Polish cardinal elected new Pope

Pope John Paul II claps hands, blesses crowds in St. Peter's Square

©New York Times Service
 ROME — Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Poland Monday night became the first non-Italian in 455 years to be elected head of the Roman Catholic Church and successor to St. Peter, the prince of the apostles.

He assumed the name of John Paul II in homage to his predecessor John Paul I, who died on Sept. 26 after a reign of only 33 days. The name assumed the name of Pope John XXIII and Paul VI, the two immediate predecessors of John Paul II. (Related stories, page A3)

The election of a non-Italian from a Communist country of Eastern Europe came as a complete surprise and is expected to have a political impact of historic dimensions that cannot yet be fully gauged.

The new pope is 58 years old, the youngest man to be elected in this century.

His name had not been mentioned, even as a dark horse candidate, in the speculation — among Vatican and Vatican specialists before the secret conclave began last Friday.

White smoke curling from a flue on the roof of the Sistine Chapel at 6:17 p.m. local time signalled to the world and to tens of thousands of believers gathered in St. Peter's Square that the new pope had been elected.

Minutes later the traditional Latin phrase "nuntio vobis gaudium magnum: habemus papam" was called out from a balcony of St. Peter's Basilica by Cardinal Pericle Felici, the ranking cardinal deacon. The phrase means "I announce to you with great joy: we have a pope."

The crowd in the huge floodlit square below broke into joyous cheers.

There was new cheering and waving when the new pope, already wearing the white pontifical vestments with a gold embroidered purple cape and stole, appeared on the central balcony of the basilica to impart, for the first time in his history, "urbis et orbis" to the city (of Rome) and to the world.

Before reading the Latin benediction, the new pope, a tall solidly built man, addressed the crowd in almost accent-free Italian. New cheers went up when he said: "I don't know whether I can make myself understood in our — Italian language. If I make a mistake you will correct me."

was afraid to accept this appointment, but I did so in the spirit of obedience to our Lord and in total faith toward his mother, the holy virgin."

The new pontiff is known as a conservative theologian. Specialists said that his conservatism was evident Monday in the fact that twice in his address he referred to the virgin Mary. Liberal theologians have lately attempted the cult of the mother of Jesus to spare Protestant feelings.

Socially — as distinct from theologically — the new pope is regarded as a "progressive" by Vatican officials.

An American priest in the crowd, the Rev. John Dowd from Chicago, exclaimed: "A Polish pope? I can't believe it." Explaining that he lived in an area of Polish workers, Father Dowd added jokingly: "There will be no living with them now. If you're from Chicago, you'll know what I mean."

The archbishop of Montreal, Paul Grewer — in St. Peter's Square, said: "The fact that the new pope is not Italian expresses the universal dimension of the church. He makes a bridge between East and West."

Archbishop Grewer said that he remembered the new pope from a visit that the pope had made to Canada, as a cardinal, in 1976. The visiting prelate was popular, and the churches were packed, the archbishop said. He added that the new pontiff had "a broad mind" and an excellent knowledge of foreign languages — English, French and German in addition to Italian.

Born in Krakow on May 18, 1920, he was the son of a working class family and worked as a laborer in a chemical factory while going through high school and college.

"He has often urged the church to 'remain close to the people' and is reported to have supported Polish workers in demands for better wages and living conditions.

Politically he is regarded by specialists as a "pragmatist," who occasionally adopted more diplomatic positions toward Poland's Communist government than the strong-willed primate of Poland, Stefan Cardinal Wyszyński.

Wyszyński, beaming with joy, was standing next to his countryman as the new pontiff read his benediction and addressed the crowd.

The last non-Italian pope was Hadrian VI, a Dutchman from Utrecht, who died in September, 1523. Ruling at the time when the Protestant reformation gathered its momentum, he had a turbulent pontificate.

Western European and particularly German prelates have been among those who advocated the election of a pope from a Communist country, arguing that the church would benefit from the leadership of a man who has personal knowledge of what it means to be a believer under a Communist regime.

Fight over salmon to supreme court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday agreed to step into the bitter dispute over a federal judge's efforts to control salmon fishing in Puget Sound so Indians can get about half the annual harvest.

The justices will review conflicting Washington state and federal court rulings which involve a fishery worth more than $40 million a year and have led to high emotions and sometimes violence in the Northwest.

The problems began in 1974 when U.S. District Judge George Boldt, in a decision that turned the state fishing industry upside down, interpreted mid-1800s treaties to mean tribal Indians are entitled to 50 percent of the salmon returning to traditional, Indian fishing waters.

The U.S. Supreme Court let that ruling stand, and the state fisheries department tried to comply by issuing regulations restricting the catch by non-Indian commercial and sport fishermen.

But a year ago, the Washington Supreme Court, following an outcry from non-Indian commercial fishermen, put the state agency in a dilemma by ordering it not to carry out Boldt's orders.

The state court said it was unconstitutional to hand over 50 percent of a natural resource to treaty Indians who comprise less than 1 percent of the population. It said Boldt had no authority to order state officers to stop fishing.

Boldt responded in October 1977 by taking direct, at times day-to-day, control of salmon fishery management. He called in agents of the Commerce Department's National Marine Fisheries Service to enforce his orders, and non-treaty fishermen found violating his instructions were charged with contempt.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Boldt in rulings April 24.

With the exception of some desegregation cases, that court said, the judge "has faced the most concerted official and private efforts to frustrate a decree of a federal court witnessed in this century."

It said the state's "extraordinary machinations" in resisting his orders to let Indians have half the salmon catch left Boldt no choice but to take over a large share of the management of the state's fishery.

The judge has a "broad discretion" in managing the fishery and has not abused his powers, the court said.

It said the mdor problem is that the state's courts and non-Indian fishermen "have never fully accepted the principle that treaty rights can be claimed by a politically impotent minority."

Angry, unruly crowd protests tax hike

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (UPI) — A crowd of about 3,500 "angry and unruly" residents marched on City Hall for a three-hour demonstration Monday to protest property tax increases.

Mayor John Markey closed the building for "safety reasons."

About 70 police officers, many wearing riot gear, circled the hall as the crowd converged on the building about 9 a.m.

Several demonstrators were arrested, but later released.

Some 30 to 40 demonstrators climbed up scaffolding to peer at workers inside the hall after the mayor closed the building.

A police spokesman said Mayor Markey's automobile was vandalized, apparently by demonstrators.

"Some people jumped all over his car, and the antenna was broken," the spokesman said. "It was a pretty angry and unruly crowd."

Demonstrators called for Markey to talk to them. He finally appeared on a second floor balcony and said he would be glad to cut back city services and therefore lower taxes.

The demonstration apparently was the brainchild of local radio personality "Cuzzin Dave" Willford, who suggested the march during a Saturday night talk show at station WBSM.

"The size of the group caught us by surprise," said a police spokesman. "I'd say there was about 3,500 out there."

The marchers were protesting property tax increases related to 100 percent revaluation in the city. The change to 100 percent revaluation has meant increased property tax bills for many residents.

New tax bills were sent out this week and some residents faced annual increases of $90 to $500. The city's overall property tax rate was increased by $1.60 per $1,000 of assessed value this year.

A City Hall spokeswoman said the building was closed "for safety reasons because some of the people were acting unruly."

Willford said when he arrived at City Hall about 8:30 a.m. he had expected to be "leading a one-man demonstration" but instead he found about 1,000 people already massed there.

American fund cutback worries leaders at UN

NEW YORK TIMES Service
 UNITED NATIONS — Officials here were worriedly studying Monday the implications of a new United States appropriations law that will reduce America's contribution to the United Nations by more than $27 million.

The bill, signed into law by President Carter last Wednesday, states that no American contribution "may be made available for furnishing of technical assistance by the United Nations or any other specialized agencies."

The United States, under the United Nations Charter, is assessed for 25 percent of the United Nations general budget (approximately $800 million annually in the current period) and a comparable proportion of the expenses of many of its agencies.

The new law provides operating funds for the Departments of State, Justice, Commerce, the Judiciary and the Veterans Affairs. An amendment was introduced in the Senate by Sen. Jesse Helms, D-N.C., to eliminate the U.N.

technical assistance fund. To the surprise of some legislators, the Helms amendment survived in the House version of the bill, and it became law.

President Carter said he was reluctant to sign the bill because of his opposition to the Helms amendment. He said it would weaken not only the international agencies involved but America's bargaining position with the Soviet.

Washington has long sought to pressure the Kremlin into paying all its United Nations assessments, rather than withholding payment from those projects or agencies which Moscow disapproves.

A United Nations spokesman said Monday that the U.N. could not accept any conditions attached to assessments levied against members, which are covered by international treaty and are therefore legally binding on member governments. He said that Secretary General Kurt Waldheim shared President Carter's deep concern about the matter.

Libyan offers of trade agreements to Idaho part of bid for aircraft

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Libya's offer to Idaho of lucrative trade agreements may be part of the Arab nation's attempt to get military hardware from this country.

Publicly, Libya has maintained the purpose of the trip is simply to set up a trade agreement between Libya and Idaho farmers.

But the trips to Libya appear to be a part of larger plan to obtain eight military transport planes.

Sen. Frank Church said it is obvious the free trips Libya has given Idahoans the last two years aren't simply designed to get wheat for the Arab nation.

"Obviously their motive can't be buying Idaho wheat or any other farm products," Church said. "After all, wheat can be far more easily obtained from the Midwest," the senator said.

Idaho Farm Bureau President Oscar Field is currently in Libya working out final details of a joint farm bureau-Libyan corporation to handle Libyan purchases of U.S. crops, canned goods, baby food and candy.

The Libyan government paid for his trip, along with the airfare of other Idahoans, including Times-News reporter Ken Hodge, a Pocatello television correspondent and others.

In 1974, President Nixon banned delivery of eight C-130 planes to the socialist regime of Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi, whose government the CIA has called the world's foremost proponent of international terrorism.

The troop transport planes are still sitting in a hangar at Marietta, Ga.

Since 1974, the year the plane deal was scotched, Libya has tried to strengthen its ties to Idaho, the state that elects Frank Church, soon-to-be chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations committee.

The foreign relations committee is influential in deciding how the federal government distributes goods abroad.

Libya first began trying to establish relations with Idaho officials while Cecil Andrus was governor. Governor Andrus was invited to Libya but he didn't go.

In May, 1977, a joint trade corporation between Libya and Idaho was "proposed" by Libyan Foreign Secretary Ahmed Shahati, who visited Idaho as part of a nine-member delegation.

At the time, Shahati met with Gov. Evans through an arrangement made by University of Idaho agriculture professor James Arsal.

According to the governor, the Libyans were more interested in discussing the C-130 planes than in the Idaho farm commodities Evans thought they wanted to buy.

Brooke, committee counsel may face each other

MASSACHUSETTS SEN. BROOKE ... probe of finances drags along

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Ethics Committee Monday said it invited Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., and his former counsel, Richard Wertheimer, to challenge each other's claims about missing and altered documents.

But Chairman Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., said he didn't know when such a session would be held, although it would be before the Nov. 7 election in which Brooke is seeking a third term.

After a 2 1/2 hour closed meeting, the panel agreed on a 4-1 vote "that both Sen. Brooke and Mr. Wertheimer ... would be invited to appear before the committee at the earliest possible time," Stevenson said.

"The committee has also instructed its staff to meet with representatives of Mr. Brooke to explore the necessary details—time, place, sequence of events, sequence of testimony."

Wertheimer quit last week in anger over vice chairman Harrison Schmitt's assertion that it was the committee, and not Brooke's lawyers, causing the probe of Brooke's finances to remain unresolved past the election.

The counsel said the committee did not have everything it asked for from Brooke and that one document may have been altered.

The committee is investigating Brooke's failure to list on his Senate financial disclosure forms $47,000 he said during divorce proceedings was lent him by a Massachusetts liquor dealer. He later said he made a "misstatement" in the divorce case and that the loan was only $2,000.

In an emotional speech on the Senate floor last week, Brooke demanded a public meeting at which he and Wertheimer could have it out.

Rhodesian forces sweep

UMTALI, Rhodesia (UPI) — Rhodesian troops Monday hunted black guerrillas who staged the worst bombing of Umtali in six years. On the western front, soldiers crossed into Botswana and had a brief "contact" with Botswana troops.

A military communique said troops following the tracks of guerrillas who had entered Rhodesia from Zambia and left across the Botswana border mounted a "self-defense operation" into Botswana early Monday.

Treaty talks advance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Egyptian and Israeli negotiators began to put the final version of a peace treaty on paper Monday in a series of drafting sessions that indicated the U.S.-guided talks are going well.

A conference spokesman reported a series of "serious and systematic" informal negotiating sessions involving U.S., Egyptian and Israeli legal advisers.

Dan Dailey dies at 62

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dan Dailey, the song and dance man who performed in dozens of Hollywood and Broadway musicals, died in his sleep at his home early Monday at the age of 62.

Al Meinick, his personal manager, said Dailey had suffered for several months from severe anemia. He said Dailey had been "virtually an invalid" since August 1977 when he fell on stage during a performance of "The Odd Couple" at a dinner theater in North Carolina and fractured his hip.

Libya seeking trade, planes

The governor reported after he described Idaho farm products to the Libyan representatives, a member of the U.S. delegation said. "There's one other thing we'd like to talk to you about. Will you help us get our planes out of Georgia?"

But a spokesman for the Idaho Farm Bureau said the Libyans haven't expressed interest in buying anything besides agricultural products and related foodstuffs.

Nyal Rydchal, farm bureau assistant secretary, said, "They have never talked to me about those planes."

However, Rydchal said he was aware of the delivery problem with the planes.

But Rydchal said all the Libyans asked the farm bureau was to help them get a pledge from the federal government not to hold up delivery of the food purchases.

Libya also told the farm bureau it hopes by dealing through the farm bureau the country can avoid established world trade channels which they identify as large corporations, the U.S. government, and Jewish brokerage houses.

Trade between Idaho and Libya began in November, 1977, when Libya arranged to buy 1.46 million bushels of wheat from the Pacific Northwest Grain Co-op. The deal backfired for Idaho farmers when they had to turn to Midwest growers to get the type of wheat Libya wanted.

Since last March, foreign relations officials of Libya have been trying, through the Idaho Farm Bureau, to obtain official sanction from Idaho's congressional delegation to create the trading corporation.

On March 10 Nyal Rydchal sent letters to members of the Idaho congressional delegation and Gov. Evans asking them to write to Libyan Foreign Secretary Shahaht expressing support for the creation of the corporation with headquarters in Boise.

Church refused to write the letter to Shahaht because he said "official sanction of trade with Libya isn't necessary."

