

Begin sends Carter an angry note

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Begin, with the approval of his cabinet, Sunday responded to President Carter's sharp criticism of Israel's decision to expand existing Jewish settlements on the occupied Arab West Bank at a time of strain in the Egyptian-Israeli peace negotiations.

Begin, with the approval of his cabinet, Sunday responded to President Carter's sharp criticism of Israel's decision to expand existing Jewish settlements on the occupied Arab West Bank at a time of strain in the Egyptian-Israeli peace negotiations.

Some indication of what Begin minister said to Carter can be gleaned from comments made by Begin at a political rally Thursday night.

At that time, Begin referred to the criticism remarks of Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance regarding the settlement expansion effort and said:

"My reply will be to reaffirm the inalienable and full right of the Jewish people to settle any part of the land of Israel, including Judea, Samaria and Gaza."

Begin uses the bible names Judea and Samaria when referring to the West Bank, which along with the Gaza Strip were captured by Israel during the 1967 war.

A basic tenet of Begin and his government is that the West Bank and Gaza are part of the biblical Jewish homeland and that Jews have a historic right to settle there.

The expansion announcement last week triggered a furor in Washington where Israel-Egyptian peace negotiations had entered what is hoped to be only a temporary stalemate.

Over the weekend, Begin and President Anwar el Sadat of Egypt were named joint winners of the Nobel Peace Prize and it is hoped that the award will help to dislodge the talks and lead to the signing of a peace treaty.

The Israeli cabinet is scheduled to hold a special session today to discuss the future of the peace negotiations.

Israel officials here contend that Carter's angry reaction was out of proportion to the extent of the settlement expansion effort, which was announced Sunday and extended to several hundred families who would be moved to the West Bank.

The officials say Carter should not have been surprised at the expansion announcement, which has been around for its timing.

To buttress this contention, sources here cited remarks made by Carter on Sept. 27 at a breakfast gathering of reporters given by Geoffrey Sperling of the Christian Science Monitor.

Carter went on to say: "We dropped the part on expansion because Begin and Dayan described to me the problems where they had existing tiny settlements that were being built and a mother and a father—the example they used—would go there and build one room in kind of a pioneer environment, leave their children with the grandparents in Jerusalem and maybe even commute at night. And their plans were to build two extra rooms on the tiny house and bring their children later on."

"The transcript went on to quote Carter as follows:

"If we put an absolute freeze on all expansions it would mean the families couldn't be reunited. They also pointed out, interestingly enough, that the total population of the West Bank settlements, about 50 settlements, was between 2,500 and 3,000 people, so you have approximately 50 people per settlement, a very small population."

Its Republican counterpart has budgeted $6 million for the November elections, according to committee spokesmen.

Republicans have bought $800,000 in network television time and Democrats have scheduled a cross-country campaign blitz for President Carter in last ditch efforts to win state and local offices in the Nov. 7 elections.

Efforts of both parties to gain numerical advantage comes at the end of off-year campaigns in which party affiliation has meant very little and amid prospects that voter turnout could well be the lowest in many years.

For the first time, the House Republican campaign committee is sponsoring a national advertising campaign in behalf of all GOP congressional candidates.

In an attempt to giving money to individual candidates to use as they please, the committee has spent $800,000 for a series of spots promising voters that the best means of controlling government spending, inflation, the bureaucracy and corruption is to elect Republicans in place of Democrats to control Congress by a margin of 2 to 1.

The spots began running this weekend and will run through next week on a variety of entertainment, sports and news programs on the three networks.

The campaign is the latest in a series of efforts to make public sentiment for tax cuts and economy in government work for the party out of power.

So far many Democratic candidates have been able to preempt the tax cut and economy issue and most political experts do not see any substantial shift in the Democrat-Republican ratio in the House, Senate and state offices.

Evan Dohelle, treasurer of the Democratic national committee, said the national party would put its efforts into getting out the vote in the belief that the larger number of Democrats registered would result in Democratic victory if there is a good turnout.

"Nevertheless, getting out a sizable vote promises to be as difficult this year. A report by the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate show that if voter turnout in the primary this year is any guide, less than one-third of America's eligible voters may cast ballots Nov. 7.

The turnout, which has been decreasing for almost two decades, fell from 1974, the last off-year election. "Since the trend toward decreased participation

In possession at any time. Record numbers of hunters tramped the ditchbanks in Magic Valley on the opening weekend of the bird season.

Pheasants, pheasants everywhere!

MAGIC VALLEY — Visions of a pheasant-andor-glass—dinner—propped hundreds of Idaho and out-of-state hunters to brave high winds on the first weekend of the pheasant hunting season.

Idaho Fish and Game officials say this year's pheasant season may be the best in nearly a decade.

Anticipating record numbers of hunters the fish and game has instituted strict game checking procedures this year.

The fish and game said only the bitter winds pushing rain and snow across Idaho Sunday prevented the opening day harvest from being the highest pheasant kill ratio in the last seven years.

Regional wildlife manager Gary Will made that observation Sunday night after checking hunters checked through the Acquia game management station for two days.

Will said the station checked 283 hunters Saturday who bagged 231 birds, a ratio of 1,007 birds per hunter.

Sunday's totals dropped with the temperatures to 180 hunters and 121 birds for a .67 average per hunter.

Winds, which the weather service said were gusting to 20 mph, meant hunters had trouble getting birds into the air, the fish and game official said.

The weekend average kill ratio in Minidoka County of .87 birds for each of the 461 hunters compares to last year's opening weekend figures of .97 birds for 449 shooters.

Howard Carroll, who is responsible for enforcing hunting regulations for the fish and game's Region 4, encompassing most of Magic Valley, estimated he handed out 40 citations for the two days at the Bliss check station alone, "maybe more."

Most of the violations were for exceeding the limit of two birds and possession of fully-dressed birds, so the sex of the bird couldn't be determined. Since hens are off-limits, the birds shot have to be identifiable as roosters.

"Some officers picked up some hunters for shooting from vehicles, which is unlawful," he added.

Pheasants confiscated usually end up being given to indigent families or charities specified by the courts.

Carroll said the station was open for the first time at Bliss at a weigh station on the westbound side of Interstate-80N to check hunters going back to the western section of the state.

A similar check station set up west of American Falls on the Interstate reported a high number of violations discovered, Carroll added.

To help out on the opening weekend, he said there were 11 state and federal fish and game officers, three Idaho State Police officers and a number of youngsters from the Young Adult Conservation Corps at the Bliss station.

Another state fish and game official, Bill Webb, said four conservation officers were sent down from Idaho Falls to help with the influx.

While there were no reports of hunters being killed or wounded in the first two days of the season, there were the usual complaints about hunters to law enforcement agencies.

The Twin Falls Police Department was called out Saturday to warn two hunters in a field near Washington and Orchard that it was unlawful to hunt within the city limits.

And the Twin Falls County Sheriff's department recorded two calls, one about hunters who had ignored a "No Hunting" sign and were shooting at a house.

The second call came from a woman who told officers hunters were shooting at her and her daughter. An investigator she said he found the caller had exaggerated and that the hunters shooting were far off and not aiming at the man. The woman became upset because buckshot was landing in her yard, the deputy said.

On the lighter side, Webb said he had heard about 11 hunters who had surrounded a small corn field and "the only rooster that came out, they all missed."

The zany mania of pheasant season doesn't appear likely to let up either until Dec. 3, the final day of the season.

Besides showing full rooms the past weekend, due mainly to the rush of hunters, a random check of motels in Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert and Bliss indicates the pace isn't going to slow down.

Comments like those from Bobbie Hodges, a night clerk at the Ramada Inn in Burley, were typical: "It has been full the last two nights (Friday and Saturday) and three-quarters full on Sunday. Practically everything in Burley is full. We're sending people elsewhere in Burley and Rupert. Then, if we couldn't find anything, we'd send them on to Twin Falls or Utah, whichever direction they were headed in."

Germans cash in dollars

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The dollar has sunk so low that one magazine has depleted George Washington in a wheelchair. For Americans in Germany, that means coffee at $1 a cup.

But for West Germans in America, it means full-course dinners at chic restaurants for less than a cheap meal back home.

It's not that the West Germans are gloating. They're sorry about the plunge of the U.S. currency. The magazine Der Spiegel called it a "tragedy."

It's just that, well — who can pass up a bargain?

Newspapers, magazines and advertising agencies are trumpeting the news that the sturdy mark buys more than twice as many dollars as a did 10 years ago. They're suggesting that travelers to the United States enjoy such luxuries as:

— Tour New York in a taxi — why crowd into a tourist bus? Or take a $20 helicopter flight over the city and then have a soup-and-dinner at the World Trade Center skyscraper at a cheaper cost than one dish back home.

— Take the whole family on a trip from coast to coast. Go to Florida for a Caribbean tour, rent a car in Los Angeles, see the Rockies on horseback, spend a few weeks on a dude ranch.

America expensive because of inflation? Nonsense! All you need is "real money" — West German marks, the media is saying. Marks buy a lot of dollars, practically nothing but those on their backs and then outfit themselves from head to foot several times over.

"With Hard Marks — 'Breakfast at Tiffany's' reads a front-page headline in the newspaper Die Welt.

The magazine Der Spiegel quoted a salesgirl at the New York department-store Bloomingdale's as saying, "The Germans buy just about everything. You'd think they'd just been bombed out again."

Clothes are so inexpensive in the United States that some Germans say they'd like to live with practically nothing but those on their backs and then outfit themselves from head to foot several times over.

Earthquake jolts Idaho

SALMON (UPI) — An earthquake registering 5 on the Richter Scale rattled windows and shook some Salmon residents awake Sunday morning, but no damage was reported, officials said.

The quake — with its epicenter in a mountainous, sparsely-populated area 10 miles southwest of Salmon — occurred at 6:47 a.m. (MST), the National Earthquake Information Service at Golden, Colo., said.

The Lemhi County sheriff's office said it received no damage reports.

Persons living near Williams Lake, about 12 miles southwest of Salmon and close to the quake's epicenter, said the tremors were sharp but not severe enough to cause any damage.

GOP may have lost chance for comeback

Combined wire services
WASHINGTON — The conservative drift of many Democratic congressional and gubernatorial candidates has quashed GOP chances of making a mid-term comeback, a U.S. News and World Report survey showed Sunday.

Despite heavier campaign spending by Republicans, "It appears that the already badly outnumbered Republicans will make only slim gains from what earlier had looked like an ideal chance for a mid-term comeback," the magazine said.

The magazine Der Spiegel quoted a salesgirl at the New York department-store Bloomingdale's as saying, "The Germans buy just about everything. You'd think they'd just been bombed out again."

Republicans have done the best job of fielding attractive candidates at the gubernatorial level, the magazine found.

The magazine predicts Republicans will gain 13 seats in the House, at most, and will lose at least one Senate seat. They stand to gain three to six statehouses in races for governor.

The Democratic National Committee is spending $100,000 on this year's campaigns.

Its Republican counterpart has budgeted $6 million for the November elections, according to committee spokesmen.

Republicans have bought $800,000 in network television time and Democrats have scheduled a cross-country campaign blitz for President Carter in last ditch efforts to win state and local offices in the Nov. 7 elections.

The turnout, which has been decreasing for almost two decades, fell from 1974, the last off-year election. "Since the trend toward decreased participation has been continuous since the early 1960s," said Curtis B. Ganes, director of the committee, "and since the turnout for this year's primaries showed that the tendency to disenow the polls has not stopped, there is a distinct possibility that less than a third of those eligible will vote for Congress this year.

What is happening can be seen in the following comparisons: In 1960, 63.8 percent of the electorate voted in the presidential election. In 1976, only 54.4 percent turned out. In 1962, slightly more than 46 percent of those eligible voted in Congressional elections. In 1974, the turnout had dropped to 36.1 percent.

While citizen participation has gone down, the activity of special interest groups in elections has gone up. The money spent by House and Senate candidates this year far exceeded expenditures of the past, and this is due chiefly to the fact that very special interests, barred from contributing to presidential campaigns by federal law, are pouring more and more money into Congressional campaigns to political action committees, a device that helps corporations get around the ban against corporate contributions.

Operating new car costs 33¢ per mile

The Per-Mile Cost of Owning and Operating A Car

1950 - 1978

Figures are for a mid-size car driven 10,000 miles per year for 3 years

DETROIT (UPI)—The cost of owning and operating a typical new car rose more than 10 percent in the 1978 model year to an average 33.1 cents per mile or $3.31 a year, a survey by the Hertz Corporation showed Sunday.

The car rental and leasing firm said its annual survey was based on a normally equipped, intermediate-sized two-door sedan driven 10,000 miles a year and kept three years.

Expenses in the Hertz study included fuel, oil, parts, service, repairs, license, fees, interest and depreciation — the difference between a car's purchase price and resale value.

Comparable 1977 costs amounted to 30.1 cents a mile or $3.01 a year, Hertz said. Since the 1973 Arab oil embargo, new car costs have climbed more than 64 percent, outpacing a 46.4 percent rise in the Consumer-Price Index during the period by more than one-third.

Higher interest rates and insurance premiums — both now more than double their 1973 levels — accounted for most of the current increase, the company said.

Auto loan interest climbed from 3.08 cents per mile in 1977 to 4.13 cents in 1978, a 34 percent increase for the 12 months and a 103 percent hike since 1973.

Insurance expenses shot upward 15 percent from 5.60 cents per mile a year ago to 6.43 cents in 1978. Since 1973, insurance costs have risen 108 percent.

"Insurance alone now costs the typical new car driver more than gasoline during an auto's early years. An interest is about equal to spending for fuel during the initial period of a car's life," said Hertz Executive Vice President J. E. Menendez.

Both costs were related to a 7 percent increase in the average purchase price of vehicles during the 1977-1978 period, Hertz said. It listed the average drive-away price of a typically equipped intermediate-sized car at $5,211, taxes included, compared with $5,211 the previous year. The 1973 price was $3,463, Hertz said.

More fuel efficient vehicles helped motorists trim the average gasoline expenses for the year to 4.06 cents a mile from 4.23 cents a year ago. Average fuel consumption in the 10,000-mile level dropped from 645 gallons to 583 gallons, Hertz said.

Other service station items rose more than 13 percent while maintenance and servicing expenses, led by a substantial increase in tire prices, rose 9 percent during the period, the firm said.

"The size of the car and the length of time it is kept, along with the mileage it is driven, can change the per-mile outlays substantially," the study said.

A 1978 subcompact kept three years will cost an average 25.8 cents a mile for a yearly saving of more than $700, compared with 34.4 cents in 1978. Since 1973, a subcompact will cost 36.9 cents per mile or $3,691 a year — $379 more than an intermediate and $1,111 more than a subcompact.

Monday briefing

Brain virus kills 480 people in India

NEW DELHI, India (UPI)—A mysterious brain-attacking virus swept portions of northern India and killed 480 people in the last month alone, the official All India radio reported Sunday.

The radio said the virus, suspected of being a type of encephalitis or disease marked by an inflammation of the brain, killed 445 persons in Uttar Pradesh, India's most populous state.

Unofficial reports put the number of persons affected throughout India at "anywhere between 1,000 and 2,000."

All India radio said the disease had broken out in 15 of the 54 districts in Uttar Pradesh, which borders New Delhi state.

Newspaper reports said an outbreak of the viral disease in the nation's capital killed seven people, mostly children, in the past week alone.

Twenty-seven people have died of the disease in India's second most populous state, Bihar, the state's chief malaria officer Dr. D.P. Banerjee told reporters.

Doctors said persons attacked by the disease suddenly develop high temperatures and become unconscious, and that several patients have died within 48 hours.

PBB-affected farmers vow to keep fighting

CADILLAC, Mich. (UPI)—Farmers wiped out by Michigan's PBB contamination disaster vowed to press their damage claims Sunday despite a judge's ruling that low levels of the toxic chemical are harmless.

