

Judge rules against doctors' advertising ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A case that may eventually affect doctors' fees all over the country, the Federal Trade Commission will announce today an administrative law judge's decision that the American Medical Association should "cease and desist" from prohibiting advertising by physicians.

The decision was made in connection with a suit the trade commission brought against the AMA and two of its member societies three years ago on charges that they were restraining trade by prohibiting the advertising of professional services.

It is unlikely that directives enforcing the decision will take effect within the next year. The five commissioners of the FTC, which received the decision and opinion Nov. 13, must eventually decide whether to accept or reject the decision. Should they accept it, as expected, it is likely that the AMA and its allied societies will take the case to the United States Court of Appeals.

Administrative Law Judge Ernest G. Barnes's decision and opinion were sent to lawyers in the case Tuesday.

The decision and the 300-page opinion say that the AMA should enforce the terms of the decision by refusing to allow representation in its policy-making House of Delegates of doctors from societies that refuse to abide by the ruling.

The AMA and its component societies first moved to stop advertising by doctors shortly after the turn of the century in an effort to stamp out rampant medical quackery. In the case of a violation, the medical societies can take disciplinary steps including suspension, which makes it very difficult for a doctor to continue his practice.

Yet critics of the medical profession have complained that the prohibition against advertising, in the name of policing the profession, has had the side effect of artificially raising doctors' fees by denying competition.

The commission raised this issue in 1975 when it filed a complaint against the AMA, the Connecticut State Medical Society and the New Haven County Medical Association, charging that they had violated section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act that outlaws unfair methods of competition.

The complaint charged that the groups "have agreed to prevent or hinder competition between medical doctors" by preventing the physicians from "soliciting business, by advertising or otherwise" and from "engaging in price competition."

As a result, the complaint alleged, "prices of physician services have been stabilized, fixed, or otherwise interfered with" and "consumers have been deprived of information pertinent to the selection of a physician and of the benefits of competition."

The AMA fought the charges, vigorously, arguing that the commission's action was "wasteful, ill-considered and not in the best interests of American patients" because the association's policy protects the public against false and deceptive advertising. Scores of witnesses and hundreds of exhibits entered into the case.

Justice Barnes's decision follows a series of rulings and consent decrees in recent years that have given lawyers, engineers and druggists the right to advertise. In these cases it was held repeatedly that professional prohibitions constituted restraint of trade.

Similar decisions in many states have allowed druggist and optometrists to advertise the prices of medicines and eyeglasses, thus also helping to hold down the rapidly rising costs of health care.

Such legal moves originally were instigated by policy planners at the start of the 1970s and professional practices were artificially inflating the cost of care. The result was a long series of actions by the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission.

In related cases, consent orders have been signed that prevent the American College of Radiology, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists and the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons from suggesting prices that their members should charge.

The AMA also is the target of a trade commission investigation that is seeking to determine whether the medical society may have illegally restricted the supply of physicians and health services by its involvement in the accreditation of medical schools and the definition of fields of practice for doctors.

Dollar buys half of what it did in 1967

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sharply rising consumer prices, the chief worry of most Americans, passed a depressing new milestone last month: the government reported Tuesday that a dollar now buys less than half what it did 11 years ago.

The Labor Department said a 0.8 percent increase in October consumer prices pushed its price-change index to 200.9. That means goods and services which cost buyers $100 in 1967 — the base year for such calculations — were priced at $200.90 in October.

The October advance was identical to September's, and pushed consumer prices to a level 8.9 percent above October 1977.

Food, housing and medical care costs were the main contributors to the October increase, the department said, each rising at the fastest pace since early summer.

President Carter has cautioned the public not to expect immediate results from his anti-inflation program, which is anchored on a system of voluntary wage-price standards coupled with federal budget restraint.

Commenting on Tuesday's report,

Carter's press secretary Jody Powell said it confirms "we have a very stubborn inflation problem." But he predicted "we will begin to top out these prices next year," given cooperation by Congress, business and labor.

However, the report drew another demand from AFL-CIO President George Meany that the administration prescribe stronger anti-inflation medicine.

"It is obvious that speeches and threats not based on legislative authority will not cure inflation," Meany said in a statement. "The need for a statutory across the board controls program becomes daily more apparent."

Most administration officials have said the first clear signs of progress should not be evident until mid-1979. The administration's target is to hold inflation to between 6 and 6.5 percent next year.

The new report spelled out these October developments:

- Food and beverage costs jumped 0.8 percent, the largest since June, and grocery prices rose 0.9 percent due to large jumps for meat.
- Housing costs rose 1 percent, also the largest since June, with home prices and mortgage interest rates continuing to climb.
- Medical care costs rose 1.1 percent, the year's biggest increase.
- Entertainment costs doubled the previous month's rate, rising 0.8 percent.
- Clothing and transportation prices declined somewhat from September despite a 1.4 percent increase for gasoline.

In a companion report, the department reported the average American's purchasing power fell for the third straight month and was 3.6 percent below the level a year ago.

A clerk, at left, peers from a Twin Falls 7-11 Store, which has taken steps — like removing window posters — to prevent crime

Things aren't so bright for crooks at night

By DOUG TULLIS Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — All night stores and gas stations traditionally the targets of hold-up artists are no longer easy marks.

Within the past two years, a national convenience store chain has taken steps to curb the attraction of easy money, and most other all-night businesses do the same.

The Seven Eleven Food Stores have sharply cut the amount of cash left in the cash register. Also they have opened up storefronts and taken down advertising posters to improve the visibility of the inside to passersby and police officers.

When a nationwide program about two years ago was first started, it reduced the number of robberies in that store. Seven Eleven field representative Chris Taylor said.

The Seven Eleven Stores and other all-night businesses paid a total of $1 million and potential robbers that there is a limited amount of money on hand. A store clerk in a night store, clerks periodically drop cash into a night safe.

Some all-night gas stations in the Boise area post signs saying exact change is needed after a certain hour.

Taylor said the robbers of the Seven Eleven Store at 13300 Avenue in Twin Falls Friday was a good example of how the program is working.

The store clerk had about $50 in the cash drawer. He said. As a matter of fact the robber actually took $100 in that robbery.

Taylor said the store uses a special system of currency deposits to avoid having large amounts of money in the store at night.

The real reason was the safety of the people. The concern for the money is minimal in a situation, he said.

Among their 30 stores in Idaho, Taylor said there have been fewer than 10 robberies the past year.

Employees are advised to cooperate with any robber and give him whatever he asks.

"We keep the money down and tell them to offer no resistance. The critical time comes when the robber has the money and is about to leave. That's when the guy has to decide what to do with the clerk," Taylor said.

"We tell the clerks to make a suggestion of what they should do. Ask them do you want me to lay down on the floor?" he said.

Taylor said making suggestions helps take the decision away from the robber and helps to ensure the safety of the clerk.

Twin Falls Police Chief Tom Qualls said the advice of Seven Eleven is to cooperate with any hold up man is wise.

He said armed robbers in Twin Falls are well below the national average.

One of the things that helps is that we are not on the interstate, he commented.

"We also have a good patrol system to observe those stores.

There are only three or four stores and gas stations that remain open all night in Twin Falls. Their managers said they also control the amount of money that remains in the cash register till to make robbery of those businesses unattractive.

As Taylor put it, "We have made it unprofitable for a local guy to rob a store. It just doesn't pay to get less than $50 and a prison term for it."

While the Christmas season brings out the season's cheer, it also brings out the armed robbers.

We put special emphasis on this time of the year, Taylor said.

Even so, the steps taken to avoid robberies, Qualls said, there is little more that can be done except to have 24-hour police patrol that can react to any robbery.

San Francisco reacts

'California is going nuts'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — There are 100,000 more people here than there were 10 years ago, and the city is suffering from a housing shortage that Mayor George Moscone and city officials say is the worst in the nation.

The city's population is growing so fast that it is estimated that by 1985 there will be 1.5 million people living in the city.

Western guns-in-home study released

CARSON CITY (UPI) — A poll by the Behavior Research Center of Arizona shows 48 percent of the families in Nevada keep guns in their homes for other than decoration.

The Rocky Mountain Poll says 47 percent of those contacted do not keep firearms in their home and 5 percent did not give an answer.

The poll was conducted in October showed 44 percent of the families in the eight western states kept a firearm in their homes while 49 percent did not. The center said chances are quite high that at least one of those firearms in the home will be a hand gun and that members of gun-owning households will have received little or no formal training in the use of firearms.

The survey was based on a random sample of 1,019 adult heads of households.

The highest ownership was in Wyoming where 65 percent of the families contacted had-guns and 30 percent did not. The lowest were in Arizona and Colorado where only 36 percent of the families surveyed had firearms.

Anti-Israel vote

PARIS (UPI) — UNESCO Tuesday again cut off aid to Israel, charging in a resolution which the United States condemned as "deplorable" that the Jewish state was trying to "Judaize" the holy city of Jerusalem.

By a vote of 67 to 24 with 13 abstentions, the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization passed a resolution calling on Israel to stop archaeological excavations "which are altering the character and status of Jerusalem."

Order to bank

TEHRAN (UPI) — Tehran's public prosecutor Tuesday ordered the central bank to surrender records to investigators looking into charges that Iran's political elite siphoned $2.4 billion in foreign banks during the worst of anti-shah disturbances last autumn.

But in another protest, Tehran's electrical power employees plunged the entire capital of 4.5 million into darkness less than 90 minutes before the dusk-to-dawn curfew began Tuesday.

School bus hit

CALDWELL (UPI) — A Vallivue School District bus carrying 29 grade school children was struck by a 32-ton cement truck Tuesday afternoon, however only the truck driver was injured.

The accident occurred at about 3 p.m. on Hoskins Road, southwest of Caldwell. Authorities said none of the children — who ranged from first through sixth grade — was injured in the crash, but that the truck driver was taken to Caldwell Memorial Hospital with severe facial lacerations.

Partial victory

BOISE (UPI) — A federal judge has awarded a partial summary judgment to six women fired from the Boise police force last year for alleged lesbian activity, calling their dismissals "an abysmal operation."

But District Court Judge Ray McNichols did not order the women reinstated. Instead he told attorneys for both sides to submit briefs by Dec. 11 detailing what damages he should award and which defendants should pay.

Food rules proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission staff Tuesday proposed rules to give consumers better nutrition information by restricting the way natural, organic, low cholesterol and other food labels be advertised.

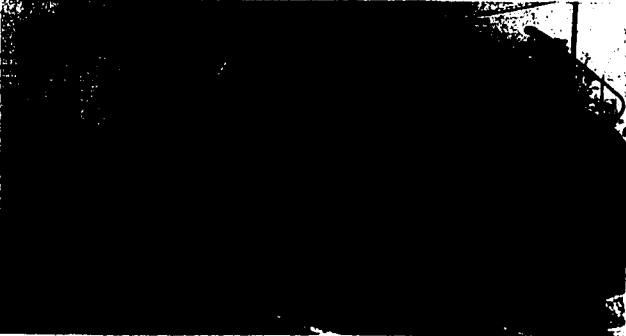

If the agency accepts the proposal, some foods — instant bouillon, certain potato chips and frozen french fried onion rings were mentioned — could no longer be touted as "natural."

Steel strike

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The first steel strike in Germany in 50 years idled 50,000 workers in eight plants Tuesday in a union drive to win a 35-hour work week in an industry hard hit by recession.

Employers retaliated with an order to lock out 28,500 other steelworkers at eight more plants beginning Friday.

There were fears the strike and lockout could spread and idle 200,000 workers and close factories producing three-quarters of West Germany's steel.

Cold winter expected in Idaho

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The odds are 2 to 1 that much of the eastern half of the nation, hit by unusual cold during the past two winters, will have abnormally warm weather this winter, the government's chief long-range forecaster said Tuesday.

But Dr. Donald Gilman said it appears the northern Great Plains, the northern Rockies, the Great Basin and the Pacific Northwest as far down as central California will be colder than normal.

"Our idea about the winter is a big difference from the last two," Gilman said.

He said the National Weather Service outlook for warmer than normal weather takes in the East coast from Massachusetts through Florida, all of the Appalachian Mountains, the Ohio and Tennessee Valleys and the Deep South stretching west along the Gulf coast into the Rio Grande Valley.

Gilman placed 2 to 1 odds on that outlook, based on his office's past performances for winter forecasts.

Thick and central Great Plains to the Southwest remains unpredictable so far as winter temperature is concerned.

The outlook for precipitation — which is less certain at odds of 11 to 9 — calls for wetter than normal areas in the Great Basin, the northern Rockies and Northern Plains, Great Lakes area, and everything from the Mississippi Valley eastward except for the extreme Southeast.

He said the Southern Plains and south Texas have an 1 to 9 chance of being drier than usual.

Gilman said the winter outlook was based on a variety of statistical clues that indicate the general flow of upper-altitude winds around the Northern Hemisphere will be similar to those of the winters of 1948-49 and 1951-52.

Tomorrow

Among the stories in tomorrow's Times-News:

- At 96, Bob Stewart still plays a pretty sharp game of pinchle. The longtime Buhl fire chief was forced to retire because of deafness in 1957 after 43 years with the fire department. In the early 1900s when Stewart came to Buhl, firemen pulled their hose carts over dirt streets, which sometimes became ankle-deep mud puddles. Stewart is the subject of this week's "Elders" feature.

BPA rate increase may be partly delayed

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Bonneville Power Administration said Tuesday it might be able to postpone one-fourth or more of the 90 percent increase in wholesale power rates it plans to put into effect next year.

BPA Administrator Sterling Munro and Neil Strand, managing director of Washington Public Power Supply System, said the two agencies will make studies of the feasibility of postponing the dates on which BPA is required to start paying some costs connected with construction of three nuclear power plants.

The plants are being built by WPPSS. BPA has agreed to buy the output of the plants and meet the costs of that power with the low-cost power from federal hydro projects.

Provisions in the contracts between BPA and WPPSS require BPA to begin making payments by certain dates on the cost of debt service on the funds borrowed to build the plants even if the plants have not begun to produce power. The proposal being studied involves issuance of bonds to cover the debt service charges until the plants begin producing power. BPA would sell the power to recover its costs.

Strand said a bond issue of $227 million would be required to fund the debt service for Project No. 1 between Sept. 1, 1980, and December 1982. He said preliminary studies indicate that bond issue would permit BPA to cut nearly $100 million from its planned rate increase of $340 million.

Idaho Land Board agrees to prime timberland sites

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Land Board members agreed Tuesday on the selection of some 24,000 acres of prime timberland owed the state by the federal government and directed the land department to make application within 30 days.

Gov. John V. Ems said this was "one more step toward culmination" of a long battle with the Bureau of Land Management over low land selections by the state.

"I think that litigation should be involved before the state finally gained title to the lands."

"I predict eventually litigation will be necessary," Kidwell said in urging that the board set a deadline for making applications.

The attorney general explained that it was in the state's interest that application be made as soon as possible.

"Once we file, we pick up vested rights," Kidwell said.

Chinese admission welcomed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department Tuesday welcomed President Jimmy Carter's statement that China has sometimes violated the human rights of its citizens.

There have been several violations of human rights in the Peoples Republic of China as the government of China has acknowledged department spokesman Hasting Carter said.

"This acknowledgment is a first step in the process of bringing about what we hope will be a more humane and improved life for the Chinese people."

He appeared to refer to recent statements by Deputy Premier Teng Huaqiang, in which Teng said he recognized the late Chairman Mao Tse Tung had permitted violations of human rights.

Teng himself was twice pronounced "dead" by Mao and returned to a grace period during the Cultural Revolution of the late 1960s and again during a power struggle that culminated in a death sentence in 1976.

Spacecraft approaching Venus

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Eight American and Soviet spacecraft are approaching Venus but the two nations' scientific missions are not coordinated because the Russians declined to engage in advance planning, a scientist said Tuesday.

Six American craft — five atmospheric probes and an orbiter — are due to reach the planet next week. Two Soviet landers are to separate from carrier craft and land on Venus Dec. 21 and 25.

Dr. Richard Goody of Harvard University said the American project, called Pioneer-Venus, is the culmination of 11 years of preparation to carry out the most intense study yet of the atmosphere of another planet.

He said a discussion by Soviet officials of their plans to explore Venus would have helped Americans plan complementary investigations.

"They have not been willing to enter into advance planning," Goody said at a National Aeronautics and Space Administration news conference. "I think it's a missed opportunity. It's certainly not due to any lack of trying on the part of any individual scientists."

NASA officials, however, did meet with their Soviet counterparts in Austria in June and scientists from both nations agreed to meet again early next year to discuss an exchange of the scientific results.

A. Thomas Young, director of NASA's planetary programs, said the Soviet spacecraft will be making different measurements than the American probes and an exchange of data will help scientists learn more about Venus.

"The American mission takes two approaches. One spacecraft, Pioneer-Venus 1, is scheduled to swing into orbit around Venus Dec. 4 with 12 scientific instruments to take daily pictures of the planet's thick cloud cover and carry out other measurements for one Venusian year — 225 Earth days.

A second spacecraft, Pioneer-Venus 2, split into five separate craft earlier this month.

Hearing seeks Ray's brother

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Assassinations Committee sought a court order Tuesday to question the jailed brother of James Earl Ray about whether he was part of a possible family conspiracy to kill Martin Luther King Jr.

An order was sought permitting John Larry Ray, brother of King's convicted assassin, to appear as a witness Friday.

John Larry Ray was arrested Monday in St. Louis on suspicion of burglary and assault with intent to kill.

Blakely interrupted testimony by former Attorney General Ramsey Clark to ask the committee for authorization to seek a "court writ" to get John to testify.

