, who in turn had broken the old record set by the Sons of the Pioneers.

The junior members of the quintet include Billy Liebert, an arranger of the groups songs for 20 years but a performer for only the last six, and Roma Johnson, a longtime substitute who became a regular about the time they began singing on the college circuit.

Jackpot is not a new stop on the Sons of the Pioneers' tour. They have been doing shows here since 1954. And it is the kickoff point for Richards and Lanham. They each began playing with the group the first time on Cactus Pete's Casino stage.

Richards, who carries the tenor end of the singing duties, yodels and plays acoustic guitar, recalled he survived that night in 1962 despite a case of nerves and the clownish antics of the rest of the group to straighten his tie and yank on his jacket.

Lanham, the group's funny man during the show, said his first appearance in 1959 evokes no special memories other than first they pulled his leg by promising him a "Pioneer Button" if he performed — well — and — "after 19 years, I still haven't gotten it."

Warren said he'd been promised a button when he was the group's new guy back in 1951 and "I still haven't got it."

Although the group's golden anniversary comes up soon, there aren't any plans to disband, especially with the renewed interest in the country and western music field today.

It's especially unlikely to occur before April 1979 when the Sons of the Pioneers put out a double album featuring new songs honoring rodeo cowboys and their new association museum being opened in Warren's hometown.

By then all those new college converts to western music — Sons of the Pioneers style — will be out of the rafters to buy it at the nearest music store in preparation for the next 48 years.

Film looks back to simpler time

By SHELLY KINZEL

Times-News Writer

In a day of glossy, slick filmmaking, it is a pleasure to find a feature without gimmicks.

Such an unpretentious gem is "All Things Bright and Beautiful," which opened last night at the Twin and Jerome Cinemas.

From the outset, we observe an unusual quality. All of the actors look like real people instead of Hollywood types. It is easy to identify with the characters because they miraculously resemble the neighbors we see every day.

In fact, there is something familiar about the entire film. But who wants to see a movie about our humdrum existence, you ask. We go to the cinema to escape reality. Maybe so, but now and then it is rewarding to view our every day lives from a fresh perspective. "All Things Bright and Beautiful" is about basics — the simple things which make life precious and meaningful.

Based on the novels of James Herriot, the story is about a rural veterinarian in pre-World War II England. The plot is a series of vignettes which acquaint us with the doctor's practice, the beautiful English countryside and its many colorful inhabitants.

Dr. Herriot (John Alderton)

troops through mud and manure daily to tend ailing cattle, horses, dogs and even baby chicks. At first, one suspects that we are in for the Marcus Welby of the animal set. Fortunately, the film refrains from mushy sentimentality. Although the young doctor is indeed heroic, he performs his duties without bravado. Whether he is saving a seriously wounded dog or extracting a pair of old drawers from a goat's gullet, he maintains a quiet sense of dignity and humor.

The film is also about relationships. There is a tender love story between Herriot and his wife (Lisa Harrow); an amusing rivalry between the young doctor and his crusty senior partner (Colin Blakely), and many engaging encounters between this dedicated man and the country folk he serves. You find yourself caught up in their lives, laughing and crying at their triumphs and failures.

In keeping with the film's simplicity, the acting is natural and unaffected. The camera continually focuses on facial expressions, and what unforgettable faces these are!

At the same time, we are treated to a glimpse of the rural English landscape, its verdant, rolling hills and lush farmlands. An atmosphere of peace and tranquility is created, but our reverie is interrupted as we hear the radio announcement of Hitler's attack on Poland. We realize that all too soon these people will enter a war which will permanently alter their way of life.

Still, it is good to be reminded of a gentler time. "All Things Bright and Beautiful" permits us to re-evaluate our own lives and the things we value. It is a fine film for both adults and children and should not be overlooked. This is one motion picture to which I would happily welcome a sequel.

Charly puts heart into her music

Charly McClain cries when she sings sad songs

CountryStyle News Service
Sad songs make Charly McClain cry.

"And sometimes I even cry when I sing," confesses the 22-year-old artist whose musical aggressiveness has made her a hit in the country field.

"When I get those big tears in my eyes, I really put my heart into my music."

"I'm pretty emotional," she adds. "Sometimes inside of me says, 'Give it all you've got. You've got a good story in that country song.'"

That may be the secret of her success!

But one thing is for certain. When tears well up in those sparkling greenish eyes, Charly McClain is either behind the mike — or listening to her favorite recording star.

"I was at the Palomino last week," explains the attractive young songstress. "First time I had ever seen George Jones perform. He was up there doing all of his hits."

"Tears were rolling out of my eyes — it got to be so bad."

"That's how much she loves country music."

"I'm happy that I cry," she says. "Those songs talk about every-day life."

"I like the honesty. But there's a lot of country and a lot of pop that I don't like, however."

"But I do love a good story. That makes the music."

Could be that's why "Let Me Be Your Baby" — written by J. MacRae and B. Morrison — is high on the charts for Charly. And moving.

Charly was interviewed by CountryStyle in the new, modern suite of Celebrity Management, Inc., on the fourth floor of the United Artists Tower in Nashville.

She is right at home in Music City — a single girl with a "sack full" of goals. Charly McClain is different from most female artists. She is a conservative thinker's ideal country singer.

For example:
• She dates "but I don't plan to marry anytime soon. I'm in love with my career."

• She lives at home in Memphis with her parents, country music buffs since the early days of the Grand Ole Opry (when country music was far from being the "in" type of entertainment).

• She doesn't like Women's Lib — and never will. "I'm not for that at all. I flatly don't like it," she admits.

• She prefers to save her money rather than splurge on a fleet of sports cars. Charly drives her medium-priced auto to engagements within 200 miles of Shelby County — otherwise she flies.

"I'm just a simple working girl who luckily has been able to get her career off the ground," she declares. "And I'm so excited about that."