Farmers and others throughout the state's "PBB belt" expressed disbelief that Wexford County Circuit Judge William Peterson could say the five-year furor in the state was mostly a waste of time and money.

Harold Fromholz, a Traverse City contractor who helped clean up 60 tainted farms, called the decision "a shock to the whole state."

"I can't understand how the judge could say that low levels don't affect cattle, when it's never been proven that they don't," he said.

Pat Miller of the PBB Action Committee and one of about 100 plaintiffs with damage suits still pending said nobody would back down from their demands.

"I'm absolutely astounded that a judge can say it's OK for a million to eat PBB-affected meat," she said. "There is no judge who can intelligently come down with a decision like that."

"We're not backing down. When you know you're right you don't quit. You just keep going."

In 1973, polybrominated biphenyl made at Michigan Chemical's St. Louis, Mich., facility was inadvertently mixed with livestock feed at a Farm Bureau warehouse in Battle Creek.

The resulting contamination caused thousands of farm animals to become sick. Entire herds were destroyed, and the resulting fear for public health prompted a group of scientists to conduct health tests of hundreds of residents.

Results from that research is still pending, but preliminary findings indicate most Michigan residents carry traces of PBB, which Peterson ruled was harmless.

Peterson's 155-page decision was vindication for the two companies being sued as well as state and federal officials accused of ignoring the danger of PBB after the original mixup in 1973.

Without a jury, Peterson heard 69 witnesses who produced almost 25,000 pages of testimony in the 14-month trial that ended in May.

Former diplomat dies

HONOLULU (UPI)—John Allison, whose Far East diplomatic career spanned the Pearl Harbor attack and an international incident in 1938 when he was stopped by a surly Japanese guard while on Chinese soil, died Saturday. He was 73 years old.

A native of Holton, Kan., Allison was the ambassador to Japan from 1953 to 1957. He was serving as the consul of Osaka, Japan, at the time of the attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941 and, after a stint as a prisoner, later took part in writing the Japanese peace treaty.

Allison made international news in 1938 when he, as a third secretary in the U.S. Embassy in Nanking, China, was slapped in the face by a Japanese sentry who refused to let him enter a house.

Inflation pep talk

WASHINGTON (UPI)—U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield said Sunday Americans need to "pull up their britches, roll up their sleeves and get down to work" to turn the troubled economy around.

Appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," the former Senate Democratic leader said the United States should "stop blaming other people" for its trade deficit and become more export-conscious.

Mansfield said both western Europe and communist nations are increasing their sale of goods to Japan at a faster rate than the United States.

"The Japanese do have difficulties in the system we live to contend with," the Montana Democrat said. "But he added, 'I wonder what is wrong with our own people that we can't overcome the same handicaps they (western Europe and communist nations) have.'"

Hurricane Rita sweeps through Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (UPI)—The Ministry of Social Services Development said latest reports showed 109 people had died in the storm, mostly by drowning, and 155 more were missing. Dozens were injured.

It said Rita, the strongest typhoon to hit the Philippines in eight years, left 134,139 families — 627,047 persons — without shelter and mowed down at least 11,475 houses.

Ian Smith nixes black rule in '78

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI)—Premier Ian Smith Sunday virtually ruled out black majority rule by the Dec. 31 deadline and said his recent trip to Washington amounted to de facto recognition of his regime.

Smith also said the shipment of $16 million in weapons to Zambia would not prevent Rhodesian attacks on guerrilla bases in the neighboring nation similar to raids 10 days ago that killed hundreds of blacks.

In the spreading bush war, a military unit said 11 black nationalist guerrillas, three "colored" laborers and one Rhodesian army sergeant had been killed in fighting in the past 24 hours.

Government sources reported some 20 guerrillas forced an entire township of some 1,500 blacks to flee their homes last month at Zimunya on Rhodesia's border with Mozambique.

In a nationally broadcast news conference, Smith gave his most emphatic statement to date that the Dec. 31 deadline for black majority rule he negotiated with three moderate black leaders will not be met.

"The work of drawing up a new constitution has fallen so far behind schedule... It would mean the exercise would spill over for several months," Smith said.

The prime minister described Britain's airlift of military hardware to Zambia as of "no consequence" and said Salisbury could still launch further raids on guerrilla bases in Zambia if necessary.

In the Zambian capital of Lusaka, government sources said much of the Highs will rise from the mid-50s to mid-60s and lows will start at the 20s and rise to the mid-30s.

Low temperatures this morning were expected to be in the teens and 20s although many of the higher elevation towns, including Stanley, dropped to the sub-zero.

Gusty surface winds blew over much of Idaho Sunday with some of the strongest winds in the south. Gusts of 45 mph were reported at Pocatello.

Readings Sunday afternoon were nearly 20 degrees below Saturday temperatures in the southern part of the state.

East of Rockies, winter rough

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Her bitter winter is in store for most parts of the country. The coldest weather expected in the western portions of the Midwest, according to a spokesman of Technology her expert. In contrast to last winter, weather can be expected to be East Coast, Hurd C. professor emeritus of meteorology, said Sunday. He predicted wide variations in the severity of the weather across the country, with the coldest weather centered on the Mississippi River east of the Rocky Mountains. The West Coast will see the warmest weather, expected to be wetter and somewhat colder than last year. Most of the Appalachian mountains and along the Middle and Southeast coasts the weather will be "relatively warm" with less snow than last year. Willett forecast it will be "on the cold side" in the Northeast "with snow similar to last winter — from the upper Ohio Valley and the Great Lakes eastward across New York, Pennsylvania and New England — "but certainly not as cold as last winter," Willett said. Willett based his predictions on solar activity compared to past weather patterns. Sunspot cycles, he believes, strongly affect weather and may mean more likely "one or another extreme type of weather." This may indicate a pattern of continued cold and wet winters over the next five or six years, Willett said. He also believes that there will be less "bright, clear cold weather and more precipitation-type weather."

In trouble at home

Idi Amin fabricates a war

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — A stream of "clearly" fake Ugandan reports of fighting with Tanzania, including one on Sunday that President Idi Amin's troops were surrounded, has convinced diplomats that Amin is in serious trouble at home.

A theory gaining credibility in Kenya is that the allegations of a Tanzanian invasion are a smokescreen for battles between Amin's troops and dissident Ugandan soldiers south of the capital. The latest Radio Kampala report said Amin's troops "have been cut off by the invading Tanzania forces" that an air force plane was shot down by Tanzanian aircraft and the situation was growing worse. It also said Amin asked his Soviet air force advisers to leave for "a short holiday" while his troops stop the invasion "in an African way," and he urged his forces "to prepare now to die in the defense of their motherland."

The war communique was the third in two weeks giving details of an alleged invasion of Ugandan territory west of Lake Victoria by a large contingent of Tanzanian troops. Tanzanian Foreign Minister Benjamin Mkapa called the reports "absolute nonsense." Tanzanian officials said the border was quiet except for occasional forays by Ugandan planes that led Tanzania to move a squadron of fighters to the area as a precaution. Neutral diplomats said there were no indications of fighting between the two countries. Diplomats in Kampala said the capital was calm and similar reports emanated from towns said to be near the fighting. Though the full extent of the crisis is not yet clear, there are indications that a financial squeeze may be shaking Amin's popularity in the army — the fragile base from which the mercurial leader rules Uganda.

Major progress reported in arms limitation talks

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union said Sunday Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko "narrowed to a major extent" differences blocking a new strategic arms limitation agreement.

But the commentary in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda also warned of "hellish" generals and politician hawks "who want to promote the arms race and kill any new SALT agreement before it has a chance to take effect. The newspaper said the differences could be settled "provided good will and a reasonable, realistic approach." "The distance separating the sides in drafting the strategic arms limitation agreement has narrowed to a major extent in the recent time," Pravda commentator Boris Averchevko wrote. "It can be stated that a further drawing together was witnessed at the Moscow negotiations in some respects. But there are still differences of approach to solution of a number of matters." Vance and Gromyko held two days of negotiations on Strategic Arms Limitation Talks last week. Both sides said they were closer to agreement but Western specialists warned not to expect any quick resolution of SALT issues, noting they go to the very heart of national defense matters in both countries.

Ideast war called inevitable by PLO

JT, Lebanon (UPI) — A Palestinian guerrilla warned that unless President Carter es the PLO, the Middle East will split into pro-Soviet and pro-American camps and fight an inevitable war. Abu Iyad, No. 2 man in PLO leader

Yasser Arafat's Patah guerrillas, said Carter's refusal to recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization would "jeopardize" U.S. interests in the region.

He said Arafat's visit to Moscow this weekend would focus on the Palestinians' strategy to counter the U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace accords.

"The Iraqi army will enter Syria and there will be a united front composed of the Syrian army, the Iraqi army, the Palestine Liberation Army" and forces from hardline Libya, Algeria and South Yemen, Abu Iyad told the English-language weekly Monday Morning.

"Add to that the Soviet factor and you will have an entirely new situation: the region will be divided into two camps — an Arab camp linked with the Soviet Union and an (Egyptian President Anwar) Sadat camp linked with the United States and including Israel, which will play a leadership role.

"There are bound to be wars in the region after the (expected Egyptian-Israeli) peace treaty."

But, while he sharply attacked U.S. Middle East policy from the Kissinger era to the present day, Abu Iyad also held out something of an olive branch to Washington.

"We are ready to start a dialogue (with Washington) at any time," he said. "But is there any intention to recognize the Palestinian people and their organization — in the United States, especially?"

"Once this intention exists there will be no differences on (Middle East) peace frameworks."

Abu Iyad added, "If they (the Americans) continue to withhold that recognition, their interests in this region will be jeopardized."

LINGTON (UPI) — Beginning day, many of the nation's will offer a new service that the embarrassment of having "bounce."

entirely up to the individual offer the service and to decide h it should cost. American Bankers Association, g the banking industry, lobby, p, says the new service allows istomers to keep most of their n savings — where it earns — and to have it transferred to the checking account when it is needed. On the average, the ABA says, American consumers have about $2,000 in their passbook savings accounts at any given time.

The ABA says even if customers use the service only a few times each month and keep a relatively high balance in savings, it would be more than worth it. However, the association cautions, if the service is used on a regular basis, then the fees would more than cancel out the newly earned interest.

Banks may determine fees under any one of several methods: a flat charge each month, a specific charge for each transfer made or requiring a minimum balance in the savings account.

The only similar service now in existence is confined to the New England area.

Security leaks probed

By NICHOLAS HORROCK

WASHINGTON — A subcommittee of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence recommended Tuesday new steps to control leaks of national security data and urged Congress to consider changes in trial procedures in cases where the exposure of national secrets might become an issue.

The 80-page report of the secrecy and disclosure subcommittee is a workman-like discussion of a problem that has plagued the nation since its inception. But the concern was sparked anew as matters stamped "secret" and "top secret" by the government became exposed in the Watergate scandal and later investigations of the United States intelligence agencies.

The subcommittee found that many government officials who had leaked secrets over the years, as well as some who had actually passed the information to this country's enemies, had avoided prosecution because the government feared that a public trial would divulge even more vital information.

In other cases, the committee reported, government employees who committed common crimes, from murder to drug smuggling, have gone unpunished for the same reason — what it called "graymail" — a play on the word blackmail, or the threat that a public trial might harm national security.

The subcommittee, headed by Sen. Joseph Biden (D-DeI.), suggested, among other things, that Congress consider a change in trial procedure so federal judges could conduct secret hearings on whether national security would be compromised by evidence at a trial and thus possibly limit a defendant's request for such information.

The panel also urged that internal discipline procedures for employees who leak information be tightened and that the executive branch of government intensify its effort to limit the information that is labeled "secret" and kept from the public.

The report will undoubtedly stir new debate in Congress, but on first reading, it also raises the question of whether Congress has not put the cart before the horse on government leaks and, in doing so, has ignored the very lessons of intelligence disclosures and the Watergate case.

The most noteworthy leaks of the last decade, for instance, exposed the My Lai massacre; the failure of command decisions in the Vietnam war, as detailed in the Pentagon Papers; the maneuverings of the Watergate burglars, and the criminal acts of the Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

As the doors opened, it was hard to resist the notion that a great deal of information that the American public was entitled to had been hidden in government vaults and marked "top secret" for reasons often only tangentially connected with national security.

In addition the records show there was an enormous pool of important data marked "secret" only because of obscure and poorly drawn criteria for establishing just what secrets the government was entitled to have.

Moreover, in an era in which a great deal of private industry works directly or indirectly for the government and creates elements of the national defense and electronic equipment for use by its intelligence agencies, far wider matters are covered by the stamp "secret" than were covered 200 years ago.

Yet after Congress had established by its own investigations that the "official secrets" label was being used excessively, capriciously and sometimes maliciously, there appeared to be little impetus to vote legislation to correct this. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Me., has introduced a bill to reorganize the system of classifying government secrets, but it has gone nowhere and there is currently no active push for legislation.

It is interesting moreover that Biden's subcommittee has used its greatest energy to date to investigate how to limit disclosures further.

In its defense the subcommittee does recommend that the classification be reoriented, and one of its members, Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., in a dissenting comment, makes this reform the sine qua non of toughening up on leakers.

There is little dispute moreover, even by civil libertarians, that legitimate national security secrets leak out of government. There is also little dispute that these leaks, whether to foreign espionage agents directly or in the news media, can be harmful to the nation's security.

But what Congress has to measure before it starts changing the public trial system or toughening its espionage laws is whether the damage is great enough to warrant severe limitations of the democratic system of government.

The current espionage-law apparatus has been in effect since World War II. It has been a period in which the United States has fought two foreign wars and been under constant cold-war antagonism with powerful enemies. There is in the public record only partial showing that leaks or espionage successes by the enemies of this country have been able to damage permanently our national defense.

Biden, during a news briefing on his committee's report, said he was personally convinced that the harm to the United States was severe enough to require change, but he and the intelligence agencies are going to have to convince Congress and the public that these dangers are as real as they say.

Humphrey-Hawkins bill

WASHINGTON — For a splendid case history of what legislators do, actively speaking, consider the Humphrey-Hawkins bill. In the name of the best intentions, it offers the worst aspects of our political process. When it finally passed, in the closing hours of the 96th Congress, the bill emerged as a kind of popper bill — crispy and crunchy on the outside, but nothing but hot air within.

Virginia's Sen. Harry F. Byrd summed up this unfortunate enactment in a single sentence. Humphrey-Hawkins, he said, "is either fraudulent or it is inflationary." Sen. John Tower of Texas was even more critical. In his view the bill reflects the same "ill-conceived, out dated, wornout, tired, and stale thinking that has brought us to our present economic malaise."

The general idea behind the Humphrey-Hawkins bill when it first was introduced in January 1975, was to involve the federal government deeply and pervasively not merely in economic planning, but in economic execution also. The sponsors — Sen. Hubert Humphrey and Rep. Augustus Hawkins — were, in fact, God rest Humphrey especially, God rest him, had a marvellously naive faith in the wisdom and the power of government decision. Nothing in his long and lively career ever deflected him from the conviction that any problem could be solved if only enough tax money were thrown at it. The recurring failures of liberalism could be easily explained: The failed programs were not liberal enough! The Minnesotan's original concern was with jobs. He felt the unemployment of the poor as a wound. At the time, unemployment was up around 8 or 9 percent, and Humphrey was certain the rate would be brought to 4 percent if the right authority were exercised by federal power.

He dreamed of planning that would extend to the uses of energy, the location of plants and factories, the relocation of workers, and the allocation of mineral resources and raw materials. He could not see that his thinking translated into mandated action, would have led ultimately to totalitarian controls over design, production, marketing, sales and all the rest. All he could see was a job for every person who wanted one. Therefore, the original bill never embodied quite the sweeping powers that Humphrey used to discuss with Capitol Hill reporters, but it was a jaw-dropper nonetheless. And somehow it became a symbol. The Black Caucus seized upon the idea. Labor unions rushed to its support. Everybody climbed aboard — the Sierra Club, the League of Women Voters, the American Jewish Congress, Americans for Democratic Action, and so on.

