Evans proposes gradual 1% phase-in

By DAVID MURRISSEY
Times-News writer
BOISE — Gov. John Evans Monday called for a gradual phase-in of the 1 percent initiative, proposing five possible "middle courses" of action by which the tax cutting measure can be put into effect.

Expenditures, advocated across-the-board taxing powers for local units of government and encouraged implementation of most of the tax reform measures suggested by his recent Task Force on Taxation.

problems and must be enacted carefully, Evans proposed five possible methods of putting the initiative into effect. These were:

under "strict budget controls." Under this proposal, Evans said, "any taxes still in excess of 1 percent would be paid by the state and not the taxpayer," until the initiative is fully phased in.

mahogany platform in the House of Representatives chambers, where two years ago he was first sworn in as an elected governor, the 53-year-old Malad native repeatedly urged caution and restraint in implementation of the initiative's provisions.

Some voters believe the initiative will be "a panacea, a cure-all for what they perceive to be all the ills of government, at all levels," Evans said, but legislators and local officials must deal with the "hard facts" of the measures. Those facts include a fiscal impact that "will reduce local tax revenues an average of 50 percent."

Senators oppose proposal

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans' proposal to phase in the 1 percent initiative met opposition in the Senate and won only lukewarm response in the House after his State of the State address Monday.

Senate leaders in both parties said they felt the property tax limitation law was a mandate of the people and that tax relief should be given as soon as possible.

House leaders showed a little more interest in gradually phasing in the initiative but they felt Evans' 1980 recommendation for full implementation was too far away.

"I have personally favored a phase-in approach but not the one he suggested," House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, said. "I favor phasing it in but not as long as his."

"The governor certainly covered a lot of ground in his address," he added. "He did a much better job outlining the problems than suggesting solutions. But he did say it is up to the Legislature to resolve which is appropriate."

"I can certainly appreciate the governor didn't make specific proposals. It's just as well he covered the subject matter in generalities," Chairman Steve Antone, R-Rupert, of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee. "I thought it was really a good address. On the 1 percent I think he picked out the flaws really good. I don't think the people in the Legislature are going to stand for phasing it in gradually. (However) Phasing it in by 1980 I personally would favor if we could get by with it."

Senate President Pro Tem Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, said he felt that the governor "recognizes he has the same dilemma as the Legislature and is trying to work out a solution and follow the mandate of the people and not wreck havoc."

Budge said he would like to see the initiative implemented as soon as possible because "the people expect us to do the job."

British threats ease

LONDON (UPI) — A threat of nationwide fuel and food shortages eased Monday when gasoline tank-truck drivers for Shell and Esso became the first of thousands of wildcat strikers to reach a pay agreement.

Battle to Hanoi but war may go on WASHINGTON — Vietnam has won the battles but not necessarily the war in its attempt to impose a compliant regime on Cambodia, because the fall of Phnom Penh does not ensure peace for that tortured land.

Despite its exhausted condition from almost four years of savage purges, Cambodia might now fight a dogged guerrilla resistance to the historically hated Vietnamese.

immediately known. But as the loss of their capital appeared imminent on Friday, Pol Pot told his people in a radio address that "the army and the people, side by side, are conducting a people's war against the hated Vietnamese invader. The fighting will go on for eternity, if necessary, until the aggressors have been completely defeated."

Snail darter still imperiled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Environmentalists Monday fought efforts to exempt the Tellico dam project in Tennessee from the Endangered Species Act, a move that would permit completion of the dam and the destruction of the breeding ground of the rare snail darter.

Environmentalists said the Tellico decision will set an important precedent for the endangered species program.

He said supporters of the project have "misdirected and misguided" people in the economically depressed Tellico area by promising them "instantaneous jobs."

High court to review Idaho's takeover law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court has agreed to review lower-court rulings invalidating Idaho's corporate takeover law.

U.S. District Court in Texas after it was invoked during the company's fight to gain control of Sunshine Mining Co., a publicly owned company which is incorporated in Washington state and headquartered in Idaho.

Thirty-one states beside Idaho also have laws, all enacted since the late 1960s, which regulate corporate takeovers through a tender offer.

When Great Western made a tender offer in March 1977 for 2 million shares of Sunshine common stock, it filed required disclosure forms with the Securities and Exchange Commission and with the Idaho commissioner of finance — the first filing ever made under the state's takeover law.

In the Wyoming case, the Interior Department endorsed an agreement calling for the Missouri Basin Power Project to provide guaranteed water supply from the Graylocks Dam and Reservoir and setting up a $7.5 million trust fund to maintain and protect the bird's habitat.

The Tellico project, a part of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and a Wyoming project that threatens the whooping crane were the first two cases submitted to the committee. A decision is expected early next month.

Opponents of the project insisted alternative plans are available, and some would provide greater benefits than the dam and reservoir.

Smoke, flames boll up from blasted, burning French supertanker

Death toll in Irish tanker blast hits 50

BANTRY, Ireland (UPI) — Two explosions tore through a French supertanker as it unloaded its cargo Monday, hurling dozens of crewmembers to their deaths in a flaming sea of oil that threatened to ignite Ireland's biggest oil terminal.

Officials said 43 crewmembers of the French tanker Beteleuse and seven dockworkers died in the blasts and fires. The dead included one woman, the wife of the ship's baker.

"It was like looking into the flames of hell," said one witness.

"Like hell itself," said another.

The death toll was believed to be one of the highest recorded for an oil tanker disaster.

Almost 24 hours after the blasts, the oily blaze still burned ferociously around the cracked tanker, sending up a black, funnel-shaped cloud of smoke that could be seen for miles.

Authorities said there were about 40,000 tons of oil still aboard when the vessel erupted in flames, but there was no way of telling how much was left to burn. They said it was possible the fire could jump from the stern, where it was concentrated, and trigger another explosion.

The tanker, docked at a Gulf Oil ocean terminal, had unloaded two-thirds of its 120,000-ton cargo of Saudi Arabian oil when it was ripped apart by a devastating blast shortly before 1 a.m. A second blast, heard 10 miles away, followed immediately, and some reports said the victims' bodies were tossed like dolls into the flaming, oil-slicked sea.

Carter plan in offing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democratic National Chairman John White said Monday he expects President Carter soon will set up a 1980 re-election committee, but will not announce his candidacy until late this year at the earliest.

White said he does not expect Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., or any other prominent Democrat to challenge Carter in 1980.

In an interview with UPI, White said the Carter re-election campaign would be run by an independent committee, but predicted top Carter aide Hamilton Jordan will run the campaign — even if he does not leave the White House staff.

White said he expects Vice President Walter Mondale to stay on the Carter ticket for a second term.

Voyager sends pictures

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Voyager 1, three days into its close investigation of the planet Jupiter, sent back nearly 100 pictures of the giant planet during the weekend showing intense atmospheric activity, a Jet Propulsion Laboratory spokesman said Monday.

"Everything is working well and the pictures are excellent," Don Bane said.

The space probe, one of two on fly-by Journeys near Jupiter and Saturn, was 34.6 million miles from Jupiter Monday, with a velocity of 30,360 miles per hour relative to the sun.

Oil workers negotiate

DENVER (UPI) — A bargaining committee for 60,000 oil refinery workers Monday rejected contract offers from 21 companies, but was still studying an offer the union president said was encouraging.

A. F. Grosprun, president of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, said the proposals rejected called for a percentage increase in union members' pay, rather than a specific money offer.

More than 400 OCAW contracts with 235 companies expired at midnight Sunday, but Grosprun said there would be no strike until all contract offers had been studied.

Takeover plan denounced

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich said Monday any attempt by the state to take over Cleveland finances to avoid bankruptcy for the city amounted to "treason" of those involved.

Meanwhile, Cleveland City Council Monday night was expected to approve a plan to sell some city-owned land in an attempt to secure enough cash to avert the layoffs of 400 city employees, including 275 police officers.

The layoffs were to have taken effect Jan. 5, but Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Richard M. Markus granted a temporary restraining order prohibiting any layoffs until at least noon Tuesday. The move was designed to give the council sufficient time to consider the land-sales proposal.

Gradual phase-in of 1% initiative Evans' idea

Evans' remarks focused on nearly two dozen separate subjects. His State of the State, the third in his gubernatorial career, contained 28 recommendations for specific courses of action or new legislation.

But from the beginning of his address, Evans and his audience were primarily interested in one subject: taxes and the 1-percent initiative. More than half of the governor's address discussed methods of tax reduction.

Evans called on legislators to grant local units of government broad powers of local option taxation. Granting such powers would "make it possible for people by their vote to tax themselves for services they want and are willing to pay for," Evans said. "This will relieve the property tax burden."

This is the second year Evans has asked for local option taxation legislation. In 1978 the legislature approved limited local option taxing powers for resort cities.

Evans also drew applause from the audience packed into the House chambers when he said he had introduced legislation that would "limit the size of state government expenditures."

The measure would create a sliding scale that would limit general account expenditures "to 5 1/2 percent of personal income in Idaho," Evans said. That percentage is close to the current rate of general account expenditures, the governor said, adding that "if we had had such a limitation in the past, state expenditures in 1979 would have been $28 million less than they were."

His legislation would give taxpayers "a legal guarantee that their government will grow no faster than their ability to pay."

The governor also called for implementation of the major proposals contained in a report of the Governor's Committee on Taxation. That committee, chaired by former state legislator Perry Swisher, released last September a 100-page analysis of Idaho's taxation system. Evans said the legislature should adopt the following committee recommendations:

- Require tax notices to be expressed in dollars and cents, not as presently expressed, in mills, assessment ratios and assessed values.
- Provide taxpayers with an estimate of their taxes before appeal deadlines have passed.
- Make the Idaho income tax more progressive.
- Lower local property taxes by assuming greater state responsibility for public education.
- Provide changes in the taxing structure that would "insure that existing property owners do not subsidize the taxes of new property owners."
- Close corporate loopholes in the income tax.
- Extend the grocery tax credit to low income Idahoans.

Provide county assessors necessary property sales price information so they can improve the uniformity of property valuations.

Evans also called on legislators to reduce through consolidation or elimination the number of special taxing districts. Pointing out "there are close to 900 separate, completely independent taxing districts operating at the local level," Evans said no new districts should be formed unless absolutely needed. New districts should also require a two-thirds vote of approval to be created.

Kimball describes revelation conflict

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball has revealed for the first time the conflict he experienced when he received the revelation from God that blacks should receive his church's priesthood.

