

Third plane involvement being studied

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Federal authorities said Tuesday night at least one witness saw a third small plane in the sky at the same time a commercial jet and another light plane collided in the nation's worst air disaster that killed at least 151 persons.

"There are strong indications that there was a third plane" that may have contributed to the crash, said Phillip Hogue, head of the National Transportation Safety Board's investigation.

Pilots take aim at FAA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Air Line Pilots Association charged Tuesday that bureaucratic delays on the part of the Federal Aviation Administration contributed to the mid-air collision that killed 151 people in San Diego.

"The FAA is still years away from certifying an operational collision avoidance system to prevent mid-air collisions even though the technology has been available for many years," association president John O'Donnell said.

O'Donnell, testifying before the House government operations subcommittee, said two systems have been under study, but the ground-based system favored by the FAA will not work in areas such as San Diego that have high density air traffic.

He said he preferred the other system which uses equipment placed in the aircraft.

FAA Administrator Langhorne Bond later told reporters his agency is trying to develop an anti-collision system that works "with certainty" rather than rush to make an imperfect choice. He said a new system may be developed by 1982.

A philosophical dispute has gone on for a number of years whether we should have a cockpit-based warning system or a ground-based system," Bond said. "We are working toward both."

Bond also said he has no intention of banning small planes from major airports, a step suggested by some as the only way to avoid disasters such as the one at San Diego.

But if a third plane was present, the pilots of the Pacific Southwest Airlines Boeing 727 and single-engine Cessna were not advised of it by the tower at Lindbergh Field according to preliminary information, Hogue said.

The PSA jetliner loaded with 136 persons and single-engine Cessna with two persons aboard both had received advice from the control tower at Lindbergh Field and both pilots apparently acknowledged the advisories.

A little more than two minutes later, the Cessna collided "head-on" into the jetliner, tearing through the jetliner's right wing and sending both aircraft plunging into a block of homes.

"There is some question about whether the third plane was a Cessna," Hogue said. "There are strong indications there was a third plane ... but we don't know how close it was. We may find that the third plane is no factor whatsoever ... it may have been out of the traffic pattern."

Hogue, who heads a nearly 100-member team of investigators under the direction of the National Transportation Safety Board, told a news conference the board plans to question "one or more" witnesses who said they saw two small planes in the sky with the jetliner just prior to the collision.

He said one of the main conflicts the board is trying to resolve is whether "the pilot (of the PSA jet) actually saw the aircraft he collided with" or whether his earlier acknowledgement was of the third aircraft.

"I don't know whether he was acknowledging that aircraft (single-engine Cessna) or another aircraft. We don't know."

He said the tapes indicated the PSA pilot — warned he was dangerously close to a small plane — may have seen the third small plane that was ahead of the jet but the single-engine Cessna to his right that hit him.

Such a conclusion is further supported by the calm voices present in the tape-recorded conversations between controllers and the PSA pilot. There was no sign of an impending emergency, investigators said.

"There was no shouting, screaming, panic or terror," Hogue said. "Absolutely no emotion."

A former Twin Falls man took a good time to be off

SAN DIEGO, CALIF. — A former Twin Falls resident, Capt. Charles McClain, is probably counting his blessings today.

McClain is a pilot for Pacific Southwest Airlines, the company whose Boeing 727 crashed in San Diego, Calif. Monday morning and killed 150 people. Fortunately for McClain, he was off duty.

His mother, Mabel McClain Tarr, of Twin Falls, said her son called Monday evening to report he was OK. "I had been worried all day about him," she said. "Boy was I relieved when I heard his voice."

McClain was at his home on the outskirts of San Diego when the crash occurred. He lives about 14 miles from where the worst aviation accident in American history occurred.

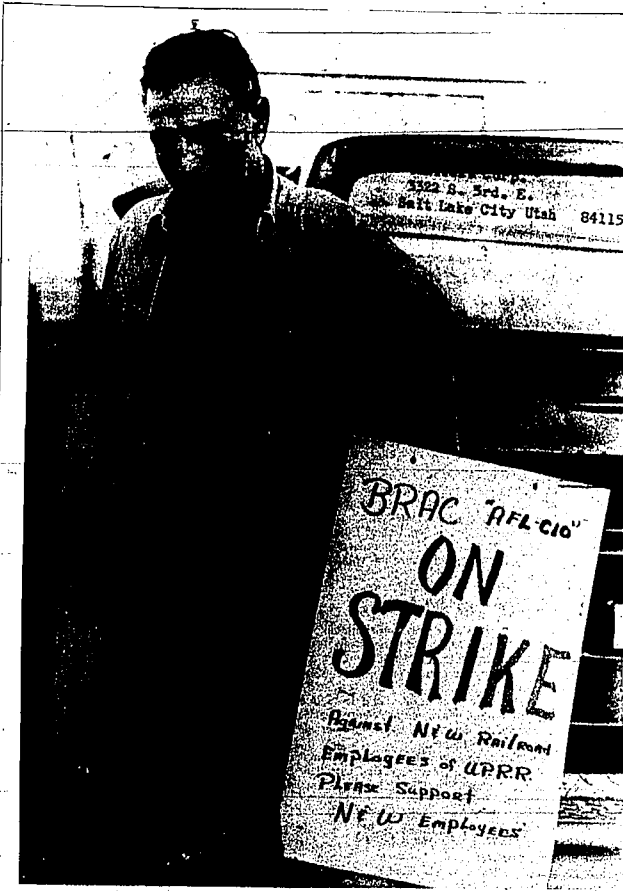

The commuter jetliner collided with a private plane and plunged into a quiet residential neighborhood.

McClain is on the National Pilots Association board of inquiry which is looking into the accident and cannot comment on the crash.

W. J. Rice pickets outside the Twin Falls UP office Tuesday

Few trains on Magic Valley rails

By JEFF SHER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Amtrak's Pioneer passenger train through Idaho and freight shipments in and out of the Magic Valley, except perishable products, were halted by the nationwide railroad strike Tuesday.

In Twin Falls, the strike idled roughly 60 to 70 workers.

That means shipments of beans, refined sugar, peas, wheat, and fresh and frozen potatoes will not be shipped out. Items ranging from refrigerators to plate glass to construction materials will not reach local businesses.

The strike, which began at 4 a.m. Tuesday, idled 13,000 Union Pacific Railroad workers in seven western states, although the strike was not aimed directly at the Union Pacific Railroad.

The strike is being held to aid members of the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks in their battle against the Norfolk and Western Railway Co., a major eastern railroad.

Susan Ueberroth, Amtrak public affairs official in San Francisco, said Monday's Pioneer run from Seattle to Salt Lake City was terminated in Portland, Ore., and the passengers were bussed from there to Salt Lake City.

Tuesday's Amtrak train was running, but, she added Tuesday, "as of right now there will not be any service" Wednesday.

Ueberroth declined to predict what will happen to the Pioneer past Wednesday, saying only that the decision will be made on a "day-by-day" basis.

Richard Tinchler, assistant public relations director for UP in Salt Lake City, said Tuesday, "We won't be loading anything while this is going on."

Shipments already on trains will be moved by management crews, Tinchler added, but only if they include "perishable products" or "time-sensitive" items.

W. J. Rice, a UP clerk in Twin Falls for the last 26 years and a member of the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks, said from his post on the picket line Tuesday night that UP hauls as much as 500,000 pounds of refined sugar out of Twin Falls every day this time of year, plus peas, wheat, beans, potatoes and other agricultural products.

Rice said, "We've got most of the wheat hauled out now, but pretty soon the beans start."

He expected all shipments to be halted for the duration of the strike.

He also said shipments of "everything imaginable" reach Twin Falls via train, including refrigerators, automobiles, furniture, clothing, construction materials, and a host of other goods, and all those shipments will also stop.

He estimated between 60 and 65 boxcars of goods leave and enter Twin Falls every day.

To describe the share UP carries of the goods entering and leaving Twin Falls, Rice stated, "We haul more freight in one day than them trucks haul in one week."

Rice said 60 to 70 employees in Twin Falls are affected by the strike, including clerks, switchmen, electrical and mechanical forces, maintenance and weight men and others. He said only three employees of the railroad in Twin Falls are management personnel.

Tinchler said he was not able to pinpoint which shipments the railroad will consider time-sensitive or perishable, but he said he doubted any of the goods in the Twin Falls area would fit the classification.

"In your area, we don't have any (perishable products)," he guessed.

He said all decisions about what moves and what sits will be made by "local officials."

Tinchler said he had no idea when the strike would end, but he said if the union obeys the restraining order against the strike issued by U.S. District Court Judge H. Dale Cook in Salt Lake City, the strike should end "sometime tonight."

But, he added, "If they don't, who knows."

He said once the strike is ended, "It would not take us long to get back in full swing."

Rail strike spreads

By DREW VON BERGEN United Press International

Striking railroad workers halted operation of the rail system in 42 states Tuesday, then encountered several temporary federal court orders sending many of them back to work.

In addition to stopping both passenger and freight shipments in most of the nation, both the steel and auto industries began planning for shutdowns. Automakers warned that continued picketing could shut down that industry by the end of the week.

Members of the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks set up picket lines in the early morning hours in sympathy with 4,500 workers on strike for two months against the Norfolk and Western Railway in a contract dispute over seniority.

Seventeen strikers were arrested in Shreveport, La., when they refused to disperse after a federal judge issued a restraining order against picketing at a railroad yard.

Stanford Erickson, a spokesman for the Association of American Railroads, estimated that 335,000 of the nation's 900,000 rail workers — about 70 percent — were affected by the strike.

The AAR spokesman said only six of the contiguous states were not affected: Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont.

"It is affecting about 70 percent of movement of coal in the United States and about 85 percent of all the grain movement in the country," he added.

The nation's automakers, quickly experiencing parts shortages due to the strike, began curtailing production and warned the industry may halt work within days of the strike's beginning.

General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. officials said they already had cutback operations and laid off workers at some facilities where parts shipments had not arrived. A GM spokesman said that the firm's plants could be shut down by the weekend.

The railroads called the picketing illegal, and moved quickly in a number of federal courts seeking injunctions. Judges quickly issued orders against picketing at Union Pacific, Burlington Northern, Santa Fe, Grand Trunk Western and other railroads.

Thousands of commuters in Chicago and other metropolitan areas were caught unaware as they headed to rush-hour trains. But the northeast corridor was generally spared.

In Washington, a spokesman said Labor Secretary Ray Marshall met with officials of the National Railway Labor Conference, an industry group, and United Transportation Union, a rail union.

At Ford Motor Co. headquarters in Dearborn, Mich., vice president Raymond Logue said plants throughout the nation "will be seriously affected if freight shipments are disrupted."

A General Motors official in Ohio said a rail disruption is felt within 24 to 48 hours "and then the situation becomes much more serious after that."

"This situation is very critical and we are very concerned," said Armo Steel spokesman Bob Hawkins.

Russell Cooper of Buhl was "scared to death"

Truck driver tells a tale of abduction

By VALERIE ROBINETT Times-News writer

BUHL — "I had just walked around the back of the truck to check the tires on the trailer, just like I usually do, when somebody just grabbed me and put me in a trunk. I didn't know what his name was."

For the next four days, beginning on Sept. 7, Russell Cooper of Buhl claimed he stayed in that trunk, not knowing why, or if he would ever get out to see his family again.

Cooper, a driver for Clark Trucking of Buhl, was taking a load of fish to California on a standard run. But 40 miles out of Los Angeles, he states he was inexplicably thrown in the trunk of a car after making a routine stop.

"I left the truck in Labor Day," Cooper said. "I cashed my expense check at Jackpot. It was about $300, and I had about $80 on me. And then I spent the night about 60 miles out of Las Vegas. I refueled in Vegas the next day and went through the inspection station. Everything was right on schedule."

"I had stopped at Denny's Restaurant in Canyon County, Calif., to get some coffee. I saw a car close to the truck, but thought somebody had a flat tire or something. I've been driving trucks for a long time, you know, and nothing ever happened."

"I saw this man and the next thing I knew I was in the trunk." According to Cooper, he was driven around for awhile, and then taken to a "wash area, where there had been a flood. There was a black pipe running through it."

ANDREI GROMYKO
... escorted from rostrum

Gromyko ill at UN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, 69, became ill at the U.N. General Assembly Tuesday but recovered and finished an address that included an attack on the Camp David accords.

The veteran diplomat, described by colleagues as "very tired" from a flurry of meetings and functions, was halfway through his speech when he turned ash.

Two U.N. aides helped him to a private room where he rested for an hour before returning and finishing his address. He said he was overcome by the lights focusing on the podium.

Gromyko told the 33rd General Assembly that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was guilty of a "surrender" to Israel and said the Camp David accords "have only sidetracked" Middle East peace efforts.

Farber out again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New York Times reporter Myron Farber won temporary freedom Tuesday under a Supreme court order issued less than an hour before he was to return to jail for refusing to let a judge inspect his files on a murder case.

Justice Potter Stewart issued a stay allowing Farber to remain free "until further order of this court." This kind of stay often is granted when one justice, or the full court, needs more time to consider a case.

Arms embargo lifted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Tuesday lifted the U.S. arms embargo against Turkey, saying the action was in the best interests of the United States and its allies in NATO.

Carter Tuesday signed the $2.8 billion International Security Assistance Act, which authorized him to end the embargo, and then issued a memorandum to the secretary of state ordering the resumption.

Allen defeated

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Sen. Maryon Allen was defeated Tuesday in her bid to complete her late husband's term and former football hero Bob James, an ex-Republican, won the Democratic nomination to succeed Gov. George C. Wallace.

Former Alabama Chief Justice Howell Heflin won the Democratic nomination to succeed retiring Sen. John Sparkman. The three runoff primaries were tantamount to election in his heavily Democratic state.

Coalition says no

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaragua's anti-government coalition Tuesday rejected negotiations with President Anastasio Somoza unless he frees jailed opposition leaders and lifts censorship imposed at the height of the recent civil war.

Jalme Chamorro, a spokesman for the Broad Opposition Front representing wide spectrum of political, business and labor organizations, said Somoza had agreed to talks only because he had "his arm twisted" by the United States.

Jarvis campaigns

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Howard Jarvis spent half a million dollars Tuesday on a nationally syndicated television show aimed at keeping up the momentum of Proposition 13 and converting it into a crusade to cut federal income taxes by 25 percent.

The 75-year-old co-author of the California property tax initiative held center stage during most of the 30-minute show which was taped in Los Angeles and broadcast on 137 TV stations including outlets in Hawaii and Alaska.

Military bill passes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate passed a $35.2 billion military authorization bill Tuesday, deleting funds for a $2 billion nuclear supercarrier that prompted a veto by President Carter.

Defense sources said the administration now plans to push Congress to put the money saved into a missile system that can be fired from land or sea.

Walkout on Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One member of the Congressional Black Caucus walked out on President Carter Tuesday during a tense meeting at the White House on full-employment legislation.

Carter invited the black lawmakers in for a discussion of the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, which has passed the House and awaits Senate action. Some congressmen who attended said they secured a pledge from Carter that he will push hard to get the measure through before adjournment scheduled Oct. 14.

IMF talk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States told the world's financial community Tuesday America is trying to meet its international economic responsibilities by cutting inflation, curbing oil imports and boosting exports.

A speech to the International Monetary Fund-World Bank annual meeting, Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal expressed confidence America can slash its approximately $18 billion payments deficit by up to a third or more next year.

Draw in chess

BAGUIO, Philippines (UPI) — Champion Anatoly Karpov and challenger Viktor Korchnoi played to another draw Tuesday but — wonder of wonders — they talked to each other for the first time in 18 games.

"Now we're making some progress," West German arbiter Lotbar Schmid said after the 20th draw of the 55-day-old battle for the world title.

Gas bill still alive

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Tuesday rejected a last-ditch attempt to derail a compromise natural gas bill that would have sent the complex measure back to House-Senate conferees with orders to return a stripped-down version.

The attempt, led by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., was defeated 55-36 despite a sweener put into the instructions designed to lure the votes of farm-state senators.

Support in Israel

By United Press International
Israel's opposition Labor party threw its support to the Camp David accords Tuesday, making parliamentary approval a certainty and enabling Israel and Egyptian peace talks to start as early as next week.

But in Amman, Jordan's King Hussein said the agreements did not come "anywhere near" meeting his demands, dampening U.S. hopes for an overall Middle East settlement.

And Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at the United Nations accused Egyptian President Anwar Sadat of "surrendering" to Israel by signing the Sept. 17 accords.

House OKs coin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Tuesday passed and sent to President Carter a bill placing suffragette Susan B. Anthony's portrait on a new small-size dollar coin, the first woman ever to be honored on U.S. money.

The bill, which passed 368-38, is the culmination of efforts by Reps. Mary Rose Oaker, D-Ohio, Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., and others who said it was time to honor a real woman.

Until now the only female symbol on a U.S. coin was the mythical winged liberty figure which has been used on several coins.

JFK hearing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jack Ruby never met Lee Harvey Oswald before gunning him down in front of television cameras two days after the assassination of John F. Kennedy, Ruby's brother testified Tuesday.

Earl Ruby, 63, Jack's younger brother, told the House Assassinations Committee he does not believe Jack was involved in any conspiracy.

"I asked him point-blank if he had known Oswald before," Earl said of his brother. "Absolutely not. What? Are you nuts? were his words."

Asked if Jack would have told him of any involvement, Earl replied: "Well, he knew he was going to die when he had cancer. If he had known anything, he would have told me."

Barnard opines

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — A medical monthly quoted Dr. Christian Barnard and other doctors Tuesday as saying Pope Paul VI's life might have been saved if he had been given intensive care after suffering a heart attack Aug. 6.

The pontiff died three hours after the attack at his summer residence of Castel Gandolfo.

"An acutely sick patient is given intensive therapy," the monthly magazine Salve quoted South African heart transplant pioneer Barnard as saying.

Plane crash kills eight

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — A chartered plane burst into flames and ploughed into a residential suburb of San Juan Tuesday, hitting a car and showering pedestrians with flaming debris.

Police said eight persons were killed, including two on the ground, and another six bystanders seriously injured.

Trucker recounts abduction

Back in Idaho, Dennis Clark, president of Clark Trucking, had received word the truck hadn't arrived, and had called the highway patrol. He also checked Cooper's fuel stops and the inspection station in Nevada. Everything was right on schedule. Except the truck hadn't arrived.

"We weren't sure what happened," Clark said. "We couldn't find him, because we couldn't find the truck."

And someone else was very worried—Linda Cooper, at home in Buhl, with her two small children, expected her husband to arrive home within a week, probably on Friday. But he didn't come. Dennis Clark told her the truck was late, but that was all they knew.

"After a while, when he hadn't called or nothing, I just stuck it in my head that he was dead," Linda said.

And, not wanting to worry her husband's parents, who also live in Buhl, she kept his disappearance to herself. "It was awful," she said, "and I'm such a nervous person anyway."

Mrs. Cooper did contact the FBI, who began an investigation. That same evening she received a call from her husband.

Cooper had finally talked his abductors into letting him call his wife.

While he was on the phone, the still unidentified abductor stood by, listening to the conversation, according to Cooper. During their rather emotional interchange, Mrs. Cooper told her husband she had contacted the FBI, and Cooper relayed that information to his abductor. He also tried to give his scared wife as much information as he could, until he was told by the man to hang up. He stated he was then led back to the car and put in the trunk.

"They kept telling me they would drop me in the desert, in Nevada, and finally they let me go."