The original bill of January 1975 was scrapped in March of 1976. It was born again in January of 1977, rewritten and watered down in February of 1978, further diluted and revised by the Banking committee in June, finally reported in August. With every variation, the hot air expanded and the substantive provisions collapsed.

What Humphrey-Hawkins provides, in the language of the Senate report, is "a mechanism for discussing on an annual basis economic policies and programs." This is what all the hoopla is about. This is what Mr. Carter proclaims as "one of the highest legislative priorities of my administration," a landmark full employment bill.

Defectors need love, too

WASHINGTON — As the conscience of America, I have been giving a lot of time and thought to recent events surrounding the Soviet defector, Arkady Shevchenko and his paramour Judy Chavez.

While all the facts in the case have not been disclosed (we have to wait for Judy's and Arkady's books to get the rest of them), this much is agreed upon by everybody.

Shevchenko had a high position in the U.S. when he came over to our side. He met, or was given, as a reward, Miss Chavez who worked for an "escort" service in Washington. He paid Miss Chavez $500 a night for her friendship, and spent between $25,000 and $40,000 on her for gifts and a trip to the Virgin Islands. He was known in the CIA as "the spy who was never cold."

The facts that are in dispute are whether Mr. Shevchenko paid for Miss Chavez services out of his own pocket, or whether he was paid for by the CIA to keep him happy and talking. If Arkady spent his own money, he was taken advantage of for being a foreigner. But if the CIA paid for the undercover operation, then the taxpayers have a right to ask some questions.

The first is: Why on earth was the CIA paying Miss Chavez $500 a night when the going rate in the intelligence business for this sort of thing is $100? If Arkady was paying for it, why didn't someone in the FBI or CIA warn him that he was being overpaid, or for Miss Chavez' nightly companionship?

If the CIA is footing the bill, as Miss Chavez claims, it means there is a serious lack of cost control in the agency when it comes to providing escorts.

No loyal American would take issue with the fact that a high-ranking Soviet official, who wants to come over, should get anything he wants from the CIA in exchange for intelligence secrets.

But when you start paying out $500 a night for close escorts of this kind, you are not only contributing, as President Carter said at his press conference, to inflation, but you are setting a precedent for other Soviet defectors, which the United States can ill afford.

As with the constituent newsletters, I suggest Cleveland. It is not only a nice place to live, but the going rate there for an "escort" is $35 a night including taxi fare. Making Arkady live in Cleveland while they deflected him would certainly save the CIA a lot of money.

Even if the CIA can afford it, other friendly intelligence organizations are furious about the publicity given to the Shevchenko-Chavez affair.

They are never near our girls more than $50 a night — a French intelligence agent told me. "This puts every Western intelligence agency on the spot. The CIA has made the price of sex so high, we may not be able to use it any more as the ultimate weapon."

An Israeli agent thought Arkady was a KGB plant. "What better way to break the CIA budget than to have a defector demand a woman with expensive tastes, a yen for beautiful cars and a desire to make love in beautiful resorts. We could have put up a spy satellite for what it cost the Americans to keep Arkady talking."

Because of all the publicity, the CIA must now give Shevchenko a new coat and move him to a safer city than Washington.

I suggest Cleveland. It is not only a nice place to live, but the going rate there for an "escort" is $35 a night including taxi fare. Making Arkady live in Cleveland while they deflected him would certainly save the CIA a lot of money.

Idaho's own variety of turkeys

The Agriculture Department recently noted an ample supply of turkeys for Thanksgiving this year.

Idaho has grown its own supply of turkeys, all of them uncoupled by the USDA.

Our turkeys, examples of man's ineptitude, foolishness and plain stupidity, occurred with the regularity of a crow at sunrise.

Remember, if you will:

- Ken Carter. In February Ken talked of flying a rocket-powered Lincoln Continental across the Snake River in the style of Evel Knievel.

- A well-meaning bird, Carter thankfully has been grounded by a lack of funds.

- The Twin Falls sewage treatment plant. All year the plant has smelled worse than week-old turkey left out of the refrigerator and it still isn't functioning well enough to turn the leftovers of Thanksgiving Day into harmless effluent.

- Idaho's state legislature. More akin to a gathering of ostriches than turkeys, this uninspired group spent too much time debating right-to-work and in-tertile and too little time reforming the tax laws.

- Blaine County's Sheriff's Department. A deputy in the department ordered construction of a $3000 communications building on Bell Mountain this summer. Unfortunately, the structure had to be torn down because the sheriff's office neglected to get BLM approval for the building.

- The Secret Service. Agents arrested Don Bressette for threatening the life of the president. But Bressette was actually phoning in a threat that he had overheard in a cafe, or so he claims.

And don't forget the first annual Idaho porcupine race.

November wouldn't be the same without hot turkey and cranberries. Nor would a year seem complete without a few royal gobblers at which to scoff.

Voters: fiscal conservatives at taxpayer expense

TWIN FALLS — What Idaho's senators and congressmen say, and what they say they say are often two different things.

Especially if the message is reported either in constituent newsletters or the Congressional Record.

Newsletters are sent out by all members of congress, and they vary in quality. But they share several common features. They will always present the elected official in the most favorable light possible; they frequently are filled with half-truths and occasionally outright lies; and they are paid for by tax dollars.

Idaho newsletters, especially those from Congressmen Steve Symms and George Hansen, frequently contain questionable. These voter surveys ask the length of time you've beaten your wife. Then to help the Washington office classify your response you're asked in which of two inclusive categories you as a voter should be placed: an American supporting the congressman's re-election, or a Communist burrowing into the free enterprise system.

Newsletters were intended to be a method by which congressmen and senators informed the voters at home of actions in Congress. Prior to television and other forms of mass communication, they perhaps made some sense.

But in recent years they have become an unconscionable waste of money and should be abolished. While most are blatant propaganda, supporting at taxpayer expense the re-election of incumbent lawmakers.

Most newsletters mailed by Idaho's delegation aren't worth reading, but to be fair they're no worse than newsletters received by voters in other states. Trying to discover from a constituent newsletter what an Idaho lawmaker really believes or why he voted as he did is like relying on the National Tattler for your daily news.

If congressmen and senators can't bear to break with this wasteful, useless tradition, they should at least establish a non-partisan committee to prepare news summaries for the newsletters.

Second only to newsletters in promoting the American public — is the Congressional Record. Intended to be a daily record of the actual proceedings of Congress, the Record has become a repository for newspaper editorials, magazine articles, favorable replies and letters from the folks back home.

The Record also has become a strong supporter of verbal dishonesty. National lawmakers are forever clipping pages from the Record to send to voters — supposedly copies of the speeches they made defending the Republic.

Most of these speeches can at best be called lies. Most were never said on the floor of the Senate or House of Representatives. A little change in law allowed members of Congress to insert whatever they choose into the day's record, as if they actually debated from the floor in the tradition of Webster and Clay.

Only in recent months did Congress acknowledge it was distorting the intent of the Record. Items no longer actually said on the floor, but inserted after the fact, must now be set off by heavy, dark "bullets" of type.

As with the constituent newsletters, the abuse of the Congressional Record is of minor financial importance. To insert a page in the record costs approximately $728. One B-1 Bomber probably costs more than the entire printing budget of 1978's newsletters.

Regional airport not best for Magic Valley's future

Editor, Times-News: After reading the "Opinion" page on "Airport opponents" — name your sources, I admire Mr. Gus Kelker even more. I believe the SIRAA and the regional airport are contrived by special interests, most recently supported by resort owners in Sun Valley who would have much to gain, they think, by having an unneeded airport constructed in Magic Valley. I can plainly see that Mr. Kelker and the regional airport opponents by no means receive equal time in the Times-News with those who support the same. I believe Mr. Kelker on how prohibitive the cost to Magic Valley taxpayers would be for a new airport, and I believe those who criticize him do so because they know he's telling the truth and are afraid more truth might get out. My concern is more of "need" of a new airport. I believe there is no need whatsoever. Joslin field is already built and I believe could be very handily expanded to meet future needs. It is in an ideal location, and many people from surrounding communities use it. I have never seen it crowded. Most people in Magic Valley don't know what crowded is. Take a trip to L.A. or Chicago — that's crowded. You don't even have to go that far. Try Salt Lake City. There's nothing wrong with a good strong economy and expansion of the right kind. However, I believe the public is being deliberately and selfishly misled by a relatively small group of people with something to gain by burdening tax payers of Magic Valley with an airport they do not need.

Register first, then vote no

Editor, Times-News: The time is rapidly approaching. Are you registered? Be sure and register so you will be able to vote no Nov. 7 on the regional airport issue. Hope everyone by now has read and made themselves aware of the pitfalls you will be falling into if this issue passes. If at any time, now is the time we cannot afford to go into debt any further — we are taxed beyond the earning capacity of most of the working people in our area. Can our senior citizens who live on a meager enough income be burdened with another tax? Can you with a child still in school take on another tax burden? Can you the farmer who depends on his livestock and crops take on another tax? Can you the businessman who depends on all of these people mentioned above, support another tax? Vote no on the regional airport issue and you will be saving many the burden of extra taxes.

Hansen urged to explain taxes

Editor, Times-News: Although I have been away from Idaho for a number of years, I have tried to follow the political situation here. I was often dismayed at the publicity Congressman George Hansen generated for this state. Now that I have returned to Idaho I find that I have missed the events about which I was concerned appear to have been forgotten with no answers given. Although I have never been a supporter of Congressman Hansen, some of his and his wife's recent activities are most incredible. I have heard about Mrs. Hansen's drive to solicit funds nationally to pay personal debts, but I didn't ever hear the result of the campaign. How much money was raised through this appeal and who are the contributors who helped rescue our congressman? I am also curious to know if taxes were paid on any of the monies collected.

Apparently, Congressman Hansen's personal debts have been paid since he is now collecting funds for others. I personally agree with the voters who are trying to raise funds for the Center on National Labor Policy, Inc., an anti-union group, and have heard that he raised money for other causes, including the fight against the Panama Canal Treaties and OSHA. Although I personally agree with the voters who are trying to raise funds for the Center on National Labor Policy, Inc., I am curious about Congressman Hansen's involvement. Does Congressman Hansen receive honorariums, royalties or promises of support for allowing his name to be used by these groups? If so, should not the voters be told? Has Congressman Hansen been previously answered some of these questions while I was away. I hope so. But if the questions have not been answered, I believe the voters deserve an explanation.

McClure's stand on Libyan jets

Editor, Times-News: After having read the article in the Times-News Thursday, Oct. 19, about Sen. McClure, I'm quite bewildered. Who in hell do we have representing us in the senate anyway? To me, this endorsement of selling war transport planes to Libya in exchange for a good deal with the Idaho Farm Bureau is a real hack job. Libya, supporter, financier, base camp and moral ally of damn near every murdering terrorist plot hatched on the planet wants war planes. McClure says fine but only if you contract for Idaho farm products. I laugh until I cry.

The years with Nixon, his law and order with Reagan, his keep the canal, now with Qaddafi, it's give in on the planes. But please, Mr. Qaddafi, make good ole Jimbo look good to these farmers. He needs the votes.

The issue here, Mr. McClure, is moral integrity, not agricultural products. I believe that your perspective has definitely been warped. You can't buy integrity, Mr. McClure.

Opposition aired to 1% initiative

Editor, Times-News: I just sat down with a sharp pencil and went over my 1977 tax return and my 1977 property taxes and came up with some interesting figures. My home in Twin Falls is average and my salary is also rather average. My federal taxes including FICA took 17 percent of my salary, Idaho State taxes took 3 1/2 percent but my property taxes took less than 2 percent.

Voters in Idaho are faced with a decision on the 1 percent initiative next month. Why are we after the "little guy" in the tax bill when the federal tax is the real problem? The initiative is an exact copy of the California 1% where the property taxes forced many people to sell their homes. We don't have that problem here.

Your readers should try their sharp pencils, too. I am voting no in November.

Twin Falls County urged not to buy O'Leary junior high

Editor, Times-News: On reading the article in this morning's Times-News regarding the county commissioners' offer of $900,000 for the old O'Leary Junior High School, it seems that Mr. Leonard and other commissioners are not responding well to the wishes of the taxpayer. There is quite obviously a desire on the part of the taxpayer to limit government spending and growth and the purchase of the O'Leary site is a perfect example of excess considering the potential use is to allow the growth of county government.

In order to put the $900,000 figure in perspective, the total tax levy (tax dollars needed to run the county government for 1978-1979) is approximately $2,338,000, which makes the $900,000 38 percent of the levy. The monies are coming from Revenue Sharing and Payment-in-Lieu funds, which are federal tax dollars that could be used in lowering the tax levy.

The $900,000 is just the beginning of the expenditures on the O'Leary site. As everyone remembers, the reason for the multi-million dollar bond issue for the new O'Leary was the old school was unsafe for human habitation and the cost to make it safe was prohibitive.

It appears the total cost for the new "courthouse annex" will be into the millions — tax dollars — that I am not ready to spend.

Although Mr. Leonard has said he does not want a bond issue on this, perhaps we taxpayers should contact Mr. Leonard and let him know that we would like to vote on whether to spend the millions for his new offices.

Allan Larsen charged with "tricking" Republican voters

Editor, Times-News: Allan Larsen is one of the "leaders" of a legislative majority that raised taxes for residential taxpayers, and then refused to do anything about it. His record in the legislature gives us a few hints about what we might expect if he becomes governor.

Larsen was part of a Republican legislative majority that:

- Passed a law requiring every county to reappraise. This is the law that caused the reappraisal in Ada and other counties.
- Passed laws requiring the assessment ratio on homes to be raised to 20 percent of "market value."

- Blocked the efforts of Governor Andrus to limit the tax increase for homes. Andrus twice asked the legislature to set a lower ratio for residential property. Larsen and company said "no."

- Did nothing to help residential taxpayers while the share of property taxes in Idaho paid by residential property more than doubled from 1965-1977.

- Tried to appease people with a fraudulent "eight mill bill." That bill would have given an average of $28 in relief to home owners, while giving hundreds of thousands of dollars to big corporate property owners.

- Opposed Governor Evans' proposal for an amendment cutting the assessment ratio on homes and farms by 25 percent.

Larsen complains about state spending. Yet the fact is that he was part of a Republican legislative majority that appropriated the money for state agencies. The Republicans have had control of the Idaho legislature since 1959.

As a candidate for governor, Larsen is running against the record of the Republican-controlled legislature on taxes and spending. Yet, he was one of the "leaders" in writing that record, an "interesting trick," but Idahoans should be able to see through it.

KEEP VIOLENT CRIMINALS OFF THE STREET

This is T.W. Stivers, State Representative of District 25:

I support the constitutional amendment for Mandatory Minimum Sentencing because:

- States that have adopted this concept have experienced a reduction in violent crimes.
- Rehabilitation of violent and vicious criminals has been a dismal failure.
- People deserve to be safe on the streets of our cities.
- The Democrat candidate opposes this measure.

Hitler's hypnotic powers captivated Nazi leaders

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Adolf Speer, the former Nazi war production chief, says only Adolf Hitler's hypnotic powers could hold his henchmen — "desperados of all classes" — together through the rise and fall of Nazi Germany.

"If Hitler had a friend I was it," said the 73-year-old Speer, who served a 20-year sentence in Spandau prison for war crimes. Speer called Hitler "irrational but not mad."

Speer discussed the Nazi leader's personality in new memoirs published by the West German newspaper Welt am Sonntag.