Kimball said he sat in the Salt Lake Temple with his Church of Twelve Apostles in a prayer circle and "knew the time had come."

The church leader broke his silence on the revelation process in an interview published in the church-owned Deseret News.

Kimball announced June 8 that the Mormon priesthood would be open to "all worthy male members," including blacks, who had been excluded from full participation in the church for its 148-year history.

"I went to the temple alone. It went on for some time as I was searching for this, because I wanted to be sure. We held a meeting of the Council of the Twelve in the temple on the regular day. We considered this very seriously and thoughtfully and prayerfully."

"I asked the Twelve not to go home when the time came. I said, 'Now would you like to remain in the temple with us?' And they were. I offered the final prayer and I told the Lord if it wasn't right, if He didn't want this change to come in the church, that I would be true to it all the rest of my life, and I'd fight the world against it if that's what He wanted."

"We had this special prayer circle, then I knew that the time had come. I had a great deal to fight, of course, myself, largely because I had grown up with this thought that Negroes should not have the priesthood and I was prepared to go all the rest of my life till my death and fight for it and defend it as it was."

"But this revelation and assurance came to me so clearly that there was no question about it."

The interview in which Kimball made his statements about the revelation was on the anniversary of his fifth year as "prophet, seer and revelator" of the world's more than three million Mormons.

Record power demands halt phosphate plants

BOISE (UPI) — Frigid weather pushed customer demands on Idaho Power Co.'s system to a winter record level Monday, putting a heavy drain on its supplies and causing scattered load outages throughout the Snake River Valley.

President James E. Bruce said the utility was forced to take "drastic measures" in order to continue serving its firm load, which consists chiefly of residential and commercial customers.

"The heavy drain on our available resources made it necessary for us to interrupt supplies to the eastern Idaho phosphate industry to the bone and to draw down Brownlee and our other reservoirs to get every possible kilowatt out of our hydro plants," he said.

In addition, the firm put its 50,000 kilowatt standby combustion turbine at Hallett into service to help carry the load in the Sun Valley-Wood River area.

Bruce said Idaho Power tried unsuccessfully to obtain power from other western utilities to supplement its own resources during the high demand period.

Monday's record winter hourly peak load was 1,713,000 kilowatts, reached between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m. The mark eclipsed the old record of 1,654,000 kilowatts, set last Tuesday.

"If the FMC and Monsanto plants in eastern Idaho had been receiving their normal supplies, the peak demand on our system would have exceeded the summer hourly peak demand of 1,960,000 kilowatts reached in 1976," Bruce said. The two firms were cut early Monday.

Today's weather

Change, don't discard those long handles

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and Nordstede areas:

Cold temperatures are expected to continue through Wednesday with periods of light snow likely today and Wednesday. Lows will be near zero to 5 degrees tonight and highs 15 to 20 Tuesday and 20 to 25 on Wednesday.

Camas Prairie, Halley and Upper Wood River Valley:

It will be cold with periods of light snow today through Wednesday with temperatures warming slightly by Wednesday. Lows zero to 5 below tonight and high near 15 today.

Synopsis: Cloudy skies moved into Idaho Monday ahead of a Pacific frontal system which was moving into California and Oregon. Some reports of scattered snow showers and fog in these areas have been issued. The frontal system is expected to reach Idaho today or Wednesday, bringing a chance of snow showers by that time.

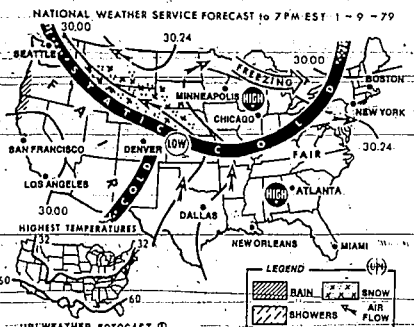

Low temperatures in Idaho Monday indicated the cold air mass is still over the state. The warmest overnight low was 4 degrees at Mountain Home and the low Monday morning reading was 35 below zero at Salmon. Other lows reported included 23 below at Elk City and 18 below at Fairfield. Grangeville had 4 below and Gooding reported two below.

The Weather Service reports a threat of flooding due to ice jams at several places along the Snake River and on some other streams. Concern continues for the Blackfoot area and a flood warning is still in effect for the Weiser area although the river is beginning to drop slightly. Residents near the river at Weiser who are living in low areas have been advised to prepare for possible evacuation.

The three-to-five day outlook in southern Idaho continues to call for light snow, probably on Thursday and Friday. Temperatures are expected to be a little warmer with highs climbing to about 30 degrees by Saturday.

Disorder worsens in Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Deadly and worsening rioting Monday threatened the monarchy and the new civilian government and plunged Iran's capital city into a breakdown of law and order bordering on anarchy.

Violent demonstrations also raged in the northwestern city of Tabriz, where fires were reported burning all over town.

In what could be a serious political setback to the new government, diplomatic sources said Gen. Feri-doun Jam, who had been announced as the war minister in the new cabinet, declined to accept the post.

The sources said that Jam, a former chief of staff who had been living abroad, returned to Tehran, decided the new government's chances of survival were slim and declined the job.

Troops shot dead at least five Tehran demonstrators. It was the second consecutive day of violent defiance of the new government formed by Premier Shapour Bakhtiar at the request of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi. An undetermined number of wounded were taken to three hospitals in the city.

There were demonstrations throughout Iran against the monarchy and the nation's fourth government in just five months. Most were peaceful.

In Tabriz, a city of 500,000, six of eight cinemas set ablaze were still burning at dusk.

The official radio also reported widespread violence in other provincial centers.

The increasing violence fed speculation that there could be a right-wing coup by hard-liners who support the shah.

Diplomatic sources in the capital, however, hold to the view that the shah may leave the country — even for a short period — in the hope of restoring peace.

Repudiation call issued by Sihanouk

PEKING (UPI) — Former Cambodian chief of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk Monday said he is no friend of the communist regime that took over his homeland four years ago, but he feels the world must repudiate the Vietnamese-led forces that seized Phnom Penh this week.

Before they abandoned Phnom Penh to a combined force of Vietnamese troops and Cambodian rebels, the Khmer Rouge regime freed Sihanouk from house arrest, apparently so the dashing prince — the former playboy is far better known in diplomatic circles than his mysterious captors — could plead Cambodia's case at the United Nations.

Sihanouk said he was willing to appear before the U.N. Security Council to appeal for urgent action to oppose the conquest of his country by Soviet-backed Vietnam. He noted his simultaneous criticism of the Khmer Rouge may make that impossible, but he was nevertheless scheduled to arrive at the United Nations late Tuesday.

Chinese Communist Party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng received Sihanouk late Monday, after the prince's rambling, five-hour news conference. The official New China News Agency said he reaffirmed China's support for the "government and people of Democratic Kampuchea in their struggle against Vietnamese invasion."

Vacationing Carter mum on Cambodia

GOSIER, Guadeloupe (UPI) — President Carter, on the last full day of a Caribbean vacation, got new reports Monday on the fall of Phnom Penh but took a low-key public approach to the Vietnamese military victory.

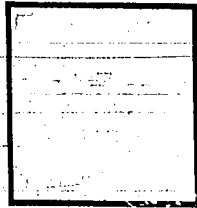

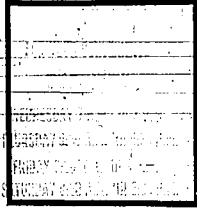

Carter got his usual written and oral intelligence briefings Monday morning. His national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, who also is in Guadeloupe, spoke by phone at least once Sunday with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

Carter and his wife are staying at the mountaintop home of the prefect of Guadeloupe. Although the day was cloudy and hazy, Carter had a panoramic view of the butterfly-shaped island and the volcanic cone of basse terre's Soufriere volcano, which erupted in 1976.

As he has done each morning in Guadeloupe, Carter got up early Monday to jog. This time his wife, Rosalynn, ran along with him at a fort near Gosier.

The president and his aides have said almost nothing publicly about the capture of the Cambodian capital by Vietnamese-led rebels, a development that would have been treated with great urgency only a few years ago. One aide suggested the reticence was calculated.

Strange events in Southeast Asia

How peculiar, the developments in Southeast Asia the past few days.

The communist government of Vietnam apparently has engineered a successful overthrow of one of the most terrible and barbaric governments in the world, the Khmer Rouge of Cambodia.

The world doesn't often see open warfare between two communist regimes and while the demise of the Khmer Rouge will not be mourned, the rise of the Vietnamese communists in Phnom Penh hardly seems a victory for human rights.

The Khmer Rouge and the Vietnamese communists share distinctions as a pair of repressive, closed, dangerously rigid governments.

How odd, trying to pick a winner from these two losers.

Another oddity in the clash between Cambodia and Vietnam is China's posture in the entire affair.

China has appealed to the United Nations to stop the fighting.

How ironic, since China only a decade ago denounced the U.N. as a front for the United States and three decades ago fought a war against U.N.-forces sent to Korea to stop the invasion of it.

No wonder the U.S. position concerning Cambodia is somewhat confusing.

Our government continues to pronounce its dislike of the Khmer Rouge just as we have done since the Pol Pot government led the Cambodian communist drive against the United States during the Vietnam war era.

But the state department also casts a jaundiced eye at Vietnam for invading Cambodia.

The U.S. hated the old regime and dislikes the new one.

This paradox of having to deplore both the winners and the losers of a brutal war is explained by author Muriel Spark. "Every communist," she wrote, "has a fascist frown, every fascist a communist smile."

Her point is that often one communist regime is as bad as the next.

Such is the case in Cambodia.

The ghostly Khmer Rouge government of Pot-Pot apparently has been crushed and a toast to that.

But the victors themselves will not toast not freedom for the Cambodian people but allegiance to a totalitarian reign of Vietnamese communists.

The new Vietnamese leaders of Cambodia have not a wit of experience in running a democratic nation although they have promised to repopulate the Cambodian cities and allow more religious freedom.

Even these concessions, alas, probably will only be a front for continued repression.

Communism is like prohibition, it's a good idea but it won't work no matter who sits on top of the heap.

Picking up the pieces won't be easy in Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The great hope in Iran is that the shah's fourth cabinet in five months may just work and pull the country out of the past 14 months of civil strife.

The great fear is that it may not, and drag the country instead into military rule or civil war, or both. Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar, 63, abandoned the radically anti-shah National Front to accept the shah's offer to take over from a military government which exacted a heavy price in human lives to keep a calm that never was.

