

At least 26 of 125 survive jet crash

PALERMO, Sicily (UPI) — An Alitalia DC-9 jetliner carrying Sicilian emigrants home for the Christmas holidays crash-landed into the stormy Mediterranean early today while making its landing approach to the Palermo airport.

Airline officials said 125 people — 120 passengers and five crew-members — were aboard the twin-engine plane and at least 26 were rescued from the sea by fishing boats and rushed to Palermo hospitals.

The boats, also picked up the bodies of at least four bodies, officials said.

Giuseppe Verducia, a fishing boat captain who witnessed the crash, told authorities the plane went into the sea in a controlled manner, skimming the stormy sea. It sunk a few minutes later.

"The plane came down quickly a few hundred meters from us and went into the sea," Verducia said. "We couldn't see how the people managed to get out but we turned on the search lights and rushed to it."

"Because we were so close we picked up a lot of survivors," he said. "They were all in the water."

Evidently the crew didn't have time to use the rubber life rafts."

One of the survivors, Giovanni Martorano, 26, a member of the government financial police, was seriously injured in the crash.

"As soon as the plane went into the water pandemonium broke out," Martorano said. "We didn't understand anything and almost immediately there was a big explosion in the front part of the plane."

"I don't think any of the crewmembers survived in one piece," he added. The plane, flight AZ112 from Rome, was part of a supplementary service put on by Alitalia to carry Sicilian emigrants home for the holidays.

Officials at Palermo airport said they lost contact with the plane late Friday night and the plane went down during stormy weather about 2 miles short of the runway about 1 a.m. Saturday (5 p.m. MST Friday).

Italian navy helicopters and ships rushed to the area to pick up survivors and two fishing boats in the area helped in the rescue efforts, officials said.

Helicopters searching the area just off the coast from Palermo airport radar that they could see no signs of the plane's wreckage. Navy officials said the helicopters, equipped with powerful search lights, were continuing the rescue effort.

"Right now we don't have precise information," a navy spokesman said. "We are awaiting more information by radio from the helicopters."

In New York, an Alitalia spokesman said the cause of the crash apparently was "very bad... stormy weather."

"We are doing everything possible," Palermo police official Giovanni Epifano said of the rescue efforts. "Right now all we can do is wait and hope."

Epifano said ambulances and hospitals in Palermo were put on alert to take care of the survivors.

The holiday business had its highs and lows

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

TWIN FALLS — Holiday shoppers in Twin Falls were not bothered by any economic pinches this year, according to reports by local merchants and businessmen.

Most merchants contended Friday said business has been as good as last year although not as good as they would like it.

Some businesses said it was "fantastic" while others said it was a little bit slower than they had expected.

The most active items included sound equipment and music, television sets of the expensive remote control variety, and electronic toys.

Other top-selling items this year are clothing, jewelry, automobiles and household furnishings.

"The Quale's TV's, Quale's Electronics, said television sets as well as stereo components were selling exceptionally well this year. A new product in 1978, the wide-screen television set, drew a lot of attention. Quale said he sold one of the expensive sets to a Murtaugh resident.

He said the six-foot screen, two-piece unit drew a lot of attention, but the less costly one-piece medium size unit is the one that sold. He said it is a 50-inch set.

"At least we found out the item has a market in this area," Quale said.

The wide-screen units sell for between $2,500 and $3,300.

Quale said expensive remote control color television sets sold better this year than the smaller ones. All in all, he said business was up with very little last-minute shopping.

Most people buying TVs, especially the expensive ones, started shopping and looking early, he said.

Ron Victor of The Sound Company, described holiday buying this year as "unbelievable" and said it is his best year yet.

Stereo equipment and "anything connected with sound" was in demand, he said. About the only item not selling well in the sound specialty shops, he said, was the citizen band radios, where the market has been saturated.

He said sales in the CB equipment fell off about a year ago when the government got involved and changed the CB channel requirements.

Jules Harrison of Thiesen Motors, said a lot of families will be finding automobiles "under the Christmas tree." He said in the last few days the small car sales have been exceptionally good.

"I guess a lot of people have been thinking about a second car or a third car, the two-seater or wife and baby car," he said. Sales of these have been exceptionally good the past week, he said.

At women's apparel stores such as The Paris or The Mayfair Shop, officials reported good quality clothing items in high demand. Earl Faulkner, of The Paris, said his store was selling record numbers of coats for Christmas. But, he added the warm weather slotted coat sales in September, October and even early November.

Faulkner said there was no heavy turn-on date for holiday buying this year, although sales have been brisk since Thanksgiving. Many, he said, were buying in September. If a shopper saw something he or she liked at one of the fall sales, it was purchased and held for Christmas.

Officials at the Mayfair said lingerie and jewelry were among the best Christmas items this year. One reason for this, clerks speculated, is that men feel safe buying these items since size isn't a problem.

They said many men were buying for their wives without knowing the exact size.

Another store reporting excellent business this year was the County Seat. Manager Robert Schroeder said in spite of an extra heavy inventory of top quality jeans and matching outfits, it was hard to keep up with some of the more popular styles. He said men's, women's and children's items were all in demand.

"We started with heavy shopping after Thanksgiving, but about two weeks ago it increased and we have been swamped ever since." The fairly new store has no long-range records for comparison but is well ahead of last year, he said.

James Willis, manager of Sears, Roebuck and Company, said electronic toys were hot sellers this year. Television games also were good, he said, and many shoppers selected clothing of the durable type.

"Our shoppers are getting more and more value wise," he said. "They are not necessarily hunting for bargains, but are anxious to get full value for their money," Willis said.

Hammond said, "These numbers came strictly from Idaho Frozen Foods. When we became involved with the project, we had to determine for any industry to buy into the new facility, Idaho Frozen Foods took that information. They came back to the city and said based on these unit parameter costs they wanted not the original amount but the subsequent amount."

Yet, almost from the beginning of plant operation, Idaho Frozen Foods input exceeded what they had said it would be.

Spud diversion hit by a delay

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The $18 million federal potato diversion program, which has run into last-minute trouble with a third one.

The Office of Wage and Price Stabilization, President Carter's inflation-fighters, reportedly are holding up the program because of fears of an inflationary impact.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, which has OK'd the 9 million hundredweight (cwt) diversion at an initial price of $2 per cwt, was expected to announce approval of the program this week.

But USDA press chief Joe McDavid said the announcement has been postponed until Tuesday.

Also Friday, Idaho Sen. Frank Church reported the Carter Administration's chief inflation fighter, Alfred Kahn, head of stabilization office, has put a hold on the diversion.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture source, who asked not to be named, confirmed Friday that the Office of Wage and Price Stabilization is not happy with the diversion. Sources in the Idaho potato industry say another White House agency which must approve the diversion, the Office of Management and Budget, is not opposed to the diversion.

Church blamed potato market speculators for the delay.

Earlier this week, speculators urged the USDA to reject the program because they say it will help eastern potato growers and will disrupt fresh Idaho potato marketing.

"The administration has been hit by a barrage of complaints by market speculators who have used the presence of inflation to put a hold on the decision to implement a diversion program," Church said.

Gerald Murphy, general manager of the Potato Growers of Idaho, sent a telegram to Carter Friday, urging the President "to immediately approve the diversion."

Murphy told Carter the diversion is needed "to avert a market disaster."

No one knows for sure how much Idaho potato growers, who produce half of all russets in the country, stand to gain from the proposed diversion.

If approved, the initial $2 per cwt price for the first 20 days. After that, the price is expected to drop to $1.75 for the final 40 days of the program.

A record Idaho crop of 97 million cwt, along with a record national crop of 319 million cwt this year, caused a drop in prices and prompted growers to request the diversion in November.

The USDA has indicated in recent weeks it would go along with the request, but warned a decision was subject to approval of the president's economic advisors and the wage and price office.

Murphy said after he heard about the delay Friday he telephoned the White House but he was unable to get through. The PGI manager supports diversion.

If the program goes through, the USDA will be buying 4 percent of all russet potatoes grown in the country this year. The potatoes would be sold cheaply to feed companies and other animal and non-food users.

The government diversion would be the first for the American potato industry since 1949. The 1949 purchase took 30 percent of the year's crop off the market.

Sewage plant just can't handle present load

Editor's note: This is the second in a series on the unauthorizing Twin Falls sewage treatment plant in the light of new information about the plant's design and operation.

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Everyone who has studied the Twin Falls sewage treatment plant now agrees there is much more waste material entering the plant than it was designed to handle.

They agree this severe overloading is one of the major contributors to the plant's failure to meet federal discharge pollution standards.

The question that remains unanswered, however, is why a bigger plant was not built in the first place, one that could handle the incoming sewage.

From almost the first day the plant was in operation, sewage has been flowing into the plant much faster than it can be handled.

And the plant was supposedly designed to meet the sewage needs of Twin Falls and surrounding communities for the next 20 years.

The recently completed report on the plant, prepared by the Boise office of James H. Montgomery Consulting Engineers, Inc., said the input to the plant from one source, Idaho Frozen Foods, is the primary cause of these overloading problems.

The report states, "It would appear, based upon the available information, that the plant reached what was to be its 20-year design condition almost immediately. The effects of daily peak industrial discharge from Idaho Frozen Foods is the obvious cause of these loading problems."

The report also indicates that during plant design, plant designers Hamilton and Voelker Inc., projected the average plant input from Idaho Frozen Foods would be a maximum of 30,000 pounds of oxygen demand, 18,000 pounds of suspended solids and 3 million gallons of total flow daily.

"Oxygen demand and suspended solids are the most significant indicators of pollution.)

But the plant was not designed based on those figures. The plant was built to accommodate a maximum input from Idaho Frozen Foods of 25,000 pounds of oxygen demand, 10,000 pounds of suspended solids, and 2 million gallons of total flow per day.

Jack Hammond of Hamilton and Voelker said the lower figures were used in designing the plant because that's what Idaho Frozen Foods said its input would be, after the firm was told how much it would be charged per unit.

"When it got down to cold hard facts, that's what they decided."

Hammond said, "These numbers came strictly from Idaho Frozen Foods. When we became involved with the project, we had to determine for any industry to buy into the new facility, Idaho Frozen Foods took that information. They came back to the city and said based on these unit parameter costs they wanted not the original amount but the subsequent amount."

Yet, almost from the beginning of plant operation, Idaho Frozen Foods input exceeded what they had said it would be.

The plant began operation in May 1976. During that year, records of Idaho Frozen Foods' input were not kept and the company was charged a flat rate for its use of the plant.

In January 1977, the city began monitoring Idaho Frozen's input. In the first month of monitoring, the company's average daily input of suspended solids was 18,263 pounds, more than 4,000 pounds above their allowable maximum.

In seven of the next 31 months, Idaho Frozen's input of suspended solids exceeded contractual limits and design criterion.

The company's oxygen demand input and total flow has remained within allowable limits since the plant opened.

Cleveland election

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Cleveland City Council voted overwhelmingly Friday to call a special election Feb. 27 and ask voters to approve a 0.5 percent city income tax increase and sell the city's debt-ridden Municipal Light Plant to save the city from possible financial ruin.

But an angry Mayor Dennis Kucinich said the six banks holding $15.5 million in notes would not refinance the debts unless the council also approved an ordinance guaranteeing that city income tax receipts will be used as collateral for the refinancing.

Kucinich called a special council meeting for Tuesday morning when he will ask city lawmakers to approve "the final step" necessary to lift Cleveland out of default on the bank loans.

Rape trial

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — A woman testified Friday at the trial of a man accused of raping his wife that the victim, Greta Rideout, called police from under a kitchen table and was frightened, crying and incoherent just after the attack.

Sharon Ann Dolan, a neighbor of John and Greta Rideout, said Mrs. Rideout came to her house Oct. 10 and "said John had gotten to her."

Woman held for mother's murder

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — A woman slammed her car into the Statehouse steps Friday and flung a plastic bag containing her mother's head out the car window. A small American flag had been stabbed into the head's bloody neck.

The woman, Jean Zelinsky, 46, of Ringoes, N.J., told police as they arrived, "Merry Christmas. This is what you want."

An hour later, her mother's body was found at Ms. Zelinsky's home about 15 miles from Trenton, police said.

Ms. Zelinsky, who had slashed her own throat twice with a straight razor, was treated for cuts, then returned to the statehouse by state police, where she was held on suspicion of homicide.

One witness said he saw the woman's car swerve off State Street and go up the curb and into the marble columns on the steps about 4 p.m. She then threw the head, wrapped in a plastic bag, out of the window. The small flag protruded from its neck.

Witnesses reported her saying while being dragged out of car, "It's my mother."

A neighbor, Vincent Menchick, described the Zelinsky home as well kept and said, "Jean has always been a girl who has stayed pretty much to herself. She didn't mix or blend with the community. Wif, I don't know."

Senator elect wants to break up media monopolies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen-elect Larry Pressler, asking why the Justice Department has not already taken antitrust action, said Friday he will offer legislation to break up news media "monopolies" hiding under the First Amendment.