The series was eagerly awaited because Speer was a Hitler favorite and anyone knew him better than anyone else.

In the first installment Sunday, dealing with Hitler's dominant personality traits, Speer for the first time commented on reports of the hypnotic influence Hitler exerted over his associates.

"I never directly discussed the suggestive effects of Hitler because it could have been considered an attempt by me to find excuses for my actions," Speer said, using the words "suggestive" and "hypnotic" interchangeably.

But he said only Hitler's hypnotic powers could have held together the other Nazi leaders — "desperados from all classes who followed him for different reasons" — through the years when his prediction he would gain power legally seemed unrealistic.

"This to me is still today overwhelming proof of Hitler's hypnotic powers," Speer said. "This gift of Hitler's to influence others in the years of his battle for acceptance and recognition in the party must have been irresistible."

"Looking back I still feel today that no less astonishing than Hitler's unexplainable successes during the struggle for power were the days of his defeat."

"It was a time when strictly speaking he should not have been able to be an absolute ruler. The lost battles and the impending downfall should have destroyed his halo."

"Even when logical and rational thinking showed a military catastrophe ahead he succeeded in compelling highly individual front line generals to do as they were told."

"The generals and field marshals ... had been courageous officers in World War I, the choice product of the world famous German general staff. And yet they were powerless."

$18,000 bottle of wine

John Grisanti, right, last year paid $18,000 for this bottle of wine and he drank it Sunday. About 30 persons, including London wine expert Michael Broadbent, left, paid $1500 apiece for the opportunity of tasting the 114-year-old Bordeaux bottled in France in 1864.

Hang gliders married aloft

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — The bride wore a white jumpsuit, tan leather boots, a blue ski parka and an orange crash helmet. She was escorted down an airborne aisle by her husband-to-be — in a hang glider.

Debbie Welsenhunt and Don Marshall were married Saturday while circling above a picnic area on the west side of the Sandia Mountains. They had taken off from near the top of 10,600-foot Sandia Peak about 15 minutes earlier.

"I'm really excited," the bride said a few minutes before taking off. "I'm pretty sure this is the first hang-glider wedding."

The doubling ceremony was performed by the Rev. Barry Finkenber, who spoke on a public address system to the couple gliding overhead. Earlier this month Finkenber married a couple in a hot-air balloon and another couple in a tramway car that travels up and down Sandia Peak.

Soviet cosmonauts close space lab

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two Soviet cosmonauts who hold the world's space endurance record were preparing Sunday to return to earth, the Communist Party daily Pravda reported.

Pravda said Cosmonauts Vladimir Kovalenok and Alexander Ivanchenkov were reactivating the Soyuz 31 capsule that will carry them home and closing down the Salyut 6 orbiting space station, but it did not say when they would return.

They began their preparations on their 136th day aboard Salyut 6, which will be mothballed to await a new crew next year, reliable Soviet sources said.

Praising the mission, Pravda said, "New information has been put at the disposal of biologists, medical men, glaciologists, volcanologists, oceanologists and fishermen."

"For instance, they discovered the earlier unknown regularity of glacial movements in Latin American mountains. And they observed seven forest fires in Australia."

"By four cameras of different types the cosmonauts shot kilometers of movie and photographic film depicting events taking place on earth," Pravda said.

It also noted they performed more than 60 experimental meltings in special furnaces that led to combinations of metals that normally would not mix in the gravity of earth.

"About 30 different substances and their modifications have been obtained, seven technological processes have been explored," Pravda said.

Kovalenok and Ivanchenkov flew into space June 15 aboard the Soyuz 29 capsule.

On Aug. 26, Cosmonauts Valery Bykovsky of the Soviet Union and East German Sigmund Jaehn flew to the Salyut 6 aboard the Soyuz 17 for a one-week international mission.

As with previous dual assignments, Bykovsky and Jaehn returned to earth aboard the Soyuz 29, leaving their freshly fueled and supplied Soyuz 31 docked to the Salyut 6 to carry Kovalenok and Ivanchenkov home.

Earlier this month, Salyut program officials said the project proved it would be possible to set up technological factories in orbit where rare alloys and crystals could be developed.

Kidnappers silent after taking boy

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Kidnappers demanding a half-million dollars ransom snatched the son of a Las Vegas carpet magnate from a school playground but after five days have dropped all contact with his tearful parents.

"We want to ask for his return. We beg you, please don't hurt him... he's so little," the boy's mother said Sunday in a public appeal to the abductors. The parents offered a $50,000 reward for information leading to the youngster's safe return.

Cary Sayegh, 6, wearing a T-shirt with the name of his favorite soccer team on the front, was kidnapped last Wednesday. The 60-pound, brown-eyed boy is the son of Sol and Marilyn Sayegh, operators of the largest retail carpet outlet in the state.

The boy's father, owner of the Carpet Barn, faces trial Dec. 12 on federal charges of interstate traveling in aid of racketeering in connection with an alleged $12,000 bribe offer to a state Gaming Commission official.

Congressman's suit acquired

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Arizona Historical Society has acquired one of Rep. John Rhodes' suits.

Not just any suit: the suit he wore when he and others told Richard Nixon he should resign the presidency.

Jerry Lipson, an aide to House Minority Leader Rhodes, said the historical society had asked Rhodes for the suit as part of its political memorabilia.

The suit is a gray pla-striped outfit. Rhodes included the blue tie he wore that day in August 1972 when he, Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., went to the White House to tell Nixon he had lost his support in Congress and should resign.

U.N. rates Ougadougou most expensive to live

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United Nations released its monthly list of the world's most expensive cities and it was bad news for people living in Ougadougou.

The U.N. found that it costs more to live in Ougadougou in the West African nation of Upper Volta than it does in New York City, the benchmark by which most of the world judges expensive cities.

But Ougadougou, although more expensive than New York, is not the worst place you can live. There are in fact 27 cities more expensive than Ougadougou — and 54 more expensive than New York — the costliest being Tokyo, followed closely by Kinshasa, Zaire.

New York ranked about midway on the list with Washington, D.C. further down. Cheapest of all the cities was Colombo, Sri Lanka, where the cost of living is about half that of New York.

The list was a compilation of the relative cost-of-living indexes in September for 125 cities where the United Nations has sizeable staffs.

New York, where the United Nations had its headquarters, was given the arbitrary value of 100, with the other cities on the list assigned numbers in relation to it.

Kids rhymes often 'bite'

CHICAGO (UPI) — The nursery rhymes you recite to your kids are not all that innocent and, in fact, often are biting, but subtle, political barbs of old, a history professor says.

Nelson Diebel of Moravia Valley Community College in suburban Palos Hills, Ill., said he became interested in nursery rhymes while reciting them to his two children several years ago.

"The more you read about them, the more fascinating they become," he said. "There is more to the nursery rhymes than what is on the surface."

Take the ever-popular "Little Miss Muffet," the 43-year-old scholar said. "It is thought to be the Catholic Mary, Queen of Scots and the spider that scared her off her 'haute' is Protestant leader John Knox, a rebel against her rule," Diebel said.

The "Sing a Song of Six Pence" rhyme which ends with "along came a little bird and snipped off her nose," Diebel said, is believed to be about King Henry VIII and the beheading of Anne Boleyn, who he accused of adultery. "The bird," Diebel said, "was often a term used for executioners and you know what the nose is."

The old "Hey Diddle Diddle, the Cat and the Fiddle" apparently was a spoof on how Queen Elizabeth I toyed

"like a cat" with her court, he said. The "cow jumping over the moon" is thought to signify the intrigues played out in the court and the "little dog (who) laughed to see such sport" was the Duke of Lester — the queen's only lover — who saw through her maneuvers.

The old favorite, "Rock-a-bye Baby, in the Treetop" is viewed as a parody on James II, last Catholic Stuart king of England. He had a son late in life, but the "winds of Anglicanism" were on the rise, endangering his throne and his son's succession, Diebel said.

The rhyme ends: "When the bough breaks, the cradle will fall, down will come baby, cradle and all." James II lost his throne during a revolution in 1688.

Nursery rhymes have been traced back to the Vikings, Diebel said, and some scholars believe the "Mother Goose" character — often cast as the teller of the tales — dates back to Charlemagne's time.

Of the more than 500 rhymes, Diebel said, at least 100 deal with politics. Diebel said he sometimes refers to his rhymes in teaching history to his students.

"They were written by the political pundits of the time," he said. "You can take contemporary political affairs and do the same. Maybe we don't do it anymore because we take ourselves too seriously or we can't be that subtle."

Dear Abby

Proposition 5: How will it legislate smoking?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I read that the voters in California now have another controversial proposition that is causing a heated battle. It's Proposition 5, having to do with smoking. If passed, exactly what will it DO — and NOT DO? I do not live in California, but there's been talk of initiating the same kind of legislation in my state.

LIKES TO SMOKE

DEAR LIKES: If passed, Proposition 5 will: Recognize both the right to smoke and the right to breathe clean air.

Establish non-smoking and smoking sections in restaurants.
Guarantee non-smokers smoke-free places of employment while providing smoking areas for employees who smoke.

Create smoke-free hospital rooms unless a smoking room is requested.

It will not: Prohibit or restrict the sale of tobacco products.

Regulate smoking outdoors
Restrict smoking in designated smoking sections indoors.

Affect smoking in private places

Cost the taxpayers money. Instead, it will save tax dollars.

Be carved in granite, since the initiative allows the legislature to amend it with a mere majority vote.

DEAR ABBY: Our son and daughter-in-law have a son (a college senior) who announced that he plans to marry the girl with whom he has gone for a long time.

It seems that our son and his wife feel that this girl is not right for their son, so they suggested that the young couple live together for a year while he is in graduate school, hoping the love affair won't survive beyond that time. This doesn't seem like the right solution to us. What do you think?

PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: Although your son and daughter-in-law prefer to have their son live with the girl rather than marry her, the final decision will be made by the young couple, and not by either the parents or the grandparents. (Or me.)

DEAR ABBY: What in the world do they put on this newspaper that causes an instant hay fever attack? Two minutes after I start reading my newspaper my eyes begin to water, my nose itches and I start to sneeze! In five minutes I'm weeping.

Has anyone else ever complained about this?

HOWARD E.

DEAR HOWARD: Much in today's world news would make anyone cry. As for your itching nose, maybe you have no nose for news. (P.S. An allergist might be more helpful.)

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters For All Occasions." Send $1 and a long stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Laaky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Health

'Skinny' reader requests ways to gain weight

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb, I am writing to you because many people who have problems do and I have one. I am 25 years old and only weigh 95 pounds. I am 5 feet 4 inches tall.

As you can see, I am very skinny, and don't ask me to go see a doctor because I have, and they all say I am OK. They give me a bunch of vitamins that won't help me to gain weight and I am very worried about this. On the other hand, my mother's mother was skinny, but not as skinny as I am, and the rest of my family is OK. Please help me.

Dear Reader, In the first place, you are absolutely right about taking a bunch of vitamins. They won't help you gain weight. Vitamins do not contain calories. If you are already on a balanced diet and get an adequate amount of vitamins, taking additional ones won't help at all.

Most of the vitamins that you would be interested in for this purpose serve simply as catalysts to break down your food. The energy is in the food, not the vitamins. If you already have enough catalysts to break down the food you eat, adding more catalysts won't help.

You'll be surprised at my suggestion. Why don't you take up weight lifting? You don't want to get fat. That's not very appealing. You want to develop your muscle size, and you can be shapely at the same time. You don't need to worry about becoming an Arnold Schwarzenegger because you don't have to grow large bulging muscles in the process.

Weight lifting for women is an idea whose time has come. Women do not tend to grow the large muscles that men do. In fact, Jandrene Irwin is a champion in the women's powerlifting group for the United States. She is in the 132 pound class and is a shapely, blond high school senior.

Jandrene comments that training has been geared for boys but "girls can do their thing, too, if they want." The improved development of your body and increased strength may make you feel better, too.

The only way you can increase the size of your muscles is by working them under load. The larger the load a muscle has to contract against, the larger the muscle will become.

So, my advice to you is very simple. Eat enough calories to support all your daily activities and develop an exercise program that helps develop your muscles. I am sending you the Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control.

Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. This issue will tell you what you need to know about weight training to help develop muscles.

You can use strength exercises either to develop muscles or to maintain your muscles. Through strength training you can help to avoid obesity. How you do it depends upon your goal.

My advice to you does not apply to all readers because the first requirement for anyone who is skinny, or has lost weight, should be to have a medical examination, and be sure there is no underlying medical problem. Since you have already done this, I feel that you can safely follow the program I have recommended.

Halloween hazards

How to keep trick-or-treating safe

Each year millions of youngsters don colorful costumes and parade through the streets in search of "treats." This festive occasion is called Halloween.

More than 132,000 Idaho school children prepare for their annual trek from door to door, the Insurance Information Institute warns parents and motorists of the potential hazards of Halloween activities.

According to the Institute, the highest incidence of accidents involving pedestrians is among children ages 5 to 9. Many of these accidents occur between intersections and the number of the type of accident increases sharply at night, especially in urban areas.

The Institute stresses the importance of children being able to see where they are going. Parents should make sure that the child's vision is not obstructed by masks and that costumes are not loose fitting garments that may cause the child to trip and fall.

The Institute offers the following safety tips:

- Never allow young children to trick or treat alone.
- Use make-up instead of masks or headgear that obstruct the child's vision.
- Use reflective tape on dark colored clothing and on trick and treat bags.
- Make sure that all costumes are made of non-flammable material.
- Do not use lighted jack o'lanterns or candles near children or flammable materials such as paper decorations.

• Inspect all treats before allowing children to eat them.

• Plan Halloween parties at home or at neighborhood facilities whenever possible.

Motorists are advised to drive slowly and to be alert in case a child darts out from between parked cars. The Institute also urges motorists to honk their horns occasionally on dimly-lighted residential streets and to be extremely cautious when backing out of driveways. One final word of caution to motorists... keep your speed down.

Although not all Halloween hazards can be eliminated, parents and motorists can help make this Halloween safer for millions of youngsters by observing these safety tips.

Group works at billboards

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Simon Wagstaff, self-described spokesman of the Billboard Liberation Front, says his aim is to improve billboards.

Recently Wagstaff and the "front" took aim on a billboard that read, "I'm realistic. I only smoke Facts." With a slight editorial change, the billboard read, "I'm real sick. I only smoke."

As a large arrow was added, pointing to the attorney general's warning that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health.

Except for his billboard work, Wagstaff, whose name isn't in the telephone book, communicates only in rare calls to the San Francisco Examiner. He claims the Billboard Liberation Front involves 350 people, mostly professionals, although the amount of the front's activity makes this doubtful.

Asked by the Examiner the simple question, why billboards? "Because we see these Wagstaffs applied."

He said the front's aim is to upgrade and improve billboards, to improve the written message. We use paper and rubber cement. We don't damage billboards. The unprofessional groups use spray paint, but that's below our standards. Billboards are the only form of advertising the consumer can improve. You can't do it with radio or television ads or magazines. Here you can improve the message. At times it's more imaginative than the original."

The last improvement was earlier this month when the front cemented a sign over the Camel man's chest.

"You can't show a naked woman's chest. So why show a naked man's? It's unfair. It's a double standard. And the sight of it could have an adverse effect, especially on young people."

"These advertisers should have a sense of public responsibility."

Wagstaff further objected to the Camel man as a stereotype of men as obese and virile, with hair on their chest.

"Men should be portrayed more realistically. We don't want our bodies used as sex objects to sell cars or cigarettes or anything else."

Generally, anyone would be shocked by the sight of a naked male chest. Imagine what effect it would have on a little old lady or a Girl Scout troop, when the mayor shows a visiting dignitary around, or on a visitor from the Middle East, where they are much more modest?"