His predecessor, Gen. Gholam Reza Azhari, the shah's former chief of staff, resigned pleading ill health and the need for a political solution. His handling of the crisis were diverted of influence, apparently at the bidding of Bakhtiar.

In agreeing to become premier, Bakhtiar invited expulsion and loud damnation from the opposition movement, which condemned him publicly as a "conspirator against the people."

If being an opposition personality was his virtue, Bakhtiar lost it when he accepted the shah's challenge to try to reverse the nation's plunge from the pinnacle of stability to the depth of chaos, all within 14 months.

But political analysts say Bakhtiar already has achieved what Kaafar Sharif-Emami — premier from Aug. 27 to Nov. 6 — did not dare demand of the shah, and what his successor Azhari did his utmost to prevent: He persuaded the shah to leave the country, if only for a "vacation."

Furthermore, if present indications are correct, Bakhtiar also suggested that the shah stick to a role of constitutional monarch, winding up his 38-year career as absolute ruler. If so, the shah committed himself to the switch.

The shah said Saturday he was tired and hinted he would go abroad to rest, leaving behind a regency council to take over his functions as constitutional monarch.

Despite the extremely vague nature of the statement — the shah still has not said when he intends to leave — the news began to ease the turmoil. Analysts believe that was the intention behind it.

Oil workers now are producing enough to heat Iranian homes, revive trains, bus, truck and air services, reopen bakeries — in short, remove the more frightening aspects of the year-long struggle against the shah. However, the fuel crisis still is far from solved.

Power workers plucked the capital and other cities in blackouts Saturday night, ignoring the change. Postal services and myriad other amenities in disarray showed no immediate signs of improvement.

Newspapers, on the other hand emerged after a 62-day protest against censorship and pledged to publish without official interference.

The government at some stage may free the pressures brought on by a free flow of information, something the outgoing military tried to stop. Any attempt by Bakhtiar to stop a hinder, that flow may go against him.

Avetallah Ruhlollah Khomeini, who commands immense loyalty among Iranians from his French exile, condemned Bakhtiar's government as "a dangerous plot designed by the treacherous shah."

At the same time he announced he considered the shah had abdicated already.

The ayatollah's call is bound to provoke a public response in Iran, if before. Should Bakhtiar consider himself doomed? Can he not count the sentence, since he must have expected it anyway from the moment he entered the shah's palace?

Sharif-Emami, who claimed family ties with the Shiite clergy, became premier hoping to bring Khomeini around. Azhari worked to drown the ayatollah's voice with gunfire. Both failed.

Surely, therefore, Bakhtiar could not enter the field with empty hands, say the analysts.

The premier, living under the shadow of his predecessors' failure, must expect little support from Khomeini and his followers.

Instead, he may find himself trying to make the best of the alternative — laying way for a democratic, elected government.

Bakhtiar's immediate problem, however, is going to be how best to neutralize his opposition, open the industrial-economic logjam by democratic means when the strongest use of military force could achieve nothing.

Please, tell your wife you love her

They met in a singles bar. Sometimes it works. It was the night before Halloween, 1975, a rainy night on Chicago's Division Street. Jack Edwards went into She-nannigans for a beer.

"I used to go into the bars a lot," Edwards will say now, now that she is dead. "I lived in a singles complex for a while, and I used to comb the streets just about every night. I was 32 years old and I didn't know what I wanted. That night in She-nannigans I saw her."

Her name was Kathy. She was drinking a beer. She was 26. Jack Edwards talked to her.

"It was noisy," he will say now. "There was music, and people were yelling for drinks. I just thought that I had to get her away from there. Looking back on it now, I think of all my time in the bars, and I think, this really isn't the way to live, is it?"

He got her telephone number. Two nights later they went out. Three weeks after that he asked her to marry him.

"Marry me," she said. She was clearly shocked.

"I want you to think about it," he said. "I'm not getting any younger, and neither are you."

"I don't know, with your background," she said.

He had never seemed to stay very long with a job. He had been a social worker, he had worked in a 7-11 store, he had worked on a cruise ship; now he sold insurance for Prudential. She wasn't sure about it, but they did it. She worked in the advertising department of a television station; he stayed with the insurance company; they bought a house. The singles bars days were behind them; they had started to make a life.

A few weeks ago they went to Acapulco for a vacation. Upon their return, Jack Edwards had some stomach troubles and stayed home from work. Kathy called him one afternoon.

"Jack, I know you don't feel good," she said. "But I fell down. I passed out. I don't know why. I think you'd better come get me."

By the time he arrived, she was vomiting and having severe headaches. She tried to speak, and her sentences were mixed up.

In the emergency room, she said, "Jack, am I going to die?"

He thought she was being silly. He thought she had caught a bug in Mexico.

But she had to stay in the hospital, and the headaches got worse. Her sentences went backwards.

He sat by her hospital bed. First she lost the ability to speak; then she lost the use of her right hand. She blinked her eyes at him. He thought she was trying to tell him something.

He looked around, and ripped a page out of a book about bullfighting. He handed it to her. She tried to write something on the page. The scrawl was barely readable.

Jack Edwards began to scream and yell. The nurses and doctors answered his panic, just before Kathy lost consciousness. He kissed her hands and took the rings from her fingers. He went to the hospital chapel and promised God that if He let her live, he would carry her around in his arms for the rest of her life.

Kathy Edwards died of a cerebral hemorrhage. She was 28.

"I remember the last time she walked out the door to go to work," Jack Edwards will say now. "You don't even kiss your wife goodbye. It happened so suddenly. . . . She was walking out the door and happy, and now she's dead."

"I wish I were a writer. I'd like to take some space out in the newspaper, and write something about her. We weren't so special, I know. . . . I'm just a little insurance man. But when someone makes your life so good, you just hate to let her leave the world without some kind of memorial to let people know she was alive.

"What would I say? I guess I'd tell people to look over at their husbands and wives and say to themselves: 'My God, look what I have here.' People take so much for granted, it's as if they think everyone is going to live forever, and they can put off their love and their appreciation until they have time."

"Here I am, saying these things about Kathy today, and it seems that I never said them to her when she was alive. She'd have to come to me with the kisses. I'm sitting home alone at night now, and I see her in the hallways. I see the furniture we bought, and I see her sitting beside me on the couch."

"If I could go back again, I would do everything differently. I would let her know how much she meant to me. But I can't do that, and it seems like the only thing I can do is try to make other people know it. Look at your husband. Look at your wife. If you think you have things pretty nice, say it out loud. Don't assume that they're going to be there forever. Someday they're going to walk out the door and never come back again. I didn't think of any of this until Kathy was dead. It's too late for me. It's not too late for others."

"ONE crack about all the weight I've gained over the holidays and I'll SIT on you!"

Who's most liberal?

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS
WASHINGTON — Ideological purity, like beauty, must lie in the eye of the beholder. Judging from the way two major Illinois-testing organizations rated the U.S. Senate last year. On the basis of votes on 20 selected issues, the liberal-Americans-for-Democratic Action gloomily concluded the Senate behaved like "a rich man's club" in 1978 and gave its members an average score of 42 points on a scale of 100 — 0 for more "conservative" than the 1977 average. The American Conservative Union, on the other hand, checked out the votes on 115 own list of 39 issues and decided the Senate grew more liberal in 1978. It awarded the members an overall 36.6 percent conservative rating, down from 38.7 percent in 1977. The difference, of course, lies primarily in the list of key issues each organization used as test votes. Both groups throw in a few "tests" that only "true believers" could pass; overwhelming majorities in the Senate vote against the position deemed "right" by the ADA or ACU, on these. One ADA test vote, for instance, involved an amendment by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., to slash $1.4 billion from the Defense Department's budget authority and cut actual Pentagon spending by $90 million. It took a "yes" vote to get a positive score from the ADA on that one, but the Senate rejected the amendment by a whopping 70-21 margin. The ACU had its own version — an amendment by Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, to increase defense budget authority by $1.6 billion and actual spending by $1.2 billion over the sums recommended. This one was defeated 42-21, but only the senators supporting the amendment got credit from the ACU for their conservatism. The two groups didn't even agree on who the most liberal and most conservative senators were in 1978. ADA gave its best scores (most liberal) to Sens. Howard Mitzmanbaum, D-Ohio (100 percent); Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. (95 percent); Dick Clark, D-Iowa (90 percent), and Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., D-Md. (90 percent). ADA's worst score — zero — went to Sens. Marjory Allen, D-Ala., and James McClure, R-Idaho. But ACU thought the most liberal senators (zero ratings on its own scale) were Daniel Inouye and Spark Matsunaga, both Hawaii Democrats, and Wendell Anderson, D-Minn. ACU gave 100 percent ratings to Sens. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., and Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

No cooperation seen from health industry

Chicago Sun-Times
WASHINGTON — Leaders of the health-care industry have come out swinging in response to a proposal by Health, Education and Welfare Sec. Joseph A. Califano Jr. that hospital cost increases be held to less than 10 percent in the coming year. If the Carter administration attempts to impose such a limit by law, the industry has a long fight ahead. Sammons of the American Medical Assn. said Friday after a strategy meeting of industry leaders here, "we'll beat 'em again."

This was a reference to the industry's success last year in defeating in the closing days of the 95th Congress a legislative proposal that would have imposed ceilings on hospital rate hikes.

"Callano, in recommending Dec. 28 that hospital costs be held to a 1979 level no more than 9.7 percent above 1978, was 'shooting from the hip,'" Sammons said. He and other leaders participating in a news conference used such words as "impossible" and "unrealistic" to describe Callano's recommendation. Instead of legally imposed ceilings, the industry leaders said, voluntary action by doctors and hospital administrators is the answer. This is proved, they said, by the fact that in 1978 voluntarism had cut 3.1 percentage points off the alarming rate-of-cost-increases-recorded in 1977. The industry was suggested by more than half the 2 percentage points that the industry was trying to achieve by voluntary means, they asserted. Repeatedly the leaders — who in student executives and lobbyists on medical, hospital and insurance organizations — insisted that they do not "want to get into a numbers game" with Callano. But it was clear that a numbers game was precisely what they were in.

It was not certain from what was said at the conference, that the industry leaders and their principal adversary in the Carter cabinet were really arguing about anything very substantive. It was suggested, and not effectively denied, that Callano's figures and those of the health-care industry might actually be closer than they appeared to be. The apparent discrepancies seem to arise out of confusion about two cost surveys periodically made by American Hospital Assn.-One, made yearly, is commonly known as the "annual survey," and covers about 85 percent of the nation's 5,881 hospitals.