The South Dakota Republican, a House member who won the Senate seat in November, held a news conference to announce his plans and to release a letter he sent Attorney General Griffin Bell.

If current trends continue, more than 80 percent of the nation's daily newspapers will be "chain owned" by 1984, Pressler told Bell, and "why these conglomerates have escaped antitrust legislation is curious."

"Our research indicates that your department has great discretion over which monopolies to break up," the letter said. "There are many excessively profitable media conglomerates living in the basement of the church of the First Amendment."

Bodies under home

CHICAGO (UPI) — Authorities Friday found the decomposed remains of at least two people buried under the suburban home of a convicted sex offender who liked to wear a clown suit at children's parties.

Cook County Medical Examiner Dr. Robert J. Stein said "there is reason to believe" there are more bodies buried under the ranch-style Des Plaines house of John Wayne Gacy, 36, a busy construction firm operator.

Hijacker to jail

BELLEVEILLE, Ill. (UPI) — Robyn Oswald, 17, a "calm, cool and collected" girl who hijacked a TWA jetliner in an attempt to free her dead mother's lawyer from federal prison, was taken to a county jail Friday on charges of air piracy.

After her early morning transfer from downtown Marion, federal and state prosecutors conferred about her juvenile status. A spokesman said she could be tried as an adult only with approval of the U.S. attorney general.

Too much of a load for sewage plant

Even during months when Idaho-Frozen has not exceeded allowable monthly limits, its input has created fits for the plant.

The letters placed on Idaho-Frozen Foods input are based on a daily average amount computed from a total monthly input. Thus, if the total input from Idaho-Frozen Foods is 90,000 pounds per month, the daily input is restricted at 3,000 pounds, or 1/20th of the monthly input.

The plant was designed to handle uniform daily loads based on this formula.

But the input does not actually reach the plant in such consistent flow.

City Engineer Gary Young said generally all of Idaho-Frozen Foods input for a month comes into the plant in 20 days or less and causes severe peak loadings.

Young said the plant was not designed to handle these peak daily loadings.

Young used one day in December 1977 as an example. The input to the plant that day was 48,500 pounds of oxygen demand and 58,500 pounds of suspended solids. But the plant was designed to handle a maximum daily loading of 48,720 pounds of oxygen demand and 29,600 pounds of suspended solids.

During a 45-day test period, Montgomery Engineers found similar daily loading excesses. Both Young and Montgomery report said this condition has occurred regularly since the plant started up.

Idaho-Frozen Foods owner Vern Routh maintains that his company provided plant designers with "large enough figures" during the design stage and that his firm has stayed within the contracted monthly limits based on those figures.

However, Young's figures show there has been true only about two-thirds of the limit. And Idaho-Frozen Foods has consistently exceeded the maximum daily amount of input the plant can handle, but there is nothing in the firm's contract prohibiting daily overloads.

The industrial user agreement the firm signed with the city set only a monthly maximum. No daily maximum input is required despite the fact that even one day of extreme overloading causes the plant to exceed pollution standards for days afterward.

When asked why no daily maximum input figures were included in the user agreements, Hammond answered, "I can't answer that question. The industrial user agreements in Twin Falls were the first in the Environmental Protection Agency's Region 10. Since they were the first, I think it's reasonable that a lot of people overlooked this possibility."

Hammond also pointed out the EPA approved the user agreements before they went into effect, and the city negotiated the agreements using the figures and limits provided by Hamilton and Voeller.

According to Young, the City Council could act to stop at least the periodic monthly overloads from Idaho-Frozen Foods.

He said the city sewer ordinance allows the council to increase rates for input to the system above contractual limits. If done, that would constitute a fine for monthly overloads.

Although Young said he has suggested this course of action to the council, it has taken no action.

Even if the council moved to stop monthly overloads, it is powerless to stop the daily overloads. Idaho-Frozen Foods' contract with the city does not expire until 1996.

Thus, it can be expected that the sewage plant will continue to stagger under loads it simply was not designed to handle, unless the plant, or the loads, are somehow modified.

Two officers shot to death

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Two Highway Patrol officers making a traffic stop were shot to death execution-style Friday beside their black and white cruiser along Interstate 80.

Both officers were shot in the head. One was handcuffed and killed by a shot fired point blank. The service revolver was missing, investigators said.

The FBI joined state and county investigators looking for a bushy-haired, sweatshirt-wearing suspect seen by a passing motorist. Police also sought a light-colored compact car.

A Highway Patrol officer at the scene said, "This was an execution, pure and simple."

The dead officers were Roy Blecher, 30, and William Michael Fresno, 30. Both were assigned to the Woodland office.

Report on SALT expected today

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said Friday the United States and the Soviet Union were near the "end of the road" on a new strategic arms limitation accord, but President Carter cautioned it was unclear when an agreement could be reached.

Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko scheduled a news conference today at the end of their three days of intensive talks on a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

"I think the best I am going to be able to say to you is that we are close to the end of the road," Vance said.

Reporting on the talks, Carter told reporters, "I think what they (Vance and Gromyko) will be able to say tomorrow will relate to the SALT agreement."

U.S. sources said Gromyko was waiting for final instructions from Moscow which, when they arrive, "could shake a few things loose."

In Atlanta, President Carter spoke with Vance by telephone and said afterward, "We're making good progress. But some of the items still have to be referred back to the Politburo," Gromyko has said.

"So there's no way to anticipate what the rate of agreement might be," the president said. "There are still a couple of items still to be resolved. We still have good hopes" that it will be successful.

Peace talk in Brussels

By United Press International

The search for peace in the Middle East moved to Brussels Friday, where Israel's and Egypt's top negotiators came to meet Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and look for a way to revive stalled peace treaty talks.

Egypt's acting foreign minister, Butros Ghali, said another Camp David-style summit meeting could result from a successful round of Christmas weekend talks.

In Israel, the government had no comment on the peace negotiations.

Grand jury hears Tennessee governor

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Gov. Ray Blanton, questioned for two hours Friday by a federal grand jury investigating a pardon-selling scandal, told reporters, "I have nothing to hide."

Blanton issued a statement after his grand jury appearance, saying, "I answered all questions" the jury put to him. He refused, however, to answer reporters' questions.

Blanton also said that "to the best of my recollection" he had personally passed on all executive clemency cases granted during his term of office.

State prosecutors charge more than 600 people given early release during Blanton's tenure might have to be returned to prison as a result of a chancery court ruling that Blanton had unlawfully delegated his executive clemency powers to a subordinate.

Blanton said none of the prisoners need worry about the status of the cases, because he had decided to personally re-review all executive clemency grants and reconfirm them.

"As you know, I appeared before a federal grand jury today on a different matter. I answered all questions on all subjects that they asked me to answer on and I'd be willing to answer them in the future because I have nothing to hide," Blanton said.

"If you're not guilty of anything, you're not worried about answering questions of the court. I trust the grand jury implicitly and I'm sure they will make the proper decision."

Farmers take protest to Plains

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — Protesting farmers blocked the town square of Plains with tractors Friday night, defying state troopers' efforts to unsnarl the mess before President Carter arrived home for Christmas.

Four farmers were arrested in brief scuffling with about 50 state troopers trying to clear Main Street, one of three streets surrounding the town square which had been clogged with an estimated 250 tractors.

There were no serious injuries and no immediate charges brought against the farmers.

Troopers drove a few of the tractors away and towed others out of the way, but then the farmers wheeled four big tractors across the street, letting the fuel out of one and dropping a front end loader on another.

That renewed the standoff and police went into a huddle with demonstration leaders in an effort to reach a solution.

The protest was not as large as the one staged here a year ago but repeated essentially the same demands — 100 percent parity, which farmers see as a fair price for their products.

Sumter County Sheriff Randy Howard offered to release the arrested men if the farmers would remove their tractors, but they shouted down the suggestion.

Tommy Fulford of Adams, Ga., said, "Everywhere we go you could grab three of us and let us go if all of us would go away."

"We could grab all 250 of you," Howard answered.

The parade permit obtained by the farmers expired at 5 p.m. but Howard gave them another hour to leave after they turned down a compromise proposed by two local peanut growers. They had suggested that the tractors be placed along the motorcycle route from nearby Peterson Field, where the presidential helicopter would land.

The farmers, wearing black armbands both as a protest and to mourn four fellow farmers killed in a Missouri plane crash while en route to Plains, shouted down the offer and hoisted a Confederate flag on a makeshift pole.

"We've been doublecrossed by him before, and he might not even land there," said Fulford, vice president of the Georgia American Agriculture Movement. "If we can't handle Plains, Ga., here, there ain't no point in us going to Washington next month."

As Howard consulted with the Secret Service, farmer Ronny Nations of Quin, Mo., mounted the back fire of a tractor and shouted, "There ain't no show him we're stubborn as a Missouri mule."

The tractors did not block access to the President's home from the airport.

Carter home for the holidays

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President Carter stopped off in Atlanta to see his first granddaughter Friday and then came home for the holidays — using back roads to avoid angry farmers who blocked the town square with their tractors.

"I'll probably see them today," said the president, still feeling the effects of a painful hemorrhoid flareup.

He spent more than half an hour at Atlanta's Crawford Long Hospital, where Sarah Rosemary Carter was born Tuesday to Jack and Judy Carter. She is the president's third grandchild.

"The baby is beautiful," he told reporters after visiting the maternity ward. "We couldn't hope for a better Christmas present. She's making good progress."

First lady Rosalynn Carter said the baby "has toes like the president."

The President canceled all appointments and spent most of Friday in bed before leaving Washington late in the afternoon.

"The president had a good night's sleep and continues to improve," said deputy press secretary Claudia Townsend.

And the White House physician, Dr. William Lukash, said he examined Carter early Friday, found considerable improvement in his condition, and ruled out surgery on the hemorrhoids "at this time — unless there is a recurrence."

The president disclosed at a Thursday evening White House Christmas party — that an operation was "a possibility" unless the condition improved, but said he already was "feeling much better."

Carter had no appointments Friday, but did meet in the morning with Vice President Walter Mondale, who has been filling in for him at the White House.

And press secretary Jody Powell said the president spent part of the day working on the fiscal 1980 budget and "I think he will have tentatively made most decisions today."

"He obviously feels well enough to work on the budget," Powell said.

As for Lukash's decision to forego surgery at least for now, Powell said, "I suppose if it gets really bad, he'd look at it again."

New JFK hearing next week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new conspiracy theory backed by scientific analysis that a second gunman shot at President John F. Kennedy will be examined next week at a final public hearing ordered by the House Assassinations Committee, it was announced Friday.

The theory is based on expert study of a police tape recording of the gunshots that killed Kennedy Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas.

The Boston firm of Bolt, Beranek and Newman, Inc., that made an acoustic analysis of the tape said in a report to the committee "there is a 95 percent or greater likelihood that the sounds of four gunshots are present on the tape and that the third shot came from the direction of the so-called grassy knoll in Dealey Plaza."

Previous evidence indicated there were only three shots and all were fired by Lee Harvey Oswald from the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository — the conclusion reached by the Warren Commission in studying the assassination.

"In light of the nature of the scientific evidence that has recently been made available to the committee, it will be the subject of a public hearing at 9 a.m. Friday, Dec. 29," said committee chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, at an emergency hearing Friday.

Stokes' suggestions by one committee source that the tape analysis "opened a new ballgame," the theory may be no more than an asterisk in the committee's report.

Informed sources said the committee's all but completed final report concludes that it has found no evidence of conspiracies in either the Kennedy assassination or that of Martin Luther King.

Sources who doubt the new four bullet theory said not one of the persons in Dealey Square that day reported seeing anyone with a gun in the vicinity of the grassy knoll.

Stokes said the new evidence "will be heard in its full context and the possible meaning of it will be explored."

But he brushed aside suggestions the theory might prompt the committee to prolong its investigation beyond its two-year, $5 million mandate that runs out New Year's Eve.

Don't delay No Return Wilderness

President Jimmy Carter's vacation trip to Idaho in August did more for this issue than any amount of handshaking and political campaigning.

This became apparent Wednesday when Carter announced his administration's desire to create a 1.9 million acre River of No Return Wilderness area.

This proposed wilderness will protect most of the largest remaining wilderness area in the 48 contiguous states. The Salmon River and its tributaries flow through it and comprise the only major, undammed river system in the lower 48.

This area deserves special consideration for its unique, unspoiled wildlife and wilderness characteristics alone. In addition, its resources are the raw material for the multimillion dollar outfitters and guides industry which hosted the president, his family and Secretary of Interior Cecil Ardrus.

This resource will only become more valuable as pristine wilderness areas in the United States disappear.

Although the timber industry and its spokesman, Idaho Congressman Steve Symms, want Congress to hold off on deciding the size of the Salmon wilderness until the results of RARE II, there is no good reason to wait.

The hearing process on the administration's bill and the others that are likely to be introduced, with both larger and smaller wilderness sizes, should begin immediately. It's time to move on establishing the primitive area and open the debate before Congress on Idaho.