Approximately four days after he was put in the trunk, Cooper was let off outside Truckee, Calif. He states he hitched a ride into Reno, where he used the credit card he still had to rent a motel room. He later located relatives in Reno and called the FBI.

Cooper stated his wallet, complete with credit cards, was returned to him when he was let off.

The truck with its now-spilled load of fish, was finally spotted by a driver who had worked for Clark, and brought back to Idaho. Its maggot-covered contents were dumped outside of Buhl, but Clark believes it will be covered by insurance.

Further details on the case are being held pending an ongoing investigation by the FBI.

As for why he was detained for so long, Cooper said, "I don't have the slightest idea. But I'll tell you, I was scared to death."

Oilfield fire extinguished

HACKBERRY, La. (UPI) — Oilfield disaster fighters Tuesday extinguished a raging fire that began six days ago and burned up $1 million worth of crude oil at the federal government's underground petroleum reservoir in southwest Louisiana.

The burning oil, a portion of the millions of barrels of oil being placed in the nation's salt domes to protect against future Arab embargoes, sent up a cloud of thick black smoke visible for nearly 150 miles away, m a Texas oilfield firefighter Asger "Boots" Hansen gingerly maneuvered a seven-foot rubber "expansion plug" over the gushing well pipe about 8:45 a.m. CDT and lowered it into the 10-inch pipe gushing with oil from the underground storage cavern.

Barrie Gilbert back with the bears

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — Barrie Gilbert, the Utah scientist who was nearly maulled to death by a grizzly bear in Yellowstone National Park a year ago, is back with the bears trying to find ways to keep them from bothering people.

Only now he is more careful. He carries a gun and insists on having an adult assistant close by. His research is also done from protected observation towers instead of on the ground.

The Utah State University wildlife researcher, who lost an eye and half of his face in the vicious attack, recently won a $12,000 research grant to study the grizzly's smaller cousins — the black bears of Yosemite National Park in California.

He also studying polar bears at Fort Churchill on Hudson Bay in Canada.

Gilbert is being assisted in the new research by Bruce Hastings, the graduate student who scared away the bear that mauled him in Yellowstone.

Haley, lower Wood River Valley, Camas Valley:

Fair early today. Partly cloudy this afternoon through Thursday.

Highs both days in the 70s, lows tonight in the 30s.

Synopsis:

Warm high pressure continued over the western states again Tuesday. This high pressure produced mostly fair skies and unseasonably warm temperatures over Idaho. The highs Tuesday mostly in the 80s to lower 90s were some 10 to 15 degrees above seasonal normals.

Weakening of the high pressure will allow weak frontal disturbances to move into the northwestern states for the next few days. These weakened fronts will produce some mountain showers over northern Idaho, but only a little cloudiness and a slight cooling trend in the southern area.

The extended outlook for southern Idaho Friday through Sunday calls for dry and warm but with a slight chance of showers at times over the northern mountains. Highs in the 70s to low 80s, and lows in the 40s to low 50s in the extended period.

Race for South African prime minister still open

ON.Y. Times Service
PRETORIA, South Africa — With the election of South Africa's new prime minister scheduled on Thursday, the contest to succeed John Vorster remains wide open.
 The edge, however, apparently belongs to two veteran cabinet ministers who have taken strongly conservative stands on issues involving the country's majority black population.

Defense Minister Pieter W. Botha and Plural Relations Minister Connie Mulder appear to be neck-and-neck in the race for a simple majority of the ballots. In the case of Mulder, the ruling National Party's parliamentary caucus. The outsider in the contest, Foreign Minister Roelof F. Botha, no relation of the defense minister, is said to be gaining votes but not enough for victory.

The foreign minister, at 46 the youngest and most reform-minded candidate, has resisted strong pressures to withdraw. This could make him a king-maker, for after the first vote the lowest-scoring candidate will be dropped leaving the other two in a decisive second ballot.

The party caucus has a maximum theoretical attendance of 122. Mulder, 53, heads the party in Transvaal province accounting for 80 of the votes. Defense Minister Botha, 63, is expected to win most of the 55 votes from the Cape province where he is the party leader. Of the other two provinces, the Orange Free State, a bastion of racial orthodoxy with 24 votes, is said to be strongly for the defense minister, with Natal dividing its 13 votes between the three candidates. Vorster, retiring because of ill health, is said to have remained aloof from the contest.

Surveys by the English language press say the foreign minister is overwhelmingly the most popular candidate with the public. However, the polls and editorials supporting his record as a negotiator might actually hurt his chances. The National Party, which came to power in 1948, is the political standard-bearer for the country's 2.6-million Afrikaners, whites of mixed Dutch, German and French descent who trace their origin to the first white settlers in the 17th century. The party has a suspicion of the English-speaking minority that dates to the Boer War, and reacts adversely to anything that can be presented as "interference" from English-speaking interests. It also has tended to choose the most hardline candidate, as it did in selecting Vorster in 1966.

Rhodesia killings reported

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Rhodesia said Tuesday its troops had killed 21 black guerrillas in new fighting, pushing the insurgent death toll in September to 319 — the most killed in any month of the six-year war.

The communique said government troops also killed four black civilians. As the new casualty report was released, Prime Minister Ian Smith flew to neighboring South Africa in what was described as a short official visit to speak to the federated Chamber of Industries of South Africa in Durban.

It was not known whether he would also consult with South African officials on Rhodesia's worsening guerrilla war.

The Salisbury government said insurgents killed 11 black civilians in rural areas and broke into the Bushungwe school in northwestern Rhodesia's Rengwe tribal reserve, destroyed food supplies and gutted the school library.

The report said guerrillas killed 64-year-old Frederick Petrus Oosthuizen in an attack on the Fyvie Farm in central Rhodesia's Gwelo district. He was the 34rd white civilian slain this month, including 48 killed Sept. 3 when insurgents shot down a civilian airliner.

Chinese ending peace talks

HONG KONG (UPI) — China said Tuesday it is breaking off two months of peace negotiations with Vietnam, accusing Hanoi of harassing and killing Chinese nationals under Russia's "gleeful" watch.

Vietnam in turn charged the Chinese were massing troops and tanks along the border and arming Cambodia for attacks on Vietnamese territory.

"Throughout the talks the Vietnamese side has created a series of violent incidents of expelling, abducting, arresting and even killing Chinese nationals," said Chung Hsi-tung, China's chief delegate to the Hanoi discussions.

Chung said Hanoi had simply turned the negotiating sessions into a forum for anti-China propaganda.

"As the Vietnamese side has simply no intention of discussing and solving problems, and has closed the door to negotiations, it is impossible for the talks to go on," he said.

"Faced with this reality, we are forced to suggest the need of an adjournment of the talks between the Chinese and Vietnamese vice-foreign ministers. The Chinese delegation will soon return to China to report on its work."

Chung's remarks were carried by the New China News Agency and monitored in Hong Kong.

Vietnam later rejected the charges and called for continued talks.

"Chung has, with allegations completely contrary to the facts, deliberately shifted the blame on the Vietnamese side," said Vietnamese negotiator Vice Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son.

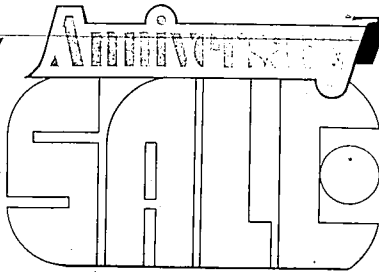

Shah attacks corruption

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The Shah brought his war on corruption to his own court Tuesday and ordered royal family members purged from government and industry.

The Shah, heralding a low-profile role for his family, ordered new Court Minister Ali Qoli Ardaani to complete the cleanup within two months and ensure that family members in future lead spotless lives.

The ban, the harshest backlash against an element that caused major public discontent, will result in widespread turmoil within government and the economy — both the private and public sectors. Hundreds of thousands of people rely on princely favors for jobs, promotions and business, political sources said.

Carter's future tied to taxes not Camp David

By PHILIP W. SMITH
Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — This September may be remembered as the turning point in Jimmy Carter's presidency for more reasons than the Camp David summit.

The president's surge in popularity, already apparent following his two weeks of tough negotiating with the leaders of Egypt and Israel, could be far less significant than what happened in the recent Democratic primaries of Minnesota and Massachusetts.

Those two states, among the most liberal in the country, have confirmed that there is a new conservative trend in American politics.

Throughout the summer, liberals tried to dismiss the June vote in California for tax-cutting Proposition 13 as nothing more than another manifestation of the kooky politics of the Far West.

Seven days in September totally discredited that argument.

First Rep. Donald M. Fraser of Minnesota went into his state's Democratic senatorial primary with the endorsement of the Democratic Farmer-Labor (DFL) Party which only a few years ago was tantamount to election in November. The primary was to be merely a formality following endorsement by the DFL convention.

Fraser, a leading liberal spokesman in the national Democratic Party, lost the primary to conservative businessman Robert Short.

A week later, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, one of the leading national spokesmen for the cities and perhaps the nation's most liberal governor, lost in a primary to Edward J. King who ran a conservative campaign based on tax cuts, capital punishment and opposition to abortion.

The implications of those two primaries could well have more impact on the 1980 presidential election than whether Egypt and Israel eventually sign a peace treaty.

Chances are, most Americans will give Carter high marks for Camp David even if the whole "framework for peace" falls apart. At least he tried, most will say.

The big question mark for the administration as it begins to prepare a 1979-80 legislative agenda is how much longer Carter can avoid being swept up in this apparent conservative trend.

Carter ran in 1976 as a liberal on some issues, a conservative on others. Unless he backs down, however, his announced legislative goals for the 96th Congress lean heavily to the liberal side at the very time the country seems to be moving to the right.

The big three Carter programs in Congress next year are national health insurance, welfare reform and tax reform: All are designed primarily to help poor people. While the middle class would obviously gain some benefits also, will it be willing to pay the price?

National health insurance will cost billions of tax dollars.

Welfare reform might eliminate fraud in the welfare system, but virtually everyone agrees it would cost more than current programs.

Tax reform could well lead to lower income taxes, but unless less spending offsets the lower taxes, it would also increase the federal deficit. Carter already is going to have trouble trying to explain away his 1976 campaign promise that he would balance the federal budget by fiscal 1981.

While he has reduced the deficit, his latest statements have projected an overrun in Fiscal 1980 of about $30 billion — half the amount of the deficit when he took office but still a long way from a balanced budget.

While the success at Camp David may have temporarily blunted the possibility of a liberal challenge to Carter in 1980 from within his own party, the Republicans are gearing up for a challenge from the domestic side.

GOP national Chairman Bill Brock sent Carter a congratulatory Camp David message on Tuesday, and on Wednesday led a delegation of 50 prominent Republicans on a nationwide "tax blitz."

In cities across the country, the GOP delegation spent the remainder of the week campaigning for a 33 percent cut in federal income taxes. Given the clues so far this year, Carter will need some spectacular successes in the next two years to counter that kind of a campaign in 1980.

City council wisely put a lid on the LID

The United Way's slogan, "Thanks to you, it's working," applies quite well to the current state of democratic government in Twin Falls.

It's working. The last few weeks city residents upset about a proposed street, sidewalk and sewer improvement plan, have made it exceedingly clear to the city council they don't want the high-priced improvements.

The city council earlier this year surveyed the city and drafted a plan for $4 million in improvements and additions to the streets, sidewalks and gutters.

But the bill for the $4 million of improvements would have gone directly to property owners.

Virginia Farmer, a homeowner on Flier Avenue West, was typical of the dozens of people who testified against the proposed improvements. Mrs. Farmer told the city she didn't want a new sidewalk because it would require cutting down a tall ash tree in her front yard. That's something the city fathers didn't consider.

Other residents complained the local improvement district, or LID, would raise their annual taxes by $100 or more and they would rather live with muddy footprints in the living room, thank you.

The point is, after the city council listened to a chorus of protests it cut back the LID proposal by 50 percent or maybe more.

Sure, streets in some parts of the city will be less safe for kids because there won't be sidewalks. And the defeat of the LID will tend to lower the property values of some residential lots.

But the people spoke. They didn't want an LID and they shouldn't be forced to pay for one.

By cutting back the $4 million LID plan, the city council responded as a democratic government should.

Jimmy's popularity on the increase but he hasn't yet won our hearts

WASHINGTON — The surprise ending of the Camp David summit conference on the Middle East provided a perfect example of how presidential performance is perceived in this country.

Before the "framework of peace" agreement was announced Sunday night, President Carter could do nothing right. His ratings in the public opinion polls had been at a very low ebb since spring. Political leaders in his own party spoke daily, publicly and privately, of his ineffectiveness as a leader. His reputed ineptness within the federal government was the subject of jokes on Capitol Hill and the television talk shows.

In Washington, the summer gossip centered around Jimmy Carter's descendancy and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's likely ascendancy as the next Democratic presidential nominee. As the results of the summit were being announced, "The New Republic" was out with an issue devoted almost totally to the likelihood of another Kennedy presidency. The summit changed all that: Monday night, the president was received before a joint session of Congress like a conquering Roman emperor. His former critics in and out of the party praised his effectiveness in bringing the parties to agreement. Even former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who had been critical of the Carter Middle East policy, termed the agreement a "major achievement."

National columnists who had written for months about Carter's ineffectiveness said that the summit had changed all that and his political future now had to be reconsidered in a new framework. In fact, his popularity will soar in the polls. A CBS news poll released Tuesday night showed that Carter's popularity jumped dramatically, apparently as a result of the summit. In June, a poll conducted jointly by The New York Times and CBS-News showed that 38 percent of those polled approved of the president's job performance. In a telephone poll conducted Monday night by CBS-News, alone, of 874 adults, 51 percent said they approved of the president's performance. With that kind of sample the poll is subject to an error of 4 percentage points either way. In addition, 44 percent of those questioned said that they believed Carter was responsible for the agreement reached at Camp David. Fifteen percent gave the credit to Sadat and 5 percent to Begin.

Eighteen percent said they believed the credit was due to joint effort of the leaders.

Presidential aides are saying that the summit provided just the opportunity that Carter needed to demonstrate that his ability as presidential leadership had been hardly misjudged.

But a longer view of how presidents are judged against history and the realities of governing in the late 1970's suggest that the pre-summit perception of the president was premature and the aftermath may be extreme.

There were some tangible, favorable results politically for the president. For months, his administration has suffered from the fact that Jewish leaders, who have long been supporters of the national Democratic party, had been turning against the Carter presidency in the belief that he was putting too much pressure on Israel and not enough on the Arab nations. Contributions to the party declined dramatically.

After the records were announced, however, the same Jewish leaders who had been so critical of the Carter approach to the Middle East were quick to praise the president for his role and the agreement. Furthermore, the Democratic National Committee received word that at least some of the contributions would be restored.

Heretofore, Carter had been judged on his apparent inability to manipulate the Washington power centers in order to bring a sense of direction and unity to his administration. At Camp David he was operating within a different context. One that played to one of his strengths that is little understood in Washington: the persistence and persuasiveness of the southern Baptist. He comes from a long tradition of proselytizing that obviously served him well in Camp David.

In the religious overtones of it all — capped by Carter quoting David for the Jews and Jesus for the Christians, was obviously a potent political asset in a nation that in one way or another keeps returning to its religious roots. Whatever happens in the Middle East, Carter already has accomplished more for peace in that part of the world than his predecessors. Americans expect their presidents to take a firm, strong hand in the conduct of foreign policy, and Carter has now clearly demonstrated, for perhaps the first time, his ability to do that. Further, Carter's performance with the Congress seemed to be improving after a long series of rebuffs at the hands of members of his own party. He has won recent victories in the areas of civil service reform, national defense and energy conservation.

On the other hand, some of the realities of the political world lie ahead for Carter, not promising. While public opinionism about government has been increasing in recent years, expectations of what a president should accomplish have remained high.

Presidential elections usually swing on domestic policies, not foreign ones, during times of peace. The president is expected to make the economy perform well and hold down inflation even when he does not have full power to do so.

In recent years, the system of government has become so fractured and responsive to a multiplicity of interest groups, rather than to the president or congressional leadership that it is extraordinarily difficult for any government to deliver on promises. And Carter's seeming inability to inspire loyalty within his own party will not necessarily be changed by the summit.

Political experts said Tuesday it was too early to tell what effect the summit agreement might have on mid-term elections. By and large, Democratic candidates have been enjoying association with the president in their campaigns. Because of his low performance ratings, his improved ratings may result in his receiving more invitations to speak in behalf of Democratic candidates, some of the campaign directors said Tuesday, but there was no indication that this would have a major impact on the outcome. Most state and congressional races are expected to turn this year on factors other than party or presidential performance.

Furthermore, the polls have shown a long history of a president's ratings taking a dramatic jump after an international initiative, then declining as other matters become more immediate in the public mind. This happened even after President Kennedy made his Cuban Bay of Pigs fiasco, after President Nixon bombed Hanoi and after President Ford seized the Mayaguez. The Middle East peace initiatives, however, fall in a different category and could be more long lasting for President Carter. But that depends on events no one can anticipate.

Carter blew it on Vesco

©New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — A few weeks ago, columnist Jack Anderson broke a startling story: that fugitive financier Robert Vesco had offered a million dollars to a Georgia friend of the Carter men to put in a fix for his return to the U.S.

Since the intended target of the bribe was supposed to be former Chief of Staff Hamilton Jordan, that worthy gentleman blew his stack and — returning from Camp David in the company of equally infuriated Press Secretary Joseph Powell — excoriated columnist Anderson from their White House bunker.

Jordan had never even been approached, the White House aides charged. Ignoring the bulk of the evidence, Anderson had put forward not a possible conspiracy to fix the case, they centered on the supposed "links" to Jordan and sought to discredit the entire Anderson story. Another White House aide threatened the columnist with an expensive libel suit.

Some lapdogs among the White House news hounds happily swallowed this Jordan-Powell diversion and harassment, chortling along with the Carter men when Anderson clarified one portion of his story. They tut-tutted at the investigative columnist for being "irresponsible."

Now, it turns out that if Anderson has erred, it has been on the side of caution and responsibility. Carter himself may have been the intended target, but it was Jimmy Carter himself who received the Vesco plea. What's more, the Vesco message not only reached the president in the Oval Office, but was the subject of a Carter handwritten note to his attorney general.

No thanks to the stonewalling White House, here is what we now know:

Vesco, whose $200,000 offer for exoneration failed to move the Nixon administration in 1972, upped the ante to a cool million to the Carter administration. Through an intermediary, Georgia businessman R.L. Herring, the Vesco offer was passed to Carter cronies R. Spencer Lee IV who was supposed to get to Jordan.

First, Lee said he went to his good friend and fellow Georgian, Richard Harden, who works in the White House, instead of taking the matter to Jordan. Harden evidently went right to the top. On Feb. 15, 1977, Harden told President Carter of Spencer Lee's offer from Vesco.

And what did the President of the United States do when confronted with Vesco's offer to buy exoneration? Did he immediately order an investigation of this possible attempt to obstruct justice?

No. Just the opposite. Spencer Lee was a nice fellow and a long-time Georgia supporter. President Carter picked up a pen and wrote a note to his attorney general, Georgian Griffin Bell: "Please see Spencer Lee from Albany when he requests an appointment."

Hard to believe? Undoubtedly. But the Securities and Exchange Commission, which is investigating where the Carter Department of Political Justice fears to tread, has forced the White House to admit the existence of that damning note.

Press Secretary Powell must have known about the Harden-Carter involvement with the Vesco offer when he was hearing obloquy on Jack Anderson's story — but it took an affidavit obtained by the SEC from Spencer Lee to make the White House come at least partially clean.

