Noise makers winding up to wind down

TWIN FALLS — Cries of "Happy New Year" will ring out in Twin Falls as usual Sunday at New Year's Eve celebrations, but there may be fewer and more subdued voices joining in cheering.

Because Idaho law prohibits licensed bars and taverns from selling liquor to the public on Sundays, patrons will be drinking beer and wine only.

Twin Falls County Sheriff Paul Corder said Idaho law prohibits the sale of liquor on Sundays on certain holidays except in the event of non-public activities such as conventions, receptions and banquets closed to the public.

While some bars and lounges are closing Sunday as usual, others will be open for the New Year's Eve celebrations with some special parties and entertainment planned.

The Pepper Tree Lounge in the Blue Lakes Inn will be serving its own recipes for mixed drinks using wine and champagne instead of liquor.

Several other bars will be open Sunday for the special occasion, including The Brand, which will feature music by the Cobalt Blue Band.

The Alley also will be open for the New Year's Eve observance.

Freddie's Bar is one that is normally open on Sunday and will be doing business as usual with beer and wine sales New Year's Eve.

Many Twin Falls and other Magic Valley residents will be driving to Jackpot to celebrate the new year. There is no limit on liquor sales in Nevada and party-goers can imbibe as much as they like for as long as they like.

Unless someone in the party stays sober to drive home, the driver may end up arrested for driving while intoxicated. Sgt. Bob Wright of the Idaho State Police said all available men will be working through the night New Year's Eve. Roads between Idaho and Nevada will be high on the list of priority assignments.

Corder said extra deputies will be on duty Sunday night and his entire force will be on call, if needed. City police will also be on duty to encourage observance of traffic regulations.

At Cactus Pete's casino, special entertainment will feature the Las Vegas-type show of comedian "Shlop" and her troop.

At the Jackpot casinos, customers will get horns and other favors, and special buffet and dinner menus will be offered.

In Twin Falls, special parties will be held in most major lounges. The Holiday Inn will feature live music and holiday entertainment. The Turf Club will have a New Year's Eve party on Saturday night and will be closed on Sunday.

State liquor store manager William Fohlman, of Twin Falls, said liquor sales are good but no better than normal around the holidays. He said liquor supplies for both Christmas and New Year's are ordered in advance.

"We normally order by computer. The computer figures out about what our weekly needs will be and we receive the amount. When the Christmas and New Year's holidays arrive, each store puts in a separate order to cover what its needs are expected to be," Fohlman said.

Wendell gets a bland, new street name

WENDELL — Slaughterhouse Road will no longer be an embarrassment to the citizens of Wendell.

The Wendell City Council took action Thursday night to give the road an official name and its own street sign.

Slaughterhouse Road will now be called simply F Street.

Although alphabetically in order, the two-block long road is not actually located where F Street should be on the plat. But it's close enough that the City Council is going to call it that.

Confused?

There is a simple explanation, according to the council.

F Street was never dedicated to the city as an official street because in its place was a railroad right-of-way.

By that right-of-way and to the east leading to it that became known as Slaughterhouse Road.

The city fathers decided it was too embarrassing to give someone directions to Slaughterhouse Road. So, to simplify things, the road was given a measure of respectability and a proper street name: F Street.

Shah to leave Iran; relatives fly to L.A.

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, trapped in a bloody nationwide revolt that has plunged Iran into chaos, has agreed to leave Iran temporarily and hand over his powers to a regency council, highly placed sources said Friday.

Sources close to the shah said that on Friday he asked Shahpour Bakhtiar, 63, leader of the anti-shah National Front political party to form a civilian government to replace that of Prime Minister Gen. Gholam Reza Azhari.

"The shah is not abdicating," a source close to the palace said emphatically. "He may just be leaving Iran temporarily."

The official spokesman of the shah's imperial court denied this morning that the shah had agreed to leave the country or that there were any plans for his departure, but the highly placed sources insisted the shah would leave temporarily.

The shah's mother, other members of his immediate family and several government officials flew to Los Angeles Friday night aboard an Iranian air force jet, reportedly to stay with the shah's sister, Princess Ashraf, in Beverly Hills. Extremely tight security surrounded the entourage.

In Paris, Prof. Mohammed Mokri, a member of the National Front, said Friday the dissident Iranian movement in Paris, including religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, had been informed by contacts in Tehran that "the shah already has left for leaving tonight."

(However, in Washington, a spokesman for the Iranian Embassy said he was authorized by Ambassador Ardeshtir Zahedi, who was in Tehran, to officially deny the report that the shah was planning to leave the country. The spokesman said Zahedi had personally spoken with the shah Friday.)

The shah, 59, met Bakhtiar in surprise talks Thursday and offered him the premiership after Gholam Hossein Sadeqi, an anti-dictator premier for the past two weeks, gave up his attempts to form a government.

The highly placed sources said Bakhtiar presented the shah with a series of proposals:

• That the shah leave the country on a temporary basis, investing his powers in a regency council composed of elder politicians;

• That the current parliament, elected in 1975 under a short-lived, one-party system, be dissolved;

• That the dread SAVAK secret police be disbanded;

• That the Iranian army forces be entrusted in the civilian government, with appropriate parliamentary intervention.

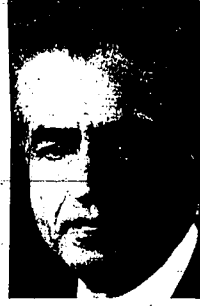

Political sources said a national day of mourning called for Saturday by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, 78, the exiled leader of the majority Muslim Shiite sect and the shah's No. 1 enemy, could pose a "real danger" to the transition planned by the shah.

"If there is bloodshed again tomorrow (Saturday) it would really make it difficult for Bakhtiar and the shah to enter into an accommodation falling short of the shah's outright resignation," a high political source said.

The hardline National Front headed by Kacim Sanjabi, who met recently with Khomeini in Paris, has called for the shah's outright abdication but Bakhtiar failed to echo his leader.

It would be the second time the shah has left the country under political pressure. On Aug. 16, 1953, at the height of his struggle with the late Premier Mohammed Mossadeq, he flew to Rome. But he was back on his throne six days later, after demonstrators paraded through Tehran demanding his return.

U.S. ships on standby in Indian Ocean

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States, keeping close watch on the volatile situation in Iran, Friday ordered an aircraft carrier and support ships to a standby position in approaches to the Indian Ocean.

A special task force at the State Department considered what U.S. action might be needed in the Persian Gulf area, including contingency plans for evacuation of Americans remaining in Iran.

President Carter was kept abreast of the situation at Camp David, Md., where he is planning to stay through New Year's Eve.

There was no immediate White House or State Department comment on news that the shah of Iran had agreed to leave the country in order to defuse widespread disorder.

Administration officials said the carrier Constellation and its support vessels had been ordered to move westward from port at Subic Bay in the Philippines.

This would put them much closer in case they might be needed for a U.S. show of naval force in the Persian Gulf area.

The State Department refused to comment on such a possibility. But it again charged the Soviet Union with inflaming the Iranian situation with stepped-up propaganda broadcasts in violation of super-power understandings not to interfere.

Department spokesman Hodding Carter said a special task force, led by Undersecretary of State David Newsom, "is considering the situation in all its possibilities. What we seek is action by all parties to bring stability to Iran."

Carter said the starting point of the Newsom group's deliberations was the administration's policy of continued outstanding support for Shah

Mohammed Reza. Administration officials said Thursday the United States is considering sending a U.S. naval force, including an aircraft carrier, to the Persian Gulf as a show of American military force.

Carter, asked if such a plan was being considered, said "No comment," adding there has been no redeployment of U.S. naval forces in the area.

He said the Newsom group is "dealing with contingencies" and there are always contingency plans for the evacuation of American citizens in such a situation. However, he added, "We are not planning any evacuation now."

The State Department also raised new charges the Soviet Union has stepped up the level of its rhetoric in broadcast beamed at Iran.

Acoustical experts say a second gunman fired at JFK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Acoustical experts said Friday they agreed a long-forgotten tape recording indicates a second gunman fired the fatal shot at President John F. Kennedy at the moment of his assassination in Dallas.

The testimony by three experts, one of whom changed his mind since testifying last September, was a dramatic finale to the two-year, $5 million investigation by a House committee into the slayings of Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The chairman of the House Assassinations Committee, Rep. Louie Stokes, D-Ohio, called an executive session of panel Friday night to consider its final conclusions and recommendations in light of the latest testimony.

Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., chairman of the subcommittee that investigated the Kennedy case, talked to reporters after leaving the executive meeting but refused to discuss what the final conclusions and recommendations would be. He said the committee was struggling with the problem of what to do "with the loose ends of evidence."

The committee's proposed draft report had concluded on three shots were fired at the president, all from the Texas School Book Depository.

If the "fourth shot" finding is accepted, it was understood the committee would have no alternative but to recommend by a House Department be informed of a second gunman at large. Justice would then turn over the evidence to the FBI, which still keeps "open" files on the Kennedy and King cases.

Stokes promised the committee would wind up its work as ordered by Congress at the end of the year and issue its final report early next week. The main witness in Friday's emergency public hearing was Mark Weiss, a Queens College, N.Y., professor, who conducted extensive tests of a tape recording made in Dealey Plaza in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, when Kennedy was killed. Stokes warned Weiss of the "enormous impact" his theory could have on the committee's final conclusions.

Weiss testified "there is a 95 percent or greater likelihood" the tape contains the sounds of four shots, the third fired from a "grassy knoll" in the Plaza ahead of the presidential motorcade.

In a final statement, Stokes said the committee "has presented evidence clearly pointing to the identity of the assassins in both cases."

"The committee has developed evidence of the outlines of a likely conspiracy in the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and, if it is accepted, the evidence heard by the committee today would point to a conspiracy in the assassination of President Kennedy," Stokes said.

"I recognize, of course, there are still loose ends in both of these investigations that I had hoped our work might have tied down. I regret that these matters are still outstanding."

Blakey added, "Ultimately, the committee found film coverage of the motorcade in Dealey Plaza showing a motorcycle on Houston Street several car lengths behind the presidential limousine as it turned in front of the Texas School Book Depository from Houston onto Elm, the place that the acoustics project suggested it would be."

Weiss said the shot from the knoll was probably fired by a rifle, not a pistol, but said he could not determine in what precise direction it was aimed.

"There is a 95 percent or greater likelihood that the sounds of four gunshots are present on the tape and the third shot came from the direction of the so-called grassy knoll in Dealey Plaza," he told the crowded hearing room.

"There is no way of knowing if it hit the president, or fell well below the target or beyond it," Weiss added.

Stokes said, "I'm sure you scientists are aware of the enormous impact. If the committee accepts your tests then the committee accepts the fact that on the day of Nov. 22, 1963 there were two gunmen in Dealey Plaza," thus creating "the legal assumption of a conspiracy."

Blakey noted there had been conflicting reports of eyewitnesses who were in Dealey Plaza, including some who thought they heard shots from the knoll or saw gunsmoke rising from a fence at the top of it.

"But the fact remains," Blakey said, "that no one gives credible testimony that he saw anyone with a rifle around the fence at the time.

Korean payoffs unproven

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ethics Committee said Friday it believes South Korean ambassador Sung Boun Cho and the Korean Central Intelligence Agency gave some $10 million each gifts to help their support, but concluded there is no firm proof because the payoffs were hidden.

The committee also said the fact report on the payoffs was not made into the House report because the Seoul government had not provided the 1972 and 1973 annual intelligence estimates. The committee said it will obtain information on the payoffs from the State Department and the Justice Department.

The committee said the payoffs were given to Cho and the CIA to help them get the South Korean government to support the United States in the Vietnam War. United jet probably ran out of fuel

By ROBERTA ULRICH
PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A top federal investigator said Friday a lack of fuel was the probable cause of the crash of a United Airlines DC-8 with 165 people aboard.

Ten people, including four members of a Vancouver, Wash., family and the wife and infant daughter of a Yugoslavian professor, were killed in Thursday night's accident near Portland International Airport.

Elwood Driver, vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, said there was some indication of fuel at the crash site, but it is reasonable to assume that it (the crash) occurred because of a lack of fuel.

Driver said some of the fuel tanks were still buried under the wreckage cockpit of the Portland-bound plane and it will be some time before they can be examined.

The board's investigation team believes the lack of fuel may have eliminated the possibility of a fire, a belief echoed by firemen at the scene.

In his last radio message, the pilot, who survived the crash, radioed that his engines were "flaming out" — had stopped operating. Driver said that may have been started by a lack of fuel, as it shows no indication of being lit.

Professor's family killed in jet crash

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The wife and infant daughter of a Yugoslavian college professor were among the 10 persons killed in the crash of a DC-8 jetliner they were on only because of fog and missed connection.

The professor, Zlatko Pepeonik, 43, head of the Department of Geography at the University of Zagreb in Yugoslavia, survived.

He was en route with his wife, Jasna, and 5-month-old daughter, Anna, to Portland to spend nine months on the faculty of the Central European Studies Center at Portland State University, said Dr. Thomas M. Poulsen, center director and a longtime friend of Pepeonik.

He also was to serve as a consultant to the School of Urban Studies at Portland State under a grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Pepeonik was in satisfactory condition at Portland Adventist Hospital with fractures of both wrists and a fractured rib.

Poulsen, who spent the night at the hospital with Pepeonik, said the family was sitting in the first row of the tourist section of the plane. The baby was wrapped in her father's fur jacket and placed on the floor just before the crash.

Poulsen said the Pepeoniks had been scheduled to leave for Portland Dec. 26.