Court accepts desegregation, handicapped rights cases

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to spell out, once more, the power of federal judges to desegregate schools in Northern cities.

The court said it would rule for the second time in less than two years on a plan for city-wide desegregation of public schools in Dayton, Ohio.

The justices also agreed to rule, for the first time, on a plan to begin city-wide desegregation in another major Ohio city, Columbus.

The court also moved Monday into the growing controversy over the rights of handicapped persons to public education.

The justices said they would rule on the authority of public colleges to refuse admission to a person solely because he or she is handicapped.

The court's actions came among a long list of orders dealing with test cases on civil rights.

In some of the other actions:

- The court agreed to decide whether the equal job rights guaranteed by the 1964 Civil Rights Act may be enforced by lawsuits in federal court, bypassing time-consuming procedures in a federal agency.
- Without comment, the court left intact a lower court ruling that it is illegal to force a worker to pay dues to a labor union in violation of that person's religious beliefs.
- By a vote of 7-2, the court ruled that the government may not gain more time to review changes in voting rights laws by asking officials to supply more data about them.
- The court refused to hear a claim that high school students have a constitutional right to sue if they are unjustly expelled from school athletic teams.

The court refused to hear a claim that a poor person who does not speak English has a constitutional right to have a free interpreter appointed during a civil case.

The court has been struggling for several years to guide federal judges on when an entire city's public schools may be ordered desegregated.

Its latest attempt had come in June of last year in an earlier stage of the Dayton, Ohio, test case.

There, a federal judge has ordered city-wide desegregation, involving the busing of about 15,000 students.

The court ordered a new look at that decision, declaring that the judge may have gone too far by ordering a remedy that was broader than the violation.

At the time, the ruling did not appear to have significantly changed the court's attitude about the scope of city-wide desegregation.

That, in fact, is exactly what a lower court concluded when it took the new look at the Dayton case.

The 6th U.S. Court of Appeals said that the Supreme Court had not meant to limit city-wide desegregation to situations where there was illegal segregation in every school in the community.

If specific instances of illegal segregation of students by race have an impact that spreads city-wide, a city-wide order to desegregate is permissible, the appeals court said.

The lower court used that reasoning in reinstating a city-wide desegregation order for Dayton schools, and for permitting city-wide desegregation in Columbus schools.

The desegregation plan in Dayton has been in effect for three school terms.

Justices to consider senatorial immunity

WASHINGTON — The right of a member of Congress to criticize private individuals who receive money from the federal government will be reviewed by the Supreme Court.

In a brief order issued Monday, the court said it would rule on the legal immunity of Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., for his well-known "Golden Fleece of the Month" award.

Proxmire has issued these awards, usually in statements heavy with sarcasm, to spotlight what he considers to be waste in government spending.

He got into legal trouble for one such award, however, aimed at federal agencies who gave a private scientist $500,000 to do research on what makes monkeys mad.

The court took action on the Proxmire case after returning from a three-week holiday recess. It issued a variety of other orders, including these:

- If agreed to decide whether agencies, in asking the White House for budget funds, have to declare publicly whether their proposed programs will harm the environment.
- The court left intact a jury verdict of $18,000 for a New Jersey woman who was attacked and raped as she waited for a subway train in Philadelphia. The case in her favor expands the right to sue transit companies for injuries on transit property.
- The court agreed to spell out further the kind of instructions a judge may give to a jury in cases involving the death penalty.
- By a vote of 6-3, the court refused to disturb a ruling that the city of Boston acted illegally in spending public funds to try to influence the outcome of a referendum election last fall.

Argentine banker could face new charges if he reappears

NEW YORK (UPI) — A state supreme court justice Monday dismissed an indictment against Argentine wheeler-dealer David Gralver, but said new charges of fraud can be brought against the 37-year-old banker if prosecutors can prove he is alive.

Last spring a special grand jury relied on a reported sighting of Gralver several weeks after he supposedly died in a Mexican plane crash on Aug. 7, 1976, and indicted him as the kingpin in a $30 million swindle that overturned American Bank and Trust Co. in New York. Gralver family attorneys, who contend Gralver is dead, asked to have the indictment thrown out so they can proceed with his wife Lidia's $30 million damage suit against the owner and operator of the wrecked Falcon jet.

"It is entirely possible Mr. Gralver is alive," Justice Arnold G. Fratman said, "but it seems to me in the best interest of justice at this time to dismiss the indictment against him conditionally."

Fratman said Gralver could be indicted again if prosecutors developed new evidence.

The judge said he was compelled to act now to allow Lidia Gralver's negligence suit to progress and to remove the financier as one of the four defendants in the ABT bank trial that begins Feb. 5. ABT was the fourth largest bank failure in U.S. history.

The indictment had supported speculation that Gralver, the reputed banker for Argentina's outlawed Montonero guerrillas and an owner of the New York bank, had staged the plane crash to hide his getaway with millions.

The judge dropped the Gralver indictment over the objections of Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau, who argued that the financier's "international connections make distant flight possible and a productive search difficult."

Morgenthau said his office had received information from various sources concerning Gralver's whereabouts since Fratman rejected the Gralver family attorney's first attempt to have the indictment dismissed last July.

But efforts to check out each lead have resulted in the development of no additional evidence, Morgenthau said.

New TV taken from Willie B.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Pity the burglars if Willie B., a 450-pound gorilla, ever catches the thieves who stole his color television set.

Someone burglarized the home of Grant Park zoo's television-watching gorilla during the weekend, slipping into the primate house and making off with the TV set that hung just outside the cage.

"It broke my heart when I heard about it. It was a really ratty deal," said Pat Dann, a spokesman for the Atlanta Zoological Society. "Whoever got that television needs to be put inside that cage with him."

They were doing," carefully cutting a heavy steel cable that held the set to a metal frame outside a plastic shield that wards off human germs from the 20-year-old gorilla's cage. The theft was discovered Saturday morning.

The $355 color television was hung in front of the gorilla's cage last Wednesday, and Willie B. had shown a fascination for it. The set was still there when custodians came to get tools for cleaning the snake house at 7:10 a.m. Saturday, but was missing when they returned the equipment.

The unidentified donor of the television offered a $200 reward for capture of the burglars.

What's what

Doing your own thing is not a new thing

The phrase "do your own thing" wasn't dreamed up initially by a hip street type with a flair for the vernacular. It was passed into the common lingo by collegiate people after it was coined long ago by Gestalt psychologist Fritz Perls. He wrote a "Gestalt Prayer" that goes: "I do my thing and you do your thing. I am not in this world to live up to your expectations and you are not in this world to live up to mine. You are you, and I am I, and if by chance we find each other, it's beautiful. If not, it can't be helped."

Would you be interested in owning a pair of false eyelashes once worn by the late Joan Crawford? Neither would I. Somebody would, though. At a New York City auction last year, such a pair brought $800.

The Chinese for centuries customarily rubbed themselves down after a bath not with a dry but with a wet towel.

LIVE ALONE

Q.—What proportion of the people who live alone are widowed, never married, divorced or separated?

A. Widowed, 44 percent. Never married, 30 percent. Divorced, 17 percent. Separated, 9 percent.

Q.—If capital punishment were to become common in all the United States, how many such executions could be expected nationwide annually?

A. About 190.

Odd thing about a snake's egg. If kept on growing after it's laid, Swells maybe as much as a third bigger before it's hatched.

It's now a matter of public record, too, that President Jimmy Carter sleeps in his underwear. And soundly, no doubt.

BEE VENOM

You've read that beekeepers, who are stung from time to time, don't suffer from arthritis. Am now advised they don't get cancer, either. Soviet researchers have come up with a bee venom serum they say successfully inoculates against arthritis, but for some reason it's outlawed in the U.S.

Just before Eustace Rushworth Burnett of Leicestershire, England, died in 1965, he swore that he'd long ago lost all desire to go to bed, and in fact, had not done so even once during the previous 58 years.

The portion of the earth's surface covered by glaciers—maybe 10 percent—is about equal to that portion of the earth's surface now being farmed.

A before-and-after example of Ray Mitchell's work: Mexican agate, left, and a beautiful stone

By United Press International
CHICAGO — Ray Mitchell has been grinding, cutting and polishing away at all kinds of minerals from the world over for 32 years.

A 76 years old, he still loves his work and isn't about to quit. In fact, he still likes to go to the original source, taking field trips to search out new materials for his lapidary work. He takes two months of each summer to visit relatives in California and hunt for rocks.

He works with anything from Mexican agate (as shown in top photo) to nephrite jade, petrified wood and Coconul-gode lined with quartz.

He is not one to keep his art to himself. For many years he has passed on his lapidary talent and wisdom to others in the form of Chicago Park District classes.

Football attire unusual

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Every Monday night my husband goes to a friend's house to watch Monday Night Football with a bunch of guys, so I find something else to do.

Well, last Monday night I went to a movie with a friend and the way she spotted my husband's car in front of his friend's house, so I thought I'd run in and say hi.

The door wasn't locked, so I just opened it and walked in. There I found my husband and three other guys sitting around in ladies' underwear, garter belts, wigs, high heels and makeup — the works. I nearly fainted.

They didn't seem upset at all. They just laughed it off. Abby, my husband is normal in every way. We have three children and our sex life is great, so I'm sure he isn't a homosexual.

What do you call a man who gets dressed up in women's clothes just for the heck of it?

HONEY IN OMAHA

DEAR HONEY: A transvestite. And in Omaha, he's a MID-vestite.

DEAR ABBY: In answer to the woman who was sure her husband was on drugs but didn't know what to do about it, you were absolutely right! He must admit that he needs help before anything can be done for him.

But what about the wife? She's going out of her mind worrying about him. A few years ago I was in a similar situation — only it was my son who was on drugs. I felt so guilty and helpless; I didn't know where to turn. Then I discovered FAMILIES ANONYMOUS.

After attending one meeting I had my first good night's sleep in years! From other members who had experienced the agonies I had been through, I learned how to handle my son. When he saw the change in my attitude, his attitude began to change and so did he. It was just like a miracle! He is now clean and happily married and, best of all, we are a loving family.

Abby, please tell your readers about this wonderful group.

GRATEFUL: I know that you are a legitimate self-help group. There are no dues or fees, no forms to fill out, no formal sign-up, no last names, and visitors are welcome.