What's the official explanation for the president's directive to the attorney general to grant an appointment to the man carrying the message from Vesco? Well, um, you see, this was his way of getting the matter out of the White House and it won't do any good for the press or the FBI to ask witness Carter about this, we are warned, because the president dismembers the whole thing.

Do you believe that? Here is the president in the Oval Office, receiving news of what may be a bribe offer from the most famous international swindler, writing an instruction to his attorney general to receive the middleman — and not remembering the offer or his written response?

White House apologists seek to head off further investigations by insisting that nothing was done for Vesco by the Carter administration. That is irrelevant. Nothing was done for Vesco by John Mitchell or Maurice Stans either — and they suffered through a long trial — what is relevant is that a potential conspiracy to defraud the U.S. government and obstruct justice reached the president and that he did not carry out his duty to order an investigation.

When you are a law enforcement official with knowledge of a felony, failure to act is called "misprision," although stonewalling does not misprision make, as Leonard Garment once pointed out, the handwritten note by Carter (which the A.G. claims he never received) makes mandatory the investigation of this potential conspiracy.

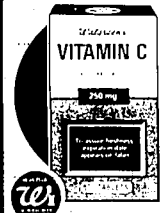

Why is this cover-up being pursued only by Jack Anderson and the SEC? When will the Washington branch office of King and Spaulding — which calls itself "the Department of Justice" — impel a grand jury here in Washington to discover why a possible bribe offer discussed with the president himself 18 months ago was not reported by the White House until last week?

No barnyard bums in this chicken show

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Like Professor Henry Higgins showing off his newly sutured Eliza Doolittle, 11-year-old Mike Root put his trained chicken through its paces. Head up, feet well planted, no wing-flapping or other erratic movements.

To young Root, a 4-H member from Mason County, chicken training is old hat. He's been showing chickens for five years, along with sheep, pigs and other livestock.

"I do just about everything," the wry youngster said.

He conceded he'd been working with this particular chicken "only about a day." In fact, it was a borrowed entry.

"Yeah, I had to borrow one. We butchered all of ours at home," he said with emotional detachment.

Mike didn't take the top prize at this particular Michigan State University show, but all who entered won participation ribbons.

Chickens with poor posture and flighty dispositions didn't score well with the judges. In addition to each chicken's obedience and grooming, judges mark the young handlers on their own appearance, their confidence and handling of the birds and knowledge of poultry.

"How long does it take for a chicken egg to hatch?" Judge Sam Varghese quizzed one contestant.

"Twenty-one days," the young trainer responded.

Varghese said chickens "must be properly trained for a show just as a dog, horse or dairy animal." Well-trained chickens are no barnyard bums. They are more like immaculately groomed, cuddly lapdogs, clucking softly while cradled in their trainers' arms.

"The well-trained chicken will post at attention with the neck straight and all the feathers stretched tight," Varghese said.

First, a young showman plops his bird in a cage and makes it pose on command. Some use a prod to coax the bird into a stable position, with its head high.

Welfare game created

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — If you can purchase an electric toothbrush with your food stamps and convince the Environmental Protection Agency to finance your wife's hairdo, you may be a winner in "The Welfare Game."

Jean Delchant, 23, and her brother, Tim, 21, both students at Creighton University, are attempting to pay off their federally funded student loans and get a start in the business world with their new board game, soon to be marketed throughout the country.

"We're trying to get off welfare, and now we're living on 'Welfare,'" said Miss Delchant, a sophomore law student. She said the idea for the game came while "sitting around the dining room table telling welfare jokes.

"It's a lampoon on welfare fraud in general," Miss Delchant said. "I'd never thought six months ago that I'd be in the game business."

Miss Delchant is president of JEDCO of Iowa, the company formed to market "The Welfare Game." Her brother, who lives in Council Bluffs, Iowa, is vice president.

Miss Delchant said the game is played with food stamps instead of money.

"You try to get your limping Slamcase cat in as a disabled veteran and the Environmental Protection Agency pay's for your wife's hair-do," she said.

"The object of the game is to buy as many household appliances, like a trash compactor, electric toothbrush, grandfather clock — all those necessary, vital things — by defrauding the welfare office before the finance company can repossess them.

"The food stamps have a picture of a man with a big sack of money who is smoking a cigar outside the welfare office."

Misguided tourist returns

BANGOR, Maine (UPI) — Erwin Kreuz, the wrongway West German tourist who last year mistook Bangor for San Francisco and won the hearts of thousands, has returned to Maine for a month-long visit.

Kreuz, a brewery worker in the West Germany town of Augzburg, Monday arrived in the United States as the guest of the owners of the Bangor Mall. Kreuz was flown from his home to join in the mall's opening ceremonies next week.

The 50-year-old German, who speaks virtually no English, gained national notoriety last October when he landed in Bangor enroute to the Golden Gate city — and deplaned, thinking he had arrived.

Kreuz later told German-speaking Bangor residents he wandered about Maine's third largest city for three days, thinking it was a San Francisco suburb.

When he asked a taxi driver to take him to downtown San Francisco, it was then he discovered his 3,000-mile mistake.

Kreuz, an affable, corpulent man who enjoys the fruits of his labor, arrived in Bangor International Airport Monday evening with hosts Gertrude and Kenneth Romine, who met him at Logan International Airport in Boston.

A schoolgirl-pony story with a sad ending

EXETER, England (UPI) — Schoolgirl Kim Bowen and Gypsy the pony were the best of friends when Gypsy lived in the field near Kim's home.

But one day when she visited the local market Kim found her favorite had been sold for $100 to a slaughterman — as horsemeat. So she kidnapped the gray filly, led her back home and kept her secretly in a field.

Police eventually traced the stolen animal and took it back to the slaughterman, Lawrence Potter, who said he still planned to sell Gypsy to be killed.

Predictably, in this animal-loving nation, dozens of persons sent Kim a letter — as horsemeat. So she donations, raising more than $2,000 to save the pony.

But unlike most animal stories this one has a sad ending.

Potter, a wealthy man who drives a Rolls-Royce, refused the money and revealed the horse had been killed by a vet a week earlier.

"These people should give their money to cancer research," he said.

'The Shadow' dies at 66

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Bret Morrison, who played Lamont Cranston in the popular "The Shadow" radio series in the 1940s and 1950s, died Monday of an apparent heart attack. He was 66.

Morrison was found slumped over the wheel of his car after stopping to do some shopping while en route home from taping a radio segment of the Heartbeat Theater series.

A native of Chicago, Morrison began his radio career in 1937 as Mr. First Nighter while still attending Chicago High School.

But it was as "The Shadow" that he was best known, portraying Lamont Cranston, a man of wealth who played detective, righting wrongs, protecting the innocent and punishing the guilty.

"From that show came the legendary line, 'Who knows what evil lurks in the hearts of men? The Shadow knows!'"

Morrison stayed with "The Shadow" until 1955.

He is survived by a son, Edward.

Funeral arrangements were pending at Mount Sinai Mortuary.

Idi in Tripoli

BEIRUT (UPI) — Uganda's President Idi Amin returned in Tripoli Tuesday on an unannounced visit, the official Libyan radio reported.

It said Amin was greeted at Tripoli airport by Libya's No. 2 man, Maj. Abdel Salam Jalloud, but gave no further details.

Radio Kampala said Monday Amin planned to tour a number of Arab countries soon to study the latest situation after the Camp David peace accords.

Levy sentenced

MIAMI (UPI) — Former British call girl Norma Levy, who was involved in a British government sex scandal, was sentenced to 1 month in prison Tuesday for violating U.S. immigration laws and ordered deported after completing the sentence.

U.S. District Judge James L. King allowed Mrs. Levy to remain free on $5,000 bond while Assistant Public Defender Robin Hermann appeals her conviction on illegally re-entering the United States after being deported Oct. 22, 1977.

Time limit

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — The time limit for fugitive U.S. financier Robert Vesco to return to Costa Rica expired Monday night.

Vesco, wanted in the United States on stock fraud charges, is now living in the Bahamas.

Vesco was given permission by the courts to leave Costa Rica temporarily in April, since a lawsuit in which he is involved has not been settled. He received a 75-day permission, later extended another 75 days.

King to Cleveland

CLEVELAND (UPI) — King Khalid of Saudi Arabia was expected to arrive in Cleveland Wednesday for cardiac tests at the Cleveland Clinic, where he had heart surgery in 1972.

Khalid, 63, who has been treated at the clinic three times, will be greeted by President Carter's son, Chip. Khalid will travel on a nonstop flight from Saudi Arabia. Khalid's 1972 surgery at the clinic followed a major heart attack. Dr. Donald E. Effler, former head of heart surgery at the clinic and now a heart surgeon in New York, operated on the king. Effler said the surgery was done to repair heart muscles.

An advance party of about 12 persons arrived in Cleveland Sunday to make final arrangements for the king's stay in Cleveland. Khalid is expected to bring his wife and 13 children with him.

Ladybird speech

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Lady Bird Johnson will speak at the University of Kentucky Oct. 6 at the presentation to the University of Kentucky of the papers of former U.S. Sen. and Kentucky Gov. Earle C. Clements.

Clements, 81, will be accompanied by his daughter, Bess Abell, and her husband, Tyler, Mrs. Abell, executive assistant to the wife of Vice President Walter Mondale, was the former first lady's social secretary.

A native of Morganfield, Clements served as U.S. senator from 1956-66 and governor from 1947-50.

Jackson to meet Jagger

SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio (UPI) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson says he will meet with Mick Jagger of the Rolling Stones this week to protest the Stones' latest album, which he says — has morally objectionable songs that insult blacks.

The black leader, who heads the Chicago-based Operation PUSH, blasted the album at a news conference Monday night after a speech exhorting students and administrators at Shaker Heights High School to pursue academic excellence.

Jackson said the title song on Jagger's latest album, "Some Girls," is "vulgar and obscene."

He said a meeting between himself, Jagger and Atlantic Records President Ahmet Ertegun set for Oct. 4 has been moved up to "sometime this week" because "I understand they (Atlantic) have received so many telegrams about the record album."

"We do not want to act like a censor," Jackson said. "We feel Mick Jagger has a social factor obligation to deal with in his music because (recording) artists reach the eyes and ears in nearly every home."

What's what

How much does the face say about personality?

Scientists claim that a person's facial features denote personality. For example, a girl with a full lower lip and a broad smile, they say, tends to love silks and sweets, romantic gestures and life's luxuries. She appreciates the attention and best care for the sciences. It's likely the doctor will be about her future and makes up lies about her past. But the conclusion is she gets many disappointments. Into the future.

Living cost increase slight during August

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Grocery prices remained stable during August to hold down the overall cost of living increase to a moderate 0.6 percent, the Labor Department reported Tuesday.

August's advance in consumer prices — 7.2 percent at an annual rate — was slightly above the 0.5 percent climb in July, but still equalled the second lowest rise of 1978.

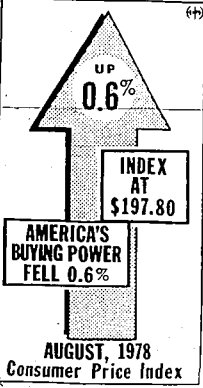

Consumer prices have risen at a 9.5 percent annual rate during the first eight months of the year.

"It is clear that these levels are still too high and that further action (to combat inflation) must be taken," said Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal. The administration's year-end target is 8 percent.

Blumenthal said "we can expect a considerable moderation" in inflation during the remainder of the year.

President Carter is expected to announce within the next few weeks a series of new anti-inflation initiatives, including possible voluntary guidelines for wage and price increases.

The government said its price index for all urban consumers, which includes about 80 percent of the population, stood at 197.8. That means goods and services that cost $100 in 1967 were priced at $197.8 last month.

The mildly encouraging inflation news was offset somewhat by a separate department report which showed that the average American's buying power fell 0.6 percent last month and was down 2.5 percent from August, 1977.

Food and beverage prices advanced only 0.2 percent and the cost of food purchased in stores was unchanged from July.

Fresh vegetable prices dropped sharply, beef fell to the second straight month and poultry prices declined for the first time in 1978.

The department said its housing index rose 0.7 percent in August, the second smallest of the year, but mortgage interest rates, property taxes and prices of home maintenance and repair rose sharply.

The transportation index increased 0.5 percent in August, below the average 0.7 percent rises in each of the preceding three months.

The August increases in the new and used car prices — 0.3 percent and 0.2 percent respectively — were much smaller than in recent months, the department said.

Gasoline prices rose 1 percent compared with 0.8 percent in July.

Charges for medical care services rose 0.9 percent, about twice the rate of increases in the past. Charges for hospital rooms rose 1.5 percent, dental services went up 1.0 percent and doctors fees advanced 0.8 percent.

Grains finish mixed, meats stronger in futures trading

CHICAGO — Meats were stronger and grains mixed in commodity futures trading Tuesday.

Commodity News Service said live cattle ended the session strongly, posting 74 to 20 point gains despite lower dressed beef prices. Lighter cattle runs and stronger live hogs helped cattle volume was 23,170 contracts traded.

Feeder cattle finished 30 to 77 points higher in a trade of 1,228 contracts, with strength attributed to gains in fat cattle, although that strength led to some short covering late in the day.

Live hogs hit contract highs again but settled just under those levels, with closing prices up 115 to 65 points on a trade of 6,552 contracts. Cash hogs were stronger.

Wheat retreated somewhat with profit taking sufficient to provide some pressure. Intraday spreads weren't traded heavily, with December-May at 9 1/4 to 9 1/2 at the close and December to March at 4 1/4 to 5 cents.

Corn closed fractions to 1 1/4 cents higher after a relatively slow day as the market heeded the railway clerks' strike and passage of a bill providing credit for mainland China.

Potential seasonal pressure in the soybean complex was an early factor but subsequent trading was mixed with various factors involved, and beans and oil were stronger at the close. Beans finished 4 1/2 to 2 1/2 cents higher, oil was 60 to 40 points stronger and meal off 50 to 20 cents.

Maine potatoes drifted lower on a featureless trade, settling 3 cents higher to a penny lower. November was the only gainer at 5.19 per hundredweight. May settled off a cent at 7.11. Volume was 1,157 lots.

New York Sugar 11 closed 6 to 16 points lower after making the day's highs of 27 points up basis October. Volume was 8,910 lots.

New York Cornex gold fell 170 to 200 points in largely local trading toward the end of the session. The market was antipating today's announcement of United States trade figures.

New York Cornex silver yielded 350 to 430 points, reacting to pressured gold prices and an uptick in the U.S. dollar. Volume was 3,000 lots. The market fell into line with gold, rallying early and then coming under profit taking pressure.

Closing prices

Stocks score slight advance

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices, buoyed by signs inflation is moderating, were higher at the close of the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday. Trading was moderate.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 0.09 point Monday, was held 5.02 to 877.37 shortly before the final bell at the Big Board. The Dow had been ahead more than 7 points in the late afternoon as bargain hunters dominated market action following the indicator's recent 50.58 point slide.

Advances led declines by a 2-to-1 margin among the 1,368 issues crossing the composite tape at 4 p.m. EDT.

NYSE turnover amounted to about 25,700,000 shares, compared with 25,700,000 shares traded Monday in the slowest session since July 3.

Prices were higher in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

Investors drew encouragement from a report Tuesday that consumer prices rose 0.6 percent in August — up from an annual rate of 7.2 percent — on the heels of a 0.5 percent increase in July.

Prior to the two summer months, the annual inflation rate had averaged 10.8 percent between April and June.

In a separate report, however, the Labor Department said the average American's purchasing power dropped 0.6 percent in August and 2.5 percent from a year ago.

Wall Street also reacted positively to Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal's forecast Tuesday that a recession is not in the wings next year. Blumenthal predicted "slower growth in 1979" and said the United States was making steady progress in cutting its trade deficit.

The Carter administration official expressed concern about rising interest rates, which have restrained the stock market.

Transferring First National Bank of Chicago Monday boosted its prime lending rate a quarter point to 9 1/2 percent, the highest level since Jan. 31, 1975, in a move that is expected to become widespread before long.

The latest hike in the prime came after the Federal Reserve Board raised its discount rate Friday to a record high of 8 percent and took further credit-tightening actions this week.

Carrier Corp. was higher and active after a delayed opening. Carrier denied a report that it was the target of merger bids from two parties in addition to United Technologies. Carrier's board rejected the United offer.

"Ramada Inns," a gambling-related issue, was also stronger and active at one time. Among other gaming stocks, Caesar's World, Harrah's, Flally manufacturing, and Flinthey Enterprises attracted buyers. On the Amex, Resorts International A and B stocks were sharply higher and the A when-issued and B when-issued stock were into plus territory.

Pan American World Airways was a feature during the session. Pan Am has received a $79.1 million Air Force contract.

International Business Machines was a point-spread runner in the afternoon. IBM has raised rental and lease prices on some products.

Du Pont also strengthened during the day. Du Pont has entered a joint venture with Mitsui Petrochemicals of Tokyo to manufacture resins.

Ford Motor Co. weakened at one time. Ford's plants throughout Britain were closed by 57,000 striking workers.

Del Monte drew attention at one point. After almost two months of opposition, Del Monte has agreed to merge with R.J. Reynolds Industries. Reynolds was a fractional gainer. Del Monte also reported first-quarter earnings of 77 cents a share versus 77 cents a year ago.

Denver (UPI) — Grain prices Tuesday. No harvest winter wheat 70 cent, up 4 cents. No 2 hard red wheat, 64 cent, up 1 cent. No 2 soft red wheat, 62 cent, up 1 cent.

KETCHUM — With less than a week before a special election in Ketchum and Sun Valley, members of these two resort cities have begun a final drive to push through the first local option tax in the history of Idaho.

Ketchum and Sun Valley voters will go to the polls Tuesday to decide the fate of an ordinance which would allow each city to levy a 5 percent liquor-by-the-drink and a 5 percent hotel-motel bed tax.

The two resort cities were instrumental in the lobbying efforts which helped create Idaho's first local option tax law during last year's state legislature.

Now, with six days before a special election, Ketchum Mayor Jerry Selfert and prominent Sun Valley citizens have begun a final drive to help insure passage of the option tax in each city.

Although the two cities have worked together in preparing the ballot proposition which voters will see Tuesday, each community will vote separately on the issue. Sixty percent of the voters in each election must approve the local option tax before a city can make it law.

Mayor Selfert recently mailed letters to all of Ketchum's registered voters, urging them to vote "yes" on the local option tax. The mayor explained the purpose of the tax and why he thought it would benefit Ketchum in his letter to about 350 local citizens.

In Sun Valley, City Administrator Clayton Steward said several local citizens have begun a telephone campaign to urge Sun Valley's residents to vote in favor of the tax in Tuesday's election.

Selfert estimated Ketchum could raise between $225,000 and $325,000 in new revenues per year through a 5 percent liquor-by-the-drink and hotel-motel bed tax.

Steward said Sun Valley could probably raise between $250,000 and $350,000 in new revenues per year through the non-property tax.

After two public hearings in August, Ketchum established six uses for option tax revenues and Sun Valley also set six uses for potential new money.

Ketchum citizens came out in favor of using the tax revenues for a municipal transportation system; open space acquisition; capital improvements, including roads, water, sewer and parking; emergency services, including police, fire and ambulance; property tax relief and direct costs to collect and enforce the tax.

Sun Valley citizens said they want new tax monies to be used for a municipal transportation system; road improvements; funding for Moritz Community Hospital; property tax relief; land acquisition and fire department.

