

Jan. 1, 1980 may become target date for 1%

By RICHARD CHARNOCK
BOISE (UPI) — Efforts to implement the 1 percent property tax initiative moved a big step ahead Monday when a subcommittee agreed 8-2 the implementation date should be Jan. 1, 1980.

In agreeing on a date, the House-Senate subcommittee also agreed in general terms that a freeze should be imposed on government prior to that date — the terms of which the subcommittee will discuss at a later meeting.

Earlier, spokesmen for cities and libraries urged the subcommittee to ease the impact of the initiative by implementing it next year instead of this one.

Mayor Dick Eardley told the subcommittee implementation of the initiative this July would bring more than $1 million out of this fiscal year's budget for the City of Boise.

Eardley said freezing the budget at the 1978 level would force a cutback of $1 million and a combination of the two would cost Boise City $1.8 million this fiscal year.

"The dollars would be different but that would be the situation faced by all other cities in the state on the same basis," he said, referring to the fact Boise operates on tax anticipation notes and not on a cash basis.

And, he added, Boise already is some four months into this fiscal year. "If we have to make an adjustment right now," Eardley said, "we'll have to lay off people right now."

Sen. Lester Clemm, D-Orofino, asked Eardley what would happen if Boise had to cut its operations 50 percent.

"If we do it now we'll have to shut the city down by summer," Eardley said.

Eardley told the subcommittee he already is working on trimming back next year's budget by at least 25 percent to handle the 1 percent initiative. He said if the initiative is implemented Jan. 1, 1980, Boise can cope with it.

Chief Deputy Attorney General Larry Harvey told the subcommittee that a July 1 starting date suffers from ambiguity and possibly could lead to lawsuits from units of government operating on tax anticiation notes. He said if the Legislature decides to implement the initiative that date anyway then the legislation should be drafted carefully.

Cal Williams, legislative chairman for the Idaho Property Owners Association, urged the subcommittee to implement the initiative along guidelines of a bill already introduced which sets a Jan. 1, 1980 date.

"The meaning of the initiative is to stop, cut waste and consult the taxpayer. It did not say shift the tax load in some other direction and carry on as usual," he said.

Williams said his organization also would like to see the Legislature.

"Freeze the state budget at $119 million or under."

"Freeze all ad valorem taxes in the state at the 1979 level."

"Refund all state surplus to school districts on a per pupil basis and reduce ad valorem tax mill levies in proportion to the money received."

"We think this procedure will produce $5 million to $60 million in property tax relief when the surplus is coupled with the revenue that is expected from new growth," Williams said.

An enjoyable trek on a winter day

Cross-country skiing is a method of travel which is not restricted to remote mountain country, though it is usually thought of as being enjoyed in that type of terrain. It can be employed anywhere there is snow, even on a bean field at the edge of a city. Miriam Breckenridge of Twin Falls crosses her snow-covered bean field along Blue Lakes Boulevard North, passing along the row of poplar trees which has long been a landmark at the north entrance to the city.

Recall vote today

By JEFF SHER

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Mayor Leon Smith was not reassured last week after learning the results of a poll which showed he would probably retain his office in today's recall election.

"Our supporters don't get out to vote today, then the recall will be successful, because it's going to be a close race," Smith predicted.

Recall movement leader Jim Williamson was confident of victory despite the poll, but he admitted, "I don't think there will be any way of calling it for sure."

The uncertainty on both sides of the recall campaign stems from the fact that there is no precedent here for predicting how voters will act in a recall election.

There have been recall elections in recent years in the Magic Valley but in smaller towns.

Hazelton recalled two councilmen several years ago for trying to thwart the issuance of sewer bonds the voters had already approved. Gooding recalled its mayor several years ago.

But Gooding and Hazelton are small communities where a large percentage of the electorate was aroused over a single issue.

In a community as large as Twin Falls, several neighborhoods can become intensely involved in an issue while the rest of the city is unaffected.

If only those voters from neighborhoods where Smith's decisions have been unpopular go to the polls Tuesday, the mayor could lose the election.

On the other hand, with a large turnout, voters lacking strong motivation to recall the mayor could outnumber voters who have specific grievances against him.

It is difficult to predict what role the anti-big government feeling which spawned the 1 percent initiative will play in the election.

Smith has stated he feels much of the opposition against him is coming from people who see the recall as an opportunity to strike a blow against big government.

Teng enjoys U.S., jabs at Russians

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Taking jabs at the Russians every step along the way, Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping made a grand appearance in America Monday — four hours of talks with President Carter, a star-studded state dinner and a mass of demonstrators against him.

Teng, 74, is the first Chinese communist leader ever honored at the White House and he began his nine-day visit on an upbeat note full of positive signals for the budding Sino-American relationship.

Chief among them was the White House announcement that Carter and Chinese Premier Hua Kuo-feng have agreed to exchange visits at dates yet to be determined.

And Carter, in his toast to Teng at the sumptuous state dinner in his honor, said the two business meetings of the day were "fruitful and constructive because both of us are keenly aware that what we do now will establish precedents for future peaceful cooperation."

Teng used his toast to thank Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Henry Kissinger — as well as Carter — for their part in opening American-Chinese relations.

He also noted that Peking and Washington had denounced "hegemony" — the Chinese code word for Soviet expansionism — when they established normal relations Jan. 1.

It was Teng's third critical reference to Moscow. At the morning welcoming ceremony, he pledged an all-out effort for peace while warning that the "factors making for war" were growing stronger. Later, at the State Department, he said Americans and Chinese have "an understanding" on the nature of the Soviet threat.

But the overall effect of Monday's much-anticipated visit was anything but somber, despite demonstrations that marred the opening ceremony and violence by ultra-leftists in a park near the White House during the dinner.

The day ended at the Kennedy Center where Carter had arranged an extravagant entertainment to give Teng a look at American culture — everything from the musical "Eubie" to singer John Denver.

The evening festivities started a little late because Carter and Teng met much longer than anticipated in their second session, two hours and 25 minutes. The talks ended so late that Teng barely had time to return to his private quarters at Blair House across from the White House before the dinner.

He arrived at the White House just minutes after Nixon went inside, and appeared to have changed from a gray Mao suit to a black Mao suit for evening.

Nixon, returning to the White House for the first time since he resigned Aug. 9, 1974, said he would meet with Teng Wednesday.

Carter, wearing a tuxedo, and Rosalynn Carter, in a green dress, greeted Teng and his wife, Cho Lin, as they drove up. All of them smiled, posed briefly for photographers and hurried inside since it was cold and no one wore a coat.

The dinner included top-grade wines, fragrances and other expensive delicacies that would have cost an estimated $50 a person if served in a restaurant. Guests ranged from former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to actress Shirley Maclaine.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Teng personally asked Carter to visit China and Carter had in turn invited Hua to the United States. It was not clear their invitations were accepted on principle, meaning no dates were set for the visits.

Patty Hearst's prison term cut short by Carter's order

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Monday freed Patty Hearst from prison effective Thursday under "parole-like conditions," responding to pleas the kidnapped heiress turned bank robber has suffered enough.

The White House announced Carter had approved a Justice Department recommendation that he commute Miss Hearst's seven-year bank robbery term to time served — about 18 months — and thus release her in lieu of her scheduled Valentine's Day wedding ceremony.

A brief statement said Carter concurred with the Justice Department finding that Miss Hearst, 24, the victim of a stunning political kidnapping by Symbionese Liberation Army terrorists in 1974, "needs no further rehabilitation... is no risk to the community and, on the contrary, she will be a law-abiding citizen."

The White House statement said Miss Hearst "has been punished substantially in that she has already served almost two years of incarceration and her release would not end the suffering she will experience from invasions of her privacy and the commercial exploitation of her experiences.

"It is the consensus of all of those most familiar with this case that, but for the extraordinary criminal and personal offenses that the petitioner suffered at the hands of the S.L.A., she would not have become a participant in the criminal acts for which she stands convicted."

Miss Hearst was captured by a S.L.A. member in the elementary school to one year of "parole-like conditions," including that she not violate any criminal law, that she not associate with persons who have a criminal record and that she not possess firearms or other dangerous weapons.

In San Francisco, Miss Hearst's father, newspaper magnate Randolph Hearst, called Carter's action a "politically outrageous move, because there are people in this country who continue to believe that the only reason she is being set free is because of her name."

"The truth of the matter, of course, is that she was kidnapped because of her name and her name was responsible for her severe sentence," Hearst said.

PATTY HEARST sentence commuted

Lloyd Walker invited to meet Chinese leader

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls attorney and potato grower, Lloyd Walker, is in Washington, D. C., at the invitation of President Carter to meet Chinese leader Teng Hsiao-ping and his wife.

Walker left Twin Falls Sunday morning, flying to the national capital where he was to attend a reception and gala social function Monday night in the Kennedy Center.

Monday he attended a briefing by the State Department on trade with China.

Walker served as Idaho chairman of the Carter for President committee in 1976.

He has also been active in the Idaho Potato Growers' programs the past several years.

The Chinese vice premier, his wife and a delegation of other Chinese leaders are making an eight-day visit to the United States.

It is the first visit to this country by a Peoples Republic of China government official since 1949.

Teenage sniper rakes grade school with gunfire

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A 16-year-old girl who said she "didn't like Mondays" and wanted to "cheer up the day" raked a crowded elementary school yard with rifle fire Monday, killing the principal and custodian and wounding nine students and a policeman.

The girl surrendered six hours after the shooting, quietly walking out of her house from which she pumped 40 shots with a .22-caliber rifle into the school yard some 100 feet away.

Police said Brenda Spencer, a blonde, 5-foot-11, 65-pound high-school student, faced intensive questioning. No charges were immediately filed against her.

Police spokesman Bill Robinson said possible charges included murder and assault with intent to commit murder.

"I just did it for the fun of it. I just don't like Mondays," the teen-ager told reporters by telephone shortly after the shooting spree began. "I did this because it's a way to cheer up the day. Nobody likes Mondays."

The youthful sniper, armed with up to 500 rounds of ammunition reportedly given her by her father as a Christmas present, had been barricaded alone inside the single-story house.

A team of SWAT officers surrounded the house and attempted to negotiate with her by telephone, but she broke off the talks several times, and at one point told police she wouldn't surrender because "I'm having too much fun."

The teen-ager sprayed gunfire from the home onto the grounds of Cleveland Elementary School shortly before 9 a.m. as Principal Burton Wragg, 53, was opening the front gate for students.

Wragg was cut down in a 20-minute burst of gunfire, along with custodian Mike Suchar, 56. Both were shot in the chest and died at a hospital.

Nine students ranging in age from 6 to 12 also were shot. Two of them — Monica Selvig and Christy Burrell, both 9 — were reported in critical but stable condition after surgery for stomach wounds.

Hearing continues

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. (UPI) — A justice of the peace at a hearing into first-degree murder charges against former top city lawyer Ed Cantrell went behind closed doors Monday to consider forcing a former state grand jury investigator to testify.

Justice of the Peace Nena Stafford James was considering a defense request that an arrest warrant be issued for Cecil Cundy, investigator for the now defunct state grand jury. Under such an arrangement, Cundy would be brought to Rock Springs to testify.

Cundy, believed to be in Omaha, Neb., was subpoenaed but apparently never received the document, defense attorney Gerald L. Spence said.

Cantrell, 51, is accused of killing Rock Springs undercover agent Michael Rorer two days before Rorer was to have testified before the grand jury. The hearing is to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to order a trial.

Cantrell has admitted the shooting — which took place inside an unmarked police car on July 15, 1978 — but he said he was acting in self-defense.

Dubbed a "mini-trial" by observers because of its length, the proceeding entered its second week Monday.

Restaurant target

WORCESTER, Mass. (UPI) — New England leaders of the NAACP say they're willing to return to days of pickets and demonstrations to stop the use of a restaurant name they see as a racial slur.

At a meeting Sunday, the organization's leaders from Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island voted unanimously to support protests in communities where "Sambo's" restaurants are opened or under construction.

"Sambo's" are part of a national restaurant chain based in California.

Nixon in spotlight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Richard Nixon walked back into the White House over a gilded red carpet Monday for a night of extra-special V.I.P. treatment among the elite gathered to honor China's Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

Completing a dazzling comeback from life in limbo, Nixon returned to the executive mansion for the first time since he resigned to avoid Watergate impeachment on Aug. 9, 1974 — invited to enjoy a tiny taste of the life he left behind. In recognition of his pioneering efforts to forge ties with Peking.

Caravan heads north

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — A caravan of about 500 tractors and support vehicles driven by farmers angry over low crop prices resumed its trek to Washington Monday despite chill winds and a law preventing tractors on interstate highways.

The farmers, who had rested in Charlotte Sunday, spent the day on Interstate 85 and were scheduled to stop north of Durham for the night. The caravan was escorted by units of the North Carolina Highway Patrol.