Governors' meeting

Brock says GOP now has protection

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (UPI) — Republican National Committee chairman Bill Brock said Tuesday GOP election victories this year give the party new insurance against Democratic gerrymandering after the 1980 census.

Brock, speaking at the closing session of the Republican Governors' Association meeting, said the net gain of six governorships — to a total of 18 — and more than 300 new legislative seats gave the GOP "protection against future gerrymandering" after the census determines the apportionment of House seats among the states.

The GOP chief said congressional redistricting after the 1970 census resulted in the loss of 42 or 43 Republican seats and told reporters after his speech, "We cannot continue to live with these lines."

A SALT talk for the mayors

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Former SALT negotiator Paul C. Warnke Tuesday told mayors a sound arms-control treaty with the Soviet Union would do more to save cities from destruction than Civil Defense plans to evacuate urban areas.

Warnke, who formerly headed the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, told the annual convention of the National League of Cities "cities are held hostage" in the nuclear race.

He questioned the likelihood of success of mass evacuation of cities in times of international crisis.

"It will be the biggest rush hour in history — and probably the last," Warnke said. "The safety of our society should not depend on this kind of planning but on heading off nuclear war."

He said the current round of Strategic Arms Limitation Talks will produce a SALT II treaty acceptable to the United States.

"Each side should be willing to enter into agreement to achieve strategic equality at less cost and less effort," he said.

But as a result of the Nov. 7 elections, he said, the party now holds the governorship or control of at least one legislative house in 31 states, an increase of 13.

"It is our weapon against efforts to reduce and eventually eliminate Republican direction, not only of our states, but of our nation as well," Brock said.

In his speech text, Brock predicted more GOP gains in 1980 and said next year Republicans would win governorships in Louisiana, Kentucky, and Mississippi.

Brock urged the governors to "look beyond your own safe borders" to help the party and told reporters that advice included, when practical, governors running as favorite son candidates in 1980 primaries.

Brock said he was worried about a possible deadlock for the GOP in presidential nomination, feeling that it would be "almost impossible" for any candidate to tie up the nomination early. With governors as favorite sons, he said, delegates would have "more flexibility" to settle on a candidate.

Committee on aging looks at health insurance schemes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Insurance agents testified Tuesday they pressured old people into buying unnecessary health insurance by befriending them with "hearts and flowers" approach — then invoking fear of disease and a lonely death.

The House Select Committee on Aging estimated the elderly are rewarded by buying $1 billion worth of undesired insurance a year.

Committee Chairman Claude Pepper, D-Fla., said unscrupulous companies teach agents to play on the fears of the elderly, selling policies promising to cover what Medicare does not.

The committee staff offers the rough estimate that senior citizens are being taken for $2 billion a year by these unscrupulous corporations and their agents, Pepper said. It takes money that many of the providers and the premiums paid for individual Medicare supplement insurance are duplicative."

Among Tuesday's witnesses was a man described only as "John Doe." He wore a blue knit ski mask covering all but his eyes and chin while describing how some agents are treated.

"You were told how to warm up an individual. With hearts and flowers or whatever you want to call it. You were told to make a person sick — move or less put him in a hospital or a bed in his mind. Ask him if he had nobody to turn to, how would he pay for it and protect his resources?"

Another witness, former agent Harold Deid of Oakland, Calif., said summer weather often lured elderly to the wanted for Medicare.

If prospective customers resisted the sales pitch, the agent developed two or three leads to them, Deid said.

Virgin Islanders like carnivals and politics

By PIETER VAN BENNEKOM
CHARLOTTE AMALIE, U.S. Virgin Islands (UPI)—Next to celebrating Carnival and having fun, politics is probably the greatest pastime of Virgin Islanders.

While pundits in the continental United States bemoan election turnout of below 50 percent, some 75 percent of registered voters in the Caribbean territory turned out Nov. 7 to choose a new governor, a new "congressman" and a new territorial legislature.

The results also showed that Virgin

Islanders are getting more and more independent about their politics. They pick and choose, they like checks and balances and they don't like any one man or faction to dominate the scene.

Yet the biggest winner of all in the elections, a governor "by accident" who wasn't even born in the territory but who just won another four-year term, may try to do exactly that—dominate the political scene.

Running as an independent against a Democratic party that nominally has 18,000 of 28,000 registered voters, Juan Luis, a 38-year-old native of Vieques, Puerto Rico, beat Democrat Ron DeLaigo, a popular former disc jockey, by more than 3,000 votes.

Luis had been in office only 10 months, since the death of his predecessor, Cyril E. King, of cancer Jan. 2.

In addition to an independent governor, Virgin Islanders chose a Republican "congressman"—a territorial delegate to the federal Congress in Washington who can vote in committees but not on the floor of the House, and a legislature with 12 out of 15 Democrats.

Bolstered by his astounding election victory which showed that he had gauged the mood of the people better than his Democratic opponent, Luis seems all set to bring some order in all that diversity.

He associated himself closely with the new Republican "congressman", former Gov. Melvin Evans, during the campaign, but he has also been dropping hints that he will soon change his own party registration to Democrat.

Close associates of the new governor say that his intentions are, in fact, to "take over" the Democratic party and fashion himself a legislature to his liking in mid-term elections two years from now.

While the governor is elected for four years, the senators, as the members of the territorial legislature are called, face the voters every two years.

Running as an independent this time, Luis couldn't bring in a legislature of his liking on his conatals, but the only independent candidate who campaigned in tandem with him, All J. Paul of the Island of St. Thomas, was the only independent who managed to belt a Democrat out of a seat.

A bid to take over control of the Democratic party would set Luis on a head-on collision course with the present boss of the Democrats, senate finance committee chairman Earl B. Otley, and observers are waiting for the sparks to start flying in that battle.

Republicans, take note of Milliken

Michigan's Republican Gov. William Milliken said it, Republicans everywhere should remember it.

At the national governor's conference in Williamsburg, Va., Milliken cautioned Republicans to forego extremism and rebuild the GOP nationally on the basis of pragmatic politics.

"We have yet to prove we really have kicked the habit of snatching defeat from the jaws of victory," Milliken quipped.

The same message of pragmatism came from newly elected Republican Gov. Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania.

Thornburgh railed against the traditional Republican habit of ignoring minorities, union workers and the poor.

Thornburgh ran on a classic Republican platform of lower taxes, less government, but won the governorship from the Democratic favorite by winning 60 percent of the minority vote and 50 percent of the union vote.

As he pointed out to the 18 GOP governors, union workers, minorities and poor people worry about Republican issues, too.

From all accounts, this year's Republican Governor's Conference lost the look of a funeral that had dominated the conventions the past two years.

Every governor spoke optimistically of the 50 percent gain in statehouse residencies picked up by the GOP.

Best of all, the GOP governors dropped most of the once-popular ultra-right ideological banter and talked soberly of ways to lure independent and disillusioned voters into the Republican fold.

What went bad in Jonestown?

BOSTON — Now it begins, the efforts to find reasons for the irrational, the desire to pull an explanation out of the depths of this heart of darkness.

From Guyana we read a tale of the cult, as if it were a tale of the occult.

The setting itself seems almost metaphorical, as if sanity were a clearing, hacked arduously from the jungle, always fragile, always threatened by the encroaching underbrush of madness.

The photographs of murder and mass suicide among the People's Temple sect look as if they were written for a Joseph Conrad caption: "The mind of man is capable of anything."

But what is most spooky, most difficult to comprehend about this fantasy of fanaticism, is how people give up their will to their cult the way others might give up meat. The profiles filtering back through the media are of individuals transformed into donors. First, they donated the direction of their life and then their entire life—in return for belonging.

It seems that the borders between commitment to a belief and submission in it, between idealism and fanaticism, a community and a stamp, are also fragile ones.

This is not the first story of cult madness, or of murder and mass suicide in history even in American history. It comes as a shock to our system because of its extreme horror and because it happens now when the focus of our concerns was turned elsewhere.

We live in a decade and a country which has been more vigilant and concerned about the wave of selfishness and the cult pursuit of individualism. And now we have again the letters of the single word: KING, of mass hysteria, death packs and culture to nurture over the Madman numbers.

In the past several years, people have paid less attention to the cults with cries of brainwashing, mass fanaticism and mad reveries. The revelations about Vietnam, the atrocities of living within a single closed system of life and benefits have been described as those of a madman, the result of having a severed front a world in which people are struggling for a sense of meaning and purpose.

Dr. Stanley Cath, the Bostonian who has earned the handle "cult expert," has said simply about their members, "They don't have to become, they can follow."

In the midst of the culture of the self, they join the cult of the leader. In a society where many are encouraged to explore the sensitive crevices of their private psyches, they find safety and belonging as part of a mass. While others search for themselves, they find meaning by losing themselves.

I don't think that cults can simply be dismissed as demonic. It's too simple an explanation and too safe. It empowers immunity for us or our children.

Perhaps cults are more accurately described as the flip side, the escape route of the society. Whether these groups eventually become organized religions or jungle horror stories, many cults originally served a community or a set of ideals, some greater goals and almost always a charismatic leader.

Only slowly do some leaders turn paranoid and demanding, neither fanatic in the pursuit of an elusive purity and sometimes viewed in the enlightenment of their own sense of righteousness.

It is their followers often find it impossible to differentiate their own fate from that of the group. They have become a part, not a whole. Having put their ego on the collective plane, they do as they are led.

The events leading to this massacre and suicide in the jungle are as complicated as the events of the Vietnam conflict, including the aggressive manipulation of James Earl Ray into a terrorist and a "Madman" and the details which will be laid out in the weeks ahead.

But beyond these operations we already know that individuals often become alienated and they will often create the desire to escape it.

Bemoaning the death of 'New Times'

A magazine called New Times died the other day. Chances are you didn't read it, even in its best days. Its circulation was only about 200,000. Still, it was awfully good. It just had the misfortune of coming along during the wrong decade.

It was brightly written, well reported, imaginatively edited. The problem was that when every other magazine was writing about Steve Martin, New Times was writing about something like "Why the War on Cancer Doesn't Work." The stories were instantly fascinating to read but they demanded that the readers care about social problems—and in the '70s that was less than in almost any other decade.

When we announced that we were closing down, I got a call from John Mack, publisher of New Times. Frank was the first editorial employee I hired when I started the magazine. He has never given up on the magazine or for Time.

Frank said he was sorry, and I said, "Frank, when you left the magazine, Woodward and Bernstein had the best selling book in the country. Now the best selling book is about running." And Frank said, "Yeah, that says it all."

When it started in 1973, New Times promised to be the latest in a series of great and prosperous American magazines. George Hirsch had lined up a list of brilliant journalists to be contributing writers, those of us who knew good magazines had hopes that New Times would be the successor to what Harper's had been during the days when it had been edited by Willie Morris and had featured the likes of Larry L. King, David Halberstam, John Updike and Marshall Frady.

Unfortunately, the reading public was growing tired of long stories about subjects that were either too long or too short. They did not know it at the time, but the publishing businesses of the '70s were declining. In the magazines that were centered around the lives of the rich, the lives of the famous, the lives of the famous, the lives of the famous.

The magazine, and finally died. It was a sad day for me, and for all who loved the magazine. It seemed to me that the magazine that would become a respectable reading, I wanted the magazine to be successful. I wanted the magazine to be successful. I wanted the magazine to be successful.

When I started the magazine, I had a lot of people who were interested in the magazine. I had a lot of people who were interested in the magazine. I had a lot of people who were interested in the magazine.

Jonestown's fate rests with cabinet

Youngest survivor

Three-year-old Jakarril Wilson, the youngest survivor of the mass suicide-murder rite in Jonestown, strokes his mother's chin while she talks to newsmen Tuesday in Georgetown. His mother, Leslie Wilson, said she escaped through the jungle to a railroad track and made her way to a large settlement in the area.

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (UPI) — Marxist Prime Minister Forbes Burnham called a cabinet meeting Tuesday night to decide the future of the 3,000-acre commune of Jonestown where more than 900 Americans died in mass suicide-murder 10 days ago.

Government sources said the cabinet was expected to commission the military to exploit the commune as an agricultural station and to harvest the crops of beans, papaya, bananas, pineapples, oranges and other tropical fruit hanging ripe on the trees.

The sources said it was not likely that Guyanese settlers or National Service volunteers could be persuaded to move into the commune where the Rev. Jim Jones led his disciples to their death in a ritual mass suicide. Guyanese peasants are notoriously superstitious and fearful of ghosts.

Guyanese soldiers already were in Jonestown to seal off the buildings against possible looting and to search for documents or other evidence that would solve the mysteries still hanging over the jungle clearing 150 miles northwest of Georgetown.

The future of Jonestown and its boarded up Peoples Temple sect dwellings "will feature prominently at the cabinet meeting," the government newspaper The Chronicle, said.

Burnham has not yet made any public statement on the mass suicide except to say that he will hang Larry Layton if the Peoples Temple follower is found guilty of the murder of Rep. Leo J. Ryan D-Calif., and four other Americans.

Layton, 32, of San Francisco, has been charged with five counts of murder here in the shooting of the Ryan investigating mission.

Arrival of survivors still not set

CHARLESTON AFB, S.C. (UPI) — A Kentucky man arrived Tuesday to wait for a niece who might be among survivors of the Peoples Temple murder-suicide rites, but State Department officials said they were still uncertain when they would return to the United States.

FBI agents and Justice Department and Department of Health, Education and Welfare officials have been in Charleston since Saturday, waiting to question the survivors and provide aid.

The survivors originally were scheduled to arrive during the weekend but Guyanese officials investigating the Nov. 18 deaths of 909 people in Jonestown have delayed their return.

The State Department said there would be no military planes returning survivors to the U.S. Tuesday, although seven survivors were given clearance to leave the country aboard a commercial airliner. It was not known when they would return.

John Stahl of Russellville, Ky., arrived in Charleston after being told by the State Department that his niece, Robin Tetcher, 19, of Indianapolis, Ind., might be among the survivors.

Stahl said his brother and sister-in-law were believed to be among the dead.

"This whole thing's been like a bad dream and I keep hoping I can wake up but it just seems to go on," Stahl said.

Stahl said the State Department told him it believes one of the survivors is his niece, who had gone to Jonestown with her parents.

"I don't even know if she'll be on the plane or if she's alive but if she is, and she wants a place to stay, I want her to know that there's a place she can stay," said Stahl.

Survivors coming to Charleston face questioning by FBI agents in the death of U.S. Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif. U.S. Attorney Thomas D. Lydon, who has not ruled out the possibility of criminal charges against some of the survivors who land here, declined Tuesday to discuss the specific questions the FBI wants answered.

"I feel it would be inappropriate for me to discuss any questions that might have a bearing on a criminal proceeding," he said.

Temple's hit squad feared

NEW YORK (UPI) — Peoples Temple attorney Mark Lane said Tuesday federal authorities are very concerned that a hit squad from the religious cult may strike during next month's Democratic mid-term conference in Memphis, Tenn. that President Carter and Vice President Mondale are scheduled to attend.

"The Secret Service is concerned that this program may be put into effect in Memphis during the early days of December," Lane told ABC News correspondent Barbara Walters, adding that the FBI is also concerned.

The lawyer, who recently returned from Jonestown, Guyana, said the pact is apparently part of a larger scheme to murder American government officials, defectors from the cult and reporters critical of the settlement.

He said a woman leader of the group told him of the plan which he said is financed by $3 million in cash and $10 million in Swiss bank accounts whose numbers he said he knows.

Earlier Memphis police said Lane had given them four packets of Kool-Aid with an expiration date of death. One of them was for his own use, they said.

Soviet press has comment

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet press said Tuesday the Peoples Temple murders showed a serious disease that affects all of American society and were a result of "imperialism" in the United States.

The official Soviet Communist Party daily Pravda and the daily Sovetskaya Kultura both carried commentaries in the Peoples Temple sect's name in Moscow.

Jewish family off for United States

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Jewish couple whose fight to emigrate from the Soviet Union was complicated, last week by the birth of their second daughter, said Tuesday they are leaving on a flight to Vienna today on their way to Boston to seek medical help for their oldest daughter.

Boris Katz, whose 31-year-old wife Natalia gave birth to baby Gabriella Nov. 20, told Western reporters he bought tickets for the whole family on a plane leaving Moscow at 10:40 a.m. today.

"We plan to fly straight to Boston," Katz said. "But we don't know if we can get a connection to New York from Vienna, so we might have to go through London."

The Katzs were all set to go, with exit visas, passports and tickets on a plane leaving last Thursday, when Mrs. Katz gave birth with slightly ahead of schedule.

"It all worked out for the best in the end," Mrs. Katz said. "I would have been unhappy traveling with the baby expected any day."

"Natalia came out of the hospital Saturday evening," Katz said. "She and the baby are in fine shape."

The Katzs's campaign to emigrate began three years ago but became urgent last year with the birth of their first daughter, Jessica. Jessica is said to suffer from malabsorption syndrome, which means that she cannot digest milk fats and gains weight at a dangerously slow rate.

Katz says Soviet doctors cannot cure Jessica, while American doctors in Boston, Mass., the adopted home of his mother Khaika and brothers Viktor and Mikhail, have said they may be able to help.

Jessica has survived on a special American-made milk powder.

The Katzs's efforts to emigrate were highlighted in September when visiting Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., included them on a list of 18 families presented for review to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

The following month emigration officials removed the name of Mrs. Katz, a former computer engineer, from a sensitive security list, lifting the last official barrier to their departure.

Although everything appeared to be going their way, the Katzs almost didn't make it through the bureaucratic maze when Gabriella was born. The authorities insisted the new birth must be registered and the parents needed national identity papers.

But the couple had surrendered their internal passports in exchange for their exit visas.