The state legislation, which authorizes the local option tax, carefully limits eligibility for the tax to resort cities with populations less than 20,000.

The original supporters of the tax at last year's legislature say people throughout the state are watching closely to see if an option tax can work in Ketchum and Sun Valley. If it does, these original supporters say it could open the door to local option taxes throughout Idaho.

Indeed, Ketchum City Administrator Jim Jacquet said Tuesday he just received a visit from a McCall resident who asked for information about the option tax. McCall is also eligible to levy the tax and this resident said his city was waiting to see how things worked out in the Wood River Valley before taking any action itself, according to Jacquet.

Polling places will be open Tuesday from noon until 8 p.m. at the Ketchum and Sun Valley city halls. Only registered voters may cast ballots and the last day for registration in both cities is Friday.

Ketchum avalanche zone includes 155 homesites

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — After nine months of study and public controversy over avalanche zoning in Ketchum's Warm Springs Canyon, the city's Planning and Zoning Commissions recommended Monday that 155 residential lots be designated as lying in avalanche hazard areas.

In addition to the 155 lots in seven different subdivisions, the two commissions also recommended a substantial amount of undivided land be included in the avalanche overlay district that would be drawn onto the city's zoning maps.

The new avalanche district, which was mapped by Ketchum planner Linda Haavik from the results of two avalanche studies of the Warm Springs area, is part of a new city ordinance to amend earlier avalanche zoning regulations in Ketchum.

Haavik said Tuesday the new avalanche district would be used as an additional form of property description to warn people of potential avalanche hazards in the Warm Springs Canyon.

The district would not prevent property owners from building in the hazard zones of the canyon, which provides access to Sun Valley's Baldy Ski Mountain, she stated.

"It's our duty to provide the information to the people," Haavik observed, "and they can decide (whether to build)."

This particular zoning issue, which first flared up last winter after the city's initial avalanche hazard study was completed, has stirred considerable public controversy.

In a series of public hearings last winter and spring, many local citizens attacked the findings of the city's study. They expressed worry the avalanche hazard report would depress real estate values and would also limit their land use rights.

But Ketchum was caught with the report's findings on record and the city has been scrambling to come up with a way to protect itself legally from avalanche liability without unjustly taking away property owners' land use rights.

With the storm of controversy hanging over the first avalanche study, the city commissioned another expert to give a second opinion on slide hazards in the residential Warm Springs area.

The second opinion backed up the first and Haavik then drew a new avalanche hazard district by including all slide areas from the two studies into one overlay zoning map.

Ketchum's current avalanche zoning ordinance restricts homeowners from renting buildings in avalanche areas from Nov. 1 through April 30 and it also makes the city's building inspector responsible for examining new houses for structural soundness against an avalanche.

Haavik said the new ordinance, recommended by the planning and zoning commissions for adoption by the city council, would delete these provisions. In the new ordinance, the city has tried to develop alternative ways to inform people about the avalanche hazards in the Warm Springs Canyon while leaving the final decision whether to live or build in the danger zone up to the individual.

In addition to the avalanche overlay district, the new ordinance requires:

- All subdivision plats in the avalanche district be marked as hazard areas.

- The Ketchum building inspector to stamp with a warning mark all new building plans in the district.

- Ketchum to file notification of the hazard on each lot with the Blaine County recorder.

- Ketchum to post avalanche warning signs in the public right-of-way in Warm Springs Canyon.

- All district buildings be subject to immediate evacuation if the city council should enact an avalanche hazard resolution during the winter.

- Avalanche protective structures not alter the natural slope and beauty of the land.

Haavik observed the new ordinance does not require any warning to renters in the Warm Springs area.

She said the city council will have to consider that and several other issues at an Oct. 16 public hearing on the new ordinance.

Vivian Stettler of Twin Falls looks over newest Life with first issue on lap

Still a lot of 'Life' left

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Vivian Stettler has a lot of Life. In fact, she has every copy of Life Magazine ever published between 1936 and 1972.

"We were charter subscribers in 1936 when the first subscription came," Mrs. Stettler said Tuesday at her home amid stacks of historic magazines. "And we continued until it was discontinued in 1972."

The Nov. 23, 1936, edition of Life Magazine came to her door with stories about then President Franklin D. Roosevelt, actress Helen Hayes and actor Robert Taylor.

The issue featured—President Roosevelt's effort to tame the wild West by appropriating $10 million for a work relief project involving 10,000 workers in Montana.

The magazine also featured well-known photographer Margaret Bourke-White. She took the first cover photo of the dam at Fort Peck, Mont., where workers were assembling.

Also featured in that first issue were Mrs. Harvey Firestone, who had composed the theme song for the Firestone radio show and two beginning entertainers Jack Benny and Walter Winchell.

One news item informed a new readership about the bizarre death of Dr. Joseph Mayo, son of the founder of the Mayo Clinic, when he decided to take a shortcut in his car and drive down a railroad track. The move cost him his life when a train came along the tracks unexpectedly.

"There are a lot of pictures of prominent people of the time," Mrs. Stettler explained about her first issue. "It is refreshing to be able to read it again."

Mrs. Stettler recalled she and her husband subscribed to the new magazine that year along with thousands of other Americans and she began saving the issues because her son, a student at the University of Idaho, liked to read the back issues when he came home for holidays.

"It just got to be a habit to save them," she recalled. And each week for 36 years while Life Magazine was one of the most widely read publications in the nation, Mrs. Stettler packed away every issue she received.

There were 52 copies each year and she saved all 1,664 of them.

Since 1972, the famous magazine has not been published regularly, but the management of Time Inc. this month began regular monthly publication of the familiar red and white logo on a brand new series of Life Magazines.

Several years ago, the College of Southern Idaho asked Mrs. Stettler to donate part of her Life collection to the college library and she allowed them to take the most recent copies dating back to the '60s.

She still has the old copies, beginning with that first issue in 1936. They are stacked safely in her basement. A glance through some of the copies reveals how the United States has changed during the last three decades. It has gone through a world war, a Korean conflict and another, less popular war in Viet Nam. Styles of dress and styles of photography have changed.

Mrs. Stettler said she plans to hold on to the magazines in her collection although her sons no longer come home to read them.

Jury finds Betty Wageman innocent

TWIN FALLS — A 12-member jury Tuesday night found Betty Wageman of Filer innocent of the charge of arson in the March 3 burning of her home.

The trial of Mrs. Wageman began last Thursday in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls before Judge James Cunningham. Court was convened every day but Sunday and Monday.

Mrs. Wageman had been accused of deliberately setting fire and burning down her Filer home March 3.

The jury deliberated for seven hours before bringing in its unanimous verdict of innocence about 9:45 p.m.

Mrs. Wageman's attorney, public defender Golden R. Bennett, said, "And I'm sure they were right. We felt she was not guilty all along."

Bennett praised Prosecutor Denny Davis for his fair handling of the case in the courtroom.

It was reported during the four-day trial Mrs. Wageman's sons and other witnesses testified she allegedly planned to burn down the house and had allegedly purchased fuel they day of the fire.

Bennett said the woman did not deserve the charges and suspicions leveled against her. He said she has recently been turned down at every apartment she has tried to rent, cause people automatically assumed she was guilty of the alleged arson charge.

15-year-old killed

BURLEY — A fifteen-year-old Heyburn girl was killed instantly when a truck she was riding in collided with a parked truck.

Penny Uccola was crushed inside the cab of a 1961 half-ton pick-up her sister Kayleen was driving when they rammed into the back of an empty truck parked on the side of Route 300 south east of Rupert. Kayleen, 16, was admitted to Minidoka Memorial Hospital with cuts and bruises.

Kayleen was driving west at about 70 m.p.h. when she hit the truck, according to witnesses. The empty truck belongs to M.T. Evans of Heyburn.

Minidoka County sheriff's officers said the accident occurred two miles from the Kasota exit off Interstate 80, at 3:30 p.m.

County given 30 days

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls School Board has given the county 30 days to make its own appraisal of the value of the Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School building and property on Shoshone Avenue.

In a Tuesday night meeting, the board voted to delay any decision on what to do with the property until an Oct. 24 special meeting.

The school district plans to vacate the O'Leary building about the first of the year when a new junior high opens on Eastland Avenue.

The school district received three appraisals on the property Sept. 9, two in the range of $900,000 and a third at $380,000 (minus demolition costs).

Builder faces fine

BUHL — Buhl School Board members will to hold a special meeting next Tuesday to decide whether to invoke a $400 per day penalty against the builder of the new Buhl High School buildings.

The board agreed after a 30 minute discussion Tuesday to meet at 8 p.m. in the old junior high school Oct. 2. They will discuss whether the school district should fine Nielsen and Co. of Twin Falls for missing the contract deadline to finish the $2.2 million buildings.

Bob Beer, project engineer for Nielsen, argued his firm should not be penalized because it had substantially completed all but the vocational-agricultural building by Aug. 28.

Beer asked the board not to penalize the company because they would be "substantially complete" with all mechanical work by Oct. 10. He said problems which were beyond their control had necessitated much of the three extensions the company had previously sought and received from the board. The extensions totaled 98 days.

However, the board set the special meeting next week because one board member, Richard Morris, was absent Tuesday.

The last extension ran out Aug. 27.

Licenses to expire

MAGIC VALLEY — Idaho vehicle owners with license plates on the staggered system of renewal ending in the number '99' are reminded that their red-on-yellow 1978 registration stickers expire Saturday.

The registrations—for those vehicles—must be renewed with 1979 white-on-black stickers by that day.

The stickers are available at all county assessors' offices which close at 4:30 or 5 p.m. Friday.

Two plans may correct Hansen, Filer sewage problems

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

HANSEN — The city of Hansen must improve its sewage system by 1983, according to city officials, but money is a problem.

"It is all kind of up in the air right now," Hansen city councilman George Urle said Tuesday. "We have applied for a grant to redo it."

Urle said the city has two alternatives, hook up to the Twin Falls city sewage system or upgrade the city's primary treatment facility.

Urle said the Hansen City Council is working with the Environmental Protection Agency and JUB Engineers of Twin Falls to estimate project costs and decide on a course of action.

The federal Clean Water Act of 1977 ordered municipalities to complete secondary sewage treatment facilities by 1983, according to Grover Partee, EPA project engineer in Boise.

Other small towns in Magic Valley are also checking on ways to improve their sewage treatment facilities. The city of Filer, which has a system similar to that of Hansen, also wishes to hook up to the Twin Falls system.

"Their situation is identical to Hansen's," Basil Tupy of the Twin Falls EPA office said about Filer.

Hansen officials are now making application for a grant from the EPA to finance engineering and construction costs, but so far their application is still in the mill, according to Tupy.

He said Hansen officials are applying for the design phase of the grant. It has not been approved.

In the interim, JUB is studying both approaches to meeting EPA requirements on deadline.

"Twin Falls City Manager Jean Milar said he and the Twin Falls City Council are aware of Hansen's proposed hook-up to the Twin Falls system."

He said the Twin Falls Sewage Treatment Plant is now under reevaluation and the "workability of that idea can't be determined until the survey is complete."

"If we have ample capacity, sure," Milar said about the proposed hook-up. He said conditions at the Twin Falls facility will be assessed in about six to eight weeks.

As a second alternative, upgrading their present sewage system, city officials have ruled out several possibilities and settled on a plan which would speed up their treatment process and increase its capacity.

Their existing system consists of a series of four settling and evaporation ponds which aerate waste and settle out solids.

Six to eight months out of the year the system is adequate, according to Urle, but studies have shown the ponds overflow into a neighboring irrigation ditch during periods of peak sewage load.

"Sometimes we get more going in than the ponds can evaporate," Urle said. "We haven't had complaints from the neighbors. It was fine until we had such a population increase."

Partee said the city's sewage discharge permit expired in June 1977 and has not been renewed by the EPA. He said small municipalities will be able to extend their discharge permits until 1983 if they show plans for improving their sewage systems to prevent excess discharge into live waterways in the future.

If hooking up to the Twin Falls system is impossible, Urle said the city of Hansen will install more sophisticated equipment at the present sewage facility to aerate its contents and speed up the action of aerobic bacteria.

Partee said primary treatment simply includes settling or screening to physically remove solid wastes from the water. Secondary treatment involves holding the sewage in a pond to allow natural biological action to dissolve and decompose waste matter.

He said Hansen could improve its system by installing surface units which will blow air into the water or stir it up to aid aerobic bacteria in their work.

Although Hansen has ruled out land application or complete containment of wastes, Partee said other cities are investigating possible settling solid wastes to farmers as fertilizer.

Since waste from secondary treatment still contains nutrients such as nitrogen and phosphorus, the material is actually a kind of fertilizer.

Partee said both total containment and land application of waste materials require too much land to be feasible for Hansen, but the city of Mountain Home is considering selling its wastes to farmers. He said the city of Pocatello and the J.R. Simplot Co. are also investigating selling wastes as fertilizer.

Regional airport supporters pass first hurdle

By RAY SULLIVAN

MAGIC VALLEY — With one headache taken care of, Southern Idaho Regional Airport Authority officials now tackle the larger one.

SIRAA officials finished up a two-month petition drive Tuesday to get that question on the November general election ballot of seven Magic Valley counties.

Blaine was the last county needing to get signatures of five percent of its registered voters to sign the petitions. The chairman of the drive there, Steve Prodromides, said the necessary 283 signatures was surpassed Tuesday afternoon. He said 320 valid signatures were finally turned in to Blaine County Clerk Marie Liliya.

SIRAA Chairman Dale Garner said the authority's board of trustees has been too busy trying to conduct the petition drive to work on a campaign to convince voters in Twin Falls and Blaine counties that they should join SIRAA.

But he said they would be meeting with SIRAA backers from those counties who helped with the petition drives to see what they think would be best.

Garner said he expected the board would authorize a brochure to be printed and handed out explaining SIRAA's position.

SIRAA lawyer Pete Snow is scheduled to meet this morning in Boise with officials from the Department of Transportation's aeronautics division certifying that the elections will be held Nov. 7 in Twin Falls, Gooding, Blaine, Lincoln, Jerome, Minidoka and Cassia counties. He has said he already has verbal approval of the date from DOT officials.

Dunnigans enter guilty pleas

TWIN FALLS — Two brothers from Pocatello pleaded guilty to two counts of grand larceny Monday, six weeks after they were captured in Colorado following an escape from a police manhunt in the Snake River Canyon.

Allen Lee and Leland Elroy Dunnigan, formerly of Twin Falls, both pleaded guilty to an arraignment hearing before 5th District Court Judge James M. Cunningham. They were charged with stealing a pickup truck and a motorcycle from two Twin Falls residents in August.

The two remain jailed while a pre-sentence investigation is completed. Each count carries a maximum sentence of 14 years in prison.

Allen, 21, and Leland, 20, still face eight counts of second-degree burglary before 5th District Judge Thurston W. Ward, and another vehicle theft charge is pending against them in magistrate court.

The brothers were chased by Filer city and Twin Falls County deputies Aug. 10 into the canyon north of Twin Falls, but escaped during the night. They were captured Aug. 12 by law officers in Grand Junction, Colo.

Kimberly accident crushes man's foot

KIMBERLY — A man whose foot was crushed by some falling bean boxes at a Kimberly company is in fair condition after having two of his toes amputated Tuesday afternoon at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Sheriff's deputies identified the injured man as Dewey Tubbs, 45, plant manager for Green Seed Company.

According to Tubbs' wife, the accident happened between 10 and 10:15 a.m. Tuesday as her husband was standing next to a forklift loading empty bean boxes on a truck.

She said he was supervising the loading from the ground when the boxes fell, striking his right foot.

Mrs. Tubbs said her husband lost his big toe and one next to it. The three remaining toes, which were broken, have been wired together, she said.

Tubbs started with Green Seed Company in April after moving from Gooding, where he was a seller and foreman for San Tan Ranches, southwest of Gooding.

State employees list pay as top priority for 1979

TWIN FALLS — Local state employee leaders, returning from their annual convention in Boise, have announced that state employees will list pay as their top priority during the next legislative session.

Mary Lou Walcroft, president of the Twin Falls Chapter of the Idaho Public Employees Association (IPEA), said the employees' group would the full funding of "prevailing rate" salary adjustments recommended by the Idaho Personnel Commission as its top legislative goals for next year.

The commission has recommended that classified employee salaries rise by an average of 5 percent next year. Such an increase would require approximately $9 million in additional general fund appropriations if non-classified employees were included in the salary action.

Ms. Walcroft, who is a nursing care reviewer for Region V with the Department of Health and Welfare in Twin Falls, said the IPEA General Council also voted to seek passage of "meet and confer" legislation and an improved health insurance package that would include dental coverage among its provisions.

"Meet and confer" is a modified form of collective bargaining which would allow state employees to meet with their department heads to discuss terms and conditions of employment.

The IPEA General Council is the public employee group's annual convention. She said it is made up of more than 90 delegates from 32 local chapters around Idaho who meet to set the goals that public employees will attempt to reach over the next year.

The delegates voted to oppose the 1 percent tax initiative, but pledges themselves to "work for adequate tax reform and relief" while maintaining essential services. She said the convention also voted to introduce "Whistle Blower" legislation to protect employees who uncover and report government mismanagement.

Political endorsements made by the group were governor, John Evans; and lieutenant governor, William Murphy. Sixty-one other legislative candidates also were endorsed. Also representing the local chapter was Gary Funderberg, a senior water resource agent with the Department of Water Resources in Twin Falls.

Inflation making it difficult on Mountain States Telephone

BOISE (UPI) — The vice president and Idaho general manager of Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Co. said Tuesday the pressures of inflation are making it difficult for the firm to operate cost effectively.

Robert C. Blanz made the comment during a hearing to consider the company's request for rate increases to generate $11.6 million in additional revenue.

"The cost of capital, wages, materials, and supplies has increased with the inflationary spiral," he said. "However the basic exchange rates we charge have not changed. In spite of our best efforts, we cannot continue to keep pace with these cost pressures."

Blanz said Mountain Bell's operating expenses increased from 58 percent to 68 percent of its total revenue from 1968 to 1977, adding "This large increase in the operating ratio is further evidence that our internal efforts to stimulate revenues through our marketing and promotional efforts, combined with expense control measures, have not been sufficient to offset the impact of inflation.

He added that the firm has not had a general rate hike in Idaho since 1958. "We propose to restructure and reprice many of our service offerings," he said. Those changes would include the introduction of directory assistance charging with a three-cent allowance per month and a 20-cent charge for each call over the allowance.

Conservationists tell Evans wilderness needs managing BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans was told Tuesday economic benefits of wilderness management far exceed resource extraction on much of Idaho's remaining wildlands.

Representatives of seven Idaho conservation organizations and the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association met with Evans to discuss the forest service review of wildlands.

"Idaho's long-term economic interests, along with our wildlife and fisheries, will be better served by wilderness management of those lands," Ralph Maughan, wilderness chairman of the Idaho Environmental Council, told the governor.

"Recreation use of wilderness is a renewable part of the economy that is growing rapidly," he said. "People using services of outfitters and guides spend $80 million per year on backcountry recreation, and that is only part of the total. Recreation use of wilderness by Idahoans is growing."

Maughan said water quality of the Salmon River and the Middle Fork is protected by wilderness management. He said wilderness management in central Idaho is essential to elk and deer populations, salmon and steelhead, and the back country recreation industry.

He said big game hunters using guide services spend more than $5,000 in Idaho for every elk killed and more than $4,000 for every deer.

