SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — For at least another year, the world's three "test-tube" babies will remain the only ones in existence, British gynecologist Dr. Patrick Steptoe indicated Monday as he presented his first American public account of the step-by-step procedure of "in-vitro" fertilization.

Steptoe — whose 10-year research culminated in the birth of the world's first test-tube baby July 25 — said he suspended his research in August and would not resume his practice until a new hospital is opened near Cambridge, England. "I hope this summer."

The consulting obstetrician and gynecologist at Oldham is credited with another "test-tube" birth Jan. 14 in Scotland. A third live birth by a different "test-tube" technique was achieved in India.

Steptoe said he knows of no current pregnancies resulting from the joining of the egg and sperm in the laboratory and said there are "only two or three teams in Britain and Australia that would be ready to perform this procedure in a year or so."

The Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk, Va., had hoped Steptoe and his assistant Dr. Robert Edwards would serve as consultants in a satellite program planned by the school, but Steptoe said Monday there is no firm commitment.

U.S. efforts to conduct "test-tube" baby research ran into a snag Sunday when a federal ethics advisory board delayed for at least a month a decision on whether the government should finance studies of how to fertilize a human egg with male sperm "in vitro" (Latin for in a glass dish), then transfer it back to the womb several days later.

The exact procedure was fully described by Steptoe at the 35th annual meeting of the American Fertility Society. The presentation before more than 1,000 AFS members was also open to reporters.

Steptoe said any woman under 35 who has not been able to conceive because of blocked or absent fallopian tubes is eligible for the technique.

He said hormone therapy to stimulate ovulation (the release of the egg from the ovaries) has proven unsuccessful and has been discontinued. Instead, blood and urine tests are used to indicate the natural hormonal level.

"It is vital that the egg mature inside the body and that it is recovered at the right moment," said Steptoe.

He said it is crucial the patient suffer no stress "other than the stress of wanting to become pregnant" and thus is not allowed to smoke, take drugs or have intercourse (which could stimulate ovulation).

The fertilized egg must be implanted in the womb at the same time the egg would naturally be sent there, Steptoe said, adding his research showed the best hours for doing this were between 10 p.m. and midnight when "the uterus is more relaxed than during the day."

Steptoe said he has achieved four successful "test-tube" pregnancies — including the two live births — out of a total of 32 patients.

Ernie Vasquez, manager of Twin Falls' Douglas Hotel

Twin Falls hotel manager boosts pantry restocking

By LORAYNE G. SMITH Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When Ernie Vasquez hit town last fall he was "down on his luck," without car or cash.

He stopped a taxi driver who directed him to the Douglas Hotel in Twin Falls, where the management let him stay until he got on his feet financially.

Thanks to the generosity of hotel owners Gene Shirley and Wayne Wyatt and the Salvation Army and the Community Action Agency, the newcomer was able to eat until he got his first paycheck from a Twin Falls motel two weeks later.

Food and shelter for destitute persons used to be handled by the Community Cupboard, a food pantry launched last fall by the CAA.

But the pantry's shelves are bare following the expiration of a federal grant.

Vasquez, who now manages the Douglas Hotel, enthusiastically backs efforts to create community support to replenish those food supplies.

The new Twin Falls resident came from Arizona where he said such community services are lacking. He sees a practical as well as a moral reason for promoting the Community Cupboard.

"If these people don't have a place to stay or can't get food they will resort to crime," Vasquez said. "If you've never been down and out it's hard to realize what it's like."

He said Arizona has a severe crime problem and feels that the relatively low crime rate here is partly due to service agencies such as the Salvation Army, which provide food vouchers, and the CAA's Community Cupboard.

Farmers stir up chaos in capital

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Police corralled 1,700 tractors and farm vehicles late Monday, averting a repetition of a chaotic morning rush hour created by thousands of farmers demanding higher crop price supports.

The farmers of the loosely organized American Agricultural Movement disrupted morning commuter traffic by rolling their giant tractors along every major access route to the capital from neighboring Maryland and Virginia suburbs.

But at the end of a day of demonstrations at the Agriculture Department and other federal agencies, clashes with police, and a rally outside Congress, they were blocked from further traffic interference.

Police parked federal and city trucks of every variety — snowplows, schoolbuses, dumptrucks, semitrailer trucks — bumper to bumper along the exits from the mile-long Mall area between the Washington Monument and the Capitol.

Most of the tractors, corn harvesters, fertilizer spreaders, and pickup trucks were effectively penned inside the area as commuter traffic moved smoothly out of the city.

One group of 18 vehicles evaded the blockade but were pockmarked by police vans and cruisers a few blocks away.

Police said the tractors and other farm vehicles would stay in the mall overnight, although they allowed some campers and pickups to leave.

The tractorcade drivers and thousands of other farmers and their families who came to Washington by road and air to join the demonstration wandered around the grassy lawns of the Mall as night fell, awaiting the next action. Many of them took shelter from the 15-degree temperature and brisk winds in the Agriculture Department which kept its doors open for them.

House lifts lid on interest

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

BOISE — Claiming money for homebuilding is drying up, the Idaho House Monday passed a measure knocking the roof off interest rates for home loans.