Finally, last Friday the authorities agreed to let Katz give the visas back, get the internal passports, race across town in taxis to register the new birth and race back to get new visas with the baby's name entered, in exchange for the birth certificate.

Birthday to remember

A birthday party for John F. Kennedy Jr. and sister Caroline which ended early Monday at LeClub in New York City will probably be long remembered by them. A scuffle erupted as waiting photographers went to work as they left the club. At upper left, young Kennedy tried to be a peacemaker and restrain a friend who wanted to stop the picture taking. But Kennedy was thrown to the ground, at upper right. He also tried to calm a photographer identified as Bill Vitale, at left, after the scuffle.

Defensive driving class for these officers

LONGMEADOW, Mass. (UPI) — Police in this small western Massachusetts town don't know it yet, but they're going to get some defensive driving lessons after putting $20,000 worth of dents in their police cruisers.

"Some police officers think they're the greatest drivers in the world, but they're not," says Police Chief Donald Abraham, who scheduled the lessons "They're the worst."

The town has only two other cruisers. "I think I'll put the others in dry dock," Abraham said.

Abraham said there had been about dozen accidents in the past two years involving the town's cruisers, with about half of them the fault of police.

When asked about the reaction of his officers to taking the course, Abraham said, "They don't know about it yet."

Damage to the cruisers was estimated at $20,000, Abraham said.

"Some officers think because they're cops, everyone else will get out of their way," said Abraham, a 30-year veteran of the force. "It's just not using proper judgment, and police don't use proper judgment in many situations."

Earlier this week Abraham reported to the Board of Selectmen an accident he called "a foolish mistake." Two new police cars collided with each other while answering a house call.

However, the chief said it's hard praising officers against a guilty police officer when there's a street police union backing an officer who says a crash was "done in the line of duty."

Board Chairman Gerd Schiedler called the situation "a problem, that was no joke."

The selectmen already have sent letters to the police department asking the officers to treat the town's cars as if they were their own

Ford bows to federal demand makes warranty setup public

DETROIT (UPI) — Bowing to pressure from the Federal Trade Commission, Ford Motor Co. has agreed to notify owners of 1.8 million cars of an extended warranty program covering premature wear on certain engine parts.

The program, which triples the normal warranty on camshafts and rocker arms on cars and trucks with 2.3-liter engines, has been offered by Ford for some time as a "good will adjustment" to vehicle owners who reported problems.

Critics of the program have branded it a "secret warranty".

Involved are 1974 through early

1978-model Ford Mustang IIs and Pintos, 1975 through early 1978-model Mercury Bobcats, 1976 Mercury Capris and a small number of 1977 Courier trucks, Ford said.

Ford said it would repair at its expense premature wear problems occurring within 36 months or 36,000 miles, whichever comes first, of the time the vehicle was put into service.

Owners who had paid for repair work on the worn camshafts and rocker arms would be reimbursed if they could prove the work was done within the same time period allowed under the extended warranty, Ford said.

The program earned the "secret warranty" label because Ford told dealers about it but did not notify customers outright. FTC staff said it suspected dealers would "only reluctantly disclose that Ford may pay for the repair."

Ford, however, defended its actions.

"We have notified all our dealers of the program and instructed them to make it available to owners who are covered by it," Trainor said. "Dealers have a strong incentive to disclose it to their customers and make the program available to them."

Ford officials said the wear problem resulted from the use of oils with "insufficient wear protection" and was not a design defect. The parts affected open and close engine valves.

Ways to slow up inflation

(Last of nine columns)

Assume that the power centers in business and labor decide to comply (somewhat) with President Carter's voluntary price-wage guidelines and that the guidelines are at least tolerably high rate of inflation.

Assume, next, that President Carter uses his clout to force compliance — by awarding or withholding juicy government contracts, by permitting breakthroughs above the ceilings to trigger relaxation of import quotas, changes in government regulations, etc.

Assume, third, that Congress follows through and in 1979 debates and finally votes a form of "TIP" (Tax-based Income Policy). Under this new anti-inflation concept, businesses and workers who cooperate with the guidelines would be rewarded with tax rebates while those who shirk off the nation's interest would be punished with tax increases.

And finally, assume that today's frightening combination of an aged upward- and skyrocketing interest rates leads to a business recession which, in itself, is the most effective anti-inflation weapon any nation has.

What else? Obvious proposals have been and are:

- Slash and then eliminate the federal budget deficit, "an engine of inflation" all along.
- Continue to tighten credit to squeeze demand across-the-board, even though this easily could speed the business downturn.
- Put a lid on raises for business executives, federal employees, and hold down state pay and payrolls as well.
- Use the tax system much more effectively to spur business investment that would boost productivity in the U.S. — A key answer.
- Limit both Social Security tax hikes and Social Security benefit increases beginning next year.
- Revise the minimum wage law to postpone the jumps already scheduled (up to $3.35 an hour in 1981) and pass a "two-tier" minimum wage under which the younger unskilled are not entitled to as high a minimum wage as the adult untrained.

Take along steps to control the powers of regulatory agencies to impose restrictions that send business costs into an up-spiral and are not sufficiently vital to the nation's interest to warrant the inflationary impact.

Yes — yes, indeed!

From a multitude of sources — the Federal Reserve Board's chairman and many of its governors, the Brookings Institution, university economists, many other experts and associates, Brooks Steiner and I have picked out a packet of proposals worth far more consideration than they are getting.

• Reform current agricultural programs, under which farmers are paid not to plant and minimum prices are set for certain crops to boost farmers' income by raising our grocery bills. This is a take-from-Peter-to-pay-Paul system which fuels inflation and brutally squeezes America's urban consumers. Far superior would be a support program that would provide direct income supplements to speedy farmers. These payments would come out of the federal budget, and would save food shoppers up to $3.6 billion a year.

• Substitute direct subsidies for support program that would provide direct income supplements to speedy farmers. These payments would come out of the federal budget, and would save food shoppers up to $3.6 billion a year.

• Write into law hospital cost containment, a policy the Carter White House advocated back in 1977, but was given back-of-the-hand treatment by Congress. Even a limited program to control hospital costs, could reduce prices by $1.5 billion a year.

• Spur deregulation of such industries as the airlines, trucking, coastal maritime trade.

Inflation worries press stocks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices were lower at the close of the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday as investors showed concern about rising inflation. Trading was fairly active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, off more than a point at the outset and up more than a point in the first hour, was down 10.04 points to 803.79 shortly before the NYSE closed. The Dow gained 3.72 points Monday.

Declines led advances by about a 9-to-5 margin among the 1,669 issues crossing the composite tape by 4 p.m. EST.

NYSE turnover amounted to about 22,490,000 shares, compared with 19,790,000 traded Monday.

Prices were lower in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

Analysts said the Labor Department's report that October consumer prices rose 0.8 percent, or at a 9.6 percent annual rate, from the 0.8 percent hike in September caused some selling.

Investors also showed concern over the dollar's slide on foreign exchanges Tuesday. But it recovered somewhat later in the day. Anthony Solomon, Treasury undersecretary, said Carter administration policies were working "very well" in assisting the dollar.

Meanwhile, the government reported it ran a $13.95 billion deficit in October, compared with a $14.66 billion deficit a year ago. The government had a $3.66 billion surplus in September.

Analysts said the market was buoyed by some investors taking advantage of low prices created by October's market decline. Further, many traders were adjusting their portfolios for the end of this year and the beginning of 1979.

Also, McGraw-Hill reported October construction contracts rose 40 percent from a year ago, indicating the economy still has vitality. Housing starts remain strong, according to government reports released last week.

Boeing was active and higher most of the day. The aircraft company has received contracts worth several billion dollars recently and is working with McDonnell Douglas for a $1 billion Korean order.

Some gaming stocks were under pressure at one time. Among them were Ramada Inns, Caesar's World and Bally Manufacturing.

Sony was active because of a block of 125,000 shares at 7 3/4. Beckman Instruments had a block of 160,000 shares at 2 1/4. Household Finance made the active list with a block trade of 98,300 shares at 17 1/2.

Hewlett-Packard won support after reporting its fourth-quarter net jumped to $1.76 a share from $1.14 a year ago.

Seaboard World Airlines attracted attention after the firm reported 10-month earnings of $1.69 a share versus $1.51 a year ago.

Bausch & Lomb, a 1 1/2-point winner Monday, was higher most of the day. The firm raised its dividend payout last week.

Sanders Associates was higher at one point. The firm plans to buy up to 400,000 of its own shares in the open market from time to time.

Enersych was under pressure. The company said it might have a decline in fourth-quarter earnings.

Valley grain

WYOMING (UPI) — Both white wheat and durum were down daily by 2 to 3 cents. Mixed grain, 3 1/2 to 4 1/2 cents.

West prices are given daily by the Bean

Growers Warehouse Association and the Wyoming Grain Dealers Association. Other grain prices are an average of several major Valley dealer quotations obtained weekly.

MAGIC VALLEY — Sun Valley, Ketchum and Twin Falls business leaders will try to convince another airline to fly routes recently abandoned by Hughes Airwest to and from Twin Falls.

A dozen representatives of business organizations from the three communities decided at a meeting in Twin Falls Tuesday that would be the most effective response to Hughes' decision earlier this month to eliminate its daily flights between Twin Falls and

San Francisco.

Hughes announced two weeks ago it was cutting back its Twin Falls to San Francisco service from seven days a week to only Saturdays and Sundays because it needs the planes for new routes. The new routes were obtained as a result of the nationwide deregulation of airlines.

Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce manager Jay Hoyer said the business group decided to consult with the Civil Aeronautics Board and then "contact all potential air carriers in our area," including Sierra Pacific and Western Airlines, about providing service to the Magic Valley.

Hoyer said the group will also send a letter to Hughes protesting the decision to discontinue the flights, especially during the ski season, and the fact that so little notice was given affected communities prior to the decision. He said the letter would ask Hughes to reconsider the decision to discontinue the flights.

Hoyer admitted the group held little hope that its protest would change Hughes' decision, especially after hearing the comments of Worthle M.

Rauscher of the Idaho Division of Aeronautics and Public Transportation.

Rauscher predicted communities the size of Twin Falls everywhere in the country can expect to suffer a decline in service for the next five years as airlines shuffle their schedules to provide service to more profitable routes.

Hoyer said the group was undeterred by Rauscher's prediction. He said Hughes has told local businessmen that if passenger traffic increases at the Twin Falls Municipal Airport, the airline will provide better service. But since Hughes has decided to reduce service to the area, passenger traffic is unlikely to increase, Hoyer observed.

Hoyer said the group plans to seek better service from another airline, and at the same time mount a campaign to convince local people it is to their advantage to fly out of Twin Falls rather than Salt Lake City or Boise.

The meeting was attended by Twin Falls city manager Jean Millar, Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce President Joe Citek and chamber transportation committee members Dick Burwell and John Rosholt; John Barlow of Elkhorn, Bill Saylor of the Sun Valley Co., Linnea Hogan of Sun Valley; Slages, Inc.; Twin Falls airport manager Harry Merrick; Hoyer; Rauscher; Steve Ford of the Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce and Resort Association; and Lloyd Howe of the Idaho Division of Tourism and Industrial Development.

Alcoholism center wants longer lease

BOISE — Tuesday, the Idaho Regional Alcoholism Treatment Center in Gooding asked for a new lease on life — and on the building it is occupying.

At a meeting in Boise, State Land Board members heard from Carl P. Bergstrom, director of the alcoholic treatment center located in the former State Tuberculosis Hospital at Gooding. Bergstrom appeared before the board to seek a long-term lease on the three building complex.

The land board gave the center until February to present a detailed plan for use of the facilities.

The board asked Bergstrom to come back with a more precise idea of what they could do with the property and their finances for it. Land Board Secretary Gordon Trombly said Tuesday after the meeting.

Bergstrom said the center would like a two or three year lease instead of the present continuing lease with a clause that it could be terminated within 30 days.

Bergstrom explained that a long-term lease would provide stability and "enhance our growth." He said the operation of the center over the last two years was indicative that the facility would continue to grow.

If there was a long-term lease, Bergstrom said, the center could make long-range plans for the facility.

Board members acknowledged the treatment center had provided for alcoholics, but expressed concern that the state was spending nearly $100,000 yearly over what it received in rent just for the minimum maintenance of the buildings at the old hospital.

Trombly said the rent "nowhere offsets the minimum maintenance." He said it was costing between $90,000 and $100,000 more than what was collected in rent.

State Auditor Joe R. Williams said he didn't feel the state could continue to subsidize the people using the facility.

"Any arrangements we make should be on a paying basis," Williams said.

Bergstrom said he felt that expenses could be cut with a new heating system and in several other areas.

Evans suggested that Bergstrom return to the board in February with a growth plan for members to study.

"I would feel more comfortable if I could see a plan in hand what your proposing," Evans said.

Bergstrom said that by the February board meeting the center would prepare a specific plan "regarding growth and eventual take-over of the facility."

A group of Gooding businessmen desiring to purchase the old hospital facilities was scheduled to appear before today's board meeting. They couldn't make it, however, because of weather in the Gooding area.

The Gooding group, called the Jericho Corporation, can still make a presentation to the land board but no decision will be made until at least February, Trombly said.

He said the board did not appear to be pressing to dispose of the old state hospital buildings during Tuesday's meeting.

Masked bandit holds up Hailey service station

HAILEY — A masked robber held up at gunpoint a Hailey gas station attendant in Hailey Tuesday and made off with about $400 in cash.

The gas station attendant, Lee Ivey was unharmed, but the robber escaped with all the paper money in the station's cash register, according to Hailey city police officials.

Ivey said the holding occurred about 11:30 p.m. Monday when a man wearing over his head a white pillow case cut off eye site behind the Hailey station on Main Street of downtown Hailey.

The robber carried a revolver and ordered Ivey to go into the station's rest room, authorities said.

After about 10 minutes, Ivey returned to the station's office and the man was gone, according to reports Ivey said. The masked robber took several credit card slips from gas purchases in addition to $400 in cash.

Ivey described the robber as a young man about 5 feet 8 inches tall, between 25 and 30 years old. He was dressed in an army fatigues jacket and faded jeans and wore dark brown cotton gloves.

No arrests have been made but several police officers are patrolling several roads.

Jay Pace of Twin Falls may have the only 'idea warehouse' in Idaho

'Idea Man' answers building questions

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — At first glance it's just another storefront on Main Street, and the scale replicas of homes that sit in the windows have led some pedestrians to mistakenly peg the business as a toy shop.

But after a quick step through the door of the 'Idea Man' and a few minutes spent with owner Jay Pace it becomes clear this is indeed a very special place.

In fact, Pace's business is located in the center of Twin Falls and may be the only idea warehouse in the state of Idaho.

The Idea Man is an information source. Magic Valley residents seeking information on home building, design, alteration, can drop into the Idea Man and have questions answered free of charge.

Magic Valley residents can utilize the business to obtain information and craftsmen, among others, pay a yearly fee to be listed in the Idea Man's files, where customers can then learn of their services. Pictures of an individual's work and references from local residents are also available.

"People have so many questions on building," Pace explains, adding these questions may end up being asked of many different people at different times. Pace sees the Idea Man as a means to coordinate the search for information, a method by which knowledge of an available information and answers to questions are brought under one roof. His service, Pace hopes, will eliminate unnecessary duplication of time and effort.

What sorts of questions can be resolved? Pace himself has answered and Twin Falls native says one of his first questions came from an individual who was planning to purchase 400 feet of four-foot-tall white picket fence. He wanted to know if he was getting a fair price. The cost evaluation Pace prepared was almost identical with the price the customer had been quoted for the fencing materials.

But while Pace hopes to act as a conduit between builders and buyers, he's also hoping the Idea Man will become a reference point for Magic Valley residents. In the back of the business are drafting tables and supplies available for rental use.

Heathelives mentioned the size of his shop, which is a library of more than 600 works. The library, Pace says, will shortly grow to more than 1,000 volumes. Included in the reference materials are blueprints and pictures of buildings, plans for better design of drainage systems, utility planning, tests, work on sewage systems, questions of all practical questions for interior decoration, and books on the philosophy of the ancient architects who built prehistoric monuments.

Pace acknowledges some of the subjects might be thought irrelevant to construction of a home. But his architectural studies, which included a year with the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation — convinced him there is involved in home building than just construction of a shelter.

The challenge of home building, Pace says, is to design a home that reflects the nature of the person and the nature of the site where the home is to be built and to do it all at a price he can afford.

The Idea Man has been in business just under three months. Pace says he has already received inquiries from several western states. "We had the idea and then ideas and make them grow," he explained.

Aspen joins Ketchum in fighting 'skiflation'

MAGIC VALLEY — Aspen and Ketchum are joining forces to fight a "skiflation" — the loss of ski lift revenues to other areas.

The Aspen Skiing Company Monday passed a resolution endorsing the Magic Valley Chamber of Commerce and requesting the U.S. Forest Service to establish clear guidelines to handle the ski lift revenue to be shared between the two areas.

ing in public lands.

Endorsement came a day before the Magic Valley Chamber of Commerce held its annual meeting.

54 Forest Service members appeared before Forest Service executive officials in Washington Tuesday to try to secure the agreement to share ski lift revenue.

Cuts threaten Wendell school accreditation

WENDELL — The Wendell schools will probably lose the approval of the Northwest Accreditation Association because of forced cutbacks, according to the superintendent of schools.

Because of the cutbacks, Wendell High School students will be without arts and crafts classes and a counselor for the next two years while the district works to overcome a $70,000 deficit.

The deficit "occurred when a smaller-than-expected number of new students registered during the 1977-78 school year. Because of that, the money received from the state school system" was less than expected, causing the deficit.