"Our law permits any foreign government with which we have relations to establish a trade office wherever it pleases in the United States," Church said. "My consent is irrelevant."

Last year Libya spent over $300 million on trade in the U.S., according to a State Dept. source.

Symms, who has made two official visits to Libya according to the State Dept., said.

Union pact suit target

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Labor Department filed suit in federal court Monday to block a Teamsters Union pension fund from renewing a multi-million dollar contract with a claims-processing firm.

The action was the latest in the department's 2-year-old campaign to overhaul operations of the union's Central States Pension Fund for allegedly squandering millions of dollars in assets.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said the steps were part of an effort "to protect the assets" of the fund and "to safeguard the rights of those workers who contribute to the fund."

More clashes in Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Troops killed six people and wounded 23 in clashes with demonstrators around Iran Monday as hundreds of thousands of people mourned the victims of the "Bloody Friday" massacre last month, the Paris news agency said.

The violence in the provinces broke out although two other anti-Shah events went off peacefully — a nationwide general strike that shut down almost all business activity and a graveside ceremony for the about 200 victims of the Sept. 8 massacre.

Vance launches talk

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, heading a team of five foreign ministers, Monday opened crucial talks with South African leaders on a peaceful transition to independence for South West Africa.

U.S. sources said Vance, before starting the afternoon session of the talks, met privately with Prime Minister Pieter Botha and handed him a letter from President Carter. The sources would not reveal the contents of the letter.

Nuclear ship in port

TOKYO (UPI) — The Mutsu, Japan's first and only nuclear ship, successfully ran a blockade of about 50 small boats operated by protesting ultra-leftists Monday and arrived at the port of Sasebo for repairs.

Ashore, more than 3,000 opponents snaked-danced through downtown Sasebo to protest the Mutsu's arrival while 4,000 riot police looked on. At least one student was arrested.

Richard Charnock of United Press International considers exaggeration the swaddling clothes for the Idaho political campaign. That commentary will be on the opinion page.

Haller, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley:

Fair Tuesday and Wednesday after a chance of showers lasting into Tuesday morning. Highs both days 69 to 75 degrees with lows overnight 38 to 42 degrees.

Synopsis:

Mostly fair skies are expected to return to Southern Idaho today and Wednesday after an upper-level low pressure system moved inland from the Oregon coast on Monday.

That system brought clouds and widely scattered showers to southwestern Idaho on Monday and partly cloudy skies and slightly cooler temperatures to the southern part of the state through the day.

Temperatures Monday, ranged mostly in the 60's, slightly cooler than Sunday's balmy readings, and the clouds kept minimum readings somewhat higher. Monday's low in the state was 16 degrees, reported at Stanley.

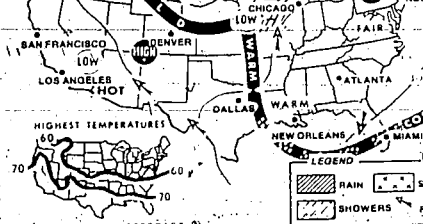

Rebuilding high pressure on Wednesday will bring generally dry, fair weather and slowly warming temperatures at least until the end of the week. The extended forecast for Idaho for the period for Wednesday through Friday calls for sky with high readings from the middle 60's to the middle 70's, with low readings mostly in the 30's.

The harvest outlook for the Magic Valley area today and Wednesday, particularly for hay- and potato digging, calls for dry weather with warm days and cool nights. The four inch soil temperature is expected to remain above the 45 degree level.

Across the nation, high pressure maintained clear skies and Canadian are kept temperatures mild. Freezing temperatures were expected this morning over the Great Lakes region and New England with frost as far south as eastern Missouri.

In the Gulf States, skies were fair and temperatures mild. The Southwest and West Coast had warm weather, with a few readings in the 90's and 100's. The Plains states and Rocky Mountain region were dry and mild.

John Paul II backed church's rights in Poland

VATICAN City (UPI) — Polish Cardinal Karol Wojtyla, 58, archbishop of Krakow, Poland, who became the Roman Catholic church's 264th pope Monday, stunned church and lay officials by his election as John Paul II for three reasons.

He is the first Pole in history to succeed to the throne of St. Peter, the first foreigner of any kind to be appointed pontiff for 455 years and the first prelate from a Communist-controlled nation to be so chosen.

His comparatively youthful age of 58 also makes it likely that his pontificate will be a lengthy one.

Wojtyla has consistently pleaded for the rights of the church in Poland but has taken a more conciliatory approach to the conflict between Christianity and communism than the Polish Primate Cardinal Stefan Wyszyński.

But at the 1977 synod of bishops in Rome, Wojtyla took a stronger stand against communism, denouncing its systematic attack on church teaching as "the anti-catechism of the secular world."

Although he has taken a softer approach on Communism than Wyszyński, he has never contradicted the tough Polish primate.

But he has resisted attempts by Polish emigre groups for a strong condemnation of atheism on the grounds that it would be counterproductive. Speaking in the name of all Polish bishops at the Second Vatican Council in the early 60s, he said: "It is not the church's place to teach unbelievers. Let us avoid any spirit of monopolizing and moralizing. One of the major faults of this approach is that the church appears authoritarian in it."

In Poland, Wojtyla has not hesitated to speak out on the people's rights at the risk of antagonizing the Communist regime.

He has urged Polish workers to demand fair wages but at the same time cautioned against prices going out of control.

He sees the role of Christians in Communist-dominated nations as one of "arming themselves against the dangers of the surrounding society, to form subjects of the church where the state seeks to create a type of man subordinated to its own specific ends."

Wojtyla, the son of working-class parents, was born at Wadowice in the archdiocese of Krakow, May 18, 1920. He was ordained at age 28 and consecrated bishop in 1958 at 38.

The Rev. Edward Wachter, a parish priest who taught Wojtyla as a teenager, recalled that the new pope was an intelligent boy, particularly gifted in languages and literature.

Wachter said he noticed no special signs of devoutness in the boy until the time his father and he moved to Krakow in 1938 and assumed his vocation came to him in the bitter early years of World War II.

As archbishop of Krakow, Wojtyla managed to build several new churches despite the Communist-dominated government. In one of his strongest appeals for Christian rights in Poland in an article in the Vatican's official newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, in February 1976, Wojtyla wrote:

"It cannot be that a group of men, a social group, should impose on all the people an ideology, an opinion contrary to the convictions of the majority."

He asked that Christians not be penalized and given a position of inferiority in public life: "It cannot be allowed to treat this enormous multitude of believers as second-class citizens just because we are believers."

Wojtyla is also a poet and once was an actor in a clandestine "Rhaosodic Theater" during the Nazi occupation. Also an athlete, Wojtyla used to be a keen canoeist and went skiing at the Polish winter resort of Zakopane as recently as last year.

He speaks English, French, German and Italian and some of his writings on theological themes have been translated from Polish into other main languages.

Vatican experts thought it likely that the new pontiff would continue the policy of Pope Paul VI in trying to come to an arrangement with the Communist regimes of Eastern Europe, and that he would at the same time try to strengthen the church by reconciling existing moderate and conservative factions.

The late Pope Paul VI's Eastern policy made its greatest progress in Poland.

More than 85 percent of Poland's 35 million people are practicing Catholics.

In December 1977, Paul received Polish Communist Party First Secretary Edward Gierek in the first meeting between a pontiff and a Polish leader in more than 1,900 years.

At their 80-minute audience, Pope Paul told Gierek: "The Catholic church does not ask for privileges but only for the right to be itself and carry out its religious mission without obstacles. Only in this way can the church fully cooperate as it wishes to cooperate."

Polish-Americans laud selection of new Pope

CHICAGO (UPI) — Polish-Americans in Chicago — the city with the largest population of Polish people outside of Warsaw — rejoiced Tuesday at the news a Polish cardinal was elected pope.

"This place is in an uproar," said Lorie Rose Gorny, vice president of the Polish Roman Catholic Union of America. "We're just delighted. We can't believe it."

She said Cardinal Karol Wojtyla, 58, now Pope John Paul II, is a "very dear friend of ours. He has been here, visiting our museums. I think they chose him because he is of median age. He is not an old man. He is a strong man."

Mrs. Gorny said she heard the news from a friend who had been watching television.

"When I heard, I closed the phone immediately and announced it to the staff over the loud speaker," she said. "We did not have an inkling that this man would be elected. We thought he (the new pope) would be another Italian. This was a complete surprise to us."

The Polish Roman Catholic Union of America is a fraternal group which was organized by the Roman Catholic clergy 105 years ago. It is now operated by lay persons.

Witold Sikorski, an editor for the Polish Daily Zgoda in Chicago, said, "We just couldn't believe it; it just sounded so impossible, so improbable."

"It just sounded wonderful. I can't think of anything nicer happening to Polish people. It sounded really beautiful, it sounded really great."

He said the newspaper will publish a special edition Tuesday on the new pope.

Moan dampens cheering in St. Peter's Square

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — A groan of disappointment rose among the 300,000 in St. Peter's square Monday when the Vatican announced the election of the first non-Italian pope in 455 years — a Pole.

The moan dampened the thunderous applause, cheering and waving of hats into the air that had erupted as Senior Cardinal Deacon Ferlic Felici said "Habemus Papam" (We have a pope) from the central balcony of St. Peter's Basilica.

The crowd, fully expecting another Italian pope, was stunned as well as their hushed in Krakow Archbishop Karol Wojtyla, who took the name of John Paul II in honor of his predecessor, John Paul I, who died just 18 days ago.

But the applause and cheering broke out again and many of the 300,000 people fell down on their knees when John Paul II appeared on the balcony and made a brief speech in almost flawless Italian.

"Even if I am not able to explain myself well in Italian, if I make a mistake, correct me," the new pontiff told the crowd, which by then apparently was resigned to the first foreign pope since Hadrian VI, who died in 1522.

"I was surprised, but let God's will be done," said one woman in the crowd.

The crowd keeping vigil on the thin smokestack atop the Sistine Chapel that would signal the election of a new pope had started out Monday at about 10,000 — mostly unemployed Italians, women, children and tourists.

But when the whiffs of white smoke rose from the smokestack, the crowd quickly swelled to 100,000 and to 300,000 by the time John Paul II and Felici walked onto the central balcony.

The crowd already had been disappointed once in the morning, when black smoke signalled the 111 Cardinals had been unable in their sixth vote to elect a successor to John Paul I.

"I have to leave tomorrow for Israel. It's last chance time," said Art Ure, an architecture student from Peoria, Ill. "Either it's tonight or we miss the chance of a lifetime."

If money is important to you — save some with natural gas.

Depending on where you live, electric rates are 30 to 86% higher than natural gas. And electric rates are predicted to increase more rapidly than gas over the next 15 years. Natural gas supply for the Pacific Northwest has never been better. Considering these two factors — supply and price — it just makes good sense to use gas for home heating and water heating. Idaho can't make it on one energy source. Natural gas for heating and water heating is also a highly efficient use of energy. So if money is important to you, save some with natural gas and be energy-efficient at the same time.

China, Vietnam conflict affects U.S.

By GARETH PORTER
Pacific News Service

The deepening conflict between China and Vietnam poses a new issue for U.S. policy in Asia. Should the United States establish ties with Vietnam at the risk of displeasing China, or should it continue to tilt toward China, with the risk that Vietnam will be pushed further into the Soviet camp?

The issue goes beyond the grand designs of the triangular politics of the United States, China and the Soviet Union. For the path taken by the United States could help lead to either peace and stability among Southeast Asia's communist and non-communist neighbors or to further suspicions that could polarize the region into warring camps.

Already there are two competing views within the Carter administration, one favoring stronger ties to China at the expense of Vietnam, the other favoring an evenhanded stance toward the two states.

Until this summer, any relationship with Vietnam seemed distant, given Hanoi's demand for postwar reconstruction aid as a precondition to normal diplomatic relations. Then on July 11, Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Phan Hien declared that Hanoi was prepared to normalize relations with the United States without preconditions.

Since then, Hanoi has made it clear, both publicly and privately, that it wants to establish diplomatic relations as soon as possible. The Vietnamese are clearly adjusting their diplomacy to the serious threat they feel from China, which they now rank as their primary enemy.

The State Department's Far Eastern Bureau is said to be eager to normalize relations with the Vietnamese at an early date. The primary interest in establishing diplomatic ties with Vietnam has always been to increase U.S. diplomatic influence in Hanoi and offset that of the Soviet Union. Even Henry Kissinger, whose hostility toward the Vietnamese communists was well known, admitted that the Vietnamese wanted relations with the United States to become more independent of the Soviets and the Chinese.

President Carter alluded to the same consideration when he said in a March 1977 news conference that the balance of their friendship with us with their friendship with the Soviet Union and not to be completely dependent upon the Soviet Union.

But National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, the primary proponent in the administration of "playing the China card" — or strengthening U.S.-Chinese ties — reportedly argued that early normalization with Vietnam would complicate U.S. efforts to cement its ties with China.

The Chinese have begun to tell Americans privately that they do not want the United States to enter into diplomatic relations with Vietnam. According to informed sources, they compare Vietnam today with Cuba in 1962 as a security threat because of Soviet military influence in both countries.

Following Brzezinski's Peking trip last May, sources indicated that the White House mood toward relations with Vietnam was negative. Normalization of relations with China, which the administration had planned for 1980, has been moved up to 1979 as a result of the Brzezinski trip. But the problem of getting China to agree to a formula on Taiwan that would be acceptable to Congress is expected to take many months of negotiations and maneuvering. Establishing relations with Vietnam in the meantime would be an affront to China.

So far, the State Department, which favors quickly establishing full diplomatic relations with China, has prevailed on also normalizing relations with Vietnam.

Assistant Secretary Richard Holbrooke, chief of the Far Eastern Bureau, repeated in a mid-June speech that the United States would exchange ambassadors with Hanoi without preconditions, and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance reaffirmed that position in early August.

"Naturally we are going to take China into account," said one State Department official, "but we aren't going to give them a veto."

Although State Department sources say no date has been set for another round of talks with Vietnam, Holbrooke is expected to meet with Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach during the upcoming U.N. General Assembly session. An agreement before 1979 is considered likely, State Department sources said, unless Brzezinski persuades Carter to reverse the current policy at the last minute.

Beyond establishing diplomatic and trade relations, the administration also must define the relationship it wants with Vietnam. Should Hanoi be treated as a bulwark of stability and peace in a Southeast Asia free of great power influence or a threat to regional security, an agent of Soviet influence. Again, Brzezinski and the State Department appear to have very different views.

During his toast at the welcoming banquet in Peking, Brzezinski declared, "We recognize, and share China's resolve to resist the efforts of any nation, which seeks to establish global or regional hegemony."