"Fog in London kept him in Ljubljana," Poulsen said. "The next day we arranged for him to board a Yugoslavian flight directly to New York and connect with one to Portland. That would have put him here on the 27th."

The passengers of flight 173 tell their stories

By TIMOTHY KENNY
PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — "The thing that tipped it off was the stewardess, some of them looked real pale," said Peter Love of San Francisco. "I knew something was wrong. I picked it up in their faces."

Love, a teacher at a San Francisco Catholic boys school, had left Tehran, Iran, after four months, and was aboard in first-class United Airlines flight 173 that crashed Thursday in northeast Portland, killing at least 10 persons on the aircraft.

"I had sort of a close call in Iran," said Love. "And then I come out of this alive. I feel somebody is trying to tell me something," he said, smiling.

"I'm sure I was the first one off the plane," said Love, adding that when the pilot started to put the wheels down, "the plane just huge jolt. It really killed the wing. It was a big, heavy jolt."

Shortly after, the plane carrying 177 passengers and eight crew members fell from the sky, ripping into two vacant houses before sliding to a stop in a wooded lot, nine miles east of downtown Portland.

"There was a series of three or four bumps," said passenger George Lindeman of Portland, traveling with his wife and four children. "Just little ones. Then there were bounding jolts and suddenly I was forced into the seat ahead of me. And then it stepped so suddenly everybody was surprised."

Like Love and others, Deborah Friedrich, 22, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was scratched falling through trees.

"That was the worst... falling through the pine trees."

Lindeman said, "There was a second or two of panic and then everybody realized we were OK."

Suits filed against airline

DENVER (UPI) — A Steamboat Springs, Colo., mother and her 8-month-old son, both survivors of the crash of a Rocky Mountain Airways commuter flight in the Colorado Rockies earlier this month, are among four persons seeking a total of $17.5 million in damages in separate suits against the airline.

The suits were filed in Denver District Court Thursday claiming the Rocky Mountain Airways plane was improperly equipped to fly Dec. 4 in severe blizzard conditions.

The pilot of the de Havilland Twin Otter and a passenger were killed as a result of injuries suffered in the crash in a snowy mountain clearing in North Park, northeast of the Steamboat Springs, Colo., ski resort. Twenty others were hospitalized.

Marjorie Kotts, 31, asked the court for $3 million in compensatory and $10 million in punitive damages.

Convict helped passengers

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A passenger aboard the jetliner that crashed lives risked his life to help survivors but disappeared before anyone could thank him — much to the chagrin of law officers.

Kim E. Campbell, 27, was an Oregon State Penitentiary fugitive being returned in the custody of a Corrections Officer Roger Seed.

Campbell, according to witnesses, played a major role in assisting crash survivors before his disappearance.

Campbell and Seed were seated in the back. They were asked by the stewardesses shortly before the crash, Seed said, to assist at an emergency exit.

"I was in charge of opening the rear emergency door," Campbell volunteered to assist people down the slide," he said. "But the slide, which automatically ejects from the plane when the door is pushed open, failed to function because the plane was wedged in trees."

Consequently, Seed said, Campbell stayed inside and lifted people down to the ground eight feet below.

Seed said Campbell stayed on the plane until all passengers were helped off. Campbell then helped the guard back on the plane to make sure no other passengers were still on board.

Then "he disappeared into the crowd," Seed said.

Police warned about jamming

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's police departments have been warned to stop jamming popular dashboard and windshield-mounted radar detectors used by many motorists, an official of the Federal Communications Commission said Friday.

Arlan Van Doorn, deputy chief of the FCC's safety and special services bureau said some police departments were advised a year ago to quit using modified obsolete radar units to jam the detectors.

But in a formal notice this week, the commission specifically warned police departments about using a new device now on the market because it is, in effect, an unlicensed transmitting device.

Van Doorn said the commission acted when it became known the new equipment was being bought for traffic enforcement. He did not name the device's manufacturer or any specific police departments.

"We learned that its use was as an effective jammer to detectors," Van Doorn said. "It is a transmitter. There are other things that operate on those frequencies that would cause interference problems. You've got alarm systems, telemetry circuits, production lines, intrusion lines and other uses on high frequencies."

Many states have laws against motorists using radar detectors, and law enforcement agencies have protested the FCC action.

"The International Association of Police Chiefs have condemned the FCC for the notice we put out. We get it from both sides," said Edwin Schafer of the FCC's chief engineer's office.

Schafer said the new commercial device originally was approved as a warning instrument for highway maintenance crews. When a car approaches on a curve or hill, the device triggers an alarm and gives the crews time to get off the road.

"It's not a police radar. It's a field disturbance device," Schafer said. "It's a relatively cheap device, a lot less cost than a police radar. They could have them on constantly.

Meat imports to increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will increase meat imports by 5.2 percent in 1979, the Agriculture Department announced Friday.

Imports of fresh, chilled and frozen beef, veal, mutton and goat meat will be 1,570 million pounds.

In 1978, the import level was 1,492 million pounds, with greater imports during the last half of the year.

In June the president had instructed domestic livestock producers by raising the imported beef limit from 1.3 billion pounds to 1.5 billion pounds.

Imports were allowed because U.S. cattle herds are expected to be some 17 percent below the 132-million-head peak reached in 1975. As a result, domestic beef prices have soared.

New Year's watch begins

By United Press International

Police beefed up patrols on the nation's major highways Friday, keeping a special watch for tipsy drivers as millions of motorists set off for New Year's revelries.

The National Safety Council estimated 350 to 430 persons could be killed and another 16,000 to 20,000 could suffer disabling injuries in traffic accidents during the three-day holiday — which began at 6 p.m. local time Friday and ends at midnight Monday. Last year, 450 persons were killed and about 15,700 were injured in New Year's weekend traffic mishaps.

Snow and freezing rain complicated holiday weekend travel from the Rockies to the Midwest.

"The drinking driver is our main concern and our officers have been told to keep a special lookout for them," a Wisconsin state police spokesman said.

A spokesman for the Illinois State Police said patrols on the most heavily traveled routes will be increased and officers will be especially watching for "people who celebrate too much and try to drive."

"National Safety Council President Vincent Tofany said the nation's No. 1 highway problem is "not just a matter of the chronic alcoholic behind the wheel."

Gacy body count climbs to 27

DES PLAINES, Ill. (UPI) — A defense attorney Thursday sought dismissal of the only murder charge against suspected mass sex-killer John Wayne Gacy, who was hauled from the courtroom and lay strapped to his bed in a jail hospital.

While lawyers argued Gacy's case at a preliminary hearing, investigators sifted through the mud beneath Gacy's suburban home and found six more bodies, bringing the total body count to 27. Gacy had given authorities a crudely drawn map of his property showing 27 gravesites.

The search was set to resume Saturday.

Gacy, charged with murder in the slaying of 15-year-old Robert Piest of Des Plaines and suspected in the slayings of as many as 32 teen-age boys and young men, had been expected in court for his preliminary hearing in the Piest case.

But Cook County Circuit Court Judge Richard Fitzgerald said word shortly before the hearing that, for security reasons, Gacy would be kept in his room at Cermack Hospital, where he reportedly attempted suicide Saturday.

Gacy, who has a history of heart trouble, has been strapped to his bed to prevent any attempt to escape or commit suicide.

As 200 spectators jammed the Des Plaines courtroom, defense attorney Sam Amirante asked Cook County Circuit Court Associate Justice John L. White to dismiss the murder charge against Gacy. He said the charge could not stand because Piest's body has not been found.

The motion was continued until Jan. 10 and the case was assigned to Fitzgerald.

Investigators armed with trowels and garden tools continued the grisly search for bodies in the muddy crawl space beneath the Gacy home in Chicago's northwest suburban Norwood Park Township.

Gacy, 36, a convicted sodomist and part-time clown, also has been linked to a body removed from the Des Plaines River last month and investigators were trying to determine if he is linked to yet another body recovered from the river Thursday.

Investigators said Gacy told them he killed the Piest boy and dumped his body — and four or five others — in the Des Plaines River.

Piest's parents, brother and sister sat 30 feet from White as he explained why Gacy was not being allowed in the courtroom.

Amirante, who has said it will be impossible for Gacy to get a fair trial, objected to the decision to bar the defendant from the courtroom.

"This action was certainly uncalled for. It's a tragedy," Amirante said. "This man ... deserved the right to be here in this court today."

White approved a motion by Amirante that police and officials be prevented from releasing any prejudicial information regarding Gacy and that a defense representative be allowed at the Gacy home during excavations.

Judge Fitzgerald, contacted later, said Gacy can be transferred from Cermack Hospital to his Chicago courtroom through a tunnel, which will require much less security.

He also said that because the Des Plaines court room is close to Gacy's home, his life might be threatened if he appeared in the suburban courtroom.

Fitzgerald said Gacy cannot be indicted on any other murder charges unless the bodies found under his home are identified.

Investigators have found "mementos" in the Gacy home: drivers' licenses, class rings and other items — of young men they suspect may be lying under Gacy's 20-inch crawl space, but none of the excavated bodies have been identified.

Is the sun rising? New cooperative efforts pledged to save Cleveland

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Business and community leaders pledged new cooperative efforts Friday to rescue Cleveland from default and city lawmakers voiced optimism about solving the city's financial problems.

The city narrowly escaped labor turmoil when Mayor Dennis Kucinich, in an abrupt turn of events, Thursday canceled most of 2,000 layoffs of city workers planned for next week. The layoffs would have cut police and firefighter forces nearly in half.

The mayor cited assurances by Cleveland Trust, which holds the largest share of $15.5 million in notes the city defaulted on, as the reason for calling off the layoffs, at least temporarily.

City Council President George Forbes, a bitter Kucinich enemy, said the move gave the city "some breathing room."

"We lower our voices and we keep our heads cool and I'm sure that we can solve this problem," Forbes said of Cleveland's finances. "During the next couple of days I'm going to work with the banks and the financial people quietly."

"I think we can see the sun rising."

Another Kucinich foe, City Council Majority Leader Basil Russo, also lauded the mayor's decision and called for cooperation — a characteristic notably lacking so far between council and Kucinich.

"I'm pleased with Kucinich's action and hope we can now begin to work together toward solving the city's grave financial problems," said Russo.

About 40 community and business leaders Thursday created a special committee to map a plan for attacking the city's money problems. The mechanism for follow-through on the general ill of the city and coming up with some solutions to the problems.

"I think that rather than everybody sitting back and moping and moaning, they've taken the bull by the horns rather than the problems. It is encouraging."

Dennis Kucinich listens to save-Cleveland proposals

Dobrea, vice president of the Greater Cleveland Growth Association. "The important thing that came out of the meeting is that they set up a mechanism for follow-through on the general ill of the city and coming up with some solutions to the problems.

Kucinich canceled 1,600 of the 2,000 planned layoffs until a February 27 vote on whether to raise the city income tax by a half percent and whether to sell the city's debt-ridden Municipal Light Plant.

He cautioned that 400 layoffs still were "unavoidable" and said his administration would restudy where the cuts should be made and reissue pink slips January 5 or thereafter.

Chrysler rises sticker prices

DETROIT (UPI) — Following the lead of General Motors and Ford, Chrysler Corp. Friday raised sticker prices on its mid-size and full-size model cars by an average $65, or 1.2 percent.

But Chrysler held the line on its newly introduced Omni and Honda subcompact models to stay competitive with Ford and GM's more fuel-efficient models.

Talks with 'outraged' Taiwan fail

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Ching-kuo said Friday Taiwan was "outraged" by President Carter's switch of recognition to China.

Negotiations on a new relationship failed to bring any breakthrough.

Announcing what appeared to be the only concrete achievement after two days of talks ended, government spokesman James Song said U.S. and Taiwan embassy staffs will continue to operate until the end of February despite the break in relations beginning Jan. 1.

But he declined to elaborate on what capacity the staffs will operate.

Meanwhile contacts will continue, he said.

During the negotiations, Taiwan officials insisted that future relations with the United States be on a government-to-government "level while American representatives sought "unofficial" contact.

The matter was left unresolved as the U.S. delegation suddenly flew back to Washington.

The mission members, led by deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, used a back road to an air base, leaving behind their motorcycle escort and surprised reporters who were told the group would not leave until the night.

Officials said that during a dramatic unscheduled meeting with Chiang, the Taiwan president said the people and government of Taiwan were "outraged" at Carter's decision to switch recognition to Peking and Washington's failure to consult Taipei until hours before the announcement.

Song outlined the Taiwan stand on a future relationship. He said, "To facilitate the continuation and expansion of all relations between our two countries, it is necessary that government-to-government level mechanisms be set up in Taipei and Washington."

"This model alone can serve as the framework on which the future relations of our two countries can be constructed."

Song announced, "The staff embassy members in Washington and Taipei will function until the end of February. Further negotiations will continue. This will assist in the transition and assure that communication is maintained."

Christopher said the five hours of talks Thursday and Friday "made a good start."

"Both of our peoples have benefited from close cultural, commercial and other relationships in the past. We expect and hope that these will continue," he said.

Christopher and fellow delegates were the target of thousands of hysterical demonstrators when they arrived in Taipei. Protestors smashed windows in the Americans' limousines and pelted the cars with eggs.

Friday only a handful of protestors milled around the Foreign Ministry under the watchful eye of white-helmeted military policemen with night sticks.

Goldwater says Carter lied, promises fight

Sen. Goldwater embraces Taiwan Ambassador James Shen at end of meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Barry Goldwater accused President Carter today of lying to the American people and to Congress, and promised a battle over U.S. China policy would be fought in the next session of Congress.