Following more than an hour of sharp debate and parliamentary maneuvering, representatives passed House Bill 66 by a 58-11 margin and sent it to the Senate. The measure would eliminate usury rates on all loans not now covered by the Uniform Consumer Credit Code.

The immediate effect of HB 66 would be to lift the 10 percent usury limit which is now the maximum that lending institutions can charge on home loans in Idaho.

Debate over the measure consumed most of the morning session, and after a lunch time recess, stretched until 3 p.m. Prior to the final vote, lawmakers beat back, by a 39-28 vote, a parliamentary move designed to keep the bill in indefinite limbo.

HB 66 was sponsored by Rep. Mike Gwartyne, R-Boise. Because of the current "tight money" economic situation, Idaho's 10 percent limit has caused money to flow to states without usury limits, Gwartyne said, making it difficult for Idahoans to obtain home loans.

The 10 percent limit which Gwartyne acknowledged was designed to protect persons borrowing money has made money unavailable for loans and is now "hurting the very persons it's designed to protect."

Gwartyne said other changes in the usury laws had been proposed, citing attempts to raise the limit or create a floating limit tied to the prime interest rate. Fixed and floating limits were a political "sham," Gwartyne said, and reflected more the desires of politicians to be "heroes" to voters through the price fixing of money than a realistic appraisal of economic trends.

The Legislature could also gain votes with housewives by price-fixing back at 28 cents a pound, Gwartyne said. "You'd be homes all the time wasn't any beef, and it's exactly the same with money."

But Gwartyne's measure was sharply attacked by Rep. Peggy Bunting, R-Boise. Bunting said she realized there was "a real problem," but argued for a compromise solution. Under HB 66, all usury limits on home loans would be removed, Bunting said. "Compounding interest is there, just as bright and cheerful as the words themselves," Bunting said.

Bunting said the main push for House Bill 66 came from "a well orchestrated lobbying effort up here to convince us this is the only solution to this issue."

Bunting said the measure would "repeal the borrower's protection on late charges," and would "eliminate the reasonable rate of return to lenders."

Calling the measure "an additional tax" that was "stripping the consumer of all protection under the law so a few people could profit," Bunting said "the day of usury will never go until all men have been born angels, and then there will be no need for government."

But Gwartyne drew support from Rep. Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, who told a packed chamber, "Money should be priced the same as any other commodity." Stivers said persons negotiating home loans should be trusted to use their own intelligence. "Are we to be baby sitters, to go around forever and tell people 'don't do this, don't do that,'" Stivers asked.

All Magic Valley representatives are Republicans. Nine supported House-Bill 66 and three opposed the measure. Opposing the bill were Rep. Vard Chaitburn of Albion, Rep. Ernest Hale of Burley and Rep. Mack Nelburn of Paul.

Leaders of the demonstration refused to disclose details of their plans for Tuesday. The Agriculture Department offered a series of discussions for small groups, and the administration promised an eventual meeting with AAM representatives.

Police reported 20 arrests, mostly for disorderly conduct but a few for assault on a police officer and destruction of government property, in incidents where tempers flared at traffic blocks and tractors rammed police cruisers.

Six police officers were injured. "The police did not do anything to precipitate the incidents," D.C. Police Chief Burtell Jefferson told a news conference.

He said the farm leaders had not kept agreements on designated routes and parking places for their vehicles and had tried to block every arterial street into the city.

He said police crates and tow trucks removed 17 vehicles and would do the same on Tuesday if there were traffic interruptions.

At the White House, press secretary Jody Powell expressed the administration's strong sympathy for the plight of the farmers and said President Carter "would continue the process" of trying to give them a fairer share of the nation's wealth.

Farm-state congressmen, speaking to the rally on Capitol Hill, promised to put the farmers' problems before their fellow senators and representatives from the cities.

Alvin Jenkins, a Campo, Colo. farmer, exhorted the farmers to circle the White House all night long. He vowed to stay in Washington until "we die of starvation."

The farmers planned several more days of demonstrations, lobbying, and Agriculture Department meetings.

220 million of us now

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At 8:45 a.m. MST Monday the United States' population officially reached 220 million persons.

The Commerce Department's Census Clock, which estimates changes in population, adds a person every 19 seconds, taking into account births, deaths and persons moving to and from the country.

An person is born in the United States every 10 seconds, a person dies every 16 seconds, an immigrant is added every 72 seconds and an emigrant is subtracted every 15 minutes, the Commerce Department said.

The U.S. population reached the 200 million level on Nov. 26, 1967. It was 117 million in 1926.

When the first U.S. census was conducted in 1790, the total population was just under 4 million.

Taiwan resolution in works

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an effort to calm congressional fears that America is abandoning Taiwan, the State Department Monday offered to help a Senate committee draft a "keep Taiwan safe" resolution acceptable to President Carter.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, promptly accepted the offer from Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

Though Christopher and Defense Secretary Harold Brown both told the panel that Taiwan needs no further assurances of U.S. support, several committee members — apparently including Church — were unconvinced.

So Christopher said he would help the panel come up with a resolution acceptable to both Congress and the White House. Church said the committee "will take you up on that offer."