Maughan noted that 35 percent of the roadless lands do not have commercial timber and costs of roads would exceed the value of the timber in many other areas.

"Taxpayers are being asked to subsidize logging of some of our wilderness," Maughan said.

He said money that might be spent to put roads into roadless areas might be better used for timber management on more productive lands.

"Idaho supporters of wilderness are asking that the better quality areas remain wild. We recognize that a substantial acreage of the roadless lands can be allocated to resource extraction."

PUC says firm 'misleads' public

BOISE (UPI) — The president of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission called upon Idaho Power Co. Tuesday to refrain from misleading the public into thinking the commission was blocking proposed construction of a nuclear power plant.

Last week, Bill Hanes, eastern Idaho division manager for Idaho Power, was quoted as saying that proposed construction of a nuclear facility by Idaho Power and Utah Power & Light Co. had been put on the back burner because of a lack of regulatory authority.

Robert Lenaghan, commission president, objected to the remarks.

In a letter to James Bruce, Idaho Power president, Lenaghan called the remarks "deceptive and misleading." Lenaghan said the commission has not attempted to block nuclear construction and had issued an order authorizing a feasibility study by the two utilities.

"It is in the interest of the public that they have full and complete knowledge about the energy picture, Jim, and for your political operation to engage in this type deception is regrettable to say the least," Lenaghan wrote.

"We would certainly suggest that you call them to account and let them and the public know that this commission has always favored a nuclear plant."

In its order, the IPUC authorized Idaho Power and Utah Power & Light Co. to spend up to $200,000 each to explore the possible construction of a nuclear power plant to be operated for the benefit of both companies.

Klein urges candidates to ignore questionnaire

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Democratic State Chairman George Klein said Tuesday legislative candidates still are being contacted by the Idaho Freedom to Work Committee.

"On Aug. 1 I was informed in a letter from the deputy secretary of state that the secretary of state and the attorney general recommended that the Idaho Freedom to Work Committee register and comply with the Sunshine Law," Klein said.

He said a check at the secretary of state's office indicates "The Idaho Freedom to Work Committee has not yet registered in compliance with the Sunshine Law."

Klein suggested all candidates for public office decline to respond to the group's latest questionnaire until the organization registers.

"All Idaho voters should be aware of the refusal of this group to comply with the law of our state," Klein said.

House considers proposal to clean up uranium tailings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House committee met Tuesday to consider a proposal for the federal government to pay the entire cost of cleaning up abandoned uranium mill tailings in nine states, including Idaho.

The Senate Energy Committee has approved the 100 percent federal funding for the cleanup project, while the House Commerce Committee has been leaning toward 90-percent federal funding and 10-percent state funding.

If states are required to pay a 10-percent share, it was estimated Colorado would have to pay $6 million toward the cleanup.

The tailings, left by uranium mining in the 1950s and early 1960s, have been termed a health hazard because they emit gamma rays, radioactive dust and radon gas.

The nine states are: Colorado, Wyoming, Arizona, Idaho, New Mexico, Oregon, Texas, Utah and Pennsylvania.

Sites in Colorado are near Durango, Gunnison, Grand Junction, Maybell, Naturita, Rifle and Silt Rock.

Evans to offer testimony on power planning idea

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans left for Washington, D.C., Tuesday where he will offer testimony today on the Pacific Northwest Electric Power Planning and Conservation Act to a committee of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Evans will testify at 8 a.m. before the Subcommittee on Energy and Power.

Evans said Tuesday he plans to ask that the proposed legislation incorporate the principles of realistic customer preference, effective conservation incentives, and the maintenance of public control over energy pricing, distribution, and planning.

Before leaving Boise, Evans said he wants to make the trip because "The price and the amount of energy in Idaho could be greatly affected by the legislation."

"This legislation is a key to the reduction of the power bills for the people of Idaho because increased supply, as spelled out in the legislation, can only lead, with a strong conservation program, to reduced costs to all residential consumers."

Evans will return to Idaho today after testifying.

Spinks to sue over 'drunkenness' charge

NEW YORK (UPI) — Leon Spinks has denied promoter Bob Arum's allegations that he was "drunk every night" in New Orleans before losing the heavyweight championship to Muhammad Ali two weeks ago and Spinks' attorneys said they will file a multi-million dollar defamation of character suit against Arum.

Spinks still has five fights remaining on his contract with Arum's firm, Top Rank, Inc., but the former champion's attorneys said that contract is now invalid because of Arum's statements and several "material breaches."

Spinks and his attorneys, Edward Bell and Lester Hudson, met with Arum's rival promoter Don King in Miami Beach earlier this week and made verbal agreements that King would promote all of Spinks' future fights, including a possible bout with Scott Ledoux in December and a $6 million bout with WBC champion Larry Holmes in Madison Square Garden early in 1979.

When told of the meeting by UPI, Arum, in New York, said he would bring legal action against Spinks and King.

In his first interview since losing the WBA heavyweight championship to Ali on an unanimous decision in New Orleans Sept. 15, Spinks said on the phone from Miami Beach that his major concern right now is "trying to keep me together." He spoke softly and said, "I'm surprised he didn't wind up with a knife in him."

Spinks said there was no truth at all to those statements and said it is one major reason he decided to leave Top Rank.

"Why should I hang with Top Rank when he spread lies telling I was drinking and drunk every day," Spinks said. "There was never a time when I was drunk. In New Orleans I went to my private place because I didn't want to deal with all the problems that people kept coming to me with, messing up my mind."

"Intoxicated? Never. Because I know what I have to do. My job is my job. Who has time for getting drunk? Especially when you have to get yourself ready to fight."

"I was in great physical shape, it's just that my mind wasn't in it. During the fight there was so much stuff that went through my mind I thought all I can do now is survive and keep the fight going. If Ali did win I wasn't going to let him win by no knockout."

"I wasn't in the fight, I felt it. I knew it. But every time I went to my corner I went right back to my problems again. Now I'm trying to keep Leon together. I ain't worrying about what everybody else is saying in the streets. I'm trying to keep me together."

Spinks' attorneys said that his contract with Top Rank was breached by Arum in several "material breaches."

"There are no circumstances under which Bob Arum or Top Rank can ever again promote a Leon Spinks fight," said Bell, a former judge in Michigan. "He has breached his contract with Leon in every material aspect and we're not going to sit idly by and do business with him."

Bell said it was not the $3.75 million that Spinks was paid that was at issue. Rather it was certain smaller additions which Bell considered "major" and which were not delivered.

Bell said Spinks was to be provided with three chauffeur driven Cadillacs but received Oldsmobiles instead. Bell said Spinks also had to spend "several thousand dollars" to hire limousines for his guests that were supposed to be provided by Top Rank.

Spinks' 50 guests were supposed to have first class hotel accommodations but were sent to a "third class hotel." The guests were supposed to have transportation from the airport to the hotel but did not get it.

"The contract also called for Leon to get 50 of the highest priced and best center ring-side seats," Bell said. "At least half of those tickets were in row 22. He was to have received four press passes but didn't get them. It was very important for Leon to have all those things because that takes the weight off of him and off of us."

"Then after the fight Arum says Leon was drunk every night. That's a bunch of bull. Leon took a house out of town just like all did. It's that kind of misconduct we just cannot tolerate."

"We're damn well going to sue Mr. Arum within the next week or so for the things he said about Leon. Make no mistake about it. I don't know the money figure yet but it will undoubtedly be several million dollars."

"They are under obligation to Top Rank, if they want to test it in court, we'll have to test it," said Arum, an attorney who is also being sued for $15 million for slander by two of his co-promoters in New Orleans.

Arum and Madison Square Garden are gonna mess with an existing contract, then we'll have to bring action against them too. We'll enjoy the entire thing."

"I don't recall saying anything that wasn't accurate but that doesn't matter. It has nothing to do with a contractual obligation. He's under contract for five more fights, purses are specified and he's gonna live up to his contract."

Spinks said it was his idea to approach King, who promotes for Madison Square Garden in New York. Bell called King last week in New York and arranged a meeting at King's home Sunday in Miami Beach. They talked for two days in Miami before Spinks moved on to Atlanta Tuesday to watch a girl tennis player he's sponsoring.

"It was really incredible, a true shock but a very pleasant one when this man and his whole family of lawyers came to me," King said. "First of all, I said I don't want to deal if you have contractual obligations to anyone else. They said 'we had a contract but it's been breached by Top Rank.'"

"Arum was trying to dig a hole for me by telling Larry Holmes to jump me. He was digging a ditch and he fell into it."

King and Spinks didn't sign a written contract but King told a strange story of making a "blood pact" with Spinks.

"I don't want a contract with Leon," King said. "Me and Leon cut our wrists and let our blood flow on each other's veins. We became blood brothers which is stronger than any bond that can be written on paper. We actually let the drops of blood flow on each other's veins. We had a surgeon's knife from the fight doctors down here, just a bit of blood to really demonstrate in earnest that what it is, is what it is."

King laughed when asked afterwards about the "blood pact," saying King was exercising his imagination.

"The agreement I have with Spinks," King said, "is that as long as he fights, he'll fight for me as long as I treat him right. And that's tantamount to saying that's an exclusive agreement for life because my whole career is predicated on integrity, commitment and performance."

King said he believed a Spinks-Holmes fight might bring a $6 million purse. Asked where Ali stood in all this, King said:

"We hope Muhammad Ali will retire, but if he doesn't he's got to fight either Larry Holmes or Leon Spinks and I have them both. So if Ali wants to continue with the snake (Arum), that's his business."

Carlton Fisk of Boston slam into Detroit second baseman Steve Dillard to break up a possible double play at Fenway Park Tuesday night.

Fisk was shaken up by remained in the game which Boston won 6-0.

"I learned not to let my business get in the way of me doing my job. Mostly I was worried about my money being handed right. No one can take care of your money better than you. I had this big sum of money coming in and I was worried how I was gonna hold it."

After the fight, Arum was quoted as saying that Spinks lost because "he was drunk every night he was here. Leon went to places our people didn't

House resumes NCAA hearings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although the House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations is to resume its examination Wednesday of the NCAA's enforcement program, one person very interested in the association's rules plans to testify outside the hearing.

Jerry Vorhies, whose son, Bob, died nearly a year ago following post-football practice disciplinary drills at Virginia Tech, plans to distribute information concerning the NCAA's lack of regard for injured athletes.

"We want to make known not only the NCAA's lack of restrictions concerning punishment drills, but its lack of regard for the physical well-being of injured athletes," he said. "Would you believe that the NCAA forbids member schools from carrying medical insurance on athletes beyond what is available to non-athlete students?"

"If an athlete is injured seriously, perhaps handicapped for life, the NCAA says the school has no legal responsibility, only a moral one, to the athlete. It does say the school is allowed to hold fund-raising benefits to help the athlete, though. "It's fortunate a college athlete hasn't been put in the position of (Darryl) Stingley (New England Patriot) wide receiver paralyzed since a collision with Oakland Raider defensive back Jack Tatum in an August NFL exhibition game. The athlete would be put in the position of begging the school for help."

Vorhies said that in the death of his son, the insurance carried by Virginia Tech provided a $1,500 death benefit. Vorhies said he has not received even that amount, nearly 11 months following his son's death.

"The medical examiner is amending his report," said Vorhies. "My older son went over the information with him and the report apparently now will say death was probably, at least partly, caused by heat and exhaustion."

"I'm still seeking a complete explanation from the state of Virginia (medical examiners). They are saying the files are still open." Bob Vorhies, a freshman running back from Irvington, N.C., was found dead in his dormitory room after complaining of not feeling well following the disciplinary drills administered by an assistant football coach. Head coach Jimmy Sharpe and his staff were fired after the season, but school officials said at the time it had nothing to do with the death of the player.

Vorhies said he plans to distribute 2,000 pieces of anti-NCAA information Wednesday and Thursday outside the subcommittee hearings and to each member of Congress.

In June, the subcommittee heard testimony from officials representing schools recently penalized by the NCAA, in most cases for alleged recruiting violations or improper financial assistance to athletes. Hearings Wednesday and Thursday are expected to deal, among other things, with an NCAA edict requiring Mississippi State to forfeit 19 football games in which an ineligible player participated during the 1975, 1976 and 1977 seasons.

The penalty was fought by the school through court action which ultimately resulted in a ruling in favor of the NCAA.

O'Malley hospitalized

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Walter O'Malley, 74, chairman of the board of directors of the Los Angeles Dodgers, was admitted to Queen of Angels Hospital Tuesday because of what a club spokesman said was "transitory numbness in his lower extremities."

O'Malley, who will celebrate his 75th birthday Oct. 9, will be hospitalized overnight, according to the spokesman. The numbness has been diminishing, he added, and at this time there is no evidence of complications. In February, O'Malley underwent open heart surgery because of an aneurism, a ballooning formed by a local enlargement of the weakened wall of an artery, but made a strong recovery during the past season. In June, 1977, he underwent lung surgery. O'Malley stepped down as president of the Dodgers nine years ago.

Nicklaus fading from golf activity

c. 1978 N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK — With each new year the Golden Bear is becoming more of a Reluctant Bear. Jack Nicklaus, winner of 67 golf tournaments including this year's British Open and 16 other major titles, is serving notice to the golf establishment and to golf fans everywhere that they will be seeing less of him in the future. He will be much more visible in advertisements and other business activities than he will be on golf courses.

In fact, it was only after some behind-the-scenes persuasion (or pressure) that he agreed at all to play in this week's World Series of Golf, an elite tournament for 26 of the world's best players at the Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio. He had said all along he preferred to see two of his sons in a high-school football game this Friday night in Belle Glades, Fla.

This past season Nicklaus has won three American tournaments besides one British one with a total of $273,522 in winnings. For Jack Nicklaus that kind of money is petty cash. There are many reasons for his reducing his schedule to 15 or fewer tournaments next season, counting foreign appearances. The principal ones are his family and his multi-faceted business enterprises.

Nicklaus, now 39 years old and with five children, has long passed the point where he has to prove himself in week-to-week competition. When he joined the "pro-golf tour" in 1962, he recalls, he was a young kid, eager to play every week, and that's all I wanted to do. "Since then his priorities have changed. He often notes that once the children go off to college, that's the end of the close, day-to-day relationship with their parents. Then they become adults, marry and pursue their own individual lives. This circumstance is near the cases of his two oldest sons, Jack Nicklaus 23, 17 years old, and Steven, 15. The other children are Nancy Jean, 13; Gary, 9, and Michael, 5.

A dedicated family man, Nicklaus spends as much time as he can with his wife, Barbara, and his children. For years he has made it a policy never to be away from home more than two weeks in succession. As often as practical he takes some of the kids with him to tournaments.

Next, there is his work outside of playing professional golf. His businesses, which bring him an annual income of close to $5 million, include golf course construction, real estate, instruction literature, automobile dealerships, an endless array of commercial endorsements—all these and more. He also is interested in running his own tournament, the Memorial, at Miffield Village on the outskirts of Columbus, Ohio.

For these reasons he can no longer get himself charged up for a routine golf tournament. It no longer matters to him whether his current total is 67 victories, 68 or whatever. All that matter to him are the four major championships—the Masters, the United States and British Opens and the Professional Golfers' Association. He contends that no one remembers his winning any of the others.

Basically, Nicklaus plays golf now to maintain the value of his name in business. And when he plays a nonmajor tournament, his only purpose is to tune up for one of the majors.

He does not even like to play in the autumn, he said in a recent interview, because that is a waste of his time. Nicklaus has not played competition golf since the Westchester Classic of Aug. 17-20, where he had a commercial commitment. After the World Series he will play only in the Australian open Nov. 15-19 and the newly organized Mexico Cup, Dec. 7-10, again for business considerations.

"The heaviest part of my schedule," he said, "is in the early part of the year only because I want to get ready for the Masters (in April). After the Masters, I won't play much besides the other three majors. The World Series is too late in the year, at a time when I don't want to play golf. I'm going into the series without having played for five weeks, and I won't be in shape."

"This kind of talk causes trembling among sponsors all over the PGA Tour because every one implores Nicklaus to play in his tournaments. "I would like to keep on being competitive for a long, long time," Nicklaus said. "I want to play as long as I can enjoy it and can successfully compete. What I am trying to do is to work at it and get charged up only seven or eight times a year. I cannot enjoy competing week after week, as I once did. I have too many other things on my mind."

"I do have obligations in certain directions. In my business affairs people keep trying to bend me, the same as they do on the golf circuit. But I've got to say 'no' some time or I don't have any life left for my family until they're gone."

"I won't forget golf has given me everything I have. But there's no fun in doing anything unless you do it well. If there is no incentive to work, then it's difficult to be competitive. So I am trying to find the balance that will allow me to stay in the game for quite a few years."

Shaken by the homer, Flanagan allowed two more singles and was relieved by Don Stanhouse, who got the final out for his 23rd save. Flanagan, who had winced in pain on almost every pitch because of tendinitis in his left ankle, tipped his hat to the small, cheering crowd of 3,682.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Back-to-back doubles by Bucky Dent and Mickey Rivers keyed a three-run second inning and staked Ed Figueroa to his 19th victory Tuesday night in a 4-1 triumph by the New York Yankees over the Toronto Blue Jays.

The victory enabled the Yankees to maintain their one-game lead over Boston in the American League East and reduced their magic number for clinching the division title to five.

With one out, Graig Nettles started the Yankee second with a single to center. One out later, Roy White singled and Dent followed by dumping a double into the left field corner, scoring Nettles. Then, on the very next pitch from loser Tom Underwood, 6-14, Rivers blooped his double in almost the identical spot as both White and Rivers scored.

Boston 6, Tigers 0

A's 10, Chicago 3

CHICAGO (UPI) — Rob Picoletto doubled and hit a two-run homer during an eight-run seventh-inning outburst Tuesday night pacing the Oakland A's to a 10-3 rout over the Chicago White Sox.

The A's sent up 11 batters in the seventh as they knuckered out Ken Krayce, 11-16. Picoletto opened the seventh with a double and drove in the final two runs of the inning with his second homer, Taylor Duncanson's two-run single, a wild pitch, run-scoring singles by Dino Carli and Dave Revering and a double by Joe Wallis accounted for the other runs.

Picoletto, who hit his first homer Monday night, also had a hunt single that scored a run in the second.

Phil's, Expos split

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Warren Cromartie hit a home run off Taj McCreary, making his first start in four years, while Rudy May pitched a four-hitter Tuesday night to lead the Montreal Expos to a 3-0 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies and a split of their two-night double-header.

Greg Luzinski drove in three runs with a single and his 3rd homer to power the Phillies to a 5-3 victory in the opener.

The split, combined with Pittsburgh's triumph over Chicago, gave the first-place Phillies a 3-1-2 game lead over the Pirates in the National League East and reduced Philadelphia's magic number for clinching their third straight division crown to three.

Reds 6, Dodgers 4

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Johnny Bench hit a two-run double and George Foster added a two-run homer Tuesday night, leading the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Tom Seaver, picking up his 16th victory against 14 losses, yielded two runs, one coming on Steve Garvey's 20th homer of the season, and six hits before yielding to Doug Bair after seven innings. Steve Garvey's fourth homer of the season, coming after a pinch-sling by Manny Mota, gave the Dodgers two runs in the ninth.

Mets 3, Cards 1

NEW YORK (UPI) — Craig Swan pitched the New York Mets to a 3-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday night and captured the National League's earned run average leadership with a 2.43 ERA.