There's a new single and a new album in her future, including an original song she wrote with her producer, Larry Rogers.

She'll be on the road 200 days this year, and CMI — her agency — is negotiating for big things in television and commercials.

Charly McClain's first singing — at a very young age — was with the family at home, singing as a combination of recreation and cultural expression. And her craft actually came before her dream of stardom.

Her first break came from meeting entertainer Ray Pillow at the Mid-South Fair in Memphis.

Goldie Hawn Stars With Chevy Chase In Comedy-Thriller "Foul Play"

"I'm not a comedienne. I'm not naturally funny. I need to play off situations. That's why the role of Gloria feels so right." Goldie Hawn said about her newest role in the comedy-thriller "Foul Play," in which she stars opposite Chevy Chase.

"In the film I'm an innocent victim of circumstances and someone is trying to kill me. But I don't know who. Is it the doctor? Or the bear? Or the scarf man?" Goldie continues. "No one will believe me except this handsome young San Francisco police detective, who is played by Chevy Chase. Naturally a romance develops between us in the film because this is a real movie-moment. There are thrills, and shocks, and lots of laughs. But it's Chevy, Burgess Meredith, Dudley Moore, Rachel Roberts and Marilyn Sokol who have the really funny things to do. I just react to them and the situations, which are very strange, believe me."

Even though she has been absent from the screen for two years to give birth to a son, Oliver, and to spend time with him and her husband, singer Bliff Hudson, Goldie Hawn has made 9 films since she left TV's "Laugh-In," on which her giggling and mispronunciations charmed viewers and established her in the beloved line of blonde, innocent, but sexy comedienne.

"I can't deny that it worked for me...the dumb-blonde routine. Lots of people who have a talent that works well to be somebody different. But I didn't feel that way. I never feared the dings-ling image. But there was no growth in that character, and I was growing personally. Actually that character was not so much stupid as child-like, and that's the real connection to what I really am. She had a sort of innocent spontaneity. She was naive, glibly. I'm like her only in small ways."

"That character was an accident. I was hired to be a dancer, but I was given some lines to read. I had no experience reading cue cards and I just got completely mixed up, and read the wrong words. I started giggling. I was nervous, and that was my reaction—laughter, instead of terror and tears...Well, they figured then and there that confusion was my bag. And the character I did on "Laugh-In" was born at that moment. The audience response was so good they told me, 'Don't change it. Don't ever change it.'"

But when Goldie Hawn left television, she consciously set out to change her image, or at least develop one that would allow her to grow. She was still cute and bubbly, but the innocence and naivete could

Still as FP-5272-4 Scene 14
 Goldie Hawn, sparks, unaware that she is being marked for death by political assassins in Paramount Pictures' new comedy-thriller "Foul Play."

no longer be mistaken for dumbness. She also proved she was a capable serious actress winning an Academy Award for her first film "Cactus Flower" and critical raves for "Shampoo" and "Sugarland Express."

"I've given Goldie Hawn and her world a lot of thought," said the not-so-dumb blonde. "I wasn't always as secure as I am now. I had to get very introspective, see, to find out how to keep my feet on the ground. You get to be a star, and suddenly you're a commodity. I've tried to keep myself from becoming that. Commodities don't grow, people do."

"Also when you get to be a star, you almost believe you don't deserve it all, and the guilt starts. Well, I discovered that's just another name for a big lack of self-respect. Because if you work hard and you do deserve some of the good things. Sometimes you give and give, and the public just takes and takes. They can be very filthy, too. You get to feeling utterly drained, and you become selfish. You're terrified of giving any more because you're afraid you haven't got it to give. But if you know yourself, respect yourself, you can keep giving freely, on and on. You replenish yourself."

And there's one more thing that Goldie Hawn has learned about herself as a woman and a star during the years since "Laugh-In": "I should never cease in a film. It just doesn't match my image."

HEART-STOPPING SUSPENSE AND GRIPPING ADVENTURE RETURNS TO THE SCREEN
 WITH "JAWS 2"

The relentless terror unleashed when a monstrous man-eating Great White Shark ravaged unsuspecting swimmers and attacked residents of a small East Coast beach resort community so enthralled movie audiences throughout the world that Universal's "Jaws" became one of the greatest box-office attractions in the history of motion pictures.

That same heart-stopping suspense and gripping adventure returned to the screen in that film's sequel, "Jaws 2," a Richard D. Zanuck/David Brown Production for Universal's latest release, opening . . . at the . . . . . Theaters.

And the same team that put together one of the most successful motion pictures of all time — producers Richard D. Zanuck and David Brown — was again at the helm. With them were many of the same people — both in front of and behind the cameras — who contributed to greatly to the brilliance of "Jaws."

Equally important, however, are the new faces in "Jaws 2," whose contributions make the film unique, a totally new experience in shark suspense conceived to equal, if not surpass, its illustrious predecessor.

Returning from the original cast are Roy Scheider, Lorraine Gary, Murray Hamilton and Jeffrey Kramer. Newcomers include Joseph Mascolo, Collin Wilcox, Ani DiSamberry, Mark Greiner, Don Wilkes, Barry Coe, Marc Gilpin, Gary Springer, Gigi Vorgan, John Dukakis, David Elliott and Billy Van Zandt.

"Jaws 2" is the ninth motion picture on the highly successful production slate of the Zanuck/Brown Company in an association with Universal that began in 1971. In addition to the epic "MacArthur," starring Gregory Peck, they have the Academy Award-winning "The Sting" and the critically-acclaimed "The Sugarland Express" among their credits.

The Zanuck/Brown slate of future films includes "When Worlds Collide" — a joint venture between Universal and Paramount, written by Stephen Silliphant and based on an original story by Anthony Burgess — and a continuation of "Gone With the Wind," to be a major undertaking by Universal in association with MGM.