University turns 90

MOSCOW (UPI) — The University of Idaho celebrates its 90th birthday today.

President Richard Gibb will make a few brief remarks at the 2 p.m. ceremony at the Faculty Office Complex.

It was on Jan. 30, 1889, that Territorial Gov. Edward Stevenson signed into law Bill No. 20 establishing the University of Idaho at Moscow. The school actually opened for classes on Oct. 3, 1892.

Iranian general slain as turmoil continues

Iranian Gen. Latifi seized by mob, slain moments later

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Prime Minister Shapur Bakhtiar canceled his peace mission to Paris Monday, throwing Iran into another grave crisis.

Angry Moslems killed an army general and destroyed movie houses and nightclubs, while troops responded with another orgy of shootings.

Within hours of Bakhtiar's announcement he would not meet opposition leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, several hundred demonstrators stopped Gen. Taghi Latifi's Mercedes limousine with a volley of rocks and Molotov cocktails.

The mob hauled the general out of his battered car, beat him senseless and finally cut his throat in front of Tehran University. UPI photographer Tom Karges watched as the frenzied mob beat and slashed the terrified officer. The assassins said their victim was "the general who ordered the massacre yesterday (Sunday)."

One demonstrator raised his bloodied hands to the crowd gathered around the car in a sign that declared the general was dead.

Doctors at a hospital confirmed Latifi was dead, but the news was being withheld in Iran to avoid further turmoil.

The mobs destroyed a notorious red-light district, two movie houses, a brewery, a nightclub and several restaurants — many of them symbols of the shah's modernization program. Champagne bottles from the nightclub exploded as mobs hurled them into huge bonfires of furnishings burning in the streets.

A U.S. military source said an unidentified gunman "waiting for a Westerner" shot and wounded an American military adviser, Air Force Maj. Larry R. Avis, as he walked to his home in northern Tehran Sunday night.

Avis was reported in satisfactory condition at a U.S. hospital in Tehran. Military sources said he was "not a target of opportunity."

"The assailant apparently was hanging around the street, had a weapon and was waiting for a Westerner," the sources said.

Bakhtiar threw his full support behind the army's efforts to prevent "mistake of freedom."

Troops and police responded to the hospital-inspired destruction by firing at thousands of yelling demonstrators. Hospiatals said an unspecified number of persons had been shot and scores of ambulances raced around the city.

Recall vote scheduled today for Twin Falls

The possibility of a low turnout would spell defeat for Smith.

"If it were a popular vote (a regular election with a variety of candidates), it would be no problem," he said.

But there is only one question on the recall ballot, not a long list of issues and candidates, each juring people to the polls.

Smith said he thinks the apathy of the voters at large is working against him, because the people with the most motivation to go to the polls are the ones who have some reason for voting against him.

The outcome of the election may depend on how effective Smith's campaign workers have been in convincing people to register and vote.

Smith's workers are experienced and leaders of his organization have worked on campaigns for the Republican Party Citizens FIRST is a brand new organization with little or no experience in political campaigns.

Will voters turn out just to defend Smith?

Bill Chancy, Smith's campaign coordinator, said the weather will be an important factor. A cold, snowy day could keep people away from the polls.

Recall leader Williamson is predicting victory because he feels his organization can count on the people they have lined up on their side.

"I think he's going to get creamed. If they had started as early as we did, it might be otherwise. What they don't realize is that we've been at this thing for three months. We're organized," Williamson said.

Smith is aware that his opposition is formidable.

"It wouldn't be surprised if they have the number of registered voters they need already," he said.

To recall Smith, his opponents need a majority of the votes cast today, and that majority must number more than 1,153 — the number of votes Smith received when he was elected to his present term on the city council.

According to City Clerk Edythe Kootz, 4,679 citizens have registered to vote in Tuesday's election, the most since the 1969 city election. Saturday, the last day of registration, 539 people registered to vote.

In 1969, Kootz said, 5,180 people registered to vote, but only half that number voted.

Smith must hope for a better turnout than that.

If, as Smith believes, his opposition already has lined up 1,153 votes, that leaves 3,526 voters from whom Smith can draw support. He will have to carry a significant majority of those remaining votes to stay in office.

Congressmen blast 'betrayal'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of Republican congressmen bitterly criticized the "betrayal" of Taiwan Monday and said President Carter deceived the American people about his commitment to a foreign policy based on human rights.

Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, told a news conference, "To pay so dear a price in selling out 17 million free people for the privilege of a contract with traditional communist enemies is at the least immoral."

In a separate news conference, Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., recognized a "great wave of protection" in Congress for Taiwan, but he said most members feel recognition of mainland China was inevitable. O'Neill said congressmen who criticized the administration's actions on China "are a slight minority of the House."

Gerard Ford considered recognition of China in the closing days of his presidential term, O'Neill said, but decided to leave the matter for the incoming president, Carter.

Hansen accused Carter of "fostering the big lie" by saying both the Peking Chinese and the Taiwan government were unwilling to accept anything other than the "one-China policy."

Hansen said his findings are that while the Republic of China holds to its hope of a unified, free China, that does not impede its strong desire for formal government to government relations with the United States.

"The Republic of China is an independent and sovereign nation and there should be a continuation of full relations," Hansen said. He said he and other members of the Friendship Delegation, which returned to the United States on Monday, are organizing a national people-to-people assistance program called "the New Flying Tigers" to challenge the Carter policy. Hansen said the group is named after the Flying Tigers of World War II who assisted China.

Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, told reporters the warm greeting to Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping "certainly is something that will go down in history as a sad day. A betrayal of a friend and ally." Rep. William Danon, D-Calif., said if Carter continues to believe concern for human rights is foremost in his foreign policy, "The truth is not in the man. His actions speak louder than his words."

Ashbrook and several others who recently went to Taiwan pledged to fight any legislation ending relations with Peking.

In another news conference, Rep. Eldon Rudd, R-Ariz., another recent Taiwan visitor, said it is a "sorry sight" for Carter to be hosting and toasting Teng. The "only thing sorer," he added, is for two former Republican presidents, Ford and Richard Nixon, to be part of the ceremonies.

Nixon was attending the state dinner honoring Teng Monday night. Ford was invited but was out of the country and did not attend.

Smiling, straw-hatted Pope hugs small Indian child

Indians cheer 'Pope of poor'

CULLAPAM, Mexico (UPI) — Pope John Paul II, who came down hard on Marxism in the church in two days of speeches to priests and bishops, told 10,000 cheering Indians in one of Mexico's poorest regions Monday that they have been "harshly exploited" and he wants to see their voice.

Later, wearing a straw sombrero he had carried in his hand as he left his helicopter, the pontiff told a crowd in a dusty square in the little town of Cullapam, "The pope speaks for those who cannot speak." The crowd burst into a roar of approval.

After being met with complaints from the Indians that they are poor and neglected, John Paul told them: "The pope and the church are with you. The pope wants solidarity with your cause, the cause of the humble people, the cause of the poor."

"The pope wants to be the voice of the many who seek justice."

It was a sharp contrast from an incident Sunday when John Paul made a passing reference to "the simple joys of the poor" before a crowd of 200,000 city dwellers and church leaders in Puebla, drawing a hiss from some members of the crowd.

John Paul dropped by helicopter Monday into Cullapam, 9 miles south of Oaxaca in southern Mexico, a state where about 80 percent of the residents are full-blooded Indians.

The pope, speaking from a red leather-covered wooden chair, told the crowd that they had been "harshly exploited" and deserved "human rights, education, health care ... the same dignity as anyone else."

"It is not charity, it is the dignity that all men deserve."

He was cheered when he called for "realistic and effective measures" to improve their lot, because "it is not Christian to continue with conditions that are not just."

The pontiff wore his white robe and skullcap, but he was given a straw cowboy hat — the kind most men of the region wear — and he wound up putting it on for protection from the blazing noon sun. He wore it through the afternoon as he moved through the crowds, occasionally lifting and hugging small children.

A cross was drawn in lime beside a 18th-century Dominican convent to mark a landing spot for the pontiff's helicopter, which raised a huge cloud of dust as it landed. That appeared to impress the gathered Indians more than any of the ceremony that followed.

About 12,000 to 15,000 had gathered to greet John Paul, but about 10 percent appeared not to know why they were there. Many said they had joined the crowd out of curiosity. Others only wanted to see the pope, and the crowd began melting away as soon as he landed, leaving only about 10,000 to hear the pontiff speak.

Seven different Indian dialects could be heard in the crowd, which gathered before dawn. Most were Indians of the Mixtec and Zapotec tribes, whose ancestors 20 centuries ago built the nearby city of Monte Alban, the stone ruins of which are a major tourist attraction.

Old Indian women plopped down on the dirt floor of the square as they waited his arrival. Some mothers were breastfeeding their babies, some holding umbrellas, some shading their eyes with cardboard from old Colgate toothpaste boxes.

Labor woes in Britain continue

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister James Callaghan and top trade union leaders met Monday but remained at odds over ways to end an epidemic of crippling strikes that threaten to scuttle his Labor government in a general election that may be only months away.

There was little letup on the strike front.

On the positive side, a walkout by 100,000 truck drivers which has blocked ports, warehouses and factories for four weeks appeared near an end.

But new walkouts at schools, hospitals, ambulance services, garbage collection and water services.

More than 1,300 schools were shut by walkouts of caretakers, cleaning staff and women who cook school meals.

Len Murray, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress, Britain's top trade union organization, said after the two-hour meeting, "Our aim is to seek agreement with the government — but not at any price on either side."

Callaghan was said to have warned that unless the unions drop demands for raises as high as 50 percent and agree with the government on a new policy limiting pay and price increases, the Labor Party faces disaster at the poll.

He repeated the government's intention to keep pay increases as close to 5 percent as possible.

Murray said, "We told the prime minister very firmly we are not in the business of renegotiating" wage ceilings.

He said the trade union leaders agreed to meet again with Callaghan but no date was set.

Major task faces historical society

In February, the Twin Falls County Historical Society elects a new president.

The new executive of this old and respected group will confront a serious problem: declining interest in the historical society.

As recently as 1970, 250 men and women actively went on society tours and attended monthly meetings.

This January's meeting attracted only 20 history buffs.

The historical society's decline coincides with the advancing age of many of its members.

Much of the historical society's membership has come from the ranks of the founding families in the county. These genuine pioneers aren't spring chickens anymore.

A child old enough to remember the founding of Twin Falls in 1904 would be in his or her 80s today.

The historical society now faces a transitory period. It must change from being a club for pioneers to a club for the descendants of pioneers, and the many younger people in the county who are interested in history.

The prerequisite for this transition is the generation of renewed enthusiasm in the county for the historical society and its projects.

A good starting place for this rekindling of enthusiasm would be the Twin Falls County Historical Museum, a fascinating but neglected place.

The museum needs to be cleaned, organized, and opened 12 months a year. It needs a curator, not just a caretaker, to keep exhibits in good order and to promote the museum as a year-round point of interest.

The museum should be the center of the historical society's activities.

A second project that could rejuvenate the society would be resumption of well-organized historical tours.

In recent years, the historical society has toured, but has featured the same three or four sites year after year. And the tours are only day affairs.

New tours to other regions of the state should be tried to whet the interest of new members. And, all tours require fact sheets and guides.

Finally, the historical society should more actively seek memberships. Scout troops, teachers, businessmen, retired people, they should all be asked to help get the society back on its feet. The society needs some new blood.

These are some of the tasks facing the new president of the Twin Falls Historical Society, formidable tasks, but chores that need to be tackled.

Why kids come back home

The column about young adults moving back home with their parents has drawn a strong response; and it seems to confirm the point made in the piece.

I wrote in the column that — even though there were no hard data to support the contention that an increasing number of men and women in their mid-20s, late 20s, and early 30s were returning to the homes in which they grew up, to live again with their mothers and fathers — it seemed, from talking to people in that age group, that such a trend was, indeed, being born.

Since the column appeared, a number of men and women who have moved back home have called and written; so have the brothers and sisters of people who have done it; so have psychiatrists and psychologists who have noticed the trend among their patients.

Today's column, though, will not concern itself with one of the men or women who have moved home; instead, it will be about a woman I talked with who, as she put it, is "intimately concerned with" the subject.

"I wonder if you would be willing to print the other side," she said.

I asked her what she meant.

"All these adults who are going back home — where do you think they're going to?" she said. "I'm the mother of a man who is 32 years old and is living at home again, and I don't think I was fairly represented in your story."

She said that she detected an undercurrent of disapproval in the column — a sense that, for an adult to be living with his or her parents again was considered "falling home," giving in to defeat at the hands of the real world.

"The psychologists you quoted in your story seemed to think there was something wrong for a man or woman to go back to a place where they have known safety and comfort," she said. "I got the impression that, just because a person has passed the age of 21, that person has automatically given up the right to depend on the parents who have raised him and loved him."