Idaho Sen. Frank Church will introduce the administration's bill, but he is also willing to introduce anyone else's bill. The River of No Return Wilderness Council, a group of Idaho conservationists, will have Church introduce a bill to accomplish their goal, to set aside 2.3 million acres.

The Idaho Forest Council, comprising all the big logging companies, will probably not take Church up on this offer and instead will have someone else introduce a bill for a 1.5 million acre wilderness.

Church is not taking a position on the size question and his open-forum stance at this stage takes away considerable fire from the timber interests.

Since Symms may run against Church in 1980, it is doubtful the forest council will let Church prove his fairness by introducing the 1.5 million acre bill.

Symms seems to be frustrated by Carter's surprise move. He must be wondering what to deal with first — the China issue (which was also a surprise); his political plans for 1980; that dead horse, the Panama Canal treaties; or, now, the Salmon wilderness.

Arrogantly, Symms says the extra 400,000 acres in the proposed No-Return-wilderness might be "worth it" if the timber industry gets trade-offs in the roadless areas.

But a primitive area is more than a bunch of trees to be divided up between "backpackers" and logging companies — something Symms apparently does not understand.

The RARE II issue should not be confused with the River of No Return wilderness issue. By common agreement, the jewels of Idaho's remaining wilderness are at stake in the debate over the River of No Return.

The congress should not delay this question to wait for the RARE II outcome. The Salmon River's middle fork is a separate issue and public debate should begin so the size necessary to preserve it can be decided.

SALT costs balloon

WASHINGTON — I'm not sure how many more disarmament treaties with the Soviets this country can afford. The SALT II documents have not even been initiated yet, and already we are being warned that we will have to spend a lot more money to protect ourselves from the Russians than we have in the past.

Gen. Doppler explained it to me the other day: "SALT II could guarantee excessive military spending for years to come."

"How's that?"

"If we have to give up something to sign a SALT agreement with the Soviets, Congress has to provide us with funds to see that we are not giving up guns for butter."

"I'm not certain I understand the guns and butter analogy too well," I said.

"Well, the original idea of SALT was to find a way of reducing the nuclear arms race between the super powers. It was agreed that both countries had enough warheads to kill every man, woman and child 11 times over. The cost of new warheads is getting so high it was believed that if both sides continued on the same path they wouldn't be able to afford butter any more."

"I remember it well," I said.

"But the Pentagon and the military leaders in Moscow became very nervous that SALT would cut their budgets down to size. So both told their civilian leaders that all the disarmament talk was putting their defenses in jeopardy."

"How did they know?"

"They really didn't," Gen. Doppler said. "But when the Soviets heard the Americans wanted a SALT treaty they immediately became suspicious that we had a dirty reason for it. So they announced they wanted a SALT treaty as well. This put the United States in shock because we had to assume that if the Soviets were going along with SALT there was something wrong with it which we had overlooked."

"I can see both sides thinking that," I agreed.

"The truth of the matter is there was nothing disarming about SALT II. The limitations on nuclear weapons are so great that it doesn't reduce the threat of annihilation in the slightest, but it makes everyone look good."

"You have to admit, General, it's easier to follow baseball."

"At first the Pentagon fought SALT like a tiger. But suddenly the big boys realized that if the President was going to shove SALT II down the military's throat he'd have to give them the neutron bomb, the cruise missile, the smart bomb and the laser-directed FX. So instead of cutting the military budget the SALT talks raised it and made everyone happy."

"Now the Soviet military chiefs aren't dumb either, and we know for certain—that they've told their leaders: 'If you give up 100 MISHVs in SALT II, we want 2,000 MISHVs to fill the gap.'"

"Can we get back to butter for a moment?" I asked Gen. Doppler.

"We've just been told by the new arms control director that because of SALT we can no longer have butter and guns. I thought what made the United States superior to the Soviet Union was that we could always have both. If we can only afford one, then our standard of living is no better than the lousy Commies'."

"The military is not to blame for that," Doppler said.

"Then who?"

"The dairy farmers. They're charging too much for their butter."

Chicago's political machine meets challenge

BY BISIL TALBOTT JR.
© 1978 Chicago Sun-Times

Two years after Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's death, his Democratic political machine appears to be holding together despite some rugged tests.

The machine so far has withstood internecine struggles that started soon after Daley's death Dec. 20, 1976. Fights among Democratic ward committeemen, who form the basis of the Chicago Democratic political organization, have not yet affected the over-all operation of the party or of city government.

The bridgeport mafia, which the late mayor headed, has kept control of the machine by Mayor Bilandic as its standard bearer.

At the recent National Democratic Party convention, Bilandic traveled around Memphis in a limousine with three Daley sons and Thomas Donovan, patronage king of the late mayor and a South Side Bridgeport neighbor of Bilandic, County Board President George W. Dunne, a Near North Side resident who succeeded Daley as chairman of the county party, rode the bus.

The easy slating of Bilandic for reelection by the party's Democratic ward committeemen is the best testimony recently for the cohesiveness of the machine. By the time of the party endorsement session, there was no jockeying for Bilandic's job, even though it is now possible the most politically powerful post in Illinois.

"One change is in the style of governing. A new collegial method of rule appears to be replacing Daley's autocratic manner. Bilandic tends toward group decisions, while Daley kept his own counsel. Bilandic takes like a committee; Daley spoke like a boss. Bilandic seeks a consensus, Daley was the consensus."

Critics call the change in governing a return to the feudal state of the Democratic machine. City Hall insiders refer to it as an emphasis on teamwork. The power of the Bilandic clique also does not seem to be as far reaching or as absolute as Daley's. Bilandic's forces were able belatedly to line up most of the city's aldermen behind the mayor's compromise proposal for pay increases. Their influence so far on County Board members and on Chicago Democrats in the Illinois General Assembly to moderate their pay raises has been negligible. It is difficult to imagine Daley letting matters get so much out of hand.

One of the critics who believes feudalism has returned to the Cook

County Democrats is Ald. Dick Simpson. "Bilandic is not as strong as Daley was," said Simpson. "The authority is divided between Bilandic and Dunne. The number of party factions tend to weaken Bilandic's power."

"Bilandic puts up with more give and take than Daley used to put up with. When Bilandic is really faced with tough opposition, he backs down," Simpson said, citing the pay raise controversy. "Bilandic responded to a polite request of the President. Daley would have requested the President to do what he wanted done."

Simpson, however, conceded that while opposition Bilandic and the machine is weak, Simpson himself is evidence of this. He is retiring next year as dean of the independents in the City Council, an example of the decline of the independent political movement that grew up in the late 1960s.

Another critic with a harsh assessment is J. Terrence Brunner, executive director of the Better Government Assn. "I see cracks in the machine, which show that over-all control is not as easy. There are a whole bunch of people who are doing different things, acting as if they were powers of their own."

As examples, Brunner cited the activities of Park District Supt. Edmund L. Kelly, 47th Ward Democratic politician, and noted Vrdolyak's aggressive zoning activities.

The rebellion against Dunne's decision by the Democratic members of the County Board, Brunner said that Kelly has been trying to form his own party faction to get a bigger piece of the political pie and noted Vrdolyak's aggressive zoning activities.

The rebellion against Dunne's decision by the Democratic members of the County Board struck Brunner as the greatest evidence of the new feudalism. "I am tending to believe George Dunne is sincere (in trying to reduce the board's pay raises) and that the members are acting on their own. They (the board members) are acting in their own interest, and not in the party's interest."

One Bilandic associate who disagrees is Donovan, who shares the city chief executive job with Bilandic. Donovan noted Bilandic's successful rollback of the City Council proposal and added, "I think you will see some form of rollback on the County Board." The Chicago Democrats in Springfield "if possible will get together and work for a rollback and cutback of some kind," Donovan said.

Donovan refused to discuss the police controversy he became embroiled in when one of his children was stopped on suspicion of bicycle theft in Bridgeport, referring only to a written statement he issued last week. Pressed, Donovan said he had nothing to do with police promotions and wouldn't discuss his family.

Discussing his official duties, Donovan described himself as an administrative assistant — a title he had held for eight years with Daley. He acknowledged he is the contact for ward committeemen, but said that his "personal duties" are limited because of the scarcity of jobs and restrictions such as the Shikman decision barring firings for political reasons.

Comparing Daley with Bilandic, Donovan said, "Generally, Daley was more of a one-on-one type... Bilandic has more of a team concept." While Daley would see people individually, Bilandic likes to discuss programs with several members of his cabinet, Donovan said.

There are many optimistic signs for the machine after Bilandic's smooth slating for reelection. Chief among them are:

- Bilandic's successful scuttling of the firemen's threatened strike. That defeat of the firemen's organizing effort also tumbled hopes of public unions for substituting the written collective bargaining contracts for the informal handshake agreements that Mayor Daley insisted on.
- Bilandic's new thrust to aid the arts, reducing the upper middle-class residents who nurtured the independent political movement. The mayor's wife, Heather, should get the lion's share of this credit.

- Bilandic's successful mimicking of the Daley public works formula — build big public works projects, feeding the contractors, creating jobs, and distracting the public from social ailments.
- The local party's smashing victory this year in the Nov. 7 elections. Chicago Democrats swept countywide offices, eliminated much independent opposition in the legislature, and elected Bridgeport native Jerome Cosenti, a state treasurer and South Side resident, Roland Burris, the first black gaining statewide executive office at the polls, state controller.
- Among troubles the new machine leadership has fostered in the last year are:

- City Clerk John C. Marcini's threat to bolt the party after his dumping for re-election. Marcini's replacement as the clerk called by State Rep. Walter S. Kozubowski upset the party's geographical balance. The substitution of North Side committeeman Marcini with a South Side Democrat was a retrogressive move in the party organization.
- The apparent plethora of aldermanic candidates, showing that the post-Daley party cannot decide most of its rivalries in private before elections.
- The Donovan fiasco over the police incident, revealing the stresses in building a new team. John Haberborn, a favorite of the late mayor, apparently was quite upset about being overlooked for promotion.

Daley's system still works

By HARRY GOLDEN Jr.
© 1978 Chicago Sun-Times

The city government that Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley reshaped and ruled for 21 years flourishes, however controversially, after him.

To big labor, big business, neighborhood community organizations and the municipal bond rating houses at New York, Chicago remains the "city that works."

Scholarly, soft-spoken Michael A. Bilandic, Mayor Daley's own 11th Ward alderman, majority leader and night-and-day companion in the final two years, presides over an ever-timely regular Democratic City Council that has never in a generation voted down the chief executive on any issue. Bilandic also fashions a $1.37 billion budget under Mayor Daley-initiated state laws that look that function away from the legislative body, and controls operations of 42,100 city employees guided by a management team installed by Mayor Daley.

A new central library will go up with the help of the Public Building Commission that the late mayor had the state create to enable the city to sidestep limits on borrowing; seven blocks of the North Loop will be substantially rebuilt under a scheme developed by private real-estate interests; and Mayor Daley's planners; homeowners will get tax relief through exercise of the homestead revenue powers that Mayor Daley's representatives helped write into the 1970 Illinois Constitution.

To be sure, there are, subtle differences in approach to running the nation's second most populous city.

One point of contrast is Bilandic's seemingly greater willingness to compromise and bargain with other levels of government, such as in the historic agreement with Republican Gov. James R. Thompson in May, 1977, on the Crossstown Expressway and the decision in February, 1977, to drop an appeal of U.S. District Court findings of discrimination in a long-standing lawsuit against the Police Department.

Another apparent difference is Bilandic's concentration on broad-based business and economic expansion, rather than Mayor Daley's greater reliance on public works, to stave off hard times.

Like Mayor Daley before him, Bilandic is often an innovator in public affairs.

His program of cut-rate home loans with city revenue bond financing is being widely copied. His expansion of last summer's Lakefront Festival into ChicagoFest featured a music program that lured 50,000 to Navy Pier. He established a mayoral office to work for energy conservation and produced legislation refuting smoke detectors in most of the city's older apartments.

Bilandic exercised the most firefighter-like address and determination in heading off a threatened fire-fighters' strike during the recent budget-making season.

Quietly, he laid plans to fire all strikers and to fill the ranks with rapidly trained recruits, then negotiated the support of the leaders of 10,000 civilian employees of the city who are members of trade unions.

Publicly, he cried over what he judged would be unbearable costs of formal labor contracts.

In the face of public uproar, Bilandic showed flexibility in dropping support of a 60-per cent pay raise for aldermen and negotiating with federal inflation fighters a staggered system of salaries that will shave the total extra cash for aldermen by 25 per cent over the next four years.

Bilandic has demonstrated skill in what was Mayor Daley's least celebrated strength — mastery of finance.

His 1979 budget, adopted Dec. 13, continued the pattern since 1972 of trimming real-estate taxes by $1.2 million, yet keeping 13,200 police officers and 4,500 fire fighters and paramedics among the nation's highest paid.