Since his first directorial assignment for TV's "Insignia" series, "Jaws 2" director Jeannot Szwarc has run up an impressive list of nearly 100 television credits, including several TV movies, two shows for "Hallmark Hall of Fame" and episodes of such top-rated series as "Columbo," "Kojak," "Barrett," "Marcus Welby, M.D."

For his first feature film assignment from the late producer-director, William Castle, on "Bug."

Roy Scheider, the hero of "Jaws," reprises his role as the small-town police chief more concerned with saving his fellow town-people's lives than their financial security. An Oscar nominee as Best Supporting Actor for his performance in "The French Connection," he has since ventured to stardom with his roles in "Sorcerer," "Marathon Man," Sheila Levine Is Dead and Living in New York" and "The Seven Ups."

Lorraine Gary also returns in "Jaws 2," starring as an anxious mother and the patient wife of the Amity police chief. She followed her theatrical film debut in "Jaws" with a complete change of pace, starring in the comedy, "Car Wash."

A veteran performer familiar to most moviegoers and television watchers, Murray Hamilton again undertakes the role of Larry Vaughan, Amity's mayor. Among his motion picture credits are "The Way We Were," "The Graduate," "Caddy's Shadow" and "Damnation Alley."

Screenwriters Carl Gottlieb and Howard Sackler collaborated on a script packed with classic suspense, action and drama.

Gottlieb co-authored the screenplay of the original "Jaws" with novelist Peter Benchley. He also wrote the Richard Pryor starrer, "Which Way Is Up?" His TV writing credits include "The Smothers Brothers Show," "The Odd Couple" and five Flip Wilson specials. He authored "Jaws Log."

Playwright and screenplay writer Harold Sackler won a Pulitzer Prize for his Broadway hit, "The Great White Hope." He also cowrote the Charlton Heston starrer for Universal, "Gray Lady Down."

Lined entirely on location, "Jaws 2" began production June 6 on Martha's Vineyard, an island off the coast of Massachusetts. This was the same site previously used to depict the Long Island resort community of Amity, created by author Peter Benchley in his bestselling novel upon which "Jaws" was based.

"SGT. PEPPER'S LONELY HEARTS CLUB BAND"
 A MUSICAL MOVIE OF MAGIC AND DREAMS

"It was twenty years ago today Sergeant Pepper taught the band to play. They've been going in and out of style. But they're guaranteed to rattle a smile. So may I introduce to you . . . The act you've known for all these years Sergeant Pppper's Lonely Hearts Club Band."

— John Lennon/Paul McCartney

"Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band," a Robert Stigwood Production for Universal release, is a musical movie of magic and dreams come true. A unique contemporary fantasy, told through the memorable lyrics and music of John Lennon, Paul McCartney and George Harrison, its appeal will be to those of all ages who still believe in love, goodness, faith and the eternal power of music.

This year, the big-scaled musical motion picture has resurfaced in Hollywood and no film could possibly seek to be more joyous or colorful than this Robert Stigwood production starring Peter Frampton, the Bee Gees, George Burns, Frankie Howard, Paul Nicholas, Donald Pleasence, Sandy Farina, Dianne Steinberg, and Steve Martin.

An original story inspired by the Beatles' hit album of ten years ago, the all-fantastic film follows the rise to stardom of the new Lonely Hearts Club Band while, back in the group's hometown, Heartland, U.S.A., the local folk are succumbing to a fiendish plot aimed at eliminating all love and joy from the world.

Predictable love story

Romance novels differ little

By JANE GREGORY
© 1978 Chicago Sun-Times
A contemporary sage theorizes that the panting blurb on the cover of romantic paperback novels are composed of interchangeable parts.

Thus, the breathless prose on the jacket of "The Black Swan" (Dell, $2.50) that says, "Their forbidden passion was born in one moment...their love flames beyond time," could just as easily read, "Both in one moment, their love flames beyond forbidden passion," or "Their forbidden love was born in one moment...their passion flames beyond time," and in fiction. Any arrangement will do because the message always is the same.

This is only one of the many predictables of the genre, which is in its way as tightly a disciplined literary form—as the sonnet. Whatever century in history or nature of the obligatory background conflict, the heroine always must be beautiful, strong-willed, passionate, the hero handsome, strong-willed and passionate. It is mandatory that the pair be caught up on nothing smaller than a saga and it must sweep, preferably by the end of Page 2, with adventure, intrigue, betrayal and at the very least one blackguard who menaces the headstrong young lovers. There has to be violence that is savage and just that throbs at regular intervals between all that blazing ecstasy.

There is, then, a certain element of formula in the popular historic romance. This does not mean, however, that the public's response to a consistent glut of the novels is the same. If in doubt, consider the aforementioned. "The Black Swan" is a 76-page epic of the Civil War, is in its fourth printing to top the million-copy mark after one month on the market. There aren't many novels—fine, competent or just plain potboiler—that can duplicate that. Somewhere out there, a lot of Americans must esteem this style of pulvering prose. Dulcie felt the warm, confusing surge of passion consuming her, melting away her careful rearing, debasing her chastity. Alain's seeking mouth found hers. "Oh, Du!-see," he murmured, between kisses, "my desire for you burns red as the harvest moon. Say you will receive me in your boudoir tonight, moments from this moment! Let me fold you in my deepest embrace, let me pluck the blossom from your so dainty flower of love!" Dulcie gasped. His lips were on her breasts where they mounded creamy above the lace of her low square neckline. "Alain..." He burst into French. "My Dulcie, sweeter than the honey from the perfume field of Grasse! I will make you sing with joy, my little, nighthingale." Although "The Black Swan" is the first book for author Day Taylor, it is the fifth for Sharon Salvato and the second for Cornelia M. Parkinson, the two suburban Ohio housewives who collaborated under the Taylor name to write the novel.

