Iranians cheer Khomeini's return

TEHRAN (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, in his first hours home from 15 years exile, told 500,000 screaming followers Thursday he would arrest Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar's government and "shut their mouths" unless they handed over power.

Muslim leader appealed to the army to "come to the people" by joining his campaign to overthrow Bakhtiar's government and establish an Islamic Republic.

In an emotional climax to a frenzied homecoming welcome by two million supporters, Khomeini prayed among the graves of 1,500 followers who were killed in the 14 months of rebellion that forced the shah of Iran to flee the country.

The ayatollah's homecoming, after numerous delays, was tumultuous but meticulously planned and free of major incidents although there had been fears of an assassination attempt.

The crowds were so dense on the motorcycle route that the ayatollah finally was plucked from his limousine by a helicopter and flown to the Beheshti Zehra cemetery where an estimated 500,000 followers swarmed to hear him.

Thousands of banners, their messages often bleak such as "Welcome to our blood soaked land," bedecked the capital. The crowds carried hundreds of thousands of pictures, some 15 feet high, of Khomeini.

Showing barely a flicker of emotion, the Shiite Muslim leader, who led the long campaign of violence against the shah from his Paris exile, vowed, "We will not let the U.S. bring the shah back."

"Parliament and the government are illegal and if they continue we will arrest them," Khomeini told the cheering throngs in two speeches at the cemetery.

"I will shut their mouths and I will appoint a government with the support of the Iranian people," he vowed. "Bakhtiar is a person, neither the army or the people accepts as legal."

Bakhtiar, the man handpicked by the shah to lead the government in his absence, stayed tightly cloaked at his home during the welcoming ceremonies. Bakhtiar has sworn he will not hand over power to Khomeini.

Turning his wrath on the United States, Khomeini said, "We gave them oil and they gave us back weapons and this was a trick."

"The U.S. built up Iran so they could force us to have bases and advisers," Khomeini said. "They used our oil resources for their own benefit."

In both speeches he said he would kick all "foreign devils" out of Iran. "I beg to God to cut the hands off all those foreign advisers and helpers in Iran," he said.

Khomeini said the United States was plotting ways to bring the shah back but declared, "The time of the monarchy is over."

The shah, currently in Marrakech, Morocco, as a guest of King Hassan II, listened to radio reports of Khomeini's return but refused any comment. It was the shah who sent Khomeini into exile 15 years ago in an attempt to stifle the ayatollah's opposition to the monarchy.

In his speeches, Khomeini was conciliatory toward the army and told the generals, "We want you to be independent. You generals don't want (American military domination)."

"I advise you to come and be with the people," Khomeini said. "We don't want a (military) system that someone else (the United States) operates for us," he said.

The army, which the previous day had staged a massive show of strength through the capital in support of the Bakhtiar government and the shah, also remained discreetly in barracks. Only a few armed troops were on the streets. The estimated two million supporters, many perched in treetops and atop street lamps and closely shepherded by a volunteer army of 50,000 young men and security officials, took over Tehran for a day in an outpouring of happiness.

Idaho school superintendent unveils plan to implement 1%

By DAVID MORRISSEY

BOISE — Idaho's chief of schools unveiled a plan Tuesday to provide property tax relief "without doing violence to the public school system."

Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans said his two-year plan to phase in the 1 percent initiative would provide $55 million in property tax relief and cut local schools' dependence on property taxes by half.

Evans said the state legislature — now in its fourth week of wrestling with the tax cutting measure — "is looking for a way through the woods." His plan might provide at least the starting point for a solution to the 1 percent problem.

Evans said the gradual phasing in of the initiative under his plan would not result in any "significant cut" in the public school program. But he warned that "at the end of the two-year period, we are still looking at smaller resources."

School districts will have to practice frugally, the superintendent said. Possible belt-tightening might include reductions in extracurricular programs and the number of elective courses offered in junior and senior high schools.

A possible lessening of state support for kindergartens should also be considered, Evans said, though the superintendent stressed he supported the program and would recommend a cut in funding only as a last resort.

Evans, a Republican, did not consult with Democratic Gov. John Evans before drafting his plan, although, he said, "some of the governor's ideas are in here." The proposals of the governor's task force on taxation were "helpful," the superintendent said, adding there were "similarities" between his plan and proposals of the governor.

But the superintendent said he had discussed his ideas with Republican leaders in the legislature, and that they raised no major objections to his proposal.

Contacted by the Times-News, the governor praised the superintendent for "tackling the problem of the 1 percent." The superintendent's plan, the governor said, was adequate for dealing with education but failed to address other areas of local government financial need.

The superintendent's plan solves "one-fourth to one-third of the problem," the governor said, but should be used as a starting point to implementation of the initiative.

Under Superintendent Evans' plan, 10 major steps would be immediately taken to implement the initiative. These actions are:

- Implementing the initiative on Jan. 1, 1980.
- Requiring all property be uniformly assessed at the 1978 market value.
- Freezing tax charges for 1979 at the current level.
- Eliminating the four-mill county school levy.

- Reducing the school district levy authority from 27 to 18 mills.
- Appropriating $35 million from general fund monies to local governments.

- Reducing the equalizing levy from 22 to 15 mills.
- Eliminating the qualifying or participating levy requirements entirely.

- Changing the foundation transportation program, providing for the state assumption of 85 percent of allowable transportation costs.
- Eliminating the 1 mill transportation requirement.

- During the second year of the two-year phase-in the following steps would be taken:
- Appropriating $20 million of general fund monies to local governments.

- Converting assessment practices from mills and assessed values to percentages of market value.
- Leaving 10 mills taxing authority at the local school district level.

- Allowing school districts to collect what the state subtracts in calculating state money.
- Establishing override limits to go outside the 1 percent limitation.

- Allowing sales tax distribution at the county level as though 31 mills were levied.
- Determining education's share of sales tax money.

- Providing money appropriated to offset levy authority.

Accidental laetrile use hazardous

BOSTON (UPI) — Use of Laetrile tablets, regarded by some as a cure for cancer, is becoming so common that care should be taken to keep them out of the reach of children to prevent accidental poisoning, said a report published Thursday.

Physicians at the Children's Hospital of Buffalo reported in the New England Journal of Medicine on the case of an 11-month-old girl who took as many as five tablets containing the controversial drug and died from cyanide poisoning.

The Food and Drug Administration has said there is no proof of the alleged cancer-curing benefits of Laetrile, a derivative of apricot pits. Cyanide is contained in the compound amygdalin which is found in Laetrile and released into the blood stream when consumed.

The drug belonged to the patient's father, who was using it for the treatment of cancer and considered the pills to be harmless vitamins," the article said.

Two of the article's four co-authors, Drs. Kathleen T. Bralico and James R. Humbert, suggested the child could have been saved if the parents had told physicians the child swallowed Laetrile.

Laetrile is also found in other products such as Apricot, Bee-seventeen and Aprikern. Humbert said these drugs are usually kept in the homes of people with cancer or people who are afraid of getting it.

The father of the child was treating himself with the substance. He had a permit to buy the drug out of state and treat himself," Humbert said.

"They (the parents) considered these tablets to be vitamins," Bralico said in an interview. She said it was not until after a case history had been taken physicians realized the girl had swallowed Laetrile.

Bralico said physicians took the appropriate steps for a vitamin overdose, but if they had known it was Laetrile they could have taken different measures against cyanide poisoning.

"It was too late by that time," she said.

"Given the increased availability of amygdalin-containing products, the number of children exposed to these substances will increase," the report warned.

The point of the article, rather than take a position on whether Laetrile can cure cancer, was to alert the many users of the substance that children can be fatally affected," Humbert said.

Uranium extortion suspect arrested

WILMINGTON, N.C. — The FBI Thursday arrested a 39-year-old man charged with selling 150 pounds of low-grade uranium from a General Electric plant and trying to ransom it for $100,000.

A few hours after the arrest of David D. Dak, a temporary employee of a subcontractor at the GE Nuclear Fuel Fabrication plant, searchers found the uranium in an open field about five miles from the plant, the FBI said.

The uranium, a brown-black powder, was in unmarked metal pails.

Reclamation Act provisions worry Idahoans

This is the second in a series of the upcoming enforcement of the 1902 Reclamation Act, including the 180-acre limitation.

By LONNIE ROSENWALD Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Tom Olmstead said he "would have to find out where everybody slept at night." If Idaho irrigation districts are forced to comply with the 1902 Reclamation Act.

Olmstead, chairman of the board of the Twin Falls Canal Co., which provides water to 3,800 landowners, said enforcement would be "completely disruptive" and "difficult to enforce to the letter of the law."

One provision of the reclamation law, slated to be strictly enforced starting in March 1980, requires farmers to live near their land.

Another provision of the law worries many Idahoans living in 160-acre parcels. The amount of land an individual can own and irrigate with water from a federal reclamation project.

Implementation of the Reclamation Act would have a "fairly drastic impact" on Idaho farms.

Alluding to an estimate made by the Idaho Water Users Association that Idaho farms totaling 165,000 irrigated acres would exceed the limitation, Allred said the brentup of that much farmland "could affect almost all areas in southern Idaho, and some in the north, too."

IWUA director Sheri Chapman said the law would force the breakup of "a good sized chunk of almost all reclamation activity in the state."

Individuals, compiled figures from canal company records.

A large percentage of the 165,000 irrigated acres are in southern Idaho between the Jackson Lake Dam in the east and Milner Dam, where the Twin Falls and Northside Canal Co. divert water from the Snake River.

Olmstead declined to estimate how many acres of the 200,000-acre Twin Falls tract would be found in excess of the 180-acre limit, but the canal company's attorney, John Rasholt, said 30,000 acres probably wouldn't meet the limits of the law.

He said there are many absentee landlords around Twin Falls who would be affected by a requirement that owners live within 50 miles of their farm.

He said real estate values would be hurt by sudden sale of excess lands. Also, he warned, the canal company would be forced "into everybody's business besides just delivering water to them."

Canal Company Manager Clifford Montgomery said "it will take a Congressional amendment of the Reclamation Act to put Twin Falls irrigators in the clear. For example, if a bill introduced this year by Sen. Frank Church passes, Montgomery said very few if any lands served by the canal company will be in excess of the 180-acre limitation.

The Church bill would raise the limitation to 1-1/2 to 2 acres, would abolish the residency requirement and would exempt water users from any limitations once they finish paying back construction costs of the reclamation project delivering water to them.

The Church bill is supported by Reps. Steve Symms and George Hansen and Idaho Gov. John Evans.

Teng starts getting acquainted with Americans

ATLANTA (UPI) — Chinese Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, seeking to "get to know the American people," bowed three times at the grave of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Thursday and chatted with a worker on an assembly line.

Standing in a bitterly cold wind before the marble tomb of the assassinated civil rights leader, the 74-year-old Teng placed a wreath-of-dolphins-and-chrysanthemums before the grave.

Then he bowed slightly from the waist, three times, in slow succession, before stepping away to chat with the King family.

The official Washington phase of his visit over, the vice premier was setting out on the second portion of his trip — seeing America and its people. On his first day, he got a broad view of one aspect of the people — priests.

He was greeted by pro-Chinese, pro-Taiwanese and even pro-Mao Tse-Tung demonstrators. When his limousine pulled up to the governor's mansion for dinner Thursday night, a light plane flew overhead drugging an electric billboard that flashed "We Support Free China."

He began the day by appearing before a group of editors, whom he told China would not abandon its new friendship with the United States to join forces with the Soviet Union.

Following his 15-minute visit to the King tomb, he was whisked to the Ford assembly plant in suburban Naperville to see an assembly line in action. While still on his 11-mile ride, riding an electric golf cart with Henry Ford II, stopped and talked with Walter Hood, 28, who was holding the bodies of Ford LTDs to the chassis.

He asked Hood how many hours he worked a day and how many days a week. Hood told him he worked eight hours a day, five days a week. Teng asked him if he liked his job, and the young black worker said he did.

Hood later told newsmen, "He didn't ask me how much I got paid." Hood said he makes $325 a week — roughly $75 less than the average Chinese makes in a year.

REP. DAN FLOOD
...it's up to jury

Jury given case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal jury Thursday began deliberations in the bribery trial of Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Pa., whom prosecutors described as "the man at the top" of a secret, six-year conspiracy to take thousands of dollars in payoffs.

"The time had come for Mr. Flood to pay the piper," prosecutor Mark Tunney told the jury before it went into seclusion.

But Flood's defense lawyer, appearing on the verge of tears, said in his final arguments the 75-year-old congressman is "an old man... accused by people who are the dream."

"Don't believe what they have said," Flood attorney Axel Kleiboerner urged.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch sent the jurors into deliberations Thursday afternoon after instructing them that, to find Flood guilty of the conspiracy charge, they must conclude he entered into "a formal agreement" with his former aide, Stephen Elk, to take payoffs.

Train riders assail Amtrak cutbacks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of train riders Thursday said Transportation Secretary Brock Adams is trying to eliminate passenger service by proposing a severely reduced rail network.

Ross Capon of the National Rail Passenger Association said Adams' plan for reduced Amtrak service is "designed for failure" and would "dismantle Amtrak."

Adams has proposed cutting back train service over 43 percent of the system's miles with service largely limited to high population corridors. Either house of Congress has 90 legislative days to veto the plan, otherwise it will go into effect.

Eight arrested

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (UPI) — Eight people were arrested Thursday in the second day of a strike against the nation's largest private shipyard, which claimed the walkout was losing its effectiveness.

Police arrested five pickets outside the Newport News Shipbuilding Co., including Wayne E. Crosby, president of Local 8888 of the United Steelworkers of America.

Lawyer testifies

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Attorney Louis Goldman, who has represented Les Marvin in show business affairs for many years, testified Thursday he felt the actor had no obligation to pay Michelle Triola Marvin anything when they broke up in 1970.

In an occasionally acrimonious exchange with Miss Marvin's attorney, Goldman said he did not put into writing the conditions he discussed with Miss Marvin necessary for her to receive money the actor was willing to pay her after they broke up.

Miss Marvin, who took that name legally at the end of their six-year relationship, is seeking $1 million from the actor and half of the property he accumulated during the six years they spent together.

Photo released

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Two photographs clearly showing Jupiter's Great Red Spot surrounded by swirling cloud belts and two of the planet's satellites were released Thursday by Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

The photographs were taken by two cameras aboard Voyager 1, which is scheduled to sweep past Jupiter March 5 on its way to Saturn and on out of the solar system. Voyager 1 will take 15,000 pictures during a three-month look at Jupiter.

Presley fading

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Vernon Presley, father of the late rock 'n' roll king, was reported near death Thursday with temporary pacemaker implanted in his heart to try to control an erratic heartbeat aggravated by a sudden drop in his blood pressure.

Presley, 62, executor of his son's multimillion-dollar estate, was in critical condition at Baptist Hospital after the latest release of a chronic heart condition.

Hanoi fulminates

HONG KONG (UPI) — Vietnam charged Thursday that China took advantage of Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's visit to the United States to mass an invasion force along the Vietnamese border.

Vietnam's official Radio Hanoi also admitted in a broadcast monitored in Hong Kong that Vietnamese forces had suffered "many casualties" in border clashes with the Chinese over the past several days.

It said Chinese troops had staged several raids across the border but were "forced to retreat" each time in heavy fighting.

Free again, Patty Hearst waves commutation papers

Long ordeal ends for Patty Hearst

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst, happily walking her presidential commutation, walked out of prison hand-in-hand with her policeman fiancé Thursday, ending a five-year drama during which the world saw her as a kidnapper victim, an urban guerrilla and finally a convict.

"I'm really happy to be going home," the newspaper heiress told some 150 newsmen as she left the Federal Correctional Institution in Pleasanton sporting a "P-Hearst" on the words "Pardón Me" emblazoned on the front.

Wearing tan slacks and a heavy blue jacket, she was accompanied by San Francisco Patrolman Bernard Shaw, 30, and George Martinez, her attorney.

She paused only briefly in the 35-degree chill to talk with reporters before dining across San Francisco Bay for a tearful reunion breakfast with her family in their fashionable Hillsborough home.

"When I got in, we all started crying and running all around. Arroz (her German shepherd) had his leash wrapped all around me," she told reporters after she got home.

Miss Hearst, 24, ignored her future husband's advice that she wear a bullet-proof vest when she left the prison.

"I didn't wear a bullet-proof vest, but I dressed for the occasion," she told reporters. Then she opened her jacket, displaying her "P-Hearst" in the homecoming ended 22 months, two weeks and four days of imprisonment for Miss Hearst who was kidnapped on Feb. 4, 1974, by a small band of underground terrorists who called themselves the Symbionese Liberation Army.

The bank-robbery conviction which resulted in a seven-year prison sentence followed an April 15, 1974, holdup at a San Francisco bank. Miss Hearst was photographed carrying an automatic weapon.

President Carter commuted her sentence Monday after a campaign for her release by a committee of supporters. He said he felt Miss Hearst was no longer a threat to the community and he felt justice had been served.

"As Miss Hearst walked out of the prison, she waved the president's order. 'There it is,' she said, laughing gaily.

"I want to thank my parents, sisters and Bernie and George, too, and all the people on the committee to release me, and this is what we worked so hard to get," she said, adding to avoid curiosity seekers, she said, "It looks like Jim Jon Jon is to."

Officers at the Ingleside police station, where Shaw works, said he had taken a two-week vacation but they did not know their plans. "Bernard wouldn't even tell his best buddies' down here," one patrolman said, "but I guess I can't blame him."

Shaw met Miss Hearst while working off-duty as her bodyguard while she was free on $1 million bail after her conviction in U.S. District Court.

Advocates on rights speak out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Women's rights advocates appealed to Congress Thursday to reverse the administration's attitude that the federal budget "is none of our business."

Witnesses asked the Senate Resources Committee — to overrule President Carter's austere budget on numerous social programs and particularly to help older women trying to re-enter the job market.

"They argued at the hearing on problems of women in the work force that Congress should restore funding for programs to serve the 'displaced homemaker,' survivor benefits under the Social Security program and family planning money to combat — 'a short-age pregnancy epidemic' — all slashed from Carter's Budget."

The witnesses asked Congress must move on day care programs for working mothers, eliminate inequities in Social Security benefits and tax laws and provide educational aid for older women who need job training to become more than "working poor."

Among those testifying was former House member Bella Abzug, fired by Carter, from her leadership of his advisory task force on women after the group criticized his domestic budget cuts.

She said the administration takes the stand "It is none of our business what the federal budget is, that we should stick to ERA or abortion and things like that."

"Our citizens need protection and they're not getting it," Ms. Abzug said. "They're diving on the vine."

Carter offers aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter told a group of Oklahoma legislators Thursday he would make "any contact that would be beneficial" to passage of the ERA, and suggested sending Rosalynn Carter to the Midwest to campaign for the issue.

The lawmakers, and Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh and his wife Donna, were guests of President and Mrs. Carter at lunch in the White House family quarters.

Aide Sarah Weddington, who also is the chief executive on women's issues, also attended the lunch.

Church accuses Saudis of balking Mideast peace moves

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — In his first major speech as head of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. Frank Church Thursday accused Saudi Arabia of impeding Middle East peace efforts and said the United States should get tough with its old Arab ally.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the Idaho Democrat called for "a fundamental review of our policy with respect to Saudi Arabia including the advisability of going forward with the F-15 jet fighters sale, but not limited to that question."

If the administration heeded that advice it would represent a dramatic shift in traditional U.S. Middle East policy. America has carefully cultivated alliance with the Saudis — its major foreign oil supplier — and treated them with kid-glove deference.

Last year, President Carter decided to sell Saudi Arabia 60 top-line F-15 jets in a Middle East warplane package futilely opposed by Israel.

Church said the time has come to stop trying to "appease" Arab forces by such moves and to do some "plain speaking" with the Saudis in particular.

"Saudi Arabia has been far more of a detriment to peace than we are willing to admit," he said in his prepared remarks.

He noted that, when Saudi Arabia wanted a symbolic show of force to help bolster the Shah of Iran's position, the United States flew F-15 aircraft into the Arab nation.