I asked her if she did not agree that it is at least slightly unusual for a grown man or woman to suddenly decide to live with his or her parents again.

"You're thinking in terms of statistics," she said. "You seem to have it in your thinking that, just because a person does something that most other people aren't doing, that person is somehow wrong or perverse. Please try to remember that you're not talking about people who are involved with drugs, or people who have murdered somebody — you're talking about people who have decided that their best chance for happiness, at least temporarily, lies in coming home to the people who brought them into this world."

"Not everyone is equipped to make it in the world. I realize there are self-help programs available to people, and counseling and what have you. But if a man decides that he wants to come home to his mother and father, are we supposed to turn him away? We're told that it's out of the ordinary to have our grown son living with us — but if we were to take in a lost and stray dog, no one would think it was unusual at all. They'd just say that we had good hearts. But people look on us funny because we own children — to take in one of our own decided."

"Besides the one son who is home with us again now, we have three other grown children. They went out in the world and achieved some success for themselves. I do not love them any more or any less than I love the son who, in the world's terms, failed. But I will tell you that I do resent their attitude toward us and him. They seem to feel ashamed that he is being a blot on the family, as if he, by being back home with us, is a reflection on them."

"I am through explaining to them — and to the people outside my family who apparently feel the same way — my reasons for opening my house to my son. I do not think I should have to explain, and I do not think it should be anyone else's concern."

I asked the woman if she felt her son's presence was a burden to her in any way.

"I should tell you that having him here is no burden at all," she said. "In fact, it has changed our life. We had looked forward to living out our lives by ourselves, with all the children gone. We had started to live that kind of a life, and it was very pleasant. When our son came home to us, we had some adjusting to do, and it was not all in a direction we would have desired."

"He felt ashamed to be coming home, and it was a shame that he could share with very few people. He felt he had fallen in some way, and he was admitting it to us by coming to us, and he didn't want our sympathy, he just wanted our presence."

"I know that you wrote about this in your column because you see it as some kind of new trend, with more and more families experiencing what we have experienced. But what I'm trying to tell you is that to us it's not a trend, it's someone we love turning to us because he is in need."

"We don't know how long he'll stay home — whether he'll go out on his own again, whether he is with us for good. Either way is fine with us. He is free to live with us until the day we pass away, because we love him. He is not a trend. He is our son."

Now, a new army problem, the troops are pregnant

By TOM TIDDE

FT. STEWART, Ga. — The United States Army has not had an easy time of it lately. It has lost a war for the first time, it has been defeated by drugs, defectors and the end of conscription. Now another problem is developing: increasing numbers of GIs are not able to do their duty because they are pregnant.

Honest. But it's not funny. The number of women in the service has more than tripled in recent years, many are now holding key positions in the nation's military establishment, and when they get in a family way they can seriously affect the ability of the armed forces to handle defense emergencies.

Here at Ft. Stewart, for instance, 25th Infantry Division commanders are beginning to worry that expecting soldiers are limiting the efficiency of some units. Post information specialist Frank Madison tells of one unit where eight women are assigned to crucial jobs, "and four of them are now pregnant."

In case of war, Madison says the pregnant women would be useless. Worse, commanders doubt that replacements could be found to fill positions left open by the women. So the units would be deployed short-handed, with key responsibilities still vacant. "It's scary," Madison says, "it's also dangerous."

And it's by no means unusual. Last year, according to Pentagon figures, 7,500 of the Army's 50,000 servicewomen were pregnant. That's 15 percent of them. Pentagon statisticians believe that one in 10 Army women are with child at any given time. The numbers are slightly less for other armed services.

What's more, service authorities insist the situation is going to get worse. Right now there are 105,000 women in the military, and nearly 10,000 become pregnant each year. By 1990 the number of service-women may grow to 400,000, and the guess is that as many as 40,000 pregnancies will occur annually.

Of course, the predicament is not an altogether new one for the military. Women have been in uniform since World War II, and have thus been filling camp pediatric wards for almost four decades. But today the status of women under arms has changed, and with it their right to be both soldiers and moms.

Time was when single women who became pregnant in the service were immediately discharged. Then, in 1975, the Pentagon changed the policy; under pressure from women's rights groups, the Department of Defense ruled that gestation was a temporary disability, like sore feet, hence discharge was discriminatory.

Pregnant soldiers are still sometimes discharged, but only if they choose to be. If they do, they are entitled to medical care at government expense, plus postpartum treatment after birth. They are also allowed to stay on active duty until 30 days before delivery; and they receive full veterans benefits.

If the women opt to remain in service, which most do, they sign an agreement promising to "fulfill the terms" of their enlistment contract. This means they are expected to carry on with normal assignments. In fact, though, their conditions usually prevent them from working under the routine demands.

Ft. Stewart officers say pregnant soldiers are often given clerical jobs as soon as their conditions are known. Then, when their physicians request it, the women are limited to 8 hours of work a week. Besides this, they are allowed to replace their Army fatigues with comfortable civilian dress.

If complications set in, the women are handled accordingly. Many come to work only periodically. Others come, but report unpredictable hours. Still others may spend the last month or six weeks of their pregnancies at home. After delivery, the women receive up to six weeks additional leave for recuperation.

What this means is that pregnant soldiers may become part-time soldiers for months. And in some cases they are absent entirely for up to 90 days. Even when the women return to duty, there may be problems: In Europe, some single mothers who can't find baby-sitters are bringing their children to reveille.

And, too, Ft. Stewart commanders say the pregnant GIs often create tension among other people in the units. Lt. Stephen Hamilton, a Stewart motor pool officer, says his men do more work when his women become pregnant, "and they don't like it." He adds that he can't blame them: "The situation just isn't fair."

Nor is the situation easily resolvable. The all-volunteer military must rely on women to help fill the ranks, and it can't very well call only for the sterile. As of now, then, the Pentagon can only advise field commanders to think of pregnancies like desertions: "In an emergency, they're bound to have both."

Some advice: Men of the 25th Infantry Division joke that the next war will have to have timeouts for stork overflights. Yet, few are laughing. If combat comes, some soldiers will miss it on orders from their gynecologists, and the result may be a proportional deterioration of fortune for the rest of the troops.

Non-viewer of Super Bowl ends up bruised and battered

WASHINGTON — A bunch of us were standing around the bar on Monday talking about Super Bowl Sunday, and what a dandy day it had been. We all had that warm feeling you get when you have shared a common experience. I was telling everyone how I had watched the game on a large super screen which my friend Stevens had bought just for the occasion. Next to being at the game itself, this gave me quite a bit of closure.

I noticed that only one who wasn't enjoying the scene was Apple. With good humor I said, "Where did you see the Super Bowl, Apple?"

"I didn't," he replied. There was a hush in the bar. "Did someone die in your family?" Nelson asked.

"No," Apple said. "I know," Balley interjected, "you were on an airplane flying back from a business trip."

Apple shook his head. "I wasn't on an airplane and no one died in my family and no one got sick. I was home."

"Your television set was broken?" someone suggested. "My television set was perfect. As a matter of fact, my wife and I watched 'To Kill a Mockingbird,' with Gregory Peck. It was an excellent movie."

"What were you doing watching a movie instead of the Super Bowl?" I wanted to know.

"I don't believe in the Super Bowl," Apple replied, "and neither does my wife."

Ogilvy slammed down his beer. "What the hell do you mean — you don't believe in the Super Bowl? Are you some kind of atheist nut or something?"

Apple was really cool. "I believe in God, but I don't believe in football."

Americans observe it, believe in it, live for it. And you're trying to say it don't do nothing to you?"

"It may have religious significance for some people. But it doesn't have meaning for my family. I have no objection to other folks believing that the day has some super power as long as they don't try to inflict their beliefs on me."

The bar was tensing up. I tried to be the peacemaker. "Apple may have a point," I said. "After all, what makes America the greatest country in the world is not that you have to watch 'The Game,' but that you DON'T have to watch it if you don't want to."

"If you don't like it here," Ogilvy spat out at Apple, "why don't you go back where you came from?"

"Ogilvy's right," Nelson said. "Millions of dollars were spent to give us the Super Bowl. The two greatest teams in American football played their hearts out, and many fell on the field of combat."

"They put on a half-time show that would put the Roman castruses to shame. American advertisers spent every nickel they had to bring us a day we will remember for the rest of our lives. Only a pervert would be tuned in to 'To Kill a Mockingbird.'"

"I'm sorry you all feel this way," Apple said, "but we do have separation of state and church in this country. Besides, I believe the Super Bowl has been hyped up to the point where it has lost all sportsmanlike meaning. It is now nothing but junk food."

"I wish Apple hadn't said that. But our lawyers tell us that, no matter how much Apple sees us for assaulting him, as jury of 12 just men is going to award him a dime when they find out he doesn't believe in Super Bowl Sunday."

Germans say only Americans could have made 'Holocaustist'

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Germans looked back with astonishment Monday at the success of the "Holocaustist" television series and said only Americans could have made the film that painted the horrors of the Nazi era more vividly than any German documentary.

The four-part series, which was seen by a total of 53 million people, ended Friday night but Germans still were talking about it and analyzing it three days later.

The weekly news magazine Der Spiegel made "Holocaustist" its cover story and devoted 18 pages of its 186-page Monday edition to the film and its repercussions in an article titled: "The Murder of Jews Shocked Germans." What comes next, asked shocked television viewers, who stayed up after midnight last week to hear historians, psychoanalysts and former concentration camp inmates discuss the "film." The network said a 13-part series on the Nazis will be broadcast late next year. And Herbert Wehner, parliamentary floor leader of the ruling Social Democratic Party, said parliament probably will get legislation in March to enable continued prosecution of Nazi murderers after this year. Under the present statute of limitations, any trials after 1979 would be ruled out. "Prison for 'Holocaustist' was universal. Only the neo-Nazis who had threatened to blow up television transmission towers to block the program probably dissented. Guenter Rohrbach, head of the film department at the Cologne station, that paid $543,000 for the series, said: "This American film did what more than 100 German documentary and feature films could not do. There is no doubt that this film only could have been made in America." "Der Spiegel agreed: 'It is simply fantastic,'" said. "Our historians, journalists and film makers year after year tried to show the whole horror of the German crimes — and it took a Hollywood film produced to make a profit in the post-Holocaust Germany." Thirty-two percent of all West German families with television sets saw the first installment, 35 percent the second, 29 percent the third and 41 percent the fourth. The percentages actually varied by region and socioeconomic matches. The program had thousands of people phoned or sent letters of appreciation during and after the telecasts.

High on love

BOISE (UPI) — Art Castagnola and Sandy Himes wanted something different for their wedding ceremony, so they tied the knot this weekend in a hot-air balloon, tethered 100 feet off the ground. Judge Richard Grant and two pilots accompanied Castagnola, 42, and his 29-year-old bride-to-be into the balloon's gondola while the best man and maid of honor stayed on the ground with 60 other people in 17-degree weather. When the four-minute ceremony ended the tether line was cut and the balloon sailed over the Western Idaho Fairgrounds to a landing point near the Boise River.

"We wanted to do something that we could remember, something a little different that we could think back on over the years," Castagnola said.

Armenian dissident draws death sentence

MOSCOW (UPI) — An Armenian dissident has been sentenced to death in connection with the January 1977 bombing of a Moscow subway, Nobel laureate Andrei Sakharov said Monday.

Sakharov identified the dissident as Stepan Zadijian, 32, but said all he knew about the case was that Zadijian's family was notified last Friday of the death sentence.

Zadijian was one of three Armenians arrested late in 1977 in connection with an alleged plot to set off another bomb at Kursk Railroad Terminal in Moscow.

Plea avoids parking fine

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — Parking tickets got you down? Tired of long searches for a place to put your car overnight? Consider the case of an unidentified student, who left his car parked illegally on the University of Vermont campus last week.

On the windshield was a note to police: "Have mercy. Attention Police Officer. I know my car is parked illegally. Could you please give me a break — my starter is dead, won't start on a cold day. I have done nothing this semester but worry about this car, park it, pay tickets and pick it up after being towed. I'm doing the best I can. It will be moved tomorrow somehow. I have no more funds for tickets or towing. My friends are tired of phoning this thing around. Please don't tow it. If you do, at least tow it to Garret's University Texaco Station. I will commit suicide if you do otherwise. I cannot handle this situation. Thank you." A Burlington police spokesman said he believed the car was not towed.

Entourage on stand

DOS ANGELES (UPI) — The attorney for Michelle Marvin said Monday he intended to call Lee Marvin's entourage of lawyers, managers, agents and publicity men to the stand to back up the former singer's charge that they "ganged up" on her in the last days of her six-year affair with the actor. The landmark trial was in recess Monday. Marvin was scheduled to resume testimony today but Miss Marvin's attorney, Marvin Mitchellson, was ill over the weekend and there was a possibility of delay.