Swan, 9-6, went into the game trailing the injured and idle Steve Rogers by 2-40 to 2-37 for the ERA lead. After pitching seven strong innings in which he allowed three hits and one earned run, Swan was relieved by Dale Murray. Neither Rogers nor Swan will pitch again this season.

Pirates 5, Cubs 2

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Willie Stargell smashed a three-run homer to move into 15th place on the all-time major-league home run list, and rookie Don Robinson tossed a six-hitter Tuesday night to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates a 5-2 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

Stargell's third-inning blast off loser Dennis Lamp, 7-15, was the 47th of his career, moving him past Billy Williams. He scored Omar Moreno, who had doubled with two out, and Dave Parker, who drew an intentional walk. Parker collected a single and a triple in three at-bats to increase his league-leading batting average to .330.

Astros 2, Braves 0

ATLANTA (UPI) — Joe Nickro continued with Ken Forsch on a seven-hitter to outlast his brother Phil Tuesday night, lifting the Houston Astros to a 2-0 triumph over the Atlanta Braves.

Joe Nickro, 13-14, fanned four over the first eight innings. His second walk of the game, both issued to Dale Murphy, prompted Forsch's appearance with one out in the ninth. Forsch gave up a single to Glenn Hubbard but retired the final three batters for his sixth save. Joe Nickro increased his record over his brother to 3-2.

House kills amateur sports bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bill at bringing warring amateur groups under one big and friendly umbrella, the Olympic Committee, failed narrowly Tuesday in the House.

The vote was 244-158 in favor, but under stream-lined procedures by which the House considered the bill, it fell 24 votes short of the two-thirds required for passage.

Conceivably, it could be brought up later under regular order — which would require a simple majority but that is unlikely this late in the session.

"The bill holds out the hope that the internecine war between the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Amateur Athletic Union will come to an end," Rep. Thomas Kindness, R-Ohio, told the House.

But he added he could not support the bill because it would set up a "new sports bureaucracy" supported by $26 million of the taxpayers' money "to a committee that is literally a private corporation."

Kindness said the House committee report explaining the bill was not even printed in time for members to read it.

on veteran quits

MIAMI, Mich. (UPI) — Veteran Mike Montler, the only ex-player on Coach Monte S's offensive line, has quit, ending the second member of the Lions to walk out on the team in six weeks, it was announced Tuesday.

After an off-season acquisition of the Denver Broncos, "left practice Monday," Clark said in his weekly press briefing. "I'm sure — what — the reason was, I've been able to get in touch with the defensive end Ernest Price, a veteran, 'retired' last week but Clark said he was having second thoughts "once he found out the paychecks stopped." He said the Lions did not want Price back and were trying to trade him.

The Lions have undergone nearly a 50 percent roster turnover since Clark became coach at the end of last season. They entered this season with 21 players on their 45-player roster who weren't with the club at the start of Tommy Hudspeth's final season.

"I don't know what Mike's reason is," Clark said, "but as far as I'm concerned, he's walking out in that situation that makes me want to question my methods."

Jimmy the Greek

Denver now 4-1 to win division

By JIMMY (The Greek) SNYDER
NEW YORK — This past weekend saw another flurry of complaints about officiating in NFL contests, but there really isn't all that much that can be done about it. More games, more rules and more officials mean more mistakes.

In my opinion, the NFL officials rate as the most incompetent rule enforcers in major sports. Perhaps it is time to study the AL Davis-Ter Schramm proposal for an officiating center in which several full-time referees would be assigned to examine every game film with the same kind of devotion to detail that coaching staffs bring to their film preparation.

WITH DENVER'S OFFENSIVE defeat of Kansas City and Oakland, the Broncos are now 4-1 favorites to capture their second successive AFC Western Division title. One reason the odds are going up is the Denver schedule, especially since they face a few weeks from now a Jets team minus QB Richard Todd.

IN LOOKING AT the most improved teams in the league, I find a common thread of improved performance by the quarterbacks. An outstanding example: Joe Theismann and the offensive resurgence of the Redskins which seem much happier under Jack Pardee than with the defensive-oriented philosophy of George Allen.

And the Giants owe much of their new-found offensive spark to the fine play of QB Joe Pisarcik who has had one of the hottest passing hands in the league. Pat Haden of the Rams is getting more than maximum protection from the likes of Doug Franco, John William and Dennis Harvey. Ron Jaworski of the Philadelphia Eagles seems to be coming on also.

Finally, Terry Bradshaw and the Steelers, whose offense has been especially potent with Bradshaw and Harris off to superb starts and the offensive line playing the way it did in the Steelers' Super Bowl seasons. In the overtime win against the Browns, the Steelers were able to hold on down to keep possession of the ball on a fourth-and-punch situation. Then Franco Harris' plunge off left tackle set up Terry Bradshaw's shocking Sea-foamer play that culminated with Benny Cunningham in the end zone and the Steelers alone in first place.

Olympic schedule: clip, file for 1980

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (UPI) — The schedule for the 1980 Olympic Games at Lake Placid was announced Tuesday.

The schedule includes 31 sports events and opening and closing ceremonies to be held over 11 days in February, the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee said.

Opening ceremonies will be Feb. 13 at 1:30 p.m. Sports competition will begin the day before with six ice hockey games scheduled for the new Olympic field house and the Olympic Arena.

Closing ceremonies will be Feb. 24 at 9 p.m.

"We worked long and hard at getting what we feel is a satisfactory schedule," Ronald MacIntyre, president of the committee, said. "Sports Director Ray Pratt worked with the various sports chairman and their schedule committees with the regulations and standards of the International Olympic Committee, the International Sports Federation and the federal environmental impact statement."

The schedule includes 18 ice hockey games, 11 figure skating events, six Alpine skiing events and two biathlon events. There also will be nine speed skating events, three ski jumping events, eight cross-country skiing competitions, three biathlon competitions, and three luge events.

A figure skating exhibition featuring all the medal winners will be held Feb. 19 before the closing ceremony.

Awards ceremonies will be held each day from Feb. 18 through Feb. 24 at the Olympic Center or at Marcor Lake.

About 1,600 world class winter athletes are expected in Lake Placid for the Games. This will mark the first time in 20 years since Squaw Valley in 1960 that the Olympic Games have been held in the U.S.

Lake Placid hosted the Third Olympic Winter Games in 1952.

Landry won't exchange insults with Pardee

DALLAS (UPI) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry declined to get into a personal feud with Washington Coach Jack Pardee Tuesday and said his counterpart with the Redskins was just trying to live up to his team in preparation for their meeting next Monday night.

Pardee went to some length Monday to say how much he disliked the Cowboys and Landry, during his weekly session with the media Tuesday, was asked what he thought of Pardee's comments.

"Well, I guess you don't particularly like the team that has been No. 1 in your division," Landry said. "Sometimes you tend to create a situation where you are in the right frame of mind."

But does Landry dislike the Redskins as much as Pardee dislikes the Cowboys?

"We hope to stir up our team," Landry replied. "I guess we feel about the same way they do. We want to beat them."

That was a bit of a bridge and when Landry was asked again if he disliked the Redskins, he replied:

"I don't want to personally get involved in that type of thing."

In his comments Pardee brought up an incident involving a now legal crackback blow in which he was hit by wide receiver Lance Alworth in 1972.

"He's got a good memory," Landry said. "That's history. Actually he's using that type of thing now. He brings a flanker back inside and pops an outside linebacker, a block that is legal as long as it is made above the waist."

"And we might hit one of them, too."

Landry said he thought Pardee was simply carrying on the tradition of former Washington Coach George Allen, and in describing the tactics he made an unfortunate slip of the tongue.

"Washington is the most psychotic," I mean, psychological team in the league," he said. "George was always trying to get you to think about something besides beating the Redskins. They use it more than anyone else. And if it bothers you then you are in trouble."

On the injury from Landry said the Cowboys had not yet found anyone to replace backup tight end and special teams captain Jay Sully on the roster. Sully will be lost to the team for eight to 11 weeks with a broken right forearm.

Conteh decks Roger for 7th round KO

LONDON (UPI) — Former world light heavyweight champion John Conteh of Britain sank Dominican Leonardo Roger with a perfect right hand blow to score a knockout victory after 115 of the seven rounds of Thursday and beat his chances of scoring a rematch against reigning WBC champion Mike Parlov of Yugoslavia.

Conteh, admitting the Caribbean champion scoundrel had beat him with some stinging punches to the body, took his time getting into his stride and by the fourth round both fighters were still slugging it out toe to toe with boxing gloves work.

In the fifth round, the Briton stunned Roger with a pair of heavy lefts but the Dominican came out aggressively in the sixth round and surprised Conteh with his two-handed attack.

In the seventh round Roger came in swinging but Conteh seemed to be getting more confident and was placing his punches better. As he opened up, striking out a left hand towards Roger, Conteh pulled out a tremendous right hand which hooked Rogers under the chin and laid him flat.

"Roger was really hurting me with his right hand, I wouldn't like to have to take too many of those in my future fights," said Conteh.

"I think the right hand punch with which I knocked him out must have been the best punch of my career."

Johnson given support

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Cincinnati Bengals' General Manager Paul Brown has given wireless Coach Bob Johnson a vote of confidence.

Asked about Johnson's status, Brown said, "He's the coach. We're just now beginning to get our main players back (from injury). You have to give this thing a sporting chance."

Asked to elaborate about Johnson,

Brown refused.

"I don't want to get into this subject. It would just mean heartache and headache for a guy who's trying to do the best he can do."

"We should begin to get some of our people back this week," Brown again noted. "Let's see how we begin to look. As far as I'm concerned, Bob's the coach."

Hoople finds 'mid-season' form still a little way off

By Major Amos B. Hoople
Peerless Predictor
...ad! It doesn't seem possible but we are now into the fourth week of our 10-week run and as yet I've still not reached mid-season form. Harukmph!

After Alabama and Notre Dame had done with me last week, I had little time to go but to the bottom of the class. It was a surprising week for our correctors who discovered that the bulk of you fondered dismally in the depths with me. There was not much competition for the champions — at least in the way of total numbers. But the competition was keen. Six of you missed but two. And eight more missed only three. Excellent work for such a treacherous slate, say I! Ahem!

Our champion, picking the the $10 first prize, is Pete Arboast of Twin Falls. He came closest in guessing the scores as well and relegated Larry Bausheer of Fairfield to second place. Not surprisingly, Bausheer did not miss the Camas County-Richfield game. In fact, he picked the Musers to score exactly 50 points. Third prize goes to Ron Sayer of Jerome.

On the honorable mention list are Bill Bozzuto, Halley; Don Cline, Bliss; Rick Miller, Rupert; Jerry Mock, Buhl; Shane Cole, Twin Falls; Randy Clark, Castelford, and Jean Bell, Rupert.

This week's slate is a little different. We are serving up an unusually large number of losers-vs-losers, which generally are more difficult to pick than the other way around.

Also, one of the games will be played Friday night, Southern California meeting Michigan State in that one.

Another that we also look forward to presenting for your consideration is the Notre Dame-Purdue game. Notre Dame, it would seem, certainly is not of the caliber it has been for a while. At least the Fighting Irish can lose two in a row at home for the first time since 1895. You'll recall that over the years, the one team that has had singular success has been Purdue. Not the last three years, to go sure, but it would be very much like the Bollemakers to make it three in a row for the Irish.

We also are intrigued by the Florida State-Iouston matchup. We anticipate this one requiring a calculator to keep up with the massive scoring.

On the local scene, we come back with Minico and Twin Falls, two teams who haven't had much success this fall. They are arriving at the point where they must have a win to keep their interest up. But injuries continue to plague both.

And so, until next week, Gentle Readers, let me remind you to remember the entry deadlines.

Two stay unbeaten

TWIN FALLS — The Lions and Exchange seventh grade teams remained atop the little league football standings after the second week of games.

The Lions defeated Rotary 28-6 and Exchange dropped Kiwanis 18-0 to remain undefeated.

Buhl handed the Elks team the second loss of the season in a close 18-10 victory.

The following is a list of the players of the week from each team: Kiwanis, Roger Higginbotham, back, and Kent Riley, lineman. Elks: Bob Seiman, back, Larry Walden, lineman. Rotary: John Kidd, back, Loren Orr, lineman. Exchange: Tim Ferrell, back, Mealer, lineman. Lions: Gustavo Bernal, back, Chuck Sharp, lineman. Buhl named Mark Munroe as back of the week and Russ McCoy as top lineman.

Thursday games will see Kiwanis facing Rotary on the North Stuart field, Elks taking on the Lions at Sawtooth and Buhl playing exchange on the west Stuart field. All games will be played at 5:30 p.m.

Maryland frets over lack of consistency

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite a 3-0 record and a No. 13 national ranking, Maryland football Coach Jerry Claiborne feels the Terrapins, who host Kentucky Saturday, are spinning their wheels too much and producing too little.

"We're lacking in the ability to put the football in the end zone," Claiborne said Tuesday. "We move the football well, but we don't have much to show for it. We get down close and then have to settle for field goals: And we've missed a lot of those."

Terrapin kicker Ed Loncar is 5-for-10 on field goals but has been inconsistent. He has been successful from 33, 34, 47, and 50 yards but has missed from 30, 30, 34, 47 and 49.

"Ed has a strong leg, and he's becoming more consistent. I think, though, that a lot of us coaches are thinking about the field goal when we get close to the end zone rather than thinking of using four downs to get a touchdown. We do things so we don't mess up the chance for a field goal rather than going all out on the touchdown," he said.

"They make no bones about their offense," said Claiborne of Kentucky. "They line up in an old-fashioned T-formation and run the ball right straight at you. They have a big, strong offensive line and they are physical."

"Then, all of a sudden, they'll line up with only the quarterback in the backfield and start throwing the ball."

Claiborne, though, has a fear of the Kentucky kicking game.

"They beat Baylor last week with kickoff returns," said Claiborne. "They returned three kickoffs an average of 49 yards. That'll put fear into people."

Maryland is tied with Wake Forest for the Atlantic Coast Conference lead after last week's come-from-behind 21-20 win at North Carolina. The Terrapins get back to ACC business a week from Saturday hosting 3-0 North Carolina State.

Kuhn apologizes for world series dates

NEW YORK (UPI) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn expressed personal regret Tuesday that this year's World Series opener will conflict with the observance of the Jewish holiday Yom Kippur, but said there was no practical solution to avoid it.

According to the Jewish religion, Yom Kippur starts at sundown Tuesday, Oct. 10, and the first game of the World Series is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. EDT, that night in the National League city. The celebration of Yom Kippur ends at sundown Oct. 11 with the second game of the Series scheduled for later that night.

The conflict is not unique and in the past such players as Sandy Koufax have been excused from playing in World Series games because of the holy day.

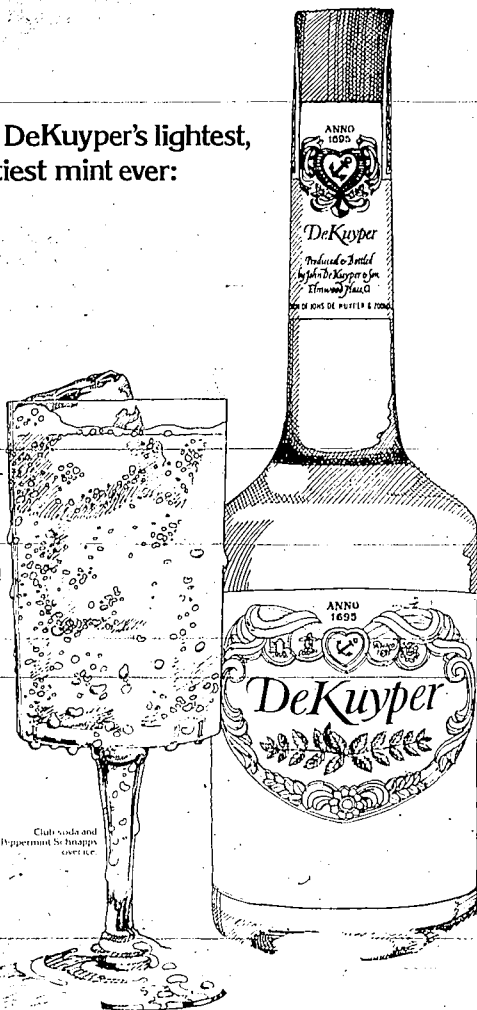

"The scheduling conflict is unfortunate but it is not at all unique for baseball or other sports to play on religious holidays including Yom Kippur, Good Friday and Christmas," Kuhn said. "The fact is if we didn't ever play on Yom Kippur eve or Yom Kippur we would be postponing numerous games through the years in our regular season, league championship series and World Series."

"So," Kuhn concluded, "no matter how much we dislike the conflict it cannot practically be avoided."

USC isn't revving up Heisman campaign yet

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Despite Charles White's brilliant performance on Alabama Saturday, University of Southern California football coach John Robinson said Tuesday that he doesn't plan to get on his tailback's bandwagon for the Heisman Trophy. At least not yet.

White, a 5-foot-11, 183-pound junior, helped knock Alabama off its No. 1 pedestal Saturday by rushing for 199 yards, including 149 in the opening half, in a 24-14 Trojans' upset at Birmingham.

"When you start dealing in superlatives," Robinson said at his weekly breakfast meeting with reporters, "you sometimes don't know where to stop."

"You know, he's the best back in the universe and he's the best back in the history of the modern world. You get into an almost phony thing and I'm not going to do it. I'm not going to get us involved in some kind of competitive race for the Heisman Trophy or those kinds of things."

"But I just want to say how much I admire the guy. He came here as a freshman and had a good freshman year and a good sophomore year and he's grown as an individual so much. He's one of the absolute best leaders that I've ever seen on the football field."

Two other Trojan tailbacks of the past — Mike Garrett in 1965 and O.J. Simpson in 1968 — won the Heisman Trophy. Archie Griffin of Ohio State won the Heisman Trophy in 1974 and 1975.

USC's win vaulted it from seventh place into second behind Oklahoma in the UPI coaches' ratings this week while Alabama tumbled from No. 1 to No. 7.

Robinson, in his third season as John McKay's successor, said he didn't see much relevance in the Trojans' lofty rating this week, saying, "I don't want to be No. 1 — now."

He pointed out the Alabama win meant only that the Trojans were 3-0 with nine games left on their schedule. They host Michigan State, 1-1, at the Coliseum Friday night.

"I don't think things have changed very much," Robinson pointed out. "What we've done is taken one more step down the road that we have to go. But the road is still a long, long, difficult one."

"We're still extremely young and extremely inexperienced. It's different in college football now than it used to be. If you don't play well every week, somebody is going to beat you. It simply isn't as easy as it used to be."

Michigan State was beaten 21-14 in its season opener at Purdue but bounced back last weekend to wallop Syracuse 49-21.

Added Robinson about the Big Ten Spartans, "We have one of our toughest challenges this week."

"We've proven we can reach the heights of playing one week but if we want to prove we can be a great football team some day we have to prove we can go out and play week after week. I think we can be competitive this week and still be beaten by Michigan State. We see this as a very even game."

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Good players know when to double. Great players know when not to double. The diagrammed hand, played during a money rub, turned into a nightmare for East-West. The nightmare was caused by East's greed and it cost him dearly. East can defeat seven hearts on trump. North, whatever against seven-trump. The first double, disastrous was understandable, catapulted North-South into an unbreakable seven-trump. North had bid seven hearts without scientifically exploring for the best contract. He checked for aces with Blackwood and that was all. East's double brought him to his senses.