FAMILIES ANONYMOUS meets in nearly every major city of the United States (and Canada) to teach parents how to communicate with rebellious, delinquent or difficult-to-handle children of any age.

For the location of a meeting in your area, write: FAMILIES ANONYMOUS, Inc., P.O. Box No. 344, Torrance, Calif. 90501. Please enclose a large stamped, self-addressed envelope for their response as they are a non-profit organization run by volunteers.

DEAR ABBY: My beloved husband, Jim, was electrocuted last summer at work. He had been in the Navy, but because of alcoholism was given an undesirable discharge. Twenty years later, that discharge was changed to "honorable" because of his active participation in Alcoholics Anonymous. (That's how we met.)

My problem? Jim was given a veteran's funeral and I was presented with a three-cornered flag which I keep in my closet in a plastic bag.

I want to fly that flag, Abby, because Jim was proud of his country and so am I. But some friends say I can't fly the flag. Can I?

BARBARA R.

DEAR BARBARA: There is absolutely no reason why you can't fly that flag as long as it is flown in accordance with the regulations.

Mentally ill doctors often resist treatment

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mentally ill doctors resist treatment and "their patients may be taking great risks," a psychiatrist reports in the current issue of "The Sciences" Journal.

Dr. Robert Ervin Jones, clinical professor of psychiatry at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia, said doctors are more likely to develop certain mental health problems than the average person. They also are less likely to go to other doctors for help.

Writing in the January issue "The Sciences," published by the New York Academy of Science, Jones said even if the emotionally disturbed doctors seek treatment, they are less likely than other patients to remain under care if hospitalized, the psychiatrist reported.

In one study, Jones found only 17 percent of doctors ultimately hospitalized had sought care before they became so ill they had to be put in the hospital.

"This means," he reported, "that 83 percent of these ailing doctors were practicing impaired and undetected. Patients may be taking great risks with sick doctors, especially mentally sick doctors," he said.

His list of ills to which doctors are more prone to than other persons includes alcoholism, drug addiction, depression and suicide.

Jones said the rate of alcoholism among physicians is two to three times higher than average. Drug problems occur about one in every 3,000 to 10,000 persons, he noted, but among doctors there is drug addiction at the rate of one in every 100 to 400.

Addition, according to the psychiatrist, is "an occupational hazard" of the medical profession.

Jones' report pegs the suicide rate for male doctors at 15 percent higher than for other males in America. Among the female doctors, it is 300 to 400 percent higher.

The psychiatrist writes that one in every 50 doctors commits suicide each year — accounting for more annual physician deaths than auto accidents, plane crashes, drownings and homicides combined.

The highest incidence of suicide among doctors occurs among psychiatrists, he reported.

In recent years legislation has been adopted in nearly two-thirds of the states to deal with the problem of disabled physicians. In addition, medical societies have begun a monitoring system to spot them and the American Medical Association, in recognition of the problem, devoted a conference last year to the topic — "The Impaired Physician."

Jones considers self-policing policies among doctors as a last resort since it is based on intervention after an illness has taken.

He recommended exploration of ways to relieve pressure on doctors in the first place.

Misread food label leads to fallacy

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb,

I read your column about the intelligent lady who uses lecithin. I think you owe her an apology for telling her that lecithin doesn't contain inositol and B vitamins. There are lecithin products that are sold that prove you are wrong. I'm sending along some ads for them.

Dear Reader,

Well, your first misstatement is that the person who wrote was in intelligent lady that was no lady, that was a man. From those the rest of your remarks are all downhill, but they emphasize a fundamental error in judgment in how people interpret labels on health food products.

You can buy preparations that contain lecithin plus vitamins and even minerals. You can also buy milk that contains chocolate, called chocolate milk. That doesn't mean cow's give chocolate milk.

You can buy whole grain flour and it contains a lot of starch. Starch is made from combining glucose molecules. The whole grain flour also contains important vitamins and bran for bulk — but that doesn't mean pure starch made from glucose contains other important vitamins or bran. That is why refined flour has vitamins added to it to enrich it.

TWIN FALLS — Mary Helen Perry, longtime Twin Falls educator, has been named assistant state director for Idaho by the National Retired Teachers Association.

Mrs. Perry will be responsible for coordinating the activities of NRTA units in Idaho and will promote the programs and services of the nation's largest organization of retired educators.

Before her retirement, Mrs. Perry taught at the former Washington grade school and was principal there for several years. She also taught high school 15 years and has been supervisor of student teachers at Idaho State University and Utah State University for several years.

She received a bachelor of science degree from Bridgeport University, a bachelor of arts degree from the former Southern Idaho College of Education at Albion and a master's of education degree from the University of Idaho at Moscow.

Mrs. Perry has received several volunteer service awards from various organizations in her community.

A Boise man, Lumir A. Gernet, has been named state director of the same organization.

The Reason For Lower Back Pain

By MICHAEL T. HANELINE, D.C.

The human spine is a remarkable creation. Each vertebra in a normal spine is perfectly aligned with those above and below. The mobility of the vertebrae permits the back to bend and turn.

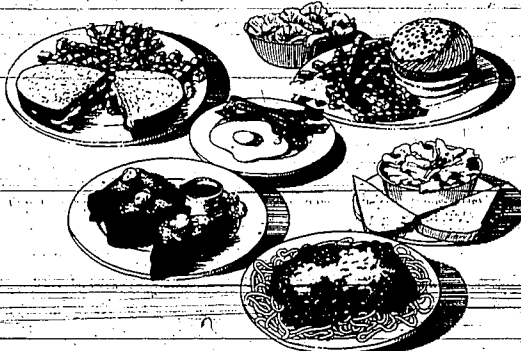

Small channels in the vertebrae provide a safe, protective channel for the spinal chord and spinal nerves. Injuries or defects may disturb the alignment of the vertebrae resulting in a partial closing of the nerve passage. This can cause severe pain in the lower back and legs.

Chiropractic relieves back and leg pain by locating and correcting the misalignment that is the cause of the trouble. Phone for an appointment.

Sewage plant funds not certain

By JEFF SHERT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The City of Twin Falls has been ordered to fix its malfunctioning sewage treatment plant, but whether the city will be able to pay for the needed repairs is not yet certain.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare has told the city it must bring the plant into compliance with pollution standards by March 30, 1981. Following the order last week, Twin Falls City Manager Jean Milar said the only way the city can afford to make the necessary changes is with an Environmental Protection Agency grant, and he expects such a grant will be forthcoming. Milar said, "The funds are available, the city is eligible and putting these things together is only a matter of course, now." He also said in his opinion the EPA has "an obligation to help in financing any improvements needed to meet their regulations."

Yet Monday, Warren McFall, EPA's grant coordinator for Idaho, gave a different picture of the situation. He said because of the EPA's lawsuit against the city for pollution violations at the plant, there is no guarantee the city will receive an EPA grant.

"We'll certainly consider any application for grant assistance, but I'm not saying we will be in a position to give them assistance," McFall said.

"First of all, we're going to have to see the application and the report. Once we get that, we'll have to evaluate their request for assistance in light of the pending enforcement action. Because of the enforcement situation, it's going to be quite a bit more complex than a normal situation would be," McFall said.

The plant was built with the aid of an EPA facilities grant, but from the day it opened, the plant was unable to meet the standards the EPA established for the quality of the plant's discharges.

Continued plant failures led the EPA to file suit against the city to collect fines for the pollution violations.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare also decided to do something about the plant's violations, but instead of filing suit, DHW established a timetable for the city to find out what was causing the violations and correct the problems.

The first thing DHW ordered the city to do was find out what was wrong with the plant.

The city hired James M. Montgomery Consulting Engineers, Inc., of Boise, to study the plant. In a report released in December, the firm told the city the design and equipment at the plant are inadequate to handle Twin Falls wastes.

The firm also told the city modifications needed to bring the plant into compliance with existing pollution standards could cost as much as $4.5 million.

The city then approached DHW and asked for additional time to make the modifications proposed by its engineers.

The DHW gave the city time to make the needed repairs, but the agency didn't tell the city where it is supposed to get the money to pay for the repairs.

Even if the EPA does give the city a grant, it may not cover the total cost of the needed improvements.

McFall said the EPA will not pay for any duplication of equipment.

"We're not inclined to duplicate costs of equipment that we've already got in there," he said.

McFall said if a piece of equipment the EPA has already paid for is underused, the EPA would only pay the difference between the cost of the original unit and the new unit.

"We wouldn't pay for both of them," he said.

Montgomery Engineers has not made specific recommendations on what new equipment the plant will need, but some plant equipment may have to be replaced.

Evans outlines Idaho's needs in coming year

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Taxes and the 1 percent inflationary overshadowed all other items Monday, but the State of the State address did cover other subjects.

Gov. John Evans discussed Idaho's economic health, energy wilderness designations, rising medical costs, dam safety, water quality and the needs of Idaho's elderly.

(More on Evans' speech on page A1) Fiscal year 1978 "was a good year for Idaho's economy, maybe even a great year," Evans said. Per capita income increased faster than the national average and unemployment dropped an entire percentage point.

In addition, "net farm income showed a small increase during 1978, after several years of decline." Farm production expenses "appear to have finally come under control," the governor said, allowing Idaho farmers to realize slightly improved net incomes as crop and livestock prices increase overall.

Other areas not directly connected to the 1 percent initiative discussed by Evans included:

- Certificates of Need — For the second year in a row, Evans called on lawmakers to pass "certificate of need" legislation. Such legislation, intended to curtail rising medical and hospital costs, would require Idaho health care facilities and health maintenance organizations to obtain advance legislative approval before making a capital expenditure of more than $150,000; making a change in bed capacity of 10 percent or 10 beds; making an addition of a new health service; or making a capital expenditure for pre-development activities.

- Under existing federal law, Evans said, "Idaho does not adopt a certificate of need law by July 1, 1979, we face the loss of federal monies which might cripple or eliminate such programs as immunization, community mental health services, crippled children's services, emergency medical services, and many other health services."

- Elderly Programs. The governor asked the legislature to continue "the transportation, nutrition and home services programs that are vital to our elderly citizens."

- Water. Evans called for a merger of state water quality and quantity functions into a single agency. The governor also recommended "that other environmental responsibilities in air quality and solid waste be included into the new agency." Evans said the new agency would be called the Department of Air and Water Resources.