The Chinese had long been privately warning other countries in the region that Vietnam sought "regional hegemony" in Southeast Asia. State Department officials said Brzezinski's words could only have been interpreted in Peking and Hanoi as agreement with the Chinese view, and that Brzezinski, in effect, made policy in a new area without prior consultation with them.

But a White House source said, Brzezinski does not yet have a position on the Chinese charges that Vietnam is expansionist, explaining that he has been too preoccupied with the Middle East to study the question. Yet Brzezinski apparently did nothing to indicate any disagreement with his Chinese hosts on their views on the matter.

Officials in the State Department's Far Eastern Bureau have their own assessment of Vietnamese policies, which differs sharply from China's. They regard China's fear that Vietnam will offer the Soviets a military base as groundless. The Vietnamese, they believe, are so independent they would never permit the Soviets to have overwhelming influence or a military presence. Nor do the officials see Vietnam as having any intention of sending troops beyond its borders. Since Kissinger left the department, U.S. officials have been privately reassuring Thailand that there is no reason to fear Vietnamese designs on its territory.

As for Chinese allegations of Vietnamese aggression against Cambodia, the officials do not put all the blame on Vietnam, recalling the major Cambodian attacks of April and September 1977, which penetrated six miles into Vietnamese territory. Moreover, they agree with the line that the Cambodian regime of Pol Pot has perpetrated crimes against its own population, and some U.S. officials are not upset at the prospect that Pol Pot might be replaced by a more moderate regime supported by the Vietnamese — provided that the Vietnamese do not march into Phnom Penh.

The way in which the Carter administration characterizes and deals with Vietnam in the future can be expected to have a major impact on Vietnam's relations with non-Communist Southeast Asia. Until 1978 Hanoi expressed suspicion toward the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), which includes all non-Communist states in the region except Burma. But now Vietnam has dropped its opposition against the organizational and the ASEAN proposal for a "zone of peace, freedom and neutrality."

Hanoi is trying to reach agreement with all five members of ASEAN on such a zone, which would symbolize Vietnam with its non-Communist neighbors.

Such an agreement, which the Carter administration has quietly encouraged, would be the logical conclusion of the trend toward accommodation between the two sides that China and Vietnam are rivals for influence, the Chinese are openly opposing any agreement between Vietnam and non-

Communist Southeast Asia, as a Soviet-inspired ploy.

The ASEAN states are hesitating because they are afraid of Soviet influence in the region and because they believe the United States would not support any move that would offend China.

If the United States clearly indicates that it does not agree with the trend toward regional unity with the ASEAN states, the ASEAN states will be more likely to proceed with a regional pact with Vietnam.

But if the United States bows to the trend toward regional unity with the ASEAN states, Vietnam would interpret the rejection as a U.S.-Chinese conspiracy. The result could be a new polarization between states that are anti-Soviet and anti-Vietnamese and those that are pro-Vietnamese. Such a situation appears to be what China wants. But that result would not be in the best interest of stability and peace in Southeast Asia, in which the United States has a major stake.

Buying panic caught them

BOSTON — They'd caught it last year. The sort of buying panic usually seen in bargain basements and one-day sales. It was Margaret and David. This couple could tell them a lot about the self-fulfilling prophecy of the market place: Buy Now or Never. They could tell them a lot about the time when people congratulated themselves on their past-housing investments with the line: "We could never afford our house if we went to buy it now."

And if those historians wanted to know why some people who once cared and petitioned about social causes began to care and petition about property taxes, perhaps they should research the depressing effect of the inflated housing market.

I don't know exactly why the notion of home ownership has such a grasp on the American imagination. Perhaps as descendants of landless immigrants we turn our plots into symbols of stability. But we are told that "ownership" is the American dream, and we believe it. Today the would-be-middle-class children of middle-class parents almost automatically regard real estate as money thrown away, and houses as investments. A house is the middle-class retirement plan, its equity, its legacy, its tax hedge. Its "real" estate.

And yet, more and more often, it's an albatross. David and Margaret have spent six months in their own six rooms. He isn't the only 33-year-old homeowner who refers to himself half-jokingly as "the first generation in my family to be downwardly mobile."

This leap onto the edge of their own property has been almost as stressful as their fear of being left behind. They will tell you that they have traded one anxiety for another. They are today what is called "house poor."

House-poor people they say, spend nearly 50 percent of their after-tax income on their homes. House-poor people become permanent members of the two-worker family. House-poor people work for their land as much as any farmer. Never mind, all that talk about the New Generation; they have mortgaged the present for the future.

But equally important, David says, without pride, "Our house has become our politics." House-poor people, he says, make hard choices. July last week, they voted for "the real estate" as well as for a cash-in program for their children's schools. But if they start to worry about it, worry about the sort of national stringency cycle that comes out of this housing inflation, worry about voting against the money to keep their towns as well as their schools, they feel some what impatient. They can't vote against interest rates and purchase prices and bank loans.

Margaret and David still feel lucky. Just to have made the leap. Every Sunday they look at the real estate market, as if it were the stock market. They tell each other reassuringly that they were "right."

The market is still going up. And they are still holding on.

Politics acceptable here

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Except for Gouverneur Morris, who once defined politics as "that sublime science which embraces for its object the happiness of mankind," it is hard to find anyone who ever said a kind word about politics or politicians. But in Little Rock, Ark., of all places, one finds an organization unique in this respect: Here politics is not a dirty word.

I speak of Little Rock of all places with genuine admiration. In all kinds of indices — teacher salaries, per capita income, levels of education — Arkansas historically ranks toward the bottom. Yet, Arkansas consistently comes up with the highest figures who call the image of one-gallus hillbillies making corn likker while the moon rises. The state has some first-rate institutions of higher education, several well-edited newspapers, and to get to the point: Here in Little Rock it has the Institute of Politics and Government.

There is nothing quite like it anywhere in the country. Founded in 1972 with a Ford Foundation grant, the institute has survived in an area where others have failed. The Winthrop Rockefeller Foundation also has provided financial support, but the institute's success rests on more than money. While it is loosely affiliated with Arkansas College, a small Presbyterian liberal arts school in Batesville, the institute is not overrun by professors of political science or by chiseled pedagogs who write unreadable papers. It is determinedly independent and non-partisan, and it looks upon politics with a practical eye. One of the institute's programs is a six-hour seminar in political involvement. Participants get total immersion in lobbying techniques, fund-raising, political trends, and the uses and misuses of polls. Another popular offering is the journalists' seminar, which meets one Saturday a month over a period of nine months. Dozens of political reporters from state newspapers and radio-TV stations have gone through the course and emerged with a deeper understanding of Arkansas politics and politicians.

But it is the institute's down-to-earth seminars on practical politics that have attracted the most attention. The executive directors of both the Republican and Democratic parties are among the 215 graduates now contributing to the state's political life. Many other graduates are serving in state and local government, managing campaigns, or running for office themselves.

By "practical politics," the directors of the institute mean just that. They are most concerned with the metaphysics of public service; they are concerned with how a candidate wins an election. And in these days of high-powered research, polling, media presentations, "press relations" and professional staff, practical advice to budding politicians has great value. Philanthropists and foundations with a little money to spread around might profitably visit the institute and emulate its example. Here in Little Rock, it is generally believed that the institute's labors have contributed significantly to the level of political activity. November will see a referendum on a constitutional convention. Without the institute's vigorous educational program, the movement toward constitutional reform might never have left the ground. Given the same, intelligent, non-partisan leadership, the same benefits could be expected elsewhere.

Perhaps because Arkansas politics is fired up by such high-octane fuel, the state presents a couple of interesting figures for national attention. One is the 43-year-old governor, David Pryor, who will return to Washington in January as the full-term successor to the late Senator John McClellan. Earlier he served six years in the House. He is regarded as a moderate liberal. Pryor almost certainly will be succeeded as governor by a true flaming liberal, 31-year-old Bill Clinton. He is a George McGovern-Jimmy Carter populist, former Rhodes scholar, and a darling of organized labor.

Heir to the Second District, a lively political life is raised that Ed Bethune, a 42-year-old Searcy lawyer may win a House seat in November. If so, he would be the state's second Republican congressman in 106 years. The first, John Paul Hammerschmidt of Harrison, broke the Democratic hold in 1968 and now is regarded as unsteatable. And who knows? If the Institute of Politics and Government keeps stirring things up, a two-party system may yet arise. In Arkansas. Of all places. © Washington Star Syndicate, Inc.

Don't try to ignore cancer

Cancer, the killer of more Americans than any other single disease, scares most people to death.

Evidence of this fear came over the weekend in a University of Chicago study that found many people suffering cancer symptoms refuse to see a physician.

Suspected cancer victims often refuse to consult a doctor because they apparently think ignoring the symptoms will lessen their chances of death, the study suggested.

Still other cancer patients ignored their symptoms because they distrusted doctors.

These convoluted lines of thinking could kill people.

One of the American Cancer Society's most basic messages about surviving a bout with cancer hammers away at the importance of early detection.

Sometimes a matter of weeks will spell the difference in the fight against cancer. Those who have a cancer warning sign and ignore it simply run a higher risk of dying from the disease.

Distrust of doctors is a lousy reason for ignoring a cancer sign.

Doctors may earn four times more than the average American, may drive fancy cars and even be careless during examinations, all reasons given in the Chicago study for not trusting medical professionals.

But when it comes to determining whether a man or woman has cancer, the doctor can do it more quickly than anyone else.

American fear of cancer, rather than incapacitating the public, should prod us into supporting additional basic research and understanding of the disease.

True, doctors often sound ignorant of cancer's causes and cures. But that isn't necessarily a sign of incompetence. The basic principles of why healthy cells turn cancerous aren't yet completely understood.

Americans shouldn't give up hope or be immobilized by the specter of cancer. They mustn't sit by and watch it consume them as the Chicago study suggests some are prone to do.

Go to the doctor, find out the worst, begin the battle.

Nobel prize for economics to American professor

Herbert Simon receives Nobel award, smile from wife Theodora.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — Professor Herbert A. Simon, the father of organizational research who taught businessmen how to make decisions in a complex world, Monday won the 1978 Nobel Prize for Economics.

Simon, 62, a professor at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh since 1949, said he was "pleased, delighted, astounded" on learning he won the $165,000 award. "One does not go around waiting for lightning to strike," he said from his home in Pittsburgh.

The Swedish Academy of Sciences said Simon received the coveted award "for his pioneering research into the decision-making process within economic organizations." Simon, in Pittsburgh, described his work as "an attempt to modify classical economic theory which assumed they (businessmen) had perfect information, and that they were able to make any complicated computations."

"The work that I did tried to take into account limits on people's ability to compute and deal with incomplete information and sometimes overwhelming information," he said.

Simon was born in Milwaukee in 1916 and earned his doctorate of political science from the University of Chicago in 1943. He was the fourth American to win a Nobel Prize this year in a near U.S. sweep of the awards.

The literature prize went to author Isaac Bashevis Singer and the medicine prize went to Doctors Daniel Nathans and Hamilton Smith of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, who shared it with Dr. Werner Arber of Switzerland.

The Nobel awards for chemistry and physics were being announced Tuesday. The Norwegian Nobel Committee has not set a date yet for the Peace Prize.

In awarding the economics prize to Simon, the Swedish academy said "modern business economics and administrative research are largely based on Simon's ideas." Professor Erik Lundberg called Simon "the father of business organization research."

The academy particularly cited Simon's book "Administrative Behavior" published in 1947 when he was 31.

"He described the company as an adaptive system of physical, personal, and social components that are held together by a network of intercommunications and by the willingness of its members to cooperate and strive towards a common goal."

Simon's influence has been most felt through studies of budgetary planning and control functions within companies, particularly multinational companies, in what is a relatively new area of economic research.

"The great advantage with his ideas is that they correspond so closely to the real situation in companies around the world. Nobody today concerned with decision-making and economic information can work without using Simon's theories," said a member of the academy.

Jarvis: Tax scam
BOSTON (UPI) — Howard Jarvis, the father of Proposition 13, said Monday the $18.7 billion tax cut approved in the last hours of the 96th Congress is a "scam" that will do little in the long run to help the nation's taxpayers.

Jarvis said the bill approved Sunday allows Congress to increase taxes to keep pace with inflation.

"It's a scam," he said. "You're perpetuating the disaster. You don't cure cancer by injecting the patient with more cancer cells. We have to make sure that Congress spends less than inflation."

Jarvis was in Boston to publicize his national tax-cut legislation, a bill he said will be co-sponsored by about 100 members of Congress. The measure would cut the federal budget by $100 billion and federal taxes by $50 billion over the next five years.

Jarvis said the government could afford the spending cut by eliminating waste and many of the federal bureaucracy's 150,000 programs.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A White House party is being planned to celebrate Amy Carter's 12th birthday on Thursday.

The "L.I." General Cloggers from Atlanta, Amy's dancing alma mater, will be in town to entertain at the birthday gathering in the East Garden Thursday afternoon.

First lady Rosalynn Carter will return from a two-day campaign trip to celebrate with her daughter, but she is making all the party arrangements with cake and ice cream for all the guests.

It will be Amy's second birthday celebration in the White House.

Graham on Poland
WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — American Evangelist Billy Graham wound up his 10-day tour through Poland Monday with words of praise for the believers in Poland and Hungary.

"I have never spoken to more packed audiences in churches as in the two East European countries which I have visited," Graham said.

Poland was the second communist country—Graham visited after his trip to Hungary last year, and he said it was in those two countries that he has seen the strongest Christians.

"As time passes by—Christians in these countries will be more and more an asset of their societies," Graham said. "As a consequence, the governments will give more and more recognition to churches and individual Christians."

Graham has toured major cities in Poland, preached in baptist and Roman Catholic churches and also met Kazimierz Kukul, Minister in charge of religious affairs, and deputy Premier Jozef Tejchma.

Honored but cool
BALTIMORE, Md.—(UPI) — A neurobiologist from Johns Hopkins University and two Harvard professors Monday received Columbia University's 1978 Louisa Gross Horwitz Prize for his research in neurobiology, biology and biochemistry.

Dr. Vernon B. Mountcastle, 60, head of the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine physiology department, developed techniques now widely used to study the brain's sensory systems.

Mountcastle said the award was the most distinguished honor he had received in his career, but he said his reaction upon learning he won the award with Drs. David H. Hubel and Torsten Wiesel of Harvard was "pretty low-key."

"I'm a little too old to get excited about things like this," he said.

He said his research showed how information is encoded in the brain and identified "bundles of nerve cells"—in the cerebral cortex that serve as the brain's elementary unit of information processing.

Bing in bronze

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Gonzaga University officials announced Monday they hope to raise $50,000 for a bronze statue of the late Bing Crosby in front of the school's Crosby Library.