Famed fox terrier Nipper returns to RCA job

By LeROY POPE
UPI business writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — Nipper, the famous fox terrier listening to "his master's voice" who became the symbol of the old-fashioned phonograph, is coming back as RCA's trademark.

The real Nipper was the pet of British artist Francis Barraud, who painted the original work, "His Master's Voice," in the early 1890s and later sold a revised version to British Gramophone Corp. Nipper died in 1895 at the age of 11.

Victor Talking Machine Co., one of RCA's predecessor companies, acquired North American rights to the trademark in 1901 and the picture of Nipper listening to the old brass horn phonograph appeared on every "Victrola" phonograph and all Victor records, radios and later television sets.

RCA acquired Victor in 1929 and continued to use the trademark that became so much a part of the American scene that Nipper still gets fan mail.

During World War II, newspaper cartoonists used it to poke fun at political leaders and dictators. A famous one captioned "His master's voice" showed Mussolini with a terrier's body listening to Adolph Hitler's head emerging from the phonograph horn.

Although RCA changed its trademark in 1968, it never completely abandoned Nipper, who was depicted on RCA record labels. When Edgar H. Griffith became president of RCA two years ago he set in motion a 12-step plan to restore the Nipper trademark on a big scale. RCA estimates it will spend $8 million a year to reinstate Nipper as its trademark.

The product to carry the nostalgic "His Master's Voice" picture will be a 13-inch diagonal color television receiver that will reach retail stores next March. RCA also will have Nipper painted on the 3,000 trucks of RCA Service Co.

Though trademarks featuring animals are not as popular as in years gone by, many are still in use.

Some famous ones are the white horse of the Scotch whiskey of that name; the Scotty terrier on Black and White scotch; the Mack truck bulldog; the greyhound on the bus line of the same name; the Hartford Insurance Company's Elk; Tige, the venerable Boston terrier of Easter Brown shoes; Chessie the cat; and the U.S. Forest Service's Smokey the bear.

Over the years, first Victor and then

RCA turned out a lot of paintings, small sculptures, watch fobs, china salt and pepper shaker sets and other souvenirs depicting Nipper.

In 1947, 20,000 paper mache models of Nipper varying in size from 11 to 36 inches high were distributed. In 1915, Victor had Nipper and the old talking machine executed in four large stained glass windows in its main plant at Camden, N.J. The windows were lighted at night and were a landmark for miles.

In 1954, RTA Corp., an RCA distributor, spent $8,000 to build a four-ton statue of Nipper above its office building in Albany, N.Y., where it is still a landmark.

Replicas of Nipper and the His Master's Voice trademark have won prizes in snow sculpture and in many other amateur sculpture shows. Mr. and Mrs. Brian J. Spector of Easton, Md., used the His Master's Voice theme to win the prize for the most original entry in a snow sculpture contest just last winter.

RCA expects the restoration of the Nipper trademark to result in a flood of requests for models of the pooch. In anticipation of the demand, an Ohio firm, Old King Cole Co. is busily turning out hand-painted replicas of Nipper.

Temporary petroleum product shortage may push prices up

Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — A temporary shortage of petroleum products, particularly unleaded gasoline, may force prices upward in coming months, according to a top oil industry analyst.

Herb Hugo, senior editor of Platt's Oilgram newsletter, said the higher prices could be triggered by:

— A Shell Oil Co. decision to reduce deliveries to its dealers during November of its super regular no-lead gasoline by as much as 50 per cent. Because Shell dealers will have less gas to sell, spot shortages could develop at other service stations as consumers turn to competitors.

— "We expect tight supplies of lead-free gasoline the rest of this year. Your $2,000 provides for the rest of his year. The surprising demand for gasoline during the vacation season surged 7 per cent from year-earlier levels, a development that produced record high prices in some areas.

Amoco said its August gasoline revenues soared about 24 per cent from a year earlier, with most of the increase attributed to higher oil sales.

"A substantial downturn in inventories. Hugo said gasoline and heating oil inventories are each down about 10 per cent from last year at most companies.

"During the remainder of 1978, I expect most refineries to build up inventories, rather than attempt to unload their products," Hugo said. "That will keep pressure on price levels."

"The closing of some refineries for maintenance purposes. He said plants in Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Texas and Colorado are temporarily shut down for routine repairs.

"The expected increase in oil prices charged by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Analysts believe OPEC officials will announce a price hike in the range of 7-to-15 per cent during their December meeting in Abu Dhabi.

Hugo said that by February, some consumers could be paying an extra 2 cents a gallon at the pump because of the OPEC increase.

Hugo noted that gasoline prices typically tumble after Labor Day. "It hasn't happened this year," he said. "We're seeing steady prices instead of lower ones."

What concerns Hugo most is the skyrocketing demand for unleaded gas. "For instance," he said, "about half of all its sales are at the unleaded pumps."

Hugo said that some stations sell unleaded for a dime higher per gallon than regular, even though the wholesale spread is about 3 cents a gallon.

Possible leak brings fuel cell recall

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission Thursday announced the recall of fuel cylinders used on blow torches that it said could suffer from a fuel leak.

A leak could also depressurize the cylinder, it said, quickly enough to propel it.

"Consumers should return the product to the place of purchase for a full refund," the agency said. "Anyone needing additional information should contact Cleanwell at 4000 Medford Ave., Los Angeles, 90063 or call the company toll free (800) 421-6233.

The recall is being conducted by Cleanwell Products, Los Angeles, and involves all of its yellow "Clean-Burn Fuel Cylinders," model CB-1000, which were made from June of 1977 to April of 1978.

The cylinders were sold either separately or as part of the Whirl Wind Torch Kit, model PR-350. They were priced at about $4.75 and distributed nationwide. The total number of units involved was not made public.

The safety agency said the cylinders could suffer from a separation where the threaded connector meets the fuel tank. That, it said, "may cause a fuel leak, which could result in possible ignition and burns."

Unanticipated deductions

(Last of 10 columns) — Millions of taxpayers still do not realize that, under a generous IRS ruling, your outlays for autos, TV sets and other capital equipment can now help you meet the more-than-half support rule essential if you are to claim a dependency deduction.

A typical situation: your son is a college student who earns $3,000 this year to pay for part of his expenses. Your $2,000 provides for the rest of his support. You also buy him a used car for $2,500 as a Christmas gift.

Until recently, a dependency deduction for your son was out of the question, as the IRS interpreted it. You provided only 40 percent of his current living expenses.

Good news: now, under a new ruling, the deduction is all yours — and the reason is that your $2,500 Christmas gift counts as support you provide. And that — along with the $3,000 you provide in cash support — amounts to more than the $3,000 your son puts up.

Isn't there an income limit for dependents? In general, a dependent's income must be less than $750 ($1,000 in 1979). But that doesn't affect your deduction for your son. The income limit does not apply to a child who is under age 19 or a full-time student.

Q: But what if you finance the car you buy for your son, put up only $500 of the total $2,500 cost this year? Does this mean you lose out on a dependency deduction for your son?

A: Not at all. For another break you get is that what you provide as support counts as soon as it's received — not when you actually pay for it. As long as your son gets the car this year, the entire $2,500 counts as support you are giving him in 1978.

But as is the case with most tax breaks, you only can take advantage of them if you handle matters right — and on time.

Say you give your college-age daughter a TV set for her birthday, which she takes with her to college.

The result: the TV set counts as support you provide for your daughter. But if your daughter leaves the set at home and the whole family uses it? Then the TV set becomes an item of family use. The result here is that the cost of the TV set doesn't count for dependency purposes if it isn't for the exclusive use of your child.

As another illustration, say your son wants to buy a $4,000 car this year. You provide $3,000 to pay for your son's other expenses.

the car entirely out of his own funds. Thus, you lose a dependency deduction for your son ($750 this year; $1,000 in 1979). The full cost of the auto is treated as support your son provides for himself this year, even if he only makes a small down payment this year.

Try lemon drops in your mousetrap

Lake tongue twisters? Try this one, three times swiftly "Red Buick, blue Buick."

Newspaper tears more easily the way you want it to, vertically, than it does crossways.

The sap in a tree does not move up in the Spring and down in the Autumn. It moves from the center out toward the bark in the Spring and from the bark in toward the center in the Autumn.

Nothing beats lemon drops as mousetrap bait. Better than cheese. Even better than peanut butter. Mice like sweets. Lemon drops are sweet. And being sticky, they hold the mouse for the instant it takes the spring to snap. That's what the researchers now report. Get those mice.

EXECUTION

I've heard that if a capital criminal is officially electrocuted but fails to die, that criminal can't be executed "again, right?"

A. Not right—Take that killer named Bullen, for instance. In 1932, he went to the chair at Sing Sing. But enroute to the graveyard, he woke up and jumped out of his coffin. Didn't help a bit. The lawmen caught him and electrocuted him again, this time for real.

Q. "Ever see the Ten Commandments written in rhyme?"

A. Have indeed. Research reveals that goes: "Thou no gods shalt have but me... Before no idol bow the knee... Take not the name of God in vain... Nor dare the Sabbath day profane... Give to thy parents honor due... Take heed that thou no murder do... Abstain from words and deeds unclean... Steal not, for thou of God art seen... I tell not a wifful lie, nor love it... What is thy neighbor's do not cover."

TROUSERS

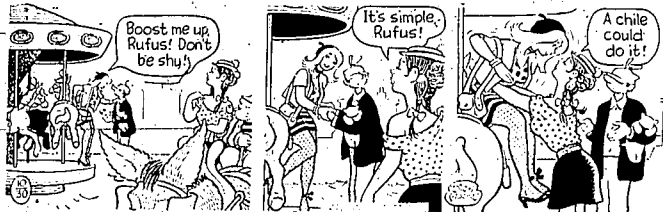

Men's trousers these days are sort of loud. Brightly striped, checked, embroidered. The style has come full circle. First trousers in history—those devised by the Central Asian nomads to make it easier to ride horses—likewise were brightly striped, checked, embroidered.

You know the sort of character who immediately notices the worst in everything? The old Persians delivered a common remark to such a person: "All you see in a peacock is its legs."

Jack Ellis discusses rules at Hawaiian International Bullfish Tournament

Does prize money hurt deep-sea fishing sport?

KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii (UPI) — Some years ago a friend took me deep-sea fishing off Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. Caught a 30-pounder. Had my picture taken with it on the dock.

When a couple of teams had 30 pounders weighed in for points in this year's Hawaiian International Bullfish Tournament, one expert sneered, "They shoulda throwed 'em back."

"They're getting too desperate for points," said another, "but don't say I said that."

They do take their fishing seriously during five days each summer on Hawaii's Kona Coast, when fishing teams from around the world haul in big ones in one of the world's top fishing competitions.

One by one, in the afternoons at the town dock of the palm-shaded resort village of Kailua-Kona, the boats unload their catch to be weighed on high-weighted and scored. Judges and other functionaries, their duties identified by the color of their T-shirts, scurry about.

A crowd of several hundred is appraised on loudspeakers of each catch: kind of fish, weight, test line, time fought, angler, skipper. There are pictures of the big ones and those who caught them along with a bikini-clad beauty queen.

There are cheers for the really big ones, 400 pounds and up. And there are many really big ones, some over 600 pounds. Most are marlin of one type or another.

In the evenings though, in restaurants and bars around town, among the men who run such tournaments and those who participate in them, there is serious talk these days — about keeping the sport sporting. Should the fishing be done on even lighter tackle to make it more of a test of skill? Should the specter of prize money be allowed to intrude into this pristine pastime? Should there be a tag and throwback policy to preclude environmentalists' claims that various species are being endangered?

There was a significant change in the competition last year and this. The 130-pound test line was eliminated and only the 80- and 50-pound categories scored. Now there was some talk of going to even lighter, 30-pound, tackle.

The weights indicate the maximum amount of pressure at which a line will break and a sample of the line on which each fish caught is tested at the dock until it breaks to make sure it qualifies.

"You've got to realize," said Jim Rizzuto, a tourney commissioner, "that this is what makes it tough — all the elements of resistance on the line must be kept to less than 80 or 50 pounds — the drag on the line through the water, the speed at which the fish is moving, the resistance of the reel, how much line is on the spool, the resistance of the guides on the pole."

This year, a big local tournament with prize money was organized by several charter boat skippers. Preceding the international, it attracted more entrants although most were local. Its supporters say it helps open up game fishing to the angler of limited means. But it is an admitted enticement to cheating.

High prices may drive buyers to used car lot

NEW YORK (UPI) — The soaring costs of new cars may drive 13.5 million Americans into the used car market this year. Experts at Hertz, the nation's largest retailer of used cars as it relates vehicles from its fleet, offer these suggestions to reduce the odds on winding up with a "lemon":

— Ask for a history of the car that will show what repairs and service have been performed. Acquaint yourself in detail with what warranty, if any, is offered and what its exact provisions are.

— Examine the exterior for dents, scratches and rust, especially the small spots that could grow into big spots. Open the door and look on the hinges for paint overspray and check in the wheel wells for rust. Extensive repainting could mean the car has been in a serious accident.

— Lift the hood and check its underside, under the insulation, for signs of engine fire. Examine the engine wiring and hoses carefully, looking for wear.

— Inside the car, check the carpeting for fit and wear; and look over the accelerator and brake pedals for excessive use. Do they suggest more mileage than the odometer shows?

— In the trunk, check the spare tire and lift the floor mat to look for signs of water tanks or flooding. Check for major new welds that show major body repairs have been done.

— Start the engine and drive the car over a clean area of concrete or pavement, or over papers spread on the ground. Let it idle there, and while it is doing that, check the exhaust. It should be clean after the engine warms. Black smoke is a trouble sign.

Culture may have been cannibalistic

CORTEZ, Colo. (UPI) — A University of Colorado archaeologist says further tests will be made to determine if two skeletons found at a dig in the ancient Anasazi ruins were victims of cannibalism.

Allen Kane, a CU graduate student and field director of the diggings just north of Cortez, said there was "reasonable" reason to believe two bodies found in an underground burial chamber were victims of cannibalism.

"One thing that will give us a hint is if there are cut marks on the bones," said Kane. "We'll look to see if they cut the meat off the bones with stone knives."

Kane said the bones were broken up into small pieces of 2 to 3 inches and they were twisted as if someone was trying to get inside to the marrow.

"It's obvious the breaks had been performed immediately upon death," said Kane.

Kane said the victims were a man and woman in the prime of their lives, perhaps belonging to the Anasazi culture. He said the discovery could help explain the sudden disappearance of the culture from southwestern Colorado about 1050 A.D.

"We know the people left this area about this time," he said. "So they may have been driven out by invaders. That would explain the violence."

"Or," he continues, "this might be evidence of pressure on their resources. Maybe there was bad weather and the fields were giving out. They may have had to utilize cannibalism to survive."

Republican governor hopeful Allan Larsen during recent visit at CSI class

1% divides governor seekers

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The two candidates for Idaho governor this campaign year have squared off to battle over one primary election issue — the 1 percent initiative.

When the dust has settled on election day, Nov. 7, the results of this single issue encounter could well mean political life or death for Democratic Governor John Evans and Republican challenger Allan Larsen.

The two men have taken opposite stands on this public initiative to reform Idaho's ad valorem property tax by limiting it to 1 percent of market value.

Wherever Evans and Larsen travel on their campaign tours throughout the state, the 1 percent initiative seems to be the inevitable focus of attention and their messages on this crucial campaign issue always seem to come from different poles on the political and economic globe.

Evans declares his sympathy for the spirit of the initiative but he says it is too severe in the tax cuts it proposes and too poorly written to be implemented as a working law.

Larsen, on the other hand, has wholeheartedly supported the initiative since he announced his candidacy for governor last March 29. He says the proposed tax-cut law is a viable means to provide property tax relief and to curtail excessive government spending.

The issue is clear, but what is the thinking that lies at the heart of each man's 1 percent stand?