Bilandic also continued a Mayor Daley tradition of maintaining labor peace in the private sector. In his first months in charge, Bilandic intervened successfully in five major labor disputes, and his successes continued with resolution of a City Colleges teacher strike last fall.

City government's cadre of executives — there are some 400, the federal inflation fighters' strike — still are largely the Mayor Daley bunch.

Bilandic in his two years has appointed 11 department heads. Most of them, like Fire Capt. Richard G. Albrecht and Rodent Control Comr.

Madison L. Brown II, were Nov. 2 men who were visibly being trained under Mayor Daley to move up. Among the 11 appointees, the only "outsider" to city government was Human Services Comr. Cecil A. Partee, Mayor Daley's longtime political ally, newly slated by Bilandic as the 1979 candidate for city clerk.

Among the city executives closest to Mayor Daley were two young men from the 11th Ward — Thomas R. Donovan, an administrative assistant, and Edward J. Bedore, budget director.

Today, there are more so. That is, after them, there is a big drop to the next highest level of influence of staffers and department heads.

Bedore, who knows where all the money is, plays an important role in leveling off a political policy and by outsiders as merely the patronage chief and political counselor, is the administration's executive officer, working out the specifics of such plans as the current 40-per cent expansion of the snow fighting fleet and redeployment of snow-fighting crews.

Critics who say Chicago works only for the favored concur that little, essentially, has changed.

Only weeks after Mayor Daley died, New York songwriter Sammy Cahn dropped by City Hall to pick up a medal for writing "My Kind of Town Chicago Is," and lyricist that he is, summed up, "When I came into Chicago and take a cab and ride down the streets, I have the feeling that I am in a city that is managed."

DAVE MORRIS
he's thankful

Bad luck doesn't stop man's hope

DENVER (UPI) — Life hasn't been too good to Dave Morris, but he isn't complaining. In fact, he's thankful for what he has.

What he has are some good friends, hope for the future, and love for his two young sons.

Dave Morris' problems began more than two years ago when he learned he had cancer of the brain stem.

Since then his wife and his separated and divorced. Twice this year Morris was mugged by handits taking advantage of his infirmity. The last time by five men who held him to the ground and kicked him.

Through it all, Morris, 34, is looking forward to Christmas and what it means for his sons, aged 1 and 9.

"The latest mugging occurred in front of the Montview Presbyterian Church Dec. 7, where Morris attended a party for cancer patients who have successfully battled the disease.

When he walked in his car afterward, Morris was thrown to the ground by five men. Three of them held him and the other two kicked him in the stomach and groin.

The muggers took about $150 — the money Morris had just received from a disability check that he was going to use to buy presents for his children.

"I anticipated a rather dismal Christmas, but it won't seem so dismal now," Morris said. His friends gave him enough money to buy the presents and live on until his next disability payment.

"I have been kind of dumbfounded in the losses I've received from my friends," he said. "I hadn't really expected anything, but at least now I can buy some things for the kids.

Kampiles gets 40-year sentence

HAMMOND, Ind. (UPI) — A former CIA clerk who dreamed of becoming a "double agent" stood stone-faced Friday as a judge sentenced him to 40 years in prison for selling U.S. secrets to the Russians.

U.S. District Judge Phil McNagly said William Kampiles, 24, of Munster, Ind., jeopardized the lives of 220 million Americans by stealing the operations manual for a super-secret spy satellite and selling it to Soviet agents for $3,000 at the Greek National Stadium in Athens March 4.

The KRI-11 satellite was used to monitor Soviet troop movements and missile sites. The Soviets, after receiving the manual, reportedly took action to prevent their defense locations from being photographed.

Kampiles' mother, whose emotional outcry disrupted the court when he was convicted Nov. 14, was not present for sentencing. The only family member present was a brother, Michael, 25, who bowed his head when McNagly pronounced sentence and later refused comment.

Defense attorney Michael Monaco said he would appeal the conviction on four counts of espionage and two counts of stealing government property — for which the judge could have imposed a life term.

Monaco said Kampiles was driven by a desire to be a CIA spy and felt he was locked in a dead-end clerk's job at CIA headquarters in Langley, Va. He said Kampiles offered his services to the Soviets with the sole intention of "passing" "misinformation" and landing a job as a CIA "double agent."

U.S. Attorney David Reedy made no specific recommendations for a penalty, only asking the judge to pass a "substantial" sentence.

Monaco went before the judge Wednesday seeking leniency on grounds Kampiles' mother is destitute and had threatened suicide. Afterwards, McNagly said he was having difficulty deciding Kampiles' fate.

The judge said there were some psychiatric explanations for Kampiles' actions. But, he said, "How do I explain to anyone that the lives of 220 million persons have been placed in jeopardy?"

Pope plans to travel to Mexico

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II ended weeks of speculation Friday by announcing he will fly to Mexico next month in the first papal trip outside Italy since the late Pope Paul VI travelled halfway around the world in 1970.

The 58-year-old Polish pontiff told assembled cardinals in a traditional Christmas message he would travel to Puebla, Mexico to open the Third Latin American Bishops Conference.

The conference begins Jan. 27 at Puebla, near Mexico City, and more than 2,000 Latin American prelates are expected to attend.

The conference is expected to test the pope's views on church involvement in political affairs.

John Paul's trip had been rumored since early December, but the new pope declined repeatedly to confirm it.

"Late next month I will go, God willing, to Puebla de Los Angeles for the bishops conference. It is an event of great ecclesiastical importance," the pope told the cardinals.

"It is important not only because in Latin America, called the continent of hope, there are so many faithful... but because of the bishops who have transformed their old and new church into a rejoicing reality," he said.

The pope's trip will be his first outside the borders of Italy since the former Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Poland became the first non-Italian pontiff in 45 years on Oct. 16.

The last time a pope left Italy was in November, 1970 when Pope Paul VI spent nine days visiting seven countries in the Far East.

A real Ho-Ho-Ho!

Grace Ho received a Christmas bonus Wednesday at the New York Infirmary. She was expecting to have twins, but she received an extra bundle of joy, just in time for the Christmas holidays. It was not reported whether any of the medical staff attending to Mrs. Ho at the triplets' birth believed ho-ho-ho, but someone surely must have been thinking it.

The nation and the world gear up for Christmas '78

By ROBERT MACKAY
United Press International

MILLIONS of people jammed stores across the nation Friday to find the perfect Christmas gift, while children gave Santa Claus their last-minute requests and Christians prepared to celebrate the birthday of Jesus Christ.

Despite the soaring cost of living and threat of a recession next year, shoppers were turning out in great numbers at the nation's retail stores.

In Boston, William Phipps, executive vice president of the Retailers Association of Massachusetts, reported sales up 3 to 4 percent over last year.

New York retailers said sales volume is equal to or greater than last year's, with jogging gear, cosmetics, fine jewelry and electronic games in heavy demand.

While stores were doing a good business, inflation apparently took a toll this holiday season on Christmas cards.

The post office in Bethlehem, N.H., used to be deluged with Christmas card senders who wanted the envelopes stamped with a popular village seal. But Postmaster Hilton Newell said there are fewer cards coming in this year and he blames inflation.

"People aren't malling as much," Newell said. "I think money's tighter."

In the real Bethlehem — the Holy Land town regarded by Christians as the birthplace of Jesus Christ — city workers finished decorations and plastic pennants were strung across Manger Square and tinsel was draped on a 30-foot fir tree.

"We will clean and wash every corner of town and it will be spotless by tomorrow," Mayor Elias Freij said. "Nothing should happen to disrupt the celebrations of the Prince of Peace."

The kiss was the hard part

PELHAM, Ala. (UPI) — The underwater marriage ceremony of Vickie August and Tommy Florence went just fine until it was time for Florence to kiss his bride.

The new Mrs. Florence removed her mouthpiece to receive the kiss, swallowed some water and choked up. Instead of getting a kiss, the groom watched his bride break up the surface of the 25-foot deep clear-water rock quarry.

The ceremony was performed by a minister who spoke through an underwater communicator on a platform suspended from another platform floating in the middle of the quarry.

The bride and the groom, both scuba divers, were wet suits to ward off the chill of the mid-40 degree water.

Students learn that bogus bills aren't such a laughing matter

PHOENIXVILLE, Pa. (UPI) — Some students at the Northern Chester County Technical School thought it would be fun using school facilities to print counterfeit $10 and $20 bills.

But after a visit this week by the U.S. Secret Service, they're no longer laughing.

Sanford Pariser, director of the school, said the bogus bills were found earlier this week by a teacher in the school's print shop, where the "money" was printed, and turned over to him.

Pariser said the phony money was poor in quality. The bills were kelly green, not the color of real money, and were printed on only one side of mimeograph paper, he said, adding the other side of some bills had "Merry Christmas" on them.

But Pariser, considering the matter a serious one since the students did photograph real money to make photocopy plates, decided to call the Secret Service.

"I thought of it as a learning experience," he said. "I said to the Secret Service, 'Please look at this situation, speak to the boys, and hopefully, they won't try anything like this again.'"

Pope announces visit

Pope John Paul II delivers speech to Sacred College of Cardinals during an audience in the Vatican Friday in which cardinals gave Christmas greetings to the pontiff. The pope announced his trip to Mexico month to open the third Latin American Bishops Conference.

Touchy time for Latins

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

The recent announcement by Vatican sources that Pope John Paul II would fly to Mexico to inaugurate and participate in the third Latin American bishops' conference underscores the delicate nature of what is at stake for the church in Latin America.

CELAM III, as the meeting is officially known, will take place in Puebla, Mexico beginning Jan. 27. Even before the announcement of John Paul's participation, the Puebla meeting was being regarded as crucial in determining whether the course the bishops undertook a decade ago at CELAM II continues to be the direction in which they want the Roman Catholic church in Latin America to travel.

At CELAM II, commonly known as Medellin, the bishops produced a series of documents that for the first time pitted the church against the ruling classes of Latin America and denounced a "situation of sin" the enormous gap between the wealthy few and the impoverished many.

Medellin broke the longtime and cozy alliance between the conservative forces controlling most Latin American countries and the church and, perhaps more importantly, fueled the activism of parish-level priests, nuns and other religious workers.

The break has cost the church enormously. It has been estimated that as many as 700 priests, nuns and bishops have been harassed, arrested, tortured, exiled or murdered since Medellin. And Medellin implicitly put the stamp of approval on what has become popularly known as "liberation theology" — a blend of socialist Marxist analysis coupled with a reading of the Bible that sees God's action in human history as directed toward social and economic liberation of the poor and the oppressed as well as the salvation of souls.

It is precisely at the point of liberation theology that John Paul II's visit takes on significance.

Like his predecessors, Popes John XXIII, Paul VI and John Paul I, the new pontiff is committed to social justice for the poor.

But he is also wary of the use of Marxism.

As an intellectual he is a dedicated anti-Marxist even while his experience as a church leader in Poland taught him the pragmatic necessity of learning to live with a Communist regime.

A significant number of the Latin American bishops — but just how many remains to be seen — feel that Medellin was too radical and went too far in involving the church in social and political issues on the volatile continent.

Others, however, speak of Medellin as "a fact" and that there is no turning back on the line of development the bishops set down there.

Preacher never takes sides

By ROY LARSON
©Chicago Sun-Times

Will Campbell likes it when the folks down home call him "Preacher Will." "That word 'preacher' has fallen into disfavor," he said the other day as he whittled away at a small stick of wood. "The people in the steeples don't like to be called preachers. But I adore the word."

In his 53 years, Will Campbell has been called many things. Not all of them as complimentary as "Preacher Will."

During the civil rights struggle of the 1960s, he was called a "nigger lover."

During the 1970s, he has been called a "red-neck lover," as a result of his ministry to Ku Klux Klanners.

On occasion, he has been accused of practicing "hick chic."

In the late 1950s, when he was chaplain to the University of Mississippi — "Ole Miss" — some of the students expressed what they thought of him by floating in his punch bowl a cup of human feces sprinkled lightly with powdered sugar.

Last winter, the Rev. John F. Fry, in a review of Preacher Will's new book, "Brother to a Dragonfly," declared that "for five years (1960-'65) Will Campbell was one of the two most important white men in the nation" by "staving off rampaging violence" and softening "potentially apocalyptic encounters."

In an interview, Will Campbell suggested none of these epithets impress him very much. When told, for example, what John Fry had said about him, he fingered his hand carved, wild-cherry walking stick, smiled and said: "John's full of . . . about that. He romantizes things." Barmyard talk comes naturally for Will Campbell. He spent his boyhood on a small cotton farm in Mississippi during the Depression.

He picked up preacher talk at an early age, too. At 16 he was ordained as a Southern Baptist preacher. Not content to become just another unlettered country preacher, he went off to Tulane University and Yale Divinity School, where he got several letters to go after his name. Pretty soon, he was blending barmyard talk and preacher talk — and pretty sophisticated preacher talk at that.