Teacher turns final illness into lesson on death, dying

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (UPI) — When Janet Roberge learned six years ago she was dying of cancer, she saw it as an opportunity to "dig in and enjoy" life and give her students a rare lesson in dying.

"She tried to show the students that here was a person with a serious disease who chose to dig in and enjoy life," said Edward Roberge, husband of the Shrine High School teacher in suburban Detroit.

"The way Janet was helps me with the pain," said Roberge, a director of the youth leadership department of the Detroit Catholic Youth Organization. Janet died Thursday of a heart attack at the age of 31 while her husband held her. Roberge spoke about their relationship and the last few years of her life Sunday.

"She fed her strength to me. During the last year she felt she was a burden to me but I told her of the story of the blind man and his arthritic wife. She needed him to push her wheelchair and he needed her to tell him where to push. "Because of her influence, we have no regrets," he said. "We hurt a lot, there's something missing, but we can deal with it."

In her class on dying, Mrs. Roberge included readings about teaching and peace and poems by Emily Dickenson, which her husband described as "expressing hope in death."

The class had an impact on Mrs. Roberge's students.

"Mrs. Roberge was very brave and talked about her disease with us in class," said Jenny Ebaugh, 16, who took the class last year and said it was one of the most important courses she ever had taken.

In one of her last acts, Mrs. Roberge left a message and asked a Bible verse to be read at her funeral Monday at the Shrine of the Little Flower Catholic Church. She said in her message: "My time has almost run out. Very soon now I will be on my way to heaven. I have fought long and hard for my Lord, and throughout all I have kept true to him. And now the time has come for me to stop fighting and rest."

Army officer destroys myth

Paula Hollifield follows family tradition with career in National Guard

Paula Edmonds Hollifield of Twin Falls proves the old stereotype of the female military officer is gone, or at least fading fast. The stereotype goes like this: a large unfeminine, stern-faced, no-nonsense, female sergeant barking orders. Meeting Paula destroys the myth.

Paula is petite, feminine, warm, bright, attractive, witty and not even a sergeant. As a matter of fact, she is a major — the only one among 85 women in the Idaho Army National Guard.

After seven years of active Army duty in various parts of the world, Major Hollifield, who grew up in Boston, moved to Twin Falls in 1974 as the bride of Bill Hollifield, a well-known Twin Falls attorney and native of the Magic Valley. She immediately joined the Idaho Army National Guard and has been assigned since June 1978 to the Headquarters of the 116th Armored Cavalry Regiment in Twin Falls.

Paula says her military career started in a happenstance manner.

"I was doing my student-teaching during my senior year at Boston College and decided that teaching high school was definitely not for me. While leafing through a Glamour magazine one evening, I saw an ad for the Army. It had a picture of an attractive female and said, 'The Lieutenant is all woman — go see your Army recruiter.' So I did. In fact, I visited the recruiting offices of all four branches of the service and decided that the Army had the most to offer me."

While some parent might despair if their college-graduate daughter chose such a career, Paula says she had a lot of support.

"My father had been an infantry officer in World War II and my mother an Army nurse. Both were Lieutenants. Because of this, they gave me a great amount of encouragement to pursue an Army career."

Paula's first assignment after basic training was in New Jersey as a recruiter. She later was stationed in Camp Zama, Japan, as chief of personnel actions. One of her duties in Japan was the daily Vietnam casualty notification to the Pentagon.

Her next assignment was back in the States as social aid for the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, Admiral Thomas Moorer. With a top secret security clearance, she was in charge of all appointments for the Admiral, and supervised military dinners and social gatherings for top foreign military dignitaries. Paula said the job provided glamour and contact with many influential people.

Joining the Idaho Army National Guard has allowed Paula to continue her career. Her duties now center around her position as Equal Opportunity Officer for the Idaho Army National Guard. She describes her job as a challenge.

"Within the area of Equal Opportunity, I teach classes on sexism, racial relations and discrimination complaints. I'm also in charge of Affirmative Action, an effort required by law to include minorities and avoid discrimination in the Guard. I am an adviser to the Adjutant General of Idaho in matters regarding women in the Army Guard."

Major Hollifield is enthusiastic about what the military services offer women. Referring to the Army, she says, "The opportunities are greater than ever for women now. When I joined in 1967, women were very limited in the types of jobs they could hold. They could not, for instance, be in combat units."

"The Army was simply reflecting our culture at that time. Just as it does at any given time, and women in the military were being funneled into traditional female jobs such as nursing, clerical, and office positions."

"Now, women can hold any military occupational specialty except a very few that are directly combat related."

Staff Sergeant Jim Welch, the Twin Falls Army Recruiter explains: "Of the approximately 400 jobs available in the Army, there are only 29 that are recommended for men only and those are all directly combat related. The law prohibits women from direct combat roles or direct combat support roles. That leaves 371 jobs that a woman can choose from. And those choices offer education and training in areas such as heavy equipment operation and maintenance, metal working, helicopter repair or playing the French horn in an Army Band."

Women are, however, receiving the training for direct combat. According to Major Hollifield, the Idaho Army National Guard will have a two-week basic combat training program for women in June.

She said, "This is the first time this will have been done in Idaho. The Army is making an effort to lessen the gap between the combat training men get as a regular part of their army education and the lack of that training for women." Major Hollifield will be the commanding officer for the program.

Paula wears fatigues on the job at the National Guard Army

How does the major feel about women being placed in combat situations?

"I feel that if women are given the proper training, they can handle it. Because the law currently disallows combat, that law would have to be changed before women would actually find themselves in a foxhole or in the front lines."

"Intellectually, I feel that military women should have the same combat obligations as men. However, I am realistic and am aware of some of the very real problems in that regard. Men in our culture have been conditioned against seeing women in dangerous or life-threatening situations. They still feel protective of women and some would find women in combat disconcerting."

Of course, there was a time when most men found it disconcerting to have women in the military service in any capacity other than as nurses or in civilian support roles such as the USO or the "Donut Dollies" of the Red Cross.

Major Pat Parrott, Command Administrative Assistant of the 116th Armored Cavalry Regiment, said, "The place of women in the Army has been changing drastically in the last 10 to 15 years. The breakthrough began when the Israeli Army started using women, out of necessity, in the many conflicts there. American military advisers who closely observed this situation found that women fought as well as men in the combat zone."

Parrott also said the push for the Equal Rights Amendment and broader rights for women have contributed to the Army's move to give women combat training, making them better prepared for any situation.

The Pentagon expects the number of women in America's armed forces to double to 12 percent by 1984, and it says women already are moving into male-dominated jobs such as missile firing and parachuting.

Recruiter Welch says that during the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1978, Idaho had 262 Army enlistees. Of those, 62 (23 percent) were women. Statistics for the United States show a total of 800,000 Army troops. Of those, 50,000 (6 percent) are women. Female enlistments are up 4 percent over the 1977 statistics. Sergeant Welch attributes this rise to the increasing Army job opportunities for women.

One young woman who seems to keep discovering Army opportunities is Major Hollifield. She has also discovered that she can have it all right here in Twin Falls. She can be a successful wife and mother of a 2-year-old daughter, Paige. She can contribute to her community through volunteer work at the Twin Falls Women's Center and other civic organizations. And she can continue a satisfying career with the Idaho Army National Guard.

Dear Abby

Diaper rash doll rates near bottom of list

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
©Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.
DEAR ABBY: My 6-year-old daughter received a doll for Christmas that is designed to develop diaper rash. The doll comes with a little kit of pills which, when mixed with water and fed to the doll, cause the doll to break out with diaper rash. There is another solution to feed the doll that will "cure" the rash.

Never have I seen anything so ridiculous in all my life. I think this doll should get the Christmas toy booby prize of the year, don't you?

PASCO, WASH.

DEAR PASCO: Well, let's just say the diaper rash doll is somewhere near the bottom.

DEAR ABBY: Count me as another wife who undresses in the closet, but not because I'm hung up about tidily or sex. Far from it. I am very uninhibited when the lights are out.

My husband drools over women with great figures. My figure used to be beautiful, but after four children, too much eating, and not enough exercise, I sag in some places and have bulges and rolls of fat in others. In other words, I'm ashamed of the way I look unclothed.

I also feel guilty because I'm just too lazy to do something about the shape I've let myself get into. My husband doesn't notice the shape I'm in when I'm horizontal, but he would notice if he were to see me standing up, undressing.

So I undress in the dark to spare his feelings as well as my own.

SPEAKING FOR MANY

DEAR SPEAKING: I'm sure you speak for many. The last thing you need from me is a lecture on the importance of diet and exercise. She who does not take care of the equipment may soon find herself out of business.

DEAR ABBY: When I read your column on what to give an what not to give old folks for Christmas, I thought you should win the Woman of the Year award. Then I read the postscript and changed my mind.

You say, "To be alone at Christmas is sad beyond measure. Give the greatest gift of all to someone who faces the bleak prospect of being alone, an invitation to spend his holiday with you and your family."

You are so wrong, Abby! People who are accustomed to living alone would be driven to distraction by the confusion, noise, clutter and general turmoil of the average family Christmas.

Old people find it much easier to accept holiday greetings by mail or phone, or a short visit from grandchildren — not accompanied by nose-making toys or inedible food.

Some parents find family festivities tiring, and we older folks are even shorter on patience and endurance. Being alone away from the commotion of holiday hubbub is far from "sad."

ALONE BUT NOT LONELY

CONFIDENTIAL TO C.C. IN D.C.: Don't go looking for your roots unless you're prepared to dig up a lot of dirt.

Wedding bells in your future? Whether your lifestyle is bridal gown or blue jeans, Abby lays it all out for you in her booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 12 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Influential women gather to analyze world economy

By BAILEY MORRIS
©Washington Star/
WASHINGTON — The membership is composed of bankers and corporate executives, artists, economists and media people — a disparate group by any measure.

Their backgrounds are different, their philosophies varied and their politics, unaligned.

In fact, the only common denominator linking the membership of the first Women's Economic Round table is their sex:

"These are busy, well-placed women many of whom have never joined a 'women's organization' before."

What has made them change their minds? Why have they suddenly become eager participants in an organization, with the word "women's" in the title, when most of them are consumed by the time demands of job and home?

The answer is their developing common interest in creating national and even international platforms from which women can address the major economic problems of the day.

The membership feels this is important and indeed a responsibility of women equipped with the backgrounds and expertise to take economic stands.

It is especially important for women to take economic stands so that other women — the 77 million women of voting age — will listen and begin to think of themselves in an economic context.

"The level of economic education is abysmal. We hope to start with a constituency we know and can work with to try and raise the economic consciousness of all women — be they housewives or professionals," Maria Rolfe, executive chairman of the Round Table said.

It was Rolfe's idea to start the Round Table, holding regular public meetings for a national membership of women able to question leaders in every sector of the economy. "I remember how I felt when a leading commentator asked me where are the women economists. He said he didn't know of any. And now I don't think he'll have to ask that question," says Rolfe.

That is one purpose of the New York-based Round table, which was started in June and already has chapters in Washington, Philadelphia, Oklahoma and elsewhere. It is to raise the voice of women to the national economic decision-making level. "It hopes to flex the newly acquired financial muscle of women through the generation of public debates on everything from inflation to estate taxes.

"We'll be putting forth positions and papering the Congress with our thoughts," says Amy Augustus, executive secretary.

And further down the road, the Round Table is likely to mobilize its constituency to take strong political stands, says petroleum expert Ruth Sheldon-Knowles.

Its members include Muriel Fox, executive vice president of Carl Boyo & Associates; Karen Gerard, vice president of Chase Manhattan Bank; Mary Crisp, co-chairperson of the Republican-National Committee; Lucy Jarvis, president of Creative Products Inc. and Eleanor Johnson, economist with Irving Trust Co.

Putting Women of this caliber together in one room to discuss a topic as weighty as inflation is bound to produce some good economic directions to pursue, says Madeline McWhinney, formerly of the Federal Reserve Board and now president of Dale Elliot & Co.

"More women are willing to admit, that they don't have all the answers and therefore need to work hard to find them," says McWhinney.

I-80 CB Club schedules Sweetheart dance

BOISE — A Sweetheart dance sponsored by the I-80 CB Club will be held at 9 p.m. in the Basque Center at 600 Ave. in Boise.

Proceeds of the dance are to go to the Mountain States Tumor Institute for the purchase of a simulator, a machine which can accurately diagnose the area of patient's malignancy and the extent of the malignancy, according to Doris Brown, MSTI director of administrative services.

The event, which is open to the public, will feature live music. The dress will be casual and soft drinks and ice will be available, according to Al Welker, club secretary.

Susan Smith, members of the club's state board of directors, said the club began making arrangements for the benefit after seeing a news film about MSTI and pediatric oncology last fall. "Cancer touches—the lives—of everyone," said Mrs. Smith. "We all have friends and relatives who have been affected by the disease."