"Yet despite these overtures, Saudi Arabia has joined the Pan-Arab chorus in politically isolating Egypt, has threatened to invoke sanctions against Egypt and has agreed to participate in the payment of billions of dollars to Syria and Jordan to stay out of the Camp David peace process," Church said.

"I suggest that now we cease the time to inform the Saudis that a special relationship cannot be a one-way street," Church said. "There must be reciprocity.

"They cannot count on our unequivocal support without a demonstration on their part that they are responsive to our fundamental concern, the successful conclusion of the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty."

He said Carter is using the wrong tactics in his efforts to revive the floundering Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty negotiations.

"The most intransigent parties, Jordan, the Palestinians and the Saudis, are sought to be appeased," he said. "The would-be peacemakers, (Egypt's President Anwar) Sadat and (Israel's Prime Minister Menachem) Begin, are embarrassed and their role made more difficult."

"This is a tragically mistaken course," he said.

Wage insurance attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The AFL-CIO delivered what could be a fatal blow to President Carter's real wage insurance proposal Thursday, saying the plan would not work and that wage and price controls are needed to control inflation.

Testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee, the union's representatives joined spokesmen for business in opposing the administration plan.

Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., and Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., ranking GOP member of the committee, both noted the wage insurance plan had been drawn up by the administration in an attempt to satisfy labor. Conable called the union position "quite significant."

The president's wage insurance proposal provides that if inflation exceeds 7 percent this year, a tax credit would be given to workers in groups that hold average pay increases to 7 percent or less.

"The administration's program provides limited protection to a limited number of workers under confusing and inequitable conditions, and even if it worked without a hitch, it could be incredibly costly and only transfer the bite of inflation from the private sector to the taxpayer," said Kenneth Young, legislative director for the AFL-CIO.

The union represents about 75 percent of organized labor in the United States. The committee planned to hear from representatives of the United Auto Workers today.

New bomber under study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Air Force has not given up on a new type of strategic bomber — and maybe even two — despite President Carter's cancellation of the B-1 as too costly, its top officials said Thursday.

Air Force Secretary John Slesason told the House Armed Services Committee "much of the research and development" on a new plane could be done in the 1980s "so that we could then in the 1990s move toward a significant improvement over the B-1."

And the Air Force chief of staff, Gen. Lew Allen, said he still sees a need for a new strategic bomber.

Allen told the panel the Air Force still believes "the B-1 would have been a more effective program" than the air-launched cruise missile, although he conceded "it would also be more expensive."

Other points: — Allen said he still believes a "shell game" below ground basing system for proposed MX intercontinental missiles is more effective than keeping them safe from attack aboard high-flying transport planes.

Deficit figures vary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three private economists said Thursday the $29 billion federal deficit President Carter projects for 1980 is likely to be much higher. Their estimates ranged from $40 billion to $59 billion.

Their testimony to the House Budget Committee complicates Congress' task of drafting its own version of Carter's $31.6-billion budget proposal.

To a large extent, the higher deficits projected by the economists result from the fact that they use less optimistic assumptions about future inflation, unemployment and growth of the economy than did the president.

For example, while Carter projects the national unemployment rate at 6.2 percent in 1980, their estimates are between 6.8 and 7.4 percent.

Oto Eckstein, president of Iata Resources, Inc., estimated the 1980 deficit at $43 billion. Lawrence Klein of Wharton Economic Forecasting Associates estimated $46 billion. Michael Evans of Chase Econometric estimated $59 billion.

Foreign aid director quits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John Gilligan resigned as U.S. foreign aid director because he opposed the heavy use of aid funds to maintain influence in Egypt and to bring home the Jonestown massacre victims, administration officials said Thursday.

The former Ohio governor resigned as head of the Agency for International Development, without mentioning any policy disagreements, in a letter to President Carter Wednesday.

Carter accepted "with regret" and said he plans to nominate Gilligan shortly "to an important post in international economic affairs."

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said, "The 2 are no fundamental differences between the State Department and Gov. Gilligan."

Gilligan declined to issue any statement.

School board shows lack of concern

The Buhl School District's Board of Trustees treated those attending its meeting this week shabbily.

During the monthly meeting, the board went into closed session, tossing out a handful of spectators and reporters each time.

The last time they were told to take their coats with them because it would be a long session.

Public bodies are entitled to closed sessions for certain subjects, but the Buhl School Board showed a lack of consideration for the public.

The first time came early in the session, when the board met with acting Principal Daryl Hart to consider a salary increase.

In its second closed session, the board met to discuss a grievance from hot lunch program workers.

Both fall under the category of personnel matters, for which meetings can be closed to the public, under the rules of Idaho's Open Meetings law.

But elected bodies should not stop at obeying the letter of the law. The spirit of public service should mean citizens get more consideration than the servants.

Only two reporters plus hot lunch workers and their friends attended the Buhl board meeting. If disinterested patrons of the school district had attended, wanting to watch a board meeting, they would have been justifiably insulted.

One board member admitted the twice-interrupted meeting was disorganized.

For its next meeting, the board would do well to consider the fact that members of the general public might show up.

Young department inept at spotting oil fraud

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS
(Last of two related columns)

WASHINGTON — Although less than 18 months old, the Department of Energy (DOE) already has earned the dubious distinction of being as insensitive to fraud, scandal and corruption as any old-line federal department.

DOE's responses to well-documented allegations of criminal activity within the petroleum industry invariably have been confined to bureaucratic buck-passing to escape responsibility, attempts to ignore the problems in the hope that they'll go away and incompetent enforcement efforts.

As a result, consumers of home-heating oil, gasoline and other petroleum products have been overcharged billions of dollars, with the illegal profits going into the pockets of producers, shippers, brokers and refiners.

Typical of DOE's failure to seek prosecution of violators of the federal laws it's supposed to enforce has been the proliferation of "daisy chains" in a scheme to illegally manipulate oil prices.

The profits of the industry's numerous middlemen are limited by federal statute, but too many of those resellers have discovered that the law can be circumvented by establishing daisy chains of dummy corporations that earn substantial profits for no work.

In one case, fuel oil purchased from a refinery at 36 cents per gallon was passed through a daisy chain with each seller marking up the price 10 to 20 cents per gallon. The oil eventually sold for 59 cents per gallon.

In late 1974, federal officials announced they would conduct a massive investigation of alleged price gouging by fuel suppliers, possibly resulting in "tens of millions of dollars in overcharges being returned to the consumer."

But almost two years later, not a single case involving a daisy chain scheme had been referred to the Justice Department for criminal prosecution.

A few cases subsequently have been prosecuted in the federal courts, but in most instances the proceedings were initiated by aggressive U.S. attorneys — not by DOE enforcement officials.

Still strangers, Teng, Carter have big job ahead

WASHINGTON, N.Y. Times Service
WASHINGTON — It is the United States and China are to work together for that new "world order." They both say they want, they are going to have to do a lot better than President Carter and Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-ping did in their first meeting here in Washington.

They made some progress, not much, but some. For the first time after over 30 years of separation between their two capitals, the leaders of these countries talked as equals, and also analyzed their common problems in the world, but not very much about their major differences with regard to the Soviet Union.

They agreed on certain bilateral arrangements to cooperate in the field of science and technology, in the developments of high energy projects, and in the exchange of students, professors, journalists, and other cultural projects. This will be explained and announced later.

But essentially, and not surprisingly, this was a meeting of strangers, with different histories and assumptions, and their meeting started under awkward circumstances. Teng gave an interview to the editor in chief of Time Magazine, Hedley Donovan, which said more for the enterprise of Time Magazine than for the diplomacy of China and Teng.

Teng argued in this interview, not for cooperation among the major nations for a "world order," but for an anti-Soviet alliance of the United States, China, Europe and Japan. He suggested that the United States and China shared a common destiny and should unite against the USSR, which, he insisted, was trying to dominate the Eastern Mediterranean, the Middle East, and the critical strategic oil-fields and sea routes to the industrial nations of the world.

This troubled Carter and the State Department, but what infuriated was Teng's support for the people in the United States who oppose the Carter administration's policy of signing a second strategic arms limitation with the Soviet Union. This seemed to officials here an interference in the internal affairs of the United States — especially when Teng's remarks were directed at generals and admirals who oppose the SALT II agreements.

And when Teng suggested that the Soviet Union was a "hub of war," whose military strength "may surpass that of the United States in the near future" — since the United States was in "strategic retreat" — Carter and his aides began to wonder whether this Teng mission was really what they had in mind.

The Chinese leader moderated his provocative language after he arrived in Washington. He made no promises, but he took a cautious and peaceable line about the future of Taiwan. In his conversations in the White House and especially with the members of the Foreign Relations Committee on Capitol Hill, he avoided the provocative language of the Time Magazine interview.

Still, the Teng visit was not exactly what either Washington or Peking hoped it would be. It was an exercise in public-relations and propaganda — a struggle within the networks and the newspapers for interviews with the new Chinese leader, which clearly puzzled and irritated Teng and his associates.

Most of the time it was a social rather than a political event which led to silly conflicts about who was to be invited to the White House formal dinner — Nixon, Kissinger and who else? — and who would go to the theatrical gala at the Kennedy Center — an extravaganza financed oddly by the big corporations trying to get into what they assume will be the lucrative China trade of the future.

Teng, Hsiao-ping, went, through all these confrontations with the noisy demonstrators outside the White House, the press, the Congress and all the rest with a kind of calm, but puzzled serenity. He will have a reception of his own before he leaves here with a cast of hundreds, eating and drinking under the television lights, perched by satellite to Peking, where the few people with TV sets are bound to be confused.

It is an odd kind of diplomacy, but that's the way it is these days. One wonders what will happen when Carter accepts the vice premier's invitation to go to Peking later in the year.

What if he criticized Peking's policy toward Moscow, as Teng criticized Washington's? What if he said publicly that Peking was wrong in carrying on a vendetta with the Soviet Union rather than trying to follow a policy of détente and reducing tensions?

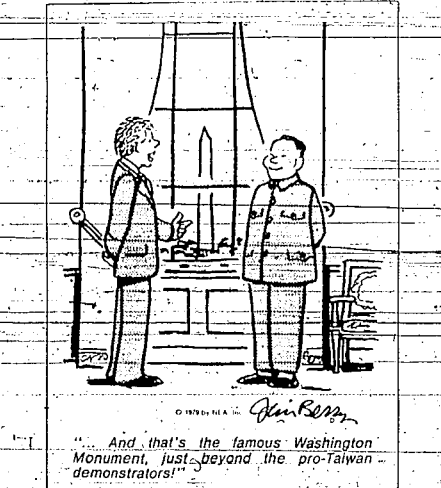

Obviously, Teng and his colleagues would not be amused, but maybe his trip here has changed his approach if not his mind. Most of his hosts here have been very polite, but a few have resented his suggestions that we should be even tougher on the Soviets.

One disliking the Cold War, reminded the Chinese leaders that the United States had organized the NATO alliance that had contained Soviet expansion for over 30 years, and had defended Western Europe, rescued Berlin with the airlift, and faced up to the Soviets when they threatened to put nuclear weapons on Cuba.

"I didn't see many Chinese around in those days," he said. There is no point in identifying him now, but he wasn't invited to the Chinese celebration in Washington these past few days, and didn't mind.

"It was a good visit," he said, "but we are still strangers — and there's still a long way to go."

Family says goodbye to a collie

Washington Star Syndicate
SCRABBLE, VA. — Lorenzo de Medici of White Walnut Hill that was his formal, registered name — died on a Monday night in January. He was a collie, and he was loved.

Lorenzo joined the family as a puppy in the summer of 1967. He got his formidable name, of course, from his formidable nose. It was a nose that would have distinguished any portrait gallery in Zwazony, a capital name, a nose made for looking down his disdainful length. We called him by his full name only in moments of total exasperation; mostly he was Lo, or the Big Moose, or in the past year or so, the Old Gentleman.

All of us know dogs who don't know they are dogs, who think they are humans like everyone else. This was Lorenzo. As a puppy he was all male child, bold and aggressive and full of himself. He thought he could lick any kid on the block, and until he tangled with John L. Sullivan he had more cocksure confidence than was good for him. Sullivan was a mean yellow dog who lived down by the Marine Barracks in Southwest Washington, a doekside brawler with a wicked left hook. Lorenzo learned a lesson in prudence from the one-round knockout he suffered, but he despised all cats for the rest of his life.

We sold the little house in Southwest in 1968 and bought a larger place across the river in Alexandria. Simultaneously, we were building a home in the Blue Ridge Mountains 80 miles west of Washington. Lorenzo had the best of both worlds. He was country, scruffy, and boulevardier wrapped into one. He loved to be chauffeured about in my wife's Porsche, showing the girls his glorious profile. Taken for a walk in the city, he fairly pranced. His ambition was to leave his card on every tree in Old Town, and he came close to completing his mission.

Was a ham! By accident of fate, the Old Gentleman was born a tri-color collie. He was meant to be a Shakespearean actor. He could have played all the great roles — the roly Richard Falstaff, the gloomy Hamlet, sly Richard and dark Othello. He was forever striking poses. Lorenzo the Bold, Lorenzo the Magnificent, Lorenzo the Library Lion.

What particular talents did he have? His greatest accomplishment, I suppose, was Getting in the Way. This art he mastered early. When the puppy Pipper came along, Lorenzo tutored him with consummate skill, with the result that not one, but two collies constantly had to be stepped over. Lorenzo's keen instincts told him precisely when doorway combat most effectively be blocked by lying down across it. Bring in the groceries, here I am!

This was the pure mischief in him. If you were planting the vegetable garden and turned your back on Lorenzo, he would pull up the stakes and string. He could pick a pocket like the Artful Dodger. He used to play a game of tag, wrapping his big feet around my leg.

With infant grandchildren he was a gentle nanny. He used to lick the cookie crumbs from Heather's face.

Lorenzo never knew an illness until last fall, when he nearly died of an abscess in his throat. That had no sooner cleared up when disaster struck. On a December evening two weeks before Christmas, a big mountain bobcat came prowling across our front field. No one saw the ensuing fight, but Dr. Byrd at the animal hospital said he had never seen anything like it. The bobcat had ripped off Lorenzo's tail.

We brought the Old Gentleman home before New Year's and he seemed on his way to recovery. Once too proud and imperious to seek affection, now he came to us for love and reassurance. His wounds healed, but something was wrong. He felt ready to die, and on a Monday morning he simply disappeared. We found him many hours later, Pipper and I, curled in a snow bank. He lived long enough to lay his big head in Marie's lap and nod his lid to her, he gave us so many of them.

Weatherman unworried by groundhog

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Chief meteorologist George Schlein is not worried about facing competition from Pennsylvania's Phil. "In fact, I eagerly look for his prediction each year," Schlein said Thursday.

Then he chuckled.

According to legend, the famed groundhog will crawl out of his Western Pennsylvania lair this morning to give the country the news — six more weeks of winter or an early spring. If Phil sees his shadow the nation is supposed to be in for six and a half months of winter. No shadow foretells an early spring.

"We think that spring is going to show up at the usual time, the third week of March, no matter what Phil predicts," Schlein said. "But it's fun to find out what he'll do."

The National Weather Service meteorologist, who is in charge of the Pittsburgh office, said he expects no significant changes in the weather pattern in the near future.

"This winter has been different than the past two winters on the national level," he said. "It is less cold but more wet. There's been flooding and rain in Chicago, for example. It's been getting pretty close to record snowfall amounts."

Schlein said some animals may have a special sense in anticipating weather changes such as storms, but have no ability to "forecast" the weather.

Another meteorologist, Dr. Charles L. Hosler of Pennsylvania State University, said the groundhog's predictive powers are no better than your own.

Ex-girlfriend sues for half of rock star's possessions

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — The 36-year-old blonde former girlfriend of British rock star Peter Frampton has filed a "Marvin Case" suit seeking half of everything the multimillionaire singer owns, her lawyer disclosed Thursday.

Frampton is seeking to have the suit brought by Penelope McCall dismissed on grounds New York state law does not grant unmarried partners the right to claim each other's possessions.

The suit, filed in state Supreme Court in suburban Westchester County, is similar to one presently being tried in California against actor Lee Marvin. It contends that Miss McCall is entitled to the money because she spent five years as Frampton's "live-in partner, aide, and inspiration."

PENELOPE McCALL
...wants her half

Frampton, who is said to have grossed $67 million in 1976 and who starred in the 1978 film "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band," would not comment.

Describing the breakup of their relationship, Miss McCall said in a telephone interview, "It was after his (Frampton's) auto accident last summer, I came back from Nassau (the Bahamas) and he told me he wanted to live alone" at his 53-acre estate in Croton, N.Y.

"I want people to understand, this is nothing personal between Peter and me; and I don't like doing it. It's just a business thing. I came back and found I had no car and no finances," she said.

The suit, filed in December by Miss McCall's attorney Richard Lefkowitz, seeks half of all the money and someone's estate in the absence of an actual agreement.

He said there was no written agreement to share any of Frampton's possessions.

Lefkowitz said he is seeking an accounting of the singer's net worth and wants a permanent trust set up to split Frampton's estate between both parties.

Miss McCall, who is now living with friends in nearby Peekskill, wants the court to split up the value of the house, Frampton's cars and his income as a "joint partnership."

She said the reason for their break-up "is a mystery to me. I don't know if the accident affected his mind or what. But I want people to know, and Peter to know, that I don't feel hostile toward him. Of course, I don't admire him very much for what he did."

possession Frampton has acquired since 1972 when, Miss McCall says, the couple began living together.

Lefkowitz said Miss McCall contends she and Frampton had "an implied or expressed agreement to share" in Frampton's possessions.

Lefkowitz said Miss McCall is seeking damages because she had to quit her job to live with Frampton, and that when he told her to leave, he disrupted "her way of life."

Elliot Hoffman, Frampton's attorney, will argue for dismissal of the suit Feb. 9 in state Supreme Court in White Plains.

"There is no basis for relief under New York State law," Hoffman said. "Even if everything she says is true, and we don't concede it." P. A. of it is, New York law doesn't grant someone the right to claim any part of

Reptile owner angry at police

MARLBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The master of a 7 1/2-foot "water snake" named Penny said Thursday he is angry with police for killing seven of his poisonous reptiles after a cobra bit him on the chest.

John Madden, 24, listed in good condition at Marlboro Hospital, said after the incident, Wednesday police entered his home without a warrant, took all his poisonous snakes to a nearby dump and shot them.

Madden was treated for the snake bite with anti-venom serum flown in from the Bronx Zoo in New York.

"They didn't have to kill them. I could see them taking them away," Madden said.

"They don't know better than that."

The snakes, worth about $1,000, were to be sold this week to a snake collector in Maine, Madden said. He indicated he'd seek legal action against the police.

Madden said he was bitten while handling his Cape cobra, which he said had extremely potent venom. He said he immediately called an ambulance and applied pressure to the wound.

Five hours later he was given the anti-venom serum.

Madden said he'd kept his poisonous snakes — an 11-foot king cobra, a Siamese and a Cape cobra, two copperheads, and a rattlesnake behind a locked door in sturdy security cages.

"They broke the door down and dirt what they wanted to do," Madden said of police actions.

He said police reluctantly left behind Madden's seven non-poisonous pets — "all non-bites, and pretty good snakes," including one named Penny, a 20-pound copper colored boa constrictor.

"I think she's better than a dog. She's my watch snake," Madden said.

"We're asking the city solicitor to look into formulating an ordinance to prevent venomous reptiles from coming into the city," Dr. Raymond Cannon, chairman of the Board of Health, said following an emergency meeting of the board.

"If one of these animals escapes from its enclosure, it usually hides," Cannon said. Someone could inadvertently step on a snake and be bitten instantly.

Madden indicated he wouldn't be opposed to the proposed ordinance. "I don't think they're really mistaken in doing it," he said.

Audit turns up 'weakness' in sugar price support program

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An internal audit by the Agriculture Department's inspector general, released Thursday, says "overall weakness" in the price support program for sugar, including overpayments and ineligible loans.

The interim audit was inserted in Thursday's Congressional Record by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and is certain to fuel the controversy over the sugar support program — one of the toughest political issues between the administration and Congress.