- Water. Evans said he would send to legislators within the week "my recommendations for water resource projects. They will include construction of hydropower facilities, feasibility studies of multi-purpose uses, and projects to repair previous environmental damage."

- Dam Safety. Evans said he would recommend the expansion "of both funding and personnel" for the Idaho Dam Safety Inspection Program. The governor said he favored legislation "establishing a fee to be levied on stored waters." Fees collected by this fee would be used to fund the dam safety and inspection program.

- Water. The governor also called for establishment of a "water resources and development fund." This would be a dedicated fund created from fees assessed to water users, Evans said.

- Energy. Evans called for a constitutional amendment that would allow cities "to purchase or construct an energy system and finance it by revenue bonds." As companion legislation, Evans said he would propose a measure that would allow cities "to develop their geothermal resources under existing law."

- Air pollution. The air pollution problem in the Boise area "is serious and getting worse," Evans said, adding he endorsed the efforts of local Boise officials to establish a car exhaust inspection and maintenance program.

- Wilderness. Evans said he has "consistently supported" the concept of a central Idaho wilderness system, and that he supports "the President's efforts to protect the important resources that deserve special recognition."

But the governor said no additional areas should be designated as wilderness unless they will not have "any significant adverse impact on the local economy" of the area in question, unless they contain "outstanding wilderness values that deserve special protection and unless they have 'substantial public support by the people affected by the decision.'"

Evans criticized some proposed federal wilderness classifications. "Some of the roadless areas recommended for wilderness could be managed under the ongoing land use planning process and do not need wilderness classification."

Staff assistants to the governor said a list of these particular areas is being prepared for release within the month.

- Wildlife. The governor called for adoption of key recommendations of the "Wildlife Tomorrow" program. These included "creation of a Wildlife Trust Fund, the initiation of a pheasant Stamp Program, the improvement of the Hunter Safety Education Program and the establishment of clearer guidelines for the suspension of fish and game licenses."

- CETA. The governor said he would be abolishing the job of Idaho administrator for the Comprehensive Employment and Training act, saving the state $28,000.

Gooding city worker Willard Murray breaks up ice on Little Wood River

Gooding flooding prevented

GOODING — Water diversion, backhoes and dynamite are keeping Gooding residents high and dry during the present winter cold snap.

Gooding city crews have spent most of the last three days dredging a channel in the ice on the Little Wood River to prevent flooding, according to localis Eoreman Hugo Eichberg. In Shoshone, which the Little Wood River also traverses, Watermaster Reld Newby said the city was not threatened by flooding. He said there are still 3 to 10 feet of bank above water level in most places.

Backhoes and some dynamite have been used to break up the ice on the river as it travels through Gooding, Eichberg said, and a dragline pulls out the floating ice chunks downstream.

He said the water from the Little Wood River has been diverted into the Big Wood River about five miles east of Gooding, helping to prevent flooding in town. He said previous flood damage could have occurred if the water hadn't been diverted.

Eichberg said there is more ice in the channel bottom this year than previous years, but it is not too unusual from the past.

"We figure on cleaning a channel so it will tolerate water flowing through it," he said Monday night.

Eichberg said ice is within a foot from the top of the bank in some areas of Gooding. He still expects no flood damage to result unless "we get a lot of warm weather and rain."

Eichberg said there is nothing that can be done to widen the narrow channel that twists and turns through the center of town.

"Because of the water rights, there isn't anything we can do, it's a free-flowing stream," he said.

There are several irrigation laterals off the river channel as it bisects Gooding. When they become blocked by ice, that adds to the Water could not permanently be turned out of the river upstream because the city's sewage treatment plant empties into the Little Wood River west of Gooding, the streets foreman said.

Eichberg said the playing fields behind Gooding Junior High School were flooded Sunday due to a clogged storm drain, which drains off Main Street into the river. The fields have ice over.

The last serious flooding in the city occurred in 1963, 1964 and 1965, when heavy snows in the Pioneer Mountains were melted by warm rains, causing a torrential spring runoff.

In Shoshone, Newby said there are several places where ice has crept close to the top of the Little Wood River's banks adjacent to farm land, a condition not unusual for this time of year.

He said the last time dynamite was used in the Shoshone area was about 14 years ago and he sees no need to use dynamite at the moment.

Joint airport considered for Gooding

GOODING — Possible joint ownership of the Gooding City Airport was the topic of discussion Monday between city officials and Gooding County Commissioners.

The commissioners expressed an interest in joint ownership or operation of the airport. To Mayor Don Morrow and Councilman Harold Reed. But they asked that other joint operations be examined first to learn what benefits and problems might arise.

"I think it would be in our best interests to talk to the commission and council in Twin Falls to see how they handle it," Commissioner Rick Bralfford said.

The city officials said they need help meeting operational expenses.

Gooding spent a $307,000 Federal Aviation Agency grant recently to provide 24-hour operations at the airport and make it capable of handling planes as large as small business jets.

Recreation funds nixed

GOODING — Gooding Mayor Don Morrow and Councilman Harold Reed asked the Gooding County Commissioners Monday afternoon to pay $10,000 to the city's recreation coffers.

The two city representatives said Gooding was providing recreation facilities and programs for county residents and requested the funds to pay for that participation.

"What we think would be right would be if the county could kick in about $10,000 and that would put us around $17,000; where we ought to be," Reed said.

Morrow said as a last resort the city would have to double recreation rates, including fees for the city swimming pool, if the county declined to participate.

"Maybe if we double rates the rural people will vote for a recreation district," Morrow said. Formation of an areawide recreation district was attempted last year but failed to gain enough signatures to put the issue on the ballot.

Commissioner Rick Bralfford said there was no way the county could even consider helping the city this year. "If we fund one for Gooding, we have to fund one for Hagerman and Bliss," he explained.

Will Thomas, who along with George H. Lemmon was sworn in as commissioner Monday, suggested that the city initiate a fund-raising project to get the needed funds.

"I tell you what, I'll do 'til I give you $100 right now," Thomas said, handing over a check for that amount.

Reed declined the money until the council acts on the suggestion.

The commissioners promised they would look at appropriating county funds for city recreation this year.

Bralfford said if county voters did not support a special recreation district, they probably don't want to participate in city recreation programs.

Frozen pipes plague homeowners, cities

MAGIC VALLEY — Frozen water pipes have plagued residents of Magic Valley the past two weeks and little immediate relief is in sight.

In Twin Falls, city water department crews have worked weekends and holidays repairing and thawing pipes and meters.

Joe Koon, superintendent of the water department, said the cold weather has given the department its worst winter problems in probably 15 to 20 years.

Since Dec. 29, Koon said, city workers have found and repaired 130 water meters which had frozen and broken in the sub-zero temperatures.

"In all, we had about 376 calls, but many of them were found to be in lines from the water meters to the homes and our responsibility ends at the meterbox," Koon said.

With continued sub-zero temperatures and the lack of adequate snow cover to insulate the ground, frozen water lines have become epidemic in the Halley and Ketchum areas.

The problem began around the first of the year when temperatures dipped as low as 22 degrees below zero in Halley, with many overnight lows reported below zero since. Water supervisor Martin Albrethsen estimated Monday that between 50 and 75 homes were without water in Halley, due to persons not leaving their water running at all times.

"The situation will worsen for the next month and a half. Frost is already around the pipes as deep as four feet in areas with no snow cover, such as alleys and streets, where most water lines run," Albrethsen said.

Normally a heavier snow cover acts as an insulator in preventing house water lines from freezing. City officials say it will be April before the lines will thaw by themselves.

In the Ketchum-Sun Valley area and in Bellevue the freeze-ups are just as severe. A representative of Vern Thomas Plumbing and Heating in Ketchum said Monday he had 12 pages with 36 names per page of customers with lines needing thawing in Ketchum and Sun Valley, with about three pages left to go. Other plumbers in the Wood River Valley are similarly swamped.

Water departments are pleading with their users to leave some water running at all times to avoid freeze-ups. So far the problem hasn't spread to the main city lines.

In Twin Falls Koon said crews worked Christmas night,

New Year's night and around the clock during the past two weekends.

"If home owners would crack just one cold water faucet in the home and let it run a stream about the size of a pencil, that would be enough to keep the water flowing and prevent it from freezing. It won't take that much water or increase the water bill that much," he said.

Koon also urged residents not to open the meter box and apply heat to try thawing out the lines. He said the city will be glad to thaw meters at no charge and crews are on call around the clock.

Koon said most problems have been in the small lines running from the meter boxes to the homes. Frequently just a light bulb beside the pipes that are in a cold area will prevent freezing, he said.

Swearing-in marks new year

TWIN FALLS — Three new county officials and two re-elected office holders were sworn in during ceremonies at the Twin Falls County courthouse Monday.

The ceremony officially started the new year of county business.

Thomas G. Walker, Sr., was sworn into office as a new member of the Board of Twin Falls County Commissioners. He succeeds William L. (Bill) Chancy who, stepped down after 12 years on the three-member board. An open house at the commissioners' office Friday afternoon honored Chancy. Court houses employees, county and city officials from throughout the county attended. Another newly elected county official, sworn in, was Juanita Stettler, who was elected county treasurer after serving in that capacity the past several months under appointment, following the resignation of Ruth Jones. Jeff Stoker, who was elected county prosecutor succeeding Frank Dykes who did not seek reelection, was sworn in later in the day because of morning court sessions which kept him away from the official swearing-in ceremony Monday morning. All of the officials' taking office are Republicans. There are no longer any Democratic office holders in Twin Falls County, Long-time Democrats

Ruth K. Jones, treasurer; and Harold Lancaster, county clerk-auditor, both resigned to retire from public service. Jones retired in 1978 and Lancaster two years ago.

County Coroner Clyde Edwards and County Assessor William Clark took the oath of office as re-elected officials.

In a reorganization of the county commission board, Merl E. Leonard was re-elected chairman and Ann Cover, vice chairman.

The county commissioners reappointed department heads, including Ed Woods, zoning administrator; Darrell Heider, sanitation superintendent and Wallace Savage, director of the county Weed Bureau. Fred Higgins was reappointed District Court bailiff. The county adopted the minimum wage of $2.90 per hour for part-time help and set 15 cents per mile for mileage for county employees using their own vehicles.

Commissioners were also making appointments Monday to various boards and commissions. All members of the fair board and waterways commission were reappointed. An ordinance was being prepared for action Monday which would change zoning board members' terms of office from six to three years. Four appointments will be announced with adoption of the ordinance, Leonard said.