The crooner donated an estimated $600,000 for the library several years ago and many of his music and entertainment awards are stored in the Crosbyanna Room there.

Crosby grew up in the neighborhood and attended Gonzaga University before beginning his successful singing and acting career in the 1920s.

School officials said small replicas of the statue will be sold to raise the money.

Cattlemen press for meat import measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cattle industry leaders Monday began a lobbying effort to urge President Carter to sign a beef imports bill which made it through Congress in the final hours of the session.

By voice vote, the Senate passed the bill and sent it to the White House before sunrise Sunday during a marathon 34-hour, 17-minute session before adjournment.

Minutes later, Howard Hjort, the Agriculture Department's chief economist, said the bill as approved was "unacceptable."

Bill McMillan, the industry's chief lobbyist, said Monday, "We have been told that the president will veto it, but very frankly we have tended to discount it."

He added, "When the president doesn't like something in a bill, that (the possibility of a veto) is always used as an argument against passage."

The National Cattlemen's Association

prepared to write a letter.

"We are hopeful that the president will sign it," said a spokesman for the senator.

The measure would change the formula for determining beef imports. Imports rise with domestic production under the current system, therefore adding to supplies and pulling down prices when domestic supplies already are plentiful.

"The proposed change would increase imports during times of low domestic production and decrease them during times of high production, thus stabilizing prices and supplies for both producers and consumers.

As news of the congressional action spread around the world, leaders in Australia and New Zealand, the two largest sources of U.S. beef imports, urged a veto.

New Zealand Prime Minister Robert Muldoon wrote to Carter to remind him that he had received assurances recently from Vice President

Walter Mondale that the president would bear New Zealand interests in mind before signing the bill.

Chairman Geoff Jones of the Australian Meat and Livestock Corp. said he was disappointed with the congressional action.

Replying to the foreign concerns, McMillan said, "That's malarkey 'because in fact we still guaranteed a market.' Under the bill, at least 1.2 billion pounds of beef imports are allowed each year.

Washington (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd predicted Monday a SALT II agreement with the Soviet Union and national health insurance will be among the major issues confronting the 96th Congress when it begins in three months.

Byrd, visibly tired by the marathon, round-the-clock session which ended with adjournment of the 96th Congress after dusk Sunday, said the Senate would be an "interesting arena" in 1979.

He called the just-adjourned Congress, which passed landmark employment and energy legislation and a pre-election tax cut, "really remarkable" and praised members for their "courage" on extremely difficult votes.

Byrd said if the administration signs a SALT II agreement and sends it to the Senate for ratification, "It will undoubtedly be the most important international relations issue of all."

"There probably never has been a treaty of more interest to us ... and to our allies," Byrd told reporters. "It is the kind that lends itself to looking at the grandchildren there on the mantle and wondering what effect it will have on them when they are in their prime."

Byrd predicted the treaty would be "carefully and thoroughly" examined and added the Senate does not want "to make a mistake on it."

Byrd, who said he would seek re-election as Democratic leader in January, listed national health insurance first in domestic legislation and said "it will move more to center stage" next year.

He said Congress would continue to build on the previous energy legislation, probably moving into the area of production, try to combat inflation and keep an eye on unemployment to see if any action is needed.

SALT, health insurance to confront 96th Congress

Byrd said the next Congress would "concentrate more" on welfare reform but conceded "it may be difficult to deal with" reform in the eyes of one person is not reform in the eyes of another."

He said the next Congress — as did the past — would move less in the area of social welfare reform and attempt to help the middle-class more.

Byrd said "there is not much to add" in social welfare and said "it is quite right to turn to incentives to the great middle-class, which has carried the load, the burden, and needs relief."

Byrd helped the heavily Democratic Congress, with a Democrat in the White House for the first time in eight years, overcome its original friction with and suspicion of President Carter to produce major legislation, much of it passed in the final hours.

At the end, Congress found Carter both tough and persuasive.

He vetoed, and Congress upheld, unpopular votes of the public works "pork barrel" bill and funds for a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier.

And he badgered the Senate and House into giving him an energy bill, jobs legislation and a tax cut, all of which cleared on the final day.

But the 96th Congress, refusing to become a rubber stamp for the White House, also handed Carter some stinging defeats.

Court leaves Skokie rally ruling alone

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday let stand rulings that the Constitution's free speech guarantee entitled Nazis to demonstrate in Skokie, Ill., home of many Jewish war survivors.

The court, over the dissents of Justices Harry Blackmun and Byron White, turned down appeals by Skokie officials seeking to reinstate village ordinances that would have barred Nazi rallies in the Chicago suburb.

Lower courts have ruled the ordinances unconstitutional.

Blackmun and White said they were sorry the high court did not choose to review the case, because it provided an opportunity to determine whether there is "no limit" on the exercise of free speech in this kind of emotional situation.

The proposed Nazi rally in a heavily Jewish suburb "just might fall into the same category as one's 'right to cry 'I live in a crowded theater,' " they said in their dissent, and thus be a form of speech the Constitution does not protect.

Medical bills Carter target

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, who suffered a major defeat in Congress on hospital-cost containment, is expected to take direct aim on rising medical bills in his upcoming anti-inflation program, sources said Monday.

"I think you can assume he's disappointed," one White House source said after lawmakers packed their bags and went home without putting the proposed 9 percent federal ceiling — or any ceiling — on hospital inflation.

Other administration sources indicated Carter will use just year's 16 percent hospital inflation as a major attack point in his forthcoming anti-inflation program. He will also urge voluntary wage and price restraints on labor and industry.

The sources indicated Carter is likely to back up his request for a curb on medical costs by strictly enforcing federal regulations and squeezing the government money tap on hospitals that don't comply.

Meanwhile, the American Hospital Association and allied medical groups held a news conference Monday and claimed their voluntary cost control effort cut hospital inflation to 12.8 percent in the first seven months of this year.

"That compares to 15.6 percent during all of 1977," said Michael Bromberg, executive director of the Federation of American Hospitals.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., have challenged the conclusions drawn in the past from the voluntary cost-cutting effort.

Even if the figure is cut to 12 percent for this year, Kennedy has said, it would be far greater than the overall inflation rate.

Not only did Carter and Kennedy fail to get their 9 percent hospital inflation cap, which they said would have saved Americans $50 billion over five years, but the House defeated a bill threatening cost controls if hospitals do not cut inflation 2 percent this year and 2 percent in 1979.

Ethics committee finishes Korean hearing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate ethics committee wound up its Korean influence-buying investigation Monday, releasing a 174-page report recommending no disciplinary action against any current senator for dealings with rice merchant Tongsun

Park. The report, obtained by UPI last week, outlines two violations of campaign reporting laws involving now-deceased senators. In addition, evidence indicating a possible violation of the law by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-

Ind., or his former aide was turned over to the Justice Department to determine whether prosecution is warranted.

The panel said the late Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark., admitted on his death bed that he had taken a $1,000 contribution from Park, a millionaire Washington socialite, and failed to report the contribution. McClellan told investigators he could not recall what he had done with the money.

Also, the committee said the 1972 presidential campaign of the late Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., also received a $5,000 cash contribution from Park that was never reported as required by law. However, Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., stressed that there was no evidence Humphrey ever knew of the illegal gift.

The late Sen. Joseph Montoya, D-N.M., was also singled out for criticism in the report. The staff said Montoya received contributions from Park and had frequent conversations with him involving legislation affecting South Korea. In February 1973, Park also gave Montoya a $2,000-donation for a memorial to his late brother which was identified as being made on behalf of South Korean President Park Chung Hee.

The committee said Montoya "knew or reasonably should have known" at that time that Park "was acting as an agent of the Republic of Korea."

To Russia... with hope

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — Paraplegic Kent Waldrep leaned forward in his wheelchair, the spaces between his fingers serving as storage slots for a sheet of papers he could feel but not grip.

Sotly, Waldrep explained why he was mad at American doctors who told him his condition was hopeless and why he wasn't scared to leave for the Soviet Union Tuesday for the treatment his own government rejected as too dangerous.

"If I can get back the use of my more muscle, that means they are on the right track," he said. "I may be that one in a million they always talk about."

A 1974 collar on the artificial turf at Birmingham, Ala., ended Waldrep's career as a Texas Christian University defensive back.

A bruise to his spinal cord had left him paralyzed from the shoulders down, but he has since regained enough strength and motor track in his arms to hold down a fulltime job as assistant sports information director at TCU.

Waldrep, now 24, will arrive at the Polenov Institute in Leningrad Friday. He may be there as long as four months, depending upon the treatment the Russians choose.

He will be accompanied by his parents. The expense of $10,000 to $15,000, mostly for travel and lodging, is being paid by contributions. Specifically, Waldrep will undergo the injection of enzymes into the area near his damaged fifth cervical vertebrae to dissolve scar tissue.

"That is not available in the United States," he said. "The FDA has not approved the use of the enzymes, so even if the surgery was performed over here, I wouldn't have the benefit of the enzymes."

Waldrep complains that for 50 years American doctors have not placed emphasis on finding a treatment for his kind of paralysis.

"Doctors have treated this thing as a hopeless situation for too long," he said. "They've held people back from reaching their potential because they've given them no incentive."

"People with no incentive have no hope." Doctors at first thought Waldrep would be confined to a bed the rest of his life.

"I wasn't supposed to live through the surgery in the first place," he said. "But I've seen it can make a contribution and I can be a person even if it is in a wheelchair."

He's going to the Soviet Union, he said, "because it's the only hope for me of a chance of some improvement in my paralysis."

Distrust and fear keep cancer from being treated

CHICAGO (UPI) — Many people who have been told they show cancer-like symptoms delay or refuse to see a physician because they distrust the medical profession or are afraid of confronting the disease, a group of researchers says.

A team of University of Chicago researchers, who interviewed people who disregarded cancer warning signs, reported Sunday distrust and fear were two of the most common factors affecting the decisions of cancer victims.

Brink's reward pondered

HAMMOND, Ind. (UPI) — Federal officials say they hope a $25,000 reward offered by the Brink's Armed Car Service for information leading to the arrest of three men in the holdup of one of its trucks will help them solve the crime.

The three men, including one who carried what witnesses described as a Thompson submachine gun, made off with more than $300,000 in the daring, well-executed robbery Friday at a Hammond drive-in theater.

The only flaw in the scheme, according to one investigator, was that the robbers had not figured how much the money would weigh. They had to abandon several sacks of money, mostly coins, when they switched getaway vehicles at the Purdue University Calumet campus because the car's trunk was overloaded.

The men, armed with a shotgun and a pistol in addition to the submachine gun, wore Halloween masks during the robbery. They overpowered a female employee at the theater, then got the drop on the two Brink's guards.

A truck driver spotted them when they transferred the money from the Brink's truck to a blue van stolen two weeks earlier, but they were gone before he could summon help. They fled onto Interstate 80, then doubled back to ditch the van at the campus, about five blocks from the holdup scene.

A student who noticed them transferring the bags of money from the van to a car on the campus parking lot was not able to provide a good description of the three, he said.

FBI agents and Hammond police detectives were talking to others who may have been witnesses and checked out the van for possible clues.

"Right now, our main hope of finding them is that someone will notice one of them spending a lot of money and become suspicious enough to contact police so they can claim the reward," one investigator said.

Another way to go

NEW YORK (UPI) — To get to New York from Boston most people would use a car, bus, train, or plane. Jim Carlin used a "jet ski."

The 32-year-old Saddle Brook, N.J., police officer left Boston Harbor at 7 a.m. Saturday, hoping to reach New York City by 7:30 p.m. that day in his 8-foot-long snowmobile-like machine, dubbed the "Spirit of Saddle Brook."

However, Carlin pulled into Manhattan's West 7th Street Boat Basin Sunday night, ending his 300-mile sea trip from Boston one day late.

Carlin said lides, heavy fog, stiff winds, and the rocky New England Coast all worked to delay him. When the fog became too thick, he spent early Sunday morning with some fishermen on a rocky point south of New Bedford, Mass.

"A lot of the coast line is so rocky, it sticks out like fingers and you have to go zig zagging to avoid the rocks," he said. "I'd be about 1/2 miles out and all of a sudden there would be 20 boulders."

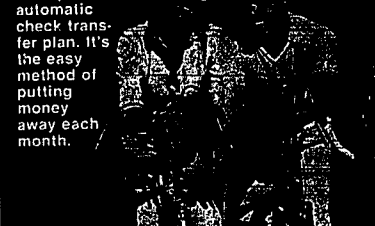

Carlin, clad in a wetsuit and life preserver, also complained that the water was very cold — 42-49 degrees — and a hole in his shoe didn't help matters.

Carlin just summer traveled by jet ski from New York to Florida, making the trip in 6 1/2 hours.

SIRAA backers say

Regional airport will cost less than Joslin

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls city residents would pay three to four times as much to expand Joslin Field as they would to help pay for a new regional airfield, Twin Falls County backers of the new airport heard recently.

County residents living outside the Twin Falls city limits would pay almost the same amount either way, according to Pete Snow, Southern Idaho Regional Airport Authority lawyer.

Snow said city residents would pay almost 4.76 mills, almost $48, annually to operate and improve Joslin Field. The Twin Falls City-County Airport Board is considering a proposed three-phase, $12.5 million expansion program there.

That compares with a maximum 1.5 mills, or $15, city residents would be taxed annually to build the proposed $16 million first phase of SIRAA's $32 million airport in Jerome County, Snow said.

Snow said if voters in both Blaine and Twin Falls counties vote in the Nov. 7 general election to join SIRAA (now made up of Jerome, Lincoln, Gooding, Minidoka and Cassia counties), a new airport could be built for an even lower levy of 1.2 mills. That amounts to four times less than it would cost to use an improved Joslin Field, the lawyer explained.

County residents not living in the City of Twin Falls would pay just 1.7 mills if Joslin Field is improved, Snow calculated, or $17, a difference of just $2 to $3 compared to the cost of building SIRAA's airfield.

Joslin Field improvements do not include the 8 percent per year inflation factor that SIRAA's plan includes. As a result, Snow said he could only compare projected mill levies Twin Falls city and county residents would pay for the first phase of improvements to the existing airport.

The lawyer based his figures on a 20 percent assessed valuation of a $50,000 home, a valuation required under state law by 1982. Work on a new airport isn't likely to begin before then, he said.

In Blaine County's case, if Twin Falls County doesn't join SIRAA and it does, the levy would be 1.7 mills.

Using information from the Twin Falls City-County Airport Board's tentative master plan, Snow said all three improvement phases for Joslin Field would have to be done before they could be comparable to SIRAA's planned first-phase airport.

SIRAA's first phase airport would include a fully-operational airport with a 10,000-foot runway and a new terminal building by 1984 or 1985, Snow said. If construction begins in 1982.