The I-80 CB Club has over 300 members statewide. The club was originally formed to help truckers but has since expanded into the community. The club motto is "people helping people."

Closing prices Profit takers apply pressures

By FRANK W. SLUSSER -UPI Business Writer NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks succumbed to profit-taking pressures and fell Monday even though major New York banks lowered the broken loan rate, indicating easier credit. Trading was sluggish. The Dow Jones industrial average, a 5.11-point winner Friday, shed 5.98 points to 855.77. Since the Dow has gained more than 50 points in January, including 22.26 last week, analysts said it is subject to profit taking. The New York Stock Exchange index dropped 0.14 to 56.85 and the price of a share fell 7 cents. Declines edged advances, 750 to 665, among the 1,891 issues traded at 4 p.m. EST. Skeptics said the recent slowdown in the nation's money supply, leading to lower-interest-rate speculation and market rallies, was caused by seasonal factors and the weather. They ignored the half-point brokerage rate drop in New York.

Still, many on Wall Street reacted as if the Federal Reserve had a handle on the money supply. Large institutional investors, noting strong earnings reports and dividend increases, have been buying selected blue-chip and glamor issues. The dollar, buoyed in recent months by administration policies to support it, was higher abroad Monday. Charles Schultz, Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, predicted moderate economic growth for 1979. December machine tool orders fell 26 percent from November but were 1.9 percent ahead of a year ago. Big bond volume totaled 24,170,000 shares, down from the 34,230,000 traded Friday. Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 26,095,560 shares, compared with 37,179,000 Friday. The American Stock Exchange index slipped 0.42 to 161.93 and the price of a share dipped 3 cents. The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ OTC index lost 0.27 to 126.77. At 4 p.m., Bally Manufacturing was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1 1/2 to 60 1/2, apparently because traders were covering borrowed Bally shares they had sold earlier at higher prices. Bally is under federal grand jury investigation. Gardner-Denver, a 7-point winner last week, was the second most active issue, off 1/2 to 29 1/2. The firm has agreed to merge with Cooper Industries. Texaco was the third most active issue, off 1/4 to 25 1/2. Iowa Beer, off 1/4 to 25 1/2, after a delayed opening. The firm, which recently terminated takeover talks with Pacific-Holding-Co., declared a 2-for-1 stock split and doubled its dividend payout. Sherwin-Williams, a 6 1/2-point winner the previous two sessions, surrendered 1 1/2 to 24 1/2. Gulf & Western revealed Friday it intended to extend its holdings in Sherwin-Williams from 13 percent to 25 percent. GW stock eased 1/4 to 14 1/2. National Airlines jumped 2 1/4 to 37 1/2. Pan American World Airways was preparing a new and higher bid for National, which also is being sought by Eastern and Texas International Airlines. Pan Am finished unchanged at 6 1/2 and Eastern lost 1/2 to 9. TEI was unchanged at 12 on the Amex. Mobil Corp., which reported higher earnings last week, advanced 1 1/4 to 73 1/2 in active trading. Shalco Corp. dropped 1 1/4 to 13 1/2 after reporting lower earnings. Gould Inc. lost 1 1/2 to 28 1/2 in trading that included a block of 102,800 shares. The firm reported fourth-quarter earnings of 96 cents a share versus $1 a year ago. Standard Brands paid 1 1/4 to 22 1/2. Late Friday, the firm predicted fiscal 1979 earnings of $2.43 a share to $2.53 a share. National City Etres climbed 1 to 11 1/4.

Auto union head backs wage insurance scheme

DETROIT (UPI) — United Auto Workers Union President Douglas Fraser warned Monday that congressional failure to pass a wage insurance plan could cost President Carter labor's support for his anti-inflation effort.

...labor support stake

"President Carter himself said that without the program workers would have a legitimate reason not to cooperate," Fraser said in a speech to the Economic Club of Detroit.

Congressional sources have said the plan, which would give tax credits to workers who voluntarily hold wage settlements below 7 percent, has almost no chance of passage.

The UAW president said the administration's anti-inflation effort would be doomed if it singled out any one segment of society to bear the brunt of the fight against inflation.

"Workers desperately want to see inflation brought under control, because we are among those who suffer the most from it," Fraser said. "But any anti-inflation program must demand equal sacrifices from all."

Fraser said the UAW, which opens contract talks with the Big Three automakers in July, will wait to see what happens in negotiations in the trucking and tire industry before committing itself to Carter's wage hike ceiling.

"In the months ahead, we will be in the position of being able to judge whether or not the program is succeeding," Fraser said. "We intend to look not only at the inflation rate itself, but also the equity with which the overall program is being administered."

Fraser criticized recent predictions by industry observers that a strike is inevitable when the industry contracts with the UAW expire in September.

"The UAW will go to the bargaining table this year to meet the needs and solve the problems set out in the weeks ahead by delegates to our collective bargaining meetings," he said.

"We would prefer to do that without a strike and the suffering that goes with it."

Fraser said inflation protection for retired autoworkers and reduced work time will be among key issues in this year's round of talks with General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp.

House panel cool toward proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The powerful House Ways and Means Committee Monday responded coolly to Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal's plan, the president's "real wage" insurance plan is needed to beat inflation.

"No other instrument has been suggested that could so effectively encourage voluntary wage restraint," Blumenthal said as the committee launched a week of hearings on the proposal. "We need this new tool, and we need it as soon as possible."

Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., told reporters later he would not even schedule drafting sessions until he can determine if there is enough support for the issue. If there isn't, Ullman said, the panel will not "waste a lot of time" on it.

Blumenthal said the plan was "a major innovation" that would "materially reduce the financial risks of compliance, would lead to more widespread compliance, and thus to a more rapid and pronounced impact on the inflation rate."

"Prompt and constructive legislative action would be a vital help in sustaining the momentum of the anti-inflation effort," he said.

Under the plan, if inflation exceeds 7 percent this year, real wage insurance would give a tax credit to workers in groups that hold their average pay increases to 7 percent or less.

It would apply only to the first three percentage points of inflation increase above 7 percent and would cover the first $20,000 of a workers' earned income.

Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., said the plan "is like putting a Band-Aid on a broken arm." Rep. Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, said "it could cause more inflation than it would cure."

Family pays respects to Nelson Rockefeller

NORTHTARRYTOWN, N.Y. (UPI) — About 50 members of the Rockefeller family drove up a green, moss-covered roadway to a gravesite overlooking the Hudson River Monday to pay their last respects to former vice president Nelson Aldrich Rockefeller, one of the 20th century's most influential men.

The mourners, including Rockefeller's widow Happy and first wife Mary Todhunter Clark, arrived at the family cemetery in North Tarrytown shortly after 11 a.m. on an overcast, chilly day.

They stood on a grassy hilltop looking west toward the Hudson River a quarter mile away. There were seven graves marked with Vermont granite tombstones, including those of Nelson Rockefeller's parents, his brother John D. III, a cousin, and two of the family's housekeepers. Tall pines and maple trees sheltered the grove.

A newly cut grave held an urn containing the ashes of the former vice president and four-time New York state governor, who died of a heart attack at the age of 70 in one of his New York City offices Friday night. The tombstone was inscribed simply: "Nelson A. Rockefeller, Born, Bar Harbor, Maine, July 8, 1908. Died, New York, New York, Jan. 26, 1979."

Reporters were barred from the service, but helicopters carrying news photographers hovered overhead and descriptions of the ceremony were later provided by family spokesman Hugh Morrow and Steven Rockefeller, 43, one of five children from his father's first marriage.

Chrysler hikes prices on slow selling autos

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. in its fourth price increase of the 1979 model year Monday raised prices on its average $34 on its slow-selling Aspen and Volare models.

The company said the increase reflected the addition of glass belted radial tires as standard equipment on the two compact cars. Bias ply tires had been offered previously.

A Chrysler spokesman said the higher priced tires were added because of their road-handling ability, puncture resistance and help in improving fuel economy. He said all Chrysler cars now come equipped with standard radial tires.

Under the new price schedule, the basic two-door Volare coupe is listed at $4,060 and the least expensive, four-door model, begins at $4,161. Aspen and Volare station wagons already were equipped with radial tires and were not affected by the price boost.

It was the latest in a series of "interim" price increases by U.S. automakers, and the fourth by Chrysler since the start of the model year. So far, the auto companies have added more than 6 percent to the price of 1979 models.

In its previous increases, Chrysler followed the lead of General Motors Corp., which has set the pricing trend for the Big Three automakers since last spring when it announced it was moving toward "interim pricing" to keep closer tabs on rising production costs.

Previously, the automakers had raised prices in one lump sum at new-model introduction time. This time, Chrysler stood alone in raising prices.

The sticker price of Aspens and Volares had been held down during previous repricing actions in a move to help boost sales of the two models.

Stocks of unsold Aspens and Volares have swollen as much as 75 percent above normal levels in recent months, prompting Chrysler to curtail production and temporarily idle thousands of workers.

WASHINGTON — Two Idaho members of Congress have canceled the receptions they had planned for an official delegation from the nation of Libya.

Sen. James McClure's office said Monday scheduling problems forced the senator to call off a luncheon with the Libyans, and no reason was given for Rep. Steve Symms' change in plans.

A delegation, including Libyan Foreign Minister Ahmed el-Shahhat and other officials, is touring the U.S. during January and February. The Idaho Farm Bureau, the largest farm organization in the state, asked all four members of Idaho's congressional delegation to meet with the Libyans on their stop in Washington in early February.

In response to the farm bureau request, McClure planned a Feb. 8 luncheon for U.S. senators and Libyans. But now McClure will just have lunch with Shahhat and senators. The aide didn't say which other senators would be invited.

Symms called off a formal reception he planned for congressmen and Libyans. Instead, Symms has blocked out an hour of time Feb. 7 to meet informally with the Libyans.

An aide said Symms "dropped off" invitations to some people on the committee's to stop by his office to meet the Libyans at 4:30 p.m. Feb. 7.

She explained the invitations went to members of all committees Symms serves on, which are the House Agriculture, Welfare, Reform, Interior and Insular Affairs, Committees and the Republican Committee on Committees.

A McClure aide said the senator canceled a luncheon because of scheduling problems. Symms' aide said no reason was given to the staff for the change in the congressman's plans.

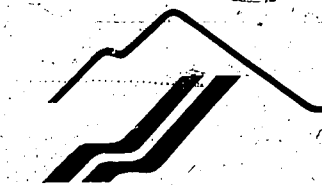

McClure will discuss agricultural matters with Shahhat, but Symms will not discuss agriculture or politics, according to aides.

"This will be very casual," an aide said "just in return for the hospitality the congressman was shown on his trip to Libya."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was also asked by the farm bureau to meet with Libyans, but he declined. The senator said he would only meet with an official delegation if asked to do so by the State Department or a foreign embassy. Although originally Church was to be invited to McClure's luncheon, now he won't be.

The office of Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, could not verify whether the congressman planned to meet with the Libyans.

Library faces beating from 1% initiative

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Twin Falls Public Library will lose 57.6 percent of its funding if the 1 percent initiative is strictly implemented, the Idaho's state librarian said Monday.

Helen M. Miller, speaking before the House Education Committee, presented statistics prepared by the State Tax Commission showing the revenue cuts libraries would receive if the initiative is implemented as written.

According to Miller, "The average library budget will be cut at least 50 percent. Seventy-seven of Idaho's 112 libraries will be reduced to less than $10,000 annual income and only four will have more than $50,000 in income."

In Twin Falls County, the tax reductions would cut the Filson Public Library, losing 62.2 percent of its revenue, the Filer Public Library losing 59.9, the Hansen Public Library losing 49.6 percent and the Kimberly Public Library losing 53.7 percent.

Cuts in other Magic Valley libraries were also near the 50 percent mark.

According to Miller, the cuts are severe because most libraries "are dependent almost entirely on the property tax."

The 1 percent initiative, which passed in November, calls for sharp reductions in property taxes.

Also present at Monday's committee hearing was Arlan Call, director of the Twin Falls Public Library.

"The cuts could be larger than 57.6 percent," Call said. "We could have a 70 to 75 percent cut."

"There's no question but we would do everything in our power to retain service," Call said, but if the initiative is strictly implemented sharp cuts will have to be made, he added.

Rep. Myron Jones, R-Malad, criticized the tax commission figures, saying they were unrealistic.

But Rich Wilson, a special programs coordinator with the Idaho State Library, who helps prepare the statistics, defended their accuracy.

"That's as close as we can get at the present time," Wilson said. "I think they are accurate, given the initiative as it passed."

No final action was taken by the committee.

Sun Valley named fourth ISU center

SUN VALLEY — The State Board of Education has designated the Sun Valley area as a location where Idaho State University resident credit may be earned.