His first major assignment was at Ole Miss. Although he didn't sample the punch the students had spiked, he did get his first taste of real controversy on the Mississippi campus. He stood firm on a white-hot racial issue — and soon got his walking papers.

He has been on the move ever since. For several years he was a roving troubleshooter for the National Council of Churches. Wherever 2 or 2,000 gathered together — in Little Rock, Ark.; Albany, Ga.; Birmingham, Ala. — to break down racial barriers, Preacher Will was in the midst of them. In the theological lingo of the day, he was "in" but not "of" the South.

By 1952 or 1953, he was beginning to pack doubts with his luggage. He suspected he was doing the right things for the wrong reasons. He detected more than a small dose of self-righteousness in liberal righteousness. And his doubts were reinforced by black leaders such as Stokely Carmichael who told him it was his job to see to it that his own people — southern red-necks — got religion, too.

A moment of truth arrived in a jail cell. While visiting a young prisoner, Will Campbell listened as the inmate described the night he had just spent:

"They locked me up last night with four guys who have been in here eight months and they took turns half the night traping me."

As he reflected on this incident, Preacher Will reached a conclusion that has influenced the course of his ministry ever since. He came to believe he was called to bring the "good news of the Gospel" to all five of the men who were in that cell that night — to the four who "did it" as well as to the one who "got it."

Since then, as director of the Committee of Southern Churches, he has engaged in a ministry that "never takes sides." When James Meredith was shot during a march through Mississippi, he visited Meredith in the hospital and Meredith's assailant in jail. Similarly, he has visited in jail the Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan.

"Churchmen were offended when the all-white Christian academies sprang up in the South," he said, "but the racism at Duke and Harvard and Yale is more serious than what happens when a few pitiful people march around a burning cross in a cow pasture."

Some of Preacher Will's former friends have never become reconciled to his latter-day "ministry of reconciliation." Once vilified by right-wingers, he reports he now is being attacked in an equally venomous way by liberals.

In the current abortion debate, he takes a "conservative" view. "It's all so clinical," he said. "That makes it easier to accept. There's nothing to see, nothing to mourn."

Hanukkah starts on Christmas day

NEW YORK (UPI) — The start of the Christian Christmas holiday and Hanukkah, the Jewish feast of lights, coincide this year for the first time in 38 years.

Monday will be the first time since 1940, that the eight-day Hanukkah festival will open on Dec. 25.

Hanukkah commemorates the rededication of the Jewish temple by Maccabees after a victory over the Syrians.

The Jewish holiday usually occurs in December but sometimes falls in late November.

Baptist church plans program

TWIN FALLS — A Christmas program will be presented at the Bible Baptist Church, 315 Shoup Ave. W., Twin Falls, at 7 p.m. Sunday.

The choir and ladies' trio will bring special music, and each department in the Sunday School will have a special presentation. In addition, the adults and young people will present a play entitled, "Why Christmas?"

Earlier that day, after the morning service, which begins at 11 a.m., all children in attendance will be given a sack of fruit and candy for Christmas.

The Ladies' Group of the church has already given many baskets of fruit and "goodies" to older ladies.

The following Sunday, Dec. 31, there will be a Watch Night service, beginning at 8 p.m., and continuing past midnight. During the services, a film, "Beloved Enemy," will be shown.

Rev. Kenneth Rhoades, pastor of the Bible Baptist Church, extends an invitation to all to attend.

FILER — Jehovah's Witnesses from the two Twin Falls congregations will attend a semi-annual Circuit Convention in Filer High School Auditorium this week-end.

Delegates from eight other congregations as far away as Challis and Rexburg will attend the gathering for an expected attendance of around 800.

Vern Shaw, City Overseer of the Twin Falls congregations said, "The assembly program will be beneficial to all who are interested in Bible truth. The theme 'Rendering sacred service with loyalty,' is of special importance to those who want to serve God."

"Attention will be given to some of the pitfalls that encroach upon our service to God, such as materialism and complacency. Special encouragement will be given to young people to use their youthful vigor in serving God."

Principal speakers on the program will be J.D. Wengert, district supervisor from Brooklyn, N.Y., and A.E. Wichmann, circuit supervisor of Jehovah's Witnesses in Southern Idaho. Mr. Wengert will deliver the main discourse at 2 p.m. Sunday, "Meeting the test of Christian loyalty." Mr. Wichmann will follow with a discussion on the topic of "Are you thinking God's thoughts?"

Mr. Shaw extended an invitation to all interested persons to attend all the sessions beginning at 9:55 a.m. Saturday. Admission is free and no collection will be taken.

Kimberly Methodist choir to perform

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly United Methodist Church choir will present a cantata on Dec. 24, at the Murrayhill United Methodist Church at 9 a.m., and at the Kimberly United Methodist Church at 11 a.m. The cantata is entitled "Joy to the World." Directed by Harriet Denton and accompanied by Beverly Crothers and Sandra Day, it will feature several solos and narration which tell the Christmas story in a contemporary version. The public is invited.

Christmas Eve service for Methodists

KIMBERLY — "The Songs of Christmas" is the theme for the annual Christmas Eve Candlelight service to be presented at the Kimberly United Methodist Church at 11 p.m. Christmas Eve. Carol singing by the congregation, with several featured soloists, will highlight the service. The arrangements are under the direction of Sterling and Beverly Crothers, with Rev. John Wood officiating.

The public is invited.

Christian Science Church sermon

TWIN FALLS — The title of the lesson-sermon Sunday at the Christian Science Church will be "Christ Jesus."

Sunday school and church services are both at 10 a.m. Sunday and 8 p.m.

Wednesday at the church, 167 Ninth Ave. E.

The reading room, 352 Main Ave. S., is open from noon to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Valley Presbyterian worship plans

HAZELTON — Valley Presbyterian Church (serving Eden) will invite everyone to attend its Christmas Eve Candlelight service at 11 p.m.

Sunday. The service will be a traditional one with special music by the choir and guest singers.

First United Brethren Church sermon

TWIN FALLS — Pastor Lyle Arnold will speak on the "Creche" in the First United Brethren Church at the 11 a.m. worship hour.

The Christmas eve service will begin at 7 p.m. with an old-fashioned Christmas carol sing-a-long. There will be special music by the youth singers.

The congregation will participate in a special service to be led by Paul Eastman and George Mitchell.

Lighting of the candles by all present will reflect the attitude of sharing together the birthday of the Christ child.

The church is located at 302 Third Ave. E. The public is invited.

TWIN FALLS — The First Presidency, chief governing body of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, has issued the following message for Christmas 1978.

"When the angel of the Lord declared to the shepherds in the fields of Judea, 'Fear not; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people,' he sent a message of hope and truth resounding through the centuries to our day:

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

"If our Christmas this year is to reflect the sacredness of that first Christmas, we, too, must know and declare the Divine Sonship of Jesus Christ.

"This Christmas and each day in the New Year before us, let us talk of Christ, preach of Christ, and pray to God in the name of Christ. In order that we, our children, and all mankind may be influenced and blessed by the Divine son of God whose birth we celebrate at Christmas time. Let us each individually and with our families reverently bring the teachings of the scriptures into our daily living. They proclaim that the right way is to believe in Christ and deny Him not, and to worship Him with all our might, mind, and strength, and our whole soul.

"If we will do these things, we then will eagerly and gratefully join in the joyful anthem, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men,' that filled the heavens at the birth of Jesus Christ. Then we will contemplate the conduct of our lives and mend our ways where needed so that, indeed, the promised peace and good will of Christmas may be ours now and forever.

That all mankind may do so and rejoice in the redemptive mission of Jesus Christ is our fervent Christmas prayer and blessing.

Episcopal service slated

TWIN FALLS — The traditional children's service at the Church of the Ascension of "Blessing the Creche" will be held at 5 p.m. Christmas eve. This service of music and story features the setting up of the creche scene with music by the junior choir with Beth Allen as soloist and Mary Howell as organist.

At 7:30 p.m. Frs. Allen and Burley will be celebrating the Christmas Eve Eucharist at Holy Trinity of Buhl and Calvary Church of Jerome respectively.

The Midnight Choral Eucharist will begin at 11 p.m. Heter C. Allen will sing a solo; and a string quartet will perform with Helen C. Allen and Beth Allen, violin, Julia Strope, viola, and Douglas McClure, cello; and the choir will sing.

A tableau of the Christmas Readings will be done instead of the sermon. Readers will be Brook Bond, Shawna Pfeifferle, Lisa Braliford, Angie Slavin, Rick Green, Shawn Mueller and Shelly Seibel.

The Holy Eucharist will be celebrated by Fr. Albert E. Allen and Fr. C.A. Burley, pastors.

Another celebration of the Eucharist will be held at 10 a.m. Christmas day.

Inflation escalator slows but keeps on rising

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a week of good tidings at Christmas time, the government reported Friday the cost of living rose 0.5 percent last month for the slowest inflation increase since midsummer.

Food and housing costs moderated substantially.

But Labor Department economists said although the improvement is welcome they do not expect it to continue. "One month doesn't make a trend," one analyst cautioned.

Consumer prices had surged at a near 10 percent annual rate through-out the year before easing off last month at just above 6 percent. November's 0.5 percent increase was substantially below the identical 0.8 percent gains of the previous two months.

Administration officials have warned Americans not to expect any quick fixes to inflation problems. The full effects of President Carter's wage-price standards and other anti-inflation efforts, announced Oct. 24, should not begin to show up until next spring, they say.

The food and housing sectors — along with clothing — accounted for practically all of November's reduction, the Labor Department said. Transportation costs rose, sharply while medical care prices remained high for the second straight month.

"I don't find any real encouragement in the figures," said Labor Department economist Pat Jackman.

"The improvement was nice, but it was nothing to be particularly overjoyed about because it probably won't continue."

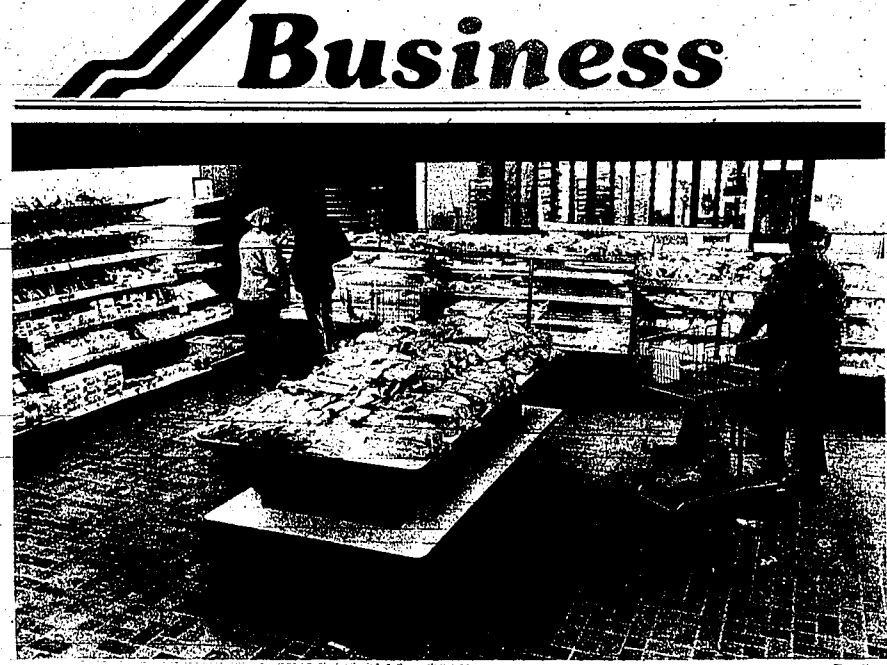

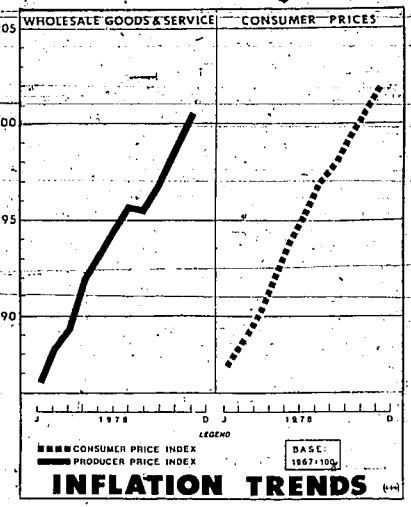

Jackman cited recent weather problems in the West and Southwest, which should boost fruit and vegetable costs, and the full effects of steep mortgage interest rate increases that are not reflected in the latest statistics.

If a separate report, the Labor Department reported that individual purchasing power, adjusted for inflation, rose 0.3 percent in November for the first increase since July. However, purchasing power was down 3.4 percent from a year earlier. The cost-of-living report showed:

• Food and beverage prices increased 0.3 percent, a sharp slowdown from October's 0.8 percent and the smallest increase since August. Grocery prices rose 0.2 percent. Fresh fruit and vegetable prices fell significantly, but meat continued rising steadily.