Goldwater, leading the fight against the administration's decision to recognize the Peking government and to terminate the mutual defense treaty with Taiwan, went to the Taiwan embassy to say farewell to departing Ambassador James Shen.

"This is a very sad day in American history, because the ambassador is leaving because an American president acted in an illegal way," Goldwater told reporters at the embassy. "I hope to see the day when it will never happen."

Goldwater conceded that the fight to overturn the China decision is already lost in Congress. "Given the makeup of the foreign relations committee." But he has started legal action to reverse the decision to end the mutual defense treaty.

He also said he would continue to fight a kind of rear guard legislative war against the administration. "We can be stingy when it comes to funds for anything to do with Red China," Goldwater said, "and we can be generous when it comes to giving arms to Taiwan."

Showing a flash of anger, Goldwater said, "The president not only broke the law (in ending the mutual defense treaty), he thumbed his nose at the Constitution and defied the Senate. That alone will excite the American people, I think."

It's another case of the president telling a lie. I want to keep him honest."

The future battle over terminating the treaty may be fought around a gap in the Constitution, with the congressional conservatives led by Goldwater on one side and the executive branch on the other.

The fact the Constitution has no procedure for ending a treaty was noted by the State Department in a legal memorandum made public Thursday.

Conservatives, led by Goldwater, Barry Goldwater, and a policy group, the Heritage Foundation, contend that a treaty is equivalent to a statute.

"Therefore, Goldwater wrote in a booklet distributed by the foundation, "As the president alone cannot repeal a statute, so he alone cannot repeal a treaty."

However, a directly conflicting view was offered by the State Department legal adviser, Herbert Hansell.

Hansell writes that the 1954 treaty itself, which was approved by the Senate and which contains a one-year termination clause, is the legal basis for the president's action.

As president, he cites 12 treaties that were canceled by presidents, beginning with James Madison and including Dwight Eisenhower, Lyndon Johnson and John F. Kennedy.

However, in the memo, Hansell concedes there is no specific support for the action to be found in the Constitution:

"The Constitution does not specifically address the question of treaty termination. The subject was not discussed at the Constitutional Convention (of 1787) and seems not to have received much attention in the early years of the Republic."

However, he quotes Alexander Hamilton, in a letter written in 1793, as saying, "Treaties can be made by the president and Senate jointly, but their activity may be continued or suspended by the president alone."

Peking prepares to celebrate cementing of U.S. relations

PEKING (UPI) — There were Christmas trees in Peking and officials gave New Year's receptions for foreigners Friday as the Chinese capital took on western overtones on the day of celebrating diplomatic relations with the United States Monday.

U.S. Ambassador Leonard Woodcock struggled with the logistics of fitting more than 200 guests into his cramped official residence for a party celebrating the big event.

The historic reception will be held New Year's Day when the Chinese-American normalization proclaimed jointly Dec. 16 by President Carter and Chinese Premier Hua Kuo-feng takes effect.

American Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, China's prime mover in the negotiations, is expected to attend, an official of the U.S. Liaison Office in Peking said. A list of guests has yet been received from the Chinese government.

Liaison Office said the party will be the biggest the office has ever given in terms of the importance of the Chinese guests since the facility was opened in 1972.

It will be a purely Chinese-American party with no guests from other foreign missions in Peking invited.

The Chinese capital Friday showed many signs of the new foreign policy that will open up a huge economic relationship between China and the West world.

Privacy issue hits Carter

N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Carter has been advised by his top staff that private institutions such as hospitals, insurance companies and credit card companies should be prohibited from disclosing the information they have about individual Americans, except in certain specific circumstances.

If the recommendation is accepted by Carter and acted upon by Congress, state legislatures and the affected industries, it would curb the amount of information about the private lives of Americans that now flows through the computerized files of many businesses and law enforcement agencies.

The broad recommendation that Americans should have a legally enforceable expectation of privacy in regard to many of the records concerning their lives and spending habits was sent to Carter after a year of study by a special White House committee headed by Stuart E. Eizenstat, assistant to the president for domestic affairs, and Juanita M. Krebs, secretary of commerce.

The recommendation was contained in a brief Presidential Decision Memorandum which had become known as "Baby Blue" because of the size and color of a far larger, 207-page supporting document that had gained the nickname of "Big Blue."

The privacy issue is difficult to resolve because it sometimes brings into conflict worthy goals and principles. Scientists undertaking important health research sometimes seek medical records containing personal information that no individual would want to be made known. Privacy restrictions can impede policemen trying to solve important criminal cases.

The administration's privacy study was ordered by the president in 1977 after the Privacy Protection Commission recommended 16 legislative and regulatory changes to give better protection to individual citizens from unnecessary snooping.

Both Baby Blue and Big Blue will serve as the foundation for Carter's special message on privacy — expected soon after Congress returns to Washington next month — and the related legislative proposals and administrative changes. The New York Times has obtained a copy of a Nov. 11 draft of Baby Blue that an administration spokesman said was substantially similar to the document sent Carter.

The development of the proposed privacy policy has been subject to strenuous private debate within the government. With some officials from such agencies as the Internal Revenue Service, the Justice Department, the Civil Service Commission and the Office of Management and Budget strongly opposing changes that would limit government access to personal records.

But the criticism is expected to start coming from an entirely different direction — the experts concerned about the present lack of privacy safeguards — when Carter unveils the details of his privacy policy in his forthcoming message to Congress.

The privacy policy recommended to Carter in Baby Blue contained five major elements. They were:

- Record keepers such as insurance companies and credit companies should inform their customers of their information and disclosure practices "and should be obliged to adhere to these statements."
- An individual should be able to see and obtain a copy of "reasonable retrievable records about himself" held by major non-government record keepers.
- An individual should be informed of the basis for an adverse decision in such areas as consumer credit, bank credit, insurance and employment.
- Private record keepers should be "forbidden to disclose information where there is an expectation of confidentiality" except in such circumstances where disclosure is necessary to serve the relationship, necessary to protect the record keeper against fraud by the individual, authorized by the individual or obtained by a government agency "through a process established by law."
- According to a table accompanying the privacy recommendation to the president, the policy committee believed the expectation of confidentiality should apply to consumer credit, bank, insurance, medical and telephone records.

Panama Canal treaty battle continues

N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — When the Senate approved, with just one vote to spare, the second of two Panama Canal treaties on April 18, a relieved Carter administration almost everyone else assumed that the long fight was over.

Administration officials now realize that they face another bitter and perhaps long struggle in Congress, especially the House, to obtain the legislation essential for carrying out the basic treaty, under which Panama will assume control of the canal by the year 2000.

A loose coalition of conservative forces in the House has served notice that it will fight, clause by clause where necessary, to modify bills the administration specialists say must be approved during the first half of 1979 to insure a smooth transition in Panama.

Behind the rising sense of urgency in the White House and the State and Defense Departments is the fear that failure by the United States to meet the deadlines in the treaty could touch off a political explosion in Panama.

In the short run, officials say, it is Americans working for the Panama Canal Company or serving in the armed forces in the Canal Zone who are the main focus of the long delay in obtaining legislation.

The officials fear that skilled Americans working on the canal will leave unless laws promptly establish job security and provisions for retirement as employees of the Joint-United States-Panama commission that will replace the existing Canal Company on Oct. 1.

The Defense Department needs $10 million quickly to construct housing and installations during Panama's dry season, between now and April, for armed forces personnel who must move from the 50 percent of the 533-square-mile Canal Zone that will be turned over to Panama in October.

House conservatives have already tried to block $10.9 million worth of military construction in the Canal Zone that had been authorized by Deputy Defense Secretary Charles W. Duncan under what he called "contingency construction authority" provided by existing law.

And although administration officials expect such parliamentary tactics to be time-consuming and troublesome, they seem to be met with a similar response by Rep. John M. Murphy, D-N.Y., the chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, which handles legislation about interoceanic canals. He will offer his own detailed bill as a substitute for the package of enabling legislation that the administration expects to send to Congress shortly after it reconvenes in mid-January.

The basic objective of Murphy's bill would be to establish much tighter congressional control of canal operations between the time the treaty goes into effect in October and the final turnover to Panamanian control on Dec. 31, 1999.

Rather than exercising considerable autonomy as a U.S. government corporation, the new United States-Panama Canal Commission would be required by Murphy's bill to turn over canal revenues to the Treasury and go to Congress each year for operating expenses and the $50 million to $70 million to be paid to Panama annually under the treaty.

"This would mean a legislative fight each year with members of Congress who still are not reconciled to the ratification of the treaties and the turnover of the canal to Panama," an official said.

Murphy's bill would also continue to make the U.S. secretary of defense responsible for administering and operating the canal, as well as for its defense.

Murphy insisted to a reporter that he was not seeking a confrontation with the administration and pointed to many similarities between his bill and a tentative draft sent to Congress by the State Department. He accused the State Department of having misrepresented his position in a memorandum to the White House.

Administration officials fear that the slightly more conservative cast of the new Congress, the fact that the Panama pact is having to compete for priority with other major foreign policy legislation, and the possibility that it may be handled by four or five different House committees will all contribute to a delay.

Sued and accused of extortion, Susan Alamo is through defending the Christian Foundation

BY ELLEN DEBENPORT
ALMA, Ark. (UPI) — Susan Alamo won't talk any more about the Christian Foundation she and her husband founded 10 years ago. She has defended her cause in courts, in newspapers and on television, and she is through defending or even answering questions about her activities.

Parents have sued to remove their grown children from the church, she has successfully sued to be removed from the church, she has been accused of everything from extorting church members' money to having them believe she dies and is resurrected every weekend.

"It's all lies," Mrs. Alamo said. "It's all for one thing — to destroy freedom of religion in America."

Having heard a reporter was at the Alma Restaurant in Alma, Mrs. Alamo entered the dining room and, without preliminaries, delivered her speech loudly enough that conversation at other tables stopped.

"I don't care what you write about," she said. "I'm not going to sit here and play hypocrisy dickering and answer a bunch of foolish questions. To answer them is to dignify stupidity.

"Stupid questions like 'Why won't you let the members see their parents?'" when we're talking about adult people, wives and husbands with children. You're sitting here in this restaurant and you can see there are no bars on the doors."

She gathered her fur jacket around her shoulders and stood. "So I won't waste your time."

The impromptu meeting had been arranged by a waitress who, like the others on the restaurant staff, is a member of the Foundation. They are a clean-scrubbed lot, mostly in their mid-20s, smiling and polite.

Many of the church members live in Foundation housing at Dyer, a tiny town a few miles from Alma in western Arkansas. In Dyer, too, is their church and Mrs. Alamo's lifelong home.

There also is a branch of the foundation in Sargas, Calif., where it was begun.

In previous interviews, Mrs. Alamo has described the Foundation as a "fundamental Christian group." Living quarters and necessities are provided "for some of the church members, but she deplores the description "commune."

She is also incensed by the word "cult."

"We believe Jesus Christ is the son of God, that he died on the cross for remission of sin, that he rose from the dead and that he lives," she said in an interview 10 years ago.

"We believe that, regardless of background and sins, once people surrender their life to Jesus, every sin is washed away in that blood and drowned in a sea of forgetfulness."

She says the church members may come and go, but their families do not all agree.

In 1976, Burbank (Calif.) Superior Court Judge Thomas Murphy ordered Elaine Petri, 26, returned to her parents in Colorado. Murphy said it was the first time the state's anti-dishonor laws had been used to remove a person from a religious organization.

A year later, Elaine Petri and her mother joined the parents of four Foundation members who spent weeks in Alma trying to remove their children from the Alamos' influence. They brought with them a deprogrammer.

Miss Petri testified at the Arkansas custody hearings that California foundation members worked in vineyards and pea fields, then turned their backs over to the Alamos. When public criticism ran high, she said, "Susan would clean up my neck."

Her mother, Beth Petri, said the Alamos kept the Foundation members through fear. "They are taught that if they leave the Foundation, they will have a terrible car accident, die or go insane? They are told that anyone outside the foundation is associated with Satan," she said.

Another former member said the church members are brainwashed. "One leader told us that he has coffee with God once a week, and God takes one lump of sugar," she said. "We believed him."

She said Mrs. Alamo never let the four church members see their parents alone, saying the parents would kidnap them. The parents finally ran out of money and returned to their homes in New York and California.

However, William and Fran Cumteen of North Valley Spring, N.Y., are still fighting to remove their son, Mark, 26, who testified he is living happily at the foundation with his wife, and said his parents "are out to kidnap me."

But the Cumteens were with a group of parents that returned to Arkansas last year and tried to enter the Alma Restaurant to see their children. They were barred, and a scuffle between foundation members and some of the parents ensued on the parking lot, with Tony Alamo shouting "Get them out, get them all out."

Cumteen went home and filed a $5 million suit for assault, which is still pending.

In September, Cumteen returned home. This time he and six other men were charged with conspiracy to kidnap.

Crawford County Sheriff Trelton Ball said he answered a call that a man at the Alma Restaurant was trying to see Mark Cumteen and Alamos were trying to prevent it. Ball went to the restaurant and arrested the man, then rounded up six others, including Cumteen, at two motels in nearby Fort Smith.

He said he confiscated "year-long" tennis and baseball bats during the arrests.

Foundation literature includes angry denunciations of what is considered attempts to kidnap church members for deprogramming.

"The Alamos blame most of their ills on California," Ted Patrick, whom they said they exposed when he was using his position on former Gov. Ronald Reagan's staff to promote his "diabolical plot."