Christopher indicated Carter would veto any resolution that contradicted the "new diplomatic agreement between China and the United States, particularly if it implied America was offering Taiwan a new mutual defense treaty.

Carter has notified Taipei he is canceling the 1954 American-Taiwan mutual defense pact at the end of this year as part of the U.S. decision to open diplomatic relations with Peking.

All other official ties between the United States and Taiwan are also being cut, and Carter plans to make future contacts between the two governments through a private corporation called the American Institute in Taiwan.

Teng visit launches global alignment change

SEATTLE (UPI) — Thanks to Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's successful visit, U.S. and Chinese leaders have exceeded beyond their original expectations in launching a significant change in the global alignment of nations by opening a new era of cordial relations between the United States and China.

This new relationship is now expected to grow over the next decade through "trade, technological exchanges" and the search for common international interests. It is not expected to develop into a military alliance, however.

Still very unclear is whether the basic ideological differences between the two nations — and the expected strident reactions of Moscow — will upset what has been achieved.

"We would like to say that this visit by Vice Premier Teng has been a complete success," said Foreign Minister Huang Hua before departing with the Chinese leader for Tokyo and Peking. "The extent of the success has exceeded our expectations."

Michel Oksenberg, a White House China expert who played a key role in the rapprochement of the two countries, said the Teng visit had exceeded the administration's hopes, too. If there was one fault, he said, it was that Teng, who developed a cold and fever, was too heavily scheduled.

During the eight-day visit, the Chinese leader conferred with President Carter, the Congress, and businessmen in Atlanta, Houston and Seattle.

In the South and Pacific Northwest, where the prospect of major trade and investment, seems particularly attractive, he received a particularly warm welcome.

But in the Southwest, where conservative feelings run high, the reaction from businessmen and local officials was more cautious. Houston, where Teng stopped to visit the LBJ Space Center and see modern oil extraction equipment, is the sister city of Taipei, capital of the Nationalist Chinese.

Clearly a major motivating factor for Washington and Peking in launching the strategic realignment is the perceived military threat from the Soviet Union.

Teng stressed over and over he did not seek any formal alliance against the Soviets but rather a "united front" of nations similar to the coalition which the late Chinese Communist leader Mao Tse-tung put together in the 1930s to defeat the Japanese invaders, the Chinese warlords and ultimately the Nationalist forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

China today is both economically and militarily weak. U.S. experts estimate its population at one billion or more and note that it is only just keeping up with its food needs.

China is seeking military aid abroad to cope with the military threat which it sees as complicating its own ambitious modernization program for its economy during the last two decades of this century.

Recent American visitors to Peking, such as Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., report some Chinese military officers favor purchases of sophisticated weapons from the United States.

The Carter administration has weighed the risks of opening a military relationship with Peking and has decided for the moment that the risks involved are too great to justify.

Supplying American arms to China, U.S. officials feel, would gravely upset the already tense relations between the United States and the Soviet Union.

It would probably preclude the United States from concluding a treaty with the Soviet Union on limiting the strategic armaments of the two superpowers.

The Carter administration will be left with a considerable problem of explaining to the Kremlin leaders that the new U.S.-China relationship is not a threat to the Soviet Union.

Before departing, Huang Hua also sought to dampen speculation that the new relationship might develop a military side.

"There is no question of any military alliance between China and the United States," he said.

Vice Premier Teng leaves U.S. with memories, cold

Tuesday briefing

Nader call for nitrite ruling rejected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge Monday turned down a request from Ralph Nader's health researchers that the Food and Drug Administration be forced to rule on the safety of sodium nitrite, the widely used food preservative.

In a related development, the Agriculture Department reported that bacon produced at 19 of 168 meat packing plants tested during the past two months had more suspected cancer-causing nitrosamines than allowable under federal standards.

Judge Gerhard Gessell of the U.S. District Court ruled that the FDA does not have to decide whether the substance is safe because the law grants the Agriculture Department jurisdiction over that question.

The Health Research Group, backed by Nader's Public Citizen Inc., had asked the court to order FDA to review both the safety of sodium nitrite as a food additive and as a color additive.

Gessell ruled that the Nader group had made "substantial arguments" on the color question, but said the court should ask FDA to decide that question first before the court gets involved.

Auto strike voted

LONDON (UPI) — Union officials representing 100,000 workers in Britain's huge state-run British Leyland automotive company voted overwhelmingly Monday for an all-out strike which a union leader said would be "catastrophic." The company said it could not survive.

Other unions called off a scheduled walkout by 2,000 porters, cooks and cleaners that would have shut down 17 London hospitals indefinitely.

Escapes recaptured

ALDERSON, W.Va. (UPI) — Sara Jane Moore, the onetime FBI informer-turned-fugitive who tried to assassinate former President Gerald Ford, and another inmate escaped from a minimum security prison Monday night but were recaptured a few hours later.

Mrs. Moore, 40, serving a life sentence for the attempt on Ford's life in San Francisco Sept. 22, 1975, and Marlene Martino, 35, who was serving a sentence for conspiracy to murder, had been discovered missing during a routine check at 9:22 p.m. at the minimum security Federal Reformatory for Women in Southern West Virginia.