They don't, incidentally, like being called housewives. Salvato, wife of a graphic designer and mother of four boys aged 15, 13 and 8, said firmly, "we are both wives, both mothers and both professional writers."

The label is stereotyping, they assert, as in any discussion of their ages, which each declines to give. They don't like to summarize the plot of their books because there are too many characters and subplots, they said, and they don't want to talk about how much money they are making either, both vowing to keep right on doing what they have done all along regardless of their royalties.

"I probably won't even buy a new car for another year," said Parkinson, a writer who has done everything from free-lance writing for the National Enquirer to an article for Computer World. She is married to a college professor and the mother of three grown daughters.

In spite of the success of the genre, most literary purists cringe at historic romances. Critics scorn them, not even deigning to dignify them with scathing reviews. The composite Taylor author is unmoved by such criticism. "The Black Swan," Parkinson and Salvato assert, is a good book.

"We don't pretend to be intellectuals so why should we worry?" asked Salvato. "One of my pet-peeves and one of the reasons I like to write this kind of books is that people, for some reason and God knows where it began, have a real thing about fiction, probably because there are an awful lot of bad books out. A good fictional book should give you double what you get in a nonfiction book because you can count on all the background, all the probabilities of things happening at that time, actually, did occur. There's a story in there but it gives you history and allows you to enter it emotionally so that you come out with an emotional experience and an intellectual conclusion.

"Any good novel is a good escapee. What else are you doing? Escape is a nasty word, I prefer entering into something which you haven't experienced before. I would rather think of it as a positive thing."

The authors defend their research efforts—passionately, pointing to the month of preliminary study with 75 to 100 reference books plus on-going research throughout the 30 days of writing. It is, they said, essential to live with your characters and submerge yourself in their story whether writing or doing the breakfast dishes.

"If you don't feel anything, if you sit there coldly and write a love scene or a sex scene or a scene of violence; when they're killing somebody and you don't feel a prickle at the back of your neck or a little warmth or pity-act when they're having a romantic scene, I don't think you're going to be able to get it across," Parkinson said. "You can't write down words without having some feeling behind them."

Earnest as they are about their work, the authors can't explain the success of "The Black Swan" beyond their conviction that it is "a good story with believable characters, a tapestry of history that is worth $2.50, in fact, more than $2.50."

Officials at Dell don't do much better with the question. "I wish I could say it was promotion, but I can't," said M.J. Jossel, the woman in charge of that chore in New York. "The book started to go before the television ads went on. I don't know what is making it sell so well so fast. I think maybe the cover and the fact that it is such a long book may help.

ROBERT KENNEDY AND HIS TIMES, by Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr., Houghton Mifflin, 1,066 pages, $19.85.

Though 10 years have gone by since the death of Robert Kennedy, the nature of his passing, at a time of particular turmoil in the country, still haunts the memory of millions of Americans. As in the assassination of John Kennedy because so many can remember precisely how they learned of Robert Kennedy's death—where they were at the time and how they felt—it does not seem to have happened a full decade ago.

So at first blush, one feels it is hardly long enough for the serious historian to examine Robert Kennedy and his times, and to make to place him in any valid and revealing perspective, as the historian (as opposed to the contemporary observer) is commissioned to do.

Yet Robert Kennedy has indeed been dead for 10 years, and all the instant histories have long ago been written. Their authors took advantage of personal exposure to this subject and the fresh remembrances of primary sources—individuals who knew Kennedy and shared intimately the experiences that shaped his life—to say what could be reasonably said about him upon his death and shortly thereafter. It is not too soon for the historian to move in, to digest the contemporary accounts and cull from them the most pertinent material, adding that perspective that separates even the most conscientious journalism from the writing of authentic history. In some ways, Arthur Schlesinger Jr. would not seem to be the ideal individual to attempt the task, for all his great talents as a historian. He was, after all, an intimate friend—and political adviser of both John and Robert Kennedy, and as such a player of some important influence in the drama about which he writes. And although his book is a prodigious work of meticulous research and detail, he does often shift from the posture of relatively detached chronicler to insider, telling how it was there and what his role was in shaping major decisions.

Such a dual approach is risky, especially for the historian, but Schlesinger employs it for the most part with care and restraint, acknowledging in the book's foreword his bias for his subject. He "argues that 'sympathy' may illumine as well as distort," and it must be said that he fulfills his promise "to portray him in his frailty as well as his valor."

Schlesinger might have been more "objective" had he not known Robert Kennedy so intimately, but he would not have written a book so rich and revealing as this one. Ten years has not been long enough to set in the concrete of certainty the central events of the Kennedy era, but sufficient time has passed to make some judgments.

Schlesinger's judgment, enhanced now not only by the passage of a decade but also by a host of valuable oral histories made available to him, ironically parallels closely the instant judgment at the time of Kennedy's death—that he was a man in the act of becoming.

KMVT plans new fall schedule

TWIN FALLS — Richard Moore, general manager, announced the new "Fall schedule" for KMVT television.

"The return of the Magic Valley favorites, Little House on the Prairie, The Waltons, Hee Haw, and Lawrence Welk, will be seen but you'll have to check your listings for new times and days," says Moore.

New on the Fall Schedule which debuts Sept. 18 on channel 11 is Grandpa Goes to Washington, Dick Clark's Live Wednesday, Wednesday Night at the Movie, Cinema

Eleven, The Incredible Hulk, Sword of Justice, Eddie Capra Mysteries, WKRP, Lifetime, and Weekend.

"The most significant changes will be more local news and public affairs programs," said Moore.

"We not only have a new news set but the addition of a new news director and co-anchor from Miami, Fla., David Denault, plus the addition of John Lesko, weekend co-anchor and general assignment reporter. Additionally, Dave Meeks will be full-time sports reporter, writer, editor and co-anchor on the Evening News. Taking over the weather position will be Sally Hill of Irvine, Calif.