• Housing costs increased only 0.4 percent, the smallest gain of the year, after a 1 percent increase the previous month. The improvement was attributed to lower increases in home purchase prices and declines in gas and electricity charges.

• Clothing costs rose by just 0.1 percent, following average monthly gains of 0.5 percent during the three preceding months.

Larger winter wheat production predicted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department expects winter wheat production next year to increase by 15 percent.

Growers seeded 51.5 million acres this fall and anticipate a harvest of 1.44 million bushels.

Plantings are up 8 percent in excess of the 47.7 million acres seeded in 1977 for the 1978 crop, but are 9 percent lower than 1976 sowings.

Wheat acreage is up in all major wheat-producing states except Oklahoma and South Dakota, where plantings remained unchanged from last year.

The government indicated that wheat farmers continued to participate in the set-aside program under which they receive federal price supports in return for idling 20 acres for every 100 planted.

According to the Agriculture Department, farmers will harvest 85.8 percent of the crop for grain, compared to 81.8 percent last year.

Total 1978 wheat production of 1.736 billion bushels was 12 percent below the 1977 crop and the first crop below 2 billion bushels since 1974.

The size of the winter crop appeared to be larger than this year's because wheat prices were higher at seeding time. In the fall of 1977, wheat owners were discouraged from planting because prices had hit bottom at $2 a bushel.

After the 1978 winter crop was already planted, Congress passed an emergency farm bill, leading to increases in the target price of wheat to $3.40 a bushel and handing producers incentives to plant more wheat.

Earlier in December the Crop Reporting Board estimated a 1978 winter wheat crop of 1.25 billion bushels, the spring crop at 417 million bushels and the durum crop at 133 million bushels.

The winter wheat crop usually accounts for 75 percent of the total American wheat production. No forecasts were made of other wheat which is planted in the spring.

The report estimated that farmers planted 3.1 million acres of rye, 3 percent more than last year.

Jerome 'Super Safeway' opening plans coming

JEROME — Plans for the grand opening of Jerome's new "Super Safeway" in January will be formulated by grocery chain officials in Salt Lake City Dec. 27.

Jerome store manager Bob Likes said he will meet with other Safeway officials in Utah to outline the three-to-four-day grand opening, including setting the dates for the occasion and accompanying sale items.

Likes said on Dec. 16 shoppers began using the 12,000-sq-ft, $500,000 addition converting the Jerome grocery into a "Super" store, right on schedule.

Workers from Rupp Construction of Salt Lake City were doing last-minute finishing work throughout the new section last week, he said, but the new bakery and new shopping aisles were open.

The Jerome store becomes the fifth "Super Safeway" built in Idaho and will add another 20 people to the store's payroll.

The grocery section was moved into the new wing added onto the west end of the three-year-old store and numerous small appliances, books and magazines were stocked in the vacated area.

Housing slump facing nation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four economists told Congress Friday the nation is headed for a housing slump which could cost the overall economy 800,000 jobs.

They predicted, in testimony to the Senate Banking Committee, that housing starts, which have been running close to 2 million annually, will decline by about 400,000 units next year.

Most agreed this would translate into 800,000 fewer jobs for Americans as the effects move out into the economy.

Michael Sundecker, representing the National Association of Home Builders, said this also would mean a $12 billion loss of taxes for the federal government and $2 billion for states.

He said unemployment in the construction industry would exceed 20 percent, double its present rate, and bankruptcies among builders would rise by 40 percent.

Henry B. Schechter, urban affairs director of the AFL-CIO, said he expected an even more severe housing slump, with even more severe consequences.

The other two experts giving the gloomy testimony were Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under two Republican administrations, and Milton Hudson, senior vice president of Morgan Guaranty Trust Co.

Greenspan said the causes of the projected housing slump are not physical but financial. One factor he cited was that, as mortgage rates rise, monthly payments become a bigger and bigger proportion of household incomes, discouraging people from buying homes.

"Family income levels have not kept pace with home prices and mortgage interest rates," Schechter said.

None of the four offered an easy solution to the problem. Greenspan said little can be done at this stage to prevent a housing slowdown during the next year. Beyond that, he said, the answer is to reduce inflation, especially in mortgage rates.

Schechter said another way to keep mortgage interest down would be to temporarily prohibit extension of credit for certain purposes which compete with housing for financing, such as large company takeovers, land acquisition and development for recreational use, gambling complexes and sports complexes.

Real Estate Unlimited uses '90-10' concept

TWIN FALLS — The first "90-10" real estate firm to open in Twin Falls, Real Estate Unlimited, has opened its doors at 681 Filer Avenue, in the Campus Commons shopping center.

Tom A. Floyd, broker, said the 90-10 system gives the realtors a better opportunity and also serves the selling and buying interests. Under the system used by Real Estate Unlimited, the realtor selling the property receives 90 percent of the commission and the broker receives 10 percent. The two then divide the expense equally.

"A good real estate sales person can make about $1,000 more per month under this system than the regular 50-50 or 60-40 systems used by most Twin Falls real estate offices," Floyd said.

He said the new firm handles all types of real estate including residential, commercial, farms and ranches. In addition, appraisal work is also offered as well as all types of property management.

Working with Floyd are John Tolk and Mac Mayer. Tolk has been in the real estate business for five years and is a realtor. Mayer is also a realtor and an appraiser and has been working in this profession the past one and one-half years.

Floyd became a broker three years ago and has resided in the Twin Falls area for five years, previously being in the construction business.

Floyd said residential property is somewhat slow in local sales at this time but farms, ranches and small acreages are doing well. Many trades are being worked out, especially on acreages where city residents want to move to the country and residents living on acreages are ready to move into town.

The broker said financing is still available for real estate but it requires little more effort to obtain it. Many property owners are selling land, or homes and carrying the financing themselves, he said.

Hog report hits meats hard in futures trade

CHICAGO — Meat futures sagged sharply Friday in the wake of the federal hog and pig crop report.

Commodity News Service said live cattle ended down from the 150 point limit to 65 points lower. An estimated 13,359 contracts were traded. Bearish interpretation of the pork report led to selling in cattle; Feeder cattle also suffered heavy losses, settling from 110 to 112 points down on a trade of 2,203 contracts.

Live hogs traded at limit down levels all day and a large pool of unfilled orders remained at the close. Only 537 contracts were traded. Pork bellies ended locked limit down after trading that way all session. Only 298 contracts were traded.

Commission house selling on the close sent potato futures lower in a short session. The market settled unchanged to 12 cents lower with active May off 8 cents at 6.67 per hundredweight. Volume was 385 lots.

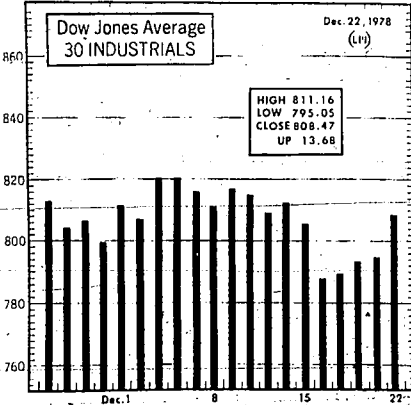

The wheat seeding acreage report helped create some demand in wheat with some short covering developing as well. Some late day spreading early long scalp profit taking also appeared but contracts ended 1 to 2 cents higher.

Evening up pared gains in corn contracts, which finished from a half cent higher to unchanged. The hog report provided some influence early in the day but some selling developed later.

The soybean complex worked lower under speculative liquidation which wound up as light buying. Beans closed 3/4 cents to a half cent down, all wheat 3/8 to 1/2 cents and meal was down 2 to 30 cents.

Chicago Board of Trade silver fell under commission house pressure, with losses of as much as 250 points in February after a recovery from a decline of as much as 620 points. Other months were off 200 to 170 points.

International Monetary Market gold reversed an early advance and closed 50 to 100 points lower in a slow trade of 6,963 contracts. Final prices were at or near the day's lows.

Funds incomes listed

MINNEAPOLIS — Two Investors Group mutual funds have announced the highest annual income distributions in their history, while a third fund has announced the highest quarterly distribution in its history.

Richard C. Gray, the funds' president, said.

Investors Variable Payment Fund, a capital appreciation fund, announced a record distribution to shareholders of 23.5 cents per share, or $15.2 million, up 5.88 cents per share from 1977. The distribution will be reinvested Nov. 30 into accounts of approximately 105,000 shareholders of record Nov. 29.

Investors Selective Fund, a high grade bond fund, announced a fourth quarter distribution of 18.76 cents per share, or $11.4 million, making the total distribution for the year a record 74.42 cents per share, or $41.1 million. The 1977 total income distribution was 70.76 cents per share, or $39.7 million.

IDS Bond Fund, an income fund, announced a first quarter distribution to shareholders of 12.68 cents per share, or $4.3 million, the highest ever. This compares to a first quarter 1977 distribution of 12.23 cents per share, or $2.7 million.

Because Selective and Bond fund dividends are declared daily, only those investors who held shares during the entire quarter received the total distribution per share Nov. 30.

The funds are three of 11 mutual funds of the Investors Group advised and distributed by Investors Diversified Services (IDS), according to L.T. Dolphin, local representative.

Tandy sales gain reported

FORT WORTH — The U.S. Radio Shack division of Tandy Corporation recorded sales of $94.02 million for the month of November, an 18 percent gain over sales of $79.0 million in November, 1977.

Sales of U.S. Radio Shack stores in existence more than one year rose 14 percent during November, 1978.

Consolidated Tandy Corporation sales for the month of November, 1978, were $12.45 billion, an increase of 16 percent over November, 1977, sales of $99,903,000.

Good, bad news for Peach Bowl

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Christmas Day Peach Bowl had some good news and some bad news Friday.

First, the good news: a last-minute rush of ticket sales sparked by Janet Rodgers, wife of Georgia Tech Coach Pepper Rodgers, enabled the post-season game to reach the quota set by the NCAA for its continued existence.

Now, the bad news: Georgia Tech tailback Eddie Lee Ivery, one of the top runners in college football this past fall, is still expected to play very little, if any, when the 19th-ranked Yellow Jackets take on the 17th-ranked Purdue Boilermakers on Monday.

"I know all of you, especially those from Georgia Tech, hope Eddie Lee Ivery can play," Rodgers told a Peach Bowl luncheon Friday. "We still have hopes. He went to the doctor today to have his ankle worked on."

Ivery, a second-team All-America who rushed for 1,562 yards this past season — including an NCAA-record 356 yards against the Air Force, suffered a severe ankle sprain late in the third quarter of Tech's final regular-season game, a 29-20 loss to Georgia in which the Yellow Jackets were leading before their star was hurt.

He laid aside his cane last week and although he has not participated in any of the pre-Peach Bowl practice sessions, has been doing some straight away running.

"Unless he is well, I will not play him," said Rodgers. "I will not risk that young man's career. He's done too much for Georgia Tech already."

If Ivery does play Monday, he will be used as a flanker.

Rodgers has already announced that Bucky Shamburger, a former quarterback who played flanker during the regular season, will be Tech's starting tailback in the Peach Bowl.

The 11-year-old Peach Bowl which drew a little over 37,000 last year, has been told by the NCAA that unless it sold at least 24,000 tickets — 40 percent of capacity at Atlanta Stadium — in addition to those tickets sold by Georgia Tech and Purdue — it would be in danger of having its accreditation cancelled.

Earlier this week, when the Bowl was still 7,500 tickets short of that quota, Mrs. Rodgers stepped in and with the aid of the wives of the assistant coaches at Georgia Tech talked the business community into buying blocks of tickets.

"We are happy to report that as of noon today (Friday), we've sold 7,500, putting us over the top," said Mrs. Rodgers. "There will be a Peach Bowl next year."

Purdue Coach Jim Young, who directed the Boilermakers to an 8-2-1 season, losing only to fifth-ranked Michigan and ninth-ranked Notre Dame, said Eddie Lee Ivery will not see a typical Big Ten team.

"We're not a three yards and a cloud of dust team," said Young. "We like to go 10, 15 yards at a time when we can. This team really believes in itself."

Rodgers predicted that the Peach Bowl would have one of the better holiday football games because "they have a good football team and so do we."

Peterman kicks his way to national fame

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Von Peterman would probably rather be playing baseball than football but you wouldn't know it from the way he performs on the football field.

Peterman, a 12-year old seventh grader at West Minco Junior High School, received national recognition this year when he won the local, zone, district and area competition of punt, pass and kick.

Last weekend, he finished fourth in the division competition at Houston, Tex.

"I like football, but I would rather be playing baseball," said the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Peterman.

His favoritism toward baseball, in which accurate throwing plays a big part, may have contributed to his success in the punt, pass and kick competition where pin-point passing and kicking also plays a leading role.

On the football field, Peterman performs with the distance and accuracy of a Dan Pastorini of the Houston Oilers.

He won the local competition with ease, and then narrowly won the district competition at Salt Lake City, Utah. At DeWier, competing with another winner from an area competition, Peterman won handily.

Key to most of his success is his casual approach and lack of nervousness.