Bianca wants out

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Blanca Jagger petitioned a court Monday to dissolve her eight-year marriage to Rolling Stones singer Mick Jagger and asked for half of $25 million she claims Jagger has earned since their wedding.

Mrs. Jagger is also seeking $4,000 a month in child support and custody of their 7-year-old daughter Jade; $100 monthly alimony; $50,000 in attorney's fees, and $25,000 for court and other litigation costs.

Superior Court Commissioner Darlene Schempp issued a temporary injunction prohibiting Jagger from "harassing" his wife, disposing of community and quasi-community property and talking about their daughter or bringing her to media attention.

Darvon probe opens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration Monday said it has begun a review of the drug most widely marketed as Darvon, saying the medicine has both major benefits and abuse problems.

The developers of the drug propoxyphene said it is safe when used as directed and attributed overdose deaths to people with suicidal motives.

FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy told a Senate subcommittee a study of propoxyphene should be completed in three or four months, after which the agency will decide whether it should be banned, placed under stricter controls or left alone.

Moscow views OK'd

STERLING, Ill. (UPI) — The Justice Department has ruled radio station WSDR may broadcast commentaries provided by Radio Moscow without registering as a foreign agent, the station said Monday.

A spokesman said WSDR will begin airing the commentaries Wednesday.

West German flees

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — A West German expert on refugee affairs has disappeared and is suspected of fleeing with his family to Communist East Germany, justice authorities said Monday.

The disappearance came to light as justice authorities studied thousands of East German secret police documents brought to the West by a defector who disclosed the names of Communist spies.

Justice officials reported Erich Ziegenhelm, director of refugee affairs in the state of Hesse, his wife and two children have not been seen since Thursday when he telephoned his office to say he had a case of food poisoning.

Some freezing drizzle is expected over the southeastern area and temperatures are expected to slowly moderate over the next few days.

Most of the precipitation will be in the form of rain in the valleys this afternoon.

With warmer temperatures and additional precipitation, many places in Idaho may expect flooding conditions to develop. At present, flooding continues near Blackfoot.

Precipitation has fallen throughout most of the region during Monday, mostly as snow but a light rain was reported Monday over the panhandle and a freezing drizzle in the southeast. The heaviest amounts were in the north where just over half an inch was reported Monday.

Defiant Khomeini starts task of selecting ministerial slate

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, moving to transform Iran into a "pure" Islamic state, Monday named elder statesman Mehdi Bazargan as prime minister of a new provisional government in defiance of Premier Shapour Bakhtiar.

Khomeini ordered Iranians to turn out for nationwide demonstrations as an informal referendum for his move — one that could bring millions of Iranians into the streets and raise the threat of another confrontation with the army.

The army supports Bakhtiar, but Khomeini said that if the soldiers try to stop his provisional government

"they will be punished according to Islamic jurisprudence" — a statement that indicated he would invoke Allah's divine providence to help the Islamic republic.

Although Khomeini's naming of Bazargan as prime minister was in open defiance of Bakhtiar, it did not directly challenge the Bakhtiar government — one of the few times he has strayed from his unwavering stand that the Bakhtiar government is illegal because he was appointed by the shah.

Bakhtiar has said Khomeini is free to form a "shadow government" but that if he tries to take over running the government his "ministers" will be arrested. Asked about the possibility of arrest, Bazargan said, "We are all ready to receive the bullets. But nothing will change the direction and will of the people."

Bazargan, 73, an engineer, is former director of the National Iranian Oil Co. and is widely respected by both the Bakhtiar and Khomeini camps and by the army generals who hold the key to the power struggle. Bazargan, considered a moderate, has been talking with rival factions for weeks in an effort to avoid civil war.

Nevertheless, his appointment brought closer a showdown between Khomeini and Bakhtiar. Bakhtiar warned only hours before the Khomeini announcement that he would not tolerate "two governments in Iran" and said if any ayatollah appointee went beyond that role he would immediately order his arrest.

But Bakhtiar said he would not interfere if the ayatollah established a "shadow" provisional government similar to Britain's opposition parties to debate government programs and put forward opposition ideas.

In announcing his call for new nationwide demonstrations Khomeini told a jammed news conference: "I want to ask the Iranians' opinion of the provisional government. I want them to express their opinions and views."

Pantry stocks sought

"I'm aware there are some chiselers, but it's better to not knock the whole program because of a few freeloaders," he said.

Because Vasquez believes that "we are our brother's keeper," he has made the upstairs hotel available "as a place where the police department and the Salvation Army can send people who are hungry and need a place to sleep."

Vasquez has joined a volunteer advisory group organized through the efforts of three Vista volunteers working with the CAA, Rhonda McBride, Sandra Padilla and Scott Lane. The board also has made up of Jess McMurtin, John Riser, Betty Parrott, Gary Thomas and Gordon Simpson of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

Through December 1978, 69 families received emergency food supplies, according to Padilla. She said 26 people, many representing families with small children, utilized the pantry during January.