So far, Joslin Field's master plan calls for first-phase work to be done in 1983 and the remainder of the work to be finished by 1988.

Major improvements in that phase include extending the runway and taxiway from 7,200 to 8,750 feet, long enough to serve projected aircraft using the field by then, say J-U-B Engineers Inc., of Twin Falls, the firm doing the master plan.

The last two phases include lengthening the runway to 10,000 feet and building a new terminal building.

Dr. James Taylor, president of the College of Southern Idaho and one of the leading backers of a new airport; told the group of a dozen businessmen an advertising campaign urging voters to join SIRAA will cost $2,500. The money would cover the cost of printing a handout and for ads on radio and television and in newspapers.

The group, which agreed to call itself Twin Falls Citizens for a Better Regional Airport, will open an account in a Twin Falls bank to cover those expenses.

Jack Muldoon also was named by Taylor to schedule a slide-and-sound show assembled by member John Rosholt explaining why they think a new airport is necessary.

Settlement seems near in sugar strike

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

PAUL — Negotiations continued in Boise late Monday in an effort to settle a five-day strike at four Amalgamated Sugar Co. plants in Idaho and Oregon. A settlement of the strike appeared imminent Monday night. Two of the three major points of contention in the strike were settled Sunday.

Monday's negotiations centered on the question of contract length. The company wants a three-year contract while the union seeks a two-year pact and the option to renegotiate the third year's salaries. Amalgamated's Paul plant manager Pete Chertudi and Lois Warr, secretary of the striking Paul AFL-CIO union, Local 282, confirmed Monday the only point of contention left then was contract length.

Striker Felix Botello of Twin Falls implores non-union worker to turn back from Paul sugar plant Monday

Approximately 1,500 workers at three sugar plants in Idaho and one in Oregon are idled by the first strike in the company's history.

Whether or not the negotiations in Boise are successful, sugar beet processing was scheduled to begin this morning at the Amalgamated Sugar Co. plant in Paul.

Chertudi and Mrs. Warr said Amalgamated has accepted a seniority clause sought by the union giving senior union members the edge in promotions, if they meet qualifications.

The sugar firm originally wanted to hire outside plant ranks to fill vacancies.

Chertudi and Mrs. Warr said wages also have been agreed upon, although neither knew exactly what the settlement was.

Chertudi said he believes the proposed new contract exceeds the 7.5 percent pay hike the company offered with a three-year contract.

At dawn Monday, Chertudi brought in the first shift of 80 non-union workers to get the Paul plant operating.

He said it will still take a few days before the plant reaches its top output of 6,400 tons of sugar beets daily.

Some 90 company supervisory personnel will be overseeing operations until the strike ends, Chertudi said.

The Paul plant will be the second Amalgamated Sugar plant to begin processing. The firm's Nampa plant opened last week, leaving only plants in Twin Falls and Nyssa, Ore., closed.

Some 25 to 30 of the new workers were bused without incident through 24 pickets outside the plant about 8 a.m. Monday. The remainder of the new employees were to begin work at 8 p.m. Monday night.

They will be paid regular employee wages commensurate with the position they fill, Chertudi said, and will be absorbed into the plant's 630-worker staff when the strike is settled.

O'Leary worth $900,000 and called 'bargain'

By DOUG TULLIS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The old O'Leary Junior High school in downtown Twin Falls has been appraised at a value of $900,000.

And Twin Falls County Commissioner Merl Leonard said Monday he considers a price of $900,000 to $1 million for the school a bargain.

The county is interested in buying the soon-to-be-vacated school for a county office expansion.

But the county will conduct its own appraisals of the buildings to make sure the price is fair, Leonard said.

Next week, county commissioners will meet with school administrators to discuss the possible purchase of the old school.

This week, the county will get three appraisals of the school's worth and draft an offer to the county for the building and the downtown land on Shoshone Street it occupies.

Twin Falls school district superintendent James Sawin says the district has already gathered two appraisals of the school's value, one coming in at $900,000 and the other $771,000.

If the county purchases O'Leary, the building will be inspected to see what the structural supports look like and then a decision will be made on how the school should be modified for county offices, county officials have said.

"We are definitely not interested in tearing it down," Leonard said.

He added the one thing the Twin Falls County Courthouse area needs is more parking space and the O'Leary school property would provide that.

"We may have an architect look at it and determine if we can use other areas besides the back for parking."

The main thing, he said, was that county would not rush into anything without taking a long and involved look at it.

Leonard said the county may not be able to use all of the space in the old school at the present time but that the future would be very well taken care of and at a savings for the taxpayers.

If the county's appraisals are close to those of already given the school board, negotiations could begin for a purchase price.

Leonard said the exact means of paying the cost of the building would also have to be negotiated but it would not be a serious drawback to buying the school.

The sale of the Junior High is the only issue to be discussed by the school board at its meeting Oct. 24.

LID project enlarged, vote postponed

By JEFF SHIER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council Monday night added three blocks and $75,000 worth of sewer to the controversial local improvement district.

Although opponents of the LID continue to shower the council with threats and pleas to stop the LID, the council enlarged the LID by adding sewers for Wendell Street from Crestview Drive to Falls Avenue East, for Caswell Avenue from Sparks Street nearly to Washington Street, and for Sparks Street from Robbins Avenue to Wirsching Avenue.

The council explained that the additions were made because people in the affected areas requested that the sewer be built as part of the LID.

However, LID engineer Dale Riedesel, of JUB Engineers, told the council he recently discovered the Wendell Street sewer has to be built to provide a connector line from the main sewer line to sewers already included in the LID for residents of Robbins, Lawrence and Falls Avenues.

On that basis, he urged the council to include the Wendell Street sewer in the LID even though the majority of residents on Wendell Street have not requested the sewer.

Riedesel also said he is not sure a majority of people on Sparks and Caswell Avenues want to pay for sewers through the LID, but he said some requests have been received, and it may be a majority.

Though the council did not hesitate in enlarging the LID, it balked at immediately passing the ordinance creating the LID.

The council decided it will not vote on the measure until its next meeting Nov. 6.

The council also added $4,200 to the cost of street reconstruction in the LID, because Riedesel informed the council street reconstruction on Applewood Drive will cost $4,200 more than originally anticipated because the present street cannot be salvaged.

Bliss man killed on hunting trip

MOUNTAIN HOME — A Bliss resident, confused for a deer, was fatally shot by his cousin during an hunting accident Sunday.

The shooting was the first hunting fatality in Idaho during the 1978 season.

Elmore County Deputy Larry Olson said Monday James W. Hoagland, 28, died of a gunshot wound inflicted while he was hunting near Feather-ville.

Olson said there probably won't be any charges filed in the death since Hoagland apparently was mistaken for a deer and was fatally shot during a family hunting trip.

The incident occurred near the Line Creek drainage bordering Camas County.

Stabbing victims remain silent

TWIN FALLS — No arrests are likely to be made in the stabbing of two brothers from Paul in the La Barrilla Bar west of Twin Falls Sunday.

The two victims, Jose and Juan Juarez, told Twin Falls County sheriff's investigators they did not know who stabbed them during a bottle-throwing fight.

The sheriff said the men said they would not sign a complaint if officers found out the assailant's identity.

Jose, 18, was stabbed in the chest and hand and was listed in fair condition Monday night at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Juan, age unknown, was treated and released

Sunday night from MVMH for a stab wound in the right shoulder.

"A lot of information was floating around at the scene, but after officers got out of the hospital, nobody knows nothing," Cordor said. "We will pursue the investigation if the people who were injured want to."

Cordor said of the closed-mouth reaction by participants and witnesses: "That is typical of Mexican people. They very seldom will go (forward with) a complaint."

The sheriff said the report showed the fight started over one of the subjects involved asking the sister of a witness to dance.

Suits filed over wreck, circus accident

TWIN FALLS — Two large lawsuits totaling $350,000 have been filed in 5th District Court.

One involves a single-vehicle wreck, the second concerns the collapse of bleachers during a circus performance.

Manuel Govia Jr. filed a $275,000 lawsuit against Cora L. Bodensstab in 5th District Court for injuries the court record said occurred while he was a passenger in her car Aug. 16.

In the second 5th District Court suit, John R. and Margaret Livingston are asking $75,000 for their daughter, Linda Darlene Livingston, 17, who was injured when a section of bleachers she was in collapsed during an Aug. 29 performance of Circus Vargas.

Govia is asking medical damages and legal costs, too. He claimed he was a passenger in a car Mrs.

Bodensstab was driving south on U.S. 93 about 11 p.m. Aug. 16 a mile north of Jackpot, Nev.

He said he had unsuccessfully "requested and demanded" the driver either let him drive or let him out of the vehicle prior to her losing control of the vehicle and sailing 99 feet through the air off an embankment after it hit the highway.

Govia suffered a broken vertebra, ankle and eye socket and permanent facial scars.

The Livingstons said their daughter suffered a broken nose and rib, neck and back injuries when the bleacher she was sitting on collapsed onto 10 feet of hard-packed dirt. She was hit on the shoulders, head and back by falling boards from the bleachers.

The couple also is seeking to recover medical and legal costs.

Kress on dam act

FIRTH, Idaho (UPI) — Congressional approval of the Dam Safety Act is "a tremendous victory for the American Falls irrigators and a great step forward in saving Idaho's water from diversion schemes," Democratic congressional candidate Stan Kress said today.

The bill provides for reimbursement to irrigators for their share in replacement of the old American Falls dam and continuation of a 10-year moratorium to study water diversion from Idaho.

Kress questioned why his opponent, Republican Rep. George Hansen, was unable to get those provisions included in the bill that originally passed the House.

"It was only through efforts in the Senate that the necessary amendments were made, and then agreed to by the House of Representatives."

"I am sure that the bill stands an excellent chance of approval by the President, and George Hansen's stories that the bill would be bitterly opposed by the administration were just so much hot air to cover up his ineffectiveness in the House," Kress said.

Hansen on beef bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bill to limit the amount of foreign beef and livestock imported into the United States passed the House during Congress' adjournment rush, Rep. George Hansen said today.

Hansen, who voted for the limitations, said the legislation has the potential for offering a big boost to the depressed U.S. beef industry.

It amends the Meat Import Act of 1964 to provide a countercyclical adjustment formula that would be applied to base amount of imported meat so that the total amount is constricted during periods of high domestic beef production.

Truby quotes Nader

PAYETTE, Idaho (UPI) — Democratic congressional candidate Roy Truby quoted consumer activist Ralph Nader Monday in criticizing his election opponent, Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho.

"According to Ralph Nader's 'Congress Watch,' 20 ultraconservative congressmen who constantly harp on federal spending — including Steve Symms — don't apply their philosophy to big business," Truby said.

"When it comes to school lunches for children or funds to train our student nurses, my opponent is a conservative," Truby said. "But when it comes to federal funds to help big business, it's another story."

Truby said Symms consistently votes for corporate welfare and against health care and "the needs of our children."

McClure on taxes

EMMETT, Idaho (UPI) — Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said the tax bill passed by Congress Sunday was deceiving.

"You may hear that Congress has cut taxes, but don't believe it," McClure said Monday in a campaign speech. "What they have done is cut income taxes slightly and increased social security taxes to such a degree that nearly all taxpayers will be paying even more to government next year."

McClure, who missed voting on the bill because he was in the middle of a three-week campaign trip through Idaho, said the bill was the work of "President Carter and the Democratic Congress."

"It's like guessing what shell the pea is under at the carnival," McClure said. "The taxpayer now has to guess where the tax increase is hidden."

Evans likes Carter

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans said Monday the compromise Public Works appropriation approved by Congress was far superior to the bill vetoed last week by President Carter.

Evans wired his thanks to President Carter and congressional leaders, saying the new bill fully funds Idaho projects and saves the nation's taxpayers over $1 billion.

The bill "is far superior to the bill the President vetoed nearly two weeks ago, superior because the projects now in the legislation are all vital to the public good and at the same time reflect the public's desire to hold down federal spending," the governor said.

Evans said the new bill provides two victories for the people of Idaho — "a victory for our essential public works projects in the state and a victory for the taxpayers already overburdened by excessive taxes."

Migrant children hop from school to school

BOISE (UPI) — Many migrant school children spend 50 percent of their time moving from one school district to another which creates "an almost impossible deficiency," an Illinois migrant education leader said today.

More than 100 teachers and resource personnel from throughout Idaho met in Boise to discuss this and other problems unique to migrant students at a workshop sponsored by the State Department of Education.

Prevention of School Failure for Migrant Students, Dr. Lucille Werner, Peotone, Ill., told participants that more emphasis must be given to uniform methods.

"By the time a migrant child adjusts to a school's particular approach to reading, writing and mathematics he or she often moves on to another school district with a different style," she said.

"So often by the time a student reaches the eighth grade he is three years behind in the basic skills. Then to cope with the requirements of high school classes is almost impossible." She said one answer to the problem is more efficient use of the data available on migrant children that is not being effectively disseminated to areas with migrant students.

"Our data retrieval system is a tremendous vehicle offering great opportunity but it isn't being fully utilized," he said. "It's possible for a receiving school district to get a child's entire school record from his previous site within a few days. This is a big advantage if used."

CSI pours $10,000 more down hot water well

By VALERIE ROBINETT
Times-news writer

TWIN FALLS — Additional funding of up to $10,000 to study conversion of the College of Southern Idaho's present heating system to geothermal energy was approved Monday.

CSI president James Taylor asked the board of trustees to approve the additional funds for consulting engineers to determine whether the present heat pump system can be used in conjunction with the hot water drillers are hoping to reach by early November.

So far, drilling crews have reached a depth of 1000 feet and discovered water temperatures of 96 degrees. At a depth of 1,300 to 1,500 feet the college hopes well drillers will find water of 110 to 120 degrees — hot enough to use in heating the CSI campus. Dr. Taylor also mentioned the funds for the study may be incorporated to see if pipe can be put under the campus walkways to melt snow and ice in the winter.

Another item of discussion was funding for a new vocational-technical building on campus?

Dr. Taylor stated funding for the building is now second on the state building fund after a new state penitentiary.

As Twin Falls is in a national growth center, a possible $1.2 million may be available from the federal government, with $300,000 coming from state funds. However, Dr. Taylor mentioned funding may depend on the outcome of the governor's race in November.

If built, a new vo-tech building on campus would house classes for recreational vehicles and farm mechanics, and also vo-tech classes currently being held in the Shields Building.

The building on Kimberly Road would be kept for other services by CSI, if the new vo-tech building is constructed.

The board also approved the appointment of Phil Sampson as area planner for the senior citizen program. Sampson was chosen out of five applicants by the Senior Citizens board and his nomination was submitted for approval.