As new county commissioner, Walker said Monday he plans to spend some time reading back minutes of commission meetings and conferring with county department heads to get acquainted with county business and programs.

He said he does have some views on such issues as the hospital and airport and some things he would like to see happen in Twin Falls County.

"I think I will reserve some of my suggestions until I have been in office a little longer and researched some of them a bit more," Walker said.

He said, however, he has told Magic Valley Memorial Hospital board members how he feels about hospital management and improvements.

"I would like to see the hospital leased to some competent organization for management operation. I think the county should be completely out of the hospital financing—instead spending tax money to operate it, I think we could lease it and get some money back."

"As for the $9 million (proposed) hospital expansion, I can see no need for either a new building or the full expansion program. There is probably a need for better emergency room facilities, but the full $9 million expansion, no," Walker said.

"I would like to see us hold up further expenditures on runway expansion until we know if we are going to have an airline," Walker added. "Airwest pulled out of Medford, Ore., and that's larger than Twin Falls. It is very possible we could have better air service for our residents by increasing commuter lines between Twin Falls and Boise or Salt Lake City."

"Small planes, in and out of Twin Falls at more frequent intervals and making connections with the airlines in the larger cities, might make our air service better. I think our air service from Twin Falls is in need of some improvements," he said.

Walker said he would like to see some effort made to give better access to the Twin Falls airport.

Equipment donated

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Jaycees and Skipper's Seafood and Chowder House donated a Language Master Audio-Visual Instructional Device to the Gooding State School of the Deaf and Blind, last, No. 18, Erie Lane.

Jaycee president, and Steve McKinley, manager of Skipper's, made the presentation to Keith Tolson, superintendent of the Gooding school.

The device, originally developed for use in language therapy, works on a tape cartridge system. The student simultaneously is presented with a word, hears its pronunciation and sees its pictorial representation. He controls his own pace in listening to mimic the sounds. The Gooding school has further modified the device to suit the particular needs of its hearing-impaired students by raising the decibel range from 75-90 db up to 140 db.

According to Slate Jaycee Chairman, Rick Hartwig, the donation was part of the ongoing statewide Jaycee Hearing Conservation Program, which aims to provide money and equipment to detect and educate those with hearing problems.

Officials assume duties

JEROME — The swearing in of new county officials highlighted Monday's meeting of the Jerome County Commissioners.

Taking office for the first time were Commissioner Russell Howell, Clerk Glenda Mogensen, Assessor William Kersey and Recreation Commissioner Vic Jaro.

Also being sworn in for another term as commissioner was Mel Grindstaff, who also was chosen chairman of the three-member board. Joining Grindstaff and Howell on the commission is Henry Schutte, who was not up for re-election last fall.

Other incumbent county officials being sworn in were Treasurer Carl Stephens and Coroner Dr. James Babcock.

After the swearing-in ceremonies, the commissioners met with Jerome city officials and set the yearly rate for providing police office space and jail facilities for the city.

Grindstaff said the agreed-upon rate of $30,732 was $3,665 above last year's contract and included increased wages and operational costs for the service.

Police probe theft of tools

TWIN FALLS — A Washington welder visiting Twin Falls was robbed of tools and equipment valued at $400, city police reported Monday.

John Hammell of Spray, Wash., told police he left some welding equipment on a cart at a loading dock of Hemington Cold Storage located at 875 Blake St. in Twin Falls and it disappeared. He said the loss occurred between 3:30 p.m. Jan. 5 and 7 a.m. Monday morning. Investigation was continuing Monday afternoon.

Twin Falls considers fewer names on lawsuit

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council went into secret session Monday afternoon to decide whether to drop its lawsuit against any of the designers or equipment suppliers of its malfunctioning wastewater treatment plant.

The city filed suit in March, 1978 against the designers and suppliers after the Environmental Protection Agency filed suit against the city to collect fines for pollution violations at the plant.

The city's suit was an attempt to shift the blame for the plant's violations away from the city.

The city claims improper design and faulty equipment have caused the plant's violations while the designers and suppliers claim improper maintenance and operations by the city have caused the plant's problems.

After filing the suit, the city hired an engineering firm not previously involved with the plant to find out what was causing the plant's problems.

The firm, James M. Montgomery Consulting Engineers, found that the plant's problems have been caused by improper design and faulty equipment.

At Monday's secret meeting, which came during the course of a regular council work session, John Somerville of Montgomery Engineers was scheduled to provide information from the study which would enable the city to determine whom to hold responsible for the plant's failures.

Based on that information, the city council and city administration, including city attorney Charles Brumback, were to decide whether to drop any of the defendants from the suit.

In March the city named as defendants plant designers Hamilton and Voeiler, Inc., and Detweiler Brothers, both engineering firms, and equipment suppliers Envirotech, Inc., and Neptune Microflex, Inc.

Brumback said the defendants in the lawsuit had requested that the city decide once and for all which firms it will name in the suit in order that named defendants can decide whether to offer to solve the plant's problems, which is their right under the law.

Brumback said if the city decides to amend the suit, it will be done "in the next couple of weeks."

Burglary damages home

TWIN FALLS — David Lancaster, owner of a home at 1333 Elizabeth Blvd., told Twin Falls police Monday someone had broken into the house, causing $500 damage.

He said the house is rented to a young woman, Becky Pilcher, who is currently visiting in California.

Police reported a window and a door glass were broken out of the building, but it will not be known whether the house was burglarized until the renter returns home.

Teen-ager, two adults in custody

KIMBERLY — A 13-year-old boy and two adults were in custody Monday facing first degree burglary charges in connection with a Kimberly house burglary.

Kimberly Police Chief Jim Campbell said the 13-year-old was apprehended by Kimberly officers Saturday night a short distance from the Don Taylor home at 901 Main St. N. Campbell said the Taylor family is away on vacation and officers were making a routine house check when they discovered the building had been broken into. Officers began checking the vicinity and located the 13-year-old suspect.

Campbell said a quantity of clothing, prescription medication, some hunting knives and a small amount of change were missing from the house.

He said the two adults, Adolph M. Buis, 25, and James W. Porter, 24, were arrested later Saturday night in Twin Falls by city and county officers. They were being held Monday in lieu of $20,000 bond each.

The two were charged with being accomplices to first degree burglary. Both appeared in magistrate court Monday afternoon. Bond was reduced to $1,500 each and both were returned to the county jail in lieu of bond.

Both men requested the services of the public defender and indicated they wanted preliminary hearings on the charges.

NCAA considers playoff system for colleges

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Which college football team is No. 1 may be settled by a playoff two years from now if a proposal before the NCAA is approved.

An NCAA committee is proposing that the national championship be decided by a four-team playoff involving bowl winners.

The four teams to be in the playoff would be chosen by a special committee. All bowl teams would be eligible, and the playoffs would be held at predetermined sites.

Arizona, said the NCAA Extra Events Committee, which he heads, is unanimously in favor of the playoff idea.

"We want to know if we can get it off the ground. Let's try," said Frank Broyles, athletic director at the University of Arkansas, a member of the eight-man committee.

The proposal must pass a steering committee and then the NCAA council before it could come before next year's full convention. It could be used to decide the champion in the 1980 season.

Notre Dame coach Dan Devine was enthusiastic. "We won the national championship after the 1977 season on a vote," he said. "Other sports have a playoff, so why not college football?"

Opposition to the idea is expected from some college officials who think the football season is too long already.

But Broyles said, "What's too long? Most of the schools would be on a holiday break. It's the same as athletes playing in all-star games after the bowl games." Opposition could also be expected from some bowl representatives, who might fear it would downgrade their own games.

"Bowl games are fun," said Wiles Hallock, Pacific-10 Conference commissioner. "But if you're playing a national championship, this would change the complexion of the bowl. I wouldn't want to see the Rose Bowl diminished."

Dee Mangard, athletic director at the University of California, said he likes "the way things are now." The conjecture and speculation that runs on and on about who is No. 1 "adds a lot to college football," he said.

National convention

NCAA's discipline rules come under strong attack

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A congressional investigating subcommittee declared Monday that the NCAA's disciplinary processes lack "the minimal standards of fairness."

The House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, after a year-long investigation, gave the NCAA another chance at self-reform, calling on it to set up a new "blue ribbon" committee for the purpose.

The congressional report was released while 1,000 delegates met at the NCAA annual convention.

The NCAA's disciplinary powers are "exercised without observance of minimal standards of fairness," Rep. James Santini, D-N.Y., majority leader of the subcommittee, said at a news conference.

He cited what he called the "de facto presumption that an accused school or athlete is guilty until proven innocent." He also said that NCAA investigators always hold a "home court advantage" because they dictate the terms of the proceedings.

Santini said the group's rules are "excessively technical and often times impractical and petty."

Santini warned that if the NCAA decides on an "undifferentiated or superficial cosmetic whitewash response" he will go back to Congress and plug for "some sort of legislative intervention."

Santini, whose interest in the NCAA disciplinary tactics was spurred by sanctions involving the University of Nevada, spoke for the Democratic majority on the subcommittee.

Rep. Norman F. Lent, R-N.Y., representing the minority view, said the investigation, which took more of the committee's time than any other investigation last year, was a waste of time. He said that while some of the suggestions in the 60-page report were reasonable and some in fact were already on the NCAA's agenda, he opposed placing the NCAA under threat of legislation.

If "the heavy hand of the federal government" intervenes in college sports, he said, "we could expect to see the day when intercollegiate sports is run with the same efficiency as the postal service and the federal energy department."

Changes in the disciplinary proceedings were on the convention's agenda, but more attention was being paid to the problems connected with another issue — Title IX, a requirement under the law that colleges give women's sports equal treatment with men's.

J. Nells Thompson, outgoing NCAA president, said the Title IX problem "could lead to the end of the NCAA as we now know it."

A less-philosophical but equally controversial proposal was also before the convention to establish a collegiate football playoff system to determine a national champion (See related story this page).

The Extra Events Committee presented the proposal, saying it could be put into effect in two years. Under the scheme four bowl teams would be selected in the playoff. The championship game would be played before the National Football League Super Bowl. The teams to be chosen would be selected by a special committee from among all the teams entered in bowl games.

Austrian Sackl scores upset win in women's slalom at World Cup

LES GETS, France (UPI) — Austria's Regina Sackl pulled from behind to upset pre-race favorite Perrine Puelin of France Monday and win the second women's slalom of the World Cup.