With the designation, the Sun Valley Center for Arts and Humanities becomes the fourth residential center, operated by ISU. Others are at Idaho Falls, Twin Falls and Burley-Rupert. Most of the center's courses have been accredited through ISU under a cooperative agreement between the two institutions begun in 1970.

Sun Valley Center director Jim Belson said such status has been sought for a long time, and that the center will now be able to offer students more credits toward the degree they may be working on at ISU or at any other college.

"This might create a possibility to offer experimental programs that haven't been done before. It might mean we can extend our humanities courses to a certain extent, we've been doing through our Institute of the American West. All of our courses have been accredited before. This simply changes the designation so that, for example, a student going for a Masters degree in Fine Art could take a greater percentage of his credits at the center."

Belson said he doesn't foresee any radical changes in course offerings because of the designation.

ISU President Myron Coulter told the board of education, "This relationship will definitely enhance the academic excellence of the Sun Valley school, and provide the university with an opportunity to serve Sun Valley area residents to a greater degree."

Coulter said a definite possibility exists for the time ISU faculty members to move to Sun Valley to teach full course loads.

Mrs. Teller always wanted to reach her 100th birthday

Clara Teller marks a century of life

TWIN FALLS — Clara Teller will reach a goal Wednesday she has had throughout her life. Mrs. Teller will be 100 years old.

"She always said she wanted to be 100. Ever since I've known her, she's wanted that," her 65-year-old son, John said.

The frail Kentucky native will be honored at a birthday party at Skyview Manor, where she has lived since the age of 92.

Mrs. Teller is alert only at times but nursing staff members at the rest home say there are occasions when she knows the landmark she will pass on Wednesday.

Her life has spanned the eras of the covered wagons to moon walks.

She was born Jan. 31, 1879, in Kentucky, and, John says, she moved with her parents and 11 sisters and brothers from that state to Missouri in a covered wagon.

They settled in a one-room cabin. Her father farmed and her mother raised chickens and grew a large garden.

On Feb. 7, 1897, at the age of 18, she married William F. Teller. They lived in Missouri for several years and then moved to Kearney, Neb., where they raised their three children.

In 1930, when the children were almost grown, the family moved to Twin Falls. The family lived on an acreage on Jackson Street in Twin Falls. Mr. Teller worked as a farm hand.

John says Mrs. Teller is a quiet woman who usually had little to say about events or places through the years. She has told some details of her life to nursing home social director Cecile Stafford.

One of Mrs. Teller's favorite stories, according to Mrs. Stafford, is how she and her brothers and sisters walked to a Baptist Sunday School a mile or so from their farm when children were taken off their shoes and walk home barefoot to save their shoes as well as their aching feet.

Another well-preserved memory of the centenarian is the fact of her father and his tremendous strength.

One of the family jokes told how her father demonstrated his strength by picking up the heavy end of a log and asking two of his sons-in-laws to pick up the other end. That end, stayed firm on the ground, to the astonishment of the sons-in-law.

After her husband retired, the Tellers moved to the Pioneer Courts where Mr. Teller died Nov. 24, 1960.

Mrs. Teller is one of the three surviving charter members of the Mary Martha Class of the First Baptist Church in Twin Falls. The other two are Anna Holloway and Emma Lyda.

Mrs. Teller has two daughters: Mrs. Ruth Ondive of Deadwood, S.D. and Lizzie Hendricks of Seattle, eight grandchildren, 26 great-grandchildren and 10 great-great-grandchildren.

Report on police underway

BUHL — The Idaho attorney general's office is preparing a report on its investigation of a citizen's charges he was robbed by two Buhl police officers.

The investigation has been made and the report will be given to the Twin Falls county prosecuting attorney on the incident, which occurred about a month ago in Buhl.

William Shell, 39, of Jerome, complained to former county prosecuting attorney, Frank Dykas, that a Buhl city police officer took his wallet and paid a service station attendant what the attendant alleged Shell owed in a disputed gasoline purchase.

The incident occurred on Dec. 27 at Larry's Quick Service in Buhl. Shell said he purchased gasoline but the amount on the pump was not the correct amount and he refused to pay it. He alleged two Buhl city police took his wallet away from him, paid the amount out of his money and gave him back the wallet.

Neil Curtis of the attorney general's office said he made an investigation and is now completing his report which will be turned over to Twin Falls county's present prosecutor Jeff Stoker for possible action.

Buhl Police Chief Ben Ekstrut said at the time, if his officers did something wrong, he would welcome the investigation, but said they are well trained and reliable officers and he would give them his support.

Wendell may get housing

WENDELL — The city of Wendell may get another 10 senior citizen housing units if the Wendell Housing Authority can buy two city-owned buildings.

Housing authority representative Robert Simerly told the council Thursday night the authority has an option on eight building lots and would like to buy the two other city-owned lots next to the eight.

Before any other action is taken, Simerly said he wanted a public hearing scheduled so the citizens of Wendell can express their opinion on the possible sale.

City Councilman Harold Simerly said a previous city council would not sell the lots to the housing authority and members of the authority remember that.

He said the authority had plans drawn and was moving forward in finalizing the construction when the city council decided not to sell the lots.

As a result, present housing authority members want to make sure that neither the city council nor the citizens object to the building of the units.

The hearing on the sale of the city lots, located on the south side of A Street between Shoshone and Wallace, will take place during the next city council meeting Feb. 6 at 8 p.m. in the city hall.

The housing authority constructed 12 other units in Wendell about six years ago.

Rides to polls offered

TWIN FALLS — Don't let bad weather or slick roads keep you away from the polls today.

Today is the day of the recall election to determine whether Twin Falls Mayor Leon Smith will remain in office, and the Citizens FIRST Committee, the group which has spearheaded the drive to recall Smith, is offering to transport voters to the polls.

In order to make it possible for everyone who is registered to vote, a spokesman for the committee said Monday, committee members will provide a ride for anyone who needs it.

Rides may be obtained by calling 734-3595, where a fleet of cars will be ready and waiting, the spokesman said.

"He said rides will be provided to anyone, no matter how they intend to vote in the election."

Rupert grant uncut

RUPERT — Rupert Mayor Bill Whitton said Monday it appears the city won't have to pay $120,000 in contest funds for the city's new $2.1 million sewer lagoons.

Whitton said Warren McFall, the Environmental Protection Agency's grant manager in Idaho, told him he will not recommend reducing the grant for five change orders involved in construction of the three lagoons cells in 1977 and 1978.

The EPA official will not contest costs tied to reducing the size of Cell 3 by 23 acres because of unexpected rock formations, Whitton explained.

He said McFall also indicated he will advise that the EPA pay for pumping additional water into the newly-built lagoons in the fall and winter of 1977. The water became necessary to cover the lagoon bottoms with water to prevent them from freezing and cracking during the winter.

City officials argued that the lagoons were not built on time because of two factors. They said construction didn't begin because of paperwork delays caused by the federal and state agencies involved. That was followed by the drought of 1977 which hampered construction crews trying to shape the cells' located five miles north of Rupert, the officials contended.

The lagoons are part of the city's revamped sewage treatment system, which totals $6 million. Whitton said final approval of the project is expected in late spring or early summer.

Farms used for loans

RING HILL — King Hill water users have seraphed together a last-minute financing plan to replace their inoperable irrigation system.

Half the farmers in the 10,600-acre King Hill Irrigation District have pledged their land as collateral for a $500,000 loan which will be made by two local banks.

Pasadena Valley farmer Lee Trail said the farmers met with loan officers from the Idaho State Bank in Glens Ferry and the Idaho First National Bank in Mountain Home late last week and reached terms on the loan. $385,000 of the loaned funds must be pledged immediately as a downpayment to the Cook-Electric Co., the contracting firm which will build a new water system in King Hill this winter.

King Hill district officials have said they had to raise the downpayment money by Feb. 1 if they want water available May 1.

Although the loan may enable construction to start on schedule, other financial woes threaten the district.

A state Department of Water Resources economist said Monday King Hill needs as much as $1 million right away to finance construction. The district's board of directors is expected to ask the State Water Board for a $500,000 loan Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Water Resources officials will travel to Glens Ferry today to discuss finances with Idaho State Bank officials and district board representatives.

Both the bank loans and the water board requests are for short-term financing.

Changes explained for filing this year's state income tax

MAGIC VALLEY — Idaho taxpayers will have to abide by a few rule changes when filing state income tax forms this year.

An immediately noticeable one affecting individuals and corporations requires a copy of the federal income tax return to be sent with the state return.

The state tax commission has replaced the former standard deduction scale with the Zero Bracket Amount (ZBA). Single taxpayers or unmarried heads of households get a flat $2,300 deduction this year, compared to a graduated scale below that amount for the 1977 tax year.

Under the ZBA formula, a surviving spouse or married taxpayers filing joint returns get a $3,200 deduction, while married couples filing separately receive a $1,600 deduction.

Idaho residents who must file state tax returns have to earn a minimal amount of money, depending on which of several categories they fall in, the tax commission has ruled.

Single persons under 65 must earn $2,330 before having to file a return.

A surviving spouse must make $2,650, while a single person 65 or older must have $3,100 in income.

Married couples, both under 65, filing a joint return must make a combined income of $3,400; married couples, with one person 65 or older, filing jointly must make $4,150; and married couples, both 65 or older, filing jointly must earn $4,900.

Married couples filing separate returns, regardless of ages, have to file a state return if they make $750 or more.

Part-year, out-of-state residents and military personnel also must file if they make $750 or more.

Taxpayers contributing to Idaho higher education institutions receive a tax credit this year. Under the old ruling, contributions were deductible only to private institutions below the 12th grade, but now contributions to public colleges and universities are deductible.

People 65 and older will receive a $10 increase in their grocery credit this year. The increase, which went from $20 to $30, should be claimed either on state form 40 or 24.

Another change in filing state taxes this year is the reinstatement of the permanent building tax. Anyone filing should include a $10 deduction for that fund unless they are blind or on public assistance the last day of 1978.

Peggy Kelker Fagg seeks help in finding lost piano

TWIN FALLS — A grand piano is not easily misplaced, but Peggy Kelker Fagg has lost one.

The young Salt Lake City woman is searching through Twin Falls for the piano because of the importance it holds for her family. She said it is one of the few remaining keepsakes of her grandparents and their family.

"The piano disappeared" sometime between 1966 and 1968, Mrs. Fagg says. Her father, O. A. (Gus) Kelker, loaned it to a men's choral group and it was stored in the old Times-News building for a time because it was too large for the apartment where the family lived at the time.

Mrs. Fagg says when the newspaper moved to its present building, the piano came up missing and has not been seen or heard of since.

She said efforts to find it or to contact anyone who might know of its whereabouts have been fruitless.

"Because of the sentimental value involved, we are very anxious to locate the piano. It is a square spinet grand piano, stained a very dark cherrywood in color."

"It was made in Chicago by a company by the name of Mathushech, which has since ceased operations," she says.

Mrs. Fagg said the piano was in the Kelker home for many years. She took lessons for nine years and practiced on the piano.

"It originally belonged to my father's only sister who is now deceased. My father's mother, Grace Kelker, lived with our family for a number of years and spent many hours, although almost totally sightless, playing the piano," the young Salt Lake City woman explains.

She is asking anyone who might know the whereabouts of the piano to contact her at 1360 Wilson Ave., Salt Lake City, Utah, 84105. Mrs. Fagg said she and her husband are willing to offer a reward for return of their missing piano.

Growers choose four new potato board members

MAGIC VALLEY — The Magic Valley District of the National Potato Promotion Board have elected four new representatives.

The new representatives, who will serve three-year terms, are Ken Marshall of Twin Falls, Jack Allred of Burley, T.H. Gillett of Burley and Mike Cranney of Oakley.

The other two representatives continuing in their terms are Darwin Neibaur of Rupert and Jack Thomason of Jerome.

The Denver-based Potato Board was founded in 1972 to promote the sale and image of potatoes. Membership is open to all farmers who plant at least five acres of potatoes. Voting took place Jan. 22.

Gooding awaits answer Agencies ponder sewage plan

GOODING — Treated sewage may be dumped into the South Gooding main canal if the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and the Environmental Protection Agency decide that is how it should be eliminated.

EPA state officer, Grover Partee said the state and the EPA will try to meet in the next two weeks to agree how sewage from the proposed Gooding waste treatment plant should be released.

Engineers from Hamilton and Voeller Inc. suggested in a feasibility study of the proposed plant, that the treated sewage be mixed with canal water and placed on fields during the summer.

Because of previous state requirements, the engineers included a holding pond or "equalization basin" in the plan to allow enough water to mix with the treated sewage.

Partee said the state and EPA questioned the need for the "equalization basin" or holding pond since there are few solid regulations on dumping treated sewage into irrigation canals.

The DHW and the EPA at first gave Hamilton and Voeller requirements for the amount of dilution water needed to dump the treated sewage into, but then began looking at the cost and the regulations on the canals and changed opinions.