"There isn't any area in this world easier to fan the flames of hate in than the religious areas," their pamphlet says. "People have their own personal jealousies and prejudices that are easily flamed into persecution and violence."

They say Patrick has agitated such sentiment against them.

Little is known about Susan Alamo's background. She is vague about her life, answering questions like how long she has been married with "a long time."

Marvin Peery of Alma says he remembers her from grammar school in Dyer, when her name was Opal Horn. He does not remember that she was a particularly religious person then.

But she tells of having been cured of

Baptisms decline Membership drop worries Baptists

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
 UPI Religion Writer

For the third straight year, the 13-million member Southern Baptist Convention is reporting a significant decline in the number of baptisms performed in its 35,000 churches.

And the decline — a whopping 2.7 percent — has a number of Baptist officials worried.

According to preliminary, year-end statistics prepared by the research services department of the Baptist Sunday School Board, Southern Baptists will have baptized 336,356 persons in 1978 — the lowest figure in 27 years.

Adding to the concern is the fact that overall Baptist growth was only 0.9 percent, a drop from last year's 1.2 percent — the lowest in decades, according to Martin Bradley, managers of the board's research division.

Baptism and church membership figures traditionally are used by church leaders and observers to measure the institutional health of denominations.

Interpretation of the figures in such a way as to chart new programs, however, is much more difficult.

In the 1960s, for example, common wisdom said the reason for the decline in church membership among mainline Protestant denominations was those churches' commitment to a generally liberal social action agenda.

But a denomination like the United Church of Christ has begun to show that it can begin an emphatic and aggressive evangelism campaign aimed at church growth without abandoning social commitments.

Baptist evangelism leaders recently gathered in San Francisco to look at the figures and try to find a way of reversing the trend.

In general, they seemed to come to the consensus that perhaps the denomination had gotten a little smug in being the nation's largest Protestant denomination and that the baptism and membership statistics should serve as "flags of warning about what can happen to us."

"What is happening to us," said C.H. Hogue, director of the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board's evangelism section, "is that we give more and more but do less and less."

The average Southern Baptist, he said, appears to be interested in mission "but would rather give dollars than himself."

Hogue was seconded by Joe Ford, director of the evangelism development division at the Home Mission Board.

Ford found the SBC to have become increasing a "spectator's denomination" substituting talk for action and "more concerned with who are and less with who God is."

Hogue said there could be no room for self-satisfaction.

"We have been proud to be known as the largest Protestant denomination in the United States," he said, "but we have apparently forgotten the responsibility that goes with that reputation."

Tal Botnam of the Baptist General Convention of Oklahoma told the meeting he believed the main reason for the decline "is that our people are just not witnessing as they ought to."

"We will never win the world to Christ through mass evangelism," he said. "One-on-one sharing is the only way."

Hogue told the group that it could not count on automatic growth and the nation's unchurched people must be confronted.

Catholics get bread, wine at communion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Conference of Catholic Bishops announced recently that Catholics in America will be allowed to take both bread and wine at holy communion on Sundays — a privilege previously denied them.

The conference president, Archbishop John Quinn of San Francisco, also announced formation of a committee to monitor church-state problems and said bishops will meet with proponents of women's ordination.

The bishops' decision was a number of issues that were left unsettled at the bishop's annual fall meeting last month.

The question of whether Catholics should be given both bread and wine at Sunday communion services was intensely debated at the meeting, and voting was so close that absent bishops were sent mail ballots.

The group decided that each local bishop now may decide how to handle the question in his diocese.

Throughout most of recent history, only priests were given wine at Catholic communion services. The Second Vatican Council in the early 1960s decided parishioners could receive both wine and bread on some occasions, but the bishop's decision marks the first time it will be allowed on Sunday.

Another issue raised at the fall conference was whether women should be ordained, and Quinn said the bishops' Ad Hoc Committee on Women in Society and the Church would start discussions with those who favor it.

Decline of dollar reflects U.S. problems

By MARY TOBIN
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The U.S. dollar, for years "good as gold" anywhere in the world, lost some of its luster in 1978.

The dollar's decline on foreign exchange markets didn't have much direct effect on the average American. The much-publicized increase in the price of imported television sets, cameras and automobiles was just one facet of the inflationary spiral that has hit every consumer item.

But the dollar's decline in value relative to the currencies of other major industrial nations directly reflected problems the United States faces — not only in controlling its domestic economy but in maintaining its position as the major power of the industrialized world.

Henry Kissinger drew laughs recently when he said he knew this country was in trouble when a poorly dressed stranger came up to him on the street and asked, "Brother, can you spare a yen?"

It's no joke.

Since the end of World War II, the dollar has been the universally accepted medium of exchange and "store of value" against which other currencies are measured. The dollar's depreciation threatened its credibility and acceptability in world trade.

It is a world that is increasingly interdependent. How much so will be dramatically demonstrated on Jan. 1 when Americans begin paying the first installment of what could be a 14.5 percent increase in the price of crude oil in 1979.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which takes payment for its oil in dollars, said the great losses in member countries' income because of the dollar's decline necessitated the sharp increase.

The U.S. position as the world's "good guy," a champion of the underdog, also was threatened. In addition to "pegging" their currencies to the dollar, many countries, including poorer nations such as India, keep a sizable part of their reserves in U.S. dollars.

Between September 1977 and the end of October 1978 the dollar declined by 12 percent against other currencies on a trade-weighted basis. But that doesn't tell the story. The trade-weighted figure measures the dollar against a basket of currencies, including the Canadian dollar against which it appreciated.

Over the same period, the dollar depreciated by 22 percent against the Japanese yen, by 23 percent against the West German mark, and by 35 percent against the Swiss franc.

There are several "fundamental" reasons for the decline: the United States has been running a huge balance-of-payments deficit, particularly in the merchandise trade account; the U.S. trade deficit is expected to run $30 to $35 billion in 1978.

But the real villain is the continued expansion of our monetary aggregates that have, over a period of years, left between $500 billion and $600 billion floating outside the United States in the global market.

The "excess" dollars, in large part, represent holdings of U.S. multinational firms and is used in conduct of business. But many millions represent so-called "hot" money, or uncommitted dollars that can be quickly withdrawn and sent to the currencies of countries that offer the highest interest rates.

It is this speculative element that our allies with strong currencies fear: should even a portion of it be traded, for example, for the West German mark, it would drive the value of the dollar to an unbearably high value (for West Germany).

The U.S. position as the international reserve currency has been the strength of the United States but also a major weakness.

The demand for dollars abroad has enabled the United States to expand its money supply with impunity. While this expansion helped the world recover from World War II (and began while rates were relatively stable under the Bretton Woods agreement of 1944), it has come back to haunt the United States under the present "floating" exchange rate system.

Another reason for the dollar's slide was the fact that in late 1977 and early 1978 government officials seemed to be deliberately talking it down.

To the satisfaction of some and worry of others, the huge volume of dollars being bought by foreign central banks to keep their currencies from rising too far helped to finance the ever-ballooning U.S. budget deficit.

In 1977, foreigners — largely central banks — used excess dollars to buy approximately $10 billion of the $52 billion in new Treasury paper that was sold to finance the U.S. deficit.

While this has enabled the government to expand the deficit without increasing domestic taxes, it threatens to widen the future balance-of-payments deficit. The $31 billion in Treasury paper sold to foreigners in 1977 cost $2 billion a year in interest alone.

The meeting of leaders of the world's industrial nations in Bonn in June brought nothing of substance to the dollar. The United States periodically announced support measures, such as increased gold sales, but often blunted the positive effects of these actions with negative comment.

By the end of October 1978, the dollar's decline had made the U.S. position as the world's industrial nations in Bonn in June brought nothing of substance to the dollar. The United States periodically announced support measures, such as increased gold sales, but often blunted the positive effects of these actions with negative comment.

added at least 1 percent to the U.S. inflation rate.

Not only because imported automobiles, cameras and televisions, textiles and shoes cost more but because each time importers have been forced to raise prices, U.S. manufacturers have been hurt. They followed with a steady tightening of credit. The Fed was having little success, at least through October, in reducing the expansion of monetary aggregates and in dampening consumer demand. Americans were spending in anticipation of still higher prices, resulting in an inflationary spiral that further threatened confidence in the dollar.

Then on Nov. 1 just after the dollar had reached historic lows against all major trading currencies, President Carter announced a series of moves to all but end it.

These included an increase of one percentage point in the Fed's discount rate; supplementary reserve requirements for banks; doubling of Treasury gold sales; expanding of "swap" agreements with the European Central Bank and activating the swap agreement with the Bank of Japan to make a total of $30 billion available to support the dollar; and issuance of foreign currency denominated securities.

These actions were followed by forceful intervention by central banks and an apparent unanimity of statements by administration officials. The dollar rose sharply and remained stable until mid-December when it underwent its first selling pressure following the OPEC announcement.

But the price rise will complicate the international financial picture in 1979.

Japan and the European Economic Community nations are heavily dependent on OPEC oil, perhaps more so than the United States.

And since the Swiss Central Bank and other nations take prices in U.S. dollars, "every percentage point of decline for the dollar against the mark, the yen and other major currencies means that much extra in the pockets of the countries involved," according to foreign exchange analyst James E. Sisk of the U.S. Treasury.

"The OPEC action means that the United States' trading partners have a very real interest in a lower dollar — and it means the Fed may have to shoulder the entire burden of supporting the dollar," he said.

"If the Fed stands fast and continues to raise the money supply," he said, "the oil hike will fall heavier on European nations and thus on their currencies than on the United States."

Ford paces 1978 recall derby; industry total below record

DETROIT (UPI) — In a year marked by controversy over exploding fuel tanks, Ford Motor Co. recalled more cars than all other major manufacturers in 1978.

The trend slowed considerably during the second six months.

General Motors recalled 1.7 million vehicles in 29 separate actions and Chrysler Corp., the recall leader of 1977, cited 1.5 million vehicles for potential defects in 14 campaigns.

30, the companies already had recalled nearly two million more vehicles than it had during the comparable year-ago period.

Ford, the industry's most prolific recall primarily because of the fuel tank problems involving its subcompact Pinto, conducted 35 different safety campaigns and cited nearly 3.8 million vehicles for possible defects.

The industry as a whole conducted 86 recall campaigns, but didn't come close to tying the dubious recall record of 10.3 million vehicles in 1977.

It appeared that Detroit's "Big Four" was headed for another record during the first half of 1978. By June

In November, GM recalled 320,000 Chevetttes — the entire line for 1976 and 1977 — to make gasoline line modifications in the popular subcompact designed to cut down on fuel leakage which could lead to fuel tank fires in the event of rear end collisions.

Both companies have denied that their cars are particularly susceptible

Record exports to U.S. bring Canada surplus

OTTAWA (UPI) — Record exports to the United States helped boost Canada's foreign trade to $4.87 billion in November, with an impressive surplus of more than $335 million, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

For the 11 months of 1978, Canada's cumulative trade surplus to the U.S. rose 14 per cent last month to a total of $1.5 billion, with more than two-thirds of the trade with Japan. Shipments of grain, metallic ores, coal, pulp and paper, metals and automotive parts led the list of Canadian exports to that country.

Seasonally adjusted, Canadian exports increased by a whopping 39 per cent to $4.5 billion in the three months ending in November. Wheat, forest products, and metallic ores attributed to the increase.

At the same time, Canadians imported 20 per cent more foreign goods than in the previous period when more than $4 billion worth of food, crude oil, and automotive products were brought into Canada.

Pea prices gain slightly in week

MOSCOW — Average prices for Dec. 27 have been posted by the Pacific Northwest Pea Growers and Dealers Association.

Prices for that date and the previous week include greens 8.65 and 8.60; yellows 7.55 and 7.50; blacks 8.80 and 8.70; lentils 27.40 and 27.40.

Prices are quoted in U.S. dollars per bushel, based on U.S. No. 1 grade.

Potatoes, metals, cattle turn firm

CHICAGO — Potatoes, metals and cattle futures advanced in trading Friday.

Commodity News Service said Maine spuds moved higher on mixed buying, based in part on farmer cash quotes and demand developing at a time when shippers have closed or cut back operations for the holidays. The market higher 10 cents higher to unchanged, with May leading at 6.69 per hundredweight. Volume was 670 lots.

Live cattle closed 47 to 10 points higher, save for a 5-point decline in nearby January but the trade was light in a holiday-affected market.

Steel maker shuts plant

CHICAGO (UPI) — U.S. Steel Corp. says it will close its South Works foundry, cited for unsafe working conditions, partly because of the high cost of complying with federal safety standards.

The foundry, built in the mid-1930's, was cited by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration for health and safety violations last year because of the silica levels in the air at the foundry.

Silica levels were as much as 21 times above the federal standards, OSHA said. Silica has been found to cause lung damage when inhaled and can be fatal.

The National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health conducted medical examinations of 70 foundry workers and found lung abnormalities in 30 of them, 17 cases directly attributed to silicosis.

Prime hiked by Citibank

NEW YORK (UPI) — Citibank, the nation's second largest bank, Friday joined most other big banks in raising the prime lending rate to 11 1/2 percent from 11 percent, effective immediately.

Citibank, which had been expected to make the move last Friday, the day it usually announces such changes, said the move adhered to its formula for the prime.

Citibank pegs the prime rate for loans to top corporate borrowers at 14 1/2 percent. The bank says the rate on 90-day commercial paper on a three-week moving average.

A spokesman for the bank said Friday's move was based on an average for commercial paper of 11.633 percent.