"I didn't get too nervous at Denver," he said about his victory there. "I guess I was just out to do my best."

In the competition, sponsored by Ford Motor Co. (locally by Goode Motor Co. in Rupert), Peterman was required to pass, kick and punt a football. The judges based their award of prizes on accuracy and distance.

Though not known for great distance, Peterman relies on his accuracy and consistency to win his division.

"I usually go about 35 to 40 yards in each part of the competition," said Peterman.

Sometimes, though, like in Denver, he has to come through in the pass or kick competition to make up for a short or inaccurate punt.

His dad noted that down at Denver Von was under a lot of pressure because his punt went awry and it necessitated a good, strong pass the second day.

"Von really came through," he said.

This isn't the first year that Peterman has been involved in the punt, pass and kick competition. He got started when he was eight (the first year that players are eligible) and has been at it ever since.

"I can't say why I got started, I just did," he said. "It's just something I like to do."

Peterman plays quarterback on the local little league team so the hour of practice he put in everyday for punt, pass and kick also came in handy for his play at quarterback.

His trip to Denver and Houston was something which most 12-year olds never even come close to.

"It was fun," he said. "The Astrodome was great."

The 5-5, 135-pounder said he came away from Houston an Oiler fan and added he will be rooting for the Oilers to win the Super Bowl.

"They were much bigger than Denver," he said.

Peterman also came back from his travels with a full Denver Bronco uniform and some posters to hang up next to his favorite actress, Farrah Fawcett-Majors.

Defense key in Sun Bowl

EL PASO, Texas (UPI) — Texas will have the home-state advantage but Maryland figures to have the psychological edge in today's Sun Bowl clash between two of the nation's better defensive teams this season.

The Longhorns, runners up to Houston in the Southwest Conference race, are making their first appearance in the El Paso bowl and admittedly some of the players are still thinking about the 10-7 loss to the Houston Cougars that kept them from a return trip to the Cotton Bowl.

"We could very easily be 10-1 and back in the Cotton Bowl," said Texas kicker-punter Russell Erleben. "This (the Sun Bowl) is a soft trip but to be honest I'd rather be back in Dallas and not having so much fun."

A year ago the Longhorns went 11-0 in the regular season but then lost 30-10 to Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl game that decided the national championship.

This year, Texas not only lost to Houston but to Oklahoma, 31-10, and Baylor 38-14, en route to this season's 8-3 record. But Erleben and the rest of the Longhorns agree the Houston loss was the key one.

"After we knew we weren't going to the Cotton Bowl we let up and allowed Baylor to beat us," Erleben said.

Maryland, making its sixth straight bowl appearance under Coach Jerry Claiborne, finished second in the Atlantic Coast Conference with an impressive 9-2 record. The only losses were to No. 1 ranked Penn State and ACC champion Clemson.

This will mark the second time in three years Maryland has played an SWC team in a bowl game. Two seasons ago the Terrapins were 11-1 before losing 30-21 to Houston in the Cotton Bowl.

There is no doubt Maryland will be up for Saturday's game but Texas coach Fred Akers insists the Longhorns are not lacking incentive.

Navy tops BYU with late blitz

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A 65-yard touchdown pass from Bob Leszynski to Paul McConkey highlighted a fourth-quarter comeback Friday night that carried the U.S. Naval Academy to a 23-16 Holiday Bowl triumph over Brigham Young University.

The Midshipmen were down 16-3 midway through the third quarter, but they broke down a tough BYU defense to score two touchdowns and a pair of field goals for the victory.

Kevin Tolbert pulled Navy to within six points on a 4-yard burst up the middle. The touchdown was Tolbert's first of the season and culminated a 17-yard drive. Navy's Bob Taylor made a 21-yard kick for a 16-10 second of three field goals, this one a 22-yarder to open the fourth quarter.

Navy went ahead for the first time on Leszynski's TD bomb to McConkey with 11:41 remaining. Taylor then added his final field goal, a 27-yarder, to give the Midshipmen their final margin.

McConkey, who caught four passes for 88 yards and rushed twice on reverses for an additional 30 yards, was named the offensive player of the game.

BYU linebacker Tom Enlow was honored as the top defensive player.

The Navy defense held the dangerous Cougar passing attack to 181 yards. BYU used two quarterbacks in almost equal time. Marc Young started and completed 7-of-19 for 48 yards. He replaced Jim Robinson on the 12:17 kickoff for 133 yards and one touchdown. McMahon also ran for a score and was the Cougars' leading rusher with 39 yards.

Texas, Florida set for bowl games

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Instead of snarling at opponents like the fearsome Pittsburgh Panthers his team will meet tonight in the Tangerine Bowl, North Carolina State linebacker Tim Gillespie prefers flattery or wisecracks.

"Sometimes I think the whole thing is too serious," said Gillespie, a 240-pound offensive guard — "500 many guys try to growl and curse and take it so serious. I think it's Barry Switzer who says he wants to have fun with football, but 80,000 fans keep him from doing it."

There won't be that many spectators watching the bowl game in Orlando. Only 25,000 tickets have been sold compared to last year's 41,000. N. C. State estimated it would sell 12,000 seats, but sold only 5,000 while Pittsburgh conservatively counted on selling 8,000 and could get rid of only 3,000. The stadium seats 50,514.

Gillespie could care less about the size of his audience.

"The most fun I've had playing college football was when I played on the (junior varsity) team as a freshman. You'd look up in the stands and nobody was there, but we were having the greatest time out there."

Gillespie, a senior, says he had a great time in N. C. State's season opener this year, even though an East Carolina defender pivoted to avoid his block and made a tackle. At the same time he kicked up a large chunk of the playing surface.

Tangerine features Pitt, N.C. State; Missouri, Louisiana State in Liberty

"Just to see what you did to the grass," scolded Gillespie facetiously.

"You come up here to our nice stadium and tear up the field. You wouldn't do that in your own home stadium, now would you?"

Another opponent once growled across the line that he intended to kill Gillespie.

"Well a minute!" Gillespie pleaded. "This is just a football game, fella. You really going to kill me? Are you?"

Gillespie insists his antics are just for fun, but often he unrepents the opposition. He is particularly fond of looking across the line and saying, "Did anyone ever say you have the greatest biceps? Are those natural or did you have to wear braces as a kid? You mind giving me your orthodontist's phone number?"

Such tactics are not likely to disarm the Panthers, who are rated a one-touchdown favorite for tonight's game. They count three All-Americans among their defensive assets in 1978 and are ranked No. 13 in the nation.

N. C. State boasts the fourth leading rushing NCAA history in Texas, but the Wolfpack were unable to beat a nationally ranked team all season.

Both N. C. State and Pittsburgh were beaten by Penn State this year. The Panthers also were defeated by Notre Dame and Navy while the Wolfpack lost to Maryland and Clemson.

LSU-Missouri

MEMPHIS, TENN. (UPI) — Veteran LSU Coach Charlie McCleendon will watch the finest back he's ever coached wrap up his college career in today's Liberty Bowl game against Missouri.

McCleendon was asked at a coaches news conference Friday whether second-team All-American Charles Alexander was the best back he had coached in 17 seasons at LSU, including Heisman Trophy winner Billy Cannon.

"I don't think there's any question about it," he replied. "How do you compare a person who has gained twice as much yardage as anybody else who's played at LSU, and he's only been a starter for two years?"

Missouri Coach Warren Powers, on the other hand, thinks he has a young runner with the potential to be as good as Alexander — who re-wrote the LSU and Southeastern Conference record books during his career.

Powers' said sophomore, James Wilder, a 6-2, 230-pounder who gained 883 yards although he didn't start until the fourth game, has the same physical traits as the 6-1, 214-pound Alexander.

"But he's still a young back," emphasized Powers. "He's got a good deal still to learn about our offense. I think he has unlimited potential, however. He wants to be good and he has the ability to be a great running back."

McCleendon said he also was impressed with Alexander's way Wilder shook off tacklers.

"You would like to say maybe one team just did a poor job tackling him," said McCleendon. "But you see a number of teams falling off him and you realize it's the back."

Both coaches said they expect a high-scoring battle in the 2:30 p.m. CST nationally televised contest, although McCleendon, a 7-point underdog, admitted 18th-ranked LSU has a better chance against 15th-ranked Missouri if its a low-scoring affair.

"I would like to say it's going to be a low-scoring game but I think both teams are going to put points on the board," said McCleendon. "I wish it was going to be a defensive battle but I don't see it that way."

"It has been very easy to get our team ready for Missouri," said McCleendon. "We exchanged 11 game films and after our players saw Missouri in action, they were very attentive to what I had to say. They saw the ability on the film."

Powers praised LSU as a hard-hitting, aggressive defensive club. "Offensively, they've got a lot of speed and in Alexander, they've got one of the great backs in the country."

"We're going to try to do what we did all year," said Powers. "There's no sense in dropping what got us here. Our philosophy on offense is to present a balanced attack, both running and passing. We feel we're going to have to throw as well as run."

Army to look into charges of illegal recruiting methods

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Superintendent of the United States Military Academy-appointed the head of the school's law department Friday to investigate charges of widespread athletic recruiting violations made by Homer Smith, who was dismissed as Army's football coach two weeks ago.

Smith, who first brought his allegations to the academy's attention on Dec. 13, 1977, revealed the charges publicly Thursday night and accused the academy of covering up the original investigation made a year ago.

HOMER SMITH makes charges

Lt. Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster, the academy superintendent, named Col. Robert W. Berry, director of the academy's department of law, to head a probe into Smith's allegations and a review of last year's investigation.

"Academy officials believe most of the charges were contained in a report of December 1977," said Lt. Col. Jere Forbes, an academy spokesman. "The punitive results of Berry's investigation will be provided to the NCAA."

Smith, who compiled a 21-33-1 record in five years as Army's head football coach, included among his charges that Army illegally tried out prospective head coach basketball players; exceeded by as many as 50 the maximum number of on-campus visits for football recruits allowed by the NCAA; gave an illegal proportion of prep-school scholarships to athletes; allowed players to use athletic department telephone credit cards for personal calls that reached $50 in one case; and exceeded by three or four the number of off-campus recruiters permitted by the NCAA.

A spokesman at the NCAA's headquarters in Shawnee Mission, Kan., said Smith's accusations "would be reviewed."

"Apparently there were some problems with the sophistication of our accounting procedures concerning the recruiting program and we took corrective action where it was needed," Forbes said. "But I think we're probably in super shape as far as the NCAA goes. There were partial mistakes made but none that constituted an advantage over another school. I don't think we're in any violation of NCAA rules."

Forbes said the officer who headed the original investigation, Col. Edward Hart, has left the academy. Major General Raymond P. Murphy, Army's athletic director, was in Philadelphia and "unavailable" for comment, according to his office.

Smith, 47, was fired Dec. 4, two days after Navy beat Army for the fourth time in Smith's five years as coach and also two days after Smith's brother, Dean, was killed in an automobile accident near Omaha. As he was preparing to leave for his brother's funeral, Smith learned of his dismissal but the information was not released publicly until Dec. 6, a few hours after the funeral.

American registers upset in Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — American Sherwood Stewart shocked top seed Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, 6-2, 7-6, Friday in a quarterfinal match of the $200,000 New South Wales Open tennis championships.

The result was a blow to promoters but kept pace with the rash of upsets in which all but one of the top 13 seeds were eliminated.

Vilas had no answer to the blistering services from Stewart, a 33-year-old former soldier from Goose Creek, Texas.

"There's not much you can do when you come up against a guy who continually paces you," Vilas said. "But I didn't come to Sydney to live for just one week in my life. I came-to-practice-on-grass-for next year."

Former U.S. national under-17 champion, Tim Wilkinson, beat South African Davis Cupper Bernie Miller, 7-5, 6-7, 6-1 in reaching Saturday's semifinals.

Stenmark tops field

KRANJSKA GORA, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden won his second World Cup race in 24 hours Friday by winning the giant slalom ahead of Switzerland's Peter Luescher, his strongest rival for the World Cup trophy.

The triple World Cup winner defied heavy fog and poor visibility to clock fastest times in both heats for an aggregate of 2 minutes 28.51 seconds, ahead of Luescher who clocked 2:29.91 and Bojan Krizaj of Yugoslavia 2:30.53.

"It was a difficult race because snow conditions and visibility were changing very fast," Stenmark said. "I hope to preserve my form for the important races after Christmas."

Stenmark has now piled up a total of 31 wins in World Cup races during his impressive career. He took the maximum of 50 World Cup points within 24 hours after he won the slalom here on Thursday, but still trails Luescher in the World Cup standings by 10 points.

Luescher, who unlike Stenmark also competes in downhill races, leads the World Cup standings with 85 points, followed by Stenmark with 75.

"I know I have a good chance to win the World Cup because I will compete in all three events this season," Luescher said. "But I hope to beat Stenmark in a slalom one day. So far, he has been too good for me."