"We figure it will take two years to get the district into the black," school superintendent Lawrence LaRue said.

The high school students must do without the options of art classes for elective subjects but one of the hardest budget-cutting measures taken by the district was to eliminate the teachers' aides from the elementary grades.

"We had a meeting last night and the elementary teachers asked that the teachers' aides be reinstated," LaRue said Tuesday.

The lack of a high school counselor has affected students trying to get scholarships to colleges for the coming year.

LaRue said besides helping students apply for scholarships and entrance into colleges, students are unsure of when and where to take college entrance exams.

LaRue said it is likely that the school district will be dropped from the approved list by the Northwest Accreditation Association, which approves school programs.

Usually, a district has two years to improve the system to meet accreditation standards before other steps are taken.

If the district did not meet the standards in the next two years, it would be placed on the advised list and if the standards are not met in another two years, the district would be dropped from accreditation.

LaRue said if the district were ever to lose accreditation, students attending colleges and universities in the state would have no problem having their high school classes accepted.

If the students go out of state, there may be a problem, he said.

LaRue said he felt the district would be able to get back on the approved list after the deficit is cleared up.

One question still remaining, LaRue said, is what effect the 1 percent initiative will have on education in Wendell.

He said he was unsure what other cuts could be made if necessary.

"We'll just have to wait and see what the legislature comes up with," he said.

Wyoming lawyer knocks 'half-truths'

JACKSON, Wyo. (UPI) — The defense lawyer for top Rock Springs policeman Ed Cantrell has accused the state grand jury's special prosecutor of telling "half-truths" about the man Cantrell is accused of killing.

Prominent trial lawyer Gerry L. Spence said Monday that Lawrence A. Yonke, who headed the grand jury's staff during its one-year investigation of crime in the state and in state government, knew of information indicating undercover narcotics agent Michael Rosa had been guilty of misconduct while working for other police agencies.

"I am not saying that Rosa was or wasn't a good police officer," Spence said. "I am simply saying that Mr. Yonke, after he chose to speak on the subject, didn't choose to give the whole story, and that is unfair."

Rosa was shot in the head July 15, two days before he was to testify before the grand jury, which was then investigating alleged vice and official corruption in Rock Springs. Rosa died while seated in an unmarked police car with Cantrell and two other officers.

Cantrell has been "charged" with first-degree murder. Spence has said he will prove Cantrell killed Rosa in self defense. At a preliminary hearing earlier this month, Spence accused Rosa of misconduct.

In a news conference after the grand jury disbanded this month, Yonke said.

"You are going to get two opinions on that," Yonke had said. "In Gillette where he worked he did a good job."

Monday Spence criticized Yonke.

"If a public official in a sensitive job such as Special Prosecutor Yonke is going to make statements to the press, he has an obligation to give the press the full and complete story," the defense lawyer said. "Mr. Yonke has been guilty in this case of only giving the press half-truths."

Spence said that when Yonke made the statement he possessed a state Criminal Investigation Division report accusing Rosa of assault and battery with a knife and containing an unsatisfactory report from another police department, complaints about Rosa from other officers that he was "cocky, and quick-tempered" and "that his attitude on occasions had gotten him into trouble without provocation."

BLM plans recreation permit rules

BOISE (UPI) — Rules will be developed for recreation permits on the Bruneau-Jarbridge river system in Idaho, the Bureau of Land Management said today.

Dick Geier said the BLM is developing rules for recreation permits along all rivers popular with boaters because of the tremendous increase in recreation use of river areas.

"Due to the problems arising from increased use Idaho already requires permits from commercial river-recreation outfits," he said.

Public comment will be sought for the rulemaking process, he added.

Fish and game drops water rights protest

HAGERMAN — The Idaho Fish and Game Department withdrew a protest Tuesday against a water rights application from Flying Triangle Inc., a company which wants to build a trout hatchery in Hagerman.

Flying Triangle was granted rights to 30 cubic feet per second (cfs) of water from the Big Bend ditch in February.

The company protested the application at the time before realizing the water was already controlled by the Big Bend Ditch Company.

"We were protesting everything without having time to investigate what was really going on," said department attorney Fred Frahm.

The protest was withdrawn when Fish and Game realized "the water is already down the stream," he explained.

The department uses about 16 cfs from Tucker Creek, which is the source of the Big Bend Ditch, to fill its duck ponds on the Hagerman Wildlife Refuge. Officially, it has rights to 3 cfs.

Rustling charge probed

ELKO, NEV. — Two men were awaiting action Tuesday by Elko County, Nev., authorities on charges of grand larceny in connection with a cattle rustling incident.

Twin Falls Chief Deputy Sheriff James Munn said Elko county officials reported a cattle rustling incident Saturday afternoon just east of Jackpot. Twin Falls City police later saw a vehicle fitting the description of the suspect pickup truck. A dead white-face steer was in the back of the vehicle.

Munn said Paul Genn, 32, of Kirkland, Wash., a former resident of Twin Falls, and Michael T. McCurdy, 31, of Twin Falls, were taken into custody on grand larceny charges and released on $5,000 bond each.

Twin Falls and Elko county officials were continuing the investigation Tuesday. The animal was the property of the Salmon River Cattle Association, and was reportedly killed while grazing on association range in Nevada.

Potato side dishes add to family fare

Among the first settlers of the state of Idaho were rugged prospectors, lured there by the promise of gold and silver. A hardy and imaginative breed, they left a legacy of picturesque place names: Red Warrior Gulch, Broiler Crack Creek, Mountain Goshute and Vistula Mine.

Today, the fertile Idaho soil yields another precious commodity — the Idaho potato, in season now through early summer. It's as sturdy and solid as the Idahoans of yore. And the colorful side dishes Idaho potatoes lend themselves to are just as imaginative as those early settlers.

Potato casseroles, such as Idaho Potato-Zucchini Bake, provide a lively focus for a family dinner, especially when the main dish is an unadorned hamburger patty or simply sliced, leftover roast. This casserole combines cheese-covered layers of sliced potatoes and zucchini, topped with a buttered bread crumb crust. Western Style Potato Casserole, a mixture of vegetables in a pungent tomato sauce, works similar magic for a dinner of roast chicken or baked fish.

Idaho potato dishes deliver as much sound nutrition as satisfying goodness. Potatoes furnish vitamin C, niacin, iron, thiamine and riboflavin, plus lots of energy-producing carbohydrates. And they are a boon to the weight-conscious: one five-ounce baked Idaho potato contains only 90 calories, the same number found in a large apple.

IDAHO POTATO-ZUCCHINI BAKE

- 3 medium Idaho® potatoes, pared and sliced 1/4-inch thick
- 2 cups grated Cheddar cheese, divided
- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper

1 cup milk
3 medium zucchini, thinly sliced
1 cup packaged, dry bread crumbs

Pre-heat oven to 350°F. Layer potato slices with 1 cup cheese in buttered 10x6x1 1/4-inch baking dish. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in medium saucepan, remove from heat, blend in flour, salt and pepper. Stir in milk; return to heat and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce thickens slightly and comes to boiling. Pour sauce over potato slices. Cover and bake 30 minutes. Remove cover; layer zucchini slices and remaining cheese over potatoes. Combine bread crumbs and 4 tablespoons melted butter. Sprinkle over zucchini. Bake, uncovered, 40 minutes longer.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

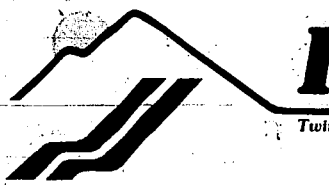

WESTERN STYLE POTATO CASSEROLE

1/4 cup coarsely chopped pitted ripe olives
1 can (16 oz.) tomato sauce
1 teaspoon chili powder
1 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese
6 strips cooked bacon, crumbled

Pre-heat oven to 375°F. Combine potatoes, beans, onions, chili powder and garlic salt; pour over potato mixture. Bake 45 minutes. Garnish with olive slices, if desired.

Spuds put 'muscle' into high protein casseroles

Making meals count toward good nutrition isn't such a challenge when you know which foods to select. Fish, poultry, eggs and lean beef, to name a few, are all fine sources of important protein, for example, which in combination with other nourishing foods helps to maintain the body.

We suggest two nutritionally sensible, yet satisfying and economical casseroles to "fortify" your menu plans. They're made with high protein staple ingredients — fish and eggs, along with fresh Idaho® potatoes, which supply carbohydrates for quick energy and stamina.

With an excellent crop of Idaho spuds coming into markets now, it's a prime time to take advantage of their abundance and versatility. A Potato-Egg Casserole proves them to be a tasty base and practical meal stretcher for this saucy main dish, the kind Idaho cooks are known to prepare for their own families.

Steam the potatoes in bouillon to enhance the wholesome fresh potato flavor. The jackets are left on during cooking for better vitamin retention. Remove skins from cooked spuds and slice, then layer them with the remaining ingredients before baking for 20 minutes.

Idaho Fish Bake follows the same preparation technique with handy fish fillets, fresh or frozen, and cooked fresh potatoes spread with a snappy chili-sauce and cream mixture. The topping has just enough tangy-sweet flavor to appeal to every palate at your table. Serve either of these easy main dishes with a green vegetable or salad side dish, and count off all the body-building nutrients you've offered in just one meal.

1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce

Cut potatoes in half; place in large saucepan with chicken bouillon cubes and 1 inch cold water. Bring to a boil, cover, reduce heat, simmer 20 to 25 minutes, or until just tender. Drain. Reserve liquid. Remove potato skin and slice potatoes 1/4-inch thick. Arrange potatoes in 8x12-inch shallow baking dish. In medium saucepan, saute bacon until crisp; drain on paper towel; reserve. Discard all but 1/2 cup bacon fat. Saute onions in bacon fat until soft; remove from skillet and arrange over potatoes. Cover with egg slices. Blend flour into remaining fat in skillet. Stir over medium heat 2 minutes. Add enough milk to reserved potato liquid to make 2 1/2 cups. Add milk mixture to saucepan; cook, stirring constantly, until sauce thickens and boils. Remove from heat; add dill, salt and pepper sauce. Pour dill sauce over casserole. Sprinkle with reserved bacon. Bake in 350°F. oven 20 minutes or until heated through.

YIELD: 4 to 6 servings.

IDAHO FISH BAKE

- 4 Idaho® potatoes
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup diced onion
- 1 cup diced green pepper
- 1 cup chili sauce
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/2 pounds fish fillets (flounder or sole)

Cut potatoes in half, place in large saucepan, add 1 inch cold salted water. Bring to a boil, cover, reduce heat, simmer 20 to 25 minutes, until just tender. Drain. Slip off potato skins. Slice potatoes 1/4-inch thick. Arrange slices in an 8x12-inch shallow baking dish. In medium saucepan, melt butter, saute onions and green peppers until soft. Remove from heat, add chili sauce, sour cream and salt. Spread half the sour cream mixture over potatoes. Wash fish fillets, pat dry. Place fish fillets over potatoes. Spread remaining sour cream mixture over fish. Bake in 350°F oven 20 to 30 minutes, until fish flakes easily with a fork.

YIELD: 4 to 6 servings.

Good manners are in order this Yule season

"There is always a best way of doing everything, if it be to hold an egg. Manners are the happy ways of doing things."

Ralph Waldo Emerson

Have you ever been left in limbo after having sent out a large number of invitations to an open house, buffet, Christmas or wedding party, not knowing who can and who cannot make it to the party? You even wrote R.S.V.P. For those who to entertain, the usually stand for the French word meaning "please respond." Whether or not the R.S.V.P. was included on your invitation, those intentions should have been acknowledged. There is no certainty as to determine how much food and beverage you should get.

Manners are also good addresses. If the above had happened to you, at what liberty it has that a downright response left behind. Someone must set the standards of behavior to why don't you answer your first invitation immediately if you are in the habit of doing so already.

The party is over. You had out of beverage and food because you didn't know that everyone attended and that a few minutes were bringing friends. It's three days after the party and you haven't heard even a grunt about the success or even unpopularity of the affair. That's not a bother either. In fact, that behavior is a mark of a sign of rudeness and immediately unbecomable.

No. You don't need to pen a formal note to R.S.V.P. or acknowledge your presence at the party. Today's manners and courtesies are acceptable according to the November 27 Time Magazine story about new American manners. Let's take a look at her expanded and revised 177 guide to manners. Says she that they use the telephone to pre-greet, but the phone is a secondary. Make a personal call. She also says to be firm and bold. The Key's author, the Complete Book of Etiquette, A Guide to Contemporary Living. Incidentally, that the tipsetter is also the spinning out the message.

Good manners are the basic signals of culture and good manners can be displayed in every area of daily living. When somebody does something nice to you, or you hear something said that's nice about you, or somebody gives you an unexpected gift when you had to turn or whatever else you might have happen that it pleased for you, to say "thank you" isn't really being appreciative.

And graciously answering the R.S.V.P. is not saying that you are present at the end, dated and undelivered all are inclined to have. There are others but not as courteous. Things have changed vastly from the old-fashioned social habits of the 1930s. As far as the male seating the female go first, all don't leave the room, or acknowledge the female entering a room by standing up, the rules have changed. The new book on American manners says that whoever gets to the door first should open it. Everyone should stand for female and make entrance a party group or of the lady to acknowledge the arrival. It is impolite to go on at large parties and business meetings and in a bar expected.

The person chosen to the door should stand out first. As for the male lighting up a female a cigarette, that's not polite. He doesn't have to do that any longer. If that he shouldn't continue her smoking by doing so.

Another timely form of good manners is displayed when setting your table or buffet, seating your guests and your single eating. Here are some general tips that you probably already know but maybe you would like to review.

1. The general rule for setting a table is to put on the right what you need for eating the entire meal. This puts the things your guests have most they have to look forward to eating. There should be a few extras for each course: appetizer, dessert plate or dish. This is not only nice to see but it's practical. Better plates or salad plates or how to use them to the left of the dinner or service plate. The best for them should be served when guests are seated and should be put on them before they sit down. This signals the friendliness of the host.

2. Glasses are easier to pick up than you think. The water glasses should be placed and held to the center of the plate to the right of the service plate. If a guest is seated with wine glasses then you should have grape and fruit glasses where wine glasses. In other words in the order you are going to serve the wine and that's from right to left. If your appetizer is hearty and needs a lot of wine water and your entrée is light, but requiring a white wine, put glasses in that order.

3. Good tableware should put down only what you need for the meal. If you're having a casserole and don't need a table with a lot of plates on the table. If you are starting with a soup, put the soup spoons to the right of the plate. If you are having a salad to start with, put the salad fork to the left of the plate.

4. Place your hands on the table with the left hand and the right hand on the right hand. A perfectly proper in this regard is to rest the hands on the edge of the table. Do not rest your hands on the table. Place your hands on the table. Do not rest your hands on the table. Do not rest your hands on the table.

5. If you are having a meal with a lot of courses, the host should be the first to start eating. If you are having a meal with a lot of courses, the host should be the first to start eating. If you are having a meal with a lot of courses, the host should be the first to start eating.

1. Make your table centerpiece as colorful as possible. Three bouquets will keep them low on the table so that seated guests can see each other. Temporary candles can be distracting too.

2. Concerning buffers, there are a few things to be remembered. You will undoubtedly have warming plates and coffee or tea pots heated up with cords. Make sure these cords are tucked out of the way so that nobody can trip.

3. Make sure that the containers are set away from the edge of the counter or table so that if they spill, they won't hurt someone.

4. Arrange table in buffet line so that there will be only one way to serve buffet. It will serve up a plate. Against the wall, if an entrance plate is used, that leads for the first part of the table and the last part. That there will not be too when the guests get to the table.

5. Whether stand-up or buffet party, the buffet table should be the top one. Don't need more than a few hot and fresh-up items that having to juggle table fork and spoon, glass and a plate. This is not so. At the same time, if you are having a buffet party, it's a good idea to have a table with a lot of hot and fresh-up items that having to juggle table fork and spoon, glass and a plate.

6. It is not proper to serve beverages after guests have seated their plates and are situated. Don't make them wait around with their service. Good plate and beverage trays being brought. This is a lot of thinking to do when the party is over.

7. The host should be the first to make it more comfortable for the guests to be seated. It's a good idea to have a table with a lot of hot and fresh-up items that having to juggle table fork and spoon, glass and a plate.

8. This is a good idea to have a table with a lot of hot and fresh-up items that having to juggle table fork and spoon, glass and a plate.

New is prime time to take advantage of abundance of Idaho onions

Chiffon pie makes a heavenly holiday dessert

SAN FRANCISCO — This fluffy chiffon pie filling is nestled in the crunchiest of crusts and the contrast of textures is just one of the charms of this elegant dessert.

Rum and nutmeg contribute a delicate flavor to the filling and, if preferred, you may substitute rum flavoring for the liquor. (See "note" following the recipe instructions).

The rich, delicious crust is made of zwieback crumbs combined with crunchy California walnuts. This is so fabulous that you may well want to use this Walnut Crust for many of your favorite chiffon pie or ice cream fillings.

In keeping with the holidays, the pie is decorated with a sprinkling of mixed candied fruits and walnut halves or the large pieces that you'll find in your package or vacuum can of shelled walnuts. It is to be able to buy your walnuts already shelled and know that these walnut kernels will be as nutcracker fresh as if you just shelled them yourself. Look for them in the 1 pound package or vacuum can so you'll have plenty on hand for more of your holiday baking.

Since Eggnog Chiffon Pie is a rich dessert, your portions can afford to be on the dainty side and you can easily stretch this treat to eight servings.