The audit found that the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, which administers the program, did not adhere to program regulations for the 1977 crop year for sugar beets and sugarcane and did not adequately review claims and supporting documentation.

The audit also said several problem areas were "not covered" by the regulations which led to individual decision-making and a lack of uniformity.

"The overall weakness in program control resulted in significant price support overclaims and unnecessary government expenditures," the audit added.

The audit covered 11 of the 49 corporate and cooperative processors and was conducted from April until August of last year.

The investigation found that seven participants overclaimed at least $10.4 million on sugar marketed under contractual agreements and purchase orders which actually made them ineligible.

The audit also said that ASCS, without putting it in writing, decided to allow support payment claims of $8.9 million on prior years' sugar. But not all participants were told of the decision and the program was limited to the 1977 crop year.

In addition, the audit found that four processors received $38.5 million in loans on ineligible prior years' sugar because ASCS did not provide its state and county offices "the proper data needed to compute only the 1977 loans." The processors were not named in the report.

Revamp aims to end job fraud

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration Thursday revamped the government's $10 billion program to curb unemployment, targeting jobs toward hiring the hard-core jobless and pledging to end fraud and abuse.

The policy changes were reflected in the administration's budget proposal for fiscal year 1980, which calls for a $1.3 billion reduction in CETA funds accompanied by a cut in jobs from 625,000 to 467,000.

Presidential domestic advisor Stuart Eizenstat told a news conference the changes — called the "New CETA" — were part of President Carter's "deep personal commitment to fighting and reducing unemployment" and part of the president's "New Foundation" for America.

"This is an important building block in that 'New Foundation,'" said Eizenstat.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, in a statement read by Assistant Secretary Ernest Green, promised the new Comprehensive Employment and Training Act program "will target our efforts to assure that we provide jobs and training to those who really need it."

Marshall emphasized the revised CETA program would be augmented by private sector initiatives including a special tax credit for companies hiring long-term unemployed workers between 18 and 24 years of age, and training programs set up by private industry councils.

SEC probe could brush Nixon friend

By LEONARD CURRY
©Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The Securities and Exchange Commission has opened a private investigation into Resorts International Inc. that could brush against Richard Nixon's close friend, Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo.

Resorts International has operated a gambling house in the Bahamas for 11 years and opened a hotel-casino facility in Atlantic City, N.J., last May.

Rebozo reportedly was among the "honorarium" guests who were invited, allegedly at the casino's expense, during a series of gala ceremonies.

An Internal Revenue Service informant in congressional testimony three years ago first made the connection between a recently suspended Resorts International employee, Seymour Alter, and Rebozo. The informant said Alter carried "stuff" to Rebozo in the fall of 1972 that may have been intended for Nixon.

"It has been known as the big man for Resorts International for quite some time," the informant said. "He was the man who transferred monies for Resorts International, for what purpose who knows."

Alter was suspended without pay from Resorts last month for an episode that happened 17 years ago.

The company is attempting to gain New Jersey state approval for a permanent license to continue its lucrative gaming operations. Since its opening, Resorts has reported income of more than $600,000 a day.

Resorts revealed the SEC probe Monday in a brief statement issued from its Atlantic City hotel-casino.

Resorts said the SEC alleges that the company's "whose shares are traded on the American Stock Exchange, has not adequately disclosed its financial dealings to shareholders dating back to 1970."

The company said — the SEC expressed interest in "transactions with management of Resorts International, payments to foreign and domestic political organizations or public officials, the sources of financing for Resorts International's Atlantic City properties and the acquisition or disposition of securities or assets or the assumption of liabilities of other persons by Resorts."

Although the SEC has issued a formal order of investigation, the enforcement staff is divided over how extensive to make the probe.

Wheat agreement dims

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — James Webster, a high Agriculture Department official, said Wednesday the outlook for achieving an international wheat agreement has dimmed since talks resumed a week and a half ago.

Webster said if an agreement is not achieved, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland will begin serious consideration of other cooperative efforts with wheat trading nations.

Webster's remarks came at the annual convention of the National Association of Wheat Growers.

Webster, director of the governmental and public affairs, appeared in place of Bergland, who remained in Washington for the visit of Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ting.

Talks among wheat exporters and importers collapsed in late November.

However, American officials were optimistic they would conclude an agreement in the latest talks which began Jan. 22 in Geneva, Switzerland. Officials had set a deadline of Feb. 9.

An agreement would stabilize prices by removing wheat from the world market when prices were low and releasing reserves when prices were high.

It would spread responsibility for holding reserves among the nations of the world.

Webster said that half-way through the Geneva session "the outlook is not as optimistic as it was just a few days ago."

He said the United States has not abandoned hope but "there are certain issues on which we can move no further," specifically, the range between a lower price at which nations would acquire wheat reserves and an upper price for release of reserves.

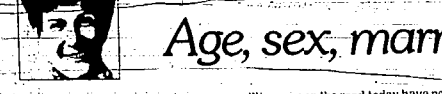

"The lower price had been agreed to earlier in informal talks."

Webster said the United States cannot agree to "a price band which did not recognize farmers' production costs."

Negotiators have failed to agree on the size of reserves. Webster said, with the United States holding firm for a world reserve of 25-30 million metric tons, with an American share of 5 million tons.

Webster said others' preference for a reserve of only 15 million tons "simply is not realistic."

Age, sex, marriage affect insurance

Sylvia Porter

(First of three columns.)

With auto insurance costs surging in multi-billion-dollar leaps (in the face of state "no fault" laws dilated by lawmakers into farce), insurance regulators now are "prodding" the industry to reshuffle its rates.

And the proposed changes could alter your car insurance premiums by as much as $50 annually — up or down.

In addition, the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC) has just given the companies a June deadline for devising a new "rate book" for driver premiums.

Otherwise, this group of state insurance regulators warns, it may move to outlaw sex and marriage as insurance premium-rating factors. These two standards — along with age, which the NAIC decided changing — can boost your annual premium charges today from a typical $221 a year to $739, even if you drive the same car the same mileage in the same area for the same purposes.

Insurance industry sources are reluctant to estimate "average" annual auto insurance premiums. The range is too great; 100 million cars are under deductible, self-insurance, assigned risk or just plain non-insurance programs.

Fully 15 percent of the nation's 115 million cars on the road today have no insurance at all — most in violation of the law. Of the remaining 85 percent, almost 4.5 million were under "assigned risk" plans in 1978, says the Automobile Insurance Plans Service Office in New York, up from three million a year earlier.

With only the traditional private insurance counted, our national auto insurance payments, totaled nearly $25 billion in '77, against a bit more that $15 billion as recently as 1973. But these figures can be misleading, because we, as drivers, have been told coverage slightly, boosting deductibles a lot.

Total "insurance-type" payments — including corporate "self-insurance" funds and repair payments under deductible policies — are estimated at more than $40 billion annually by some sources, at least double 1973 levels.

Because of the huge number of cars in self-insured, assigned risk and "non-insured" categories, it's tough to put a dollar sign on a national average policy. State Farm Mutual, the nation's biggest auto insurer, puts its typical premium in 1978 at about $221 — but it also boasts that its rates are lower than others.

Unlike two other leading companies queried; State Farm was candid about rates on its 20 million policies. Its figures show that — theoretically — "typical" premiums might range annual rate — or from the standard $90 in Manhattan, for that matter — you could subtract 15 percent if you drive less than 30 miles a week and from a low of less than $90 a year in low-density areas to $400 annually in Manhattan for a "muscle" car (high horsepower to weight ratio) with a fiberglass body driven more than 5,200 miles a year by a single male under 21.

Most of the difference is attributed to the age-marriage factors which the insurance regulators oppose. For instance, the "standard" rate for Ames, Iowa, is $160 a year, for Manhattan, $940 — for comparable minimum coverage.

To the New York figure for married persons over 30, though, you must add $658 (70 percent) for the age factor; $470 (50 percent) for single marital status; and $1,081 (115 percent) because the insured is a male.

This swells the total for a comparable car to $3,149 — a 235 percent surcharge — for the age-marital status differences alone. These are factors you cannot (or might not want) to change.

The other variations are $188 extra (20 percent) for driving over 100 miles a week and commuting with the car; another $470 (50 percent) surcharge for fiberglass body on the car; an additional $235 (25 percent) for high horsepower. Total surcharge, 330 percent.

From the basic "Ames area" $160 did not compute; about 20 percent more if you had a $50 deductible clause on your collision insurance; some 1.5 percent more if you also take a $50 deductible on your comprehensive coverage; and still another 4 percent because minimum insurance requirements in Ames are less than for New York.

The whole pattern is a crazy-quilt of confusions, conflicting standards, obsolete stereotypes, indefensible surcharges.

Ex-mechanic says he owes millions

HONOLULU (UPI) — Mōriuske Talra, a retired mechanic, says in a bankruptcy petition that he owes more than $15.9 million but has assets of only $10,375.

Talra said in one of the biggest such petitions ever filed in Hawaii's history that he came on financial hard times after joining an informal, Japanese-style investment group known as a "hanimoshi."

His petition said "inforeseen circumstances" delayed the return of his investment.

Bert Tokairin, Talra's lawyer, declined to comment on his client's problems.

But the petition said Talra has more than 1,100 creditors with indebtedness ranging from $10 to more than $200,000.

Pope returns home from Latin American visit

ROME (UPI) — Pope John Paul II landed and smiling on his way home from a week-long trip to Latin America Thursday, his first foray outside Italy as spiritual leader of the world's 700 million Roman Catholics.

The pope's AeroMexico DC-10 jetliner landed at Rome's Fiumicino airport after an 8 1/2 hour flight from Nassau in the Bahamas where he made a two-hour stopover en route home from Mexico.

"At the end of this first papal voyage that has carried me across the oceans in the noble and beloved land of Mexico, one feeling prevails over all the others that are crowding my trembling and moved soul — the sentiment of gratitude," the pope said.

The pope, who was greeted by crowds running into the millions during his first trip outside Italy since being elected Oct. 16, was met at the airport by several hundred well-wishers, including acting Premier Giulio Andreotti and Vatican Secretary of State Cardinal Jean Villot.

Vatican radio celebrated the pope's return home by playing selections of Mexican music, including bullfight trumpet flourishes.

The 56-year-old Polish pope stepped from his three-engined jet wearing his traditional white vestments and carrying a broad-brimmed bishop's hat in his right hand.

The plane landed as the sun was setting and its pilot opened his small window and thrust out a white and yellow papal flag as the aircraft taxied to the terminal building.

"I think with vivid memory of the many demonstrations of recognition, devotion and affection shown me by the population during the course of my pilgrimage and in particular by the venerable bishops gathered at Puebla representing the entire Latin American church," John Paul said in his arrival speech.

John Paul, who has said he hopes in future to travel to the United States and his native Poland, heard on his return to Rome that Poland's Roman Catholics will hold a vigil today to pray for a papal visit and for religious freedom in their Communist country.

The local part of the pope's trip to Latin America was the Third Latin American Bishops' Conference at Puebla south of Mexico City.

Shortly before the pope's plane landed in Rome, he walked back into the main passenger cabin and told reporters he was most impressed by the strength of Roman Catholicism in Latin America, particularly in Mexico.

"I was impressed by the faith and internal force of the Mexican church," he said. "There is a great vitality in the Mexican church."

"Asked if his speech opening the Puebla conference was not contradictory in calling for priests to separate themselves more with religion than politics, the pope said he it was a complicated problem.

"The church and politics. That's a big question and you can't give an answer in one phrase.

"I think it is necessary that you go simply to the people as they are," he said. "It is always man who is the most important."

Tito starts Mideast tour in Kuwait

KUWAIT (UPI) — Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito arrived in Kuwait Thursday to start a Middle East tour that will also take him to Iraq, Syria and Jordan but pointedly not to Egypt.

The 66-year-old Tito was to spend four days conferring with Kuwaiti officials on bilateral relations, the Middle East and the nonaligned movement. Tito has championed since the Cold War years of the 1950s.

In Belgrade, a Yugoslav spokesman said Tito received a personal message from President Carter about "current world problems" on the eve of his departure. Its contents were not disclosed but the implication was that the Carter message dealt with Tito's trip.

Yugoslav officials accompanying Tito said he will urge Kuwait and other Arab governments on his tour to "adopt a unified stand on the Middle East conflict" — a reference to Yugoslavia's siding with hard-line Arab governments against the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks.

They said Tito would reiterate Yugoslavia's support for the Arabs, "especially the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and a homeland on the West Bank of Jordan river and the Gaza Strip."

Kuwait officials said developments in Iran and the Persian Gulf also would be high on the agenda.

Tito was to fly on to Baghdad Sunday to discuss technical, economic and scientific cooperation, the Iraqi News Agency reported.

Other reports indicated the Yugoslav president also intends to ask Iraq for more oil. Yugoslavia imports about one third of its crude oil from Iraq and has been hard-hit by oil price increases in recent years.

Discussions on the nonaligned movement were regarded as important in view of Yugoslavia's expressed alarm over recent divisions in the 86-nation bloc.

Observers said Tito's trip also was an important demonstration that the World War II Yugoslav leader is healthy and fit despite his age.

Red demands stall quest for cabinet

ROME (UPI) — Socialist President Sandro Pertini began the search for a new Italian government Thursday but ran into immediate difficulties when the Christian Democrats vowed they would not agree to Communist demands for cabinet seats.

The fall of Christian Democratic Premier Giulio Andreotti's cabinet was the 40th Italian government crisis in 36 years. But what made the present crisis particularly acute was the fact that, for the first time since 1947, the powerful Communists were demanding cabinet seats.

It was that demand which toppled Andreotti's government Wednesday after the Communists withdrew their parliamentary support of the latest Christian Democratic cabinet that had governed uneasily since last March.

White Pertini summoned politicians to the Quirinale Palace to begin his search for a new premier-designate, the Christian Democratic Party leadership met Thursday and reiterated its firm opposition to sharing power with the Communists.

Politicians said the government crisis could be solved in only one of two ways.

British strikes spread to hospitals

LONDON (UPI) — England's public service unions struck the country's largest children's hospital for eight hours Thursday and disruptions spread to other hospitals in major cities as workers stepped up their drive to undermine the government's anti-inflation pay curbs.

The strike of porters and catering staff at London's Great Ormond Street Children's Hospital forced all but emergency cases to be turned away and was made in defiance of an agreement to spare children the dangers of the industrial crisis that has engulfed Britain.

Conway Xavier, 21, a porter and union official who ordered the walkout, said, "The pickets are not out to hurt the sick children, merely to intensify our claim for more money."

Prime Minister James Callaghan appealed to the striking hospital workers to get back on the job. "It is not acceptable in any community that sick human beings, whether adults or children, should have their food denied them and proper attention forbidden to them," he told Parliament.

Despite Callaghan's appeal, the union ordered a seven-day, all-out strike starting this morning at a hospital that serves large parts of central London and the city's East End.

The public service unions, which represent about 1.5 million lower-paid workers, are demanding pay increases of about 45 percent, with a minimum wage of $120 a week.

Callaghan has sought to limit pay boosts to 5 percent — 8 percent at most for the lowest-paid workers.

Re-education aim for Cambodians

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Cambodia's new rulers announced Thursday the opening of the first Vietnam-style "re-education center" for officials of the deposed regime of Premier Pol Pot.

The news agency of the pro-Franco Cambodian government said 100 former Khmer Rouge officials were enrolled in a re-education center in Svay Rieng province on the Vietnamese border and predicted that at the completion of a "short course" the former officials would be "completely free of their reactionary nature."

Meanwhile, the Khmer Rouge continued to claim battlefield victories while official Hanoi and Phnom Penh news-media insisted their forces controlled Cambodia unopposed.

A Khmer Rouge broadcast originating in Bangkok claimed forces loyal to Pol Pot had smashed a convoy of tanks and trucks as it tried to drive from Battambang to Banteay Chmar.

Narrow winner Blick takes GOP reins

County GOP Chairman Benny Blick

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD Benny Blick of Castleford has taken the reins of the 35-year-old business as he has just been named to head the Republican Party in Twin Falls County.

Blick was named party chairman over Elaine Phillips of Twin Falls by a one vote margin last week and he cites this as an example of the high amount of interest in the Republican party in this county.

"I have never before seen a meeting in which every precinct committeeman or committeewoman was represented either in person or by proxy," Blick said of the election meeting.

"Elaine would have made a good chairman, too, and I plan to utilize her talent and energy in the coming year," he said.

Mrs. Phillips is now vice chairman. Blick said it was not a race between a male candidate and a female candidate, but rather two Republicans who were willing to take on the responsibility of the chairmanship and devote the necessary time and effort to do the best job possible. It was a good contest and certainly stimulated interest among our party members.

"I go by the theory 'if you don't vote, don't complain' and it is usually the non-voter who complains the most about who is elected and how the office is being run," Blick said of his election theories.

"He also believes in the personal aspect of politics and says the Twin Falls Republican Central Committee efforts in the last election in the way of telephone and door to door contacts with voters paid off.

"Blick says he considers himself a conservative and during national meetings with young Republicans he has rubbed shoulders with young men and women from eastern metropolitan areas who were more liberal than most Idaho Democrats.

"I suppose location has a lot to do with the definition of a liberal or a conservative politician," Blick says.

The new GOP leader said he favors election law reform which would put more power back in the hands of the public, especially in the choice of candidates.

"When the party has a chance to select candidates, it eliminates the cross-over in primary elections and gives parties individuals they can whole heartedly support," Blick said.

Blick was born in Castleford and, as he says, has never been away from home except for five years in college and three years in the U.S. Army. He was discharged as a captain, spent one-and-a-half years in Vietnam with the 103rd Reconnaissance Airlift Company. He earned the Air Medal and three oak leaf clusters and the Bronze Star.

After he returned from the service, Blick became active in the Young Republicans. He served as county vice chairman, chairman, and then chairman of Region 6 in Idaho. He became state chairman in 1974 and '75 and was then named co-chairman of the three-state region of Idaho, Oregon and Washington, on the national Young Republican organization.

Blick has been a precinct committeeman since 1973 and was elected central committee vice chairman in 1977.

"He said he wants to maintain a strong county organization and build membership.

His party now holds every elected office in Twin Falls County including legislative seats, which Blick says just about takes care of any plans he might have to improve the GOP picture at this time. But he said he plans to maintain the good record of his predecessor, Laird Niek.

Blick is involved in the family business which includes the Blick and Heese Produce, Blick Seed Co. and Blick Trucking Shop. He works closely in the trucking phase, but says he has the blessing of the rest of the family who are willing to help free him when his Republican duties call. His father, George Blick, is a veteran Idaho legislator.

Widow of slain man sues Jerome officers

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

BOISE — The wife of a man shot to death by a policeman during a scuffle outside a Jerome bar has filed a $2.6 million lawsuit in U.S. District Court here against the two city policemen involved.

Penile E. Dilka is suing officers D.R. "Dick" Haynes and Andrew Hines over the fatal shooting of her late husband, Orlan Ray Dilka, outside the Northern Tavern on April 2, 1978.

According to the court records, Mrs. Dilka claims the officers acted in a "wrongful, unjustified and malicious" manner.

In the lawsuit, Mrs. Dilka is seeking $750,000 in damages to herself, $500,000 apiece for her two boys, $750,000 for the dead man's estate and $100,000 in punitive damages.

She claims the shooting violated her rights and those of her husband, who was unarmed, and was "totally without justification." Mrs. Dilka is being represented by Boise lawyer Donald W. Lolek.

The victim was shot and killed about 10:15 p.m. the night of the shooting by Haynes. An independent investigation by the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement cleared Haynes and city officials said Haynes acted in self-defense.

However, the report of an investigation by state criminal investigator Ed Robinson and Jerome County Coroner Dr. Lauren Neher were not released to the public, Jerome County Prosecutor Gene Fredrickson said. The information was not released at the request of Mrs. Dilka, who didn't want to upset further her two sons, Jason Dilka, 3, and John Omohundro, 8.

Police Chief Howard DuBois said Haynes shot Dilka, 35, after Dilka used his thumb to try and gouge out the policeman's eyes while the two were on the ground fighting. Dilka was on top of Haynes at the time of the shooting, he said. Dilka was shot twice, once in the chest.