Because of the extreme cold, many low-income families have had to spend what normally is grocery money to pay their heat bills this winter, she added.

Area residents interested in contributing either food or money to replenish supplies should contact the Community Action Agency. Donations are tax deductible.

A chili feed is planned from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Feb. 14 at the Odd Fellows Hall to help fill the pantry shelves. Tickets are $2 per person.

States may lose $2.25 billion in revenue sharing money

WASHINGTON — Budget Director James T. McIntyre Jr. says the Carter administration is considering whether to recommend elimination of $2.4 billion in federal revenue-sharing to states.

"We are looking at the issue and will have our recommendation to you at the appropriate time," McIntyre told the congressional Joint Economic Committee Monday.

The committee chairman, Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Texas, has introduced a bill to end revenue-sharing to the states next Oct. 1. Bentsen asked McIntyre: "How in the world can we justify revenue-sharing with the states when every one of the states will have a budget surplus this year and the federal budget calls for a federal deficit of $29 billion?"

"That's a good question," McIntyre replied. "It's a question I did examine when we were putting together the budget (for 1980 fiscal year to begin Oct. 1)... Let me tell you why I didn't recommend taking out the revenue-sharing in the '80 budget."

He said Congress already had authorized the program through fiscal 1980 — even though it has not appropriated the money — and an administration proposal to leave it out of the budget might be criticized, as gimmicky. He said the administration wanted to recommend plans that would be passed by Congress.

Bentsen responded that elimination of revenue-sharing was not gimmicky but was a very substantial proposal that had an excellent chance of congressional approval. "Why don't you support it?" Bentsen demanded.

"We'll let you know at the appropriate time," McIntyre said, adding that the appropriate time was before Congress acts on a budget resolution in May.

President Carter during his campaign for the White House advocated elimination of revenue-sharing to the states, but wanted the money passed on directly to cities and other local governments.

The Bentsen bill would allow revenue-sharing to local governments, but would eliminate the share that in the past has been retained by the states. He argued that if the administration wanted to cut the federal deficit, it would have $2.4 billion by cutting the states out of revenue-sharing funds from Washington.

Bentsen said 25 states have asked the federal government to balance its budgets. He said his bill would help reach the goal.

Energy emergency options pondered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An energy official said Monday the administration is considering emergency plans ranging from gasoline ration coupons to banning after-hours lighting to handle an impending energy crisis.

Senators at a hearing of the conservation subcommittee of the Senate Energy Committee were critical of the Energy Department's delay in making proposals.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said although Congress itself has been ruminating, the administration has not followed laws requiring firm contingency planning.

He said the administration has shown "serious neglect, bordering on being criminal in not having done this as required by law."

David Bardin, administrator of the Energy Department's Economic Regulatory Administration, told the subcommittee there are plans being completed that will be submitted to Congress before the month is out. He said they are contingency plans, but he did not say what specifically would trigger them.

He said U.S. crude oil stockpiles were "at relatively comfortable levels" before Iran's problems forced curtailment of that supply. Therefore, he said, the situation is not bad enough for drastic measures.

"Before turning to the various measures that could be taken if the situation becomes significantly worse, let me caution that we should give the market a chance to balance supply and demand, and allocate available supplies," Bardin said.

"We should avoid direct government intervention in the allocation of supplies unless it becomes clear that actual physical shortages will develop or that the impact of the tight supply situation will be borne disproportionately by certain groups."

Bardin said that in addition to emergency coupon rationing of gasoline, four plans are in the works:

- "Forcing service stations to close on weekends.
- "Reducing the parking employers can provide their workers.
- "Forcing managers of large buildings to cut heating and hot water supplies.
- "Banning all but absolutely necessary after-hours lighting of commercial buildings.

"You are two years late with a plan," Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said.

Bardin said the Energy Department has been pushing industries and utilities to switch from oil to natural gas "at least temporarily," because there is a temporary surplus of gas.

The department is also considering diverting oil destined for the national petroleum reserve program, having electricity shared among regions, and "eliminating discretionary driving," Bardin said.

Contract holdback plan called illegal by GAO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The General Accounting Office Monday said part of President Carter's anti-inflation program — designed to withhold government contracts from firms that fuel inflation — is illegal.

But the administration disagrees and said it is going ahead with it.

At issue is the administration's plan to deny government procurement contracts to firms which do not certify they are complying with Carter's voluntary wage and price guidelines.

Milton J. Soefer, GAO general counsel, testified to a House Government Operations subcommittee Monday that the administration has no legal authority for this.

The government, he said, cannot withhold a contract from a firm for refusing to comply with what is basically a voluntary program.

Esther A. Pettigrew, head of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy, which plans to administer the provision, said in a telephone interview the Justice Department "counseled us well in advance this is within the president's authority."

His office plans to begin applying the provision Feb. 15 to contracts exceeding $5 million. Later, that figure is expected to be reduced.

The administration announced Monday that Rockwell International has become the first company to certify that it would adhere to the wage-price guidelines as part of a federal contract.

The certification was included in a $2 billion contract with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in connection with construction of the space shuttle.

The administration says the provision in question will result in government contracts at lower prices.