January but closed higher in other contracts from up the 150 point limit to 200. The January selling was traced to speculation about abundant deliveries. Volume was 2,220 contracts.

Live hogs ended mixed after a late selloff eroded light gains. Long liquidation and year-end book clearing were behind the selling, which left prices flat. The market was up 72 on a volume of 3,744 contracts. Pork bellies were 20 points lower in nearby February but 45 to 107 higher in other contracts. A light trade of 2,626 contracts was reported.

Wheat opened moderately firmer but finished easier by 1/2 cents to a cent as speculative selling and profit taking dominated the close. Corn weakened a cent to a quarter cent under local profit taking ahead of the long weekend, giving up part of the gains from constructive reaction during the week to export sales.

Soybeans and oil lost their morning advance when selling pressure from a co-op met only light buying interest. Year-end tax spreading was a principal activity during the day. Beans ended 2 cents lower to a quarter cent up, oil lost 8 to 22 points and meal was off 10 cents to 150.

New York Sugar 11 closed 10 to 5 points higher on a volume of 1,675 lots after trade buying, industrial pricing and local short covering.

New York Comex silver gained 200 to 290 points on a half day session with volume of 20,000 lots, mostly following gold's lead.

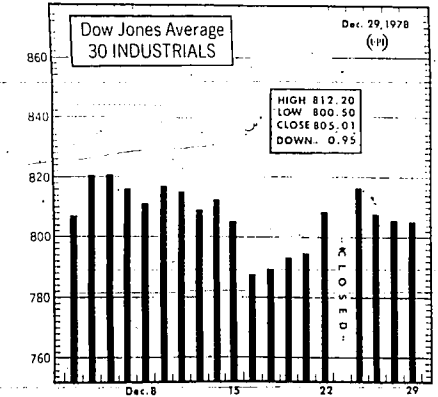

New York Comex gold gained 3.90 to 4.00 across the board on a volume of 25,000 lots, advancing on influence from Iranian developments and a weaker dollar.

Wheeling gets loan

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Co. has obtained a letter of intent from the Department of Commerce's Economic Development Administration to approve a $100 million government loan guarantee for Wheeling-Pittsburgh.

Wheeling-Pittsburgh expects the Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration to approve a guarantee for an additional $10 million loan.

Proceeds of the loans would be used to build a rail rolling mill at Monaca, Pa., and to finance environmental control facilities at the company's plants in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

Debt troubles on increase

(Last of three columns)

How much debt can you safely handle? When do you know when you have taken on too much?

Many of our traditional rules of thumb about what consumers can afford have been made obsolete by the evil inflation of the 1970s. More flexible credit terms have resulted in stretched-out loan spans and reduced monthly payments. And the widespread use of credit and bank cards makes it terribly tough for you to keep track of your own financial status.

As a result, such agencies as the consumer-sponsored, non-profit Consumer Credit Counseling Service are reporting that mounting numbers of consumers need help — both in avoiding debt troubles and in getting free of them.

There are 200 Consumer Credit Counseling Service offices throughout the United States, which give confidential budget counseling and debt management help to consumers of all ages, income levels and occupations.

Traditionally, the Counseling Service's activities speed up when the economy slows down, but this year most of its offices already are extremely busy. In some areas — Illinois, for instance — clients must wait for as long as a month before getting even an appointment with a counselor!

"We are seeing more and more serious cases of individual consumer indebtedness," reports Byron Relmus of the Service's New York office. "Consumers are coming to us at the last minute — when mortgage payments are five months overdue and when legal or collection action has already been taken on their accounts.

"Eviction notices and wage garnishments are much more frequent as well. Our counterparts across the nation are seeing the same thing."

"Families in a jam don't want to deal with their money problems," adds Counseling Service President Gerard A. Lareau. "They feel they're not trained to handle them. They're guilty that they have never had a budget before. They're afraid facing up to their financial position as an unpleasant task, and they procrastinate."

Who are these families who are over their heads in debt? In the greater New York area, a profile would be: A family of four, with the husband probably in his mid-30s, earning $13,600 a year.

He and his household are committed to repay $7,600 of debts to nine different creditors, and on a monthly basis have obligated themselves to pay out $350 more than they earn.

The family has begun to take cash advances on credit cards to pay necessities such as food, rent, utilities.

The family also has started to juggle bills, paying off one this month, delaying another until next month. All the while, husband and wife think that as soon as they get out from under indebtedness, reports Byron Relmus of the Service's New York office. "Consumers are coming to us at the tendency to pyramid."

As the general rule, most of you should not spend more than 10 percent of your monthly take-home pay to repay debts, excluding your mortgage. If your credit repayments amount to more — say, 15 percent — you usually can manage, but things get tight. When your repayments hit the 20 percent mark, you get into trouble.

Many families who are overextended take out consolidation loans, go to a bank or some other financial institution which agrees to lump together their debts and pay them off.

The debtor is then left to make a single, usually smaller, monthly repayment "to the creditor over a longer period of time."

"But the help consolidation loans give consumers is illusory," Lareau told my associate Brooke Shearer. "Once consumers have them they feel free to begin spending all over again. Once you take out such a loan, it invariably leads to a second or even third re-consolidation loan. Don't ever let go!" he urges. And he offers as holiday advice to any of you who might be tempted to overspend:

- (1) Keep safe copies of your charge account receipts near your phone or shopping list.
- (2) Look at the receipts before you leave the horse on a gift-buying trip, so you can get an idea of how much you already own.
- (3) Don't make Christmas joyful at the expense of January, February and March.

Process key to 1% equality

BOISE (UPI) — Newly-elected Attorney General Dave Leroy said Friday the Idaho Legislature can legally put the 1 percent initiative in effect Jan. 1 but how it does it could be the key to whether it will be constitutionally upheld by the courts.

Appearing on KTVB's Viewpoint, Leroy said he would offer the Legislature with a point-by-point plan for implementing the property tax initiative.

He said that selecting a date, although simple, could be the key to avoiding legal problems.

As adopted by the electorate at the polls in November, the initiative calls for implementation in October 1979. Senate Democrats have pre-filed a bill, however, to change the effective date to Jan. 1, 1979.

Leroy said while the effective date easily could be changed but "it's a change that will live large part dictate how well we can do everything else."

In the best interest of the state, Leroy said he feels there should be an early court test of the initiative.

"If there are areas of doubt or areas of possible difficulties of interpretation, perhaps the attorney general should work quickly for a declaratory judgment suit so the courts can help us sort out any gray areas that exist after the Legislature acts."

Leroy also he said he will present a legal state-of-the-state message to the Legislature, which will include a proposal putting all state agency lawyers under the jurisdiction of the attorney general.

University cutbacks spread out

MOSCOW (UPI) — The dean of the University of Idaho graduate school said Thursday cutting graduate programs at the school can have far-reaching effects throughout the university.

Dr. A.R. Gittins said possible budget reductions resulting from implementation of the 1 percent property tax initiative have caused university fiscal planners to predict a reduction in force of up to some 73 research and teaching assistant positions, or about half the posts currently filled by graduate students.

"Loss of these positions can't help but have a far-reaching effect throughout the university," he said. "Faculty members depend on their graduate assistant positions for substantial technical involvement in research programs and, in the case of teaching assistants, a considerable amount of teaching time. All of this help makes more of the faculty member's time available for research, guiding research programs, teaching advanced classes and other necessary work." Gittins also warned that loss of graduate assistants is quite likely to discourage productive faculty members and encourage them to seek jobs at other institutions where there are funds for teaching assistantships and technical assistance in research.

"We can expect to see more of our promising faculty members than we would like leave under these conditions," he said.

Boise-Denver airline run recommended

BOISE (UPI) — Frontier Airlines and Hughes Airwest have been recommended by a civil aeronautics judge to establish new non-stop service between Boise and Denver.

The recommendation of Judge William H. Miller to the Civil Aeronautics Board was made after a hearing.

Miller turned down the applications of Continental, Western and Texas International. United Airlines presently is the only carrier providing service between Boise and Denver.

He said he concurred with the opinions of Boise city officials and the Greater Boise Chamber of Commerce that Frontier and Airwest could best serve the "public need and necessity."

Restriction of only two carriers will be recommended.

He said evidence in the case showed that the applications of Continental, Western and Texas International "are not consistent with the public interest."

Clemson downs Buckeyes in Gator bowl

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Quarterback Steve Fuller scored one touchdown and set up another and middle guard Charlie Bauman came up with a crucial interception in the closing minutes Friday night to lead the 8th-ranked Clemson Tigers to a 17-15 victory over Ohio State in a Gator Bowl game narrated by several temper tantrums by Buckeye Coach Woody Hayes.

The Tigers, after being unable to get out of their own backyard during the first quarter, possessions, marched 80 yards in the second period, with Fuller going around left end for the final 4 yards to take a 7-3 lead with 5:03 left in the half.

Ohio State, which had opened the scoring 2:52 into the second quarter on a 27-yard field goal by Bob Atha, regained the lead with 1:21 left in the first half on a 4-yard run by freshman quarterback Art Schlichter.

But Clemson's Steve Gibbs blocked the extra point kick, enabling the Tigers to take a 10-3 lead when Obed Arji kicked a 47-yard field goal with just five seconds left before intermission.

Clemson, which was beaten, 34-3, by Pittsburgh in last year's Gator Bowl, widened its lead to 17-9 with 2:16 left in the third period when freshman Cliff Austin went over from 1 yard out to cap an 84-yard drive.

Ohio State, paced by Schlichter, who completed 16-of-20 passes for 205 yards and ran for 70 yards and two touchdowns, scored from 1 yard out with 8:11 left in the game.

But Schlichter's attempt to score a two-point conversion failed when Jim Stuckey nailed him at the 2 on an attempted option run.

Ohio State, playing in the Gator Bowl for the first time, got the ball for the last time with 4:23 left in the game and was within field goal range when Bauman, a sophomore from Hunnemede, N.J., picked off Schlichter's pass at the Clemson 22-yard line.

It was at this point that Hayes drew his first 15-yard penalty for un-sportsmanlike conduct, and had to be restrained by one of his assistant coaches. On the next play, Hayes drew another 15-yard un-sportsmanlike conduct penalty.

In the first period, it appeared that Ohio State, which had a sub-par 7-3-1 season, was going to dominate play against Clemson, which won the Atlantic Coast Conference championship and had a 10-1 record.

Ohio State surprises top-rated Duke 90-84

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two stufo shots by Jim Smith in the final two minutes of overtime topped a furious Ohio State rally Friday night when the Buckeyes upended top-ranked and previously undefeated Duke, 90-84, in the first round of the 27th annual ECAC Holiday Festival.

After Ohio State's Kelvin Ransley hit an 18-foot jumper with 32 seconds remaining in regulation to make it 76-76 entering the overtime, two foul shots by Ransley and a basket and two free throws by Duke's Mike Gminski made it 80-78, in favor of the Blue Devils. But the Buckeyes then ran off 10 straight points to make it 88-80, putting the game away.

After Ohio State led it 80-80, the Buckeyes then patiently worked the ball before Smith jammed in a shot with 1:49 remaining. He was fouled on the play but missed the free throw.

Smith stuffed his second shot with 57 seconds to go to make it 84-80.

Ohio State, which overcame a 17-point deficit, was backed down the stretch by Ransley with 26 points, Herb Williams with 23 points, including 20 after the first half, and Carter Scott with 19 points, 17 coming after the first half.

With Duke leading 76-74, Jim Suddath missed a foul shot. Scott and Duke's Bob Bender raced for the ball as it headed out of bounds. The ball was awarded to the Buckeyes and Ransley then hit his 18-footer to tie it, 76-76. The Blue Devils had a chance to go ahead but Gminski missed a hook shot with five seconds to go.

Duke, which fell to 6-1, was led by Jim Spanaruk with 30 points and Gminski with 27. Ohio State, 5-3, was also backed by Smith with 10 points.

Smith guns Filer by Gooding

FILER — Tony Smith sparked a red-hot shooting display by the Filer Wildcats Friday night when they avenged an earlier defeat by upending the Gooding Senators 65-54.

It was nearly a replay of the first meeting between the two clubs although the roles were reversed. In the first game, Gooding's victory, Gooding was sharp and shot the ball well while Filer floundered. Friday night Gooding's woes were multiplied by the fact it was as cold as Filer was hit. It took the Senators 20 minutes to get 10 points and by then Filer was romping along on a 22-0 advantage.

"If they are going to shoot like that, no one is going to beat them in this gymnasium," Coach Jay Durfee said afterward. Filer Coach Wayne Humphreys noted it had been a comfortable night on the bench after his Wildcats had piled up the big advantage. But he remained a little worried about 6-7 junior Jay Decker who took a shot to the cheekbone in the late third quarter and was still a little dizzy after the game.

Both teams flew at each other defensively on the narrow Filer court. Filer using the man and Gooding the zone. The scoring was slow in coming but after the four-minute mark Filer suddenly caught fire. Smith hit two straight jumpers and Alex Brito added a layup on a fast break. After John Eisinger replied for Gooding, Brian Ochener and Smith gunned Filer into a 14-4 lead.

As the second quarter began, Decker and Smith each had eight points and Tracy Heaps tacked on a free throw to make it 23-6. Brady Hall and Bob Richards countered with two Gooding buckets three minutes from halftime but Gooding then subsided again as Smith and Heaps took Filer into a 26-10 lead.

In the third quarter it was Filer getting eight of the first nine points scored and opening up that 32-10 lead.