Robinson has said Haynes and Hines had stopped at the tavern to quell a possible disturbance from a crowd outside and attempted to arrest Dilka.

Dilka attacked Haynes, who suffered facial cuts and bruises and eye damage, including a tear in one cornea, city officials said.

Patrolman Hines was outside the tavern trying to pull Dilka off Haynes but was interfered with by the crowd, DuBois said last year. He said the officer was jerked away when he reached for Dilka.

City Attorney Robert Williams said during the investigation that a witness said Dilka had been smoking hashish shortly before the shooting and had drunk an unknown number of beers.

Lolek said Thursday the suit against the officers does not mean the City of Jerome will not be sued over the shooting, but it will be a while before that decision is made.

Mrs. Dilka's lawyer explained the suit against the two policemen is based on Section 42-1983 of the U.S. Code that prevents someone's civil rights from being violated "under color of state law." The ultimate civil right of life was violated by the fatal shooting, he said.

Lolek added the statute dates back to the Civil War. It was passed to deter groups like the Ku Klux Klan, police and sheriff's offices from violating the rights of black people.

16¢ per lb. sugar 'acceptable'

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho sugar beet growers can make an acceptable profit with a 16-cent sugar price, Amalgamated Sugar Co. manager Ralph Burton said Thursday.

Burton told a meeting of Magic Valley beet growers in Twin Falls that a Congressional sugar-price bill is "the only recourse right now."

After the speech, he said a 16-cent sugar bill would give growers "sufficient profit" to justify growing beets.

President Carter has insisted the government should not support sugar above its current price of 45 cents. However, Idaho congressional delegates have thrown their support behind a bill, similar to the former Sugar Act which used import quotas to control prices, that would hold sugar at 17 cents.

Congress is expected to pass sugar legislation early in the current session.

Burton told the growers the price should be maintained by import limits on foreign sugar.

He also quelled a rumor that Amalgamated will convert its Twin Falls processing plant into a corn sweetener factory.

"There's been speculation we're going to convert," Burton said. But the manager said not enough corn is grown in this area to supply a corn processing plant.

Burton allayed growers' fears that corn sweetener will damage sugar sales.

He acknowledged that the corn sweetener industry, which competes with sugar as a sweetener, has made a 10 percent inroad into sugar dollars in the past decade. But he said corn sweetener is stymied by refining and shipping problems.

"They're operating at a bigger loss than we are," he said.

Burton told the growers Amalgamated is financially healthy, despite running at a loss for the first three quarters of 1978. However, he warned, "like you, we can't go on indefinitely losing money."

Amalgamated Manager Ralph Burton

Challis panel named

CHALLIS — Challis ranchers and range managers have been picked to try the nation's first experimental range "co-op," Director of Land Management Bureau Frank Gregg said Thursday.

The 350,000 trouble-ridden grazing area was selected by the BLM to try to work out a range plan among cattlemen, agency officials and environmentalists. The stewardship committee, composed of BLM, U.S. Forest Service, Idaho Fish and Game Department representatives, as well as Challis ranchers and other range interests, will meet for the first time Tuesday to begin developing grazing allotments and rehabilitation programs for the Challis area.

This spring the BLM plans to institute a stringent management plan at Challis, but those who worked to put the stewardship program together hope the committee will have input in carrying out BLM plans.

In designating the Challis committee, Gregg told local officials, "There has been a lot of interest in the stewardship program in groups all over the West. However, all hands agree Challis will be first because of Sen. (Frank) Church's leadership."

Gregg said the stewardship committee will "improve cooperation" between public land agencies and private users, and "as time goes on, it can be used to modify programs on public lands as more information becomes available."

Frank Lundberg, agriculture aide to Gov. John Evans, said the designation shows "we have a spirit of cooperation among the various interests involved in range management."

Commodities bill would outlaw contracts during negotiations

BOISE — Idaho's largest potato growers organization is promoting legislation that would set guidelines for contract negotiations between growers and processing companies.

The Agricultural Fair Trading Practices Act, proposed by Potato Growers of Idaho and being drafted by Rep. Darwin Young, R-Blackfoot, would provide legal recourse to negotiating parties who feel they have been discriminated against or coerced in bargaining.

Provisions of the bill, which applies to all commodities, include the following:

- Buyers would be prohibited from basing their price or contract offers on the fact that a grower is a member of a marketing organization.
- Buyers would be prohibited from coercing or bribing a grower not to participate in a marketing organization.

Non-members wouldn't be allowed to peg a contract or sale price on the price of a negotiable marketing organization.

Negotiating parties would be prohibited from revising prices after a contract is signed, on the basis of the terms of another contract.

The Fair Trade Act would make negotiations between processors and marketing groups "more meaningful," according to PGI President Alan Wood.

PGI's interest in the bill, Wood explained, stems from a 1978 lawsuit which the group filed against the Ore-Ida Co., a division of Heinz Co. PGI is suing Ore-Ida for allegedly offering contracts to non-PGI growers after two sessions of contract talks failed to produce an agreement.

PGI General Manager Gerald Murphy said the bill has been endorsed by the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation.

Young, who is a member of PGI, said he has sent copies of the draft bill to processors for their comments.

Murphy said the bill will supplement national trade legislation which he called "weak." Murphy just returned from Washington, where he is lobbying for a new, tougher national trade bill.

Young's bill designates the director of the State Department of Agriculture as arbiter in disputes covered by the act, and gives the director recourse to civil action in the case of violations. But he must be directed to action by a five-member, governor-appointed citizens panel.

Burglar robs bar

TWIN FALLS — A burglar entered the Windbreak Bar on Kimberly Road in Twin Falls early Thursday morning and made off with more than $1,500 in cash.

Twin Falls Police Chief Tim Qualls said Thursday the Windbreak was entered by a person whose identity is not yet known sometime between 2 a.m. and 6:40 a.m. Thursday.

The theft was discovered by a janitor at 6:40 a.m., and Warren Thorne, part owner of the bar, notified police shortly thereafter.

Qualls said between $1,500 and $2,000 was reported

Creek study funded

TWIN FALLS — A water quality study of Rock Creek has received a $3,050 grant from the State Department of Health and Welfare through a research grant program at Idaho State University, according to President Myron L. Coulter of ISU.

The award was given by DHW to continue the study under the direction of Dr. Robert C. Anderson, chairman of the biology department.

In the valley

BLM hearing Feb. 27
SHOSHONE — The Bureau of Land Management will hold a workshop Feb. 27 to discuss the inclusion of Black Butte crater area north of Shoshone as a special wilderness area.

The meeting will be held in the Lincoln County Courthouse at 7 p.m. and is to allow the public to ask questions about the decision to study the area as a wilderness area.

The Black Butte crater area was recommended for further study by Shoshone District state BLM officials after two Oregon men filed several mining claims on the lava rock around the butte.

The crater area has been a favorite of rock hunters for several years and in the past few years, the BLM operated a community pit from which the rock could be taken.

'Pickupcade' planned

BUHL — A "pickupcade" of farmers who are part of the American Agriculture Movement will broadcast its message of farm protest through the Magic Valley Feb. 6.

The pickupcade, a procession of pickups bearing protest signs, will drive from Buhl, to Filer, Twin Falls, Kimberly, Hansen, Jerome, Shoshone, Gooding, Wendell, Bliss and Hagerman.

The group, which is calling for revised price parity and an end to commodities trading and foreign agricultural imports, will form in Buhl at 9:30 a.m.

missing from a money box in the bar, and the burglar alarm did not go off when the bar was entered.

No other damage or theft was reported.

Qualls said the police department is investigating leads in the case.

Committee refuses to push speed limit bill

BOISE (UPI) — Fearful of losing federal highway construction dollars, the Senate committee refused to introduce Thursday a bill increasing the maximum speed limit in Idaho to 65 mph from 55.

State transportation chief Darrell Manning told the Transportation Committee he didn't feel Idaho should change federal government inaction, which would withhold $40 million for the remainder of this year and $63 million each of the next few years if Idaho boosted its speed limit from 55 mph.

Manning said South Dakota learned the hard way when it did not comply with federal compliance of sign laws. "Frankly, I'm not willing to take a chance the feds will not act," Manning said.

Manning said loss of the funds would destroy Idaho's transportation system and "to destroy our transportation system is to destroy the economy of the state. If this happens, he said, "We are Idaho Appalachia."

Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, brought the bill to the committee, saying it was time to "make legal what people are doing anyway." He said it hasn't saved that many lives of that much energy.

Watkins noted that it was costing $1.3 million to save a single life.

Kelly Pearce, Idaho law enforcement director, said: "Life is the most valuable thing on earth. Anything we can do to save a life we should do."

Afterward, Chairman John Sessions, R-Driggs, of the House Transportation Committee, said he felt the issue of a higher speed limit was dead.

Meanwhile, the House got its first chance to cut government in the name of the 1 percent initiative and rejected it 28-0. The bill in question would have done away with the executive office of the State Board of Education.

Proponents of a professional staff to advise the board, which is composed of laymen, convinced the House to kill the bill.

In the Senate, a move to return Idaho to biennial legislative sessions, also failed. In fact, the proposed constitutional amendment — which required a two-thirds majority to pass — didn't even get a simple majority. It went down 17-18.

Elsewhere on the legislative scene:

House lawmakers agreed to introduce a revised version of a bill to limit state spending increases to 7 percent more than the previous year's general fund budget. It now contains a farm exemption for commodity commissions.

Idaho's chief state school officer put before the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee a proposal to finance schools under the 1 percent initiative, which includes phasing in the initiative over a two-year period, freezing taxes at 1978 levels and uniformly assessing all property at 1978 market levels.

After several senators said they wanted to give their pay hike back to the state or to charity, Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-St. Maries, said he was drafting legislation to allow those who didn't want the increase to return it to the state.

On this, the 25th legislative day, the Senate passed its first bill. The House-initiated measure, approved 25-10, transfers funds this fiscal year to the Tax Commission to provide for more audits.

The House Resources and Conservation Committee held until Monday for amendment a proposal giving the Water Resource Board authority to inventory potential reservoir sites. Rep. Lyman G. Winchester, R-Kuna, and others expressed concern about limitations on private property.

Gov. John V. Evans said he will forward to the Legislature four pieces of legislation which deal with fish and wildlife issues, culminating the 2½ year Wildlife Tomorrow study program.

The House State Affairs Committee sent to the floor with approval a bill calling for a feasibility study on establishing a women's prison at State Hospital North in Orofino.

Some refuse increase

Legislation aimed at pay hike

BOISE (UPI) — After several senators said they wanted to give their pay hike back to the state or to charity, Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase said Thursday he was drafting legislation to allow those who didn't want the increase to return it to the state.

"It's a vehicle for you people who get too much so you can return it to the state," Chase said.

Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, touched off the pay question on the floor when he said he voted against the raise in salary and if he wasn't able to return it to the state he would give it to a charitable organization.

"We can't ask school districts to cut down. We need to set an example," Sen. Walter Yarbrough, R-Grand View, said he felt the same way.

"We couldn't in good conscience sit in the Joint Committee and ask agencies to take a cut and receive a raise in our salaries," Yarbrough said. "I'll not return it to the state."

want charitable organizations to contact me."

Sen. Ken Robinson, D-Boise, said he had talked with the line auditor and was advised that these lawmakers who wanted the state to keep the raise could do so.

Chase also noted that Senate President Pro-Tem Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, had submitted the payroll to the state auditor Jan. 22 with the pay increase included and "must" have figured it would be allowed.

next year as decided by the Legislature.

To solve the problems the 1 percent initiative created, I think this bill will do the job," Mrs. Ungricht told the Revenue and Taxation Committee.

But Rep. Michael Gwartzney, R-Boise, asked what would happen should there be a big increase in state population at a time when the lawmakers are looking to more and more state financing of public schools.

Rep. James Ries, D-Grangeville, also expressed concern about putting on a lid should there be a large population expansion in Idaho. And, he asked, "What happens if we do have tremendous growth in the state and personal income declines?"

Mrs. Ungricht said the proposal, if approved, would not become effective until 1981 — thereby giving the Legislature time to appropriate monies to establish a base from which to work.

She added that the emergency clause feature also would enable the Legislature to meet special situations.

"We've reached a point where the people are saying 'stop,'" she said. "Let's keep the base for expansion down."

Veteran Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont, said the Legislature has been providing a lot of tax relief and "I don't see the need for this at this time."

Rep. Wayne Tibbitts, R-Lorenzo, who seconded the motion to introduce the measure, said he personally felt the 7 percent lid was "pretty liberal." Compounded over a 12-year period, he said, even that limitation would allow state spending to double.

Taxwriters back Ungricht's revised spending amendment

By RICHARD CHARNOCK

BOISE (UPI) — After writing in a standard exemption, Rep. Wendy Ungricht, R-Boise, talked fellow House taxwriters Thursday into introducing a constitutional proposal to put a lid on state spending.

Mrs. Ungricht's proposal now would apply only to general fund expenditures and not to all state expenditures as originally drafted. Rep. Edwin Young, R-Blackfoot, and others objected to the initial draft on grounds it would strap commodity commissions in their ability to advertise bumper crops.

As now written, the proposed amendment to the Idaho Constitution excludes all dedicated funds — such as the highway user fund as well as commodity commission funds of self-governing agencies.

Ungricht said she was willing to go along with those who feared clamping down on commodity commissions, Mrs. Ungricht said she did feel that dedicated funds "should be included in some way."

If put on the ballot by the Legislature, the proposal would come up for a vote of the people in the November 1980 general election. If the people then okayed it the measure would affect state budgets beginning in 1981.

The proposal would limit increases in general fund spending by the state to no more than 7 percent from the previous year's budget or the average in gross per capita income for three years — whichever is lower.

It also would require the state to pay for programs it mandates at the local level.

For times of emergency, the proposal would allow the Legislature to exceed the limitation if the governor declared an emergency and two-thirds of the membership of each House concurred.

Should revenues exceed the 7 percent limitation they could not be spent but would have to be returned to the people in the form of tax relief.

Milar seeks better flood control measures

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Manager Jean Milar has asked the Twin Falls Canal Co. to take precautionary measures to prevent a recurrence of the flooding which occurred last month in the city of Twin Falls.

In a letter to the canal company, Milar said, improved flood control measures throughout the company's irrigation system could help greatly in averting another flood in the city of Twin Falls.

Milar said he has no authority to require the company to take the needed precautions, but he is requesting the company's cooperation in preventing future floods.

After receiving Milar's letter, canal company manager Clifford Montgomery commented, "There's some things there that could probably be done."

But, he added, all the solutions suggested by Milar could cost the company money.

"I'll bring it up in front of the board and we'll kick it around here and see what we can do and how far we can go," he said.

The canal company board of directors meets Feb. 6.

Milar explained to the Times-News how water flowing through the canal system swelled flood waters within the Twin Falls city limits and how that condition can be avoided in the future.

He said the company's irrigation system makes use of natural drainways to distribute water. Laterals divert water from the drainways to ridgelines for further distribution to fields.

But under the conditions experienced during the flooding last month, when the ground was frozen and unable to absorb water, water was transferred via laterals from natural drainways with plentiful company to look for and remove modifications to the irrigation system which could cause flooding.

He also suggested an alternative, the construction of by-pass facilities from laterals back to natural drainages at critical points.

He also said natural drainages should be kept as free as possible of debris to maintain free flow.

Accumulated debris also caused the flooding of the Ferrine Coulee at the Blue Lakes Shopping Center, Milar said.

He said a trash rack near the entrance to a pipe on the coulee became plugged with debris during the heavy runoff and caused the flooding at the shopping center.

He said removal of that trash rack and others at the end of the irrigation season could reduce the chance of flooding. Milar also suggested that spillways from the major canals in the system could help avert flooding such as occurred near Dault.

He noted that the major canals serve as surface runoff interceptors during high rainfall, and the canals quickly fill with water.

The canals are designed for irrigation. The further from the source of the canal, the lower the irrigation flows and the smaller the canal.

But during floods, the situation is reversed. The further down the canal, the greater the flows become, until the flow eventually exceeds the capacity of the canal.

"I don't think they had any flood control in mind when they did this (designed the system)," Milar observed.

Snow depths measured

HAILEY — Monthly snow depth and water content measurements were taken Tuesday at 16 locations in Blaine and Custer counties by the Soil Conservation Service, showing amounts at about half of normal for this time of year.

District conservationist Gale Roberts said the Big Wood River courses are running 48 percent of normal, the Little Wood River sites are 41 percent of normal while the Lost River courses measured 50 percent. "Snow depths ran from a high of 50 inches at the Vienna Mine to a low of 11 inches at the Copper Basin course," Roberts said. Measurements are taken at 8 locations in both Blaine and Custer counties from January through July.

Roberts said the SCS will prepare its annual stream flow prediction from next month's readings.

Although snowfall and precipitation amounts are down considerably from last year, current conditions seem better when compared to the dry winter two years ago. Then amounts were running 6 to 8 percent of normal at this time of year, the lowest since measurements were first taken in 1936.

Of the 16 snow courses measured by the Halley SCS crew, 19 of them required the use of a helicopter in order to gain access to the locations.

Board updates manual

FILER — Trustees of School District 413 in Filer examined and updated the school board manual at a special meeting at the school held recently, according to Ray Baker, superintendent.

Among changes made was the ruling to change the bylaws, and in the future any proposed changes will be read at a board meeting but not voted upon until the following meeting.

Among other business Mrs. Henry Lemke was given permission to hold home economic adult education classes in the high school. Also, a letter was composed to be sent to Dick Stukle, executive secretary of the Idaho High School Association, suggesting state competition for sports, especially girls, be held either in more centrally located places or made on a rotating basis, due to difficulty in attending them in some of the more remote places.

Benefit music revue slated

JEROME — The Third and Fifth Dimension, a Jerome entertainment group, will present a benefit music revue Friday night in Jerome and Saturday night in Wendell at 8:15.

Directed by Karen Dalton of Jerome and accompanied by Diane Bingham of Jerome, the production includes comedy and light song and dance routines performed by a cast of 10 local people.

Friday's performance will be in the Jerome LDS Stakehouse and Saturday's show is set for the Wendell LDS Church building.

Admission is by donation at the door. All proceeds will be donated to the Jerome Stake building fund.

Scabies quarantine lifted

GOODING — Cattle dipping for scabies at a Gooding feedlot has been completed and the quarantine placed on 7,300 cattle there lifted, the State Department of Agriculture said today.

Director Wilson Kellogg said 15,100 dipplings were made and that 6,800 animals received two treatments.

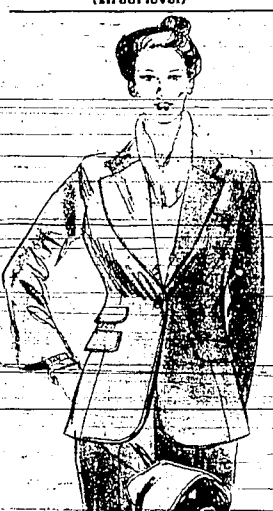

The quarantine was enforced Dec. 18, according to state veterinarian Dr. Leo Schneider, after the Agriculture Department learned the Kyle Cheney Feedlot in Gooding had bought cattle from a lot in Mackay which was under a scabies quarantine.

The San Felipe lot in Mackay was quarantined Dec. 1 when cattle there caught the highly contagious disease from a Texas-bought cow.

Scabies is caused by tiny parasitic mites which puncture the skin of animals and feed on body fluids released from the wounds. The disorder causes economic losses to cattlemen but does not affect the wholesomeness of meat.

Everyone seems to get the same feeling with a lack of love; does garlic's use stem from self-defense?

—There is no known language wherein the word for "could" does not also mean "unaffectionate."

Most of the women in all of history's so-called civilized societies reputedly have been afraid of mice.

The kitchen mechanics who like garlic must be multiplying. Twice as much garlic is used these days as was used 10 years ago.