Betty Smith changes from her evening co-anchor responsibilities to midday's on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for a five-minute news update at 12:30.

"Betty will become one of the Magic Valley's most recognized persons as her additional duties will include hosting Today in the Magic Valley, seen weekday mornings at 6:25, 7:25 and 8:25. She will also be our investigative reporter," Moore told area businessmen and civic leaders at a Fall Preview Dinner.

Moore also paid more attention will be given to high school sports in the Magic Valley. Certificates and trophies will be given away weekly to the best offensive and defensive football players of the week. The awards will be presented during the 5:30 Evening News each Tuesday.

An effort is also being made by KMVT-TV to involve all of the senior high schools in a new half-hour program scheduled for late October entitled "The Next Generation."

Correspondents have also been added for additional Magic Valley News from the communities of Jerome, Charlotte Bell; Gooding, Laura Hobley; Ketchum, A.G. Block; Wendell, Terrell Williams. Nancy Pribble will continue as the Burley-Rupert correspondent. Pribble, who joined KMVT last year, received a Distinguished Service award from Moore.

Moore also announced plans to build a new facility. He said, "It's time to replace the old with the new," speaking both of the new programs, personnel, and image for KMVT. "Our new facility will enable us to continue and improve our service to the magic valley and with a new facility and some of the modern engineering techniques and equipment we'll be able to serve our viewers even better."

Clark likens self to Ed Sullivan

By DAN LEWIS

HOLLYWOOD — "I'm a three-headed beast," Dick Clark says modestly, and then enumerates: "I'm a promoter, a producer and a finger-pointer."

He considers himself the modern-day Ed Sullivan, the late newspaper columnist who became a television variety hour host and did little more than introduce acts for 23 seasons.

Sullivan tolled for CBS. Dick Clark will be on NBC this year, for the first stage of a long-time deal, which reportedly will enrich Clark's production company by some $20 million for multiple projects, including movies, series development and daytime shows in addition to his weekly "Dick Clark's Live Wednesday" variety hour each week.

Dick Clark is a paradox. He started his television career 21 years ago, and except for the sideburns, he looks as young today as he did 20 years ago.

More important than his eternal youthful looks, Clark has an eternal contemporary feeling. His audience grows as new generations become loyal "American Bandstand" fans, watching the Saturday afternoon network program on ABC.

Beyond "American Bandstand," Clark has widened his appeal to the daily afternoon television watcher, who sees him as host of the $20,000 Pyramid game show. The elderly, the sit-ins, the young housewives are as much his fans today as the kids who watch his dance show.

Clark talks about his success as if it amazes even himself.

"I can't sing, or dance," he says candidly. "I just talk, which is a peculiar technique, born of this medium (television)."

And for someone who professes to have little of the talents that make the ordinary stars, Clark is one of television's major performers. The problem, he says, is that even the network failed to recognize the special gift he had. For years, he claims, ABC resisted Clark's overtures for stronger commitment to him.

He wanted to get into prime-time. Finally, he switched to NBC — and ABC executives fumed.

What prompted the NBC pact was a special last fall titled "Dick Clark's Good Old Days." When NBC scheduled that show, complete with nostalgia for the late '50s to early '60s, everyone figured it was a throwaway, since it was slotted opposite the opening game of the World Series.

The Clark show was critically well-received, but more important, it got a 37 share of the audience, a magnificent number considering the opposition.

"The obvious reason for its success was that it was filled with nostalgic bits," Clark contends.

So, his new weekly hour will have nostalgia in it, along with a dozen or so additional elements. The nostalgia segment will include a "where-are-they-now bit. He'll have one comedian who is well-known, and one who is new.

Since it is a family-appeal act — yes, even animals and stunt performances. Clark really considers himself the modern-day Sullivan.

There also will be music acts — a singer or a group.

Clark says he's looking for a Sullivan-type show and notes, "I'm practicing folding my arms." He contends that such a show would enliven television, which he considers "a little too sterile now."

Most of his show will be live, although special segments, such as the reunion concert of Peter, Paul and Mary in Central Park, New York, will be done on tape.

"He's his new show as being fast-paced with four-minute acts.

"There hasn't been a live show since Howard Cosell tried it at ABC several years ago," Clark recalls. "I admire Howard, but he was miscast (as host). It would be like putting me in front of a mike to broadcast a baseball game."

Clark knows he has tough competition in the high-rated "Eight is Enough" on ABC. He also is aware that variety has not been successful in recent years. But he discharges that notion by claiming the shows that were presented were not pure.

"Captain and Terrie tried it but they tried to make it a comedy show with two singers as co-hosts," Clark explained. "Sonny and Cher did the same thing, and now we have Denny and Marie who are Sonny and Cher updated."

Dick Clark is launching a variety show on NBC

TV Star Scene

By RUTH THOMPSON

For the pressure groups objecting, it's a moot point whether or not there will be less sex and violence on TV this coming season. But I definable new category—eligion—will be increasingly evident in the prime nighttime hours. The range, however, is broad.

Public Broadcasting Service this week airs the first of 14 ambitious documentaries comparing ways of faith around the world under the title of "The Long Search." In addition to studies of the branches of Christianity and Judaism, separate programs will be devoted to Buddhism as it exists in Japan as well as in India, to Islam, Taoism, ancestral worship ... and also, "Alternative Lifestyles in California." Ronald Byre is the narrator.

NBC has chosen a contemporary twist for the two-hour movies being produced as "The Ten Commandments," "The Seventh Commandment" (officially titled "Thou Shalt Not Commit Adultery") will be the premiere offering, though no date has yet been announced. Robert Reed stars as a man paralyzed by an auto accident. Louise Fletcher plays his wife.