EGGNOG CHIFFON PIE

- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 3/4 cup milk
- 4 large eggs, separated
- 1/4 cup dark rum
- 1/2 pint (1 cup) whipping cream

California walnuts and mixed candied fruits for decorating
Prepare walnut crust and set aside.
In top of double boiler, mix together 1/4 cup of the sugar with gelatin, salt and nutmeg. Add milk; let stand 5 minutes to soften. Beat egg yolks and add to mixture. Place over boiling water and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens slightly. Remove from heat and stir in rum. Cool until mixture begins to thicken and jell: Beat egg whites to soft peaks. Gradually beat in remaining 1/4 cup sugar, beating to a soft meringue.

With same beater, beat cream until stiff. Fold cream and egg whites into gelatin mixture. Chill a few minutes, until mixture mounds on a spoon. Turn into Walnut Crust and chill until firm: At serving time, decorate top with 6 walnut halves or 1/4 cup large pieces and a sprinkling of chopped mixed candied fruits. Makes one 9-inch pie.

WALNUT CRUST

Grind 1 1/4 cups walnuts or place about 1/4 cup at a time into blender jar and blend fine. Mix with 1/4 cup fine zwieback crumbs, 2 tablespoons granulated sugar and 1/4 cup softened butter or margarine. Press in an even layer over bottom and up sides of a 9-inch pie pan. Bake at 400 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes, until very lightly browned. Cool before filling.

Note: In place of 1/4 cup rum, you can increase the milk to 1 cup and use 1 1/2 teaspoons rum flavoring.

Acorn squash can provide tasty treat

© Chicago Sun-Times

If you've never served the delightful vegetable, acorn squash, you have a treat in store.

Its engaging shape lends itself to attractive serving. When acorn squash is cut in slices, it has a scalloped edge. When it is halved lengthwise, it has a nice boat shape.

Then it is easy to bake with a dab of butter and brown sugar, or to stuff for an interesting change of pace in vegetables.

Glazed acorn rings take advantage of the pretty scalloped edges of acorn squash slices. They're baked with orange juice. Then they're covered with a delicious brown sugar, corn syrup and butter glaze zipped with grated fresh lemon rind to bake a few minutes longer. This is a different and delectable vegetable just right for autumn days.

This mellow-flavored vegetable takes well to spice and to more emphatic flavors, so it's a good idea to stuff it with chopped cooked ham, season it with allspice and bake it.

At the peak of the season right now, but on the market all year, is the squash called, Tabel Queen, a variety of the popular acorn squash.

This hard-shelled, mature, small squash is acorn shaped, hence the name. The fruits are 5 to 8 inches long, 4 to 5 1/2 inches thick, tapering abruptly from the middle to apex, ribbed widely, with the skin a deep blackish green and smooth to the touch, except for the ribbing. This squash shell is hard and thin, the flesh is a pale orange, and there is a seed cavity that is moderately large.

When buying acorn squash, avoid those that show any soft or watery areas. The shell should be intact and should show no decay. In this type of squash the seeds are expected to be hard and inedible and are to be discarded before cooking.

Any dry place where the temperature can be maintained is suitable for storage. A temperature of about 50 to 55 degrees F. should keep acorn squash for three months. It is essential that the surface be kept dry during the storage period.

Rum and nutmeg contribute a delicate flavor to filling of this holiday dessert

Onions add zest to hot dinner biscuits

TWIN FALLS — Choose the herbs to go with the entrée you plan to serve. Marjoram or thyme are great with chicken, pork or beef. Dill is superb with fish.

Prepare biscuit dough from 2 cups biscuit mix. Pat into a 9-inch square baking pan and brush with a little melted butter. Sauté 2 cups sliced Sweet Spanish onions in 1/2 tablespoon butter until golden. Season with a little salt and pepper and spread over biscuit dough. Blend 1/4 cup sour cream with 1 egg, 1/4 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon of your choice of herbs. Pour over onions and bake at 400 degrees until custard is set and starting to brown, about 20 minutes. Cut in squares and serve warm. Reheat nicely.

Dear Abby

Pregnant' question upsets job applicant

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
 © Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.
DEAR ABBY: I'm a young married woman. During a job interview today I was asked, "Do you plan to start a family in the near future?"
 Was flabbergasted. I never dreamed that such an inquiry would be made in this day of equal rights, working women, postponed parenthood, etc.
 Abby, my husband and I are a family. And besides, I invested a great deal of time and effort in earning a college degree, and right now, my career is of paramount importance to me.
 I am certain that a male applicant would not have been asked a question like that. In your opinion, is that a proper question to ask a female applicant? Or am I getting all shook up about a legitimate request for information?
KIN PONTIAC

DEAR ABBY: No names please. If anyone knew I wrote this I'd die of embarrassment.
 What is the difference between a mule, a donkey and a jackass?
 I have heard that mules are sterile. So if a mule can't reproduce how come we still have mules. Thank you.
OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW BETTER

DEAR OLD ENOUGH: A mule is the offspring of a jackass and a mare. When a male horse mates with a female donkey, the offspring is known as a "hinny." A hinny is capable of reproducing, but the mule is almost always sterile.
 An ass is simply a donkey, and a jackass is specifically a male donkey.

DEAR ABBY: This may not seem very important to you but it's important to me. Our dog snores. Although he sleeps in the kitchen, we can hear him all over the house. Don't suggest we put him outside. It's too cold. He's only a pup but he snores so loud he sounds like an old man. Sometimes his snoring interferes with my sleep. Any suggestions?
CEDAR RAPIDS, IA.

DEAR C.R.: Dogs, like people, can have a nasal obstruction which causes them to snore, so do yourself (and your pooch) a favor and take him to the vet.
 If that doesn't help, try earplugs (for you). I wouldn't suggest putting a dog out in a Cedar Rapids winter.

If you need help in writing letters of sympathy, congratulations or thank-you letters, get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (22 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Women's re-entry program

POCATELLO (ISU) — A women's re-entry program has been created by the Idaho State University Department of Sociology, Anthropology and Social Work to meet the needs of women who wish to return to study at ISU, announced Dr. Barbara Joans, director of the program.

The program is designed for all women returning to or first entering school, she said. It also is for the woman who needs help in learning to use her degree when school is finished, she added.
 Under the auspices of the College of Liberal Arts, the program will meet the needs of returning women in a number of ways, according to Dr. Joans.

"It will help women design programs and it will provide information on child care, financial aid, and non-traditional schedules and jobs," she said. "It will create an environment of support for returning women through study groups, counseling, and peer support. The program will help guide women through the academic process, while taking their special needs and commitments into account."

In addition to Dr. Joans, the program is staffed by counselors Faye Huerta, Ph.D., and Kathy Woodard, MSW, and job consultant Betty Jaramila. Further information about the program can be obtained by visiting the re-entry office in Room 318B of the Liberal Arts Building or by calling 236-3366.

DEAR K: When a new employee is hired, the employer makes an investment in time and training. He, therefore, has a right to know if the applicant plans to have a family or not — and how, when.
 Some women take a leave of absence from their jobs to have children and raise them. Men do not.

Health

Heavy breast are painful

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb,
 At my age it is probably very silly to do what I have in mind. I'm going to ask you anyway. I am 66 and in good health. I am 5-foot-4 and weigh 130 pounds.

My weight is stable, even though it is more than I like. That seems to be the way things are. I do lots of physical activity in terms of walking and do all my own yard work and housework. I used to weigh 130 pounds.

Now, my problem is my heavy breasts. I wear a 36-D bra and the straps cut my bony shoulders. There is a rut across the shoulders.

I'm uncomfortable. I never liked this heavy breast business anyway and now that I'm an elderly widow, it's not a one's business but mine.

I'd like to know if I can have them reduced — surgically — in safety. Both have had fibroids removed in the past and have healed very well. I don't mind surgery and do well with it and I can afford it.

My own doctor probably won't OK it because he is opposed to what he calls mutilation. I'm so darned uncomfortable with this continual pressure and pull that I've got to do something about it.

Dear Reader,
 It's done all the time. For various medical reasons, some women have the breasts totally removed and have them replaced with a prosthesis under the breast skin. There are a number of different procedures and which one is used depends on the basic problem and what needs to be done.

You should have a consultation with a plastic surgeon who does cosmetic work. Since you may not have such a physician in your immediate community, what you can do is go to a large metropolitan area.

The best way to do that would be to call the County Medical Society where a large medical center is located and ask them for information about plastic surgeons who do cosmetic surgery. They will probably give you the names of several and tell you what hospitals they are affiliated with, even what their ages are and perhaps something about their professional background.

Then, you can make an appointment to see one or more of these physicians and learn directly from that physician what he has to offer.

Mom may soon be able to program appetites

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mothers may be able to permanently program a child's appetite against overeating to help with the continuing fight against fat, a nutrition and exercise researcher says.

Lawrence Oscal of the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle said Sunday that appetites may be programmed lifelong against overeating if mothers simply refrain from overfeeding their children in the first months of life.
 Oscal said rats fed more food than a matched control group in the first weeks after birth had a larger appetite throughout their lives and grew much heavier.

"The evidence we came up with indicates in the very early stages of life the food intake fixes the voluntary food intake for life," Oscal said.

"We don't have evidence yet for humans. But, in my opinion, I think we're right on target. I think this is the answer to the human fat problem."

Oscal said if the theory applies to humans, as he believes, all it would take is to conquer much of the overfeeding problem there is for a mother, in consultation with a doctor, to feed the child normal amounts of food.
 The child's appetite would be fixed to prevent overeating, Oscal said.

With growth, the child's appetite would naturally increase. Oscal finally stated he did not want to remain

"programmed" and have certain limits, Oscal said.

"I think it's extremely simple and it would be better with each passing day," he said. "We don't know what the appetite centers are, but this seems to fix or program the body to certain food intakes."

"It would just involve feeding a baby a correct number of calories. If I were born this morning, I would want my mother to have this information."

In the developed world between 25 and 40 percent of the population suffers from obesity — defined as being 30 percent overweight, he said.

In an experiment repeated several times, Oscal took a litter of four rats and gave it to one mother and a litter of 22 matched rats and gave it to another. The female rat has 12 milk nipples and is equipped to handle a litter of 12 pups, Oscal said.

The rats were cared by the mothers for three weeks — "the programming period" — and then were given access to an unrestricted amount of food.

The 22 rats that shared one mother and could not overeat averaged 29 grams of food a day when given unrestricted access to food compared with 23 for the more voracious rodents.

By the time they reached maturity, the smaller appetitive rats were a third lighter and had half the fat of their matched counterparts.

New cabinet departments under study

By HEDRICK SMITH
O.N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — By mid-December, President Carter is slated to receive preliminary proposals from his reorganization staff suggesting the creation of two new Cabinet departments — and possibly the dismantling of the present Commerce Department, administration officials said Saturday.

If the president goes along with the most ambitious of a series of reorganization options, administration officials said, it would mean setting up a new Department of Economic Development — that would replace and expand the present Department of Housing and Urban Development — and establishing a new Department of Natural Resources, which would replace the present Interior Department.

But high-ranking administration officials emphasize that not only are these plans still to be reviewed by Carter, but they have not yet been reviewed and approved by James T. McIntyre, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

At present, some of the reorganization staff proposals would have contradictory effects. One, for example, would eliminate the Commerce Department and another would expand it. Secretary of Commerce J. Edgar Hoover and his aides are vigorously fighting any effort to disband their agency. But the White House has not yet indicated which direction it will take.

Moreover, senior aides to Carter and Vice President Mondale, who is in charge of setting the administration's legislative priorities for the coming year, are opposed to any major reorganization effort for fear that it would arouse strong opposition of congressional committees, overseas Congress and strain White House relations with Capitol Hill.

"There's a bias that reorganization is too costly politically," remarked one reorganization official. "It's true, there's no option that does anything worthwhile that is not going to take some fancy footwork on Capitol Hill. But in my opinion it's desirable."

Recognizing both political and bureaucratic obstacles, the administration has already set aside earlier ideas about consolidating various programs aimed at environmental control and protection of workers and consumers, or about combining the work of agencies dealing with various governmental health programs.

The president's one clear commitment, at present, is to renew an earlier proposal for a new and separate Department of Education, which did not pass in the last Congress.

The other outstanding battlegrounds within the administration are the fields of economic development and natural resources.

Reorganization specialists insist, for example, that in the field of economic development, there are now six major government agencies administering 12 programs with a multi-billion dollar pool of money. The big ones are the Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration; HUD's Urban Development Assistance Grant Program, the Farmers Home Administration of the Agriculture Department, the Community Service Administration in the Department of Justice, and the proposed new urban development bank that would be administered by three Cabinet departments.

The bureaucratic maze has brought repeated protests from mayors and other local government officials across the country who contend that they cannot deal with the federal bureaucracy. It is too complex and uncoordinated, they say, and duplications lead to unnecessary delay in obtaining federal aid.

"There's got to be some program consolidation," asserted one senior reorganization official. "We're talking about taking four or five programs and making them one."

The high option, as reorganization officials term it, would be to set up a huge new Department of Economic Development, based on HUD, but drawing into it the programs from other agencies, including the Commerce Department's economic development agency.

A second option would be to expand the Commerce Department by consolidating all the economic development programs within it. A much "less disruptive option," in political terms, as one official termed it, would be to create the urban bank as a separate agency and to consolidate all specific economic development loan programs under its aegis.

Finally, the low option would be to leave urban aid programs scattered, and to make a slight consolidation of rural economic programs under the Department of Agriculture.

Reorganization officials believe that all four options will probably be put before Carter to let him decide whether he wants to try for a major reorganization or a minor reshuffle, before the plans are further refined.

Similarly, a range of reorganization options are being prepared in the field of natural resources. The high option, officials say, would be to expand the present Interior Department massively by having it absorb the Forestry Service from the Agriculture Department; the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration from Commerce, the planning function from the Corps of Engineers, certain responsibilities of the Department of Transportation in the managing of deep sea ports, as well as the functions of the Independent Water Resources Council.

There are a number of more modest options in the natural resources field that would seek to combine all water resource planning in one agency and all land management in another to reduce current duplication. Another scheme, for example, would have the Bureau of Land Management, now in Interior, take over all planning for water resource projects, including those by the Army's Corps of Engineers, but give up its construction capability to the Corps.

Carter will opt for a new Department of Natural Resources and a Department of Economic Development, officials say this would probably mean the end of the present Department of Commerce. It would mean the split among other agencies, while the Census Bureau, one of its major components, becomes a separate statistical agency.

One attraction of dismantling Commerce rather than other agencies, some administrations feel, is that the Commerce Department is generally believed to have less ardent support on Capitol Hill and among the public than other departments. Moreover, some officials argue, its demise would allow Carter to proclaim to the public that he had eliminated one Cabinet department, in keeping with his campaign promise to cut down the number of federal agencies.

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court Tuesday upheld an Alabama law authorizing cities to extend police, sanitary and some licensing powers to people living within three miles of the city line.

And the high court ruled 5-4 that federal voting law forbids county school boards to require employees to take unpaid leaves of absence when running for public office.

In the first ruling, citizens of Holt, Ala., an unincorporated community outside Tuscaloosa, challenged state law empowering cities of 8,000 or more to extend services three miles outside corporate borders even though residents of fringe areas cannot vote in municipal elections.

Justice William Rehnquist, writing for a six-man majority on the high court, said Alabama's so-called "police jurisdiction" laws are a rational legislative response to the problems faced by the state's burgeoning cities.

He noted six states authorize municipalities to exercise governmental powers beyond their corporate limits. And several of those, like South Dakota and North Dakota, grant cities more extensive powers over fringe areas than those granted under Alabama statutes.

The justice said the court has "uniformly recognized that a government unit may legitimately restrict the right to participate in its political processes to those who reside within its borders."

Justice William Brennan, in a dissent joined by Justices Byron White and Thurgood Marshall, said he would hold the challenged statute unconstitutional because they withheld the franchise from some persons governed by the city and give it to others.

In their second ruling, the justices affirmed a lower-court decision barring the Dougherty County, Ga., school board from enforcing its leave-of-absence rule on grounds it is potentially discriminatory.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, writing for the high court majority today, rejected the school board's argument that the rule was simply "a means of getting a full day's work for a full day's pay — nothing more, nothing less."

Marshall noted the rule "specifically addresses the electoral process, singling out candidacy for elective office as a disabling activity."

The circumstances surrounding the rule's adoption "are sufficiently suggestive of the potential for discrimination as to demonstrate the need for preclearance."

Justices Potter Stewart, Lewis Powell, Rehnquist and Chief Justice Burger dissented from the majority opinion on this point, saying the school board's rule did not deny anyone the right to vote.

Powell, Burger and Rehnquist also disagreed with the majority holding that school boards may fall under the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Soviets ease up on accused American

MOSCOW (UPI) — American businessman Leo Sonner faced a much milder round of interrogation last week when Soviet authorities called him in for further questioning about his traffic accident, sources close to the case reported Tuesday.

Sonner, 32, Dow Chemical's Moscow office manager, has been forbidden to leave the Soviet Union pending completion of the investigation against him.

Sonner was at the wheel of a company auto in late October when a Soviet pedestrian either walked into the side of the car or was hit in downtown Moscow.

Informed sources said Sonner was called in for a second round of questioning which lasted about one hour.

The sources said Sonner was informed that the Soviet victim's condition had improved significantly.

They said the Soviets made no further mention of possible reckless driving charges being brought in the matter, a threat they voiced in the first round of interrogation.

The sources said the mood was much better and there was at least a possibility that the case may be quietly resolved without severe penalties to Sonner in the near future.

If the reckless driving charges were pressed Sonner could face between 3 and 10 years in prison.

Neither Sonner nor his employers nor the U.S. Embassy will comment on the proceedings.