A bid for a new computer students in math and other related departments can use was also approved by the board in their regular business.

Nahls fell out of his car when it came to a stop, Goetz said. Then the gunman jumped out of the passenger door and fled across some railroad tracks into a wooded area.

When the deputy at the scene aimed his gun at the fleeing suspect, Goetz said, Nahls' car — which was in reverse — backed into the sheriff's vehicle and threw the deputy's aim off as he fired.

Nahls was taken by ambulance to the hospital as officers attempted to track the suspect. Several northern Idaho law enforcement agencies were looking for the gunman Monday.

North Idaho police can't find suspect

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Northern Idaho law enforcement officers lost track of a man they suspect was responsible for the early Sunday shooting of a St. Maries, Idaho man.

Latah County Sheriff Mike Goetz said Monday officers were looking for a stockily built, Mexican-American, hitchhiker who George Nahls, 27, said shot him after he picked him up on Idaho Highway 8 near Bovill, Idaho.

Deputies used bloodhounds to track the suspect for a short distance, Goetz said.

Talkington headline corrected

A headline Oct. 8 on a letter to the editor concerning an accident involving Twin Falls city councilmen incorrectly read, "Councilman violated law."

The letter beneath the headline, while discussing councilman Talkington's pedestrian-car accident, dealt with the need for all people to obey traffic laws and did not claim Talkington violated the law.

The Times-News regrets the headline error.

Maxine Bell of Jerome represents farm women on Idaho's Governor's Commission on Women's Programs

Dianne Hagaman/Times-News

Maxine Bell to represent farm women

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

JEROME — What is the life of a farm woman like?

To Maxine Bell, it is an education in bookkeeping, running a tractor and planning finances.

"We've been liberated for so long," Mrs. Bell declares. "Since the first woman crawled out of a covered wagon and picked up a hoe, we've been in business."

Mrs. Bell's intimate knowledge of the lives and concerns of farm women made her a logical choice to represent them on the Governor's Commission on Women's Programs, a 35-member board of Idaho women.

Mrs. Bell said she was named to the commission this year not only because she's the state women's chairman of the Idaho Farm Federation, but because she knows the ins and outs of farming from working alongside of her husband in the bean fields.

"I don't know of many farmers who make decisions without consulting their wives," she said. "We plan together and decide how to spend the money."

She also does some tractor work. When interviewed, she was getting ready to drive a truckload of Great Northern beans to the elevator.

"The rural women of Idaho are ahead in terms of taking care of themselves," she said. "They know what's going on in their families and in their business," she said.

As a result, "They're much farther ahead when it comes to estate planning and budgeting," she said.

"My husband is in the house four times a day reporting his problems and frustrations," she explained. "I could have told you all summer long our crops were poor."

What's the value of being an insider in farm workings?

"It should make me a wiser planner," she replied.

Maxine Bell hasn't always been on top of business matters. A librarian by profession, when first elected women's chairman, she understood little of the financial farm talk being exchanged around her.

"Rather than sit there and be giddy and foolish, I listened. When I didn't understand something, I just asked," she said.

Mrs. Bell is politically active in the Farm Federation, writing letters to congressmen, getting out the vote when farm issues come up and canvassing. She has also helped with consumer education.

"There are times the men are too busy to tell the consumer the food facts," she said.

At those times, Maxine Bell stepped in and did the telling.

Nine months of the year she leaves the fields and works as a librarian at the junior high school in Jerome. She took the job there to be close by her son who found he had multiple sclerosis while teaching sixth grade.

Dear Abby

Wife feels betrayed because of hubby's lies

By ALI GAIL VAN BUREN

Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.
DEAR ABBY: "DON'T EVER LIE TO ME — EVER! NOT UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES!" How many times I've heard my husband admonish our children thusly! Yet, he lies to me constantly. And when's trapped, he admits it, but he doesn't view his lying as the loathsome act he criticizes in our children.

I am so betrayed, and I've told him so. But he excuses himself by insisting it's much easier to lie to me than to tell the truth. (He says, "It causes less confusion that way.") His lying is destroying the respect I once held for him. Please help me.

CRUMBLING

DEAR CRUMBLING: I can't prevent your husband from lying — and neither can you. But if you better understood the anatomy of a lie, perhaps your anger, disappointment and hurt would be greatly reduced. A liar simply jacks guts to tell the truth. Your husband's problem is greater than yours. Encourage him to get professional help to develop maturity, self-esteem and confidence. Then he won't feel the need to lie.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 25 and never had a real boyfriend. Oh, I've had some dates, but they never developed into anything serious. Your husband's problem is greater than yours. Encourage him to get professional help to develop maturity, self-esteem and confidence. Then he won't feel the need to lie.

Whenever a guy needs to go into housekeeping. My mother even made me a wedding dress. When a guy comes over, Mom shows him my hope chest, then she tells him what a wonderful cook and housekeeper I am. She even tells him what a wonderful mother I would make. Then I never see the guy again. Abby, I've kept the same job for seven years, and my friends tell me I'm pretty and have a nice personality. So what's wrong with me?

WANTS A HUSBAND

DEAR WANTS: Your mother. She means well, but she's frightening the men away. Ask her to please confine her remarks to the weather when a young man is around. And if she can't — or won't — I see little hope of your using the contents of your hope chest until you leave your mother's bed and board. Think about it.

DEAR ABBY: I know that etiquette demands that all personal letters and social notes be hand-written, and it is considered bad manners to use a typewriter for such things, but here is my plight. I suffer from arthritis in the fingers of both hands, and it is extremely difficult for me to use a pen. However, I am able to use a typewriter, so I have been typing all my personal correspondence.

Is it necessary for me to apologize and explain that I know better, but because of my arthritis I beg to be excused?

KNOTTED KNUCKLES

DEAR KNOTTED: No. Regardless of what the etiquette books say, circumstances and common sense should be your guide.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Health

Contradictory advice confuses patient

Dear Dr. Lamb,

I am a 72-year-old man and I need your advice badly. I'm in apparent good health, and I wasn't taking any medications.

I saw a doctor in Los Angeles, and a test showed that my uric-acid level was 8.9. He recommended two Zyliprim tablets a day which reduced the uric-acid level to 7.

While I was in London I consulted an outstanding doctor, and he explained when he learned I was taking Zyliprim. He informed me that should stop the Zyliprim as it would ruin my kidneys' ability to excrete uric acid.

When I went back to Los Angeles I went to a very prestigious hospital and saw their top man and after a four-day fast my blood uric acid went to 4.5. He told me I didn't need to take anything. I inquired about 8.9 being dangerous to the kidneys and vessels, and he poo-pooed that, but he said that the British doctor was absolutely wrong about Zyliprim.

Now I'm not sure what to do and would really appreciate your suggestions. I have never had an attack of gout.

Dear Reader, It makes a difference what kind of test was done and the level of uric acid will fluctuate. So will the reliability of laboratory tests. That's why good doctors don't rely simply on laboratory tests but on the total picture of the patient. I would suspect that your uric-acid levels were measured by a device called the Auto Analyser. This technique gives a reading about one unit (milligram) higher than those by previous techniques. We used to say that 7 was the upper limit of normal but with the Auto-Analyser technique the 8.0 value should be the upper limit of normal.

What does all this mean? Well, in the first place you are 72 and have never had an attack of gout and your reading on a careful repeat test at Los Angeles was actually on the low side. Before you take any medicines for any length of time it would be worthwhile to have enough repeated tests done in a reliable way to find out whether you even really have a significantly elevated uric-acid level or not.

You might be interested to know that with using the Auto Analyser values an individual with the level of 8 or less is unlikely to develop gout. For individuals who have 9.0 using the Auto Analyser method, about one-third may develop gout. If your value happened to be 10 and you were a male then you would be almost certain to develop gout. So you see even your level of 8.9 means that you have two chances out of three of never developing gout.

To give you more information about gout I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-3, Gout, Uric Acid. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1561, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Zyliprim does not damage the kidneys in any way. Since you have taken it without having any side effects from it, it seems obvious that you would tolerate the medicine without difficulty.

My suggestion would be to forget about the medicine for the moment and have several repeat tests under reliable circumstances to establish once and for all what your real uric-acid level is before anyone decides whether or not you need to continue or take any medicines to control your uric-acid levels. Extravagance of big time show business irks producer

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Movies and television spill more money in the course of a production than any other business. Except for the U.S. government, of course, manage to throw away in a decade, at least that's the way producer Ed Friendly sees it.

Friendly is a conservationist whose blood boils at the extravagance in big time show business. Most particularly is he upset about $40,000 worth of sets wasted for his $1 million production of the nine-part miniseries "Backstairs at the White House" scheduled to be televised next January by NBC.

Friendly, who produced TV's "Laugh-In" and originated "Little House on the Prairie" among other credits, is a meticulous man who insisted that three floors of the White House be precisely duplicated for his latest project.

The White House curator turned over detailed plans of the family floor, the ground floor and the servants and basement quarters. Pictures of the various rooms were also employed for authenticity.

"Backstairs at the White House" — based on the book by Lillian Rogers Parks and Frances Spatz Leighton — involves eight administrations from William Howard Taft to Dwight D. Eisenhower. Each President's wife redecorated the rooms, necessitating eight completely different set decorations for the TV movie.

"We used 28,000 square feet on two stages at Goldwyn Studios," Friendly said. "And we spent $400,000 and 4½ months building those sets from the ground up. We used all new lumber."

"Six pits were used to accommodate staircases coming up to and leading out of the various floors. We were very proud of the minute detail involved, including soft mahogany doors and fixtures. We were in production for six weeks with 24 stars. When we finished shooting, I tried to sell, give away or otherwise dispose of the sets, maybe the most expensive ever built for TV. But not one cent was recoverable."

"It finally was bulldozed down and hauled off for landfill." Friendly, normally a relaxed and easy-going man, gritted his teeth in frustration.

He offered to give the White House flats — the theatrical sets for interior walls — to all the major studios and was turned down. He asked the drama departments at USC and UCLA if they would take them. No, thanks.

Friendly suggested that Goldwyn Studios store them for future use and was told there was no space for them.

"I heard that David Suskind was going to produce 'Blind Ambition' from the John Dean book," Friendly said. "Most of the project takes place in the White House, so I asked them if they'd like to use our sets."

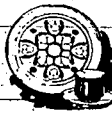

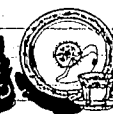

"Suskind's art director looked at them and said he wanted to build his own."

"It's an indictment of our industry," Friendly said. "I think it is criminal that our industry survives by artificially creating work at the expense of our natural resources."

"The major studios have their own mills, carpenters and teamsters to do construction work. Neither the studios nor the unions have the slightest interest in ecology. They just want to keep people working and charge producers 20 to 30 percent overhead to build new sets."

Fumbly Dodgers happy to be coming home

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — If the Los Angeles Dodgers can't salvage the World Series from the New York Yankees by winning the final two games at Dodger Stadium, the proper epitaph for their tombstone should read: "They died with their boots."

After winning the first two games at Dodger Stadium, the Dodgers lost three in a row to the defending world champions at Yankee Stadium and, in each loss, it was shoddy defense which led to defeat.

Because of the Dodgers' stone-faced defense, the Yankees can now wrap up their second straight world championship tonight when they send right-hander Jim "Catfish" Hunter to the mound against right-hander Don Sutton.

Both Hunter and Sutton will be pitching for the second time in the series. Hunter was the losing pitcher in the second game, 4-3, when he was tagged for seven hits and four runs in six innings. Sutton lost the third game, 5-1, to Ron Guidry.

Sutton should have fared better, however. He was victimized by some poor defensive play — a problem which has become the Dodgers' Achilles heel.

"I don't know what it is," said Dodgers' Manager Tom Lasorda when asked to explain what's wrong with his defense. "I have no idea."

The Dodgers just aren't making the basic plays you have to make to win a world championship. In Sutton's loss last Friday night, the infield failed to turn over two routine double plays which gave the Yankees an "extra" out and eventually resulted in a couple of runs.

In Saturday's game, shortstop Bill Russell made a critical throwing error that enabled the Yankees to score a run and get back in the game. And on Sunday the club came apart like a cheap watch with three errors, two passed balls and a wild pitch — all of which contributed to a 12-2 shellacking.

"I felt we played two pretty decent ball games here," said third baseman Ron Cey, "but we just didn't do anything right in New York. There's no way to explain it. We just played bad. You just have to shrug it off."

As far as Lasorda is concerned, the key play which has turned the Series in favor of the Yankees was the controversial throwing error by Russell in the sixth inning of Saturday's game. With the Dodgers leading 3-1 and the Yankees having runners on first and second and one out, Russell dropped Lou Pinella's line drive, then stepped on second for a force out and threw to third what appeared to be an easy double play.

However, the relay threw to first hit Reggie Jackson and Thorman Munson scored. The Dodgers argued that Jackson deliberately got in the way of the ball and that it should have been ruled a double play. First base umpire Frank Pulli saw it differently and ruled that Jackson had not intentionally interfered.

"I saw the play over and over again and I think that Frank Pulli is an outstanding umpire and a great guy," said Lasorda. "It's just unfortunate that he saw the way he did. That hurt us very, very badly."

"The more I see of the play on instant replay, the more I'm convinced I made the right call," argued Pulli.

Dodger hopes rest with Don Sutton in sixth game

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — In the Los Angeles Dodgers' glory days of the mid 1960s, any time the team was in a jam Manager Walter Alton would hand the ball to Sandy Kousser.

Now they give it to Don Sutton.

Sutton, the club's best "money" pitcher in recent years, has been named to hurl the sixth game of the World Series against the New York Yankees tonight and his 33-year-old right arm is all that separates the Dodgers from being eliminated.

"I don't know if it's the biggest game in my career, but it's certainly the biggest of this season," said Sutton. "I'd rather be in the center of the diamond watching the game. There's nothing I can do to help win the game if I'm not in it."

Sutton, who until this season had won five straight post-season games, started the third game of the Series in New York last Friday night and lost to Ron Guidry, 5-1. However, he pitched well for five innings and might have fared better had not third baseman Graig Nettles turned thief and robbed the Dodgers of at least four runs with his magical glove.

"I had good stuff," Sutton said of his performance Friday night. "I would have the same stuff, location and control in 40 starts and take my chances. I think if you talk to the Yankee hitters they will tell you they didn't have good pitches to hit — and that really is the only phase of the game I can control."

Although he has been used to four days rest between starts for most of the season, Sutton will be going with three days rest for the second time in the Series. Manager Tom Lasorda had a decision to make between Sutton and left-hander Doug Rau and chose the curly-haired right-hander because of his reputation for coming through in the tight spots.