Rhodes opposes budget amendment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Republican Leader John Rhodes said Monday a constitutional amendment to force a balanced budget would not work and could produce "unthinkable results."

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd also said such a move would be "unwise." And House Speaker Thomas O'Neill hinted the result of such an amendment would be a cutoff of federal funds to the states.

The Byrd and O'Neill opposition to the growing call for a budget-balancing amendment was no surprise. But the strength of the opposition from Rhodes — a fiscal conservative who has long called for balanced budgets — may have a more telling effect.

"It's just a deeply held abhorrence for something that is vain and won't work," Rhodes said of his position.

This places him in opposition to many of his party's leaders, who were sharply divided on the subject at their annual Tidewater conference this past weekend.

'Bert Lance bill' safeguards public against bank misdeeds

WASHINGTON — A new law nicknamed the "Bert Lance bill" as it moved through Congress soon will begin providing the banking public with safeguards against "insider" transactions and other questionable bank practices.

The Financial Institutions Regulatory Act, which takes effect March 1, will place limits on loans by banks to their own executives, directors and major shareholders. It also will prohibit bank directors from sitting on the board of a savings and loan organization in the same geographic area.

Impetus for the bill came from public indignation over insider loans and overstatements that "insider" President Carter's budget director, allegedly engineered as an official of two Georgia banks.

Some states already limit such practices. The new law will give regulators additional clout by providing the option of federal prosecution.

Supporters of the reforms say favoritism in making loans can cause banks to over-extend their resources, contributing to bank failures.

Besides restricting insider transactions and overdrafts by bank officers and directors, the regulatory act will:

- Eliminate preferential loan relationships between "correspondent" banks — banks that do business with each other. This applies to officers, directors and 10 percent shareholders of each bank.
- Prohibit correspondent relationships if insiders from either bank have preferential loans or overdrafts with the other bank.
- Require disclosure to bank regulators, but not the public, of credit arrangements between insiders of correspondent banks.
- Ban interlocking directorates between two banks if one has $1 billion or more in assets and the other has $500 million or more in assets.
- However, interlocking management is permitted among institutions when the same person or group holds 50 percent or more of the stock of each bank or savings & loan.

• Compel financial institutions to notify customers when a federal agent tries to see the customers' bank records without having obtained a court subpoena or summons. The customer then could challenge the government's request.

BACK TO HEALTH

By Michael Handlino D.C.

In our modern society, one of every ten men-hours lost from work is due to spinal disability. Back pain and other back disorders are frequently caused by defects in the alignment or in the mobility of one or more of spinal segments, the vertebrae.

In most cases, the trouble starts with an accident, a minor fall or the subjection of the back muscles to an excessive load. Any of these factors stretch the supporting muscles or ligaments, causing the misalignment of the vertebrae.

Chiropractic adjustment is able to correct the misalignment, thus relieving the muscle strain and correcting the misalignment, thus "curing" the

British industrialists didn't finish job

By GEORGE F. WILL
The Washington Post Co.
LONDON — The late Aneurin Bevan, still revered by many British socialists who hunger for saints and have few candidates for sainthood, once exclaimed, "What's all this talk about making British industry more efficient? It's far too efficient as it is!" Bevan probably meant many things, but almost certainly meant this:

Efficiency means more production per worker. But the economy's growth is poor and jobs are scarce, so workers must have a semi-property right to their jobs, and emphasis on efficiency conflicts with that right. Socialism, say some socialists, humanly emphasizes security at the expense of economic dynamism. But the edgy, truculent temper of British unions expresses a pervasive insecurity that is directly related to the lack of confidence in the economy's efficiency — its job-creating dynamism.

More spent 25 years in Britain studying that nation's capitalism and getting it wrong. Capitalism, he said, is a perpetual revolution, in which all "ancient and venerable prejudices and opinions, are swept away." Not in Britain, as Daniel Bell writes, Britain was the first nation to begin industrializing, but it never had its heart in it, and never properly completed the job. Industrialists wanted to "graduate" to gentlemanliness, which meant buying a country house, and sending sons into the governing class. That meant into government, to rule the waves and the 25 percent of the earth's land and population over which the Union Jack flew. Avoidance of industry is a living tradition.

Between 1968 and 1975, the percentage of Britain's university graduates entering government employment nearly doubled, and the percentage entering industry fell sharply. A school headmaster says: "These are trends of which the Victorian public schoolmasters would have been proud. (Today's teachers) are just as hostile to the needs of industry in particular, and capitalism in general, as any Victorian schoolmaster. The snobbery of one age has become the escapism of another."

Anti-capitalism is self-conscious in the Labor Party, which is an uneasy coalition of social democrats, doctrinaire socialists, and extremists whose politics shade into sedition. No other major Western party has such conflicts between the basic values of important members.

Many social democrats have more in common with most Conservatives (and American Democrats, and even some Republicans) than with some Labor colleagues. They are enthusiastic about the welfare state, uninterested in nationalization of industries, and anti-Communist in foreign policy. The more doctrinaire socialists favor more nationalization, and tend to be anti-anti-Communist. The far left, commonly called Trotskyists, consists of people who, 40 years ago, might have pursued their aims in the Communist Party.