Also in production, for broadcast on NBC during Bible Week in November, is a three-part miniseries on Old Testament figures, "Stories from the Bible."

Portraying Noah will be Lew Ayres, who once, at his own expense, produced a series of thoughtful films on comparative religions that had a limited lecture circuit release. Also in the cast are John Carradine (David), Hugh O'Brian (Abner), John Beck (Samson) and Ann Turkel (Deborah).

Strange are the ways of show biz. Robert Vaughn started a year ago shaping up a one-man stage presentation starring himself as Franklin Delano Roosevelt. It was also reported he hoped to appear on Broadway as FDR and in the movies. FDR, he said at the outset, was his hero and he felt, in fact, that he somewhat resembles the only four-term President of the U.S. So, it was not a surprise that Vaughn was cast in the NBC saga of U.S. Presidents, "Back-stairs at the White House." The only surprise is that Vaughn has been cast as Woodrow Wilson. FDR will be played by John Anderson.

Lena Horne's daughter, Gail Lunet, has finally decided to take a turn of her own in the spotlight following her recent divorce from director Sidney Lumet. She is not planning on acting, however, but instead is resuming the journalism career, which she gave up for marriage and motherhood. Following college, she worked as a researcher and reporter for Life magazine. This time, television is her medium as she joins the staff of CBS' "People" show hosted by Phyllis George.

Ebullient comic David Brenner got a turn-down from his would-be neighbors when he tried to buy a Manhattan luxury co-op apartment. They just don't sell to show folks because noisy parties might follow—not because Brenner didn't have the quarter of a million-dollars in his piggy bank. Brenner's one consolation could be extracted from the philosophy he voiced earlier this season to a reporter.

JACQUELINE IS LOVED BY THE GREEK TYCOON

"My best buzz comes from breaking down barriers and getting to know people," says movie star Jacqueline Bisset, "getting to know the location, the location, as well as my own co-workers."

The Greek Isles prove a powerful lure for an American First Lady—portrayed by Jacqueline Bisset—in "The Greek Tycoon."

Anthony Quinn plays the title role as one of the world's wealthiest men in "The Greek Tycoon."

STARTS 10/17/78 JEROME CINEMA & TWIN CINEMA THE PLUSH WORLD OF THE SUPER-RICH FILLS THE SCREEN IN UNIVERSAL'S "THE GREEK TYCOON"

Are power and happiness compatible? Certainly, claim both the "haves" and the "have-nots" of the world. Impossible, say human behavior experts. And yet everyone yearns to give it a try.

Commenting on this big-budget epic, is the Allen Klein Production, "The Greek Tycoon," an ABKCO Films Production for Universal release, conceived as a feast for the senses. Of epic proportion, and as glittering as a central character, it uses dozens of glamorous figures in its palette of colors, the plus world of the super-rich as its canvas, and inexorable fate as its master painter.

"The Greek Tycoon" stars Anthony Quinn and Jacqueline Bisset, and costars Raf Vallone, Edward Albert, Charles Dunning, Luciana Paluzzi, Marilu Tolo, Camilla Sparv and James Franciscus.

With a screenplay by Mort Fine, from a story by Nicky Matorakis & Win Wells and Mort Fine. "The Greek Tycoon" was directed by J. Lee Thompson and produced by Allen Klein and Ely Landau. Co-producers were Nicky Matorakis & Laurence Myers.

The film's music was composed and orchestrated by Stanley Myers and was supervised and conducted by Harry Rubinfeld. The main title theme was composed by John Kosmos. The production designer was Michael Stringer. Tony Richmond was the cinematographer. An opulently-mounted love story involving the world's "beautiful people," the movie is authentically and appropriately set in Greece—Athens and the Isles of the Aegean—and in New York, London, and Washington, D.C. Wealth pours into its structure as Theo Tomasis, portrayed by Anthony Quinn — the world's richest and most flamboyant shipping magnate, a man who seemingly has everything he could want—reaches out and captures his final prize: love! expensive, legendary Liz Cassidy, widow of a President of the United States, portrayed by Ms. Bisset. The sensuous simplicity of Greek folk dancing weaves an exotic, rhythmic web from which Tomasis and his many-loves cannot escape. The measured beat of ancient Greek dance music is counterpointed with contemporary melodies to entice the ear as well as eyes of the movie's viewers.

Leading couturier-designed gowns by the dozens to grace delightful female forms, jewels which sparkle seems to light up rooms, exquisitely-appointed salons, sleek speedboats, private planes, private helicopters, and one of the largest, most expensive private yachts in the world—these are some of the film's glambest scenes. Mansions on both sides of the Atlantic were juxtaposed with sun-baked Greek villages, breathtaking beach villas and ancient ruins, and penthouse executive suites to produce an awesome, but delightful, display of the "sweet life" of the international jet set.

Anthony Quinn, Mexican-born (of Mexican-Irish parentage), understands the Greek temperament, having played Greek characters many times before, most notably in "The Guns of Navarone," "Zorba the Greek," "A Dream of Kings," and "The Magus." He made his movie debut in 1936 in a small role in "Parole," and went on to star in 120 feature films, as well as in half-dozen memorable performances on the Broadway stage. He won an Academy Award as Best Supporting Actor in 1952, for his performance in "Viva Zapata," and another for "Lust For Life" in 1956.

Chevy Chase: From TV Satirist To Goldie Hawn's Leading Man In "Foul Play"

There is a theory that children who are given unusual names grow up to be different and talented because they had to fight the derision and scorn from their playmates whose names were on the order of Tom, Dick or Harry. When you have a name like Chevy Chase, you either become a Maryland suburb to Washington, D.C., or you have to conquer other areas of the drive and talent to become a satirist on television's "Saturday Night Live" and paraff your way into national prominence. Being one of the newest and brightest stars to come out of television, Chevy Chase is currently trying to conquer other areas of the entertainment industry. He makes his movie picture starring debut opposite Goldie Hawn in the comedy-thriller "Foul Play."