Justice said the court has "uniformly recognized that a government unit may legitimately restrict the right to participate in its political processes to those who reside within its borders."

Justice William Brennan, in a dissent joined by Justices Byron White and Thurgood Marshall, said he would hold the challenged statute unconstitutional because they withheld the franchise from some persons governed by the city and give it to others.

Carter plans to aid dollar by borrowing

PARIS — The United States Treasury will borrow $1.5 billion in French francs, worth $1.2 billion to $1.5 billion, to the World German capital market next month as part of President Carter's latest plan to defend the dollar as other major monetary moves decrease Monday night.

The borrowing of foreign currency from governmental sources is reported to be the first the Treasury has ever made. It is the opening requirement of an $8 billion program to raise German marks from France and Japan over the next two years. The Treasury will use the dollars to help reverse the dollar's present decline.

As part of this plan, announced in New York last week, the Treasury will increase interest rates and continue the dollar's decline in order to make the dollar more attractive to foreign investors. Through currency fluctuations and interest rates, the Treasury has reversed the dollar's value since a preliminary meeting with Japan in a week and a half of talks in August. The European countries have already reached $1 billion to $1.5 billion. Monday the dollar had regained major currency status as a result of other inflation related moves.

Book urges new boom in self-help parenting

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International

Parenthood's joyous moments come in multiples: holding your infant the first time being the earliest joy of great moment. Nothing short of glorious!

Then there's the number one, too, the tottering beginner steps, and—the first gurgle sounding like "Ma Ma" or "Da Da."

All the birds of whatever feather, twittering in spring's fullest symphony, strictly speaking, are nothing by comparison!

Parenthood's joyless—moments come in multiples, too: the very first being the hungry cry of that little thing in the middle of the night, wrenching you from sleep for minutes.

Then there's the first scrape, the first blood spouting from a cut lip or some other bloody injury. The first tears rolling down the tender cheeks from an insult hurts you as much as the lot.

Between the joyful and joyless moments are all the others running the gamut of human emotion. These give Dads and Moms a chance to practice every virtue in the good book while fending off the vices—climbing the peaks, tumbling into the valleys of the human spirit.

It's complicated—raising children.

But Mom and Dad, together or singly as the fashion sometime these days, do best by having confidence in themselves.

"Trust yourself!" is the number one rule in child-raising. Dr. Benjamin Spock, of "baby Book" fame has said for decades.

Now along come the women from the Boston Women's Health Collective, the ones who gave American females "Our Bodies, Ourselves," saying about the same thing.

"Parents know best," they say in their new book—"Ourselves and Our Children" (Random House). The book was put together by the collective with help from many Moms and Dads.

"Who could know better about the stages and phases of child-raising than the parents themselves?"—two members of the collective said in an interview.

The Boston Women's Health Collective, according to Ms. Joan Stangorid Ditson and Ms. Nancy Press Hawley, hope to do for parenting what "Our Bodies, Ourselves" did for the women's health cause, starting the booming self-help movement.

The collective wants the new boom to be one in self-help parenting.

The hope is that parents will get together in neighborhoods and talk out their successes and failures, complaints and guilts.

That is the way, according to the collective, to make parenting a much more viable, human thing—having it away from the parenting stereotypes in storybooks, television commercials and other advertisements.

There's no reason to feel guilty, for example; if you tell your 4-year-old at five o'clock Sunday morning: "Take those plates back to your room and play there; I'm still asleep."

The stereotyped "good" parents never would do a thing like that. If you are to be a good parent, the stereotype holds, you sacrifice yourself. You lose sleep, you give up any time for yourself if child needs you.

But the truth, from real life, is that no Mom or Dad is expected to kill himself or herself. That's according to the parents who contributed to the book.

Wendy Coppedge Sanford puts parenting in focus in the introduction: "This book is an invitation to you as a parent, an about-to-be-parent, or as someone who is wondering whether to have or adopt children.

"Our invitation is one that parents don't often hear. Consider yourself. Who and where are you in this lifelong process of being someone's child and perhaps, someone's parent?"

"How does being a parent intertwave with your overall life, your work, your relationships, your social and political concerns, your own childhood, your sense of yourself?"

"How does the society around you shape your experience for better or worse? What do you need?"

Police chiefs ask curb on holiday office parties

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — New Hampshire police chiefs have urged companies to cancel their office parties to cut holiday drinking and hold down the highway safety toll.

More people have died on Granite State highways so far this year than in all of 1977.

"It looks like we may have one later become involved in accidents."

The chiefs warned that companies serving liquor at office parties could face civil suits if drunken partygoers later become involved in accidents.

Santa Claus Ed Gotwalt has better luck with a sleigh than with hot air balloons

Santa's grand entrance hits a snag—50 feet above ground

BY CLERVILLE, Pa. (UPI) — Ed Gotwalt, true showman that he is, wanted to make a lot of children happy this year by arriving as Santa Claus in an unconventional way—in a hot air balloon.

Instead, he ended up stuck in a tree about 50 feet above the ground in full costume and beard.

Gotwalt was stranded for more than two hours Sunday on top of the trees after the balloon got snagged on branches and deflated.

Gotwalt, 42, had hired balloonist

Jeff Dull, 23, of Gettysburg, and took off on his appointed round shortly before noon from rural Walnut Bottom, about 18 miles west of Carlisle.

"We were flying over the mountain range toward my store and hit a downdraft (that) sucked the balloon down, actually, and we crashed into the trees," Gotwalt said.

A plane passing overhead saw the deflated balloon and notified authorities.

Using a complicated system of ropes, ladders and pulleys, a state police rescue crew secured Gotwalt and Dull and lowered them to the ground.

"I ho, ho, hoed all the way down. I really did," Gotwalt said.

Theater world features special interest music

BY GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — For those who remember Clint Eastwood's spaghetti western, this is the story of the first musical.

It is a Roman Catholic priest, a comment and jokey character is "The Voice of God." The time is today, but the plot concerns building a park to save villagers in an Italian hill town from a repeat version of the Flood.

"Beyond the Rainbow" has a backstage story almost as strange as the plot on stage.

The Englishmen writing under a pseudonym, it seems, once produced a musical called "After Me the Deluge."

The Italians turned it into a musical called "Aggiungi Un Posto a Tavola" (Add a work-beating title even if you speak Italian) and staged it in Rome.

Its star was Italian-American Johnny Dorelli, best known for his recording of "Volare" some years back. Dorelli's wife is the Belgian actress Catherine Spaak.

Nothing happens that Miss Spaak was in the Canary Islands making a movie for an American film mogul when her husband's "Set Another Place At the Table" opened. She persuaded the mogul to see it while in Rome.

He came, he saw, he bought the English rights.

The original book's authors, David Ellades and Robert Forrest Webb, were hired to adapt the script back into English. Leslie Bricusse wrote English lyrics.

But Johnny Dorelli stayed the star. Pietro Garinei remained the director and a gang of other Italians moved in at vast expense to get the costly show on the road as the first Italian musical ever imported to London's West End.

For its first half, "Beyond the Rainbow" is pleasant if old-fashioned stuff. It offers the best singing chorus in London and one rousing contrapuntal number unfortunately entitled "The Ding Dong Song."

But the second half, in which the priest and the Voice of God decide temporarily that priestly celibacy is an ungodly human invention, skirts so close to sacrilege that it must have given the Vatican uncomfortable moments during its three-year home run.

If you're Jewish instead of Catholic, London also has an equally strange musical just for you.

Citizens group can erect Christmas nativity scene

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A citizens group in suburban North College Hill will be able to put up their nativity scene this holiday season without any problems.

The group plans last year to put the nativity scene in front of the city hall but through stern Mayor Joseph Binkley although he agreed a nativity scene should be erected, refused to allow it, saying the First Amendment separates church and state.

The citizens resumed their search for a location in April, and decided to put it on the property of the Cloverbrook Home and School for the Blind.

"I believe it's a wonderful place for it," said Binkley who added he favors the project.

The group has raised most of the projected $2,000 to finance the project.

The nativity scene is to be in place and dedicated Dec. 3.

Women surveyed on credit

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
United Press International
"How do you feel about credit interest rates in general?"
The question was put hundreds of women — married, single, divorced, widowed, separated, and those "living together but not married."
In each category, more than half participating in a survey on women and credit, considered interest rates "unreasonable or very unreasonable."

Nearly 90 percent of the living-together but-not-married thought so. The same for 85 percent of the married, 75 percent of the separated, 62 percent of the divorced, and 51 percent of the single.
The survey on how women use credit and what they think about it aimed to find how goes it on the credit front with women since the U.S. Equal Credit Opportunities Act was put on the books in 1975.
The firm conducting the survey, Commercial Credit Corporation, has distributed nearly half a million copies of its free "Women: To Your Credit" a credit education booklet put out when equal credit rights became law.
Credit authorities at the Maryland Commission for Women helped produce the brochure.

Brenda K. Shelley, manager of the Corporate Social Responsibility and Concerns department, in a "Dear Consumer" letter to women asked to participate in the survey, wrote:
"Our hope is that...this survey will help define what action still needs to be taken to ensure that women have access to credit and fully understand how to use it correctly."
Trends emerging in the survey include:

"No matter what their level of education, credit education seems to have made an impact on women. They are much more financially independent today to the extent that even those 40 and more are likely to have applied for credit in their own names."
"The climate between female applicants and those granting credit seems improved since it's a law women are given equal opportunities. But enough egalitarianism was reported to indicate that many feel "the law has not been the final solution." Overt and subtle discriminations exist.
"Married women still lag far behind the single in asserting their credit individuality."
"In one out of three households financial decisions all or most of the financial decisions, compared to only 10 percent having husbands filling that role. In remaining households, joint decisions are the rule."
"Nearly all the women continue to experience large or small problems in establishing credit. These days, backed up by the law, they are exploring avenues of recourse more often than in the past. Some deal directly with the creditor, asking for a written response to the question, "Why was I turned down?" Some 2.3 percent complain to a State Commissioner of Consumer Credit.
"One out of two respondents showed up dumb about interest rate computation. Such women may be asking for trouble in applying for credit. If they don't understand how much it costs, they are handicapped."

Utah has simple plan for welfare

By DONALD H. MAY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Of all the welfare revision plans piled high on committee desks in Congress one of the simplest comes from Utah.
Since 1976, Utah has required welfare recipients who are able to work to do so, or they get no welfare check.
"The work ethic in Utah is probably as high as anywhere in the nation," said Norman Angus, deputy director of public entitlements for the state, explaining the program. Thursday, he said Daniel Morgan, Utah's attorney general, said he will support the program at a hearing held by a welfare subcommittee.
Angus said employable welfare recipients in Utah primarily adult men and women with children of school age, are required to accept employment, job training or to take part in a community work project as a condition of receiving welfare.
The work projects are conducted by 300 sponsors, state and local agencies and non-profit organizations ranging from school systems to the National Army Welfare Administration who have succeeded in finding a regular job or work 16 hours at three times the rate for public assistance.
In a recent six-month period, Angus said, 1,300 people were assigned to work projects.
During the same period, 333 people left the program, including 222 who failed to work the required hours.
Without extending commensurate, Angus said a person who does not complete the required work ends up with his welfare rate "drastically" lowered.

That new Superman is serious

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Christopher Reeve, the new Superman, is a cocksure 35-year-old who does few interviews to avoid overexposure before the "Man of Steel" superhero movie is released next month.
Reeve is tall, handsome, articulate. His father is a professor and novelist, his mother a newspaper reporter. He attended Princeton Day School, was graduated with honors from Cornell and did graduate work at Julliard.
He's been an actor since he was 15 and has worked on Broadway — with Katharine Hepburn in "A Matter of Gravity" — and in the TV soap opera "Love of Life." He staged acting in London and Paris.
Reeve is a deeply serious actor who blanches at the thought of playing Superman when first approached for the role. A young man with a background in Shakespeare didn't want to play a cartoon character.
But the smooth, fast-talking Reeve discovered that producer Ilya Salkind and director Richard Donner weren't tossing $40 million into a spoof.
"They were looking for a newswoman role," said Reeve. "Nobody would believe Robert Redford flying around in a red cape."
"But a lot of big stars clamored for the role for a lot of reasons. I didn't want people to think I was a guy they found on Muscle Beach with a sword in his hand."
Mario Puzos' brilliant script intrigued me. Then I met Donner. After the last I was convinced they were in the process of making a major film for adults with actors like Marlon Brando, Gene Hackman and Trevor Howard in the cast."
Reeve agreed to tackle "Superman" and thereby signed away a full year and a half of his life to star in the title role.
He was convinced immediately by the almost insupportable fact that he was built more like Don Knotts than Superman. His facial features were fine for the role, his blond hair could be dyed black. But what to do about his physique?
"I lost 40 pounds and I weighed 140 pounds," he said. "I reported to London for the picture eight weeks early and found they had constructed a Superman costume complete with muscles. I immediately refused to play the role that way."
Instead I got an instructor, Dave Prowse, who played Darth Vader in "Star Wars," and had me on a physical regimen for myself. I spent two hours a day seven days a week working out with heavy weights in a gym.
I studied the Jimmy Stewart standing sideways in the last scene of the film. I was pumped up by my trainer. By the time the picture started I weighed 225 pounds. All muscles. I did every single stunt in the picture."
The physical requirements of the film were secondary to the creative. Reeve determined to play Superman as an intriguing but a certain character he "truly found a unique handle for the rest of the film."
In playing "Gang" as seriously as he can, he never had, he said, "a handle" in expanding the difference between "Gang" and "The Last Star" is a deliberate diagram and worked in the audience's imagination between the two.
"The whole premise is to take the Superman character and make it better than I have ever seen before. The character was to be a hero, but more in the adult, but not in an over-the-top way."
"There's nothing simple about it. It's a serious role. The picture has been a real high point in my career. I would have gone into the ground like a mad dog. I would have done it all. I would have done it all."
Reeve is a man who, like many serious actors, does not like to talk about his work. He is a man who does not like to talk about his work. He is a man who does not like to talk about his work. He is a man who does not like to talk about his work.

Cage tourney questions

TWIN FALLS— In the aftermath of last weekend's K and T Steel junior college tournament, there remain questions on the mind of Coach Mike Mitchell and others concerning the worth of it all.

It costs a few bucks to bring in teams like the tournament boasted this year. Despite the reaction of fans, they are pretty fair junior college teams. Definitely among the better ones in the country.

That doesn't mean they are all national championship contenders but we were willing to bet that they will be among the top contenders for their regions and perhaps national tournament berths when the dust settles next spring.

The lack of attendance may be attributable to two things.

One, there is a mistaken impression among area fans that CSI is unchangeable, both on the court and in recruiting. Second, that junior college basketball is not what it was six, seven and eight years ago under the old 14 NCAA rule.

Third, also should be thrown in here. CSI has had excellent coaching throughout its history. This is shown by the Eagles' continual ability to win close games. Only well-coached teams with an established winning program win 90 percent of the close ones as CSI does.

CSI Coach Mike Mitchell found a little humor but an object lesson in something that occurred in the tournament this weekend. He remembers that a year ago, in the K and T Steel inaugural, that a fan, during CSI's opening loss to Wenatchee, erupted from his seat behind the bench and in an obvious "aside" that would be heard, noted "this is the worst CSI team I've ever seen." He whipped on his coat and fled out the door.

The other night, when CSI was opening with a strong victory over New Mexico, a fan erupted from his chair, struggled into his coat and with another loud aside, said "I'm sick and tired of watching CSI blow everyone away by 30 points."

"I'm not real sure, but I think it was the same guy," Coach Mitchell said.

"I really felt that New Mexico was an excellent team. Of course, I've been associated with them before. They are always representative. They are always a threat," the coach says. "They play on emotion and I felt we took that away from them. I was really pleased with the way our team played in that game. I think it was our best overall effort of the season. I was amazed that we could beat them that easily even on our home floor."

So the reasoning is obvious. If a fan can discern the true ability of a team, then he should realize that a 30-point spread indicates a standard of excellence for the other team.

"I don't think there's any doubt that Colby came over strictly with the idea of beating us," Coach Mitchell said. "A victory over us would give them momentum to win the next game. But you saw what happened. When they played a good game and shot the ball well and still lost, they had nothing left to throw at New Mexico the last night."

"I don't mind that," the coach said of the pressure of being the "big fish."

"I would rather have everyone gunning for us than figuring they can amble in, put up a little fight and leave with a vic'ory," he smiles. "This is the kind of situation we have to impress on our players. No matter how bad a team appears to be, it probably will play its best game against us or at least show their best intensity. This year's team understands that better because we are all sophomores basically. Last year we lost some games but because the other teams were superior but because as freshmen our players didn't realize that whether we were good or bad we were still CSI and the teams around here were going to get sky high for us."

But that also points up one of the problems that CSI fans perhaps have trouble grasping. They know that everyone would like to knockoff CSI and can appreciate that point very much. What they perhaps don't understand is that CSI is just one of very many junior colleges in the nation who enjoy that situation. The truth is, on a regional level, there are very few years when CSI simply isn't the strongest team. Simply on schedule CSI should never be in jeopardy of losing more than a couple three, maybe four, in a year.

We know who the competition is. Twin Falls, Richland, one in a while another team. These teams was and was not in strength. North Idaho is strong one year, Richland, another. But in truth, can you think back to a year when all the regional teams have been strong? Where the chance of losing at home to them was as real as losing to them on the road?

"In fact," CSI says the Eagle are no worse than second tier teams. CSI must prepare for its schedule much differently than they do.

As a coach you understand that your kids are going to play three great games and three terrible games a year. The real fall in between. You study your schedule, get the best line on the current condition of the teams involved and then "point."