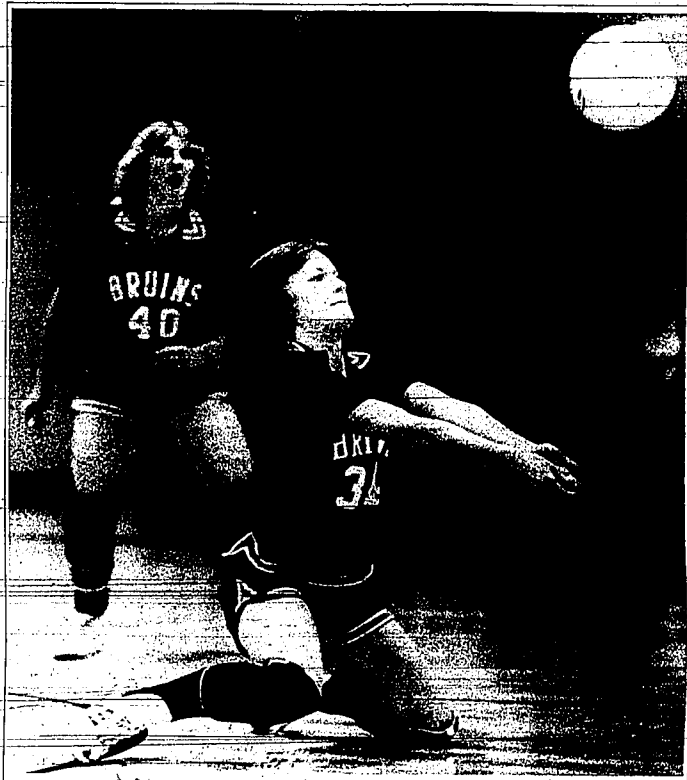

"I pitched twice this year on the fourth day and we won both times," said Sutton. "I've had five quality starts. I would probably pitch every fourth day the whole season. It won't be a problem."

Although he won only 15 games this season, Sutton believes he is a better pitcher now than he was three years ago when he won 20 games for the only time in his career.

"I don't throw as hard now, but I have a better idea of what I'm doing," he said. "There are only a few (Bob Welch and Ron Guidry) around. The key to pitching is to change speeds — and keep the hitter off balance."

Since Sutton cannot overpower batters the way he used to, he will have to rely on his defense, which has not exactly been a thing of beauty the past three games. However, Sutton has confidence the defense will support him.

"All I can say is they are the same guys who helped me get my 21 wins in 1976," said Sutton. "They are the same group that got me in the World Series the last two years and three of the last five."

Lasorda doesn't take criticism sitting down

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Los Angeles Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda, back on his home turf, came lashing out like a "street fighter" Monday, defending his beleaguered players from the criticism heaped upon them in the wake of three straight World Series losses in New York.

"I don't understand why everyone says we have to get over these mental things about playing the Yankees," said Lasorda with a touch of anger to his voice. "We played two great games against the Yankees right here in our ballpark and we could have scored five or six more runs in the third game as well as we did not for some great plays by (Graig) Nettles. Plus, we were leading the fourth game until that play when the ball hit Reggie Jackson."

"There's no mental block and we'll prove it Tuesday, because we're going to win Tuesday."

Lasorda was especially rankled over a particular newspaper story that suggested his infielders might be better suited to be designated hitters because of the preponderance of errors they committed in the three losses at Yankee Stadium.

"These guys are the guys who got us here over 162 games and then the playoffs," said Lasorda. "They didn't deserve to be criticized as designated hitters. That's just it, they have a couple of bad games and some guy writes this stuff. I don't blame 'em for being anxious."

Lasorda did admit some disappointment in the prospect of designated hitters have given him. While Reggie Jackson is hitting .444 with six RBIs as the Yankees' DH, the Dodger DH combo of Lee-Lacy and Rick Monday is hitting under .200.

"I'm disappointed, yes, in our designated hitters," said Lasorda. "I was hoping Lacy would hit more. During the season he was our best hitter coming off the bench — he hit five pinch hit homers."

"I'd say the DH has proved to be advantageous to the Yankees because without it, either Jackson, Lou Pinella or Roy White would have to sit and all of them have hit well in this series."

Morton lifts Broncos

DENVER (UPI) — Veteran quarterback Craig Morton cost the role of a rallet man for the first time this season, threw one touchdown pass and helped engineer another second-half score Monday night to lead the Denver Broncos to a 16-7 triumph over the Chicago Bears.

Morton, backed in favor of third-year pro Craig Penrose, was summoned from the sidelines after Penrose suffered a minor shoulder separation in the closing minutes of the first half. Penrose completed 10 of 11 passes for 74 yards before he was removed.

The victory, before more than 75,000 enthusiastic, orange-clad fans, improved Denver's record to 5-2, keeping the Broncos tied with Oakland for first place in the AFC West. The Bears, 3-4, dropped their fourth straight.

Jon Keyworth scored on a 4-yard run in the opening minutes of the final period following a fake field-goal attempt. Steve Foley, who was leading for kicker Jim Turner, suddenly jumped up and rolled 14 yards down the left sideline to the Chicago 14.

The Broncos, who have outscored their opponents in the fourth quarter in every game except last week's shutout loss to San Diego, added another TD on a 9-yard pass from Morton to Otis Armstrong 6:49 into the final period. Morton completed 8 of 13 for 109 yards off the bench.

Morton set up Denver's first touchdown by hitting Riley Odums with a 6-yard pass, moving Denver to Chicago's 4-yard line. On the next play, Keyworth dashed around the left side into the end zone to put the Broncos ahead 10-7.

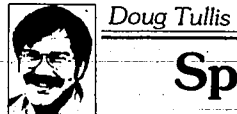

The Bears' lone touchdown came on a 38-yard TD pass from Bob Avellino, to running back Roland Harper early in the third period. Harper caught the ball at the 35 and bulled into the end zone with Bronco defenders draped over him.

Denver grabbed a 3-0 halftime lead on Turner's 45-yard field goal, the 23rd three-pointer of his career. The kick also moved Turner into second place, behind George Blanda, among all NFL field goal kickers.

The Bears failed to score during the first half despite a size-gaining, 76-yard run by Walter Payton, who was tackled at the 13. The Bears then moved to the 2-yard line, where Foley intercepted Harper's attempted scoring pass in the end zone for a touchback. Harper, after a pitchout from Avellino, was attempting to hit tight end Mike Cobb.

Payton, who led the NFL in rushing last season, finished with 157 yards on 22 carries.

Penrose, in his first start of the season, engineered Denver's first scoring drive — hitting Rick Upchurch with passes of 11 and 13 yards. Bob Lytle, sidelined for three games with a leg injury, showed little ill effects with bursts up the middle of 13 and 8 yards.

Spiraling inflation hits high school athletics

MAGIC VALLEY — Sports and other extra curricular activities are considered to be an integral part of the educational system.

Paying for that part of the system has been a major concern of educators, parents, athletes and coaches.

Parents are concerned their taxes are being spent to pay for football uniforms or unnecessary out of town travel.

Teachers become upset when they see an athletic team with new equipment or uniforms, or if they can't even talk the district into buying new textbooks for the year.

Coaches become concerned that they can't provide their teams with proper equipment.

In the Magic Valley, these concerns can sometimes drive a wedge between academics and athletics.

The main issue, as with most publicly sponsored programs, is money.

It costs money to pay teachers, build schools, buy books, pay coaches' salaries, and buy uniforms and equipment.

Tax money, for the most part, contributes little to athletic programs, but the problem, according to area athletic directors and school administrators, is that people don't really know where the money comes from or how it is used.

"We get very little from the district," Minico High School Athletic Director Mike Erling said. "If I were to guess a percentage, I think it would be about 8 percent, but no more than that."

The money put into athletics directly from school district funds is small compared to the total amount of money the districts must pay for teachers salaries and benefits, not to mention a building program and building maintenance. It is also small compared to total athletic budgets.

The district officials contacted around the valley said they pay the coaches increments (or the pay for coaching above the regular salary as a teacher), transportation costs, lights, and upkeep of the facilities.

Depending on the district and how large it is, the coaches salary increments can amount to anywhere from $600 a year to $2,000, according to the sport, the school and the years the coach has been there.

The transportation costs average about 55 cents a mile and the lighting and upkeep on the facilities is minimal.

Those costs, however, are not the disputed costs. The most disputed figure is the thousands of dollars it takes to equip a football team or to pay the costs of cross-state travel for a basketball team.

Most people fail to realize that most of the money for high school sports comes from student activity tickets and from gate receipts and without that understanding, they criticize the programs.

The student activity fees range from $10 to $20 depending on the school and how many students buy them. However, they pay only a portion of the cost of sports programs even though they may pay for the majority of music and drama costs.

The sports-watching public, though, put up the most money to keep the sports in the schools.

"Football and basketball are our money sports but basketball is the real money maker," Minico's Erling said. While other sports did bring in some money, he said basketball at Minico outstripped everything else.

Erling said the biggest single event money-maker of the year is the Minico-Burley basketball game.

Erling said while football had a net gain of $1,165 last year, basketball brought in $8,137.

Rising prices and inflation have hit high school athletics as hard as they have the rest of the economy.

Football uniforms may run as high as $50 per player for new equipment and estimates of costs for transporting basketball teams out of town run about 55 cents a mile plus the cost of motel or hotel bills and food. Increases in fuel costs may eventually put a serious crimp on public travel.

"We have to keep our equipment updated every year. If it's not usable, we throw it away. We don't try to give it to the junior highs," said Jerome Athletic Director Tim Oyer. "Four years ago, helmets cost $29. Now they cost $83. We have to buy equipment certified by NOXSE."

NOXSE is the national organization that certifies football equipment safe for high school use.

Women's programs also have put a strain on athletic economies.

Uniforms, coaches, and equipment for basketball, volleyball and other women sports were required by Title IX.

"It cost between $600 and $900 for uniforms for the girls basketball team," Oyer said.

In some districts booster clubs help raise money to be used to buy new equipment or improve facilities. The booster clubs, however, are limited in several of the districts in what they are allowed to buy.

No matter what the cost of the sports programs, coaches, players and administrators agree that they provide a valuable teaching tool for the students.

"I suppose that since the kids are in classes seven periods that each period contributes a seventh to their education. I think athletics contributes at least that much, maybe more," commented Carey High School Principal Robert Bowers.

Carter holds key to subsidizing U.S. Olympians

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter agrees, the 1980 U.S. Olympic team will be the first to receive federal subsidies. Congress agreed before adjourning Sunday to give the Olympic Committee $16 million, adding the United States to those nations — including the Soviet Union and most other Communist countries — that help underwrite their Olympic teams. The money is supposed to be a one-time grant to help the committee recognize amateur athletes in this country, but opponents insisted it is only "a foot in the door" of a permanent government subsidy. The original proposal called for the USOC to receive $30 million, but the House eliminated all funding from the bill that gives the amateur sports authority to oversee all amateur sports programs. The bill needs only Carter's signature.

However, supporters refused to abandon the funding plan and put the $16 million in a separate bill that passed both houses shortly before adjournment.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, who engineered the funding compromise, said the money is needed if the Olympic Committee is to reorganize U.S. amateur athletics and bring peace to traditional warring groups — the Amateur Athletic Union and the National Collegiate Athletic Association. The legislation gives the committee authority to decide which groups will govern the 32 sports programs involved in the Olympics, the Pan American Games and other international competitions. It also was designed to protect the rights of individual athletes to participate in those events.

The $16 million is to help the committee pay administrative costs and get the new program in operation, and will help build and operate Olympic training centers. Don Miller, USOC executive director, praised Congress.

"I believe this will serve as a catalyst to motivate everyone to become the amateur sports community in the country," he said.

Opponents decried it as a "foot in the door." The legislation will "extend the long arm of the government into amateur athletics and open the taxpayer's pocket to pay for it," said Rep. John Schleringer, D-Ohio. "I'm sure it isn't a one-shot deal. It's going to go on and on."

Stevens called the action long overdue, and said it would "end the jurisdictional battles waged for 50 years among amateur sports groups, that has hampered U.S. participation in international sports competition."

Japan's Isao Aoki wins England title

VIRGINIA WATER, England (UPI) — Japan's Isao Aoki won the $250,000 World Matchplay Championship in his first attempt Monday with a 3 and 2 victory over Simon Owen of New Zealand to collect his first major international title.

Aoki, the Japanese matchplay champion, led by two holes at the end of the morning round in a tuckered 38-hole match over the 6,963-yard, par-73 Burnage Road course. Aoki claimed to the $55,000 winner's check which Owen never challenged.

The Japanese posted only four birdies and an eagle on his tour of the tree-lined fairways while Owen scored a reaction to his earlier giant-killing and carded six birdies and only two birdies in a midcourse display. "It was a bit chilly for me in the morning but once I got ahead I began to get more confident," said Aoki, speaking through an interpreter. "I am sure this is one of the most important wins of my career because I have had the opportunity to play in many other countries," added Aoki, signaling his determination to try and join the U.S. circuit.

Aoki reached the final after beating Cee Fildes, US Masters champion Gary Player and Ray Floyd while Owen captured the U.S. Open championship. North Sparta's Sevy Ballesteros and defending champion Graham Marsh of Australia.

"I wasn't quite with it. I just didn't do it and it's as simple as that," said Owen, who has narrowly missed his second major title after surrendering the lead in the British Open in July to Jack Nicklaus with only three holes left.

Playing basketball in Israel

By DOUG TULLIS Times-News writer

RUPERT — Jim Boatwright played his high school basketball at Minico High School and his college ball at Utah State University, about 10,000 miles from where he's playing now.

Boatwright has been the starting center for the Israeli team, Maccabi Tel Aviv, for the past five years and is happy to be playing overseas.

The Israeli season is from August to May each year.

"He's having a good time while earning a living," said Boatwright's wife, Chris, recently while visiting in the U.S.

One of the best parts of the game, according to Mrs. Boatwright, is that her husband is playing on the best Israeli team and is making good money.

"We probably couldn't have gotten a better opportunity," she said of the salary. "Over here it's so cutthroat. There's always someone there trying to take your place."

The Boatwrights also are enjoying Jim's popularity.

"If he were to run for president, he'd probably get second, or something like that," Mrs. Boatwright said. "He's very popular."

The adjustment from Utah State University to Tel Aviv, Israel, was not too drastic for the couple.

"Israel is very Americanized. It's bi-lingual, Hebrew first and English second, so it's not too bad," she said. "That just gave their arms open to Americans," she added.

As far as the culture is concerned, Mrs. Boatwright said she had to get used to the more aggressive Israelis.