"Everyone kept saying that I looked like I could be a leading man type so I decided to give it a try," says Chevy Chase, who is tall, handsome and possesses a dimple in his chin, which women claim is very it, and it's turned out to be fun. Better than summer camp, Goldie has been a writer to work with. Actually, I'm a terrific, and I'm able to convey some of my material to it on paper. Acting itself means very little to me. It's not creative enough. You're simply a pawn of whoever wrote your material. I don't like being put in a position of playing somebody I'm not. Acting is fun only when I can use it to express an opinion. Still, making love to Goldie Hawn in "Foul Play"

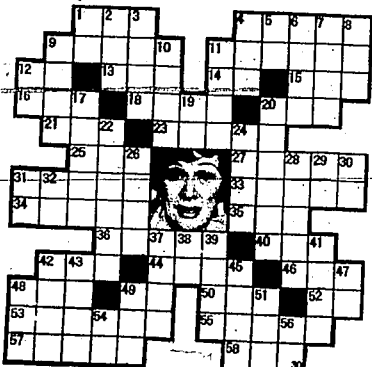

Still in "Foul Play" Chevy Chase makes his movie picture starring debut as the quick-witted police officer who comes to the rescue of Goldie Hawn as Paramount Pictures' new comedy-thriller "Foul Play."

acting. I love to mug and I couldn't. Still the experience was invaluable. I cannot tell you how much I came to admire someone who fought like who was able to bring truth and energy to the moment take after take. It always amazed me, and she was such a great help to me, she couldn't have done it without her. And she fun."

Chevy Chase was born in New York, and he was originally named Jerome Carmine Chase. However, for some whimsical reason no one quite seems to remember his parents changed his name to Chevy.

"Over the years I made a very poor living," remembers Chevy, "who right now is making a very good living." "So many people come out of college totally unable to cope with the reality of having to work with your brain off to stay alive. It took me years to learn the weight of responsibility. I worked as a tennis pro, music teacher, driver, motorist, car mechanic, a service answerer, bartender, waiter and a piano player in clubs. I did sound good on commercials, and finally I began writing for television. One night while waiting in line to see the movie "Wally Python and the Holy Grail," Chevy met the producer of "Saturday Night Live" and he talked his way into a job on that show. He worked in New York, but by the time his contract was in Los Angeles. He traveled in and out of the city, but he was in L.A. muting back and forth between the coasts to see actress Jacqueline Bisset, whom he has since married. Following his starring role in "Foul Play," he has his eye on directing as well as writing and acting in his next film, "Saturday Matinee."

By ROBBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: What kind of relationship do Jackie Onassis and her younger sister Lee Radzwill have? Do they get along well? Are they competitive? — T.P., Albany, N.Y.

A: They get along quite well. Over the years, of course, there have been occasional frictions between the two women, but like good sisters everywhere they always seem to patch things up. Actualities do admit that Lee often feels some frustration because, despite her several attempts at achieving personal fame, she remains the star's little sister.

MIDGE COSTANZA
... slashed the list

Q: I was intrigued by the crisp, outspoken style of Midge Costanza, who left the Carter administration. Any idea of what she was like when she wasn't in the spotlight? — R.C., Louisville, Ky.

A: Equally brisk and authoritative some members of the business sector, who dealt with Margaret (Midge) probably wish she hadn't found them. Some time ago, a fine Manhattan caterer, whom she contracted for a big bash being hosted by Rosalynn Carter, recalls that Costanza decided to slash the guest list on very short notice. She insisted that the caterer lower his price accordingly — completely ignoring the fact that he had bought food for the full guest list.

Q: Maybe now that Carol Burnett's terrific TV shows are in re-runs, I can find out the truth about all those hilarious rap sessions with the audience. I know these chats were publicized as being absolutely spontaneous, but the comedienne's repartee was always so clever, it seemed too good to be true. Wasn't it rehearsed just a little? — T.C., Reno, Nevada.

A: Sources close to the still-popular program swear that Carol's bantering was every bit as off-the-cuff as it appeared to the nation's viewers, and the only information she ever was clipped. Most concerned awards and special presentations. We believe it. After all, Carol's a very funny gal — talented, bright and quick-witted, so there really was very little need for her to be briefed before show time.

Q: I'm mad about Margaret Hamilton, that ancient actress who plays Cora in those folksy TV coffee commercials. But I recognize her as the mean old witch from the movie, "The Wizard of Oz." Since she was such a croone, even back then, isn't she about 107 today? — M.A., Bangor, Maine.

A: You're way off base. Incredibly, when this talented actress tackled the dual role of the Wicked Witch and Miss Gulch, the town busybody in "Oz," she was only 38. Her dynamic performance remains a tribute to the sensational scary makeup created by Jack Dawn — as well as to Miss Hamilton's remarkably acting ability. This lovely, graceful lady and grand performer is, of all things, a former kindergarten teacher and is now 75.

Q: John Travolta is so popular with the kids as Vinnie Barbarino on TV and yet the youngsters can't see him in "Saturday Night Fever" because of its R rating. Any plans for a milder version of the movie? — H.K., Cincinnati.

A: Paramount, the distributor of "Saturday Night Fever," tried to convince the rating people to allow him an R-rated and PG version of the movie to play at the same time. However, that's against current rating rules. Paramount had second thoughts about its effort to have things both ways, however, and dropped its proposal. So it looks as though "Fever" will continue in theaters with the official restricted rating. But the kids can still go if they get somebody over 17 to take them — that's what the R rating means. Q: I recall that Carroll "Baby Doll" Baker left Italy where he was doing low-budget movies to live in London. Is she still there or has she returned to the U.S.? — N.G., Houston.