"You can figure that half the teams you'd be beating by showing up. The other half will be different. Because they do have some talent and potential. You have to consider that one of these might have their "upper" right against you. You have to weigh home and away. You also have to weigh playing on the road two or three times in three or four days with the potentially most difficult team at the end when you must mentally and physically through competition and road wear — be at your lowest ebb."

There also is the matter of being the "big fish" and what that means to you. There are as a coach and a team. You have to find the tempo, the gear of the game from which you can't be able much. It is like being in a boat. You need to say "you have to go out prepared to play with them the first several minutes because they are going to make their strongest start of the year. If you can do that, really, you'll win it. Simply stated, beat them first and they'll be beat. But teaching a team to have that type of mental capacity every night out and then making when the tough games come on the state is the tough part."

All of these things must be considered when you are setting up a tournament or the home court. The point of the K and T Steel tournament was to add sponsors like Ray Thompson and Richland and that CSI would be the best possible teams available for the fans to enjoy. The same three would like the fans to come to the games. I would guess over the years that the fans have been expected to expect good games and when they go out CSI dominates. You can't really say "there's a whole when you see that. That is a good team, they don't lose to anyone. We think that's their feeling, then it might be best for CSI to bring in three easy games for the tournament. Because playing teams like we have at Hutchinson and in the K and T Steel tournament has just about taken everything out of us. We are very far from state right now. We had an opportunity that we were going to have a long rest through December. I think that's why we've been so good. We played as strong a November schedule as any junior college team in the country. Maybe that's worth it."

Eagles invade Utah Tech

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS— The College of Southern Idaho, boasting a sharp 8-0 record after its strongest opening in history, takes to the road tonight to meet a veteran Utah Tech basketball team at Orem.

"Right now I feel that we are a little flat, a little jaded," Coach Mike Mitchell said of his team after adding the K and T Steel tournament title to the one the Eagles picked up in Hutchinson earlier. "We are at that point that we discussed earlier. We want two peaks out of the season. One that would carry us through those season-opening tournaments, and then after a letdown, another one rebuilding toward the regional games and regional tournament. What we have to guard against now is the letdown coming too quickly after the first peak. We certainly wouldn't want to blow the record after we worked so hard to get it."

"I feel that Utah Tech could be the kind of team that could ambush you in a situation like this. They have four starters back from last year and a fifth man who was named to the all-Pima tournament team over the weekend. They have that great leaper returning. It's the kind of team you have to be cautious of, particularly on the road," the coach said.

Utah Tech has a 2-1 record following the tournament in which it lost only to host Pima. Utah Tech bombed Navaho 90-50 in its opener then fell to Pima 89-73. It came back to edge Eastern Arizona 92-88.

The returning guards are both 6-1, Gary Gardner and Mark Midgey. The center is 6-8 Robert Walker and David Griffith, a 6-7 forward is the leaper. The newcomer is Ron Tate, 6-4 forward, who is a return missionary.

The Eagles came out of the K and T Steel tournament in good shape and forward Jerry Williams said Tuesday he had had no problems with his back.

However, the coach went to work on the Eagles' mental attitude in practice Monday night and it was a hard one filled with considerable criticism.

"Our players appeared to be very contented with themselves," Coach Mitchell said. "I was just trying to get their feet back on the floor and their heads ready to play basketball."

Looking at the tournament, the coach said "I felt we played very well in the first game (against New Mexico Junior College) and not as well in the last two. I don't think that people realized what we tried to tell them about New Mexico. If they get it going, they can be a very tough team to beat. That's why I was so pleased with the way we went to beat Utah Tech in the first few minutes of that game. We never let them get to their emotional pitch. I felt we played so well in that first game that we defeated them for the tournament—at least to the point they never had it going against any of the teams the way I've seen New Mexico play."

The coach also was pleased with the play of sophomore point guard Richard Prospero.

"I felt that Richard gave us everything he could. His also limits him somewhat but he's the kind of guy who could run 87 miles and never get tired. He was always there for us."

Wood River's Shauna Gillis (24) outreaches Buhl's Sidney Howard (22)

Indians edge Wood River

BUHL— The key to victory for the Indians' varsity girls' basketball team is very simple. It can be summed up in a wing and a prayer.

Wing it on offense and defense for much of the game, then let Lori Hulse do her thing at the end.

The Buhl junior forward threw up a prayer with ten seconds left and when it was answered, the Indians had escaped with their third straight triumph, a 20-13 cliff-ranger over Wood River.

The game was closer than the score would indicate, although for major portions of the contest. It almost seemed no one wanted to score, much less win. The contest was tied on 13 occasions and started both nine additional times.

Indians head mentor Tim O'Brien put the game in proper perspective. "We were very fortunate to win. We did very little right except have more points at the end. However, we got good shots, breaks and made the shot that counted."

"That was definitely the winner game we have played. The many turnovers, three mistakes and needed goals. But I take the win nonetheless.

In fact, the game was almost won and lost at the four line. The Indians were outscored from the first 10:10 but stayed in the contest by concentrating at the four line.

The Wolverines gained a one-point advantage with 27 seconds to go, when Howard and O'Brien were fouled by the alternate forward and the Indians' Shauna Gillis sank one of three free throws to level a 20-20 tie. She had had previous fouls during the last six minutes.

The Wolverines were after it, a few minutes of the game were spent in that area. Howard now has 10 fouls.

Howard's foul seemed to end the game as the point guard retreated to the wing and the offense fell apart. The Indians' Shauna Gillis sank a shot that counted.

The Wolverines' head coach, who was coaching the game, said that the Indians were playing well.

Billy Sims edges Fusina for Heisman

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI)— Billy Sims has a chance to become the second two-time winner of the Heisman Trophy, but is more interested right now in winning an Orange Bowl rematch with Nebraska.

"I love it," the Oklahoma running back said of the New Year's Day rematch. "I wish we'd play tomorrow."

A 17-14 loss to Nebraska, only blemish on a 10-1 record, bumped the Sooners from the No. 1 ranking and apparently cost them a national championship, which Sims described as his top goal for the season.

Sims was awarded the Heisman Trophy Tuesday in nationwide voting conducted by the Downtown Athletic Club of New York, becoming only the sixth junior to win college football's most coveted prize. Archie Griffin of Ohio State, chosen in 1974 and 1975, is the only two-time winner.

Sims was the third Oklahoma athlete to win the Heisman, awarded annually to the football player voted the nation's best. Billy Vessels won in 1952 and Steve Owens in 1969.

Sims, appearing at a televised news conference minutes after his selection was announced, said roommate Greg Roberts and "the Man upstairs" deserved a large share of the credit.

In response to a question, Sims said Roberts, who won the 1978 Outland Award as the nation's top interior lineman, should share in the trophy.

"He can have it all if he wants it," Sims quipped. "I give a lot of credit to our offensive line."

Sims, asked if there was anyone he wanted to thank, replied, "The Man upstairs. He knows best."

However, Sims said he didn't "say his prayers" the night before the voting ended.

"Me and the Man upstairs, we've got a good understanding," he said.

Sims said he lost no sleep thinking about the balloting.

"I slept like a baby," he said.

"I never thought I was going to win," Sims said. "I thought it was pretty close, but I thought Rick Leach would win."

Leach, the Michigan quarterback, finished third, behind Sims and Iowa State quarterback Chuck Fubina. Southern California running back Charles White, also a junior, was fourth.

Sims said he had hoped to win the Heisman, and a national championship that apparently eluded the Sooners was his major goal for the season, but obtaining a degree was most important.

He said his first thought after learning he was the winner was "I'm home."

Sims said he doesn't expect to change because of winning the Heisman.

But if how Huskins would be the same, he said, referring to his former high school in Texas near the Oklahoma border.

Sims said the fans at the game in Norman, Okla., were the best he has ever seen. He said that he would like to see a new tennis club in Twin Falls.

Gooding tops Tigers in last period

GOODING — Laura Hobbey hit six of her nine points in the fourth quarter to help the Gooding Senators edge the Jerome Tigers 45-33 Tuesday night.

Gooding outscored the Tigers 18-6 in the final period, after the two had traded to a 27-27 deadlock in a battle of zone trap defenses.

Gooding used the trap first, getting several turnovers and six points from Joyce Giese to move into a 12-2 advantage. But Jerome came back with the same ploy and in the middle quarters inched back with Ostrler getting most of her points during that span.

Once the fourth quarter started, Gooding started hitting well and quickly pulled out the victory.

Gooding jayvees won the preliminary 34-28. The Senators will host Buhl at 6:15 p.m. Thursday, a change from the original schedule which had Buhl at Gooding Saturday night.

KIMBERLY — The Filer Wildcats clamped a press on Kimberly in the first quarter to build up a big lead and went on to collect a 64-31 girls basketball decision Tuesday night.

Filer forced a number of turnovers for close-in buckets and Debbie Allen cranked up her jump shot to quickly shoot the Wildcats into a 26-6 first-quarter advantage. Kimberly managed to steady after that but Filer inched away throughout the rest of the game as Allen and Lauri Johnson gave Filer control of the boards.

Kimberly, which travels to Wendell Thursday evening, salvaged some of the program by winning the preliminary 26-16.

Woody Hayes doesn't plan to quit coaching

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Acknowledging there are times when thoughts of resigning enter his mind, Ohio State football coach Woody Hayes declared late Tuesday he has no intention of quitting his job.

"There are times after 28 years when I've gotten ready to say, 'The hell with it,' but only for about 10 seconds," Hayes told a Cleveland-area gathering of Ohio State alumni.

"If (quitting) would make too many people happy," he quipped.

The long-time head coach of the Buckeyes commented briefly on his team's loss last Saturday to arch-rival Michigan.

"We didn't get started well at all and we got beat, that's all there is to it," he said.

He added, "I don't want to hear much talk about 'Why didn't we pass more.' We haven't protected (the quarterback) well and we haven't passed well. When we start passing well we'll pass more. You have to make that ground attack go."

Hayes majored used the occasion to be philosophical on the state of the world.

"People are on strike, people are committing suicide or shooting a mayor. Everybody's going in their own way — except in football," he said.

"My job is to bring people together."

Texas strong favorite in Southwest league

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a series of college basketball previews, previewing the season by geographical sections. Today: The Southwest.

DALLAS (UPI) — The Southwest Conference will be hard pressed to provide an outlet to last season's history making basketball campaign.

The conference is coming off its most successful year in history — Arkansas winning third place in the NCAA tournament, Texas capturing the NIT championship and Houston winning a berth in the NCAA event as well.

It would not appear that this year's race could provide as much glory because both Arkansas and Houston lost some of their strength. But, four starters are back for the Longhorns and they are the overwhelming choice to grab this year's title.

Whatever happens, it will be noticed more by parts of the country which overlooked SWC basketball in the past.

"In two or three years we will be as good a basketball league as there is in the country," said Rice Coach Mike Schuler, one of the influx of young enthusiasts who helped generate the boost in basketball interest.

"Texas' win over North Carolina State in the NIT finals was great for the league. We were the talk of the NCAA tournament. Basketball in this conference is going to be better and better."

"Russ Potts (the athletic director at SMU who came from the basketball minded Atlantic Coast Conference) thinks basketball is ready to explode here. And when it does the Rice Owls are going to be part of it."

Signs of that explosion are already here. Texas has sold almost every one of its 16,231 seats on a season basis. Arkansas is completing the final stages of its renovation of Barnhill Fieldhouse.

Baylor has boosted its season ticket sales by 1,500. Last season a standing room only crowd of 7,000 jammed into Aulry Court at Rice where crowds of 200 had been commonplace in recent years.

Last March the SWC post-season tournament sold out all three nights at The Summit in Houston and conference officials were so encouraged that they have decided to take the tourney on the road, moving it to San Antonio for the 1979-80 season.

This year's race has lots of potential winners, but Texas — with deadeye outside shooter Jim Krivnes back along with Ron Baxter, Tyrone Branyon and John Moore — is the logical pick.

Even though Arkansas lost Ron Brewer and Marvin Delph, the Razorbacks still have super leaper Sidney Moncrief and Texas A&M has potential superstar Rudy Woods playing in the middle. Houston will be shorter and quicker than in recent years, but they will be inexperienced.

AI SMU coach Sonny Allen has his son Billy, thought to be one of the best high school guards in the country last year, playing in the starting unit while Baylor's Vinnie Johnson will be back for another year of amazing ball-handling.

Rice and TCU both had excellent recruiting campaigns and will surely improve on their poor records of 1977-78 while Texas-Tech has gone to a running style of offense.

"There are more question marks in the league than at any time in a long time because of all the newcomers in the conference," said Allen.

The most discussed new player in the league is Woods, a 6-10 center who grew up in Bryan and was wrapped up by coach Shelby Metcalf by the time the youngster was in the eighth grade.

"Rudy is everything you have ever heard about him," said Metcalf. "For a big man the thing that is the most surprising is that he is fast. I'd buy a ticket just to watch him run."

Cincinnati Reds fire Sparky Anderson

JOHN McNAMARA

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Sparky Anderson, who managed the Cincinnati Reds to back-to-back world championships in 1975-76 but did not meet club "standards" when he finished second the past two seasons, was fired Tuesday and replaced by California Angels' Coach John McNamara.

And, in what added up to nearly a complete housecleaning, the Reds ousted four of Anderson's six coaches — firing Alex Grammas and "offering other jobs" to Ted Kluszewski, Larry Shepard and George Scherger.

Russ Nixon and Ron Plaza were the only coaches to be retained. Two new coaches are to be named in the near future.

Anderson, who got his first major league managing job when he came to the Reds in 1970, had huge success seven of his first nine years — winning two world championships, four National League crowns and five NL West Division titles.

But the Reds finished second to the Los Angeles Dodgers in the NL West the last two seasons and Reds' President Dick Wagner, who personally fired Anderson, said that did not meet club standards.

"The past two years have been good ones by the standards of most clubs, but we are determined to set a higher standard," he said. "It is our decision that the move we make fits the overall best interest of making the Cincinnati Reds a better team."

"We feel John McNamara offers outstanding ability and strong major league experience. He is the man to take us in a new direction."

"Sparky Anderson has served us well, (but) let's just say it's time to make a change," added Wagner.

McNamara, 46, who previously managed the San Diego Padres and Oakland Athletics and has been in the majors as either manager or coach the past 11 years, conceded he was "stunned" by the move the Reds made.

Sun Valley ski resort to operate Saturday

SUN VALLEY — Sun Valley will begin its 43rd winter season Saturday when the country's oldest ski resort opens lower Bald Mountain for skiing.

Mountain crews have packed lower Warm Springs run on Bald's north face with two to three feet of man-made snow and skiing on this single run will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday, according to Sun Valley publicity director Shannon Besoyan.

Although only one chair lift and one run are expected to open Saturday, Besoyan announced full ski rates will be in effect. A full-day ticket will cost $15 and a half-day ticket will cost $9.

Besoyan said mountain officials expect mostly local skiers who have bought discount passes will ski during the season's first days and that is why full rates will be charged for the limited skiing.

She said an Idaho pass or a $100 pass, most frequently bought by local skiers, allows a person to ski a full day for $8.50 and a half-day for $6.50. The rest of Bald Mountain's more than $9 runs will open when enough snow falls to allow skiing. So far, the top of the mountain has received only a few inches of the precious white stuff.

DENVER — Brian Winters scored 27 points and Marques Johnson 23 as the Milwaukee Bucks trounced the Denver Nuggets 117-100 Tuesday night. Milwaukee led by as many as 21 points early in the third quarter and the closest Denver came the rest of the way was 99-90 early in the final period. But John Givanni scored the next five points, his only points of the game, and the Bucks moved in front 113-66. George McGinnis led Denver with 26 points and David Thompson had 21.

Cleveland 112-98

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Sparky Anderson, who managed the Cincinnati Reds to back-to-back world championships in 1975-76 but did not meet club "standards" when he finished second the past two seasons, was fired Tuesday and replaced by California Angels' Coach John McNamara.

Jazz 107-103

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Truck Robinson scored 31 points and grabbed 21 rebounds and Pete Maravich added 22 points to spur the New Orleans Jazz to a 107-103 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Tuesday night before a Louisiana Superdome crowd of 25,139 fans.

New Orleans, leading most of the way, had to fight off a fourth quarter Philadelphia rally. Doug Collins paced the 76ers with 25 points.

Philadelphia took an 80-78 13 seconds into the fourth quarter. But the Jazz regained the lead for good, 84-83, with 9:32 left on a jumper by Robinson. The 76ers, running its fast break, jumped to a 16-10 lead. But Maravich sparked a 12-2 surge in the first quarter that put the Jazz ahead 23-16.

In the second quarter, New Orleans was up 49-47, but Maravich sank a basket and two free throws to make it 53-47 before the 76ers closed to two at the half in the third period. Philadelphia's Maurice Cheeks tied it 68-68 with 4:41 left in the quarter.

Bullets 133-106

NEW YORK (UPI) — Elvin Hayes scored 25 points and Bill Dreyer added a 20-point effort to lead the Washington Bullets to a 133-106 victory over the New York Knicks Tuesday night at the Madison Square Garden.

Hayes and Dreyer led the Bullets through the first quarter, Washington was up 23-18. In the second quarter, Washington led 49-38. Hayes scored 11 points and Dreyer added 10 points during the game. The Knicks trailed 106-82 at the end of the third quarter. Hayes scored 15 points and Dreyer added 10 points during the fourth quarter. Washington led 133-106 at the end of the game.

Bulls 124-112

CHICAGO (UPI) — Artis Gilmore scored 27 points and Marvin Johnson and Reggie Miller added 22 each Tuesday night to give the Chicago Bulls a 124-112 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Tuesday night at the Spectrum.