Why would East double? It could only mean he had at least one trump trick. North bid seven-trump, the contract he should have been in all along. East's second double stemmed from frustration and not from a mechanical error.

Common sense is very important in bridge, as it is with everything else. Doubling seven hearts could, at most, gain 100 points. Instead it drove North to seven-trump and cost East-West the 2,900 points North-South won on the rebooked grand slam plus 100 points they surely would have scored for defeating seven hearts undoubled.

When opponents wind up in an inferior contract, it is silly to chase them out of it with a double.

Another barrier is dropped

Something added in clubhouse

NEW YORK (UPI) — Reaction to the Melissa Ludtke court decision was immediate when a small group of women reporters from the local TV stations appeared for the first time in the New York Yankees' clubhouse prior to Tuesday night's game with the Toronto Blue Jays.

There were no incidents and the Yankee players who were present were all clothed. Most of the questions the women reporters were asking did not deal with the pennant race, but rather the decision which came down Monday allowing women reporters access to baseball dressing rooms for the first time.

"When I got undressed there'll be no ladies around," said reserve outfielder Jay Johnstone to one of the women reporters. "Why don't you get in your uniform now?"

"I'm in my uniform," the woman replied.

Seated nearby was Cliff Johnson, the Yankees hulking backup catcher and designated hitter.

"This is the way we live every day," Johnson said. "This isn't supposed to change anything."

Another Yankee, Lou Piniella, expressed a similar lack of concern for the women's presence.

"I don't care what they do, it won't have any effect on the pennant race or how we play," said Piniella. "All I know is when the man says 'play ball,' they won't be on the field... will they?"

Ludtke, the Sports Illustrated reporter who instigated the court proceedings after last year's World Series, was not among the initial group of pioneer women reporters.

Pastorini walks out on Oilers

HOUSTON (UPI) — Quarterback Dan Pastorini Tuesday walked off the Houston Oilers' practice field following an exchange of words with Coach Bum Phillips, apparently over who would call plays in clutch situations.

Phillips then closed the daily practice to reporters.

"Not a whole lot is going on. We've got a situation that will get worked out if everybody doesn't make such a thing out of it that we can't get it worked out. We have words all the time."

Pastorini could not be reached for comment.

But Phillips said he expected to see the quarterback return to practice.

"There's nothing wrong with Dan Pastorini that 24 hours won't cure," Phillips said. "Dan is a winning quarterback right now. Our football team is a winning football team right now."

Phillips announced Monday a change in signal-calling would be made to shield his quarterback from criticism and not because Pastorini's play-calling was poor. In Houston's 10-6 loss to the Los Angeles Rams on Sunday.

There has been strong local media criticism to the quarterback's play selection. Other insiders have claimed that the Oilers' offensive problems are caused by offensive coordinator Ken Ship. It was known that Ship and Pastorini disagreed about the Oilers offensive game plan against the Rams.

Before you buy a new home, be sure your warranty is all it's cracked up to be.

There are new home warranties. And there are new home warranties. And then there is HOW. Home Owners Warranty. HOW is America's first 10-year, nationally insured home owners protection plan.

When your new home is covered by HOW, you protect yourself against workmanship and materials defects that don't meet the HOW National quality standards during the first year. Defective wiring, ductwork and piping the second. And any other structural defects that vitally affect the residential use of your new home (exclusions are reasonable) for 10 full years.

HOW is available only from participating home builders. Look for the HOW emblem in their ads and model homes. It's for your protection.

Your local Home Owners Warranty Council can give you a list of participating home builders whose homes are protected by HOW.

Festive vegetables to enjoy anytime

Vegetables, as just about everyone has lately learned, are very good for people. They are chock-full of vitamins and help supply newly popularized dietary fiber. Even many who were brought up suspecting the worst of vegetables have come to appreciate the virtues of vegetables as they are being served more and more often today. That is, they're cooked until tender but still crisp, colorful and full of flavor. Fresh vegetables cooked this way are always inviting. For added enjoyment, broaden the scope of vegetable imaginings and try such things as stir-fry and the addition of sauces and seasonings.

The recipe for Lemon-Flavored Vegetables uses a Chinese stir-fry technique and calls for vegetables that are available fresh almost all year long: broccoli, mushrooms, carrots, onions and peppers. This stir-fry dish is quickly tossed in corn oil and followed by a few minutes of cooking in chicken broth thickened with corn starch.

Beets and other root vegetables are favorites for cool weather meals. In preparing them, wash gently but do not peel, cutting tops to just about one inch from the beet (closer may reduce color during cooking). Orange beets are cut into julienne strips and sauced with a sweet-sour combination of vinegar and orange juice. Because the sauce is thickened with corn starch, it remains clear and lets the deep red of the beets come through.

Although any of these three dishes might be served at company meals, Carrot Potato Ring Mold is an especially festive looking way to serve these two most everyday of vegetables. After cooking in boiling water, they are packed into a ring mold and baked. A sauce, made with milk and corn starch and flavored with tarragon leaves, holds the vegetables together as they bake into a tasty ring.

For other vegetable recipes, send for "The Inventive Vegetable Sauce." This new laminated 7-by-10-inch four-color laminated card is a sampler of great vegetable dishes. This is the second in a series of recipe cards, designed to take the American cook back to the sort of natural cooking that once reigned. For a free copy of the New Inventive Vegetable Sampler, write Argo/Kingsford's, Dept. VS-N, Coventry, CT 06238.

Eating healthful apple may avert a trip to the dentist

Now's the perfect time of the year to re-positively-position your loved ones' reactions to your saying, "Why don't you go eat an apple!" Buy apples, available now, along the roadside on stands, or pick them for your liking in local orchards or get them in your markets. Whatever you do, just get some fresh seasonal apples now to appreciate the full and satisfying taste. They'll surely re-visit the "What's there to eat?" band with their crunchiness, crispness and juiciness.

Today's apples are delicious because it's getting cold out and apples love cold — even when you store them. We're not saying they're not good the rest of the year. We're just telling you that they are simply fabulous now.

You might call the apple nature's big bill. The apple may not solve any problems, but there surely are a lot of things it helps straighten out. Take, for instance, tooth decay. First of all, an apple to replace a candy bar or cookie is a good idea. The apple is recognized in the medical profession as a way to keep the dentist away. It cleanses decay-causing nests of refined carbohydrates. The apple particles brush over the teeth while the saliva increases its rare flow. The low acidity of nature's pill causes that saliva flow which in turn cleanses the teeth. Biting into and chewing firm apple flesh also pushes the gums and massages them.

You all have probably, at one time or another, used a pharmaceutical anti-diarrhetic. Those concoctions contain pectate that comes from the dilute acid extract of the inner portion of the apple rind, and is referred to as apple pectate. An old American Indian remedy for this ailment is to simmer apple parings in milk. A half cup of the milk potion is then drunk every hour until the condition is relieved.

Oh, then there's apple cider. It's known to promote urinary excretion and, therefore, the elimination of uric acid. Voilà! Gout starts looking for an exit.

Fresh sliced apples turn brown when exposed to the air. Combat this trait by dipping or rubbing the raw flesh in lemon juice or "fruit fresh" or ascorbic acid powder.

One whole fresh medium-sized apple evaluates at about 67 calories. One-half cup unsweetened applesauce gives you about 41 calories. A six-ounce glass of apple elder provides 94 calories. When cooking your apples, adjust calories according to seasonings added. Try to get used to cooking apples without sugar. It can happen that you'll eventually prefer them unsweetened — the way nature intended them to be.

Probably the very best and a lazy man's way to have your cooked apple and eat it, too, in an all-in-one dish resembling applesauce, juice, pie and apple crunch, is to bake it the following way.

ALL-IN-ONE BAKED APPLE

- 6 large apples, cored with 1/2-inch strip of peel removed from around the top of each.
- 6 large store-bought macaroons
- 3/4 cup dried dates (may use dried apricots, raisins or currants which have been softened slightly in a little boiling water)
- 1/2 cup finely chopped nuts
- 1 cup honey mixed with 3/4 cup water and 1/4 teaspoon salt
- Preheat oven to 350°. Into heatproof individual bowls, place a macaroon. Put a cored apple on top of each. Mix together diced dates, apricots, raisins or currants and nuts; divide mixture between apples and poke it into centers. Pour honey mixture over stuffed apples. Cover with piece of foil and bake 35 to 45 minutes, or until apples are tender and bubbly.

MW: Put stuffed apples on macaroons into individual microwave-proof dishes. Pour honey sauce over tops. Cover with waxed paper. Microwave at high for 10 minutes, rotating positions of dishes inside the microwave oven every 2 to 3 minutes.

If you make your own apple juice or simply buy it, here's a different way to use the juice.

APPLE JUICE SALAD DRESSING

- 1/4 cup honey
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 3/4 cup apple juice
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese
- In mixing bowl combine honey, cornstarch, salt, lemon juice and apple juice; blend well. Cook in top of double boiler over hot water for 20 minutes, stirring often. Slowly stir into the beaten egg and then return this mixture to double boiler top and continue cooking over hot water for 5 minutes longer, stirring constantly. Cool slightly. Mash cream cheese and beat it into slightly cooled, cooked mixture. Chill in covered container.

Makes 1 cup salad dressing to be used over fruit salads, gelatin molds and it's even rather good on vegetable salads.

The following cake recipe is "neat" to have on hand in your freezer, ready to heat up just when guests arrive in your conventional oven or your microwave.

APPLE SAUCE CAKE

- 4 cups sifted flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon cloves
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 cup ground cardamom
- 1 cup margarine or butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups raisins
- 1 cup chopped nuts
- 2 cups unsweetened applesauce

Preheat oven to 350°. Grease and waxpaper the two 9 1/2-by-5 1/2-inch loaf pans and set them aside. Combine and sift together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and cardamom. In mixing bow, cream together the margarine or butter and sugars. Stir in the eggs and blend well. Add raisins and nuts. Add dry ingredients alternately with applesauce; blend thoroughly after each addition. Pour into two greased loaf pans. Bake 50 to 60 minutes, or until cakes test done.

MW: Grease and waxpaper the bottoms of 3 microwave-proof loaf dishes, 8 by 4 by 3-inches. Microwave one loaf at a time. Microwave at medium high 5 to 6 minutes rotating dish one-half turn after 3 minutes, until toothpick stuck in center comes out clean.

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUYS:

Raisins are not going to be too terribly available this season. They're expensive but get them; if you require them for baking, now while you can. Olives are going to get rather scarce... hope you took the advice to store up on them last summer. Apples are the best fruit buy. The quality of the other fruits is slipping rapidly. Meat's generally the same... you might find a few good roast buys here and there. Chickens are really the best buy for tight budgets.

Marching along to change

Time has brought many of the same changes to Peter, Paul and Mary that it did to the anti-war and civil rights activists who marched to the group's music a decade ago. Peter Yarrow, Paul Stookey and Mary Travers are back together again after seven years apart.

Peter, Paul & Mary Trio makes comeback

By PETER A. BROWN
BOSTON (UPI) — Time has brought many of the same changes to Peter, Paul & Mary that it did to the anti-war and civil rights activists who marched to the group's music a decade ago.

Peter Yarrow, Paul Stookey and Mary Travers have just made a national concert tour after seven years of going their separate ways. They're older, Yarrow and Stookey are balding and Miss Travers isn't quite the blond bombshell that even conservatives found quite attractive during those tumultuous years. They've changed, but then so has their audience.

Like the former students and protestors who packed auditoriums and outdoor theaters for the concert — paying up to $10 a ticket and many forking over $6 for a "reunion T-shirt" — they've gone into business and devoted more time to family life.

They played to sellout crowds on the 17-city tour, with the concerts as much a reunion for the audience as for the group that taught music — and politics — to much of the nation's young in the 1960s.

Not surprisingly, at least in Boston and from reports elsewhere too, the crowds were heavily comprised of the 25-40 age group, dressed in everything from blue jeans to three-piece suits. Some mouthed the words of the songs. Others sang out loud.

"They and their music helped me develop my philosophy about life. They helped a generation shape their thinking," said Mary Ann Krzyzna, 30, of Brighton, Mass. She remembers seeing them "three or four times" while in college. "I went into the Peace Corps after college and to some extent they helped me make that decision."

"I don't think you can separate Peter, Paul and Mary from the anti-war and civil rights movements during the 1960s. It was a big and important part of your life," said Miss Krzyzna, now a nurse.

Yarrow, although acknowledging his comments "will get me accused of megalomania," agrees. "I think we had a profound impact. Music was the language of the new culture and we were in the eye of the hurricane," he said in an interview after the group's Boston concert.

But just as the nation's campuses cooled down in the early 70s, with the young becoming more concerned about jobs and private lives, so PP&M took a different course.

Their split in 1971 was "a passage," says Yarrow, now 40, with his fine tenor voice still intact. "When we found we no longer wanted to say the same things with our music, we agreed to go our separate ways. If you have one who is into politics, one into religion and one into other things, it's difficult."

Yarrow, the most political of the three, married the niece of former Sen. Eugene McCarthy during the Minnesota Democrat's anti-war 1968 presidential campaign. Since settling in Malibu, Calif., with his wife and two children, Yarrow has continued doing political benefits from coast to coast while getting involved in music production.

Stookey, 41, like many of his young admirers, became a "born again" Christian. He, his wife and three children moved to Blue Hill, Maine, where he lives and records music in a converted farmhouse near the ocean.

Miss Travers, 41, has been the most visible of the three since their split, doing a series of tours, by herself and with others. At one time she was the name act with an up and coming folk musician named John Denver. She and her two daughters now live in New York.

Not saddened by the requirements of concert tours, the three devoted more time to family life. They did their own albums, but none had anywhere near the success of the 11 done by the group.

This year they decided to get back together, but not for good. Their "project" includes a studio album done before the concerts began, a concert album to be done this winter, the tour and possibly a television special.

"We decided a long time ago we would talk about a reunion when it was right," said Yarrow. "Each of us have missed it. We probably would have done it before, but we had such divergent lives."

"If we do something again," said Miss Travers, "it will also be on a project basis. We all have our own private lives, private problems and private commitments. This is not a comeback, but a regrouping."

Ballet performer says grind finally has taken its toll

NEW YORK (UPI) — You have to admire Ivan Nagy for quitting ballet at 33, at the height of his popularity. But he's had his fill of total dedication to the dance — 29 years of it — and figures there must be something else out there which will cause less wear and tear on body and family life.

Nagy's final appearances with American Ballet Theater — his home base for 10 years since he left his native Hungary — will come during ABT's Christmas season at the Kennedy Center in Washington. His final New York appearance was in his famous role of Albrecht opposite Natalia Makarova in "Giselle" Sept. 9.

But his final farewell came Sept. 7 when ABT staged "A Special Evening for Ivan Nagy" during its Sept. 5-17 interim season at the Metropolitan Opera House. It was the first such tribute to a departing dancer in ABT's 38 years and gave an indication of the affection in which he is held.

The original plan was for Nagy to dance five numbers with three of his regular partners: Cynthia Gregory, Gelsey Kirkland and Natalia Makarova. But Miss Kirkland developed a fever and had to cancel.

In the event, he danced the last act of "La Bayadere" and the second act of Kenneth MacMillan's "Concerto" with Miss Gregory, and parts of "Swan Lake" and "La Sylphide" with Miss Makarova.

At the end of the evening he took curtain after curtain, was showered with flowers, and emotionally embraced his two ballerinas, ABT directors Lucin Chase and Oliver Smith, and anyone else within reach.

It was a smiling-through-the-tears farewell to one of the world's major male dancers — never a great bravura technician but always a great partner, in demand by such as Margot Fonteyn and Carla Fracci as well as the ABT principals.

But Nagy has had much knee and back trouble, and though he has danced as a guest star round the world he has become increasingly bored with basically playing second fiddle to ballerinas.

He's cagey about his plans, apart from the fact that he's taking an extended vacation with his wife, Australian ex-dancer Marilyn Burr — Nagy is an Australian citizen — and their two children. Beyond that, all he will say is that if certain current negotiations fall through he may open a restaurant (a recurrent dream with weight-conscious dancers). Already there is speculation — it may only be wishful thinking — that he'll be back dancing some day.

Good luck to him either way, but he deserves the chance to ease his aching body for a while.

With Nagy's retirement and the departure of Mikhail Baryshnikov to the New York City Ballet, many of their roles will be taken over by Fernando Bujones and Anthony Dowell, who has joined the ABT this year on leave from the Royal Ballet.

Dowell made his first appearance this season Sept. 8, as Albrecht, opposite Marianna Tcherkassky, on Sept. 10.

It was a memorable performance. Miss Tcherkassky, apart from being a beautiful dancer, has become a fine Giselle. Her acting in the first act, as the young Giselle with a weak heart afraid of love and her later heart-breaking descent into despair and New York's final fling at summer outdoor entertainment is the New York Dance Festival, during which more than two dozen dance companies and soloists show off their wares in the Delacorte Theater in Central Park.

End of war marked change in dancing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Rudolf von Dantzig considers the end of World War II a significant step in the evolution of dance.

With the end of the war, says the Dutch choreographer, came the end of Holland's Calvinistic scorn of the art form, previously considered frivolous and sensual — and thus objectionable.

Today, the country has three ensembles: the National Ballet, the Netherlands Dance Theater and the Seppino Ballet. All three tour other countries and as Dutch choreographers are gaining international recognition and creating works for foreign companies.

Von Dantzig, artistic director of the Dutch National Ballet — which made its West Coast debut at Berkeley recently — says it all started when the war ended.

"The suppression was suddenly over, and not just physically. Freedom burst in upon the people, and they became open to so many new things, including dance," he says.

To von Dantzig, dance was an important part of life long before that. "I got interested in ballet because I saw 'The Red Shoes.' I had never seen dance before. But when I came home from the cinema, I had changed," he says.

"I became obsessed by dance." His first "real teacher," Sonia Gaskell, a Russian with a passion for dance, had a company of 12 which von Dantzig joined in 1952. "She said I was a terrible dancer, but she took me anyway because she needed a boy about my age, and there weren't too many willing to dance then."

He recalls how the dancers had to sew their own costumes and convert old churches and schools into studios. Then the government agreed to subsidize the company, which became the Netherlands Ballet and increased from 12 to 40 members.

Five years later von Dantzig and some other young dancers broke away and created the Netherlands Dance Theater, but "it was so terrible that first year, even though I was one of the founders, I left."

"I had idealized working together. I felt 'limited' as a choreographer. I missed the big repertoire."

So, he rejoined the Netherlands Ballet, which in 1961 merged with another company to form the National Ballet.

The company is now fully subsidized by the government, has 125 members — 80 of them dancers — and performs 150 times a year.

"In Holland we don't perform just in Amsterdam. We have to travel around. If you go to the same place twice, you have to have a completely new program or the people won't come. In New York, you could have the same program for four weeks, and you'd still have audiences."

While on home ground, the company emphasizes its classical repertoire: "Giselle," "Swan Lake," "Sleeping Beauty," "Firebird" and others. But when touring, the group selects programs largely or wholly from works created by its team of resident choreographers.

The company has performed throughout Western Europe, Poland, Yugoslavia, South America, Canada and Russia. Its American debut was the Netherlands' official cultural representative to New York City for the 1976 Bicentennial.

"We wish we could visit the United States more often," says von Dantzig. "But everything is so expensive here: renting a theater, costumes, sets, everything."

Von Dantzig says that as the company travels, it learns from other dance groups. But it also has developed its own "distinctive style."