A: Carroll 47, is still living in London and has a new boyfriend, actor Donald Burton, 43. He says they probably won't get married but will stay together for the rest of their lives.

CONFESSION TIME: You want to know who is going to run for president in the next election? A Washington insider told me all you have to do is watch which wives are airing their private secrets in public. If the women are confessing then it's a good bet their husbands are going to try for the nomination. First we had Betty Ford telling us about her problems with drugs and alcohol, followed soon after by Joan Kennedy, an extremely private person, who went to the trouble of getting all done up to be a magazine cover girl (not her usual style at all). And the latest is Joy Baker, wife of Sen. Howard Baker, the Republican Senate Minority Leader. Joy wants to write a book detailing her life as both daughter and wife of Senate Minority Leader (her father was Everett Dirksen). She may also include the story of her recovery from alcoholism.

Q: Are actress Elke Sommer and writer Joe Hyams still married? — R.J., Rye, N.Y.

A: Yes. She and Joe have managed to combine separate careers and marriage, a monumental feat in contemporary Hollywood. They have had to weather frequent separations, however, due to the demands of their careers. For example, while he is working on a screenplay and another novel, Elke is off to Vienna to co-star with

Peter Sellers in the movie, "Prisoner of Zenda."

Q: My favorite cabaret singer, far-out Frances Faye, really got clobbered in some of those "Pretty Baby" movie reviews. Is that why I haven't read any interviews with her? — J.R., Baltimore.

A: Some movie critics were apparently turned off by Frances' dubbed voice in this controversial flick, where she's cast as a brothel madam. Despite her mixed reviews, the press is still trying to talk with her. This outrageous nightclub and recording star, who gives her age as 65, has been away from the film scene for a long, long time (her last movie was "Double Or Nothing" with Bob Hope in 1937) and is regarded as a Grade-A unpredictable character, with a cult following of huge proportions. Frances so far has refused to give interviews.

Q: So what's with Margaret Trudeau? Any chance she'll go back to Pierre and be the proper wife of the Canadian prime minister? — E.P., Detroit.

A: At the moment it sure doesn't seem likely. Margaret is in the south of France doing her second movie called "Guardian Angel." The film is described as a light comedy, and I hear that she's having an on-stage and off-stage romance with her leading man, handsome young designer-turned-actor Jean-Luc Fritz.

Q: All the gossip about Mick Jagger reminds me of his old girl friend Marianne Faithfull. Did she ever get over her drug addiction? — H.D., Fullerton, Calif.

A: Marianne has successfully

American-born singer-dancer who was the toast of Paris in the 20s.

MONEY TALKS: Jet setters are speculating that one of the reasons Christina Onassis did not have a church wedding was to leave herself a religious loophole if her romance with the Russian, Sergei Kazov, doesn't work out. Civil weddings are not recognized under Greek Orthodox Church law and, not blessed by the church are considered illegitimate. So if the romance fizzles and the simple life in Moscow falls, Christina can claim she is not married.

Q: I remember a fascinating picture article about a Manhattan triplex first owned by Helen Rubenstein and next by Charles Revson. It was described as the world's most lavish apartment. Who's living there now? — A.N., Tucson, Ariz.

A: Nobody. The fabulous residence which, ironically, housed two now deceased rulers of rival cosmetics empires, turned out to be something of a white elephant. Originally offered for sale as a co-op, it's currently being peddled, very discreetly, at a monthly rental of $2,000 via a privately circulated listing. The spectacular pad was totally renovated, remodeled and magnificently furnished by Revson at a cost of $2,000,000 during his reign; and consists of 29 rooms including ten baths plus a 51-foot hall.

Q: I just love George Carlin. Is this complex comedian as fun out in person as he seems in TV guest shots and clubs? — S.S., New York.

A: At times it seems George must be putting on the entire world.

Recently, the talented entertainer was waiting on line for a 42nd Street cross-town Manhattan bus. When the out-of-town lady in front of him couldn't find the correct change and became flustered, George, wearing a grey sweatshirt, jeans and sandals, paid her fare. Then, he decided to improvise a stand-up routine right on the spot. In rich Jimmy Cagney New Yorkese he told the shocked woman, "Dere, don't ever say dat nobody never done nuttin' for ya in dis Big Apple." Carlin continued his happy put-on and staggered to the back of the bus, where he sat down, mumbling. Passengers who recognized him applauded George's generosity, and also the free show.

Q: That new movie about killer bees, "The Swarm," is getting so much publicity as a brand-new horror theme. Yet, I could swear I've seen other pictures on this same subject (and I don't mean "The Sting"!) Right? — C.C., Iowa City, Iowa.

A: You are sure. Two of the most recent were a pair of scary TV movies: "Killer Bees," starring Gloria Swanson, released in 1974, followed by "The Saved Bees" two years later, with Ben Johnson, Michael Parks and Horst Buchholz. Both flicks offered viewers enough bee-movie, nerve-shattering special effects to give viewers a bad case of hives.

Q: Since John Travolta's older brother keeps saying he doesn't want to trade on John's success why doesn't he change his name to anything else but "Joey Travolta"? — B.C., Reston, Va.

A: The truth is having the name Travolta can't hurt. Joey claims, when asked, that to change his name would be a cop-out. He points out that the Fondas haven't changed their names. Joey has big plans for himself and says he's going to star in a movie he has written about his life. Well, even when he doesn't do that, the Fondas haven't done that.

Q: Do you think Robert DeNiro's wife, Diahnne Abbott, will branch out on a career of her own? — E.H., New Rochelle, N.Y.

A: Diahnne always had something of a reputation as a sultry singer. But she made critics sit up and take notice when she sang a number in the film "New York, New York." Now the word is that she's being wooed to play Josephine Baker in a projected movie about that famous,