The South Gooding canal has water in it year-round, Partee said, because a siphon tube south of town must be kept free of ice and there should be little problem in pouring the treated sewage into it year-round.

Farmers using the canal have no objections to having the treated sewage in the canal system because it would be an added source of fertilizer, Partee told the City Council earlier this month.

Partee said any crops that are eaten raw and that could possibly come in contact with the canal water could not be raised with the canal water.

He said potatoes, sugar beets and grain crops along with cattle feed crops could be watered with the mixed sewage water without any problem.

If the DHW and the EPA agree to allow the treated sewage to be dumped into the canal, the cost of the holding pond and the land needed for it could be eliminated from the total project.

The elimination of the holding pond would make the old sewage treatment plant economically feasible to update instead of building a new plant west of town, Partee said.

He said if everything fell into place in the next month or two, some construction could be started this summer but added that it would likely be 1980 before any work is done.

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Linda Fratianne and Charles Tickner are favored to repeat as national senior ladies and senior men's champions at the 1979 U.S. Figure Skating Championships which open this afternoon and continue through Saturday night.

Fratianne, 18-of Northridge, Calif., and Tickner, 25, of Littleton, Colo., were victors in both the 1977 and 1978 nationals and are heavy favorites to win their third straight title this week.

The senior pairs duo of Tal Babilonia of Mission Hills, Calif., and Randy Gardner of Los Angeles, also are favored to win a third straight national title on Cincinnati's Riverfront Coliseum ice.

The twosome of Stacey Smith of Claymont, Del., and John Summers of Vienna, Del., are slight favorites to repeat as winners in the "Gold Dance" category.

However, Carol Fox of Westland, Mich., and Richard Dalley of Lathrup Village, Mich., runner-up to Smith-Summers last year, are considered strong contenders for the title. The Gold Dance category is for dance-figure skating.

Aside from serving as the 1979 national championships, this week's assemblage of the country's top 140 amateur figure skaters also serves as a showcase for virtually all of the talent that will make up America's 1980 Olympic figure skating team.

Top challengers to Fratianne in senior ladies competition figure to be Lisa-Marie Allen of Garden Grove, Calif., last year's runnerup, Priscilla Hill of Lexington, Mass., Carrie Rugh of El Segundo, Calif., and Kelsy Ufford of Edina, Minn.

Considered the top challengers to Tickner in the senior men's division are David Santee of Park Ridge, Ill., last year's runnerup, Scott Hamilton of Bowling Green, Ohio, Scott Craner of Colorado Springs, Colo., and John Carlow of Costa Mesa, Calif.

Medalists in the senior ladies, men and pairs, plus the gold dance, will represent America at the World Figure Skating Championships next month in Vienna, Austria.

Besides the top-billed "seniors" events, national champs also will be crowned this week in six other categories for younger, less experienced skaters — junior ladies, junior men, junior pairs, novice ladies, novice men and silver dance.

Skaters in all 10 divisions are required to perform either two or three times during the week — with judges' points being added up to determine the winners.

For example, the 12 senior men's contestants must skate on three separate occasions during the week, first performing school figures (chreels and loops), then a two-minute "free skating" short program and finally a five-minute "free skating" long program.

Wendell, Shoshone grab opening wins in A-3 tourney

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

WENDELL — Wendell and Shoshone won first round games Monday night during A-3 girls basketball tournament action.

Wendell blew all but one of a 12-point lead in the last period to outlast Glens Ferry 49-46, while Shoshone, behind the second-half scoring of Barbara Berriochoa, finally fought back the upset-minded Kimberly Bulldogs 52-43.

Action resumes at 6:45 tonight with second-seeded Valley meeting the Declo Hornets. The nightcap will have the first-seeded Filer Wildcats meeting Wendell.

Following action Monday night, coaches from all the affected games flipped for the loser bracket bye. It will go to the loser of tonight's Valley-Declo game.

Wednesday's schedule will have Glens Ferry and Kimberly meeting at 6:45 p.m. in a loser-out battle followed by Shoshone vs. the Declo-Valley winner. The first week of the tournament winds up Thursday with a pair of loser bracket games and resumes Monday.

The last time Kimberly and Shoshone met in the regular season the Indians romped off-with about a 40-point win.

This wasn't the case Monday night. Shoshone had the lead with only a couple of minor exceptions but couldn't count the victory in hand until the late going when Berriochoa cranked up the fast break—Shoshone's favorite weapon—the full-court press, had to be held in mothballs due to injuries which limited Coach Ed Sandy to seven suited up players and then three quick fouls each to three of five starters.

Karen Magoffin got Shoshone going in a slow-paced first quarter. Shoshone moved out 6-0 but Kimberly came back on the scoring of Cheryl Crothers to within one. Magoffin opened the second period with six straight points and Shoshone fought to protect dwindling leads that fell from 13-6 to even up when Karl Krieger hit a Kimberly field goal with 16 seconds left.

Kimberly managed its only lead of the game 9 seconds into the second half when Tina Powell hit a follow shot. That made it 23-22 but Magoffin and Cheryl Braun replied for the Indians and they were ahead to stay.

Still it took until the final minute of the period before Shoshone built a comfortable lead. Berriochoa got it with five points in the last 31 seconds. Berriochoa hit 20 of her 23 points in the second half.

Neither team scored from the field until Berriochoa hit with 3:47 left. She quickly added two free throws and Shoshone had the nine-point advantage protected until the end.

Wendell, its press picking up three quick turnovers in the early going, hit the first eight points of the game and the Trojans never trailed. Glens Ferry fell behind by seven to 11 points, roared back to within two or three and then fell back again all night.

After that 8-0 deficit, the Pilots flurried back to within two at the rest and Amy Wertz, playing despite and obviously painful knee injury, tied it early in the second period. Karen Peterson untied it for Wendell and the Trojans then went on to post a 25-18 lead.

Throughout the third quarter it appeared that Wendell had things in hand as it moved out 31-20 at one point. Wertz got Glens Ferry back to within six with five points but Nancy Lancaster hit two outside shots to restore the nine-point advantage.

Glens Ferry made its bid as the fourth period began. Shelly Heath hit four points, Wertz four and Gena Willis and Jean Campbell two each as the Pilots cut to within one with 3:33 remaining.

Shannon Humbach and Lancaster then steadied Wendell with two points each. In the final second Heath and Wertz again closed Glens Ferry to within two — the last time with 10 seconds remaining — but four seconds later Humbach nailed it down with a free throw.

Gooding boxing promoter is surrounded by a ring of controversy

Controversy about fights puzzles boxing promoter

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News writer

GOODING — Bud Godby doesn't understand all the controversy over his boxing matches.

"No one from the boxing commission has ever come to me and said what's going on or asked to look at my financial records," the promoter said. "Why? I don't understand that."

The state boxing commission and the Amateur Athletic Union have charged that Godby has misled the public by advertising fighters who never intended to show up, placed fighters names on trophies prior to fights, and refused to cooperate with other boxing clubs in the state. There also are questions being raised about where money being raised from Godby's fights is going.

Third in a series of articles

Norm Vollmer, southeastern boxing commissioner, said Godby is well aware of many of these problems because they have been discussed with him on several occasions during meetings and on the telephone.

"I know what's going on," said Vollmer.

A horse buyer and seller by trade, Godby has been involved in boxing ever since he was nine years old.

"I started boxing with the local club when I was a kid," he said.

Later when the club dissolved in the early 1950s, he moved to Eugene, Ore. to be with his father and brother.

In 1953 and 1954, a new boxing program was initiated in Gooding and he came back during his high school days in the 1955.

"I fought some amateur fights off and on until 1965," he said. "Nothing really big time."

His first love was rearing back in those days, and he used that experience to become a well-known northwest trainer, seller and buyer of horses. Some say because of this he has become successful in the boxing promoting business since he travels to Canada and other parts of the U.S.

Staubach connects for NFC victory

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Roger Staubach, the defeated Super Bowl quarterback, got some kind of revenge Monday night.

It was Staubach who completed a 19-yard scoring pass to Cowboy teammate Tony Hill in the third quarter as the NFC came from behind to beat the AFC 13-7, in pro football's season climax, the Pro Bowl.

In this game, Staubach outshone Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw, the Super Bowl XIII MVP just eight days ago.

Staubach, 36, a 10-year Cowboy receiver, was a Steeler receiver Lynn Swann after the game and smiled broadly. "I told you we'd win the big one, Lynn."

But he made it clear later the Super Bowl was still the big one.

"The trouble is you forget about this."

Dupre upsets Orantes

Orantes won Va. (UPI) — Pat Dupre, 1978 U.S. Open second runner-up, upset Manuel Orantes Monday night in the first round of the World Championship of Tennis tournament at the Richmond Coliseum.

Dupre registered a 7-6, 3-6, 6-4 triumph as he came back from 2-4 in the third set to win the final four games, breaking Orantes' serve twice.

Bruin girls hit boards in victory

By RANDY FREY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Coach Kathy Anderson said prior to last night's game with Jerome that her Twin Falls Bruins had not been rebounding well in 16 previous games.

But a lack of rebounding was not evident last night, as the Bruin girls hitting the boards hard and rolling to a 42-27 victory over the Tigers.

"We have no big girl and we have no girls who will really crash the boards," said Anderson before the game.

The result in the past had been only six wins in 16 games, and even though a number seven was chalked up last night, Anderson was not totally happy.

"It was a little wild out there," she said when asked to comment on how many times the officials were forced to blow their whistles.

The calls, however, seemed to favor the Bruins, who stepped to the foul stripe 27 times in the ragged contest. Ten of those times they were able to convert the free shot.

Jerome, which entered the game with a 4-9 record, jumped to a quick 8-3 lead before center Julg Hosman was forced to leave the game having picked up three quick fouls.

Hosman controlled the boards in the early going, limiting Twin Falls to just one shot per trip down-court while teammate Lori Garrison was hitting two quick jump shots to put her team out in front.

But the Bruins began to chip away at the lead after Hosman remained on the bench for the remainder of the first half, cutting the lead to 16-6 after one period and tying the game at 16 at the intermission.

The second half, however, was all Twin Falls.

Jermine's Joleen Baier scored early in the half to put the Tigers on 16-16, but in the next six minutes Twin Falls reeled off 11 unanswered points to take a comfortable 27-16 lead.

Karen Harr scored seven of her game-high 15 points in the decisive third period, and the Bruins took a comfortable 33-22 lead into the final quarter.

Nancy Atkinson added nine points for Twin Falls and Corine Dowd and Brenda Latham scored six each.

Joleen Baier had 10 points to lead the Jerome attack while Garrison and Lori Ostler scored six each.

Jerome coach Wes Gates was hoping for a better performance from his girls, who entered the game having lost their last four games by a total of 10 points. He said his Tigers were much better than their 4-9 record indicated.

Cuevas keeps WBA crown

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Mexican Pipino Cuevas retained his World Boxing Association welterweight title Monday night when he unleashed two powerful left hooks and knocked out Scott Clark of Orlando, Fla., in the second round of a scheduled 15-round bout.

Cuevas, 26, dropped Clark twice in the second with jarring left hooks to the jaw and had him helpless in Clark's corner when referee Luis Fulbaran of Venezuela halted the fight at 2:05 of the round.

The win was the 30th in 35 professional bouts and was the 22nd knockout for Cuevas. It was also his ninth consecutive knockout since losing to Andy Price in June, 1976. It was only the second loss in 30 fights for the 20-year-old challenger.

Despite Cuevas' reputation as an awesome puncher, the blond-haired, blue-eyed Clark carried the fight to the champion in the first round and in the early moments of the second round landed several sharp, right-hand leads to the Mexican's jaw.

Unitas, Butkus head hall of fame list

During an 18-year career spent entirely in Baltimore except for a final 1973 season with San Diego, Unitas played in four NFL championship games and one AFC title contest. He was named All-Pro five times and played in 10 NFL Bowls.

Gonzalez keeps title

HAMAMATSU, Japan (UPI) — Benito Gonzalez of Venezuela retained his World Boxing Association (WBA) flyweight title Monday by fighting to a draw with Japanese challenger Shoji Oguma.

It was a close fight with both fighters scoring effective punches almost evenly.

American Referee Martin Jenkins scored the fight a 145-145 draw on a 10-point, 10-round scoring system. Venezuelan Judge Jesus Celsi saw it 147-143 in favor of the champion while Japanese Judge Takeshi Makimura had it 149-146 for Oguma.

No Florida Olympics

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Florida is not ready to put in a bid to host the Olympics but will push to become a warm-weather training ground for Olympic athletes, newly elected Gov. Bob Graham said Monday.

Inviting the Olympics to Florida is a definite possibility "somewhere further down the road," Graham said, but sites already have been picked through 1984.