Strategically placed extremists often set the tone of labor disputes. One theme of Tom Stoppard's new play, "Night and Day," is union bloody-mindedness. A journalist who fell afoul of the radicals at this provincial newspaper recalls their attitudinizing:

"On any other subject, like the death of the novel, or the sex life of the editor's secretary, they spoke ordinary English, but as soon as they started trying to get me to join the strike, it was as if their brains had been taken out and replaced by mercury. Their only gift ball things you get in electric typewriters: betrayal, confrontation, management. My God, you'd need a more supple language than that to describe an argument between two amocbas."

A Conservative politician says, rather too kindly, that Labor's follow-traveling extremists, with their kind words for the East bloc, are like the 17th-century Puritans who favored the Turks against the Catholics but still, at bottom, shared Christian premises with the Catholics. Actually, as various moderate Laborites will say, the extremists reject Britain's political traditions, regard parliamentarism as a fraud, and dislike the House of Lords much more than the KGB.

But, strange to say, the most divisive "development" within the Labor Party is the social democrats' tentative sideways shuffle toward the obvious conclusion that there must be statutory restraint on the actions unions can take in industrial disputes.

Why tinker with sunshine law?

Legislators have taken turns at their microphones this winter speaking to the importance of following the "1 percent mandate" given them by Idaho voters.

Our elected carriers of the people's will apparently place in high esteem the majority support of the tax-limiting initiative.

With all the lip service paid to the 1 percent "mandate" it seems incongruous some of the most respected legislators apparently seem determined to ignore an even more impressive mandate from the voters on the issue of financial disclosure of campaign finances.

Last fall, the 1 percent initiative passed by a healthy 58 percent margin. But in 1974, 77 percent of the voters approved the "Sunshine Initiative" directing politicians to disclose from whom they received contributions and how they spent them.

This mandate for full financial disclosure has found two powerful enemies in the legislature, Sen. J. Wilson Steen of Glenns Ferry and Rep. Ralph Olmstead of Twin Falls.

Steen this week will introduce a bill designed to expunge the sunshine law from the Idaho Code.

Steen argues the sunshine law is a nuisance and an unnecessary harassment of Idaho politicians.

His thinking takes the following course:

First, he will argue politicians aren't crooks and therefore a sunshine law isn't needed.

Second, he will argue that the sunshine law, by requiring candidates to disclose their financial backing before Election Day, leaves the impression among voters that politicians are guilty of some shady financial footwork that helps them get elected.

Third, Steen will point out the Idaho Sunshine Law in four years hasn't produced one bit of information of interest to voters.

Concede Senator Steen the point that all politicians aren't crooks. And, give him half a point for recognizing that the mandate from the people for a sunshine law came at the height of the Watergate turmoil when people demanded some visible accountability from their elected leaders.

Give the Glenns Ferry rancher another fraction of a point for saying that most people don't care about the sunshine reports listing where campaign contributions come from or where they go.

But these are not reasons enough to repeal the sunshine laws.

Much as senator Steen might disagree, all politicians aren't as honest as he. As the trial of Rep. Daniel Flood showed just a few days ago, some politicians would gladly pocket campaign money given them or take money from dubious sources if no one found out about the transactions.

And on the point that voters may not read the sunshine reports, Senator Steen should rest assured that the press does read them.

The reports give valuable insight into what groups and individuals support which candidates.

For his own good, Steen probably should recognize the benign nature of the Idaho Sunshine Law. Unlike disclosure laws in other states, Idaho's sunshine law doesn't limit or prohibit contributions from out-of-state groups, from corporations or from family members. All it does is show where a candidate's money comes from and where it goes.

The law could be much tougher.

As it is written, the law won't stop all political corruption — but it helps. It's a good, middle-ground disclosure provision.

For the good of Idaho politics, it should be left intact.

Third World power fight China, Russia rivalry grows

By RICHARD F. STAAR

More than 100,000 Vietnamese regulars and a few thousand insurgents launched an all-out offensive against the fraternal communist government of Cambodia this past December 25. After only two weeks, Phnom Penh fell and key regime officials escaped to China via Thailand. This is but the most recent example of proxy warfare between Peking and Moscow, whose military advisers in Hanoi helped plan the invasion. The U.S.S.R. had signed a treaty with Vietnam in November, a month before the final assault upon Chinese-supported Kampuchea (Cambodia).

These developments represent the latest in a continuing struggle for influence throughout the Third World between the Bear and the Dragon.

The growing rivalry between Moscow and Peking to "win hearts and minds" throughout Asia, Africa, and Latin America raises the question of respective achievements in this international competition. This question becomes all the more important in light of recent developments in Southeast Asia.

The political struggle between the U.S.S.R. and the People's Republic of China now spans the globe. In black Africa, it appears that much of what the Soviets are doing is directly related to strategic military objectives. These are primarily naval-Russian competition with China — can be seen clearly among the African guerrilla movements. In India, the Chinese have been unable to compete on equal terms with the Russians due to the sheer magnitude of Soviet assistance and also due to the "hedgehog" tactics of defeat by the People's Republic of China in the October-November 1963 border war. The Soviets did miscalculate on the other hand, by maintaining close relations with the administration of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and by ignoring contacts with other political parties and the Indian people themselves.