Then Hall came up like a hot streak outside jumpers to get Gooding's offense pumping a little bit. In the last three minutes of the third quarter Gooding equalled its point output for the first 20 minutes.

In the fourth period, however, Glines and Richmond joined the Filer rout. Glines and the Wildcats pulled steadily away as both sides emptied their benches.

Gooding took the preliminary.

Indiana gains finals in Far West Classic

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Forward Mike Woodson scored 36 points Friday night to lead Indiana past Oregon, 68-60, in a Far West Classic semifinal matchup.

Oregon State met Michigan State in the other semifinal contest with the winner taking on Indiana for the title Saturday night and the loser going against the Ducks for third place.

Woodson scored 24 of his points in the first half when the Hoosiers took a 40-37 lead. However, the Ducks charged to the front at 53-51 with 9:22 to go before Woodson scored two free throws to trigger a 12-0 spurt that put Indiana out front 63-53 with 3:45 to play.

Oregon went seven minutes without scoring a point and wound up with only seven points in the final nine minutes of play.

Other Hoosiers in double figures were Steve Risley and Ray Tolbert with 10 points each. High for Oregon was Dan Hartshorne with 17.

In consolation play, Bryan Risson led a second-half, come-from-behind rally with 13 points to spark Washington State past Seattle University 83-68.

The Cougars will play Washington State Saturday for consolation honors. The Huskies, led by Andra Griffin with 18 points, defeated Wyoming 85-74. The Cowboys will meet the Chieftains for seventh place.

The 5-foot-11 Risson finished the contest with 26 points. His 3-point play with just over 9 minutes to go gave the Cougars a 63-61 lead to offset a 14-point hole they had gotten into after trailing 48-38 at the half.

Keith Harrell with 24 points and Clint Richardson with 20 led Seattle, which played without its suspended 7-foot star center Javann Oldham. The reason for the suspension was not announced.

Rhode Island claims Motor City cage title

DETROIT (UPI) — All-American Sylvester Williams scored 36 points Friday night to lead Rhode Island to a 69-67 triumph over Detroit in the championship game of the 27th annual Motor City Tournament.

New Hampshire defeated Denver, 71-65, in the consolation game.

Williams, a 6-foot-7 junior forward, hit a four-foot bank shot with 3:02 left to break a 61-61 tie and put the Rams ahead for good, and made a layup with 14 seconds remaining that gave Rhode Island its final points.

The loss marked the first time in four years Detroit has lost its own tourney.

The first half was close with Rhode Island taking a 38-35 lead to the locker room.

Rhode Island led by as many as 10 points in the second half, 53-43 at the 9:34 mark, but the Titans battled their way back to a 53-53 tie in the next three minutes.

Terry Dueroed finished with 22 points to lead Detroit while Earl Cureton added 12 points and 12 rebounds and Jerry Davis chipped in 11 points.

The only other player in double figures for Rhode Island was Jimmy Wright with 10. Irv Champan had 10 rebounds for the Rams, who are now 8-1.

Boise (UPI) — Senior forward Sean McKenna scored 27 points Friday night to lead the Boise State Broncos to a 86-67 win over Western State of Texas and a championship in the Bronco Invitational Tournament in Boise.

BSU trailed early in the game but only allowed Midwestern to build a 5-2 lead. The Broncos then pulled away to a 41-30 halftime lead on the shooting of McKenna and guard Fred Williams.

The Broncos' stiff row defense held the opposition to less than 50 percent shooting from the floor for the fifth game in a row, all of which the Broncos have won. Midwestern hit only 31 of 79 shots from the floor for 39 percent while BSU shot more than 50 percent for the fourth game in a row, hitting 29 of 57 shots.

Boise State wins own tourney

The taller Broncos outrounded Midwestern 48-30.

The 19-point victory margin came in the final three minutes of the ballgame as the Broncos led through most of the game by 8- to 10 points.

BSU hit 28 of 34 free throw attempts to tie the contest.

McKenna and Williams had the highest scoring games of their careers in the wins. McKenna tallied 27 points and Williams chipped in 19.

High point man for Midwestern was center Paul Brantley with 18. McKenna was named tournament most valuable player. He was joined on the all-tournament team by Williams and Brantley.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Sammy Drummer scored a game-high 29 points Friday night to lead Georgia Tech to an 83-81 win over Brigham Young in the opening game of the Pillsbury Classic.

Drummer gave Georgia Tech, 5-3, its biggest lead — 74-69 — on a 3-point play with 5:36 to go, but Brigham Young stayed closed until the end and Glen Roberts' last-second shot fell off the rim.

Drummer was supported by 15 points from Tico Brown and 12 from Lenny Horton. Danny Alinge led Brigham Young, 8-4, with 18, while Alan Taylor had 17, all in the first half.

Burley tops Elko, Buhl bows to Pocatello

POCATELLO — Burley left Elko without a win while Pocatello took fourth place away from Buhl 52-41 Thursday afternoon in the KWIK holiday basketball tournament.

The results put Burley in seventh place while Buhl claimed sixth in a tournament that was dominated by Utah schools and highland.

Burley led from start to the first quarter until the final buzzer for its first win in the three-day meet. The Bobcats were able to speed up the slow pace preferred by Elko often enough to stay ahead as Jeff Wright came up with key points throughout the afternoon but particularly when Burley was establishing its lead.

The Bobcats fell behind 6-2 in the early moments and then came back to take the lead on a bucket by Gordon Kerbs. Wright added two free throws before Dan Basonias made it 31-10 at the end of the first quarter.

Wright, Greg Burch, Brent Funk and Greg Jones opened the second period with points and Wright capped that breakaway with a follow shot to stake the Bobcats to a 21-10 lead.

Elko, coached by ex-Milwaco mentor

Gerald Mayes, stayed behind by at least eight point through the half and early in the second half Hansen and Wright pushed Burley into a 31-19 advantage.

At that point Basonias came up with three field goals and Pratt another while Burley could muster on a free throw by Kerbs. Over the next couple of minutes Elko slipped to within two 34-32 but Burley reeled off the next six points Burch got the first two, followed by Wright and then Kerbs, the latter from the foul line.

Elko cut to within six points late in the third quarter but once the fourth period started Burley seized complete control. Funk hit two and Kerbs and Wright got a 15-point lead and coasted home.

Buhl was about as cold Friday as it had been Thursday in demolishing Elko.

In the first 4:10 of the game Pocatello moved out to a 14-4 lead and the teams traded baskets over the remainder of the period.

In the second quarter Jim Smutny hit three points and Dave Davis four to breathe a little hope into the Indian faithful. The furry pulled Buhl to within two at 23-21 but the scoring doldrums then locked in completely. The Indians couldn't find another point over the final three minutes moved ahead 30-21.

Roland Hansen opened the second half with a Buhl field goal and Robin Juker added a free throw and it appeared Buhl might start scoring again. But no such luck. Over the next couple of minutes Robert Branch gunned Pocatello into a 12-point lead and Buhl was never able to get closer than eight thereafter.

Pocatello's biggest margin was 14 points at 48-33. Larry Allen and Mark Schaal picked up six quick points on steals with about a minute left, but Pocatello offset that by hitting the last three points of the game.

Stanford relies on passes against Georgia

HOUSTON (UPI) — Coach Bill Walsh worked his Stanford team hard for 95 minutes Friday and then did not mince words about what he expected to happen in Sunday night's Bluebonnet Bowl game matching his pass-minded Cardinals against the Georgia Bulldogs.

"We'll complete passes," Walsh said. "Georgia knows we will, but there will be a few crucial plays that determine who wins. If we make those plays we win."

Senior quarterback Steve Dils, the leading passer in the country this season, threw a lot of passes during the practice session as he tried to set his timing with some talented wide receivers and backs Darin Nelson and Phil Francis.

Nelson and Francis combined to catch 89 passes this season, but most of these yards came on typical "turtled" football fields which are raised down the middle. The Astrodome artificial surface is flat.

"The field looks wider," Walsh said. "We had to talk to the receivers about their adjustments to the width of the field. By the end of tomorrow's practice, we should have that down."

Georgia is a three-point underdog despite its 9-1 record being better than Stanford's 7-4. The Bulldogs practiced in the afternoon Friday, and both teams scheduled brief workouts Saturday.

The Southeastern Conference runner-up Bulldogs, under coach Vince Dooley, are seventh ranked. They were a candidate for the host spot in the Sugar Bowl until the final week of the collegiate season. "We would like to hold our place in the Top 10 or improve it," Dooley said.

They appear the physically superior team, but Stanford may have an edge in team speed.

"It's interesting anytime we play," Walsh said. The Cardinals' four losses were by a combined 16 points. Five of Georgia's victories were by a combined 13 points.

The Bulldogs did not face a passing team this season, but that may prove a disadvantage for both teams.

"We had to go back a couple of years for films of what Georgia would do against someone who passed," Walsh said. "I'll tell you this. They haven't lost to a forward passing team."

Stanford players were sluggish at the start of their 10 a.m. workout, but by the end of the practice they appeared spirited and ready to play.

Of the 6-0, 190-pound Dils, who threw for 2,943 yards with a .632 completion percentage, Walsh said, "He's the best passer in the country today. If we can pass protect for him, we will play well. Defensively, it depends on how we bring down their tailback."

Georgia's Willie McClendon, 6-2, 200, was the SEC offensive player of the year with 1,312 yards rushing despite a broken hand and stretched knee ligaments in the final three games.

Asked if he was 100 percent healed, McClendon said, "I hope so...I believe so."

Cincy coach fights NCAA cage suspension

CINCINNATI (UPI) — University of Cincinnati basketball coach Ed Badger came out charging Friday after the NCAA placed the Bearcats on two years probation, asking all 50,000 Cincy alumni to send him $10 to support the school's basketball program.

"We are at a serious crossroads of UC basketball and we don't want to sink into oblivion," said Badger.

Badger, in his first year at Cincy, and not around when the violations cited by the NCAA occurred, issued his plea for financial support in an attempt to turn the disheartening probation news into a challenge for the future.

"I think it's time to move," declared Badger. "If they (school supporters) want to have a program to compete with Kentucky, Indiana or Louisville, with the Duke Dames, North Carolinas or Dukes...we have to have financial, emotional and moral support, especially of every alumnus."

"I am today asking all 50,000 alumni of the University of Cincinnati to send me $10. Send it to Ed Badger, UC Basketball, with the Name Dames, Cincinnati, Ohio, 45221."

"I will take more than $10 if somebody wants to do that and I will take less. But if Kentucky can raise a couple of million to build a dome, I'd like to raise $500,000 to spend strictly on basketball."

"I did not come here to lose or to coach a second rate team," added the former-NBA Chicago Bulls' head coach. "I am willing to ride this thing (probation) out if they (supporters), are serious about the fact that they want a top-flight basketball program."

Asked how contributions would be used, Badger said, "To be specific, we use the money for recruiting."

"We would use it to promote the program in every way possible. That means bring the best teams in here, and that costs money too. To improve facilities and make the schedule as attractive as possible."

"We also need to turn out much better recruiting materials. We need to sell our program and that takes money."

The NCAA probation prohibits Cincy from post-season tournaments and from all NCAA-controlled television games this season and next.

Although the NCAA said it found violations of NCAA rules in both Cincy's basketball and football programs, no sanctions were slapped on the football program.

Gale Catlett, Cincy head coach for six years before he left at the end of last season to take the head coaching job at the University of West Virginia, said in an interview last weekend he wasn't involved in anything that could bring an NCAA probation.

"I told the NCAA I never offered a kid a penny," said Catlett. "I'm not dumb. I didn't offer anybody anything. And I told the NCAA I would sue them if my name was used in that context."

Notre Dame to battle Freedom Hall 'jinx'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Second ranked Notre Dame invades Freedom Hall for a Saturday night clash with Kentucky, 15th ranked and the defending NCAA champion.

The Irish and Wildcats will meet before an expected sellout crowd of more than 17,000 in what has become a "heartbreak hall" for the Irish. The game will be telecast nationally by NBC on a delayed basis.

Kentucky holds a 26-14 edge in the series which began in 1929, but the Wildcats have a 16-3 edge in games played at the cavernous Freedom Hall, including six of seven against Irish teams coached by Digger Phelps.

Phelps has made no secret of his feelings about playing Kentucky in Freedom Hall, which has been touted as a "neutral" site 70 miles west of UK's Lexington campus but smack in the middle of Kentucky's largest city.

After losing to Kentucky last New Year's Eve 73-68 before a national broadcast audience, Phelps angrily said he wanted to change the format to a home-and-away series in South Bend and Lexington after the current contract expires.

The defending national champion Wildcats, now 4-2 on the season, will bring a balanced attack into Freedom Hall with five players averaging better than nine points per game and none averaging as much as 13 points per game.

Lytle Macy, Kentucky's junior guard and playmaker, leads UK with a 12.8 point per game average and has 33 assists to his credit.

UK coach Joe B. Hall, whose team decided to give up part of its Christmas vacation to practice for the Notre Dame game, said shooting would be the key to his team's chances against the No. 2 Irish.

"If we shoot well we'll be in the game — if we don't it's going to be a rough night," said Hall, whose teams are 5-1 against the Irish.

The Irish are led by sophomore forward Kelly Tripuka, who is averaging 15.4 points and 6.8 rebounds per game. His shooting percentage is better than 57 percent.

Houston's Davis — 'a class guy'

DALLAS (UPI) — Whatever the most recently approved way to describe a classy human being might be, it is Danny Davis and he is slick. He is Danny Davis and he is slick.

Even Notre Dame coach Dan Devine has to admit that.