Encouraging full use of sports facilities and increasing the state's participation in international sports events, including the Olympics, will be major priorities of his administration, he said.

Wright named coach

DALLAS (UPI) — The AAU Monday named Stan Wright of California-Sacramento to coach the American track team in its annual dual indoor meet against the Russians, scheduled for Fort Worth, March 3.

Wright, athletic director at California-Sacramento, was a member of the U.S. coaching staff for the Mexico City and Munich Olympics.

The American team will be selected from the National AAU Indoor Championships held in New York's Madison Square Garden on the weekend prior to the U.S.-Russian meet.

Bobick fight still on

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The 10-round heavyweight fight between Duane Bobick and John Tate will take place in Market Square Arena Feb. 17 as scheduled, officials of Top Rank, Inc., said Monday.

The second half of the scheduled weekend doubleheader — Marvin Johnson's first defense of his World Boxing Council light-heavyweight championship Feb. 18 against Matthew Franklin — was postponed last week until some time this spring because of a cracked jaw sustained during a sparring session.

Bobick-Tate was billed as a heavyweight elimination bout and will be telecast nationally.

Miller most courageous

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (UPI) — Kathy Miller, a 15-year-old Arizona runner who completed a 10,000-meter race five months after coming out of a coma that left her "95 percent vegetable," Monday night received the Most Courageous Athlete award from the Philadelphia Sports Writers Association.

Miller, of Scottsdale, was awarded the honor at the association's 75th annual dinner.

Miller had been competing in swimming and running in her hometown when she suffered severe brain damage and a broken leg after being hit by an automobile in March, 1977.

New Cal St. coach

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Tom Keele, offensive coordinator at California State University at Long Beach for the past two years, has been named head football coach at California State University at Northridge, athletic director Bob Hiegett announced Monday.

Keele, 45, is a graduate of the University of the Oregon. In past years he has coached the British Columbia Lions in the Canadian Pro Football League; was offensive line coach at Washington State University; assistant coach at the University of Hawaii and offensive line coach at San Jose State.

He replaced Jack Elway, who left Northridge in December after three years, to become head coach at San Jose State.

The Northridge football team had a record of five victories and five losses last season.

Joseph Duplin of Boston, former world Star class champion, finished third. James Allsopp of Annapolis, Md., was fourth and Dave Oberg of Jacksonville, Fla., fifth.

Current world champion Buddy Melges of Milwaukee finished 11th and pre-race favorite James Schoonmaker of Miami, a seven-time winner of this event, was 15th.

Superdome talks Little chance A's will move

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Fed up with negotiations that have netted few results, Louisiana Superdome officials Monday said there was little chance the Oakland A's would move to Louisiana for the 1979 season.

"I'm not optimistic about working out in this situation, but I am optimistic about our future chances," said Dennis Skinner, president of the Hyatt Management Corp. that runs the Superdome for the state.

"Things are on and off and I would think things are probably on the back burner. Officials of the Oakland Coliseum have never indicated they are willing to negotiate anything. They have never indicated what their starting point would be in any negotiations."

Skinner said the Oakland stadium officials have yet to meet with A's owner Charles O. Finley about the possibility of getting the American League baseball team released from its nine-year lease.

Cleveland sports magnate Edward J. DeBartolo Sr. last week offered

Finley $12 million cash to move the A's to the Superdome. Sources close to the deal said Finley would receive $9 million and the stadium authority $4 million, with the extra $1 million coming from the remaining American League teams and the National League San Francisco Giants.

Vince Bartlino, who is DeBartolo's representative in the franchise search, said a deal with Finley still could be reached within the next three weeks. He said that was becoming less likely, however.

"I think we are in a hold pattern," Bartlino said in a telephone interview from DeBartolo-owned Louisiana Downs in Bossier City, La.

"We are hoping the offer will be accepted. I have been given the authority by Mr. DeBartolo to stay with this thing. We will be talking to a number of people for 1980. These situations have a tendency of having highs and lows and then something turns around."

Sources close to the negotiations, who asked to remain unnamed, told UPI the major stumbling block to a deal being made between Finley and the stadium officials were past personality clashes the owner had with the board. But these appeared no way of solving the disputes.

"I think (the Oakland officials) are beating a dead horse," Bartlino said. "They are not going to put any life back into that horse because the present owner says he doesn't want to play there. Just from a business point of view, it seems everyone would get everything they wanted."

Skinner said he was pessimistic about baseball this year because the stadium officials have not mentioned a starting price about buying out the lease. He said such negotiations likely would take too long.

"After all this blows over, we won't be doing a thing except our homework," Skinner said. "Obviously, no owner is going to talk to us until the end of next season."

Aparicio questions procedure for selecting hall of famers

MARACAIBO, Venezuela (UPI) — Luis Aparicio, the former star shortstop for the Chicago White Sox and Baltimore Orioles who finished 13th in last week's Hall of Fame voting, Monday questioned the credentials of some of the players who finished ahead of him in the balloting.

Trusting he always, Aparicio did not cite any names, but he made no effort to hide resentment in an interview conducted in his comfortable living-room in this heat-soaked oil metropolis in Western Venezuela, his hometown.

"I'm extremely grateful to all those who voted for me, and I truly appreciate and am satisfied with the 120 votes," he said. "I was satisfied with just being nominated. But now that the votes are in, I just can't help but feel that I am more deserving than some of those who are ahead of me."

Aparicio, who toiled 18 seasons in the American League (1956-1973) finished behind such players as Roger Maris, Rchie Ashburn, Jim Bunning, Red Schoendienst, Maury Wills, Hoyt Wilhelm, Nellie Fox, Don Drysdale, Gil Hodges, Enos Slaughter and Duke Snider.

Wills Mays was the only player elected by the Baseball Writers Association in this year's balloting. Mays received more total votes than any player in history but was left off 23 ballots.

"I thought Willie Mays would get in with 100 percent of the votes," Aparicio, 45, said. "I don't understand it."

Aparicio, who won Gold Glove awards nine straight years for his defensive prowess and led the American League nine years in stolen bases, is still active in baseball. He said he is almost fully recovered from stomach surgery he underwent a few months ago and will work as a coach with the Zulia team in Venezuela's Triple-A (non-winter) league.

Cross country win to Koch

WATERVILLE VALLEY, N.H. (UPI) — Olympic silver medalist Bill Koch of Guilford, Vt., won his first national title since 1975 Monday when he captured the senior men's 15-kilometer race at the national cross-country championships.

Koch rewaxed in mid-race due to a light rain and zipped past Olympic teammate Stan Dunklee of Brattleboro, Vt., when Dunklee dropped a pole in the final stages.

Also winners Monday were Allison Owen-Spencer of Anchorage, Alaska, in the senior women's division; Rick Solle of Fairbanks, Alaska, in the junior men's division, and Kristen Pettit of Rowland, Vt., in the junior women's division.

All three also won races on Saturday.

Koch covered the course in 44:46.86, or about six seconds ahead of Dunklee. Tim Caldwell of Putney, Vt., finished third.

"It feels pretty good. I won the 15-kilometer race in 1975, too, but I haven't been able to compete in the nationals since then for a number of reasons. This one makes me happy," Koch said.

Pugh plans retirement

DALLAS (UPI) — Jethro Pugh, the last survivor of the Dallas Cowboys original "Doomsday Defense" and the man who has played in more NFL post-season games than any other, announced his retirement Monday.

Pugh, a veteran of 14 years at defensive tackle and the senior member of the Cowboys in terms of experience, became a symbol of Dallas' ability to draft little known players from little known schools and turn them into top performers.

Despite his length of service, Pugh is just 34 — two years younger than quarterback Roger Staubach. Before the just-completed season began he had thoughts of playing a few more years, but an injury filled 1978 hastened this retirement.

During his tenure with the Cowboys, Pugh played in 24 post-season games.

SIRENS

Fine sirens you're certainly head. And if you're of sufficient vintage, maybe you've heard air raid sirens, too. But should you ever go to Italy's Venice, and hear sirens wailing across the city in the middle of the night, you'll know they're not to signal fire or raid, but rather to warn of rising sea. When the high water sirens sound, people all over town clear the lower floors and scramble upstairs.

Here's one more oddity with which a tavern type can win bar bets: Which is sweeter, a lemon or a watermelon? The catch? Chemists say a ripe lemon contains 10 percent sugar while a ripe watermelon contains less than 1 percent.

It's a matter of record, too, that Napoleon Bonaparte doused himself with more than 50 bottles of perfume every month.

How did the drink known as the "Tom and Jerry" come to be so called?

BELGIUM'S BINCHE

The big February party in Belgium's town of Binche is much like the New Orleans Mardi Gras. People put on fantastic outfits. Bands play. Dancers hit the street. And almost but not quite everybody gets drunk. This has been going on for a long time. So long, in fact, the town's name is said to have given us our word "binge."

How the cow can be satisfied with hay remains a mystery. It has 25,000 taste buds. The human crier, who's considerably more discriminating, only has 3,000 taste buds.

Special programs help 10 percent of children

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

BOISE — Approximately 10 percent of Idaho's school-age children have physical or mental handicaps requiring special educational assistance, the supervisor of special education for the State Department of Education said Monday.

Judy A. Shrog, in testimony before the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee, told legislators that 104 of Idaho's 115 public school districts are now providing special education, programs and services for children. Shrog said 16,868 children are receiving the programs through school districts, and another 2,734 are receiving them through other agencies. This figure is approaching a "full-service" education level for that 10 percent of Idaho's school-age children.

Prior to 1972, Shrog said, nearly three-quarters of these children "were excluded from school." Special education programs and services were provided in only one-third of Idaho's school districts, and served only 4,892 students.

But in 1972, Idaho passed the mandatory special education law. That law, reinforced by the 1975 federal Education for All Handicapped Act, said educational services must be provided to all children.

Shrog's presentation was part of a yearly report to the legislature on special education in Idaho. The senate HEW Committee is chaired by Sen. John Barker, R-Boji.

Idaho and federal law are similar in intent, Shrog said. Major goals include:

- Assuring exceptional children the opportunity of a free public education, emphasizing special education and related services designed to meet their unique needs.
- Protecting the rights of exceptional children and their parents or guardians.
- Assisting local school districts with providing special education.
- Assessing and insuring the effectiveness of special education programs.

According to Shrog, the majority of students in school district special education programs have mild to moderate handicaps, and 20 percent are classified as severely handicapped.

During the current school year, state and county expenditures for special education total approximately $19.3 million, she said. Federal funds for the present school year total approximately $2.4 million.

Bill to abolish state office out for debate

BOISE (UPI) — Concern about implementation of the percent initiative sent a bill to the House floor without recommendation today to abolish the Office of the State Board of Education.

Rep. James Stoicheff, D-Sandpoint, the principal sponsor of the measure, told the State Affairs Committee the office cost some $336,000 this year and will cost $300,000 next year.

"For the amount of money we're spending the work done in there is redundant," Stoicheff said.

"With the legislative fiscal office and the governor's budget office there's no danger of our being scooped," he said. "The question is: 'Can you afford this layer of bureaucratic inflection?'"

The bill worth $300,000 to coordinate the Board of Education.

Rep. Jim Hildebrand, R-Boji, said the bill would "take the job of the superintendent of public instruction and hand it to the legislature."

Rep. J. Vard Chabrun, R-Albion, urged the committee to take a good, serious look at the legislation. He said he remembered when the state superintendent of public instruction handled the duties now performed by the office.

"Let's have it in the hands of one of our regularly elected officials," Chabrun said.

Evans said his office probably could take over the duties but, he said, he would need some help both in money and manpower to do so. He said the legislature probably would have to go back to government reorganization where his office was assigned duties in the elementary and secondary schools and the Office of the State Board was assigned chores in higher education.

"I don't think we could pick up the responsibilities without some help," he said.

House compromises on pay raise

BOISE (UPI) — The House suspended rules Monday to pass and send to the Senate a resolution rejecting a legislative pay raise but accepting a $4 increase in daily expenses. The vote was 38-32.

It was doubtful the Senate would suspend rules and vote on the measure before the Wednesday deadline to act upon the legislative compensation. If the Senate does not suspend rules and the House does not act on a Senate-passed resolution rejecting a pay increase, legislators automatically will receive a $1,200 per year salary boost as well as a hike in expenses.

The vote on the compensation bill was taken after nearly an hour-long lunchtime debate. After a recess for lunch, Rep. Rusty Barlow, R-Pocatello, tried unsuccessfully to have the Senate compensation bill brought to the floor, but House Speaker Ralph Ormstead, R-Twin Falls, ruled it had not been in the House for the required five days.

The resolution immediately was transferred to the Senate, but Democratic leaders indicated that they would refuse to suspend rules so the measure could be acted upon before Wednesday.

Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-St. Maries, said: "The say this is the year of 1 percent but that doesn't mean they expect people to work for nothing. One percent has nothing to do with wages."