Annermarie Moser-Proell, Austria's five-time Cup winner, finished third behind Pelen to move up to joint leadership in the overall standings with Switzerland's Marie-Theres Nadig. They both have 90 points, nine more than defending champion Hanny Wenzel of Liechtenstein, who had a poor day and could only manage 10th place.

Sackl, 19, overtook Moser-Proell and Sackl on the second heat. Her teammate posted fastest time in the first heat through 51 gates in 44.24 seconds. Pelen clocked 44.32 and Sackl 44.38.

But Sackl, who says she relaxes before races by slinging with her mother, defied the drizzle which affected the early competitors. In the second heat, to record 42.20 through 51 gates for a combined winning time of 1:26.58.

"I'm particularly delighted because it's my first World Cup win since my cartilage operation in 1977," Sackl said.

Pelen clocked 42.73 for an aggregate of 1:27.05 for second place and Moser-Proell added 42.84 for a 1:27.68 total.

"I'm perfectly happy with my performance. I'm now back on top," said Moser-Proell.

Former World Champion Fabienne Serrat of France took full advantage of the "home" snow to notch fourth ahead of Italians Claudio Giordani and Daniela Zini.

Disaster struck the U.S. team, which is still recovering from jet lag, according to U.S.-men's team coach Harald Schoenhaar.

Abbi Fisher, South Conway, N.H., was expected to be among the medalists after winning the first slalom of the season in Italy in December but she hit a gate in the first heat, bruising her knee and cutting her mouth.

"I am upset because I had expected to do a good time today. I have been doing so well in training," she said.

In the second heat Tamara McKinney, Squaw Valley, Calif., third in the Italian race, crashed into a barrier that separated the spectators from competitors.

She was taken by stretcher to the hospital with a suspected broken left leg but doctors said later she was only badly bruised.

This left Becky Dorsey, Wenham, Mass., as the first American skier home. She finished 18th in a combined time of 1:31.61.

This is the first of three games facing the Golden Eagles. Friday CSI travels to Cheney, Wash., to take on the Eastern Washington University JV and Saturday it's on to Spokane to play Spokane Community College.

Silver Creek Flow hearing Thursday

HAILLEY — The Department of Water Resources will be conducting the first minimum flow hearing on Silver Creek Thursday at Halley.

The minimum flow requirements are designed to protect its fish and wildlife habitat, water quality and recreational values.

If a minimum flow is established in this stream, it could set a precedent for other top quality waters in Idaho.

The hearing will be at 9 a.m. in Halley City Hall. All interested persons are invited to attend and hearing record will remain open for 60 days for written comments to the Department of Water Resources in Twin Falls.

The water plan, enacted by the 1978 legislature, enables the department to grant minimum flow water rights on state streams to the Idaho Water Resources Board, which then becomes legal guardian of the stream. Prior to passage of this law, there was no provisions for establishing minimum flows for fishery or other recreational values on Idaho waters. The legislature will make the final determination after the hearing material is received.

Signs new contract

Rice highest paid player

BOSTON (UPI) — Slugger Jim Rice Monday signed a seven-year, $5.4 million contract that made him the highest paid player in total salary in all of baseball today.

Red Sox General Manager Haywood Sullivan announced the signing during a late afternoon news conference at Fenway Park and said the contract is "the most valuable contract ever given to a Red Sox player."

Pete Rose signed a $3.3 million, four-year contract with the Philadelphia Phillies last month, making him the highest paid player in the game.

Rice, the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1978, terrorized opposing pitchers and led the major leagues in six hitting categories including home runs and RBIs during last season.

During 1978 Rice, 25, also became the first major leaguer in four decades to hit for more than 400 total bases.

"I have said right along that I wanted to stay in Boston and continue to play for the Red Sox," a smiling Rice said following the announcement.

"I also knew I could count on the Red Sox for fair negotiations and a contract which would be fair. I'm extremely happy with this new deal. I'm happy these negotiations are over, and now I'd like to concentrate on playing and helping the club catch the Yankees in 1979," Rice said.

"In terms of length and monetary consideration this is the most valuable contract ever given to a Red Sox player," said Sullivan.

The contract covers the last two years of Rice's existing pact and extends through an additional five years to 1985. Under the terms of his old contract Rice had been making an estimated $150,000 a year.

In the 1978 season Rice batted .315, hit 46 homers and knocked in 133 runs.

The durable outfielder was one of only three major leaguers to play in every game last season.

Rice came up to the Red Sox at the end of the 1974 season and joined the team for good at the start of the 1975 season.

As a rookie, Rice teamed with outfielder Fred Lynn to lead the Red Sox to the American League pennant. However Rice broke his hand in September of that year, knocking him out of the league playoffs and the World Series against the Cincinnati Reds.

The signing culminates negotiations between the Red Sox and Rice which began last spring.

Sullivan said a tentative agreement was reached at Fenway Park last Friday and the final agreement just hours before the announcement.

Mack, Robertson may not return to Los Angeles Rams

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams, who fell one victory short of getting in Super Bowl IV, the fourth time in five seasons, will probably be without two of their big name players, offensive tackle Tom Mack and linebacker Isham Robertson, next season.

Mack, a 13-year veteran, is expected to announce his retirement this month and the controversial Robertson presumably will be granted his wish to be traded.

Robertson, an eight-year pro, lost his starting job to Bob Bruzinski and played sparingly Sunday in the Rams' 29-0 loss to the Dallas Cowboys in the NFC title game.

"Retirement is a definite possibility," said Mack. "That's something I don't want to talk about now, though. I'll have an announcement to make either way in the next couple of weeks."

The Rams' defeat was a bitter disappointment to owner Carroll Rosenbloom, who sent Chuck Knox packing after Los Angeles was upset 14-7 in the rain and mud at home in the first round of the NFL playoffs last season. Knox wasn't officially fired but he wound up at Buffalo. Knox won't be back. I think he's an outstanding man and a fine football coach."

Before the Dallas game Sunday, Malavasi said he was confident the Rams would win their first NFC championship and reach the Super Bowl for the initial time. Asked what he based his confidence on, he replied, "Because I am the coach now."

Malavasi's Rams fell short — just as Knox's Rams did.

"I guess the Good Lord didn't want us to win again," said defensive end Jack Youngblood, the premier performer in the NFL's No. 1 defense. "You have to wonder why we get us far as knocking on the door and then not being able to get through it but that's just something you have to accept."

The Rams' 28-point margin of defeat — the first shutout in the NFC title game since 1968 when Baltimore blanked Cleveland 34-0 at Cleveland — was deceptive because the Los Angeles defense was at its best.

In compiling a 14-4 regular season record in winning their sixth straight NFC West crown, the Rams allowed opponents just an average of 24.3 yards per game. In a 34-0 playoff win over Minnesota, they limited the Vikings to 234 total yards. Against Dallas, they rolled up a 277-235 edge in total yards.

But two interceptions by veteran strong safety Charlie Waters of Pat Haden passes in the third quarter gave the Cowboys the ball on the Los Angeles 10 and 20-yard lines. The results: A 14-0 Dallas lead.

The Rams lost three key running backs before they even got to the playoffs. Rookie Elvis Peacock of Oklahoma, the club's No. 1 draft pick, and second-year back Wendell Tyler — two backfield players who were being counted on to give the Rams some much-needed breakthrough speed this season — went down with knee injuries during the exhibition season.

Lawrence McCutcheon, the Rams' career and single-season rushing record holder, wasn't available for the playoffs because of an injury. In fact, McCutcheon gained only 420 yards this season.

Robertson, who was traded to the Cleveland Browns, said he was "pleased" to be traded to Cleveland. He said he was "pleased" to be traded to Cleveland.

Miami picks new coach

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (UPI) — Wasting no time, the University of Miami waited just four days before reaching into its own backyard Monday to tap Howard Schnellenberger to succeed Lou Saban as the school's seventh football coach since 1970.

Schnellenberger, offensive strategist for the Miami Dolphins and former Baltimore Colts head coach, was named to the post by Dr. John L. Green, the university's executive vice president.

"Down deep inside, I've always had the desire to be a college coach," said Schnellenberger, 44, who has coached in the pro ranks for 13 years.

Safety course to get underway by fish and game

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Fish and Game Department Hunter Safety course begins for Robert — Stuart Junior High School students today.

The annual program gives seventh graders seven hours of training in safe handling of firearms, hunter ethics, survival, and wildlife identification.

The course, spread out over two weeks, consists of six hours of classroom work and an hour of shooting at the Twin Falls Shooting Range. Fish and Game public information officer Stu Murrell said the course emphasizes gun safety in the field and at home.

Murrell estimated each year 95 percent of Idaho's seventh grade students take the course, which Fish and Game began in the 1950s. Murrell said since the program began, there has been a "noted decline" in hunting accidents.

This year it will be taught by members of the Young American Conservation Corps, a federally funded program which places people in conservation jobs at agencies around the country. Murrell said the safety course will be offered at other Magic Valley, Wood River Valley and Burley schools this year.

"I have not been satisfied with our total operation," Edward DeBartolo Jr., owner of the 49ers, said in an announcement.

Rangers' Cox resigns

DALLAS (UPI) — Dan O'Brien, general manager of the Texas Rangers, resigned Monday and admitted he was open for a job offer.

O'Brien's duties as chief of the Rangers' front office had dwindled during his tenure with the club because of the dominant role played by majority owner Brad Corbett and executive vice president Eddie Robinson.

Georgian leaves team

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — Lucius Foster, 6-foot-10, 235-pound senior, ended his basketball career at the University of Georgia Monday when it was learned that he received a failing grade in a drama class.

Foster, a Savannah, Ga., native who sat out his freshman season at Georgia because he was academically ineligible, had been playing a double post along with 6-10 junior Lavon Mercer for the Bulldogs who had a 6-3 record after upsetting 13th-ranked Mississippi State Saturday, 69-67. Georgia hosted Alabama Monday night.

MSU coach given honor

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Darryl Rogers of Michigan State, whose Spartans won a share of the Big Ten championship, was named college football's coach of the year Monday by The Sporting News.

Rogers took over at Michigan State in 1976, trying to rescue a program on probation from the NCAA because of recruiting irregularities. His first team was 4-6-1, but the 1977 season was a winning one, 7-3-1, and this past year the Spartans opened up their offense and finished 8-3, including their first victory over rival Michigan since 1968.

The selection of Rogers was made by the staff of the sports publication.