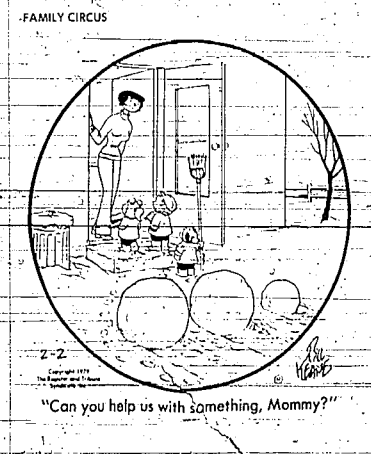

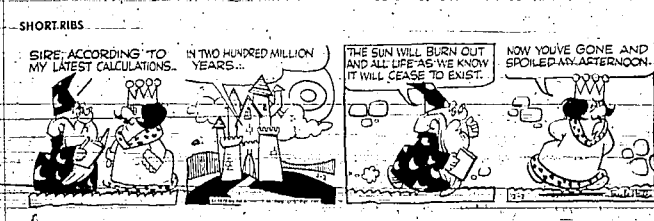

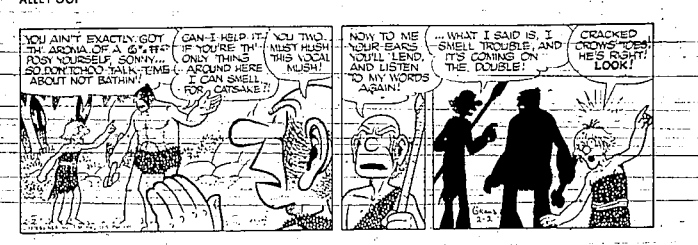

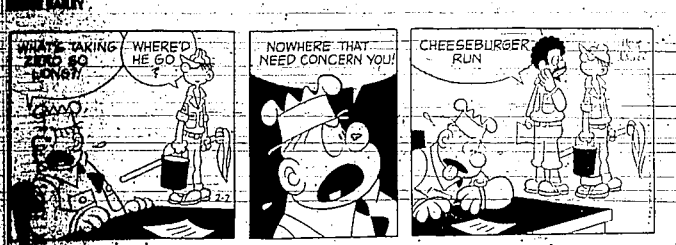

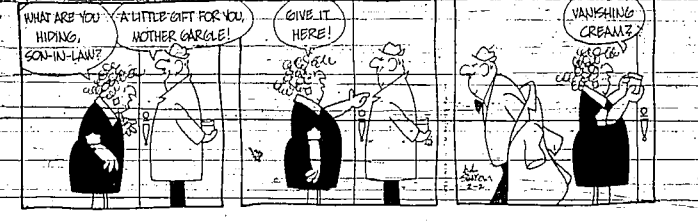

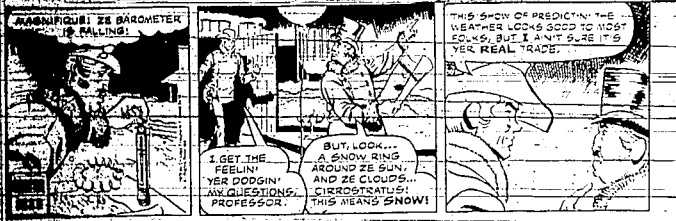

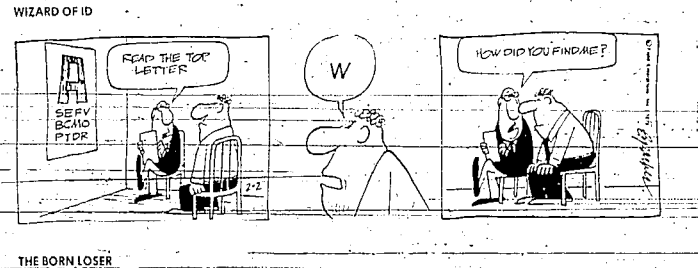

The medical statisticians contend their most recent studies indicate that people who take tranquilizers are 10 times more likely to wreck their cars than people who don't.

Q. "Ask your Love and War man how he accounts for the fact that the first year of marriage is the most dangerous?"
A. That's when couples with the least experience face the most problems, he says.
Q. "Can men who live in the desert learn to smell water?"
A. Either that or things associated with water, yes. In the records are a number of accounts of lost men who followed their noses to wells, springs, creeks, whatever.
Q. "How many snowbirds go South in the winter?"
A. Take it you mean the carefree unemployed once known as hoboes, tramps or bums. About 50,000, according to the mission managers in the sunbelt cities.
Q. "Haven't all types of circus acts originated in Europe?"
A. Almost all types. But not the clowns. They're the big American contribution.

SLEEPING BIRDS
Many is the bird that sleeps with its bill tucked under the feathers at the shoulder of its wing. This has led observers to claim that birds sleep with their heads under their wings, which isn't the case. What is the case, though, is the birds that sleep in this bill-tucked-under-feathers position almost invariably assume the posture with their heads turned to the left.

Boise State stuns Weber

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — Sean McKenna scored 20 points and Carl Powell added 17 when Boise State upset 19th-ranked Weber State, 70-63, in a Big Sky Conference game Thursday night.

Weber fell to 7-1 in the conference and 19 overall, while Boise moved up to 10-5.

Weber led by as much as 11 points early in the second half but then fell victim to costly turnovers and a tight Boise defense. The Broncos capitalized on nine second half Wildcat turnovers and Powell poured in 10 straight points in the final minutes to clinch the win.

Richard Smith had 15 points for the Wildcats and Todd Harper had 14.

Michigan St. bumps Buckeyes

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Earvin Johnson scored 23 points, including six in overtime Thursday night, to lead 13th-ranked Michigan State to an 84-79 upset over seventh-ranked Ohio State.

It was the Buckeyes' first defeat in Big Ten action this season, and the victory kept alive Michigan State's hopes for a post-season tournament bid with a 5-4 record in conference play and 12-4 overall.

Gregory Kelsor added 20 points and Jay Vincent chipped in 19 for Michigan State, which led 34-27 at the half but found itself fighting an Otto State rally in the second half.

The game went into overtime when Ohio State junior forward Jim Edighughan scored two free throws with 28 seconds remaining to tie the game, 61-61, in regulation.

Junior guard Kelvin Ransey led Ohio State, 13-5 overall and 8-1 in the conference, with 25 points, while sophomore center Herb Williams added 18, all but two of them in the second half.

Indiana topples Michigan

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Mike Woodson scored 23 points and freshman center Landon Turner added 21 Thursday night to lead Indiana to a 68-62 Big Ten victory over Michigan.

The Hoosiers, 4-5 in league play, broke the final tie at 21-21 midway through the first half, ran off 10 straight points for a 30-point lead and stayed ahead for the 12th victory overall against nine losses.

Indiana hit seven of its first eight shots to open the second half for a 51-35 lead, its biggest, with 15 minutes left to play before the Wolverines struck back.

Led by Mike McGee's 19 points, 12 of them in the second half, Michigan four times narrowed the margin to six points but got no closer. Phil Hibbard had 13 points for Michigan.

N. Arizona edges Idaho St.

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (UPI) — Troy Hudson hit a jumper to send the game into overtime and then made the shot that gave Northern Arizona a 76-75 Big Sky Conference victory over Idaho State Thursday night.

Hudson's 18-foot shot from the corner tied the game 70-70 with two seconds left in regulation play. Hudson then put the Aztecs ahead 72-70 early in the overtime period and also had the game's final basket with 35 seconds remaining.

Idaho State ran down the clock and after a jump ball with five seconds left, Brand Robertson missed a 25-foot shot that would have given the Bengals the victory.

Hudson paced NAU with 25 points, Larry Johnson added 18 and Mike Evans 14.

Lawrence Butler was Idaho State's only scorer in double figures, hitting 37 points.

Iowa downs Wisconsin 70-64

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Guard Ronnie Lester scored 23 points, including 20 in the second half, to spark Iowa to a 70-64 victory over Wisconsin in a Big Ten game Thursday night.

The victory gave the second-place

Hawkeyes a 7-2 Big Ten record and 14-4 overall. Wisconsin, which has lost five straight, dropped to 2-7 in the Big Ten and 8-10 overall.

Iowa took a 28-25 halftime lead and led by as many as 11 points several times in the second half.

Utah State posts win

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — Utah State University used a tenacious man-to-man defense to upset previously unbeaten Col. State, 69-59, in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association game Thursday night.

The Titans are still in first place in the PCAA with a 7-1 record, but the Aggies strengthened their grip on second at 6-2. Fullerton will have its chance for revenge next week when the teams meet again.

Reserve freshman Leo Cunningham gave USU a big push late in the first half. Playing only 10 minutes of the game, Cunningham scored 10 points, grabbed eight rebounds and blocked five shots. When Cunningham came into the game the Aggies led by one point. By halftime they had a comfortable 47-39 lead.

Three USU players were in double figures. Dean Hunsger had 24 points, Keith McDonald had 21 and Brian Jackson had 14.

Fullerton's Calvin Roberts led all scorers with 29 points and teammate Keith Anderson had 14.

Stuart eighth graders win

RUPERT — Robert Stuart stormed past Jerome 61-59 Thursday to claim the championship in the season-opening eighth-grade invitational basketball tournament.

Coach Gary Barker saw Brock Miller and Oscar Salinas split 18 points while Ken Tuma added nine more for the winners. Davis paced Jerome with 12 points.

West Minico defeated East Minico for consolation honors.

The teams now head into the regular season, under the junior, high school four sport season plan.

An unhappy predicament

Caught in the eradic, Twin Falls' Mike Osborne tries to extricate himself from the predicament he was placed in by Meridian's Lloyd Hoyd. Hoyd went on to claim the victory and Meridian swept to a 57-6 team decision in the dual match Thursday night. (See story page B-7.)

Three share Crosby meet lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Young Jay Haas, embraced a week ago when he failed to make the cut as defending champion in the San Diego Open, opened with a 4-under-par 68 at Pebble Beach Thursday to tie the Graham Marsh and Mike McCullough for the first-round lead in the $300,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

Haas said Pebble Beach proved no problem at all because the wind never blew. Ordinarily, the famed links is one of the toughest courses in the world on which to shoot a low score.

Marsh and McCullough played the easier Cypress Point layout, like Pebble a seaside course, to forge a three-way tie for the lead.

—Marc McEntor and Gil Morgan shot 69 at Pebble and Bobby Nichols matched it at Cypress to tie a shot off the lead and another shot ahead of nine players, including Bob Hope Desert Classic winner and PGA champ John Mahaffey.

Phoenix Open winner Ben Crenshaw was in a large group tied at 71 while Fuzzy Zoeller, who scored his initial Tour victory at San Diego Sunday, was in an equally large group tied at 72. Crenshaw played Cypress and Zoeller started at Pebble.

Tom Watson, winner of the last two Croshys, shot 72 at Cypress Point North while U.S. Open champion Andy North had a 73 and Arnold Palmer, playing with former President Gerald Ford, a 74 on the same course.

—Luce Trevino, who finished only a stroke behind Mahaffey in the Hope, started with a 75 at Pebble.

—Simpkins Hill, the toughest of the three Crosby courses, once again proved difficult to score on. The best scores there were 75 by Lon Binkle and Peter Jacobson.

Haas, who finished second by a stroke to Crenshaw in the Phoenix Open, had five birdies and a bogey for his 68 and said he was surprised at how easy Pebble played.

—"I thought it might be a lot wetter than it was," Haas said of the course, which was soaked by two days of rain.

McCullough had seven birdies and three bogeys while Marsh had five birdies and one bogey.

CSI girls schedule two games on weekend

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's frosh-laden girls team will take on two opponents this weekend and hope the home court advantage will help the record.

Coach Lloyd Hardesty and his Eagles will meet Northwest Nazarene at 7 p.m. Friday and entertain Mountain Home at 8 p.m. Saturday. The ladies' preceding the men's regional battle with North Idaho JC.

The Eagles return home with a 1-4 record but Coach Hardesty, in his first year at the helm, believes his Eagles will improve on that record.

"We're getting better every game," the coach says. "We've been battling juniors and seniors and that's hard to do with freshmen and then we've been at a considerable height advantage in every game."

Hardesty took the assignment in October after Bob Wright had resigned the position last spring.

Because of that, CSI got "very little recruiting done."

"If I had had any idea that I was going to wind up with the job I would have had a couple of tall girls in here. I know one from Wyoming, she's about 6-5, that I feel certain we could have had because I've known her and her family for a long time. But it's not going to happen '68's next season," the coach promises.

The Eagles have just two sophomores on the team and one of those in the club — in just about every position. She's Polly Smith, a Hawaii product, who was the team's leading scorer last year. This season, Smith is averaging 10 rebounds and over 20 points per game.

It will be CSI's second year at Northwest Nazarene, the Crusaders having topped CSI 62-56 last week. "Actually, the score of that game was 65-60 — they hit two free throws. It was over," Hardesty says. "We have a good chance of beating them. Up there we led them most of the time, never by much, but we were ahead a lot."

The coach said the one impression he and his team have of the Nazarenes thus far is roughness. "The officials really have let the teams hammer each other and because of that we've had experience that works in our favor."

The goals for the year's regional tour, similar to that of the boys, CSI must defeat TVCC and Ricks to get into the regional tournament, which again this season is scheduled for the Montana-Wyoming district.

McEnroe easily gains tennis quarter-final

RICHMOND (UPI) — John McEnroe easily won a quarter-final berth in the Richmond World Championship of Tennis tournament with a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Dean Joubert Thursday night.

McEnroe will play sixth seeded Ilie Nastase in the quarterfinals. Nastase defeated Jose-Figueroa in an earlier second-round match Thursday night, 6-4, 2-6, 6-2.

In another night match, eighth-seeded Arthur Ashe was to meet Ross Case.

McEnroe, the tournament's No. 1 seed, fell behind the unheralded player 0-2 in the first set, but won 12 of the next 13 games, including 11 in a row, for the victory.

The only other game Joubert managed to salvage was the sixth game of the second set when he held service. But McEnroe, the 19-year-old star who won the Davis Cup for the United States recently, held his own service for the match.

Bradshaw doubts he'll ever be NFL's best

NEW YORK (UPI) — There may be many people who think otherwise, but Terry Bradshaw argues that he is not, never was and may never be the best quarterback in the National Football League.

Bradshaw, who led the Pittsburgh Steelers to their Super Bowl XIII victory over the Dallas Cowboys on Jan. 21, came to New York Thursday with his wife, figure skater Jo Jo Starbuck, to accept a new car and silver football trophy from Sport Magazine as the Super Bowl's Most Valuable Player.

The award capped a brilliant season for Bradshaw, his best in nine, often-troubled years with the Steelers. He became the first Steeler to win a conference passing title, then directed Pittsburgh to three electrifying playoff victories, climaxed by a Super Bowl record four-touchdown, 318-yard passing performance against the Cowboys.

But unlike Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson, the Cowboys' fast-talking linebacker, Bradshaw declines to seize the opportunity and promote himself.

"I've never been one to brag," said Bradshaw, a blond, blue-eyed country boy who is most comfortable at home on his Louisiana ranch. "I honestly don't feel I'm the best quarterback in the league. I think I'm good, but not the best. To me, consistency is the most important thing and this was my first consistent season. Maybe in '75 I was pretty consistent, too, but I'd like to string a few of these seasons together."

"Roger Staubach, Ken Stabler, Bert Jones, Bob Griese, they've been more consistent in their careers than me. And also, I've been fortunate by being on a great football team."

"In my mind, I've never been convinced I'm as good as I'm going to get. It's important for me never to believe I've arrived. To think I'm the best."

Bradshaw recalled the trying moments of what he termed the low point of his career, his benching in 1975 in favor of Joe Gilliam, who later led the NFL, because of a drug problem. Bradshaw attributed his great success this season to a more relaxed attitude that emphasized enjoyment more than winning.

"I learned a lot about humility when I was benched," said Bradshaw. "My ego was deflated. I realized maybe I wasn't so good after all and I realized how much I loved playing football. It had a tremendous affect on my life. When I got my job back and we went on to win the Super Bowl, my year it started my back, but it's been a long road."

"This year when I had bad games against the Browns and Cincinnati, I realized I was putting too much emphasis on winning and it made me too cautious. I was playing against San Francisco. I tried to relax and play the game easy to say but hard to do. My philosophy was to have fun, and I carried that into every game. You can't win if you're not having a good time, laughing, and enjoying it without worries. That works for me."

Bradshaw's wife agreed with Bradshaw about the mental gymnastics that spurred his return to the field.

"He's being sincere when he says he just tried to have a good time and have a good time," said Jo Jo. "I've just been his past few hundred pressure on himself, but he really wanted to win."

"Everyone eventually finds out what makes you the best. For some, it's the competitive aspect. For me, it's being the crowd-pleaser. I love the applause for him, it's having a good time with the guys."

Bradshaw stood outside the Plaza Hotel in 30-degree temperatures, posing for pictures with his wife and the 1979 Trans-Am auto. He planned a party to celebrate the win.

"I feel like a kid with a new toy. It's just so exciting. There's a heater in this thing. I think I'm going to the Bahamas."

Another problem for Bradshaw since Super Sunday is sleeping. The phone is constantly ringing with offers for commercials, albums, movies, and TV shows. Bradshaw said with so much on his mind, he can't get to bed at 1 a.m., tosses and turns, and wakes up at 5 a.m. "It's been hectic," he said.

Richfield gains A-4 finals

MURTAUGH — The Hansen Huskies, riding the 23-point scoring production of Kim Stanger, rolled past Castleford 65-29 and into the championship semi-finals of the fifth district A-4 girls basketball tournament Thursday night.

In earlier action, the Murtaugh Red Devils sent Raft River to the sidelines with a blazing fourth quarter and 94-43 decision.

The tournament will take Friday night off but resumes Saturday at the Murtaugh gymnasium. Castleford will play Murtaugh (for the fourth time in 10 days) in the 6:30 p.m. game and the loser will be done for the year.

The feature will pit Hansen against Hagerman in the semi-finals. They split their two regular season meetings. The winner of the semi-final will advance to the final Thursday night after the two teams in the loser bracket play Wednesday night.

Murtaugh and Raft River locked in an allright game throughout the first half but late in the third period Murtaugh inched into a four-point advantage.

Everything went Murtaugh's way in the final period as the Red Devils found a torrid shooting touch and poured in 21 points. That production came from seven different players with Jeanette Breeding and Stacy Perkins leading the way with five each.

Hansen took the shortest route possible to an early lead and victory over Castleford. The Huskies took the ball into Stanger in the middle and she relayed it on into the net. By the end of the first quarter Hansen was sitting atop a dominating 14-2 lead and Castleford managed just six points during the first half.

Meridian rips Bruins

TWIN FALLS — The Meridian Warriors won the first eight matches and rolled over the Twin Falls Bruins 57-6 in a dual-wrestling meet Thursday night.

The Warriors won seven of them by pins in piling up the huge lead. Twin Falls broke the shutout bid on decisions by Mike Snodgrass and Scott Holloway in the 158 and 170-pound classes.

Snodgrass' victory kept the matter of state 158 pounders well up in the air as he defeated SIC champion White Bleand; 148, Owens pinned by Weeks; 158, Snodgrass defeated White 2-0; 170, Holloway defeated Bleand 7-4; 188, Stanger pinned by Dempsey, and heavy-weight, Twin Falls forfeited to Dempsey.

Hansen advances to semi-final

HAILEY — The Richfield girls ousted Dietrich in a domybrook 33-32 Thursday night to sweep into the finals of the fourth district A-4 girls basketball tournament.

Earlier in the night, Carey turned in a similar job against Camas County, knocking the Mushers out of further contention with a 36-35 decision.

The tournament resumes at 8 p.m. Monday with Dietrich and Carey colliding for a chance at undefeated Richfield. The winner will play Richfield at 8 p.m. Wednesday and should Richfield lose that one, the extra session will be play at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Carey led almost all the way against Camas County but never by much. The Panthers were down one after one quarter but led by five on the next two tests. Camas County continually pulled the deficit down to one point over the last few minutes but Carey as continuously shoved it back up to three. There was no scoring in the last several seconds.