"Over there, there are no lines and you just push to get up to the counter. I'm the type that would stand in the back until the teller recognized me."

Just how long Boatwright will play basketball there is unanswerable, she said.

"Jim's never had any injuries, and as long as he's enjoying it, I think he will keep playing," she explained.

Although he is healthy, Mrs. Boatwright would like to see him play two or three more years and then move back to the states.

"I keep thinking next year (he'll quit) but as long as he is enjoying it, it's OK," she said.

As for the future, a coaching or teaching career is possible for both of them when they return from Israel. Jim, who graduated in political science from college, needs a teaching certificate.

If a National Basketball Association team offered him a job, Mrs. Boatwright said, her husband probably would consider it but not if he had to try out as a rookie.

Until that happens or he gets injured or the political situation gets worst in Israel, the Boatwrights will stay in the midwest and enjoy basketball.

Downhill skier might be 'saved'

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL U.S. downhill skier Ron Blodermann of Stowe, Vt., will probably be saved from a possible amputation of his left leg that was seriously injured in a practice accident last week, his doctors said Monday.

"There is no reason to amputate his leg at the present stage," said Dr. Ernst Raus, the medical doctor of the Austrian skiing team. "Blodermann has left the emergency station of the Innsbruck hospital after his condition has improved. He is now undergoing normal treatment in the same hospital and his leg has some solid hopes to save his leg."

Raus said Blodermann suffered serious injuries of his left leg in a high-speed accident on Oct. 12 on a glacier in Hintertux while taking part in pre-season downhill training with the U.S. team; together with the Austrian team.

Raus said there will be no decision on a possible amputation unless his condition deteriorates. "There is no indication for such a deterioration at the moment," he said.

Sherwood Stewart of the Seattle Cascades was named Monday the most valuable first year player of 1978 in World Team Tennis.

The 32-year-old Texan, a doubles specialist, edged New Orleans' Renee Richards for the honor which was won previously by Bjorn Borg (1977), Rod Laver and Chris Evert (1976) and Marty Riessen and Greer Stevens (1975). Use Barker shared the laurels with Borg in '77.

There was only one award given this year, the first time this has happened in the WTT since 1974. Stewart finished No. 13 in men's total offense for the WTT season. He was 38-37 in all sets and 394-376 in games for a 51.2 percentage. He was 14-10 in doubles in tandem with Tom Gorman, Betty Stone and Brigitte Cuypers.

Brigham Young University linebacker Rod Wood, a 6-1, 230-pound senior from Durango, Colo., who was credited with 16 tackles in a 17-16 win over Oregon last weekend, Monday was selected Western Athletic Conference defensive player of the week.

With four defensive starters out due to injuries, including two in the front line, Wood ignored knee and hip injuries to compete in the game. Wood has been playing half all year according to linebacker coach Fred Whittingham.

"He shut off the inside and the outside — wherever the ball was, Rod was there," Whittingham said. "He played as good a game as he's had in his BYU career."

Wood was credited with two key stops on third down and short yardage to force Oregon to surrender the ball. He finished the day with nine unassisted tackles, six assisted tackles and one tackle for a loss.

Other nominees for defensive honors were Wyoming linebacker Ken Fantetti; Colorado State end Kent Campbell; San Diego State and Kent Foster; New Mexico end Charlie Baker; and Utah linebacker Mark Padkin.

Rookie Piston Coach Dick Vitale, who stepped aside as coach of the University of Detroit because of intestinal problems, was being treated at Providence Hospital in Detroit Monday for a rectal infection.

Vitale, whose Pistons have lost their first two games of the National Basketball Association season, will be hospitalized for an unspecified time, a team spokesman said.

Assistant Coach Rich Adubato will assume head coaching duties in Vitale's absence and will be in charge tonight when the Pistons again go for their first win against the Jazz in New Orleans.

Mike Rossman of Turnersville, N.J., will make the first defense of his world light heavyweight championship on Dec. 5 against European champion Aldo Traversaro of Chivari, Italy, at the Spectrum in Philadelphia, Pa.

The bout was announced Monday by Allen B. Flexer, Spectrum president, and Bob Arum, president of Top Rank, Inc., of New York.

The scheduled 15-round battle for the World Boxing Association version puts the "Jewish Bomber" on view for his hometown fans for his first defense since taking the title on a knock out from Victor Galindez in New Orleans Aug. 15.

Flexer said the title fight, the third in as many years to be held at the Spectrum, is co-promoted by Spectrum Fights, Inc. and Top Rank. He said the Spectrum was chosen over Madison Square Garden in New York because of Rossman's popularity in the Philadelphia area.

Joanne Russell, 23-year-old member of the U.S. Wightman Cup team to play Britain in London next month, scored an impressive victory in a $75,000 women's tennis tournament Monday in Brighton, England, beating South African Brigitte Cuypers, 6-4, 6-4.

"This was a good win for me," Russell said. "I was sick with bronchitis for three weeks after the U.S. Open, but now I'm beginning to feel good again."

Russell, who now lives in New York, added, "I've changed a few parts of my game, particularly my serve. So today I hit a few aces during the first set and had double getting the ball over the net in the second. But I'll be okay for the Wightman Cup."

Bowlers to host tourney

TWIN FALLS — The two Twin Falls bowling alleys will host the 23rd Annual State Gutter, Gussie Tournament Saturday and Sunday.

According to Jean Miller of Magic Bowl, 340 2nd Ave. E., nearly 200 teams will compete in the tournament. The teams consist of four women each.

There also will be about 300 doubles teams and 700 singles entries. Team competition will be at Magic Bowl, and the singles and doubles competition will be at Bowldrome, 220 Eastland Dr.

To be eligible to compete, a bowler must have rolled a 225 game or a 550 scratch series, she said.

Thirty five of the 38 associations in the state will be attending the two-day event. Action gets underway at 10 a.m. each day.

Teams in Idaho which will be represented at the tourney include Aberdeen, Montpelier, Blackfoot, Boise, Buhl, Caldwell, Challis, Emmett, Goway, Hamada, Preston, Idaho Falls, Jerome, Lincoln, Lost River, Malad, McCall, Meridian, Mini-Cassia, Mountain Home, Nampa, Pocatello, Power County, Rexburg, Salmon, Soda Springs, Teton, Twin Falls, Weiser, and Wood River.

There will be 96 Class B teams, and 103 Class A teams. In Class A doubles, there will be 179 entries, and 133 in Class B. Singles entries have been received from 394 Class A individuals and 429 Class B.

Class A teams are for those with a scratch series of more than 620; Class B is 619 and under.

In doubles, Class A is for 310 and over, while Class B is under 309.

Nuggets favored to win third consecutive title

By United Press International The Denver Nuggets are favored to win the NBA's Midwest Division title for the third straight season and not a bad bet to wind up as the league's champion.

The Nuggets' four-game margin over the Milwaukee Bucks at the end of the 1977-78 season was the smallest of any of the division winners. But the Nuggets are loaded with talent and have been fortified by the addition of George McGinnis, who was acquired from Philadelphia for Bobby Jones and Ralph Simpson.

McGinnis had to leave the 76ers because "there just weren't enough basketballs to go around with all the Philadelphia stars but still fit in well with the Nuggets. He is the outstanding power forward the Nuggets have needed and with high-jumping David Thompson (73 points in his final game last season) should give Denver one of the most potent offenses in the league."

The Midwest Division, incidentally, has been reduced to five teams by the transfer of the Detroit Pistons to the Central Division.

Practice makes perfect... almost

It's said that "practice makes perfect," and this team of water skiers seems to need a few more tries at perfecting their jump. The team, from Winter Haven, Fla., have managed to land on all eight skis only once. Members of

Menage A Trois never looks back in fillie victory

By United Press International

$4.40 and $2.20. Reminiscing returned $2.10 for show.

Menage A Trois took the lead at the quarter-pole and went on to win the $30,000 allowance for fillies and mares at Belmont Park Monday while favored Reminiscing finished third.

The 4-year-old chestnut filly, ridden by Ruben Hernandez, ran the six-furlong sprint in 1:10.25 for her second victory this year. Menage A Trois has raced just five times this year, however, and raised her seasonal earnings to $39,420 for trainer Jim Maloney and Christana Stables.

At Calder, One Moment took the field of five through the mile in 1:40.2-5 to win the Nashua purse under Larry Saumell.

The stakes-winning 3-year-old, who earlier won the Memorial Day Handicap at 1/4-mile, returned $4.60, $3.00 and $2.40. Jonkiler was second and paid $3.00 and $2.40 while Jungle Adam paid $2.40 for show.

Roman Dad, making only his second lifetime start, won the $10,500 allowance feature at Keystone for his second straight victory.

The chestnut son of Old Bag went the seven-furlongs in 1:23.15 and returned $5.00, $3.00 and $2.40.

At Bowie, Silent Joy ($6,000) won the $13,000 allowance feature under Herb Hinojosa. The gray 5-year-old son of Silent Screen turned in a time of 1:44 for the 1-1/16th miles and won his fifth race in nine starts this season.

Evening Boo Boo, under Jorge Velasquez, finished a half-length back. In second, while Steve Cauthen and the event-money favorite, Reminiscing, were third, another 1/4-length back.

Menage A Trois paid $7.00, $4.20 and $2.10, while Evening Boo Boo paid

Sam Houston player tops offensive picks

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Clay Lowry, a junior wide receiver from Sam Houston State (Texas) who caught six passes for 181 yards last Saturday, and Willie Fulton, a senior defensive back who blocked three kicks for Mississippi Valley (Miss.), were named N.A.I.A. offensive and defensive Players-of-the-Week Monday.

Lowry, a 5-11, 171-pound, caught three touchdown strikes, including the 46-yard game-winner in the final quarter, to power Sam Houston State past Southwest Texas State, the No. 2 team in the N.A.I.A.'s Division I, 21-16.

It also pushed Lowry into second place among the association's pass receivers this week with a 116.8 yard per game average.

Fulton, a 5-11, 180-pound, blocked two field goal attempts from 33 and 25 yards and a punt attempt as Mississippi Valley battled Grambling (La.) to a scoreless tie.

In addition, Fulton had seven solo tackles and five assists as Mississippi Valley thwarted a Grambling victory for the first time in 21 years.

Students don't like Cougar mascot

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — A survey of students at Washington State University indicates a majority of them do not want a live cougar mascot to represent the school anymore.

Butch VI, the former mascot, was put to sleep last summer at age 15. He was suffering from complications having to do with old age.

It was determined at that time that Butch would be replaced with another live cougar and the search got underway.

But a student outpour against caging another animal to serve the school's athletic program has grown almost weekly since fall classes resumed.

School president Glenn Terrell, in response to the protests, commissioned the poll, which found that 73 per cent of some 254 students polled were opposed to replacing the mascot with another live cougar.

Thirty one per cent of the students polled said they would favor a live cougar if it could be provided a larger cage.

Terrell said last week that the sentiments of the alumni and teachers would also be reconsidered before he decides what to do about a new mascot.

A student in a cougar costume has served as the interim mascot, and could become the permanent symbol if the live cougar is cancelled.

If we all get behind him, everyone's ahead.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoopie

THE BOARDERS SAY THAT MRS. BAXTER IS THE MOST DOMINANT MEMBER OF THE HOUSE. HOLD! THAT IT MATTERS BUT IS IT TRUE?

UNFORTUNATELY YES! THE BAXTERS NEVER ESTABLISHED THE MATURE RELATIONSHIP THAT MRS. HOOPLE AND I HAVE. ALTHOUGH SHE PREFERS THAT I TAKE THE LEADERSHIP ROLE, I CONSULT HER BEFORE ALL MAJOR DECISIONS!

SHE MAKES ALL THE MAJOR DECISIONS!

THEY'VE HAD A MAJOR ONE!

HE'S JUST WELL ORGANIZED.

Culture crisis?

Canadian children in danger of Americanization via TV

By HENRY GINIGER
S.N.Y. Times Service

OTTAWA—Canadian children are in danger of growing up American because, with their elders, they watch too much American television, according to a leading Canadian broadcaster.

The warning came last week from Albert W. Johnson, the head of the state-owned Canadian Broadcasting Corporation which has a legal obligation to safeguard and strengthen the Canadian national fabric. But the corporation, which itself depends heavily on American programming, does not have a monopoly of radio and television in Canada. Private stations give an even heavier dose of American programs to Canadians who also have direct access, through cable, to American networks.

Johnson said that, "The most effective instrument by which this sense of Canadianism can be expressed and can be shared — television — has never been less Canadian. Never before have the television screens of the country been so swamped with American and other foreign programming."

Johnson's remarks came during testimony before the government's Canadian Radio and Television Commission which is reviewing the corporation's application for renewal of its license. National unity has become a critical issue in Canada because of the desire by the government of Quebec to separate that largely French speaking province politically. The CBC has been criticized at times for not doing enough to defend the notion of a unified Canada in Quebec and elsewhere.

Quebec nationalists want independence partly on the ground that it is needed to defend the French culture against the Canadian English-speaking majority. But Johnson, who comes from Saskatchewan, is one of many English-speaking Canadians who say they have a cultural problem too — preventing Canada as a whole from becoming a cultural colony of the United States.

Half of Canadians' leisure time is spent watching television, according to surveys. "Now, whether those television hours are spent watching Canadian or American programs may not matter as much to adults whose sense of Canada developed before television," Johnson said, adding, "But think of what it is doing to our kids." He said English-speaking children between two and eleven spent 83 percent of their viewing time watching American programs and French-speaking children between seven and seventeen were spending 60 percent of their television time watching foreign programs, mainly American. Some of the French language programs come from France.

Johnson said Canadian children "are being influenced by the values and attitudes and traditions which are reflected on American television instead of Canadian values and attitudes and traditions,

Canadian crew looking south

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (UPI) — The five-man, one-woman crew of the smallest craft in history to sail the Northwest Passage Monday celebrated the end of their lonely journey through the Arctic and said they would now head south for an even more daring nautical feat.

Real Bouvier, 32-year-old captain of the 35-foot steel cutter J.E. Borlier II was obviously pleased at the success of his 22-month voyage from Montreal to Greenland, then west across the top of the world and south along the western coast of Canada.

"I'll be proud if Canadians will be proud," he said.

Bouvier and his crew of five — including the first woman to make the passage, Marie-Eve Thibault — docked in Vancouver's English Bay Sunday.

But, they said, their adventure was far from over. They now are preparing to sail south to the Panama Canal and up the eastern coast of North America in an effort to become the first people in history to circumnavigate the continent.

"They have yet to set a definite departure date.

Bouvier said he believed his countrymen should work harder for the future.

"Canadians should stop looking at the past and look to the future," he said. "I think for the last 50 years we've just looked at the past. The same thing goes for the Arctic."