The governor always prefaces his attacks on the 1 percent initiative with the assurance he agrees in principle with the property tax reform proposition.

This initiative, he says, is simply not the right road for Idaho to take to cut taxes and control government growth.

"The basic problem," Evans claims, "is that it is too severe—it cuts back too far. It isn't realistic."

The incumbent says the 1 percent initiative is not the simple mandate of the people that the proposition's supporters declare. He says behind the initiative lies a complex mosaic of public feeling: People want tax relief and they want a halt to excessive government growth, but they also want to maintain the many public services they now enjoy. They don't want their schools, libraries and highways to deteriorate because of a tax cut.

Evans claims these things could happen if the initiative passes and he, therefore, insists there are better ways to accomplish these reforms in Idaho.

"We are talking about a 50-60 percent cutback in funding for cities and counties," the governor observes about the initiative. "That is too severe. There is no way in the world we can cope with that. We're talking about educating our children."

Evans says he anticipates the 1 percent initiative would cut tax revenues for local government about $14 million the first year. This impact figure is the initial estimate of the Idaho Tax Commission and just recently has been revised downwards to $125 million.

"Still, the governor says this reduction is too much and it cuts in the wrong places. . . . I object to the 1 percent initiative because it gives the major share of the relief to income producing properties — primarily the big industries," Evans explains. "I think that is unfortunate when you recognize these industries are making the greatest profits in their history. It's just not appropriate. . . . I want to see us give property tax relief to the people who truly need it: the homeowners, small businessmen and farmers."

Evans says his office is working on other tax relief packages that would work better for Idaho than the 1 percent initiative, which is a near carbon copy of California's recent property tax reform, Proposition 13.

Religion complaint Letters flow in lawsuit

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — A Hagerman woman who filed a religious discrimination complaint last winter against the federal nutrition laboratory here said she has received wide support from individuals throughout Idaho.

Mary Jo Moos said "at least" 50 letters, one containing 13 signatures, have arrived since the suit was filed.

She said there also have been many phone calls and personal contacts urging her to continue her fight against alleged discrimination against non-Mormons in the hiring policy at the federal laboratory.

She has heard from people in Blackfoot, Idaho Falls, Boise, Nampa, Burley and Paul, all indicating they also had experienced the same discrimination, but were unable or unwilling to press the matter.

Mrs. Moos, who moved here two years ago from New Mexico, claims she was not hired for a clerk/steno position even though she had a qualifying grade on her civil service test because she does not belong to the Mormon Church.

She filed a complaint last Jan. 10 with the Office of Equal Opportunity in Washington, D.C.

She is waiting for a report of the investigation conducted by the agency.

Daniel Harrison of the OEO office in Washington, D.C. came to Hagerman last month and spent a week here interviewing several other persons who also had sought work at the lab.

The official taped testimony from both Mrs. Moos and Dr. Robert Smith, project leader of the laboratory, named the Tunison Laboratory of Fish Nutrition, located near the federal fish hatchery at Hagerman. It is operated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

He assured her the discrimination charge is being pursued. Mrs. Moos said, but in the meantime the OEO has reprimanded Dr. Smith for a phone call he made to Mrs. Moos last May 7.

According to Mrs. Moos, Dr. Smith telephoned her after news of her decision to file discrimination charges was publicized by the area media last May.

She said he warned her not to continue with the investigation and that her case was "ignorant of Civil Service procedures."

Because she included a notation about the phone call in her complaint to OEO, Harrison asked her if she wanted to make a separate complaint against Smith for trying to discourage her.

"I told him I did not feel that was necessary," Mrs. Moos said.

The letter, termed a "repraisal decision," was sent by OEO officials after investigating the matter. She said the communication is considered "a matter of record" and she does not know what, if any, effect it will have on the OEO decision on her original religious discrimination charge.

The equal opportunity agency decision, a copy of which was received by Mrs. Moos recently, says the agency "cannot accept Dr. Smith's portrayal of himself as a private citizen only giving advice and help."

Five escape injury in head-on wreck

TWIN FALLS — Five people escaped serious injury early Saturday morning when two cars collided head-on north of Jackpot, Nev., on U.S. 93, the Idaho State Police reported.

According to the ISP report, the accident occurred about 3 a.m. Saturday, 11 1/2 miles north of Jackpot, when the driver of a northbound car, Lillian Herrera, 22, of Lemon Valley, Nev., allegedly fell asleep at the wheel and crossed the center line.

The right front of Miss Herrera's vehicle hit the right front of a southbound car driven by Eileen Hall, 45, of Roberts, the report said, with both vehicles estimated to be traveling 50 mph at the time of impact.

Riding with Miss Herrera were Steve Hauf, 25, and Kirk Hansen, 24, both of Reno, Nev. The driver and Hauf were treated and released from Magic Valley Memorial hospital after suffering possible facial and neck injuries, respectively.

Ms. Hall and her passenger, Ann Wood, 34, of Roberts, suffered only minor bruises, as did Hansen, the state patrol said.

An ISP investigator said both cars were totaled, with damage to the Herrera vehicle estimated at $2,900 and $3,000 to the Hall car.

Miss Herrera was charged with driving left of the center line. No one was wearing seatbelts in either car.

Anthony thinks state legislature not listening

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's state legislature has not been listening to the people, according to George Anthony, candidate for state representative from District 24.

Anthony was one of the speakers featured this weekend in a political forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

Anthony, a third-generation Idahoan who was born and raised in western Twin Falls County, was indignant at the disregard the legislature has shown toward the needs and desires of the public.

"Twice in the last two years," Anthony accused, "the people of this state have been forced to take matters into their own hands. . . . The first instance was when the voters got disgusted after the legislature spent 10 years playing politics with Idaho's water future. Anthony said. He declared that he took a people's initiative to prod the legislature into establishing a state-wide water plan.

The voters have continued to be dissatisfied with legislative deafness, according to the senatorial candidate.

"A supposed tax-limiting proposal, the 1 percent initiative, has been placed on this upcoming November ballot," Anthony pointed out. "Regardless of its merits or faults, this proposal informs the legislature that the voters and taxpayers want competence — and equity — in their tax system."

Anthony, who has a master's degree in physics and has worked as a nuclear engineer in atomic energy and in space programs connected with national defense, emphasized that he also has been a farmer and a small business man for more than a decade in Twin Falls County. He feels that this varied and broad experience gives him the knowledge and background to deal with all kinds of legislative problems.

"I am not for giving preferential treatment to the utilities and other large economic interests," Anthony said in closing, as he asked for support and votes regardless of party affiliation. "If I am elected as your next senator, I will listen to the individual taxpayer, the individual consumer, and act on their behalf. I will help to legislate for the common good, and not for benefits which go only to special and selfish interests."

Anthony's remarks, along with those of other local political candidates, were given before an outdoor audience at Lynwood Shopping Center, and broadcast over radio station KTLG.

Simmons the poet

A love affair with steam engines

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A lifelong love affair with steam engines has culminated in a book of poetry by a former railroad fireman who now lives in Salmon.

Ralph Simmons, a native of Rexburg who briefly lived in Jerome in the mid-1960's, was in Twin Falls this week promoting his hard-backed volume "Rhythms of the Rails," published by Vantage Press of New York.

Most of the poems in the collection are narrative, many of them recalling the adventures in those legendary, smoke-belching monsters which moved people and freight around the country in years gone by.

One of his poems, entitled "Come, Let's Fire This Old Hog," goes like this:

"Have you ever fired a steam engine over the gleaming rails? If you haven't you've missed a lot of thrills. Come listen to my tales. . . . Come and climb into the cab and make this run with me. You will have a lot to remember for there're wonderful sights to see."

The picture on the book jacket is of old train No. 2-256 coming out of Glenns Ferry.

Simmons says he always was in love with steam engines, beginning with the steam-operated threshing machines on his father's farm where he was born in 1911.

"My daddy used to say he always knew where to find me when I was missing because I'd be out by the steam engine," the fireman poet said.

He attributes his late-blooming poetic ability to the early mental training he received from his father.

"Poetry comes easy to me because my dad would sing a song four or five times to me and then make me sing it back when I was 5 years old. . . . People used to say 'Don't cram his head with that—it will run him.' But the more you put in your head, the more it will hold," Simmons believes.

As a young man Simmons formed on Birch Creek near Ririe, but in 1943, hearing there was a need for firemen on the railroad, he went to Pocatello and his dream of operating steam engines became a reality.

Before diesel engines were put into general use on the railroad about 1956, railroad firemen had to stoke the coal-fired engines by hand. Railroad employment was sporadic so in-between he fired stationary boilers for Rogers Brothers Co. in Idaho Falls and mined.

When modernization brought the end to the steam engine, Simmons quit the railroad for good. He and his wife, the former Opal White, lived in Jerome where she taught school. They also lived briefly at Wendell. Mrs. Simmons, a graduate of Albion Normal, also taught at Richfield.

In 1966 they moved to Seattle where he went to work for Boeing Aircraft Co. as a Grade 3 machinist. During his three years there, he contracted emphysema, but he said it was his own fault.

"The company provided suction tubes to keep us from breathing the dust from the fiberglass while working on the belly pans on the 747 jets," he said. "But I got careless and would work ahead of the suction tubes."

When work slowed at Boeing he spent his last employed years at the Fisher Flour Mills on Harbor Island near Seattle.

After retiring, the couple moved to Salmon. He found retirement hard to take so production of his book of poems on many different subjects in addition to railroad tales has "given me an incentive," Simmons said.

He is now doing research for a second book which will be called "The Rusty Nail" and will deal with the many abandoned rail lines in the area.

Hailey man killed when plane crashes

HAILEY — A 31-year-old Hailey man died Saturday when the sail plane he was flying over the Pioneer Mountains crashed several miles east of Hailey.

Ronald Lee Nebola was pronounced dead of internal injuries by Coroner Russ Mikel, who examined the victim late Saturday afternoon at the crash site.

Nebola was flying alone in a sail plane when it reportedly caught in a down draft, according to Blaine County Search and Rescue officials.

The plane was pulled into a spiral drop until it crashed into the south side of the mountains east of Friedman Memorial Airport, the officials reported.

The crash was reported to the Blaine County Sheriff's office about 3:45 p.m. Saturday.

Blaine County rescue volunteers recovered Nebola's body from the downed plane early Saturday evening.

Federal Aviation Administration officials arrived Sunday in Hailey and are scheduled to investigate the crash site today, the officials said.

Governor seekers disagree about initiative's effect

If the initiative passes, Evans says there will be an overall belt-tightening in both state and local government as budgets are cut and services inevitably reduced.

This past summer the governor ordered all state agencies to prepare budget projections at various funding levels. The most austere projection anticipated budget cuts of 30 percent.

If the initiative succeeds, he says he can use these budget projections to determine where to cut first, so state monies can be passed down to local government, which would experience the actual revenue losses caused by the initiative's property tax cuts.

Evans would not say which areas of state government would be reduced if the initiative becomes law. His hopes and campaign wishes are that it will be rejected by the people on election day.

Allan Larsen, however, is looking to a different star. His campaign efforts have taken him in a different direction and into a different camp of economists.

Larsen believes the 1 percent initiative can cut property taxes and put the lid on government growth without injuring schools, libraries and other public services.

"I think it's the people's way of stopping the growth of government," Larsen observes about the initiative.

He acknowledges, "It starts on the right track and the wrong end of government. . . It should be starting on the federal government instead of local government." But he says the initiative is a start, and he believes it can be a healthy working law.

The key to the 1 percent initiative,

Larsen says is to stop government growth now and use surplus revenues generated through state growth to pick up the slack created by 1 percent cuts.

Larsen, the former Speaker of the House of Representatives, anticipates the 1 percent initiative will give Idahoans a $100 million property tax break. This impact figure is the one calculated by the Association of Idaho Taxpayers.

By Larsen's calculations, this $100 million tax cut need not affect the services of state and local government at all. He says if government growth is halted now, $106 million in surplus revenues will be available to block the punch of the initiative to local government.

Larsen says Idaho is growing at a rate of about 14 percent each year and that this coming fiscal year about $46 million in new revenues will be generated through the growing state tax base. In fiscal year 1980, Larsen claims another $58 million will be in the state general fund due to continued growth.

The Republican gubernatorial candidate, therefore, says the state could have $106 million available to pick up the slack from 1 percent cuts in fiscal year 1980, when the initiative would first take effect.

The only magic Larsen claims is necessary to successfully implement the 1 percent initiative is the public mandate to stop government growth.

Whether that mandate comes is something which will be decided Nov. 7, when Idaho voters will express their preference for one of the two candidates.

Thomas, Leabo seek post

By LORAYNE O. SMITH Times-News writer
GOODING — The two men seeking the Gooding County first district commissioner post Nov. 7 live down the road from each other and have farming backgrounds. Will Thomas, the Republican candidate, farms four miles east of Gooding "within a stone's throw" of his Democratic opponent, Wellington Leabo.

The men are competing for the seat now held by Jim Wilkins, who was defeated in the August primary by Thomas in his bid for re-election.

According to Leabo, Gooding voters answering a questionnaire he circulated overwhelmingly favor lower taxes and want more local control over county government.

The candidate, who farmed east of Gooding for some 35 years, has been active in the Democratic party both on county and state levels for the past 20 years.

Leabo said voters expressed other interests in answering his questionnaire, but all "very definitely" are concerned about taxes and local control.

While the two candidates are conducting a low-key campaign, both were vocal in criticizing the incumbent commissioners for their weak policy.

Commissioner Leabo decided last winter to take the county out of the commercial weed-spraying business, a move bitterly opposed by many farmers.

That decision led to an unsuccessful recall movement against all three commissioners.

Thomas, who was raised in Salmon, has been farming here for 16 years. He feels "people have to deal with problems with common sense" and believes industrial development should be encouraged to give young people opportunity for employment.

"But I'm talking about good clean industry," he said. The GOP hopeful said he favors zoning and "we don't want industry right next to a residential area."

Thomas, active in the Gooding County school board, is married and has four children.

Leabo graduated from Kimberly High School and has been active in several farm organizations. He also serves on the county weed commission. He was on a county school board prior to school consolidation and is a member of the National Farmers Union, vice-chairman of the Tax Equity Association and has been active in youth programs.

Claims false on water devices

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Promoters of several new-market water treatment devices are making false claims for their products, a Utah Social Services Department official says.

Gayle Smith, director of the Bureau of Waterworks, said an investigation by his office and the Utah Business Regulations Department found no scientific evidence to back up claims that three devices now on the market in Utah correct hard water, corrosion and salt deposit problems.

"One type is a magnet encased in plastic which is to be taped to the outside of an incoming water pipe," Smith said.

"Another device, when plugged into a wall socket, is supposed to cause an electrical current within the water pipe."

"The third device for which false claims are being made includes a metal bar which, when placed inside the pipe, is supposed to soften water, reduce scale and corrosion," he said.

Smith cautioned consumers to investigate such devices carefully because they have not been cleared by any product safety agency and may cause a health hazard in the home. And he said claims that the devices are endorsed by reputable organizations are false.

"I should be reminded that a patent for a water treatment device does not guarantee satisfactory performance. And cleverly worded testimonial endorsements may just be sales pitches," Smith said.

He said consumers who have questions about the home water treatment devices or who need information on tested water treatment procedures should contact the Bureau of Waterworks, 150 West North Temple, Salt Lake City, Utah, 84110 — or should phone 533-4207.

Housewife sells 'glass plate' for $40; worth $1,700

NILES, Ill. — The story of a small fortune, lost because a housewife had no idea her glass plate was a collector's item, recently came to light.

In a letter to J.R. MacArthur, chairman of The Bradford Exchange, world's largest trading center in collector's plates, Madison, Wis., woman wrote: "I had a Lalique 1965 plate . . . which I sold to a friend for $40. I had not heard of you at that time."