Scientists hope to control dreaded muscular disease

LONDON (UPI) — The case of the rigid rabbits is a classic instance of scientific detection in which basic research has surprisingly pointed the way to a treatment for the dreaded neuromuscular disease that may have helped cause the death of Greek shipping millionaire Aristotle Onassis.

Two British scientists brought this continuing story up to date in a paper prepared for delivery to the annual meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science at Bath.

Myasthenia gravis is a disease in which the patient suffers muscular weakness that is accentuated by exercise and can lead in severe cases to death by respiratory failure or choking.

There have been many theories to explain its action but the one that now appears to have been closest to the actuality was the suggestion by a British researcher in 1960 that it was an auto-immune disease in which the patient developed antibodies that attacked his own neuromuscular apparatus.

Dr. Roger Harrison and Dr. George G. Lunt of the University of Bath said it took years for the proof of this theory to appear. This came with an unexpected observation in connection with studies into the mechanism by which nerve cells called neurones make contact with other nerve or muscle cells across the specialized junctions named synapses.

The chemical messenger involved in the contacts is the molecule acetylcholine.

"It was the isolation of the acetylcholine receptor that led to the awakening of interest in myasthenia gravis", the doctors said.

The major problem of isolating acetylcholine receptors from mammalian muscles is getting enough of the substance for research. The Rav of Biscay electric fish proved invaluable because, although pharmacologically identical to mammalian muscle, its electric organ has 10,000 times more receptors.

There was another ally for the researchers in the venom of certain cobras which contain small proteins that bond themselves so specifically to the acetylcholine receptors of their victims — paralyzing the skeletal muscles — that they can act as sensitive markers and play a vital role in the complex process of isolating the acetylcholine.

By the early 1970s, a number of laboratories had used this procedure and were engaged in determining the properties of the acetylcholine receptor. One experiment in the United States involved injecting purified receptor protein into rabbits. During this experiment the rabbits developed muscular paralysis and died.

Energy stalemate hits solar producers hard

WASHINGTON — A congressional study warns that the months-long stalemate over President Carter's national energy plan is having dire consequences for financially hard-pressed producers of solar energy devices.

Many small producers of solar equipment are likely to go out of business or be swallowed up by larger corporations such as Exxon and Honeywell if the deadlock in Congress persists much longer, it says.

Solar manufacturers are encountering hard times because many homeowners are waiting until Congress passes a bill that would allow tax credits for purchase of solar heating and cooling equipment. The House and Senate have passed separate tax credit bills, but final action on the measures has been held up at the administration's request in an effort to force Congress to approve the controversial crude oil equalization tax.

The solar study was made public Tuesday by Sen. Gary Hart (D-Ohio) and Sen. Charles Percy (R-Ill.), cosponsors of a measure aimed at freeing the solar tax credit bills from the administration's energy plan. The Senate, at their prodding, has voted to attach the solar credits to an unrelated tax bill, but a similar move in the House has run up against a wall of opposition from leaders of the Ways and Means Committee who are holding out for the oil equalization tax.

Solar industry officials say business has been sluggish ever since Carter's energy message last year, in which he called for solar tax credits.

Enactment of the tax credit measure is expected to spur the installation of nearly 2 million solar residential units by 1985, but the number will fall to a third of that total should the measure fail, the study said.

The study, done by the Congressional Research Service, found that the solar industry suffered a drop in production late last year after several years of steady growth.

Dear Abby: Freeloader moved in!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.
DEAR ABBY: Who should pay for what in a live-in type relationship?

The female is divorced, has two children and is on welfare. The male is well-to-do, with a good steady job. Should the rent and food expenses be divided?

In this case the guy pays no rent and is living in her home.

THE FEMALE

DEAR FEMALE: In any kind of relationship, the assets, liabilities and responsibilities should be shared 50-50. And if you're the female living on welfare, you (and the taxpayers) are supporting the guy who's living with you.

You might consider living with this free-loading, well-to-do creep just long enough to confirm a common-law status (under recent court decision), and then seek to get him!

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to that 16-year-old who felt that girls expected him to make a pass on the first date fell short. The kid said, "On the first date, I feel no irresistible urge to make out with her or even kiss her," and you said, "Most girls prefer the slow approach."

Why didn't you tell him that the only right time to kiss someone (or to make love) is at the precise time when the urge is irresistible? If it happens on the first date, you're in business. If it hasn't happened by the 15th date — don't kiss her just because you think you ought to. Admit the fact that the chemistry is wrong in the relationship, and then either go on enjoying her company on that basis, or end it on that basis.

If everyone just followed their inclinations — or didn't act when the inclinations weren't there — there would be a lot less stress, guilt and resentment between the sexes. I am a 45-year-old divorcee, and believe me, most middle-aged men don't seem to understand this any better than 16-year-olds.

W.C.M.

DEAR MS. M: The rules for kissing, dating and making love are vastly different for 45-year-old divorcees and middle-aged men than they are for 16-year-old boys on their first dates!

I still say, the slow approach is preferable for kids. They may feel like making out (or making love) on the first date, but they lack the experience and maturity to handle it.

DEAR ABBY: This evening while working in my yard, I noticed the very pretty little neighbor girl — about 6, wandering up and down the street in nothing but her panties.

A few months ago I saw this same little girl and her older brother struggling to get a heavy band instrument from the bus stop (three blocks away) to their home, so I stopped and offered to drive them to their home. They accepted gladly. I assumed they knew me. Once in the car it became apparent that I was a stranger to them!

Abby, please remind parents that it is their duty to instruct their children never, never to get into a car with a stranger.

DEWY, OK., MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Thanks for a timely reminder.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Colossal battles unfold on bottom of ocean floor

LONDON (UPI) — Down in the dark depths of the oceans colossal battles take place unseen by man — as awesome as the imaginings of Hollywood movie makers but even more terrible.

The combatants are sperm whales, some of them weighing 60 tons, against giant squid big enough to wrap their tentacles around the average house. Some of these squid weigh 2,000 pounds and measure 50 feet from tentacle tip to tentacle tip.

The battles have been going on for thousands of years but there is usually only one winner, said Dr. Malcolm Clarke, of the Marine Biological Association in Plymouth.

And that is the sperm whale, whose enormous strength and armory of teeth as well as his great size — often over 50 feet — make him the most formidable opponent in the world. Clarke discussed squid, large and small, in a paper prepared for delivery to the annual meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science in which he estimated that sperm whales alone eat more than 100 million tons of squid a year.

This compares with a total of 60-70 million tons for the whole world's total annual catch of fish.

The enormous amount of squid eaten by whales in a year, he said, approaches the total weight of all mankind.

This, he added, explaining before his talk why he had chosen "Whales and Squid" as his topic, it is possible a food resource of great importance to humanity and to seals, sharks, tuna, dolphins and other living things is not being adequately researched.

Researchers know squid is the sole food of the sperm whale, he said, by examining stomach contents. Squid have horny, indigestible beaks. In one whale they found evidence that it had eaten 15,000 squid.

Although a foot-across eyeball of a squid was found in a sperm whale's stomach, Clarke said, the evidence is that they mostly eat smaller squid averaging under 15 pounds in weight.

No one has or possibly ever will see the battle of the giants beneath the sea but Clarke said he had been told that whalers had seen a sperm whale surfacing with a giant squid on its head, its tentacles wrapped around it and apparently trying to plug the whale's blowholes.

"Man's awareness of the existence of large squid came not from what he caught in his nets but from monsters, floating dead or moribund at the sea surface and from the tales of whalers who had seen with unbelieving eyes whales vomit complete or dismembered kraken (sea monsters) of immense proportions," he said.

Compare cost "per-serving" with Buttreys Extra Value Trim

Buttreys Extra Value Trim lowers your cost "per serving" because you're buying more eatable meat—excess fat and bone have been removed. Remember, too, that the particular cut of meat itself may offer more or less servings per pound than other cuts. Boneless or near-boneless cuts are often more expensive, but yield more eatable meat than bonier cuts. You can lower your "per serving" costs with: Buttreys Extra Value Trim; smaller serving sizes; lower cooking temperatures; and consideration for the meat cut itself.

Over GOP trouble.

Harry Truman would have been delighted

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Harry Truman, Missouri's only native-born president, would have delighted in the consternation he is causing Republicans on the St. Louis County Council.

When Democratic council members sought to name the new Government Center Plaza after the 33rd president, a staunch Democrat, the vote was divided along party lines. The four Democrats thought it was a great idea, the three Republicans opposed it.

Supervisor Gene McNary, a Republican, vetoed the bill.

Councilman Carl W. Brehlan, also a Republican, suggested the center be named for Ulysses S. Grant, a former Republican president whose Civil War residence is a landmark in Brehlan's district.

The Democrats then passed another bill that would have given county employees a holiday on May 8, Truman's birthday. The day is a holiday for state employees and government workers in Jackson County, which includes Truman's hometown of Independence.

McNary also rejected that bill. St. Louis also rejected that bill. St. Louis County then was given a plaque commemorating Truman, and the Democratic Council members decided it would look nice in the new government center. The plaque, a montage by Kansas City artist Sidney Moore, was a gift to the county from the state Democratic committee.

Council members must approve any gift of more than $200, and they did by a 4-3 vote — again along party lines. This time, McNary signed the bill after lengthy deliberation.

"With the supervisor being a Republican, I guess he objected to where the plaque was coming from," Council Chairman Harry E. Von Romer, a Democrat, said. "I guess he felt it was his duty to oppose it because it came from the Democratic State Committee."

"He finally went along with the idea of what Democratic members thought would be a proper and fit place to put it," Von Romer said. "It's now mounted on a wall near the County Council chambers."

Architect recreates space role

NEW YORK — There are those who play by the rules, and those who do not — in architecture as in everything else. And whether or not an architect has played by the correct rules of modernism has determined, to a large degree, the place to which he is consigned in history and the annals of taste.

But history, contrary to common belief, does not play by the rules either, and taste has always been a transient thing. Because both are clearly in a transitional period now, architectural reputations are being jacked up or pulled down at a furious rate.

That is why the work of the Swedish architect, Gunnar Asplund (1885-1940), currently on display at the Museum of Modern Art, is so important to see. It brings together the buildings of one of the most creative and misunderstood practitioners of the period between the two wars, for the reevaluation of an artist who has slipped in and out of the limelight of critical approval with puzzling dexterity.

Even if the Asplund show were not historically important for its reassessment of his role in the light of a vastly broadened concept of modern architecture, it would still be a treat for the sheer, unfamiliar excellence of the buildings on view. They are full of the most subtle skills of space and symbolism, of the knowing use of history and craft. In spite of the unevenness of a limited production due to his early death, Gunnar Asplund emerges as a significant 20th-century figure.

Asplund was, in fact, consistently shortchanged by those who were busy fitting 20th-century talents into the Procrustean bed of the International Style. He was able to step in and out of that style with the greatest of ease, giving throwaway lessons to its more plodding followers.

Primarily, he synthesized what he wanted of tradition or innovation for an intensely personal interpretation of the building art. And the structures that resulted in Sweden, from houses, tombs and exposition design to the Stockholm Public Library and that city's celebrated Woodland Crematorium, ranging in time from 1917 to 1940, are magnificent mavericks, as often as not.

And so those who were out of town in July and August, or are coming to New York this fall, should make a point of getting to the Museum of Modern Art before this summer show comes down after October 1.

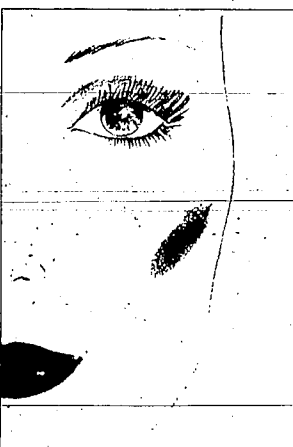

The exhibition is the work of Stuart Wrede, under the sponsorship of Arthur Drexler and the Department of Architecture and Design, with the help of the New York State Council on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts. It consists of enlarged black-and-white photographs and plans and a text by Wrede that is a bit heavy on ponderous symbolism, in line with a preoccupation of the moment. But the show is equally rich in enlightened reassessment, and in the pleasures of rediscovery of the recent past.

Eric Gunnar Asplund completed his architectural studies in 1911, when Swedish National Romanticism was at its height. This early 20th-century style married vernacular and classical motifs with superb craftsmanship and a conscious mystique of natural and medieval sources. It produced work like Ragnar Ostberg's famous Stockholm Town Hall, carried out in a simplified eclectic mix that was popularly considered the most innovative work of its time.

But by 1929 this romantic eclecticism had been labeled "The New Tradition" by historian Henry-Russell Hitchcock, as opposed to a more radical, emerging group which he called "The New Planners."

The Paris

Spanish protest bullring

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — A virtual one-man campaign against bullfighting has drawn blood.

In Barcelona, Spain's second city, local officials have been forced to put into effect a forgotten 1929 law that prohibits children under age 14 from attending bullfights.

And a "Special Kids' Discount" sign has been taken down from the bullring ticket windows there. At least temporarily.

The man responsible is Salvador Ralch, a 54-year-old Barcelona industrial engineer who compares the corrida to a Roman circus.

Ralch signed a complaint, and threatened to drag the provincial governor before a judge. If the governor did not enforce the 49-year-old ban.

That did the trick and on Sept. 3, bullfight aficionados and foreign tourists were surprised and indignant to find the Barcelona arena bristling with signs reading "Those under 14 not admitted to this spectacle."

A large chunk of the ticketholders, some 5,000 children and parents, took their money back and missed the show of half-ton animals charging waving red capes and then being killed with a sword.

The situation has provoked a chorus of protest from bullfight fans and those who make their living from the "fiesta national," or the national pastime. They fear that if the law has been enforced in Barcelona, it may well be applied throughout the country.

"Continued enforcement of the ban will mean extinction for the national pastime and will kill the taste for bullfighting," said promoter Manuel Cisneros.

Bullfight critic Joaquin Vidal called the Barcelona situation "a stab in the back for bullfighting" and wrote that if Civil Gov. Jose Maria Belloni wants to spare children the sight of violence he should ban them from cinemas and soccer stadiums, too.

Ralch, who has singlehandedly organized a 3,000-member anti-bullfighting campaign, called the ban "a victory."

"To let children attend bullfights is to teach them the cruelty of men who make out of an animal's death and suffering a spectacle worthy of the ancient dissipated Roman people," he said in an interview.

But Ralch has his sights set on bigger goals.

"We want bullfighting, a barbarous and ridiculous spectacle, to be done away with completely," he said. "It is time now for Spain to join the rest of the world and act in a way befitting a civilized nation."

Bullfight promoters do not see their livelihood that way and they plan to seek repeal of the 1929 law that was decreed during the rule of Dictator Miguel Primo de Rivera and fell immediately into disuse.

They say Primo de Rivera, who also outlawed gambling casinos in his time, was more of a soccer fan than an aficionado of the bulls.

Vidal said that perhaps the opponents did not understand "the structure, the technique, the significance of the corrida, the objective of the three phases of the bullfight, the roots of the spectacle, etc."

A Barcelona columnist called the child ban "hasty, unpopular and sadly paternalistic" and voiced his support for repeal.

Under the circumstances, Ralch said that he and his colleagues would be returning to the Barcelona bullring each Sunday to make sure the ban is enforced.

"But," he said "you will understand that we do not stick around to see the brutal show."

Disc jockey talks way into record

MARQUETTE, Mich. (UPI) — Disc jockey John Heller has talked himself into the record books by staying on the air for 240 hours and 13 minutes.

Heller, 22, who works for radio station WDMJ, set a world record for non-stop broadcasting when he beat the old on-the-air mark of 222 hours and 22 minutes, which was held by a Milwaukee broadcaster.

Heller finally called it quits at 12:13 p.m. Saturday.

"He had some rough moments, but always managed to make it through," a station spokesman said Saturday after Heller set the record. "He's going home now, possibly to get some sleep."

Heller's radio stunt was part of a station effort to collect $600 for a local exorcist trail. It was the third in a series of four fund-raising events sponsored by the station.

Listeners pledged a total of $1,483 during Heller's broadcasting marathon, station officials said.

Record book rules allowed Heller to take a five-minute break each hour, although he occasionally saved up some of his breaks to take longer rests.

Singer changes to female

LONDON (UPI) — According to his latest song, punk rock singer Wayne County is man enough to be a woman.

County, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., and New York, and more recently of West Berlin, presently calls London home. He's also a transsexual or at least in the process of becoming one.

He's best known, along with his band, the "Electric Chairs," in the punk rock clubs of New York and London as an outrageous and unpredictable performer.

One of the band's newest songs, "Man Enough to be a Woman," is a transsexual ballad which County admits is his theme song.

Their hottest single to date, however, sold only 60,000 copies. That's hardly exciting in today's market of instant gold records but the numbers aren't bad considering the song resolved no air play. It didn't because the title contained a four-letter word you can't say on television or radio, nor print in most newspapers.

But despite the bizarre stage image he can, when he wants to, be as charming as anyone of his strictly religious southern upbringing.

"What am I supposed to do," County said during an interview in the London offices of Safari Records, "roll around on the floor and scream?"

He meant all the time. County, who gives his age as "between 20 and 20 1/2" but he is "notorious for being insane."

Some of those incidents have involved throwing dog food at his audiences and appearing on stage in his "garbage outfit" which consists of beer cartons, old newspapers and other odds and ends from the typical landfill.

"When I first came up, I was doing some really outrageous stuff," County admits. "When I hear the music, I just go crazy."

County said audiences enjoyed his act during the early '70s but record company executives cringed.

"They thought I was a total maniac. I made Alice Cooper look like a priest or something."

So it was off to London (the other four band members are English) to try a new market and a new sex.

Technically, County is still a male since he's not completed the sex change process. He's been taking plastic surgery which give him the appearance of a female and recently had plastic surgery performed on his nose.

Sex change operations aren't the rarity they once were nor do they command as much attention. County, who sat through the interview sniffling and touching his still tender nose, claimed the operation isn't a publicity stunt.

"I spent half of my life as a man and I want to spend the other half as a woman. I just don't want to get old. I won't get old gracefully, I'll be gross."

County professes to want to stay in the United Kingdom, preferring it to New York because he said "there's a feeling of safety here." And adding, "New York is so filthy and New Yorkers have no manners."

But life in Europe has not been without its problems. During the summer, he and the band went to Germany to "play some gigs" and when he tried to re-enter Britain he was detained for 24 hours because his working papers weren't in order.

County and the Electric Chairs' new album "Knocking at the Gates of Heaven" was produced in London by Safari which is currently seeking distribution in Europe as well as the United States.

Dog saves man attacked by kangaroo

PERTH, Australia (UPI) — A naturalist attacked by a giant kangaroo was saved by his dog, authorities reported today.

David McGinlay, 24, and his pet bull terrier were attacked by a kangaroo of the western gray species, one of the biggest known and weighing about 270 pounds. The attack happened on a weekend outing in thick bushland.

McGinlay received numerous cuts and bruises but the kangaroo bounded off into the bush when the bull terrier bit its tail.

McGinlay, an amateur naturalist, said he had just photographed the giant kangaroo when it pinned his dog to the ground.

"Then the big gray reared up in front of me," he said. "It had forearms thicker than my legs, a girth twice as thick as a man's, paws bigger than my hands and talons about 3 inches long."

"I was terrified. I was sure I was going to die. It lifted up a foot and tore my jeans, just grazing my shin. I started to run away but it walloped my back, throwing me nose first into the dirt and stomped me twice in the back."

It was then, McGinlay said, that his dog attacked the kangaroo and drove him off.