The Bulls, who had an early lead of 23-16, extended it to 49-23 by the end of the first quarter. Philadelphia's Maurice Cheeks tied it 68-68 with 4:41 left in the quarter. The Bulls regained the lead for good, 84-83, with 9:32 left on a jumper by Robinson. The 76ers, running its fast break, jumped to a 16-10 lead. But Maravich sparked a 12-2 surge in the first quarter that put the Jazz ahead 23-16.

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — The Idaho State women's basketball team will open its season this weekend with games in Pocatello against two of the most formidable teams on its schedule — Boise State and Utah State. ISU will play Boise State Friday at 7 p.m. and Utah State Saturday at 7 p.m. Both games will be played in Reed Gym.

Sox fans irate

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston Red Sox fans have reacted sharply to the defection of pitcher Luis Tiant to the New York Yankees but none more so than novelist John Cheever.

"I can't believe that Tiant should go to New York," Cheever said Tuesday. "It's terrifying. Of course, he isn't going to be any good. God in His Heaven will see to it that he walka everybody in his first three games, and he'll be discarded."

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — North Carolina Central College Coach Leroy Walker, head coach of the 1976 U.S. Olympic team, Tuesday was approved as national coach coordinator for track and field by the Amateur Athletic Union national convention.

An AAU spokesman also said Indiana University would host next year's AAU junior track championships and that Mike Tully's questionable world pole vault mark would be sent to the sport's governing body.

GLENDALE HEIGHTS, Ill. (UPI) — Roy Buckley of Columbus, Ohio, trying to capture his first championship of the year, held on to first place Tuesday in qualifying play of the $125,000 Brinswick World Open bowling tournament.

Buckley went into the event's second eight-game round with a 42-pin lead.

Ever No. 1

NEW YORK (UPI) — U.S. Open champion Chris Evert edged Wimbledon winner Martina Navratilova for the No. 1 ranking in the annual World Tennis magazine women's ratings released Tuesday by the

Rushing leader

MISSION, Kan. (UPI) — Helman Trophy winner Billy Sims of Oklahoma appears the NCAA king in both rushing and scoring with just a handful of Division I games remaining this season.

Sims closed out his 11-game season two weeks ago with an average of 160.2 yards and 10.9 points per game. He rushed for a Big Eight single season record 1,762 yards, averaging 7.6 yards per carry, and scored 20 touchdowns — three more than anyone else in the country.

Skiling upset

STELVIO PASS, Italy (UPI) — Italy's 19-year-old Maria Rosa Quario scored an upset win Tuesday in the season's first World Series women's alom as Italians swept four of the top five placings in the event.

Quario, who won the first run in 45.52 seconds, clocked 45.37 in the second for an overall 91.90.

Australia captures tennis win

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Wendy Turnbull, the host country's No. 1 player, routed Monique Van Haver, 6-1, as Australia shut out Belgium in opening round play of the $130,000 Federation Cup Tuesday, then was dropped for the next match.

Australian Captain Neale Fraser shocked Australian fans when he dumped Turnbull from Wednesday's second round clash with Japan, replacing her with Kerry Reid.

Smarting under reports that the United States team, which trounced South Korea Monday, already has worked out the $40,000 check for the winning team, the Aussie captain appeared to be playing a cat and mouse game as to who will play in Sunday's final — if they get that far.

Fraser has the reigning Wimbledon doubles champions, Reid and Turnbull, along with left-hander Dianne Fromholtz in superb form.

"I like to keep the opposition guessing," Fraser told newsmen.

"I think I know who the United States will send in but they don't have the slightest idea of what the Aussie team will be."

Great Britain's chances received a major setback when torn muscles forced tenacious Sue Barker out of Wednesday's second round match against West Germany. Team Captain Virginia Wade said it would be impossible to include Barker in the match, and Michelle Tyler will make her Federation Cup singles debut as her replacement.

Wade asked tournament referee Jim Entinck if it was possible to postpone the match but Entinck said it could not be done.

Barker stripped a groin muscle and ruptured a lower back muscle Monday in her match against Spain's Monica Alvarez Mon.

The third-seeded British team might have trouble with the West Germans, who drubbed Spain 3-0 in Tuesday's first round.

The rest of the action was postponed by rain.

Rose finding other teams' offers more in his salary range

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds may be unwilling to budge from their final contract offer, but Pete Rose is finding other baseball clubs a little more interested in his services next year.

The 37-year-old Rose Tuesday planned meetings with Kansas City Royals owner Ewing Kauffman and St. Louis Cardinals board Chairman August Busch Jr. to hear their sales pitches.

Before the scheduled meetings, however, Rose made it clear he was awed by a "tremendous" offer from Ted Turner, the owner of the Atlanta Braves, during a four-hour meeting Monday.

"His offer was tremendous, something you have to think about," said Rose. "After that offer, it's mostly down hill from there. He offered a three-, four-, or five-year contract, or anything I wanted."

Rose didn't disclose the terms of Turner's offer, although a Cincinnati television station reported the offer at $3 million over three years. That would be substantially higher than the Reds' final offer, believed to be $400,000 for each of two years.

"It's amazing how some people think so much of you when a place, Cincinnati, where you busted your tail for 18 years, doesn't," said Rose.

"After hearing Turner's offer, I have to think about playing for the Braves," said Rose. "They have a young team with a lot of talent coming up from the minors. Three of their clubs won minor-league pennants. They are only one or two players away from being very competitive."

Although excited by Turner's offer, Rose said he still had an open mind during negotiations with other clubs.

"I'm not going to take Turner's offer to (other teams) and say, 'match this.' That's not the way when negotiating. I may settle with a figure less than the best offer if I think I can help a team and it can help me."

"I'll tell you one thing: Turner's offer would top that of most clubs now. It's just a question of where I want to play."

The Philadelphia Phillies also are considered a strong contender for Rose's services. The Phillies reportedly offered Rose a three-year pact at $600,000 a year.

By a nearly 3:1 ratio, fans responding to a newspaper poll said the Reds should satisfy Pete Rose's contract demands to keep him playing baseball in Cincinnati.

And nearly half of the 840 people who took time to fill out and return a newspaper questionnaire said they won't be leaving up at Riverfront Stadium unless the 37-year-old Rose is in a Cincinnati uniform next year.

Said one fan: "I have held to my reservations for opening day tickets, but have advised the club that my reserving my season tickets is strictly contingent on Pete's assignment to the club."

Results of the Cincinnati Post poll, published Tuesday, showed 66 percent of the respondents support Rose, who has turned down an offer from the Reds believed to be around $400,000 a year for two years. Another 33 percent backed the Reds, but the new attitude even if it means losing Rose.

Sugar Ray Leonard signs to fight Gant on Jan. 11

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Former Olympic boxing champion Sugar Ray Leonard and world champion Paulie Hightower have signed contracts Tuesday for a 12-round fight Jan. 11 at the Civic Center for the Mid-American area.

Pro football races going down to the wire

NEW YORK — Few of those present at last year's NFL owners' meeting at Palm Springs took notice of the various changes the owners had voted into the most exciting and complicated playoff formula in sports. Now everyone is taking notice.

The change is taking place in the area of conference records, which used to be the third qualifying step after head-to-head and divisional competition. Not any longer. With the balanced schedule, the third step now used in breaking two or three teams tie for the two wild-card spots in each conference deals with common opponents. Here are some possible examples:

If Miami and the Jets finish with the same record, their tie is broken with the results of head-to-head competition taking precedence. Since the Dolphins have lost twice to the Jets, New York would get the playoff nod.

One team with a not-so-evident edge in the second qualifying step is Denver, which owns a 5-1 divisional record going into their second game with the Raiders Sunday. While Oakland is an 8-5 favorite to win the AFC West, mostly because of their home-field advantage, if the Raiders were to finish in a tie with Denver for divisional honors after knocking over the Broncos or coming up short against Miami or Minnesota in the final two weeks of play, the Broncos would own the right to the AFC West because of their better record within the division.

If, however, two teams are tied in both head-to-head competition and divisional record, the next tie-breaking step deals with common opponents. This new wrinkle is made possible because of the league's new scheduling format which seeks to balance the competitive level of play.

As of today Philadelphia, Washington and Atlanta are the key contending teams for the NFC wild-card slots, while the Vikings are still favored to finish ahead of the Packers after Sunday's tie. Minnesota plays the Eagles, Lions and Raiders, while Green Bay finishes the season with three straight road appearances in Tampa, Chicago and Los Angeles.

This weekend's NFL action:
N.Y. Jets 6 over Baltimore, Atlanta 1 over Cincinnati, Los Angeles 9 over N.Y. Giants, Green Bay 1 over Tampa Bay, Miami 1 over Washington, New Orleans 5 over San Francisco, Minnesota 3 over Philadelphia, Houston 2 over Pittsburgh, Kansas City 5 over Buffalo, St. Louis 3 over Detroit, Dallas 5 over New England, Seattle 3 over Cleveland, Oakland 4 over Denver, San Diego 6 over Chicago (Monday).

Saturday's college games:
Georgia 6 over Georgia Tech, Boston College 1 over Holy Cross, Florida 5 over Miami (Fla.), Arkansas 13 over Texas Tech, Tennessee 16 over Vanderbilt, Alabama 14 over Auburn, Texas 8 over Texas A&M, Navy 9 over Army, LSU 21 over Wyoming, Houston 31 over Rice, USC 39 over Hawaii.
An early look at the bowl games:
Garden State (12/4/8) — Arizona State 13 over Rutgers. Sun (12/4/23) — Texas 6 over Maryland. Tangerine (12/4/23) — Pitt 6 over North Carolina State. Fiesta (12/4/25) — Arkansas 6 over UCLA. Gator (12/4/29) — Clemson-Ohio State even. Cotton (1/4/1) — Notre Dame 4 over Houston. Rose (1/4/1) — USC 3 over Michigan. Sugar (1/4/1) — Alabama 2 over Penn State. Orange (1/4/1) — Oklahoma 10 over Nebraska.

'I'm

One'

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Oklahoma running back Billy Sims said today he thanked "the Man upstairs" for having him win the Heisman Trophy.

Sims, appearing at a news conference minutes after he was named winner of college football's most coveted award, said his first thought when told he won was, "I'm No. 1."

Asked if there was anyone he wanted to thank, Sims replied, "The Man upstairs. He knows best."

He also said much of the credit should go to Oklahoma's offensive line and a big chunk of the trophy should go to his roommate, Outland Trophy Award winner Greg Roberts.

"He can have it all if he wants it," Sims said.

Asked how he felt, Sims said, "I feel pretty good."

He was wearing jeans, a white OU t-shirt, a red cap with a large B on it, an orange windbreaker and a big smile.

He said the B on his cap originally was for the Boston Red Sox, but it now stood for Billy.

His main competition for the Heisman came from quarterback Chuck Fusina of Penn State.

Billy Sims flashes No. 1 sign after winning Heisman award

Charles White: 'Man who got it deserves it'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Running back Charles White of the University of Southern California says he really isn't disappointed about not winning the Heisman Trophy because the man who got it deserves it.

Coach John Robinson said he was disappointed, however, suggesting that White was the "most competitive" player in the game.

"No, I'm not disappointed," White said Tuesday upon learning that junior running back Billy Sims of Oklahoma had been named the winner. White, also a junior, became the all-time rushing leader at Southern California this season.

Despite his outstanding season, however, White finished only fourth in the Heisman Trophy voting. Senior quarterbacks Chuck Fusina of Penn State and Rick Leach of Michigan finished second and third, respectively.

"I thought it would probably go either to a senior or to Billy Sims, because of his great performance at the start of the year. I'm really not disappointed," said White. "I knew whoever won it would deserve it or else they wouldn't get the votes."

"Of course, I would have liked to win it. And I'm sure Billy will enjoy it as much as I would have enjoyed it if I had gotten it."

White, who got a career-high 205 yards in USC's thrilling 27-23 victory over Notre Dame last weekend, said he wasn't worried about next year when he and Sims should both be leading contenders for the trophy. His goal for 1979, he said, was to help the Trojans (10-1 so far this year, with game's against Hawaii next Saturday and Michigan in the Rose Bowl still to play) go undefeated.

"The individual awards really don't matter that much to be," he added.

"I'm still a team-oriented person. This is a team sport. If the other guys aren't doing their part, I'm nothing, and I'm sure Sims says the same thing."

Asked, hypothetically, who he would have voted for if he had the chance, White paused briefly then named USC's junior quarterback.

"Paul McDonald," he said. "The guy has great poise and leadership ability."

Robinson, White's coach, said he thought White deserved the award and admitted he was disappointed by the vote.

"Hell, yes, I'm disappointed," he said.

"I know that all of the top five finishers are in the elite class of athletes and they're all great players and to be counted in that category is an honor."

"But it is disappointing to me. I think Charles White is the most competitive man I've ever been around. He does the things he does over and over again, and he does them in the big games."

BYU quarterback wins top honor

DENVER (UPI) — Brigham Young University quarterback Mark Wilson, selected as a backup role earlier this season, got his chance last week to redeem himself against Hawaii.

Wilson, a 6-5 junior, did just that. For his performance against Hawaii in BYU's 21-13 victory, Wilson was named Western Athletic Conference offensive player of the week today.

Wilson, bumped to the bench in favor of sophomore Tim McMath, drew the starting spot against Hawaii because of an injury to McMath.

He responded with 21 completions on 30 attempts for 291 yards and a pair of touchdowns. He also rushed 13 times for another 23 yards.

Other nominees for the offensive player award were Frank Henry, Utah wide receiver; New Mexico quarterback Brad Wright; Jack Garretts, San Diego State wide receiver; Larry Jones, Colorado State running back; and Wyoming guard Mike Schar.

San Diego State nose tackle Buddy Mason and Utah strong safety Derek Washington (Monday) were named defensive co-players of the week in the WAC.

Computer athletes' potential gold medalists

AMHERST, Mass. (UPI) — It appears as if the computer generation is expanding to sports. Gideon Ariel, director of research for the U.S. Olympic committee, believes computers can help him a new generation of Olympic-bound athletes into gold medalists. And he thinks it can happen as soon as 1984. His Amherst-based company, Computerized Biomechanical Analysis, offers time and computers free to athletes deemed promising by the USOC governing committee. Ariel, a former discus thrower for the Israeli Olympic team, programs the computer with high speed films of sports performances ranging from discus throwing to kayaking. As the film is shown on a screen, frame by frame, the different parts of the body Ariel wants to study are represented by dots connected by lines. The resulting stick figure is studied to measure the movements of the various dots to calculate the force and acceleration behind them. A printout is produced which can tell an athlete how to optimize body movement by changing angles of force. Ariel describes the method as "a science that analyzes biological motions by measuring changes in motion. It tries to analyze what the eyes cannot see." Without the computer, he said, "It would take a year to do what you can do in a week." Many coaches and athletes now rely on "witchcraft" to make training decisions, he said. "Nobody in the country can now tell you the best components in sports," he said. "One of the problems is that we generalize too much about people." If coaches and athletes use the computer analysis in their training methods better and more scientific regimes can be established, he said. But Ariel says it won't happen overnight. "The 1980's (Olympic Games) are too late now. We're working for 1984. We have to structure the training from a very young age," Ariel said. "What we have to build now is a new generation that is representing this country."

Progress starts to rain on ticker-tape parades

Never before was as much paper showered on any celebrity as was thrown at astronaut John Glenn, now a senator, when he starred in the 1962 New York ticker-tape parade. An estimated 3,474 tons of paper, to be specific. And no doubt never again will that much paper be showered on any ticker-tape celebrity of the future. Paperless computers are replacing the ticker-tape machines. And the skyscraper windows are being sealed up with the installation of central air conditioning.

You don't have to believe that Benedict Arnold was a traitor, if you don't want to. Instead, you can buy the trivial story that he was framed by his wife who became bitter after the discovered Benedict had a girlfriend.

No two members of the Screen Actors Guild are permitted to use the same name.

CUBA'S RUZ

Q. "Were you aware that the president of Cuba is a man named Ruz?"

A. Quite so. Fidel Castro Ruz is the true name of the fellow.

Q. "What's 'dropping a dime' mean in underworld parlance?"

A. Turning informer.

Q. "How much money do the Hollywood stunt men and stunt women make?"

A. Minimum, $225 a working day.

A full-grown elephant, remember, weighs just about as much as 20,000 cans of beans.

Average medical bill for the treatment of dog-bite victims now runs $50.

J. PAUL GETTY

It's not widely known that the late J. Paul Getty, one of the wealthiest men of all time, once put in a stint as a sparring partner of World Heavyweight Boxing Champion Jack Dempsey. Getty tuned up Dempsey for the 1923 title fight with Tom Gibbons.

Woodpeckers reportedly do more damage than wind, lightning and ice storms to utility company poles. Confronted with this sad fact, the utility companies now are trying to develop poles that taste bad.

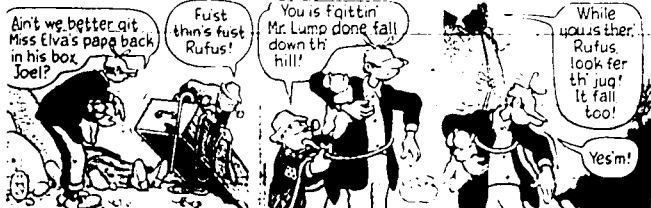

Phone numbers mentioned in movies or on television more often than not start with the prefix 555. Why? No real phone number in the U.S. begins with 555, I'm told.

The inventor of evaporated milk had one primary motive: To see to it that children aboard ships would have milk to drink.

Was at age 23 that Aristotle Onassis first became a millionaire.