The plate she sold is actually valued at more than $1,700. Although MacArthur points out that this price is exceptionally high, he said, "I'm afraid others may be losing hundreds or thousands of dollars by not knowing what their plates are worth. To aid in identifying valuable plates, the Exchange issues a report that includes current prices on more than 900 plates, guidelines on what to look for and when to buy, and the plate evaluator's checklist used by the Exchange."

To obtain copy without cost or obligation, send your name, address, and zip code by November 27 to: The Bradford Exchange, Dept. 30744, 9301 Milwaukee Avenue, Niles, Illinois 60648. (Not available to Canadian residents.)

New England senators best environmentally

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senators from New England had the best environmental record during the past congressional session, while those from the Southwest had the worst, an environmental group said Saturday.

The League of Conservation Voters, releasing its annual rating of the Senate on environmental issues, also said President Carter, based on his announced positions, has a higher environmental rating than any senator.

The group said "by far the most pro-environment region of the country was New England, whose six states had an 81 percent average score. In contrast the Southwest scored lowest with an 18 percent average. The other regions, with their scores, were Mid-Atlantic (66); Midwest (52); Far West (51); Great Plains and Mountain states (both 42) and Southeast (36)."

The ratings for each senator were based on how he or she voted on 34 issues ranging from amendments to the Clean Air Act to expansion of the Redwoods National Park and strip mining legislation.

The average score for all Senate members was 52 percent, the league said, adding the President, Carter, had the highest score in the Senate, would have scored 92 percent, based on his announced positions on various issues.

The top 10 scorers were all Democrats — Sens. Muriel Humphrey, Minn., 98 percent; John Culver, Iowa, 94 percent; Paul Hatfield, Mont., and Edward Kennedy, Mass., 90 percent; Dick Clark, Iowa, and Patrick Leahy, Vt., 94 percent; Gary Hart, Colo., 93 percent; Joseph Biden, Del., 92 percent; William Proxmire, Wis., 91 percent; and Claiborne Pell, R.I., 90 percent.

Twin Falls nurse's case set Thursday

TWIN FALLS — Oral arguments will be made Thursday before the Idaho Supreme Court in a case involving a nurse from Twin Falls who lost her license in 1976 for telling a cancer patient about Laetrile and other alternative treatment methods.

Lawyers for Jolene Tuma and the State Board of Nursing will give 30-minute oral arguments before the high court justices beginning at 9 a.m. Thursday in the Twin-Falls County Judicial Building. The high court opinion isn't expected to be handed down immediately.

Mrs. Tuma was working as a nurse at Twin Falls clinic and for the College of Southern Idaho as clinical nursing instructor in the fall of 1976, when her license was suspended by the State Board of Nursing for six months. The suspension has never been fulfilled because the case has been in court ever since.

A hearing officer initially ruled she had interfered with the doctor-patient relationship and was guilty of unprofessional conduct. Mrs. Tuma's appeal was denied in district court.

Contacted Sunday, Mrs. Tuma declined comment on her case except to say that if she lost this round, she didn't know whether to appeal it or not.

BOISE (UPI) - A man with a pistol robbed a Boise gasoline station of an undisclosed amount of cash Sunday morning and escaped in a black 1957 Chevrolet, police said.

The suspect was described as a dark-haired 30-year-old white over six feet tall and weighed nearly 200 pounds.

Students better?

BOISE (UPI) - Retired Boise School Superintendent Lloyd Enson said Idaho students are getting better education than students elsewhere, even though the state spends less on each student than the other states.

He said in an Idaho Statesman copyright story the level of education in Idaho has not dropped to a serious level, but he said, "It's enough to cause concern."

Small communities, a strong agricultural base, and an absence of poverty-stricken areas are factors that have allowed Idaho to retain a high grade of education, according to Enson.

"A kid has a security that comes from having deep roots in a family and community," Enson noted. "If he is insecure for any reason, then learning must be more of a problem for him."

Symms a champ?

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) - Rep. Steve Symms said Sunday he is a champion of those opposed to gun control legislation.

During a campaign stop at Moscow, Symms criticized his general election opponent Roy Truby for being embarrassed by Symms' "strong stands."

The continued fight against gun control in America must be led by people who are not afraid to take a stand, Symms said.

The Idaho Republican said he stepped one gun control bill by pulling two guns in the House Press Gallery. He said that demonstration was "an excellent illustration of the absurdity of the proposed gun control law which would have banned three-fourths of the handguns in the country."

Committee forms

BOISE (UPI) - A committee formed to ensure passage of the 1 percent property tax initiative said it has collected about $10,000. It plans to use in an advertising campaign before the Nov. 7 general election.

C.L. "Butch" Otter, Committee to Save the 1 Percent chairman, said his group wants to raise and spend $50,000 to persuade voters to pass the initiative.

Otter said in an Idaho Statesman copyright story Sunday that tax cut advocate Howard Jarvis' Nov. 5-6 visit to Idaho will be part of the committee's plan to get the measure approved.

Otter, who was defeated in this year's Republican gubernatorial primary, said his group could do "a reasonable job" of advertising with $50,000.

Overtime struggle

Denver — but barely

SEATTLE (UPI) — "Gee-man-ee!" bellowed Denver coach Red Miller. "I told the squad the good Lord was with us but I wanted us to work a little overtime."

The Broncos had to work 12:59 of overtime Sunday before Jim Turner booted an 18-yard field goal to give Denver a 20-17 victory over the stubborn Seattle Seahawks. Coupled with Oakland's 27-23 loss to San Diego, they put Denver into sole possession of the AFC West lead.

Whoever it was that made the Broncos go into overtime, it was the Seahawks that gave Turner a second chance. On the play preceding the winning field goal, Turner missed an identical 18-yard attempt but was given another opportunity when Seattle was caught with 12 men on the field.

The Seahawks put up a valiant effort to keep Denver from scoring a touchdown and seemed to have thwarted the field goal try until the penalty was called.

"Hey, did the Oakland Raiders get beat?" Miller asked immediately after the game. Advised that they did, Miller yelled, "Hey, all right! I didn't know until just now. That puts us where we want to be — on top."

The winning field goal was set up when Steve Foley intercepted a Jim Zorn pass, Denver's fourth interception of the game, and returned it 30 yards to the Seahawks 36.

On their final drive to the Seattle 1-yard line, Denver did not throw a single pass, staying with the running game that proved so successful all day. Six Bronco running backs picked up a total 278 yards rushing, compared to 118 for Seattle.

"They stopped Oakland on the ground, but they sure as hell didn't stop the Denver Broncos," Miller said.

Seattle's Efraim Herrera booted a 37-yard field goal with 53 seconds left in regulation time to tie the game 17-17. Backup quarterback Steve Myer moved Seattle 59 yards to the Denver 19 to set up Herrera's kick.

Seattle was nearly halted when Randy Gradisher intercepted a Myer pass, his second interception of the game. But Gradisher's attempted lateral to Joe Rizzo fell loose and was recovered by Seattle's Sherman Smith.

Denver took a 17-14 lead when Lonnie Perrin bulled over from the 1 with 5:46 left in the third quarter. The touchdown was set up when Zorn fumbled a snap from center on his own 10-yard line and Denver recovered.

Rick Upchurch scored the other. Denver touchdown on a 29-yard pass from Craig Morton in the second quarter.

Upchurch's touchdown also was set up by a Seattle turnover, Gradisher intercepting a pass intended for Smith on the Seattle 34.

Zorn hit just 3-of-29 passes for 110 yards and was intercepted three times.

Seattle opened a 14-3 lead with 13:09 left in the second quarter when Zorn scored on a 4-yard run for his sixth touchdown of the year.

Zorn threw 44 yards to Sam McCullum in the first quarter for Seattle's first touchdown. Denver opened the scoring on a 34-yard Turner field goal.

Denver outgained Seattle 354-254 during regulation time and allowed Seattle inside its 30 just once in the second half. Denver won the toss and elected to receive to open the overtime period.

The Broncos and the Seahawks exchanged punts and on Denver's second possession Perrin fumbled on the Seattle 41. On the very next play, Zorn threw a pass off Smith's fingertips and Foley picked off the pass.

Denver drove to a first down on the Seattle 3-yard line but was stalled on three rushing attempts and Turner came on for the game-winning kick.

Though sacked on this attempt, San Diego Quarterback Dan Fouts came back to lead San Diego upset win

Miami buries Colts

MIAMI (UPI) — Bob Griese threw for two touchdowns and ran for a 24-point second quarter Sunday that carried the Miami Dolphins to a 28-6 victory over the Baltimore Colts.

The win improved the Dolphins' record to 6-3 and kept them within one game of New England, the leader in the AFC's Eastern Division.

The Colts, 3-6, had been uncertain until game time whether quarterback Bert Jones' sore shoulder would allow him to start.

Coach Ted Marchibroda finally opted for Mike Kirkland, who was ineffective although he threw one touchdown pass.

The Dolphins opened a 2-0 lead in the first quarter when linebacker Jim Bokamp blocked a David Lee punt out of the end zone for a safety. Then Griese opened up, hitting Nat Moore for a 33-yard touchdown and Durrell Harris for a 63-yard score. Garo Yepremian also contributed a 32-yard field goal.

Fouts' pass lifts San Diego

OAKLAND (UPI) — Dan Fouts threw a 23-yard touchdown pass to tight end Greg McCrary with 52 seconds remaining Sunday to lift the San Diego Chargers to a 27-23 upset of the Oakland Raiders.

A pass interference call against Lester Hayes set up the Chargers at the Oakland 29 with 58 seconds left. On the next play McCrary slanted into the right corner of the end zone and caught the ball over his shoulder for the tying points.

Rolf Benirschke's extra-point conversion sent San Diego ahead 27-23. Woodrow Lowe then intercepted a Ken Stabler pass and Benirschke added a 22-yard field goal for insurance.

The Chargers trailed 20-7 at the half and were down 23-14 with nine minutes left.

San Diego bounced back on a 27-yard field goal by Benirschke and, after stopping Oakland, took over at the Charger 29 with 1:19 to go. Fouts completed a 31-yard pass to Charlie Jelner to start San Diego's winning drive. Hayes then knocked down Dwight McDonald at the 29 for the penalty that set up the Chargers' winning touchdown.

The victory was San Diego's third against six losses while the Raiders lost for the fourth time against five victories.

The Chargers lost 21-20 to the Raiders earlier in the season on a disputed fumble on the game's final play.

The Raiders scored three touchdowns within a span of four minutes in the second quarter for a 20-7 halftime lead. Stabler threw 12 yards to Dave Casper for the first touchdown, and Arthur Whittington and Mark Van Eeghen followed with Whittington going in on a 26-yard run and Van Eeghen on a 12-yard burst.

Two of the touchdowns were set up on interceptions of Fouts passes by Mike McCoy and Charles Phillips. Hank Bauer scored on an 11-yard run the first time San Diego had the ball. Fouts ran a yard at the end of a 20-play, 66-yard drive in the third quarter for the other Charger points.

After Fouts scored, winding up a drive that consumed 11 minutes at the start of the third quarter, Errol Mann booted a 25-yard field goal to put the Raiders ahead 23-14.

Then the Chargers put together two quick drives within the next six minutes to pull it out.

The Raiders had a final chance with 46 seconds left, but Lowe picked off Stabler's pass and the Chargers used the turnover to put the game away.

McLendon survives sudden death playoff

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Mac McLendon, who led for three rounds only to be forced into a tie in the final round by Mike Reid, a 24-year-old Provo, Utah, golfer, won a sudden death, playoff Sunday in the $125,000 Pensacola Open.

McLendon, 33, playing out of Pell City, Ala., went into the final round with a three-stroke lead, but skied to a one-over-par 73 to finish with a 72-hole score of 16-under-par 272.

Reid, who was seven strokes back at the start of play, fired a six-under-par 66 to catch McLendon and force the one-hole playoff.

In the playoff, Reid immediately got into trouble when he hit his tee shot into some trees on the left side. McLendon's tee shot was slightly to the right of center in the middle of the fairway.

Reid's second shot was short of the green and he punched his approach shot past the pin to the right fringing of the green. Reid could not sink his putt from the fringe and ended up with a bogey five.

McLendon's second shot was 14 feet below the pin. He missed the putt but tapped in the next shot for a par-four.

McLendon won $25,000 and also gains an automatic exemption from qualifying for next year's tournaments. He is scheduled to play on the PGA tour in 1979 after leading the U.S. Open that year after the first round as an amateur. He wound up tied for low scoring amateur in that tournament.

McLendon moves up to 22nd on the PGA money list with total earnings for 1978 of $107,299.

Reid won $14,250 for his second place finish. Third place went to Wayne Levi, playing out of Tampa, who won $8,875. Levi finished with a total 15-under-par 273.

one stroke off the pace. Tied for fourth place was Allen Miller, 30, of Pensacola, and Bobby Wadkins, of Richmond, Va., with 14-under-par 274s. All alone in sixth place was Keith Ferguson, who had a 12-under-par 276 for the tournament and climbed into the top 60 money winners who will enjoy qualifying exemptions next year.

"I knew if I had lost this thing you reporters would be writing how Mac McLendon skyrocketed on the last day and choked to death and that I'd have to live with that all winter," McLendon said. "God knows I'm glad I won."

McLendon, who bogeyed the first hole during his final regulation round, said he had thought all night about the tee shot on No. 1, which he called "the hardest driving hole on the course."

"There's just two places you can't hit the ball on the first hole — you can't hit it to the left or to the right," he said, referring to Reid's playoff tee shot which hooked to the left.

Asked about the caliber of competition at Pensacola, McLendon said, "I have the greatest respect for all these players. If he can lead one round, he can win the tournament. I don't take any one of these players lightly. Mike Reid has a great future."

McLendon credited club pro Jimmy Ballard of Pell City, Ala., with helping his play and said "I owe this victory to him. He is the greatest teacher in the game."

McLendon is only the second player besides Tom Watson to lead a PGA tour event this year from start to finish. Watson led throughout the Tucson Open.

Bantamweight fight

'Was the referee deaf?'

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) — Carlos Zarate, his perfect knockout record destroyed on his first attempt to invade a higher weight division, returned to his native Mexico Sunday grumbling about a "deaf" British referee who didn't hear the bell and allowed him to absorb more punishment than he should have.

Zarate was unsuccessful Saturday night in a bid to capture the World Boxing Council's 122-pound superbantamweight championship — he still is, the reigning 115-pound bantamweight champion — when he lost on a fifth-round knockout to title holder Wilfredo Gomez of Puerto Rico.

Going into the fight, Zarate had won all 54 of his professional bouts, 53 of them by KO. Now he's thinking of retiring altogether.

Zarate was floored twice in the fourth round by demolishing left hooks from the younger and faster Puerto Rican, although he waved off one of the knockdowns and indicated to the referee that he had only been pushed against the ropes.

But after the bell sounded ending the fourth round, Gomez kept hitting him and he went down again. The capacity-plus crowd of more than 11,000 at the Roberto Clemente Coliseum was cheering so wildly at the time for the Puerto Rican hometown favorite that apparently no one — neither Gomez, nor Zarate, nor British referee Harry Gibbs — had heard the bell.

Zarate never recovered. He staggered out of his corner for the fifth round, but went down again at 49 seconds and Gibbs counted him out as he wobbled back to his feet and his brother-and-trainer, Jorge Zarate, entered the ring with a white towel.

"Apparently, the man is deaf," Zarate's manager, Mexican veteran Arturo "El Cuyo" Hernandez said of Gibbs before departing to Mexico.

Otherwise, Hernandez said, he had "no excuses" and he thought "the best man won."

The rapid end to the 15-round engagement was an anticlimax to the months of anticipation about the matchup of the two unbeaten punchers in the small weight classes.