Stenmark has refused so far to compete in a downhill despite the new scoring rules which allocate additional World Cup points to the best finishers in the alpine combined, the aggregate of a slalom and downhill competition.

But his coach Hermann Noggler admitted that Stenmark has started downhill training on a remote slope last week in Val Gardena, Italy, and there was general belief that the Swede will enter one of the big downhill races next month.

There will be three alpine combined World Cup races next month and Stenmark is expected to enter the downhill at Garmisch, West Germany, on Jan. 27.

Second race set today

SUN VALLEY — The first annual Elkhorn "Slide-n-Starp" Nordic Race will be held today at 2 p.m. at the top of Dollar Mountain.

The second in a series of Sun Valley area citizens' cross country races this winter, skiers will be required to down a glass of beer at the end of the course to signify the end of the race.

Approximately three kilometers long, the course goes down Dollar Mountain, up and over the golf course, and ends up at the village cafe at the Elkhorn Village.

Registration for the "Slide-n-Starp" is from 9 a.m. until race time at the "Pro Shop in Elkhorn. Ski instructor HATCH Davis said between 50 and 57 skiers are expected to participate.

Former punter knocks Eagles

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — A former punter for the Philadelphia Eagles says coach Dick Vermeil told two players to fake injuries in an exhibition game early this season so they would not be counted against roster limits.

"I'm not going to mention the players' names," said Rick Engles, "but he once told two players to take a dive in an exhibition game. That's where you get involved in a play and stay down after it's over. Then they come out and get you."

He told two players to take a dive so he could put them on the injured reserve list. That way, they still get paid but don't count against the roster. They both did it, but ended up getting cut.

"One guy was very upset about it and threatened to go to Rozelle (National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle)."

Engle's allegations came in the second part of a two-part interview published Friday in The Tulsa

Tribune. In the first part of the interview, Engles charged he had been snatched twice in Philadelphia hotels during the early part of the 1978 season so he would not count against NFL roster limits.

Team officials denied the allegations, but promised to investigate. Jeff Heffernan, NFL public-relations director in New York, said the charges will also be investigated by the NFL.

In reacting to the earlier charges, Vermeil said Engles' charges were a result of "sour grapes."

"Rick Engles is an emotionally unstable young man," the coach said. "That was his problem as a punter. He couldn't handle pressure. If he could have handled the pressure he'd still be with us. He's not with us, so I guess this is his way of lashing back."

"To hell with him," the coach said. "I can't be worried about Rick Engles. I've got the Atlanta Falcons to worry about."

Engles, who was cut three times between July 21 and Oct. 22, said he felt "like a yo-yo" after he was cut the final time Oct. 17.

"Sometimes you throw the yo-yo down, and it doesn't come right back up," he said. "It just stays at the bottom of the string and spins. That was what happened. They treat you like a piece of meat."

Engles said it has taken him two months to recover from the last cut.

"The last time I got cut, it was like the end of the world for me," he said. "The situation with the Eagles cost me my wife, made it hard for me to find a job and ruined my football career."

"It seemed everything I had worked for was gone, all at once. There were times I didn't even want to live. I couldn't sleep at night. I couldn't stand being home, because it reminded me that my wife had left me, so I stayed out until 2 or 3 every morning. I was going crazy."

Wood River stuns Kuna by 42-40

KUNA — Wood River's Wolverines, sparked by Kelly Aldinger's 13 points, upset Snake River Valley Conference favorite Kuna 42-40 Friday night.

The win lifted the Wolverines record to 4-3 for the season.

After falling behind 10-0 in the first quarter, Wood River fought back to trail only 14-11 at the end of the quarter.

Then it was a see-saw battle, with Wood River doing a good job of keeping the ball away from Kuna's two 6-5 players.

"I was very pleased," said WR Coach Fred Trinkle. "We really did a job on offense."

New Burley police chief still being sought

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times News Writer
BURLEY — The City of Burley won't get a new police chief until 1979, Mayor Chuck Shadduck said Thursday.

Shadduck said a city council committee and himself began interviewing candidates in person and over the phone for the position left vacant Richard May resigned under pressure last August.

The mayor said he doesn't know when a new police chief would be hired. Assistant Police Chief Kirby Harkness has been acting chief since May stepped down.

Shadduck said the city has received about 15 resumes from Idaho, Oregon, Washington, California and including one from Vermont.

Gasohol future looks good as deadline passes

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times News Writer
TWIN FALLS — A major roadblock to gasohol production in Idaho and the rest of the country disappeared last week.

The Environmental Protection Agency allowed the deadline for outlawing gasohol to pass Dec. 16, automatically making the alcohol-gasoline mixture legal.

Gasohol, a fuel mixture of nine parts gasoline to one part ethanol alcohol, is being produced and used to run car engines in place of pure gasoline in 11 states.

Although gasohol isn't available in Idaho, a group of Idaho Falls businessmen have launched an effort to build the state's first ethanol plant.

The EPA approval assures the agency could ban ethanol's use as an additive to gasoline.

Tests were conducted jointly by the EPA and the Ford Motor Company to determine the effects of the mixture on automobile emissions.

The Idaho Gasohol Commission intends to make ethanol from distilled firm product wastes.

The Idaho Gasohol Commission chairman Ralph Woodmansee says "under current technology" gasohol would cost 85 cents to $1 a gallon to make.

The Idaho Gasohol Commission intends to make ethanol from distilled firm product wastes.

His group is looking for a site in eastern Idaho to build their first ethanol plant.

La Burreta bar hearing postponed

TWIN FALLS — A hearing scheduled for Friday afternoon on a closure order for the La Burreta bar west of Twin Falls was postponed until next week because the defense attorney is involved with another case.

An order was obtained early this week by the Twin Falls County Commissioners and the sheriff's office to revoke the bar's license as of Dec. 20 following a shooting incident in the tavern in which two men were injured.

Surviving, besides her husband, are two daughters, Sharon, Dobban, of Filer, and Becky Griffith of Fairbanks, Alaska; a son, Larry, of Filer; two sisters, Bernice Collings of Jerome and Mrs. Homer (Vera) White of Twin Falls; a brother, Horace Smith of Filer; and five grandchildren. She was preceded in death by a brother, a sister and her parents.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday at the First United Methodist Church in Filer with Rev. Grace Drake officiating.

Five bridges going up round Twin Falls area

TWIN FALLS — Five small bridges in the Twin Falls Highway District are now under construction by Thornton Construction Company.

Persons who use the bridges prior to their removal for construction projects. Anyone with questions is urged to contact the district office at 1231 Highland Ave. E.

Work is under way at this time because it can only be done while water is out of the creeks and coulees after the irrigation season is completed.

The bridges include one over Rock Creek, seven miles south of Hansen and one-fourth mile east; another one-half mile north and two miles east of Hoffer; a bridge four miles east and three and one-fourth miles south of East Five Points, crossing the Perrine Coulee.

Others are located four miles east and three and one-fourth miles south of East Five Points, also on the Perrine Coulee and the final one, a mile east and four and three-fourths miles south of Kimberly across a coulee.

Work on all five will be completed in the near future, depending on weather conditions, Dayley said. He said there will be some inconvenience to the public during construction.

Dayley said efforts are made by highway district personnel to contact persons who use the bridges prior to their removal for construction projects. Anyone with questions is urged to contact the district office at 1231 Highland Ave. E.

Repaired toys still available

TWIN FALLS — More than 300 children in the Twin Falls area will know Santa Claus has not forgotten them, thanks to the Salvation Army Toy Shop.

The volunteer toy shop, in which various community groups helped, repair, mend and gift wrap toys for needy families, Thursday provided a total of 612 toys for 306 children.

Ohioan makes direct move on inflation

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Ohio legislator John A. Galbraith believes in taking direct action against mankind's nemesis.

QUESTION . . .

My husband died as the result of a service-connected injury. Is there a time limit upon my eligibility for a Veterans' widow's educational allowance?

ANSWER . . .
The educational benefits law for unmarried widows of servicemen who died of service-connected injuries became effective December 1, 1968. If your husband died before that date, your entitlement expires December 1, 1976.

If your husband passed away after December 1, 1968, you are eligible for benefits for eight years from the date of his death. Participation in this program is in addition to any government indemnity payments will be allowed as otherwise payable as the result of the servicemen's death.

Yes, there is divorce in communist China and reasons too.

Client asks if married couples can get divorced in the Peoples Republic of China. Carl lingers. Most frequent cause of same. No. 1. husband refuses to help around the house No. 2. husband refuses to treat wife as equal. Our Love and War man is reviewing this report to determine how matrimonial problems there differ from those here, if at all.

FASTEST GROWING

Q. "What's the fastest growing city in the U.S.?"

A. Last I heard it was Anchorage, Alaska, up 42 percent since 1971. Huntington Beach, Calif., is second, with Virginia Beach, Va., third. Don't know what else they have in common except they're all on the water.

Q. "The mother spider teaches the baby spider how to spin a web, right?"

A. That can't be right. The mother spider dies before her eggs are hatched. Those baby spiders just know how to spin webs, that's all.

NO WINE

There was a time during the 1600s in Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, when it was against the law for people who lived in wooden houses to drink wine. A fire after an earthquake had just knocked out the city. The ordinance-makers thought they could eliminate future fires by eliminating wooden houses. They were pretty sure that the prohibition against wine would do the trick.

To the old English, a hog was not a pig, but a sheep. In good times, the herder sheared his hog partially. In hard times, he cleared his hog wholly. Our Language man says he believes that's where we get the ancient expression "to the whole hog." It may believe it.

Gem spending limit proposed

BOISE (UPI) — A state Senate joint resolution which calls for a constitutional amendment to limit state spending has been prefiled by Sen. Dean VanEngelen, R-Burley.

The resolution would require the state, after adjustment by a growth and inflation factor, to limit spending to the amount of the previous fiscal year's appropriations.

VanEngelen's measure would allow for an emergency suspension, not to exceed one year, and also provide for the return of excess state tax revenue to taxpayers.

Federal funds, unemployment compensation money and money transferred between units of government where the original funds were appropriated within the limitation would be exempt from the measure.

Other items also not subject to the amendment would include public school income fund and endowment fund money, as well as contracts, grants or for a purpose specified by the contractor or donor.

The growth and inflation factor "shall be expressed as a percentage of annual change in the moving average for the most recent three years that information is available of the total personal income of the state as provided by law," the resolution says.

"For any year in which the growth and inflation factor increases by 5 percent or more, such factor shall be decreased by 10 percent of the increase."

A one-fiscal-year emergency suspension of the limit would evolve upon a declaration by the governor and two-thirds approval of the Legislature.

Under the amendment, new programs could be started only with specific state appropriations to defray the program's entire first-year cost and the state could not reduce the percentage of revenue payments to local governments.

"Any unexpended or unallocated state tax revenues in the general account remaining with the state treasurer at the end of the fiscal year which exceed 1 percent of that year's general account budget and for which no lawful expenditure exists must be returned to the taxpayers, as provided by law," the resolution says.

Utility-rate increase for research rejected

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission Friday denied Intermountain Gas Co. and Washington Water Power Co. a combined $74,000 rate boost to pay for research and development by the Gas Research Institute.

The companies wanted the increase to help pay GRI bills passed on to them by the Northern Tier Pipeline Corp. The bills have been authorized by the Energy Regulatory Commission.

The PUC said the GRI primarily is interested in developing gas resources at a time of decreasing natural gas demand in Idaho the increase would not be warranted.

Also, the PUC said it rejected the request because the GRI has no plans for projects that would benefit Idaho gas users.

The PUC recently granted a request by Idaho's electric utilities to raise rates to enable them to participate in Electric Power Research Institute research and development.

Unlike GRI work, the PUC said, EPRRI projects are beneficial to Idaho's energy customers at a time when demand for electricity is rising.

According to GSI rate schedules approved by the Energy Regulatory Commission, Washington Water Power and Intermountain Gas rates would have jumped another $124,000 by early next decade.

School standards sought

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Board of Education would be required to develop proficiency tests and prescribe the minimum standards for public school students if a bill prefiled Friday to the state Senate becomes law.

Sen. Dane Watkins' legislation would require basic reading and writing proficiency tests and outline minimum achievement levels on tests required for a student's high school graduation.

If approved by the Legislature, the requirements in the Idaho Falls Republican's bill would affect all persons in Idaho who apply for high school graduation after Sept. 1, 1979.

Ore rate increase denied

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Utah Public Service Commission has tentatively approved Union Pacific Railroad Company's request for a 5.5 percent rate increase on iron ore it hauls from southwestern Utah iron mines to the U.S. Steel Company Geneva Works in Utah County.

The shipments are from the Desert Mount, Iron Mountain and Iron

Springs mines to the plant at Geneva, Utah. Union Pacific filed for the pass-through rate increase to offset higher labor and material costs.

U.S. Steel has agreed to pay the higher rate, but the PSC has given other parties 20 days to file protests to the temporary increase. If no protests are received by the commission, the new rate becomes permanent Jan. 10, 1979.