Richfield and Dietrich, who split during the season, were tied about 25 often as not. Dietrich led 26-24 going into the final period but the lead changed hands six or seven times in the next five minutes. Richfield took the lead for keeps with about .90 seconds left and managed to hold it.

Hansen took the shortest route possible to an early lead and victory over Castleford. The Huskies took the ball into Stanger in the middle and she relayed it on into the net. By the end of the first quarter Hansen was sitting atop a dominating 14-2 lead and Castleford managed just six points during the first half.

"It would appear that there are six 158 pounders capable of taking state and that includes Mike and (Carl) Ulrich of Minico," said Coach Bill Jones afterward. "They've been tak-

Duran renounces Theatrical agent bids on A's ring championship

PANAMA CITY (UPI) — Panamanian Roberto "Stone Hand" Duran, one of the two champions recognized by the world boxing organizations Thursday renounced his world light-heavyweight crown because he could no longer make the division's 135-pound limit.

Rodrigo Sanchez, head of Panama's Boxing Commission and executive vice-president of the World Boxing Association (WBA), said Duran's handler, Carlos Eleta, told him of the decision earlier in the day.

"Duran cannot neglect the weight of the division," said Sanchez, "and that is why he decided to abandon the title."

Duran, with only one defeat in 65 bouts, will now invade the upper division, that of the welterweights, said Sanchez.

Sanchez said he would relay Duran's decision to the WBA and the World Boxing Council (WBC).

Duran, 27, conquered the world light-heavyweight championship — WBA version — on June 26, 1972 by kaying Scotland's Ken Buchanan in the 13th round in New York. He then successfully defended his crown in 12 title fights before merging the championship.

On Jan. 21, 1978, the hard-hitting Panamanian fighter became the sole king of his division, knocking out WBC champ Esteban de Jesus of Puerto Rico in the 13th round, in Las Vegas, Nevada.

The Panamanian will attempt to earn a shot at the crown of either Pimpino Cuevas of Mexico, WBC champ, or WBA titlist Wilfredo Benitez of Puerto Rico.

Prior to his decision, Duran was scheduled to fight Colombian Antonio Cervantes "Kid Pambele" for the WBA's junior welterweight crown. His last fight came last Dec. 8 at New York's Madison Square Garden, when Duran kayed American Monroe Brooks in eight rounds.

Sanchez noted that Duran will ask both world organizations for a high ranking in his bid for another championship. The other champ recognized by the WBA and WBC is middleweight Hugo Corro of Argentina.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Marty Klein, a theatrical agent, announced Thursday he has offered to buy the Oakland A's for a sum "in excess of $10 million" and would keep the baseball team in Oakland.

Klein reported that he represents a group of investors and he met with Finley Thursday. In the Oakland owner's Chicago apartment to discuss the offer.

Publicityman Gene Schwam, who represents Klein's Agency for the Performing Arts, said Klein telephoned him from Chicago and said he and his attorney, Irwin Russell, talked with Finley "for several hours" and found him "cooperative."

Klein said: "Mr. Finley has been most open and cooperative with me during the past couple of weeks that we have been discussing the purchase of the team. He has confided to me that he has smelled the roses in 1972, '73 and '74 in Oakland." He has put the ballclub up for sale because his doctors have advised it would be a wise health decision.

"Our plan provides the Oakland A's to remain there. There is no doubt in my mind that the team must fulfill its lease obligation which has nine years to run."

Klein said he felt other would-be purchasers were at a disadvantage in trying to swing the deal because they wanted to move the ballclub out of Oakland to Denver or New Orleans.

Klein did not give details of his offer except to say it was "in excess of $10 million."

He said: "My investors and I believe the Oakland A's in particular and major league baseball in general have tremendous long-range investment potential."

Fuell still bitterly hates NCAA

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Don Fuell, a top high school football prospect who became the central figure in Auburn University's last NCAA probation, has some strong feelings about college athletics governing body.

"None of them is good. I am very negative toward the NCAA," said Fuell during a visit to his former home in Guntersville, Ala. "I don't like its approach and the unfair and dictatorial posture that it chooses to take in most matters."

"And Walter Byers (the executive director), to say the least, isn't one of my all-time favorites."

Fuell was charged with accepting gifts from Auburn when he was recruited from high school in Guntersville to play for the Tigers. The university tried to fight the NCAA allegations, lost and was placed on probation. Fuell was prevented from ever competing in the Southeastern Conference.

"I don't suppose the hurt of it will ever go away," he said. "Neither the hurt nor the disappointment of never playing for Auburn."

"I have definite feelings — good, positive feelings — for the school. I have remained a fan and am, like everybody else who loves the place, saddened by the latest news of probation."

Fuell's remarks referred to a recommendation for another probation from the NCAA's committee on infractions earlier this week. It would be the third athletic probation at Auburn in the past 25 years.

In a document kept secret, the committee reportedly recommended Auburn be placed on two years probation for football and one for basketball for alleged recruiting violations dating back to 1971, before either of the present coaches was in charge at Auburn.

Fuell, 40, is an engineer with a Los Angeles aviation firm. He was in Guntersville this week for his mother's funeral when The Birmingham News reached him for the interview.

"I am especially sorry for the kids who are there now, and the kids coming in," the exuding prop sense. He said, "I will devote them of, among other things, getting to play a bowl."

After being told he could no longer compete in the Southeastern Conference, Fuell accepted a scholarship at Southern Mississippi and played football and baseball there.

Cauthen ends losing spell

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Steve Cauthen, the first jockey to win $5 million in purses in one year and the first to be Triple Crown winner, affirmed last year, ended his prolonged 116-race victory drought Thursday when he won on Father Duffy in the fourth race at Santa Anita.

Cauthen's slump is believed to be the longest in history for a major jockey. It ended when he took the Laz Barrera-trained Father Duffy over a muddy track to a neck victory over Vaslov. Father Duffy returned $7,60, $3,80 and $2.40.

Cauthen started the day with a 109-race losing streak. His mount was scratched in the first race and he was out of the money on Responsible in the second, pushing the streak to 110. He did not ride in the third.

Cauthen took Father Duffy to the front midway through the 1-16-mile race for 4-year-old maidens and then held off a late charge by Vaslov, with Marco Castenada up, to snap the streak. Latin Touch finished 12 lengths further back.

Ironically, Cauthen was a last-minute substitute for Latiff Pineay Jr., who was taken off his mounts because he was not feeling well after the second race. Pineay Monday was named to replace Cauthen aboard Affirmed this Sunday in the $100,000-added Charles H. Strub Stakes at Santa Anita.

Some big names dot new NFL list of free agents

NEW YORK (UPI) — A total of 142 National Football League players, including such stars as Ed "Too Tall" Jones of Dallas, Ken Houston of Washington, John Dutton of Baltimore, Ahmad Rashad of Minnesota and Willie Buchanon of Green Bay, officially became free agents Wednesday when their contracts expired.

The players are now eligible to negotiate from any other club in the league.

Every club with the exception of the New York Jets had at least one player on the list. High among clubs were the Detroit Lions, who had 14 players become free agents Wednesday. Two of the Lions' NFC Central Division rivals, the Minnesota Vikings and the Chicago Bears, each had 11 free agents along with the Buffalo Bills. The St. Louis Cardinals were next highest with 10.

The following is a complete list of free agents:

Reds 'not close' in Foster talks

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds, who lost team captain Pete Rose in the free agent draft last year, are not close to signing slugger George Foster beyond the 1979 season, according to the player's attorney.

Foster, who led the National League in home runs the past two seasons and in runs batted in the last three, intends to be paid as one of the top players in baseball, the outfielder's attorney, Tom Reich, said Wednesday in an interview with UPI.

Foster's contract expires after the 1979 season. Reich said he has had "many, many" meetings with Reds President Dick Wagner since last winter, but they remain "not close" on several contract matters, including pay.

"Everybody involved would like to keep George in Cincinnati," said Reich, who plans to meet with Wagner again Friday.

"But George has no intention of signing a contract that is not commensurate with his value," Reich said. "Obviously, he is one of the most valuable players in the majors. I don't think anyone could dispute he is in the top group."

Knoetze okayed to meet Spinks

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — A federal judge said Thursday South African heavyweight Kalle Knoetze probably would be allowed to fight in this country, apparently clearing the way for a fight with former champion Leon Spinks.

Negotiations for a fight between Knoetze, ranked second by the World Boxing Association, and Spinks had stalled because of the possibility Knoetze would not be allowed to fight in the United States. Now, the talks are expected to resume.

Judge Norman Roettger issued a temporary injunction Wednesday barring the State Department from revoking Knoetze's visa and ordered the U.S. Department of Immigration and Naturalization to accept a change in his visa status that will allow him to work in the United States.

Dolphins trim four players

MIAMI (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins said Thursday they have released four veteran players, including cornerback Curtis Johnson and offensive tackle Wayne Moore, but left open the possibility they may be signed again as free agents.

Technically, the Dolphins decided against making a "qualifying offer" to Johnson, Moore, safety Rick Volk and punter Larry Seiple. Volk and Seiple had already announced their retirements.

The four had played out their option under the NFL's free-agent rule, the Dolphins would have in order to be given an opportunity to match an offer made by another team.

Johnson, 30, who started several games for the Dolphins last season before making Gerald Small look over his position late in the season, is a nine-year veteran, and was a starter nearly all of his tenure.

Moore, 33, is also a nine-year veteran starter, but has been plagued since 1974 with a game right knee.

Allen makes peace with 'Skins owner

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George Allen, fired a year ago as coach of the Washington Redskins and last fall by the Los Angeles Rams, telephoned Redskins President Edward Bennett Williams Wednesday to "get it off my chest."

According to The Washington Post, Allen said, "The things Ed told me have turned out to be absolutely correct — that I had a good job and a good situation and all the legal things. He turned out to be 100 percent correct on it."

"I just decided to call him up and let him know. I wanted to get it off my chest. It's not my nature to be vindictive. I feel good about it."

Allen had agreed to Williams' proposal prior to the 1977 NFL season but never signed a contract. Early in 1978, Allen turned down Williams' offer, which Williams promptly rescinded and left Allen out of a job.

Allen was hired by the Rams but was fired during the exhibition season. He worked last season as a co-analyst with former NFL great Jim Brown and play-by-play announcer Vin Scully on CBS-TV's NFL telecasts.

Allen is mentioned for every vacant coaching position in the NFL, but so far he has not been hired.

"I'm talking to people, but I can't say anything at this time," Allen said. "I did learn one thing this year. I can make more money not coaching than I can coaching."

"But if somebody wants to win and wants a program that has won under all circumstances and they want dedication from coach and a staff and a playoff team, rather than something that might be successful, then they'll go with my program."

Mueller wins downhill

VILLARS, Switzerland (UPI) — Peter Mueller of Switzerland speared a parade of Virtue outsiders to win his first World Cup downhill ski race Thursday despite complaints from some of the favorites about high winds and tricky conditions.

Mueller clocked 1 minute 45.97 seconds down the 3,180-meter track, which dropped 770 meters, ahead of Austrians Leonhard Stock on 1:46.19 and the more well-known Werner Grismann on 1:46.20.

Switzerland's Toni Buegger finished fourth in 1:46.69 while Italian Reinhold Schall and Olinio Cozzi came with late runs to post fifth and sixth with 1:46.85 and 1:46.04 respectively.

Opinions vary on master bedroom environment

BY JAY McMULLIN
Chicago Sun-Times

A growing view of the master bedroom suite as "an environment for living" rather than merely a "sanctuary for sleep" may be causing marital discord and driving some couples to separate bedrooms, bedding specialists say.

Some people view the bedroom as a place for sleep and nothing else, says Sally Ames, consultant for the Spring Air Mattress Co. of Chicago.

Others regard the master suite as a substitute living room for activities such as writing, reading, eating, TV-watching, talking on the phone and maybe even receiving visitors the way Louis XIV of France did.

"It's probably fortunate that most people fall somewhere between the two extremes," says Ames. Otherwise, the nation's divorce rate "might be much higher than it is."

While some sleep authorities advocate a bedroom environment devoted only to the function of sleep, Ames observes that such a situation isn't always practical or even possible.

In the average apartment or smaller home, for example, both children's and parents' bedrooms usually have to accommodate other activities as well.

"There may be no other place for such things as a sewing machine, a desk and typewriter or even exercise equipment," Ames continued. "TV sets are probably as common in bedrooms today as bookshelves and radios were 10 or 15 years ago. In luxury homes, the master bedroom often is designed as a parents' retreat, complete with sitting area and even a fireplace."

Whether a bedroom is geared to single- or multi-purpose use, the bed should be conducive to easy, restful sleep, the consultant noted. Of first importance is a mattress that offers comfort along with firm inner support. A too-hard mattress, for most people, makes it more difficult to relax and fall asleep readily. Then it's the "change" positions during sleep, which is normal, the hard bed can interfere with circulation and cause muscle stiffness upon waking.

"Besides comfort and proper body support for sleeping, space is a key factor," Ames said. "For two people of average size, a standard 33-inch-by-75-inch full mattress doesn't give either person enough room to stretch out or turn over without disturbing the other's rest."

The increasingly popular queen-size mattress, 60 inches wide and 80 inches long, takes little more floor space than the old full-size bed, but it provides a welcome 10 percent more sleeping room, she explained.

And for maximum luxury, especially in the large master suites, she suggested a king-size bed.

"For keeping the peace between mates who may not always agree on when to turn off the TV or put down a good book and go to sleep, super-size bedding is one practical alternative to separate bedrooms," she added. Ames offered other ideas in case such problems persist:

— The would-be sleeper, who's bothered by sound or light can use earplugs or a sleep mask.

— The late-night TV addict can use an earphone to keep from disturbing the partner who'd rather sleep.

— The bedtime bookworm can use a high-intensity lamp that casts a limited field of light or the kind that clips onto a book and illuminates only the pages.

The final solution, however, might just be a willingness to compromise—even if it means flipping a coin to settle the issue, Ames concluded.

Converted loft offers space and comfort

NEW YORK — Next time someone cries, "Aloft! Aloft!" don't look up. Chances are they are only expounding on what has become an increasing solution to the space problem facing inner-city dwellers. For many, lofts are the answer to the cry. All over the country, abandoned warehouses, docks, factories — industrial buildings of all kinds — are being converted into living space both on a co-op and a rental basis.

The attraction is wide open spaces. In the middle of the city, with high ceilings, hardwood floors and extremely sturdy building construction, usually at less expense on a foot-for-foot basis than apartments. Although they require a great deal of renovation at first (most newly converted lofts need plumbing, wiring and heating installations, at least, and those that don't usually come with a "fixure fee" to cover that initial renovation), loft-livers find that there is no better way to live.

"It's like building your own home," says Susan Pear Meisel of the spacious loft in Manhattan's Soho (South of Houston Street) district where she lives. "We can put as many or as few rooms in our space as we want, wherever we want them within the confines of our 3800 square feet. And we're right in Soho where we want to be."

For Louis and Susan Meisel, being in the city is the key. And being in Soho is vital. Susan is a painter and printmaker whose work is shown throughout the country, but originates from her Soho studio (also a loft), and Louis owns the Louis K. Meisel gallery in Soho. Many contemporary artists live and work in Soho, a number of whom are represented by Louis. So when Louis and Susan began looking for space, they had to consider both business and personal needs, and ways to combine their needs in the same building. Their loft is upstairs from the art gallery.

A major consideration in their search was their collection of art, which includes photo-realists and abstract illusionists like Kleeemann, Lembeck, Hayward, Estes and Bell. This collection is hand-picked by the Meisels as art they want to live with, so its display is of great concern. The loft affords large outer wall spaces, 12-foot-high ceilings, plus the feeling of spaciousness created by highly polished maple floors throughout the living areas, giving the paintings perfect exposure. Some of the canvases are quite large, six by seven feet, for instance, and others are relatively small. Freedom to arrange them and light them for maximum enjoyment is important.

Another key reason for their choice

A feeling of space and openness is seen in this kitchen in a recently converted loft in New York City was the amount of entertaining they do. Dinner parties for four to 200 guests are not uncommon, and Susan does most of the work and all of the planning herself. Therefore, she has a commercially fitted kitchen, with a large butcher-block island counter (which also seats eight), a commercial refrigerator and stove, and a large and complete working area.

Up to 20 guests can be seated at the hand-made oak table in a dining area off the kitchen, and next to the living room area. For larger gatherings, the table serves as a buffet. Recently, at a brunch for 200 contemporary artists and friends, it provided room for ample fare, with leftovers.

The maple floors, which are part of the original building and have been in use since 1895, are bare throughout the loft. They lie in all of the areas, giving a sense of warmth and unity to the large spaces. Other hardwood pieces, such as an antique oak rolltop desk, the dining table and the butcher-block island, combine with plants, warm brown furniture and colorful accents to give a homey feeling to potentially cold areas.

Although there are no truly separate rooms, except the bathroom, the loft provides plenty of privacy. A full wall divides the living and dining areas from the game area, and on the other side of the dining area another wall divides the sleeping space. Doors aren't needed here, because the illusion of separate space is quite emphatic.

Not all loft owners are so keen on open areas instead of rooms. But for the Meisels, "it fits" their lifestyle perfectly. And the wonderful thing about loft living is creating the space in the way best suited to individual needs. No loft ever has to look like any other loft. Starting from scratch, one can indulge in unlimited fantasies and whims. It's a lofty temptation.

Interior decorating

50/50 balance formula of decorating stressed

TWIN FALLS — When you consider your room design and the selection of furnishings you must take into consideration the 50/50 balance formula of decorating.

First of all and of the utmost importance is the selection of the types of furniture you desire. I've found style secondary as compared to size, shape, color and texture. With a little planning you can mix almost any style of furniture and still maintain the 50/50 mix, but the other variables are not as easily mixed and matched.

When I make reference to this 50/50 mix, I'm referring to the balance between the two specific classes of furniture; that is, the upholstered and wood pieces.

arrangements in L-shape, square or U-shape).

Modular or inter-connecting units are also included in this class of fully upholstered furniture.

Probably one of the most important assets to the upholstered class of furniture is certainly one which I utilize often, is the ever present wing chair. Surviving decades of furniture change and evolution, this class adds to any well-planned seating arrangement. Comfortable, traditional, elegant, yet not a heavy weight, this finely tuned piece of furniture is an excellent decorating tool.

Basic lines are generally more appealing. The sofa that is built to the floor with a simple non-pleated skirt, chairs small in bulk and generally used in pairs (yet single and mixed are very delightful), the occasional or open-armed chair with upholstered seat and back, are all classic examples of the upholstered group in the furniture class.

The second class of furniture is the distinctive wood pieces. How could any room come alive without woods? Basically, this class of furniture encompasses anything that is not upholstered: desks, worktables, armchairs, bookshelves, cocktail tables and the list goes on.

Now the 50/50 mix is just that, 50 percent upholstered and 50 percent wood furnishings, combined to form a distinctive environment.

Throughout the years of my decorating practice, I've found many pieces of furniture that will fit comfortably into a living room setting. Other decorators might disagree, but I've used such pieces as sleigh beds as couches, capitols with marble or glass tops as benching tables, harvest tables as consoles and worktables, china cabinets, as room dividers, upholstering the back so both surfaces are pleasing, and many other items, but the balance and mix must be maintained.

Examine your living room, your seating needs, your entertainment needs and most important your needs to achieve your physical and psychological comfort.

I've always found that any room can be divided into at least two specific conversation areas, one usually revolving around your couch and the other usually centered near an outstanding building feature of your home, large fireplace, bays, etc. Your couch with a center cocktail table and two chairs at right angles to the ends of the couch or directly opposite on the other side of the cocktail table facing the couch are classic layouts. Again don't avoid mixing your chair styles. Yes, if they are within close range of each other it's more dramatic and visually more pleasing if they match in design and fabric or covering.