Coming into Saturday night's fight, Zarate and Gomez had sported combined records of 74 knockouts in 76 fights, with one victory by decision and one tie. It had taken months of painstaking negotiations to bring the two of them together, with Gomez getting a purse of $175,000 and Zarate $40,000.

Cardinal 500 to Bodine

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Geoff Bodine of Bellingham, Mass., led all the way and won the 250-lap Modified race in Sunday's Cardinal 500 at Martinsville Speedway.

Later, Sam Ard of Asheboro, N.C., charged back from the 23rd starting position to capture the 250-lap Late Model Sportsmen event.

Bodine averaged 74,022 mph around the .525 mile track and earned $9,100 for his 54th win of the year. Richie Evans of Rome, N.C., who finished 20th in the race, won the NASCAR National Modified Championship with an unofficial point total of 4,331.

His closest competitor, hometown rival Jerry Cook, came in 28th after leaving the race on the 135th lap because of engine trouble. Cook, the defending national champion, had 4,221 points.

The two rivals have traded the national championship for the last eight years.

George Summers of Upton, Mass., came in second behind Bodine, one lap and 2.4 seconds behind.

Ray Hendrick of Richmond finished third, defending champion Carl Stevens of Rehobeth, Mass., fourth, and Charlie Jarzombek of Riverhead, N.Y., was fifth. Bodine, who won the pole position in his Pinto with a track record 93.308 mph, was never in trouble in the modified class as he took the lead from Maynard Troyer of Rochester, N.Y., at the start and never let up.

Troyer started from the No. 2 position but finished 24th after dropping out of the race in the 197th lap because of engine failure.

There were six caution flags for a total of 33 laps in the race.

Finishing behind Jarzombek were: Dan Worley of Rocky Mount, Va.; Don Biederman of Oakville, Canada; Bill Gilhearn of Wrightstown, N.J.; Wayne Anderson of Yaphank, N.Y.; and Tom Gush of Elmira, N.Y.

In the Late Model event, Ard took over the lead for the first time on the 216th lap and held it for the rest of the race to average 66.88351 mph.

Ard grabbed the lead when leader Jimmy Hensley of Martinsville was involved in a collision on the first turn of the 216th lap. Sonny Hutchins of Richmond finished second.

Breaking up a pass

Washington's Redskins' Ken Houston (27) victory and keep their hold on first place in the National Conference's eastern division. Story, page B6.

No one's laughing at the Bengals after Sunday win

CINCINNATI (UPI) — "We're a time bomb," Cincinnati Bengals Coach Homer Rice told his winless team "just before Sunday's game against Houston.

"And," Rice predicted, "we're going to explode."

The prediction was right on target. The Bengals, coming into the game as the laughing stock of the NFL with a 0-8 record and no touchdowns in the previous 13 quarters, erupted for four TDs to shock the heavily favored Oilers, 29-13.

Sighed Rice after the long-awaited first win, "I'm numb."

"I'd forgotten how to win," added Bengals' defensive lineman Gary Burley. "For awhile around here, I thought people enjoyed losing."

Bengals' General Manager Paul Brown, under-fire for the winless string and criticized by some for replacing former head Coach Bill Johnson with Rice four games ago, appeared in the dressing room shortly after the win to congratulate Rice.

"That looks like our old team," said Brown, shaking Rice's hand several times. "A fine job. They can play anybody. It looks like our old team again."

It certainly looked like the old Ken Anderson, finally shaking off the effects of a broken hand; sparked the win by firing a 45-yard touchdown pass to Isaac Curtis and throwing passes of 43 and 45 yards to set up 1-yard TD runs by Pete Johnson and Tony Davis.

The Bengals' other TD, another 1-yard run by Johnson, also was triggered by a big play — a 65-yard dash by rookie David "Deacon" Turner to the Houston 2.

"The difference was the big play," agreed Rice. "We made it every time. Kenny was ready. He was throwing like he can."

Anderson, who had been intercepted 10 times in the past four games, was not intercepted Sunday and completed 11-of-16 passes for 268 yards.

"It's a big relief to finally get a win," said Anderson, "because, believe me, 1-8 is a whole lot better than 0-9."

Houston, which had been emotionally high all week after Monday night's victory over previously unbeaten Pittsburgh, came down to earth with a thud.

"Cincinnati played like they know how and we didn't," said Oilers Coach Bum Phillips, whose team fell to 5-4.

Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini accounted for the Oilers' only two touchdowns with a 16-yard pass to Ken Burroughs and a 6-yarder to Mike Renfro in the last quarter after the game was out of reach.

"They certainly didn't play like the 0-8 team they were," Pastorini said.

First win for Wilkinson

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — This was the game Bud Wilkinson had waited 15 years for and his response was untypical of a man of his stature.

He cried.

"This game is an emotional game and you have to be emotional," said the 62-year-old Wilkinson, clutching the game ball after gaining his first NFL triumph Sunday, a 16-10 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Wilkinson, a legend during his coaching days at Oklahoma before his retirement in 1963, returned to coaching this season but had agonized through eight straight losses. But he said he never thought of giving up.

"Sooner or later, I knew this would have to come," Wilkinson said. "There was never any doubt in my mind that it would come. It took a long time. I knew I wasn't going to give up and the players knew I wasn't going to give up. They didn't give up either."

The starter Jim Hart threw for 223 yards and one touchdown in the first half and the opportunistic St. Louis defense preserved the lead in the second half with two fumble recoveries and an interception.

Hart, who suffered a shoulder separation two weeks ago and was doubtful for Sunday night until game time, completed 9-of-13 first-half passes, including a 55-yard scoring strike to rookie wide receiver Dave Stif.

"They (St. Louis coaches) waited until the pre-game today to see how I felt," said Hart, whose passing set up Jim Otis' 7-yard scoring run in the second quarter. "I felt pretty good in warmups although I stretched my shoulder one time on a handoff. But otherwise I felt pretty good."

Eagles' Coach Dick Vermeil, while admitting his team played poorly in turning the ball over five times, praised Hart.

"He did a hell of a job and we played poorly," he said. "He was throwing 100 percent perfect. We couldn't get any offense going."

The Cardinal's defense dominated the second half, claiming two Philadelphia fumbles in Eagles territory. Free safety Ken Stone recovered a Cleveland Franklin fumble on the 16 in the third quarter to end one drive and linebacker Steve Neils fell on Billy Campfield's fumble on the 40 early in the fourth quarter.

Nell's recovery began a march that led to a 31-yard field goal by Jim Bakken with 10 minutes to play.

U.S. shines in gym meet

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
American gymnasts Marica Frederick and Kurt Thomas headed the United States' best international gymnastics performance in 46 years Sunday while Romania's Nadia Comaneci bounced back from her defeat in the combined exercises to take a gold and silver medal on the last day of the 33-nation World Gymnastic Championships at Strasbourg, France.

Thomas, of Terre Haute, Ind. took the floor exercise title to become the first American to win either an Olympic or world championship since George Gulack's rings victory in the 1932 Olympics.
The 22-year-old student at Indiana State, performing with energy and careful skill, had a superb 9.90 to total 18.650. The Soviet Union's combined exercises champion Nikolai Andrianov twice stumbled badly after landing from somersaults and ended his chances of victory.

The upset of the day, however, was on the uneven parallel bars when the 15-year-old Frederick defeated Russia's Elena Mouskhina with a sparkling routine that brought her 9.950 points and the United States women's first gold gymnastics medal in either Olympics or world championships.

The student from Milford, Conn., who scored a perfect 10 on the apparatus at this year's U.S. championships, had a total of 18.650 points.

The 16-year-old Comaneci, whose power-weight ratio has been used by her growth, proved she is still a great gymnast despite her fall from the uneven parallel bars Saturday, a mistake which cost her a medal in the supreme combined exercises event.

Sweden's Bjorn Borg, working his whirlwind passing shots to perfection, defeated American Vilas Gerulaitis, 6-2, 7-6, Sunday to win the $50,000 Smash 78 Tennis Tournament in the Manila, Philippines.

The 23-year-old three time Wimbledon champion needed only 90 minutes to polish off the erratic New Yorker and pocket the top prize of $20,000. Gerulaitis got $15,000.

Argentinian Guillermo Vilas downed American John McEnroe, 6-3, 5-7, 7-5, 6-4, Sunday in a final lasting four hours and five minutes to win the Swiss Indoor tennis championship at Basel, Switzerland, and a first prize of $7,500.

"Except for Jimmy Connors, I have never played against anyone retrieving such unbelievable balls and placing them with such precision," McEnroe said later.

...gold medal

Tracy Austin, playing in her first professional tournament, defeated Betty Stove of Holland, 6-3, 6-3, Sunday to win the German women's grand prix tennis tournament at Stuttgart, West Germany.

The 15-year-old American earned $6,000 and an automobile.

Former heavyweight boxing champion Leon Spinks was slated to appear in Elyria Municipal Court at Elyria, Ohio, today on a charge of failure to control a motor vehicle.

Spinks, 25, said he was looking for property in Elyria on the night of Oct. 21 when he lost control of his silver 1979 Corvette near the hotel where he was staying. On Ohio Route 57, Spinks drove through a fence.

Cathy Toomey of the Golden Valley, Minn., track club has won the U.S. Track and Field Federation women's cross country title with a three mile time of 16 minutes; 58.2 seconds.

Patriots wallop Jets

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — Steve Grogan was worried before Sunday's game with the New York Jets. He was concerned his New England Patriots might suffer a letdown after last week's emotional 33-24 victory over Miami.

What fears he had were eliminated in the first 30 minutes.

The 6-foot-4 quarterback stood out at Schaefer Stadium, firing three first-half touchdown passes to spark the Pats to a 55-21 drubbing of the Jets.

New England piled up a team record 529 total yards in winning their sixth straight with Grogan enjoying the finest day of his four-year career.

"I was worried about a letdown and I didn't want to see a close game," said Grogan, who hit on 15-of-19 passes for 281 yards, all in the first half as the Pats, 7-2, built a 41-7 halftime lead. "I don't think you can play much better offense than we did today. We scored every time we touched the ball in the first half (six times) and you can't ask for much better than that."

Cleveland 41-20

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Brian Sipe tossed three touchdown passes and Mike Pruitt ran for two TDs Sunday to lead the Cleveland Browns to a 41-20 victory over the Buffalo Bills.

Sipe connected with wide receiver Reggie Rucker on touchdown passes of 16 and 44 yards and lofted a 15-yard scoring pass to Calvin Hill.

Steelers 27-24

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pittsburgh linebacker Jack Ham has turned in many big plays during his pro career, but none looked as important to him as the one he made Sunday to preserve the Steelers' 27-24 victory over the Kansas City Chiefs.

There was 1:56 left in the game and the Chiefs had just scored on a 2-yard touchdown run by Arnold Morgado. Ham and the other Steelers knew the Chiefs would try to regain possession with an onside kick. Ham was on the first line of defense.

Jan Stenerud kicked the ball and it rolled 10 yards and bounced off Ham's knee. Ham fell on it a split second ahead of several Kansas City players. The Steelers ran out the clock for a victory that upped their record to 8-1.

Detroit 21-17

CHICAGO (UPI) — Gary Danielson, passed for 190 yards and two touchdowns Sunday to lead the Detroit Lions to their second straight victory, a 21-17 triumph over the Chicago Bears.

It was the sixth straight loss for the Bears, their longest losing streak since they closed the 1973 season with six straight defeats. The Detroit win left both teams tied for last place in the NFC Central Division.

Packers 7-7

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — Chester Marcol kicked a 48-yard field goal with 41 seconds left Sunday to give the Green Bay Packers a 9-7 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The victory gave the Packers, the NFC Central Division leaders, a 7-2 record. The Bucs fell to 4-5.

Redskins 38-20

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John Riggin ran for two touchdowns Sunday and 16-year veteran Billy Kilmer passed for two others in his first start of the season to carry the Washington Redskins to a 38-20 win over the San Francisco 49ers.

Kilmer showed few signs of rustiness after replacing Joe Theismann in the starting lineup following two straight Redskins losses. He completed 12-of-23 passes for 183 yards, including touchdown passes to Danny Buggs and 17 yards to John McDaniel.

New Orleans 28-17

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Archie Manning threw two touchdown passes to tight end Henry Chiles, both in a 21-point scoring drive in the second half, to lead the New Orleans Saints to a 28-17 triumph over the New York Giants Sunday.

Manning, who completed 13-of-21 passes for 171 yards, threw short passes of 1 and 3 yards to Chiles to highlight the nine-minute scoring burst that enabled the Saints to win three consecutive games for the first time since 1969. The win gave the Saints their best mid-season record in the club's 12-year history, 5-4.

Briefly in sports

Bench leads Reds
TOKYO (UPI) — Johnny Bench hit a solo homer and right-hander Tom Hume gave up only five hits in seven innings as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Yomiuri Giants 5-2 in the second game of their 17-game Japan tour at Korakuen Stadium Sunday.

White, most Reds players took their first victory in Japan early after Saturday's 7-6 loss to the Giants, Manager Sparky Anderson said, "We are not hitting well."

The Reds took a 3-0 lead over the Tokyo-based club in the top of the first inning on a pair of singles and George Foster's double.

Bench, who struck out twice earlier, homered in the sixth off losing side-arm pitcher Shiguro Kobayashi and the Reds added another run in the ninth with a single, an error and a grounder.

Larriou to run
INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Middle distance runner Fran Larriou will be reinstated in time for the start of the indoor track season, the Amateur Athletic Union announced Friday.

Larriou, 25, who has held at least five American records, was suspended June 23 by the Southern Pacific AAU Association along with high-jumper Dwight Stone for receiving payments for their appearances on TV competition.

Angels add on

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — The California Angels Sunday announced they have added Bobby Knoop, Larry Sherry and Deron Johnson to their coaching staff for next season.

Retained from last season's staff under Manager Jim Fregosi were third base coach John McNamee and 73-year-old Jimmie Eaves, a member of the Angels' coaching staff since 1973.

Car goes wild
MADRID (UPI) — A speeding stock car ploughed into a group of officials in front of the pits during a race at the Jarama circuit Sunday, killing two and seriously injuring two others.

One of the dead was Fernando Perez de Villamil Espuzer, head of Renault's Competition Department in Spain. The deceased was named the Trofeo Polo Villamil in memory of his journalist brother killed in a crash last year while driving in a rally in Galicia.

Spectators said it appeared that the Renault, driven by Gustavo Perichola, was forced off the track in a pileup of several cars approaching the pits on the 12th lap of the 15-lap event.

Perichola was driving at an estimated 99 mph.

Unknown on top

ADELAIDE, Australia (UPI) — A virtually unknown rookie who arrived in Adelaide last week with less than $10 Sunday won the $12,000 first prize in the Westlakes Classic Golf Tournament at the Grange Course.

The 21-year-old rookie, Wayne Grady, closed with a 2-over-par 73 for a total 200 — two better than fellow Australian Bob Shearer who surged home with a final round 66.

Ishii takes first

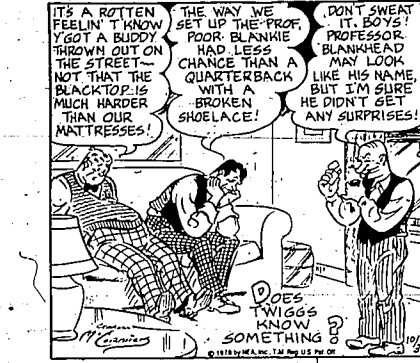

TOKYO (UPI) — Japanese pro Hiroshi Ishii shot a final-round 68 to vault from fourth place and win the $167,597 Bridgestone golf tournament Sunday.

Ishii, 37, who carded a four-round total of eight-under-par 280, earned a first prize purse $33,519 for his second victory in five years of this annual tournament.

College extended

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — New Texas A&M Coach Tom Wilson has been given a contract extending through the 1981 season, school president Jarvis Miller has said.