"I met Danny the other night," said Devine. "It was the first time I had ever talked to him and he is something."

"He is obviously a team leader, and a class person. Those are qualities you look for in a football player. And when a guy like that has talent to go with it, well, you have somebody special."

Davis, who will lead the Cougars against Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl Monday, appeared at a media gathering Friday dressed as if he were in a movie. He wore a gray, vested suit that would have made

Robert Redford drool. "People say we haven't been getting much attention this year," Davis said. "I thought if I dressed up a little people might take notice."

A few minutes earlier some of the Notre Dame players had said the key to their defensive effort was stopping Davis, the option quarterback who has directed the Cougars to two Southwest Conference championships in the last three years.

In the one year Houston did not win the SWC crown, Davis was sidelined for the season with an injury.

"I don't know why anybody cares about me," Davis said when told that his Monday opponents thought he would be a critical factor in the game.

"I'm just a little bitty guy (5-11) who is not very fast (about 4.7 speed in the 40) and I don't do anything but hand off to other guys."

"I sure don't think I am going to be a factor in the game. I would like to be, but I don't think I will be. But when you see those (Notre Dame) guys again thank them for saying so."

Davis has a history of playing well in the Cotton Bowl. He has played there eight times in his career — five in high school, twice against Southern Methodist while playing for the Cougars and once in the Cotton Bowl game against Maryland two seasons ago.

His team has won all eight times. "And if you count those games me and my friends played there after we sold popcorn and soft drinks, I won all of them, too," said Davis, who, while in junior high school, used to make about $40 a game as a vendor.

Davis is enough of a politician to be able to change his tune now and then. Earlier in the week he was talking about how much fun it would be to have a chance at Notre Dame.

On Friday, however, he said it was just another contest.

"It's just football," said Davis. "Football is what goes on when you play anybody. I would think there are a lot of schools in this country with a lot of tradition. I know one thing. I think it will be a good game. It's a game we want to win, but we want to win them all."

Davis figures he is about due for a good game. He thinks neither himself nor the team has had one since Oct. 28, when the Cougars rallied from a 9-0 deficit to knock off the Arkansas Razorbacks, 20-9.

"I don't think we played all that well against Texas (a 10-7 victory)," he said. "I know we didn't play well against Texas Tech (in a 22-21 loss) and we didn't play well against Rice (in a regular season ending 49-25 win) because we were booted at halftime."

Sooners ache for second chance

MIAMI (UPI) — Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims has an easy smile and an easy approach to life but he means it when he says Monday night's Nebraska game "is going to be different."

Oklahoma is getting that rarity — a second chance — New Year's night in the Orange Bowl against the Cornhuskers and the 25-year-old junior from Hooks, Texas doesn't intend to let the opportunity go by.

"I didn't do it last time but this time it's going to be different," he said. "I am going to be a crazy man out there, or at least it is going to look to the people like I'm a crazy man."

Cynical Oklahoma fans might say he played like "a crazy man" Nov. 11 when his two fumbles in key situations helped Nebraska to a 17-14 victory in the two Big Eight teams' first meeting.

Sims refuses to get upset about it. "It was just one of those things. It really doesn't bother me," he insists. "It probably bothers the people who had money on the game, though."

"If you fumble nine times and win, nobody cares, but if you fumble nine times and lose, you hear about it," he said. "I am just like anybody else — I make mistakes."

The Cornhuskers think some of the Oklahoma fumbles were the result of some ferocious hitting on their part.

"I think the fumbles were a combination of two things," says Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne. "There was some carelessness but there also was some of the hardest hitting I've seen since I've been on the sidelines."

Sims says no. "I disagree with that. I don't think they hit any harder than any other team," he said. "But they are going to get a chance Monday to prove what they say."

Sims went into this year unheralded as just one of Oklahoma's speedy backs. Battered by injuries in 1977, he was barely noticed.

But this year, he gained a whopping 1,762 yards for a 7.6 average per carry. In other numbers, that means every time you give him the ball on first down, he is going to give you a second and two.

Those accomplishments led to the Heisman Trophy, which in turn has already led to what he says is a better life.

"I haven't been spending money on dates, lately, they've been spending it on me."

Tomjanovich sidelined

HOUSTON (UPI) — Houston Rockets' sharpshooter Rudy Tomjanovich, who suffered a broken nose in Wednesday's game against Detroit, likely will regain the Rockets against New Jersey next Friday, a spokesman said.

Tomjanovich missed Friday's home game against Milwaukee and was expected to miss hosting the Detroit Pistons Saturday, but doctors said his injury was not serious and would cause him to miss only four or five days work.

He underwent extensive surgery after being knocked out of last season by a punch from Kermit Washington. The new injury was described as a simple nose fracture that did not damage the earlier facial reconstruction.

"I'm feeling all right," Tomjanovich said. "The doctor said I'd be out four or five days. I thought it might be longer, so I was sort of pleased to hear that."

"I was very worried about what the doctor who put me back together would say, but he talked to the doctor in Detroit and said I'd be okay."

Tomjanovich's latest injury resulted from an accidental elbow blow by Detroit's M.L. Carr, who sent Tomjanovich and the Rockets a long letter of apology.

"My first thought was that this was it for the season or maybe for my career," Tomjanovich said. "I had a lot of different thoughts...like how long I would be out, if I had re-damaged last year's injury."

"Then the guys who were around last year all came off the bench saying 'uh-oh...'"

Prices will never be better than right now . . .

Steelers and Broncos take 'word war' to playing field

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The "War of the Words" will be taken to the playing field Saturday when the Pittsburgh Steelers take on the Denver Broncos in an AFC semifinal playoff game.

The victor will meet the winner of Sunday's Houston-New England game on Jan. 7 for a berth in the Super Bowl at Miami on Jan. 21.

The Broncos, who enter the game as underdogs despite being defending AFC champions, claim they are upset about derogatory statements made by several of the Steelers.

Craig Morton will start at quarterback for Denver and Bronco coach Red Miller says he'll use both Morton and reserve Norris-Weese on Saturday.

And the normally reserved Morton was emphatic in his dislike for the Steelers' attitude toward his club.

"I think we're all excited because everyone says no one can beat the mighty Steelers," said Morton with a tinge of disdain in his voice. "All I read about was that they were praying to play Denver. Now they've got their wish. We won't out-talk them but we're certainly going to try to outplay them."

Defensive end Lyle Alzado, on the other hand, is probably the most outspoken of the Broncos and he agreed that the Steelers were underestimating Denver.

"Coach Miller gave us some clippings from the Pittsburgh papers," said Alzado. "Joe Greene and Jack Lambert and some people were saying things about how they (Broncos) had to come to us now and they don't have a chance. They said things like 'the Broncos will never see anything like the ferocity or intensity they'll see this week.'"

"Bull. I don't like that. To me that says we don't belong here and I think we do."

On paper, the game appears to be a matchup of Pittsburgh's high-powered offense and the stingiest defense in the NFL against Denver's emotionally-charged defense and much-maligned offense.

Steelers coach Chuck Noll said the talk about the Morton-Weese quarterback situation at Denver had no effect on him.

"There's no real difference in the way we prepare," he said. "It's more a mental than physical preparation. There are more things Morton does that Weese doesn't do. Our guys know what it is. It's nothing that has to be done on the field. I really don't care who plays quarterback for them."

"We look at this game as an opportunity and this team has taken advantage of opportunities in the past. We just have to wait and see how we react this time around."

Terry Bradshaw and Lynn Swann, co-captain, feel they can win if they don't make mistakes.

"We have to eliminate turnovers," said Bradshaw. "We have to keep the ball away from their offense. The key is not to make mistakes."

"We just can't turn the ball over," said Swann. "We did that last year in the playoffs and it cost us the game. They thrive on peoples' errors and we can't afford to make any."

Alzado said the key for Denver was to get some offense.

"If our offense can control the ball a while, we can win," said Al-Pro. "I think we can beat Pittsburgh. We can do it if we're not on the field all day. If our defense is on all day we'll get the hell knocked out of us."

The National Weather Service predicted temperatures in the 40s with a chance of rain during the game. Three Rivers Stadium has an artificial surface.

Denver finished 10-6 and won the AFC Western Division title for the second straight year, the only playoff appearance in the club's 19-year history. The Broncos went on last season to defeat Pittsburgh and Oakland in the AFC playoffs before losing to Dallas in the Super Bowl in January.

Pittsburgh's 14-2 record was the best in the league this year and the 14 victories in a season tied a league record set by Miami 24-0 in 1972.

The Steelers, AFC Central champions for the fifth time, will be making an AFC record seventh consecutive playoff appearance.

The clubs have met seven times in the past, with Denver winning four, Pittsburgh two and one ending in a tie. They met 150 weeks ago in Denver in the final game of the regular season and Pittsburgh surged to a 21-0 lead and then stopped the Broncos on the goal line on the final play of the game to preserve a 31-7 victory. It must be noted, however, that both clubs already had climbed division titles and reserves played most of the second half.

"We really didn't play that game with playoff intensity," said Steeler defensive tackle Joe Greene. "The Broncos will see a different kind of intensity Saturday, one they haven't seen in us before. Last year we had the hunger to beat them but we didn't have all our weapons. This year we have the weapons."

Alabama-Penn St. war may hinge on field goal spread

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — An impartial observer familiar with both teams, coach Johnny Majors of Tennessee, said Friday he wouldn't be all surprised if the New Year's Day Sugar Bowl game between top-ranked Penn State and second-ranked Alabama was decided by a field goal.

Majors didn't want to go on record by picking a winner, but he pointed to Penn State's great physical strength in the defensive line as a possible deciding factor in the game.

The Tennessee coach watched Alabama beat his club, 30-17, earlier this season and he also is very familiar with Penn State's style, having coached Pittsburgh to a national championship in 1976.

"I hope it's a great game. I really don't want to get involved in discussing it because I'm only here as a spectator," said Majors. "But Penn State physically up front is a factor and I think the kicking game could be very important."

"If both teams play their regular game, a field goal should decide it."

Majors said there were many similarities between the two teams.

"Both teams are very quick and strong, both have strong leadership at quarterback and both can throw the ball," said Majors. "Alabama is unique in that it's a wishbone team that can throw."

Alabama's wishbone offense is one of the major problems confronting Penn State. The Nittany Lions have not seen a wishbone since losing to Alabama in the Sugar Bowl two years ago and it poses all kinds of new no-nonsense for a team whose strong suit is an aggressive defense.

"With other clubs you can be more reckless," admits Penn State's Joe Lally, a senior defensive end, "because they usually only have one guy who you have to stop. When you're playing a wishbone they have four different things they can do. It sometimes takes away your aggressiveness."

"Personally, I think Alabama's strongest point is the veer. Their fullbacks are hard to bring down. You have to gang tackle them. It's in the back of your mind that you might become too cautious and take away from what you usually do, but we've been very well prepared."

The key to Alabama's offense is quarterback Jeff Rutledge. Although not a strong runner as wishbone quarterbacks go, he is an excellent passer and has thrown more touchdown passes (30) than any quarterback in Alabama history.

"It (the wishbone) will present a lot of problems to them," said Rutledge. "I hope it will keep them confused a little bit. I feel we're going to have to put the ball in the air to keep them honest."

Many observers believe that Alabama is better prepared for this game because it's played a tougher schedule than Penn State. Rutledge, however, doesn't buy that.

"They've played more bowl teams than we have," Rutledge said. "They've played five bowl teams (Rutgers, North Carolina State, Pittsburg, Ohio State and Penn State) and we've played four (Southern California, Nebraska, Missouri and LSU)."

While Penn State is confronted with containing the wishbone, Alabama defensive tackle Marty Lyons believes the key to beating Penn State is stopping quarterback Chuck Fusina.

"One way to beat Penn State is to put pressure on their quarterback. He's the key to their offense," said Lyons, a 6-foot-5, 250-pound senior who was the defensive player of the year in the Southeastern Conference.

"He's a good leader and he knows what he has to do. I don't think anyone has put a good rush on Fusina this year. It's hard to get to him through those blockers."

If the Crimson Tide defense is to pressure Fusina, it will have to offer a stronger pass rush than it has shown for most of the season. At times this season the Alabama pass rush was virtually non-existent and the defensive unit surrendered more total passing yards than team ever under Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant.

Lyons, however, believes the pass rush has matured considerably since the early part of the campaign.

"Steve had a period of time where he was up and over Darryl's injury. There was a period when he wasn't throwing the ball very well, and he subconsciously wanted his receivers to be wide open," Fairbanks said.

paralyzing injury suffered by Darryl Singley in an Aug. 12 exhibition game. Grogan's pass was a bit overthrown and Singley fractured two vertebrae when he leaped for the ball and was hit in mid-air by Oakland's Jack Tatum.

"Steve had a period of time where he was up and over Darryl's injury. There was a period when he wasn't throwing the ball very well, and he subconsciously wanted his receivers to be wide open," Fairbanks said.

"The knee is fine, and I have one hundred percent mobility," said Grogan, who suffered the injury while warming up before the Dec. 18 game against Miami. In that game he gave way to backup Tom Owen and has been on a restricted practice schedule since then.

Coach Chuck Fairbanks said he doubted Grogan would have been ready to play had the injury played last weekend. But he expected his quarterback to be ready on Sunday.

"Steve may have a cartilage problem, but it's difficult to tell. When the season is over, there will be an extensive examination and he may have to have some cartilage removed. But I'm just guessing," Fairbanks said. "Steve has got to be feeling pretty bad before you know anything is wrong."