The conversation space is now comfortably 50 percent upholstered, now for the balance. That ever important 50 percent wood is needed. First off, placement of your upholstered piece is essential. I avoid the use of perimeter placement, meaning placing pieces around the perimeter of your room against the walls. Usually I arrange my rooms with center placement seating, that is, to say, away from the walls, close-in lighter look, grouped. This leaves the wall areas free. With a couch centered, your woods can now easily intermingle with your upholstered furniture. For instance, a console behind the couch, running the length of the couch within three inches of total length, ideal for lamps; collections of accessories or conversational books arranged for display. A desk again avoid pushing the desk to the wall, float the desk free within the room choosing a chair that might be covered in an accenting fabric that will add a little flare or spice to the room.

An armchair generally designed to be placed against a wall can be converted, easily, for display, storage of records, housing of stereo components and liquor and bar set-up. If you must have your television in the living room, the armchair serves as a sophisticated hiding place for the ever present "black screen." A rule of thumb to help you choose how much wood you might need. Generally speaking, each seating location should have a corresponding wood table surface. This is to allow for the placement of lighting, books, drinks or ash trays. This is a bold dictate to assist you in selection of quantities.

Well, you've done it. Balanced. In the classic 50/50 mix. No matter the size of your spaces this formula will be an important guide. Assess, watch color, size of the pieces and the textures. Too busy an appearance will not relax you and you'll avoid the room. No matter how many conversation areas you design and utilize within one room, each area should balance following the guidelines of the 50/50 mix.

Dear Abby

Friend thinks hairpiece looks ridiculous

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

© Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.
DEAR ABBY: What would you do if you had a friend who wears a hairpiece that makes him look ridiculous?
 The man I have in mind has a terrific personality and is happily married to a beautiful, intelligent woman.

He must care about his appearance, or he wouldn't have bought a hairpiece in the first place. He can well afford the best, but instead he wears one that looks cheap, is too dark, too full, and doesn't fit. He jokes laughably, but I like him so much that it bothers me.
 Abby, what would you do if he was your friend?

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I would assume that since he is married to an intelligent woman, if he looked ridiculous to HER, she would surely tell him. I'd curb my compulsion to "help" him, and would keep my well-meaning nose out of his ill-fitting hairpiece.

DEAR ABBY: My friend and I have a problem. We want to know how to attract guys.

If you're loud, they think you're a big mouth. If you're quiet, they don't notice you. If you tell a guy you like him, he says you're bugging him. If you don't tell him, how is he supposed to know?

Thanks for any help you can give us.
 BIEWERLED IN BRENTWOOD

DEAR BIEWERLED: The secret is to get the guy interested in YOU. First, get him to talk about himself, his work and his hobbies. Feed him questions, and he'll open up like a flower. The more he talks, the more convinced he'll become that you are the most interesting conversationalist he's ever met.

DEAR ABBY: Our 14-year-old daughter (I'll call her Meg) has been corresponding with an English pen pal for nearly a year. Derrick is 16. She found his name and address in a magazine.

Well, it seems that Meg told Derrick a lot of things in her letters that were not true. For example, that we were very wealthy, lived on a 3,000-acre ranch and kept horses, etc. Actually, we are far from rich and live in a three-bedroom home in a project in New Jersey. (By "we" I mean my husband and I, Meg and her two brothers, an older sister and Grandpa.)
 Derrick TELEPHONED Meg to tell her that he was coming to visit us! She broke down and told us, and, of course, we have no room for this English fellow. I am a nervous wreck and could cheerfully wring Meg's neck, but that won't solve anything.

 How can we head off Derrick?

MEG'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Either telephone or cable Derrick and advise him to postpone his visit. Then have Meg write him a long, true-confessions type letter to set the record straight. And tell Meg that fantasies are lovely, but they're like dream-castles — fun to build, but you can't live in them.

Do you hate to write letters of condolences, congratulations, and thanks? It's not difficult when you let Abby guide you in her booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (20 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, 132 Leaky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Health

Keep the fat balance down

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb,
 Is it always true that consuming more food than is necessary for the upkeep of your body causes overweight? I am a small eater and I have a medium-large frame. I am 5 feet 8, but I don't seem to be able to lose any weight. I don't drink beer and I eat very little bread, potatoes or peanut butter. What else can I do?

Dear Reader,
 You need to learn to evaluate properly how many calories are in the foods you eat. I see you avoid starches, sweets and apparently, alcohol.

The other major source of calories in the diet is fat. There are nine calories for every gram of fat as opposed to only four calories for every gram of carbohydrate or protein. If you want to limit your calories, I suggest you limit your fat.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 47, Weight Losing Diet, to give you some basic information on how to plan a balanced diet that is limited in calories. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

This diet will give you between 1,200 and 1,300 calories a day. I don't like to see people go on a diet that is much more restricted than this one unless they are under careful medical supervision. A person shouldn't stay on a strict diet more than two to six weeks, depending upon how severe it is. Such diets may cause serious problems.

Dear Dr. Lamb,
 Just what is meant by "passing sounds?" What is the purpose for it? My doctor has done this three times and I don't know why. He said the opening to my uterus should be opened. I am 60 years old and have had some uterine bleeding. I am taking hormones.

You can think of a sound as a rod; different sounds are made from different substances. They are used literally to dilate openings such as your doctor has done in your case. They may be used to dilate the opening in the esophagus if it becomes constricted. They're often used if there is a stricture of the urethra in both men and women.

There is no way I would know what is causing your uterine bleeding, but you have done the right thing in seeing your doctor. I would like to take this occasion to tell all women who have an unexplained bleeding, particularly between periods or after they have completed the menopause, to see their physician immediately. Sometimes this can be an early sign of cancer. Never ignore unexplained bleeding.

Special Events

Twin Falls

The first in a series of programs called "Friday Night Live," featuring local authors, poets and other talent, will be held tonight at 7 p.m. in the upstairs area of Book Magic, 121 2nd Ave. E. The speaker will be Ron Watters, author of "Ski Trails," a book on cross country skiing. He will be showing slides and a movie. Admission is $1 and reservations are advised as seating is limited. For more information and reservations call 734-9039.

The Magic Valley Country Music Association will hold its annual Country Music Jamboree Feb. 5 and 6 at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium at the College of Southern Idaho. A different program is planned for each evening. The proceeds will be donated to the Quick Response Units through Magic Valley. # CSI expands valley's musical horizons

By KEN HODGE
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Nine years ago, when Lawrence Curtis came to the College of Southern Idaho, he had one other colleague to help him teach music to Magic Valley.

Now Curtis' CSI music faculty has swollen to include five instructors working to fill southern Idaho with musical knowledge.

Bringing sophisticated musical experiences to Magic Valley is one of Curtis' highest priorities.

Each year, to bring unusual musical experiences to valley residents, the CSI music faculty performs public recitals to entertain and edify local audiences.

The second CSI faculty recital of the year will feature a new addition to the faculty at the Twin Falls Junior college.

Gary Kirkeby, who recently became assistant professor of vocal education at the college, will sing Saturday at 8 p. m. in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium. His recital will include selections of art songs from three centuries of composers.

Curtis, who came to CSI in 1970, has watched the CSI music program grow from two full-time instructors to a faculty of three full-time music educators, including Kirkeby, and two half-time piano teachers.

"We have probably doubled the class offerings that are available," Curtis said. "I would say roughly 300 people now take music classes."

Curtis, who plays saxophone and clarinet when he performs public recitals, said the music program at CSI stresses three different categories of musical skills.

All three instructors teach performance ability. Thomas Breske, the third full-time faculty member, teaches band and the CSI Pep Band; Curtis teaches two instrumental groups; and Kirkeby teaches three vocal groups.

Both Breske and Curtis teach the academic side of music. Breske teaches music theory and music fundamentals and Curtis teaches musicology which includes music history for music majors and music appreciation for non-majors.

Finally, the CSI program includes private lessons in piano, voice and various instruments.

Helen Connolly, staff pianist, and Ann Smith — both half-time personnel — teach piano and organ in about 30 to 35 hours of private sessions weekly, while Kirkeby teaches private voice lessons.

In addition, all faculty members are involved in community musical activities which include Magic Valley Chorale, the Twin Falls Symphony Orchestra and the Twin Falls City Band.

Curtis said he foresees continued growth in the CSI music department which may someday include a string instrument program and more offerings in opera.

He is also planning a music appreciation program on local radio which may begin next summer.

"We may start with a jazz history course," Curtis said. "There doesn't have to be a visual aspect to it. It would be good for shut-ins, the blind and working people who could listen in the evening."

"A lot of people might find this interesting. It could be just for people who like music."

Kirkeby's recital, a vital part of the current CSI music program, includes a selection of musical numbers not commonly heard waiting on Magic Valley breezes.

When he came to the CSI faculty this year, Kirkeby brought with him a taste of London, Germany, France and Italy.

He plans to sprinkle his first faculty recital with pieces from those lands by singing works of major European composers.

He will sing a cross-section of vocal compositions in German, French, Italian and English, representing works of major composers from the 17th through the 20th centuries.

"This will be a very typical voice recital representing all major periods and composers," Kirkeby explained. "This is what you would expect from a recital. Most of the pieces I have already performed when I was living in London."

Kirkeby brings a wide educational background in music to his new post at CSI; having studied and earned recognition at the Trinity College of Music in London, England.

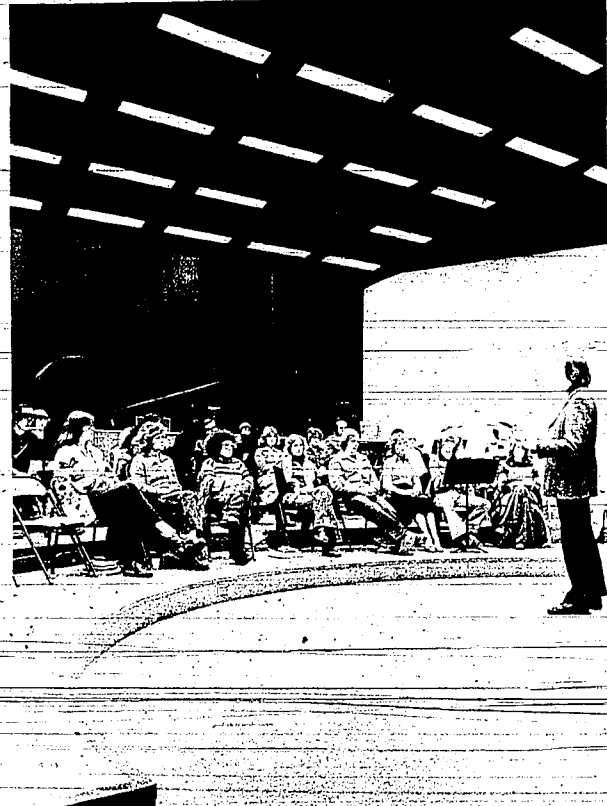

After doing undergraduate work at the University of North Dakota, he received a master's degree in music from Moorhead State University in Minnesota where he presented a lecture recital of vocal duets of composer Robert Schumann.

Later in Colorado Kirkeby did more graduate work in music and sang in the master classes of Phyllis Curtin before ending up in London at Trinity.

As an advanced student of singing at Trinity, he studied with Gervase Givens (tenor) John Wakefield. He was awarded the Licentiate and Fellow diplomas at Trinity College of Music and received that college's outstanding American Student Award.

Much of his education included recitals, but he said his most recent job at the public schools in Minnesota afforded little opportunity for performance.

Recitals are what attracted Kirkeby to his first college post as assistant professor of vocal music at the CSI last fall after teaching in Minnesota public schools.

"It was a very intriguing job," Kirkeby explained. "It is a different approach than teaching in public schools. You are encouraged more with performance."

Accompanied by staff pianist Mrs. Connolly, Kirkeby will sing a selection of harp player songs in German by Austrian composer Franz Schubert, four songs in French by 19th century French composer Gabriel Faure, and five mystical songs in English selected from Ralph Vaughan Williams, a 20th century English composer.

His recital will also include a piece by American composer Louis Elstein and a cantata written by Rudolf von Guarnas composer George Frederick Handel.

Accompanying Kirkeby's singing requires a broad background in piano and Mrs. Connolly, who has lived in Buhl for three years, brings years of experience in playing and teaching in the job. She received her musical education at the University of Montana in Missoula.

In addition to piano accompaniment, Kirkeby will get vocal assistance from several members of the Magic Valley Chorale, a local singing group which performs twice annually at Christmas and Easter.

The chorale will lend their voices to Kirkeby's renditions of the mystical songs of Vaughan Williams.

Kirkeby's selections are not extractions from operas or other major works, but were originally composed for solo performance. He selected them because they make "musical sense."

"You can't just consider the piece alone. They must be combined," he said. "There is enough coherence in them to keep interest in the musical program, since they were all written for a baritone voice and are all art songs rather than operatic arias."

In a printed program for the recital, Kirkeby has prepared English translations of the songs and information about the composers for the audience's convenience.

The performance is free to the public.

'Body Snatchers' not improved to greatness

By ROGER EBERT

©1978 Chicago Sun-Times
"Invasion of the Body Snatchers" is a superior remake of a superior... Inspiring (the simplest of questions: Why remake it? Wasn't one "Body Snatchers" enough?)

The film makers have found a more sophisticated approach to the material (pods from outer space invade Earth and become exact physical duplicates of the humans they kill), but how much sophistication does this material need?

The 1955 version was interpreted by the critics as an attack on McCarthyism; this much more expensive and technically skilled 1978 version has been canonized by the New Yorker's Pauline Kael as "the American movie of the year." Is she serious? It's a good movie, yes, by a very good director, Philip Kaufman (one of Chicago and "Goldstein," later of the wonderful "Great Northfield, Minn., Raffle"). But it's pretty straightforward stuff. If you won't levitate in ecstasy in the theater.

—So let's put it this way: If you've never seen Don Siegel's original, see this version. Instead, if you loved the original, see this one for instructive comparison. The 1955 version was an inspired B picture—one of those programs that fought its way out of the crowd—and this version has all the expertise Hollywood can bring to it. That means the acting is a lot better, the script is more subtle, and the special effects are terrific.

This time, for example, we begin to understand how the pods spread and multiply. There's a convincing intergalactic opening in which the seeds of alien life are carried along on what I guess is a solar wind, and they're laid down on San Francisco and turn into pretty little flowers and are taken home by people who are about not to be people.

The plague spreads, and people start to notice it: "My wife... somehow isn't my wife anymore." The pod creatures strut about like toy people, meeting on street corners and distributing their pods about the city. One critic found this implausible: In a city like San Francisco, the argument went, someone would notice. Anyone who goes to a movie named "Invasion of the Body Snatchers" and looks for plausibility is barking up the wrong pod.

The movie's central strength is the performance of Donald Sutherland, as a city health inspector who begins to realize something's going wrong. Leonard Nimoy has a nice supporting role as the psychiatrist who explains the phenomenon in Freudian jargon. And there's a crazy kid named Jeff Goldblum who's been turning up, brilliantly, in a lot of recent movies and who gives paranoia a good name.

The special effects show genuine invention in depicting the growth and spread of the pods. Their tendrils reach out tenderly to their human hosts, and it's a real bad idea to go to sleep in the garden. The pod reproductive process is vaguely obscene, in an alien sort of way, and we do feel the fear and the threat. Then Kaufman builds to a climax where Sutherland attacks the main pod factory, and we're poised tantalizingly between thrills and the truly ridiculous.

I wonder if Kael's rave will actually hurt this film. It's slick, classy science fiction with convincing performances and a realistic look. But if people go expecting the film of the year, won't they be disappointed? Movies like "An Unmarried Woman" or "Days of Heaven" can support that kind of praise, and a people-expert superhype from "Superman." But "Body Snatchers" isn't greatness. It's just a whole lot better than we probably expected.

Charles Mingus: jazz visionary and unifier

By NEIL TESSER

©1979 Chicago Sun-Times
For those of us who knew — who knew that he had something called amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, that it was really Lou Gehrig's disease, that he'd been paralyzed more than half a year that it was only a matter of time — no tears were shed when Charles Mingus died.

It wasn't callousness that kept our cheeks dry, but preparation. The rumors had steadily become news and the news had grown steadily worse. Surely, even Mingus knew he'd find nothing in Chagres, Mexico, where he had traveled to seek treatment for his untreatable death sentence, and where he died Jan. 5. Perhaps he even suspected what was to come and went to a land that had given him enjoyment and inspiration as a paralytic.

No, thinking about Mingus' death is not the source of weeping. Thinking about his life is another story. Reeling the pain and bitterness that Mingus wrote into his radical 1971 biography "Beneath the Underdog"; realizing the keenly felt injustices dealt one of America's music's most undisputed giants, is of course part of it. Prejudice is a part, too: As a sensitive black youth reaching maturity in the virulent racism of 1930s Los Angeles, Mingus quickly understood that containing an artist's soul is a "nigger's" body would be the classic tragedy of his life.

But what really brings the tears is beyond all of this. What matters is hearing Mingus' triumph over these forces; what matters is his music, and the joy of life and strength he bequeathed the world, despite the cruelty the world more often gave him.

Charles Mingus — or Chaz, as he was known before he renounced the term "jazz" — was 50 in both physical presence and musical stature, he cut an imposing figure. It's hard to imagine a winning instrument but the bass. His bulky, usually overweight frame and his darkly scowling visage would have seemed out of place with any smaller, less imposing instrument. As a performer, composer and most tellingly as a bandleader, Mingus was an innovator, a musician who articulated his concerns and truths with blunt muscularity.

These were qualities he brought to writing as well, and they eliminate the need to manufacture analyses of his life. "Beneath the Underdog" opens with this statement:

"In other words, I am here. One man stands forever in the middle, unconcerned, unmoved, watching, willing to be allowed to express what he sees to the other two. The second man is like a frightened animal that attacks for fear of being attacked. Then there's an over-loving gentle person... and he'll... be trusting and sign contracts without reading them... and when he realizes what's been done to him he feels like killing and destroying everything around him including himself for being so stupid. But he can't — he goes back inside himself."

Musically, Mingus spanned a fascinating chunk of jazz history. More important, his most visionary ideas — such as the encouragement of "free" playing in his bands and the use of one-chord foundations for extended improvisation — were wedded to a firm respect for those giants who preceded him.

He studied classical and jazz bass in Los Angeles, where his family moved from Arizona; among his heroes were master composers—Duke Ellington and Thelonious Monk, and the luminous bebop icon Charlie Parker. But before he moved to New York in 1951, Mingus had also played with Louis Armstrong and Lionel Hampton, among others, and acquired well-earned contributions. (This ability to serve as a unifying force between jazz movements was one that characterized Mingus' entire career. A quarter century after Mingus had left the West Coast, a Chicago critic commented that his music had its feet firmly set in bebop soil and one ear cocked toward the avant-garde.)

After arriving in New York, where he played with Parker and Ellington (among many others), he embarked on his most crucial role: still in his early 30s, he became a teacher who discovered, and/or misled a stunning array of jazz greats. The list includes saxists Rahsaan Roland Kirk, Eric Dolphy, George Adams, and Booker Ervin; trumpeters Ted Curson and Lonnie Lillyer; and drummer Danny Richmond. As guitarist Jackie McLean commented recently: "After I left the Mingus band, I really began to be Jackie McLean."

There seems little doubt that Mingus would have been known as one of the most technically accomplished bassists had he given that priority. As it was, he led his bands through his accompaniment—and his infrequent solos showed a composer's brevity and form. His compositions have a timeless quality, related to his mastery of the entire jazz spectrum: Whether written in '78 or '55, they sound fresh and taut today, the up tones bursting with ideas and the ballads (such as "Goodbye Pork Pie Hat," in memory of Lester Young), dreamy but still economical.

But even here, in the purest realm of his creativity, the world's injustice intruded. An especially brilliant 1971 album, "Let My Children Hear Music," featured large-scale compositions that easily transcended conventional concepts of jazz. Mingus wrote of the purpose for that record:

"Maybe I am saying: Do you really know Mingus, jazz critics? They've been saying that since 1939 because I thought in 1939 I would probably get it recorded some day... what do you think happens to a composer who is sincere and loves to write and has to wait 30 years to have someone play a piece of his music?... Had I been born in a different country or had I been born white, I am sure I would have expressed my ideas long ago."