Fairbanks said Grogan's slow start this season was partially due to the Red tape may not wrap up MV projects

TWIN FALLS — Small communities in Magic Valley, hampered in growth and development by the lack of adequate water and sewer facilities, may find good news in the Carter Administration's new water and sewer plan.

If nothing else, the Rural Initiatives for Water and Sewer Programs is designed to eliminate much of the paperwork which often slows down or virtually eliminates many towns from obtaining project grants or loans. Under provisions of the Carter Administration's initiatives, a year or more can be cut from average processing time on rural water and sewer grant and loan applications. This will result in savings to both the federal government and local governments. The administration proposes a single set of forms which can be prepared by the rural community boards and engineers to serve all agencies involved in such projects.

In the Magic Valley, several communities, including Buhl, Kimberly, Shoshone, Ketchum, Hansen, Jerome, Hazelton, Oakley, Rupert and Filer, have been seeking federal assistance for projects which will bring them into compliance with state and federal standards.

Small sewer systems that are outdated, or operating at or beyond capacity, have resulted in building moratoriums in some small communities.

Some communities have passed bond issues, obligating taxpayers to long-term payments to build sewer and water systems, only to find one additional industry or several housing developments in a single year which will outdate the project. These communities are hard pressed to upgrade with the debt of a new bond issue hanging over the heads of residents.

In recent years, communities have had to deal with additional agencies like the Economic Development Administration, the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Environmental Protection Agency that send numerous documents and copies of documents, properly adjudicated and signed, to each of these and other agencies.

Proof of compliance required by such regulations as the National Environmental Protection Act, the Civil Rights Act of 1974, the Davis Bacon Act, the Coastal Zone Management Act and others are currently required by HUD or EPA.

Tom Flemming, executive director of Region Four Development Association, an agency formed to assist rural and urban governments in Magic Valley obtain federal funding for such projects, said the plan sounds good.

He said he has not yet had an opportunity to study the Rural Initiatives plan, but on the surface it sounds as though many rural communities in this area may benefit.

"We have been going for the HUD block grant funds but these are generally awarded to urban area projects only. It has been difficult for us to obtain help for the rural areas," Flemming said.

"I would certainly welcome anything that would speed up our application process and if there will be additional funding for rural programs, we will want to take immediate advantage of it," Flemming said.

President Carter announced $2.5 billion in federal funds will be available to help rural areas and small towns in fiscal year 1979, an increase of about a half billion dollars over that available in previous administrations. The funds are provided by Farm Home Administration, HUD, EPA and FDA.

In addition, a new grant of $3.5 million to the National Demonstration Water Project was also announced. This is a network of 75 organizations working in 25 states to improve delivery of water and sewer services to low-income rural residents.

Flemming said funds for Shoshone area were committed and should be forthcoming in January. Another Region Four project, the $200,000 sewer improvement to the Twin Falls sewer treatment plant, is progressing but still in process, Flemming said.

He said all 1979 HUD funds previously budgeted have been committed and additional money through HUD or FHA would be welcome in the region.

On impact area, comprehensive study

Jerome city, county plans incompleted

JEROME — Jerome city and county building officials will enter another year without an impact area plan and a comprehensive plan and no indication when they will have them.

A draft of Jerome County's proposed comprehensive plan will be reviewed by the county's planning and zoning board Jan. 6.

The board work session will be held at 1 p.m. that Saturday in the commissioners' second-floor room in the Jerome County Courthouse.

According to S.M. "Shaw" Weeks, the county's planning and zoning administrator, the board will "review what has been done so far."

This is one of several meetings the board probably will have to look over the various reports, Weeks said.

Weeks said public hearings will be held by the board on its rough draft before sending a proposed plan to the commissioners.

The county commissioners must hold public hearings before formally adopting a comprehensive plan.

Once a county comprehensive plan becomes law, it may clear the way for the City of Jerome to establish an impact area, city officials said.

Mayor Marshall Everheart said the impact area plan is being held up until the county adopts a comprehensive plan.

"These things are kind of tied in with the county's planning and zoning and it's kind of hard to get tied in with them until the county's (comprehensive plan) is completed," Everheart said.

The law required Idaho cities to designate an impact area by last July 1. If that deadline expires, only about 10 percent of the state's communities have set up an impact area.

He estimated most cities that haven't set up an impact area have, like Jerome, been awaiting a county comprehensive plan. There is no law for communities not meeting the deadline.

The mayor said he expects the subject will be discussed early in 1979 with the Jerome County Commissioners, but he has no idea just when it could be completed because of the uncertainty on the comprehensive plan.

Until then, he said the city and county will continue handling building permit requests in the city's old impact area — designated as being within a mile of the city limits — in an "informal" manner.

In the interim period, anyone submitting subdivision plans in that area has been required by the commissioners to get City Council approval, Weeks noted. Those building single units simply must follow county regulations.

Hearing on Terris continues

TWIN FALLS — A preliminary hearing for Kevin Terris, 35, of Filer, on charges of receiving stolen property, was expected to continue through most of Tuesday in Magistrate Court here, officials said Friday.

The hearing, closed to the public and press, opened Thursday and continued through Friday.

Terris is charged with receiving a stolen automobile. He is the owner of the Captain's Table, a bar and restaurant which was closed several weeks ago by fire. Filer, is continuing to investigate the fire in which a former Filer man, Jim Bridgeman, died.

Magistrate Melvin Edwards is hearing the preliminary testimony and will determine if the defendant will be bound over for district court action.

Officers said Friday it has been necessary to bring witnesses from Boise and California for the preliminary hearing because certified documents could not be admitted as evidence.

Ketchum building permit limit set

KETCHUM — The Ketchum City Council passed a development allotment ordinance for 1979 at a special meeting Thursday.

The ordinance provides for the establishment of a five-member design review committee, whose members will evaluate designs for single- and multiple-family dwellings requiring building permits.

The committee will give the proposals favorable or unfavorable recommendations that will be forwarded to the City Council.

A total of 130 multiple-family and 50 single-family sewer connections will be available to builders in 1979.

The development allotment system was started this year when the state health department placed a limit of 150 new sewer connections on Ketchum during 1978. The limitation was ordered while improvements were made to the city sewer systems to control the release of certain effluents. The city council decided to continue the system next year as a means of controlling growth.

Waste plant engineer review set in Gooding

GOODING — The Gooding City Council will begin meetings Jan. 3 and 4 with several engineering firms interested in preparing designs for a new city waste disposal plant.

The first phase of the proposed waste treatment plant was designed by Hamilton and Voeller Inc., the same firm that designed the troubled Twin Falls and Rupert sewer treatment plants.

Despite objections from Mayor Don Morrow, the council decided in December to ask other firms to make presentations on the second phase.

The second phase is for the design of the plant and possible equipment that could be included in the proposed plant.

Hamilton and Voeller Engineer Ted Sorenson said his firm is "very interested" in getting the go-ahead for the second phase of the plant.

"I've kind of been hounding this all along and I'm real interested in getting to finish it," Sorenson said.

He said there was some disagreement with Environmental Protection Agency officials over whether a new plant should be built or whether the present plant should be updated.

He said there was almost no difference in the costs of building a new plant and updating the old one.

Chairman concerned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Agriculture Committee Chairman Tom Foley, D-Wash., said Friday he's concerned about the government's decision to divert 900 million pounds of potatoes into cattle feed.

Foley said the diversion could prolong the problem of overproduction and low prices into next year.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture announced the plan to take potatoes off the market in order to reduce Idaho's bumper crop.

HUGH U. PHILLIPS

QUESTION...

I have not worked under Social Security since my marriage several years ago. If something should happen to me would my husband and children have any Social Security benefits?

ANSWER...

Under a previous law your dependent survivors' rights to Social Security benefits were quite restricted. These regulations have been changed considerably and now if you are insured at the time of your death, your dependents may have benefits payable to them. Unmarried children are covered until age 18, if they attend an approved college, their earnings extend until their 23rd birthday. Your husband may be qualified for benefits, if you are fully insured, and he meets certain qualifications. Please call us, and we will mail you a Social Security Bulletin outlining these specific benefits.

Court upholds Bundy kidnap conviction

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Utah Supreme Court has upheld Theodore Bundy's 1976 conviction for the kidnaping of Carol DaFouch in Salt Lake City.

The high court unanimously rejected Bundy's challenge of his original conviction, and refused to grant the former University of Utah Law School student a new trial, Assistant Utah Attorney General Earl Dorius said Friday.

Bundy is awaiting trial in Tallahassee, Fla. for the slaying of two Chi Omega sorority members last January. The Florida Supreme Court recently postponed his trial on the double killing and removed the judge who was scheduled to hear it from the case.

"There were actually two appeals pending," Dorius said. "Bundy first appealed his conviction, then later asked for a new trial, based on his claim that he discovered new evidence which warranted a trial on a murder charge in Colorado."

The appeals were consolidated by the Supreme Court, Dorius said.

Bundy asked that his conviction be overturned because of a claim that police pressured DaFouch into identifying him. He said their procedures were designed to suggest to her that he was the man who kidnaped her.

Bundy claimed the new evidence was contained in personal notes made by Salt Lake County Sheriff's Deputy Jerry Thompson. The deputy's notes, which never surfaced during the kidnaping trial, indicated Thompson initially thought DaFouch was a poor witness.

Those notes should have been given to his defense attorney prior to the trial, Bundy argued.

He also claimed he did not consent to a police search of his automobile.

Initiative relief mandate

BOISE (UPI) — The Associated Taxpayers of Idaho said Friday the 1 percent initiative is a mandate for tax relief and not a mandate for a tax shift and spending.

The comment came in a series of assumptions on the initiative. The association said it formulated "due to the unclear, conflicting, and general unworkable nature of the 1 percent initiative law in its present form."

The association also said passage of the initiative expresses the desire of taxpayers for a common basis of calculation and liability which would remain constant to govern the imposition of the property tax.

"Repealing repeal of the recommended 4-mill county school levy and having the state assume 5 mills of the school district levy, reducing that levy to 2.2 mills. Both actions, the association contends, can be funded by identifying and appropriating $22 million from the state general fund in the first session of the 45th Legislature."

"Freezing property tax charges for all 84 taxing districts at 1978 levels for two years.

The association said combining those two actions should provide to the property taxpayer an estimated $115 million of property tax relief in 1979.

Hard Christmas candy brings pilot through

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A retired Air Force officer survived the 7,000-foot Oneinger plane in the crash of his single-engine biplane by eating hard Christmas candy for 36 hours and battling sub-zero temperatures by warming his feet inside his coat.

Other pilots said that Merle E. Harris, 45, Bakersfield, Calif., did exactly the right thing when he crash landed his plane Wednesday night in a forest near Three Mile High Canyon, Utah. Harris was taken to the University of Utah Hospital after a JH1 Air Force B-52 helicopter plucked him from the peak about 3.5 miles from Cedar Fort in Utah County Friday morning. His condition was not yet known but his daughter, Julie Harris Andrews said he was fine.

Harris, a 20-year Air Force veteran, left the Ogden Airport for California about 9 p.m. Wednesday, Mrs.

Andrews said. He had just flown her and her husband Ralph, students at Weber State College, back to Ogden from Bakersfield where they had spent Christmas.

Mrs. Harris said the Civil Air Patrol heard Harris' emergency locator signal before he was even reported missing.

Searchers combed the mountain ridge but were hampered by winds and blowing snow. They spotted flashes of light Thursday night on the peak but had to call off the search for a time because of fog and darkness.

Then a search plane spotted the light again in the previous Friday and the helicopter began zeroing-in on the area. Wind kept the chopper from landing for awhile but it finally touched down up a ridge from the crash site.

Marvin case on docket

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Preliminary arguments in the Marvin case, which is changing the rules of man and mistress relationships, are scheduled to start Jan. 9.

The suit, brought against actor Lee Marvin by his former girlfriend, was assigned Thursday to Superior Court Judge Arthur R. Marshall, who will set hearing date but said jury selection will not begin until after he rules on how the trial will be conducted.

The suit was filed by Marvin and Marvin, 54, by singer Michele Triola Marvin, 45, who lived with the actor for six years, adding his name to hers although they were not married.

A California Supreme Court ruling, ordering lower courts to hear the case; was a legal landmark, holding that men and women who live together without getting married acquire the same property rights as married couples.

The ruling has been applied mostly in suits against wealthy entertainers by former mistresses, seeking the equivalent of the property they would have received if they were wives.

Miss Marvin lived with Marvin from 1964 to 1970, when they split up and she married another woman. She said they agreed she would give up her singing career and function as his wife and he was to support her.

The original suit filed in 1972 asked $1 million as her share their joint property, plus a half interest in his Malibu home and in a record company.

Marvin filed a countersuit in 1976, asking $1 million as compensation for providing her companionship, counseling, entertainment and other services.

Miss Marvin's attorney, Marvin Mitchellson, estimated the trial will take about six weeks.

Turbine approval error explained

FRANKINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Washington said a misunderstanding resulted in his erroneous announcement Thursday that final approval would be given Friday to an application to install hydroelectric turbines in Idaho Falls' hydroelectric complex.

Church said the misunderstanding was between the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the staff of the Subcommittee on the Energy Research and Development, which Church chairs.

Church said a staff technical report recommending the license be approved was completed Friday and that a final vote of the commission on the application will come within the next month.

"I expect final approval with the next month," Church said, noting the agency very quickly and that no problems have arisen to block ultimate approval.

"However, in its conversations with the agency on the progress of the application, the subcommittee staff misunderstood (Friday's) action as representing final approval, which is not the case."