Perhaps the ironies of Mingus' life are capsuled in its last years. Glimbing out of a debilitating depression, he strode through one of his most fertile periods in the '70s — assembling a fine quintet, devising new complex compositional forms, even working on an album with rock star Joni Mitchell — before his illness restricted his movement. Even then, he continued to write, determined to stand firm with his most potent weapon, his music: the legacy of a troubled life; the product of a brilliant vision, and the product of an extraordinary depth of love and understanding.

For you see, it's not that Mingus necessarily experienced pain and prejudice denied his colleagues. It is just that he felt them so much more.

'Watership Down' is a winner

By SHELLY KINZEL
Times-News writer

"Magie," now playing at the Twin Cinema, is supposed to be a terrifying love story. The concept of a ventriloquist possessed and controlled by the identity of his dummy is, indeed, frightening, but for some reason—the film is less shocking than one would expect.

We know at the outset that Corky Withers (Anthony Hopkins) is extremely disturbed. We see him as an insecure apprentice to an elderly magician, who tells him that his only chance for success is finding some charm. Excessively shy and timid, Corky finds his salvation by "operating" a rowdy, foul-mouthed dummy in his act. The gimmick works and soon he is a hot night club act on his way to fame and fortune.

But Corky is not your everyday, normal fellow. The dummy whom he dubs "Fats"—is actually his alter-ego. Corky sees himself as dull and unappealing. It is Fats who possesses all of the wit and intellect. It is also through Fats that Corky expresses his deep frustration and hostility. Clearly, of the two, Fats has the more aggressive and dominant personality.

Country Jamboree

TWIN FALLS — Members of the Magic Valley Country Music Association will stage a caravan Saturday through Buhl, Filer and Twin Falls to promote their annual Country Music Jamboree.

The caravan will leave the R and R Cafe in Buhl at 1 p.m., and, weather permitting, live music will be played from a truck bed. The caravan will arrive at the Blue Lakes Mill at about 3 p.m., and the musicians will play by the fountain inside the covered mall. The public is welcome to join them.

The jamboree, featuring a different program each evening, will be held Feb. 5 and 6 at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium of the College of Southern Idaho.

The following performers are scheduled to appear on Monday: The Brain Bros., Roadshow, Just Pickin', C & R Express, and the Floughboys.

Tuesday night the following groups are scheduled: Country Ramblers, Tradesmen, The Common People, Johnny and the Backups, and The Last Resorts.

Single artists performing will include: Kim Hart, Janelle Shannon, Holly Zollinger, Wilbert Perkins — Washboard — Annie, Barbara Todd-Diney Covey, Bettie Stewart, and Angela Colner.

The entertainment line-up is subject to last-minute revisions.

Proceeds will be donated to the Quick Response Units throughout Magic Valley.

Each evening a quarter of beef, one donated by Frank's Transportation Co. of Jerome and the other by Magic Valley Packing Co. of Gooding, will be auctioned off.

Tickets are $2.50 and are widely available (please refer to page 2, Special Events for further details). For information or tickets, call Mrs. Stewart at 733-6515 or Wilma Martin at 543-8299.

As the eve of his television debut approaches, Corky panics and bolts, leaving behind a perplexed and concerned agent (Burgess Meredith). He heads for a lakeside retreat in the Catskill Mountains, sweetheart for whom Corky has an unrequited passion. Peggy Ann Snow (Ann-Margret), unhappily married and seeking an outlet, finds Corky and his wooden companion irresistible. They quickly develop a relationship, the first one Corky has had with any woman.

Things begin to fall apart when Corky's agent, Ben Greene, finally tracks him down, and inadvertently discovers Corky in a heated conversation with Fats. Greene is no fool — he begs Corky to seek help, but the demented man is unable and unwilling to relinquish his other self. Slowly, Fats assumes control of Corky's actions, until Corky becomes the manipulated puppet of his darkest fears and obsessions.

The performances in this film are excellent and the photographic effects are stunningly eerie. Why then did I find myself detached? The answer lies in the film maker's attempt to achieve horror superficially rather than through an intensive analysis of the central character's personality. Too often the dummy is experienced as a malevolent being instead of an extension of Corky's dementia. The camera frequently focuses on the hideously sardonic face of the dummy, almost as if it has a life of its own. I realize that this is done for effect, but it relegates the film to the level of a sophisticated "monster movie."

The real terror lies in Corky's torment and inability to cope with reality. The manifestation of his schizophrenia is fascinating, but one wishes there was some explanation. The few flashbacks of his youth hardly explain the development of such a severe psychosis. We never really get close to this man, nor do we understand his generation.

"Magie" might have been an unusual and intriguing study of the human psyche. Instead, it is an average Hollywood thriller, slick and fairly predictable.

Oddly enough, I found more genuine terror and an emotional involvement in an animated feature entitled "Watership Down," which opened last night at the Twin and Jerome cinemas.

Richard Adams' best-selling book has been made into a sensitive, compelling film appealing to both adults and children. The story of a warren of rabbits forced to abandon their homes as a result of man's relentless encroachment on nature, and their struggle to reach a new and safe habitat combines the elements of myth and epic drama.

The plot is essentially about survival. More specifically, it emphasizes the sacrifice and courage necessary for attaining freedom. The moral issues are basic, presented simply and honestly without sentimentality.

Unlike many cartoon characters, the rabbits are not "cutsey." They behave like real animals magically endowed with human intelligence and feelings. Brought to life by the voices of some of the finest English-speaking actors in the world, the rabbits have distinctive personalities. Among these voices is that of the late Zero Mostel, whose portrayal of the kindly and humorous bird Kehaar is a tribute to his much-revered talent.

"Watership Down" is an entertaining and absorbing tale, adapted for the screen by Martin Rosen with great care and taste. It may well become, as its publicizers predict, an animated classic.

By Robin Adams Sloan

Q: What ever happened to Louise Lister — the Mary Hartman of TV? — T.L., Philadelphia.

A: Louise has kept a pretty low profile these her days in Fernwood, Ohio. She made a TV movie not long ago, but generally hasn't been the picture of the actress-workhorse. That's the way Louise wanted things after the Mary Hartman grind. But word is that she's ready to surface on a broader scale — and is being wooed by funnyman Marty Feldman for his new film — "In God We Trust." Sounds like the kind of comedy Mary Hartman herself might feel comfortable in.

STALLONE, UPDATE: Not long ago we told you about Sylvester Stallone and his wife Sasha getting back together. Now, here's the latest: They are expecting their second child this May. They celebrated their fourth wedding anniversary over the New Year's holiday.

Q: What kind of books does Jackie Onassis work on at her job at Doubleday? — T.H., Garrison, N.Y.

A: A variety of books. She hasn't had much luck in her pursuit of famous personalities and their autobiographies, and I hear Diane Cannon and Diana Ross both said no to Jackie. However, I hear she has a big generational book about an Irish family titled "Call the Darkness Light." Appropriately enough, it bears some resemblance to the beginnings of the Kennedy family.

Q: Was glad to read that luscious Jessica Lange, who breezed into prominence as the female star of "King Kong," then suddenly dropped out of sight, has landed a new "Bet Bosses" deal. That jazz? — Wasn't Jessica originally announced as a protegee of Dino De Laurentis? — J.R., Hackensack, N.J.

A: When this beautiful, blonde ex-model was signed to a movie contract by De Laurentis, plans were for the producer to mold her film career in a total-control relationship along the lines of such well-publicized teams as Ann-Margret and Roger Smith. Jessica was at one point mentioned for a lead in Dino's "Hurricane," but when her "Kong" reviews were less than ecstatic, he seemed to have lost interest in her career. Now, with Bob Fosse as her possible new mentor, maybe the critics' judgment — and Dino's — will be proven wrong.

FRIENDLY GESTURE: Singer Paul Anka lent his jet plane to Helen Reddy and Jeff Wald so they could go East in style when Helen played Atlantic City. When the jet was returned it was in pretty poor shape with drink and food stains all over the suede upholstery. Paul decided not to mention it to Helen and Jeff and is having the upholstery cleaned himself.

Q: I know you've had a lot about Joan Crawford but just one more question, please. Was she really frugal and tight with the dollars? — J.M., Seattle.

A: If the star's behavior during her last years, when she lived in Manhattan's swank Imperial House is any indication, Joan wasn't very much concerned with finances. The star was known in her huge apartment house as a generous tipper. In fact, the building's staff came running whenever she snapped her fingers. A resident recalls, "Miss Crawford expected to be waited on hand and foot, and seemed accustomed to paying for these services. Whenever she was seen carrying even a tiny package, the doorman jumped."

Q: I can't think of two more dissimilar women than Jane Fonda and Dolly Parton, and yet I hear they're going to make a movie together... What will it be about? — S.W., Wilmington, Del.

A: We haven't been fully briefed on the script but the film — "9 to 5" — is, not unexpectedly, about the lives of women who work in an office. Jane and Dolly will be two of the principal characters with Lily Tomlin also starring.

ONCE BURNED: Novelist Joseph Wambaugh is not letting any movie company get its hands on his latest cop novel. He was so mad about what was done to "The Chieftains" that he turned his book, "The Onion Field," into a movie himself. His wife had great success raising money privately for the film in their own posh Pasadena backyard. She's raised $500,000 from neighborhood investors, and the Wambaughs are using their own money for the film as well.

Q: Gloria Swanson seems so serene on all those television talk show appearances. Is this legendary star every bit as cool and placid in daily situations? — G.H., San Jose, Calif.

A: Yes — just as long as La Swanson gets her way. Gloria is an ideal movie queen. And how well she knows it. For example, persons who've seen MISS SWANSON in temperamental action report that Given such situations, she demands (and usually gets) the full royal treatment, complete with much bowing and scraping. Q: I've been reading an intriguing book, "Agatha" about the mysterious disappearance of Agatha Christie many years ago. On the back of the hardcover edition's jacket is a beautiful color photograph of Vanessa Redgrave. Since Vanessa is starring with Dustin Hoffman in the movie version, I can't figure out why she isn't credited by name somewhere on the jacket. Any clues? — A.M., Saco, Me.

A: The picture on the jacket isn't that of Miss Redgrave at all. It's of the book's author, Kathleen Tynan, who looks a lot like the movie actress. The coincidence — and resemblance — is so startlingly uncanny, Kathleen is asked for autographs by unsuspecting fans of Vanessa.

Q: Now that "Roots" author Alex Haley has settled that plagiarism suit out of court will that have any effect on the TV sequel? — B.R., Atlanta.

A: It won't have any effect on "Roots: The Next Generations" scheduled for airing Feb. 18-25 for a total of 14 hours. But the suit has had an effect on Haley's writing career. After he completes two books he's agreed to do, he says he's going to switch to a more creative medium — like TV. Haley says defending the plagiarism suit was just too much trouble. Haley admitted that his best seller contained passages from the book "The African," published nine years before "Roots" and settled out of court with the author, Harold Courlander. Haley's lawyer said that the material had probably been given to Haley during lecture tours while he was researching "Roots" and that he, Haley, was unaware that it had come from an already published book.

Dorothy played to packed houses in "I Do I Do!" and Earl said even though she has an asthmatic condition the sang like a dream.

Rock fan books need improvement

By JOHN ROCKWELL
N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — Walk into most bookstores these days, wend your way to the music section, and chances are what you'll see, along with the classical-music books and other esoterica, are rock fan books and song books. Name a pop star, and you'll probably find some sort of relevant book, and quite likely a collection of his or her songs in simple piano arrangements, with rudimentary guitar chords, as well.

Fan books and song books are really almost one category, because the song books often contain lavish illustrations that put them into a specialized niche of the fan-book category.

Most of these efforts are hardly what you'd call literary — or even literate. They are "product" books created out even more perfunctorily than many of the records. In fact, they're so perfunctory that as far as one can tell, they don't often go back to press — a book will appear in the stores, stay on the shelves until it sells out and then disappear more completely than most hit records, which stay in the catalogue or crop up on greatest-hits collections.

Most of the time, no one much cares. Fan books are part of that vast (and presumably vastly profitable) underside of the publishing business that carries on without any attention from the people who regularly review books. Most of the readers presumably content themselves with visual and verbal reinforcement for their emotional attachment to the star of their choice.

Leaving through the flow of such books that come this way is a mostly depressing experience. Especially if you care at all intelligently about an artist's music or know anything about the artist's actual life and personality, the mindless superficiality of these productions can be downright annoying. Often the artist hasn't granted the author an interview; but by obtaining the rights to a few already-published interviews, the writer can cobble together a text with enough quotations to satisfy the fan. Add to that the rejects from the artist's last few photo sessions and a few, generally dark and grainy, in-performance shots by a local freelance photographer, and you have the book.

The reason intelligent writers and major publishers aren't attracted to artist biographies is that the readership is presumed to be young and inarticulate, and the book isn't likely to win the sort of well-placed reviews that would generate significant sales.

Existential and Zen: approaches to mystery

By JOHN LEONARD
©1979 N.Y. Times Service

HUNT By A. Alvarez. 288 pages. Simon & Schuster. $9.95. THE MAINE MASSACRE. By Janwillem van der Wetering. 256 pages. Houghton Mifflin. $8.95.

Kierkegaard once said that he would have been happier as a police spy; he had, he thought, a decided talent for it. This nice relationship between metaphysics and betrayal seems to me to be almost a condition of literary modernism, the weather of our bad dreams. We are all spies, but is there anything to spy on except one another?

A. Alvarez — poet, critic, novelist and author of the best-selling "The Savage God: A Study of Suicide" — is nothing if not a literary modernist. His is a sensibility fashioned whole out of the bad dreams of the century, pressed upon by what Nabokov called "the anonymous roller" that leaves a watermark on every page. The watermark is paranoia.

And so it should come as no surprise that in his first thriller Alvarez features a conspiracy of strangers; a helpless victim who happens to be a compulsive gambler and who paints part time, a policeman who chuckles at the "existential ironies," dreams of spiders and a dead cow, borrowed from Ted Hughes; because Alvarez is English, there is also a dog, borrowed from Graham Greene.

I should mention, too, the anonymous telephone caller who explains: "I'm not a fact, Mr. Jessup. I'm a hypothesis." This, surely, is borrowed from Kierkegaard. That Jessup's other name is Conrad is doubtless significant. The ever-popular "Heart of Darkness" strikes again. Conrad's gambling I take to be a wink at Destoevsky. When Conrad sees his wife and children coveting with another man, he thinks: "It is as if I had never been." Or, as Olivia puts it — the catalytic Olivia who has wandered in from a Joan Didion novel — "Nonenities is reckless pursuit of nonentity. Necessarily, Olivia was brought up in a convent and sleeps around.

Such a pre-fabricated death-knit ought to go good; we've been to this sabbat too many times before. What is gratifying about "Hunt," however, is that Alvarez, besides being well above the norm in intelligence, has a genuine talent for suspense. The gambling scenes are excellent and so is the sex. We come to believe in Conrad as someone of muddled substance. It is sad to realize that he will not redeem himself by art; he will never get the faces right. As for the plot that thickens around him with colorful scenes, American and British agents, sneaky Eastern Europeans and so on, all I will say is that everybody, as usual, is guilty.

Janwillem van der Wetering is not at all a modernist, which is a relief. Readers by now are probably tired of hearing about van der Wetering, but to repeat: As a very young man he left Amsterdam for a Zen monastery in the East, about which experience he wrote a splendid book, "The Empty Mirror." He returned to join the Amsterdam police. He lives now in Maine where he writes mysteries in which Amsterdam policemen solve problems involving people who are allowed to be likable. And even if the people are not likable, they are not necessarily evil.

In "The Maine Massacre," the enfeebled commissaris and the insouciant Sgt. de Gier are transported, not surprisingly, to Maine. The unpronounceable adjutant Grijsstra stays at home, the commissaris must pack up his belongings and sell the house of his widowed sister. The sergeant goes along to keep a worried, albeit timid eye on him. They encounter lousy weather, many guns, a number of empty houses, dozens of eccentrics and a gang of somehow ingratiating nihilists. There are, in addition, a beautiful airplane pilot who, like Olivia, sleeps around, and another dog.

How to suggest the special pleasure of van der Wetering's cool prose, serene mind, implicit wit? There are in each of his mysteries moments of transcendence, binges of Zen. There is, in "The Maine Massacre," a scene — locked in a room with the nihilists, Sgt. de Gier plays his flute — that is downright triumphant. People eat and dance and complain and think with relief and a kind of astonishment at their own resourcefulness. They are tactile.

If Alvarez as a modernist is obliged to ride his hypothetical hobby horse into the ground instead of the sunset — non-being and non-entity — van der Wetering chooses to embrace. "You have questions?" asks the hermit Jeremy. "Ask away, but perhaps I won't answer. A bad answer spells a good question." Some questions should be permitted to live on. Within this embrace, a freedom to play with the facts and the soul is possible. We connect.

"The Maine Massacre" seems to me the best of the van der Wetering mysteries so far. The puzzle, a real estate scam, is not particularly absorbing, but the people, down to their pores, circular evil, perhaps, consists of being trapped in abstractions. No doubt Kierkegaard would have something to say about this, too, but I've run out of space.

Playboy enters TV arena

By FRANK SWERTLOW
©1979 Chicago Sun-Times
Playboy is extending its rabbit ears.

This May, Playboy magazine will present a special 25th anniversary show on ABC. At NBC, a TV movie and possible series, based on the lives of Playboy's bunnies, are being readied for next season.

And, for the right price, Playboy will develop a TV version of its magazine, one softened for the commercial networks and another more sexually explicit for cable TV operators.

In short, Playboy Enterprises, which has had an off-and-on relationship with the TV industry for nearly two decades, is moving vigorously into TV production, capitalizing on shows related to its principal magazine, Playboy.

For instance, ABC has commissioned a $1.2 million, two-hour docu-drama on the life of Playboy's founder, Hugh Hefner, whose first magazine became one of the giant success stories in publishing history. It is expected to air next season.

"It's going to be a romantic comedy," said Playboy vice president Christie Hefner, who added, candidly, "I'm sure they will set up some (scenes) that have no basis in reality, but are true to the spirit of my father's career."

Playboy first entered television in 1960 with an hour-long syndicated series, Playboy's Penthouse. It lasted a year. In 1969, Playboy presented the syndicated series, Playboy After Dark. This, too, disappeared after a season.

During the 1970s, Playboy returned to television with a series of specials on ABC, principally beauty contest-style shows. These received high ratings.

In an interview, Hefner, the 26-year-old daughter of Hugh, and Richard Rosenzweig, the president of Playboy Productions, disclosed the growing involvement of the company in television, ranging from shows for commercial television to programming for upcoming video disk systems.

"We have had some historical successes over the years in television," Hefner said, "and we now believe that we have some competitive edges in this area."

Said Rosenzweig: "It is our feeling that electronic communications is where people are and that will continue... We see electronic communication as an extension of what we already have been doing."

One edge that both executives said Playboy has is an advance look at stories for its magazines—Play, Oui and Games—and from subjects published by the firm's book division.

"First look at material gives you an advantage," said Rosenzweig, "we try to get our editors to think of the possibilities of television, feature films and the developing technologies."

One example of a first look that Hefner cited was an upcoming film, "Saint Jack," co-produced by Playboy and based on a Playboy magazine story by novelist Paul Theroux.

Rosenzweig added that television, domestic and foreign, is now the vehicle for enormous profits. A theatrical film, he said, might cost $5 million.

"It's virtually impossible to lose money on films costing around $5 million," he said, "and it is because of television."

One of the developing themes in broadcasting has been the purchase of publishing companies and magazines by networks and producers. The sale of these firms gives broadcasters a look at potential script material prior to public release.

For instance, CBS bought Fawcett, a major paperback publishing house, and RCA, the parent of NBC, owns Random House. Executives from the publishing world also are being sought by broadcasters because of their contacts within the creative community.

Hefner said Playboy has another edge because of its continuing relationship with some of the world's best writers. This, she said, would be useful for TV and film production not associated with the company's magazines and books.

She added that Playboy's Los Angeles-based production unit is developing this kind of material, such as situation comedies, dramatic series and films. One example of this is the three-hour ABC movie, "Whale for Killing," a drama about an advertising man's search for a new life starring Peter Strauss and set for late next season.