In the Middle East, Russia once again far exceeds China in its ability to provide economic aid. Despite this disparity of resources, Peking has established a diplomatic presence in all of the "front-line" states confronting Israel. Most recently, Peking gave support to Anwar Sadat's peace initiative vis-a-vis Israel, which Moscow had condemned. Moscow and Peking both support the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). PLO executive committee chairman, Yasser Arafat, however, leans toward the U.S.S.R.

In Latin America, as well, the U.S.S.R. appears to be well ahead of the PRC in extending its influence.

Only in the Asia/Pacific area does the PRC have a marked advantage, particularly in those areas that have been influenced by the Chinese empire for centuries. Moscow maintains particularly close relations with Vietnam and Laos, both of which are ruled by communist parties that are becoming increasingly pro-Soviet. Cambodia, by contrast, has closely aligned itself with the PRC. In mid-summer of 1977, for example, Cambodian diplomats left Russia without explanation. Phnom Penh broke relations with Hanoi six months later because of pitched battles involving tanks and aircraft. The ensuing contest led President Carter's adviser on national security affairs to describe the fighting as "the first case of proxy war between China and the Soviet Union."

The attempt to extend Soviet influence throughout Asia, of course, is looked upon as a direct threat to Peking. Thus, in contrast to its past efforts to subvert non-communist Southeast Asian governments, the PRC recently has given strong endorsements to the five-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN). ASEAN, however, cooperates in combatting communist-led insurgencies which in most cases are supported by the PRC. Principal Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-ping visited Burma and Nepal also in early 1978. Both of the latter two states are located along mainland China's periphery, and the trips obviously had as their objective a common strategy to block Soviet influence.

The recent Vietnam-Cambodia conflict highlights, however, the disparity of resources which marks Russian and Chinese attempts at intervention in Third World affairs. Not only can Moscow deliver on short notice vast quantities of weapons, but also in the area of economic and technical aid its program is literally worldwide and includes on-the-job training both in the field and in the U.S.S.R. itself. This preponderance of resources has been particularly important in sealing close relations between Moscow and Hanoi.

Peking, on the other hand, may have more appeal than Moscow vis-a-vis the Third World, because it is an oriental rather than a European power and also a lesser-developed country itself. Psychologically, this makes for easier acceptance of the PRC by the Third World and closer identification and empathy on the part of the PRC with local problems — empathy for which the Russians are hardly noted.

Pacific Northwest power legislation to resurface

WASHINGTON — When a large, complicated piece of legislation lies on the table for a long time, people tend to lose sight of the bill's original intent and of its details. They begin to imagine that the bill has been amended to meet their expectations, even though it has not been acted on.

Just before the 95th Congress went out of business three months ago, the Pacific Northwest Power Planning and Conservation Act died, withdrawn by its sponsor, Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

The bill will probably reappear within a month and dominate Pacific Northwest politics here.

True, major debate will center on the RARE II legislation, and fisheries legislation will address urgent conflicts within the region.

But nothing is more inextricably at the heart of the Northwest's future than energy. The dominant fact of life is that the region's supply of cheap hydroelectric energy is running short of demand. The energy bill should begin to answer several questions which rage within the region: What kind of economy shall be planned? How much industrial growth shall there be? Shall there be nuclear reactors?

Three major developments have occurred since the energy bill died last October:

- An important lawsuit, which challenged the preference clause in the Bonneville Project Act of 1937 (giving priority access to wholesale hydroelectricity to public utilities) was dismissed in federal court.
- Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., held field hearings on the energy bill in Boise, Portland, Seattle and Helena, Mont.
- Cost overruns at nuclear power plants being constructed by the Washington Public Power Supply System (WPPSS) have become so large that WPPSS is attracting national attention for its imprudent management.
- Except for the introduction of one new issue — fisheries — arguments over the power bill will center on much the same ground as last year.
- The preference clause, by which public utility districts are guaranteed priority access to cheap hydroelectricity marketed by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA), the energy bill must equalize the rate disparity between what residential customers of private utilities pay and what public utility customers pay, but without threatening the preference clause, which is sacred to the public power lobby throughout America.
- How to change the preference clause to give Oregon consumers favorable rates without appearing to change the preference clause," is how Rep. Bob Duncan, D-Ore., states the problem.

- Financing. This provision, which would assure financing of power plants planned by public and private utilities by guaranteeing purchase of output from those plants) has some financial aspects which cause anxiety at the U.S. Treasury Department. This provision is also a code word for nuclear power among environmentalist groups. WPPSS would like to have its costly plants which are under construction included, or "grandfathered," into the bill under this provision.
- Aluminum industry. This group, called the direct service industries (because it buys electricity directly from Bonneville), will take the brunt of the increase in electricity rates, so that residential customers of private utilities may have their rates lowered. In return, the aluminum industry wants a phase-in to the higher rates, plus long-term guarantees that electricity will be available to it.
- Fish. The fish which spawn in the Columbia River have historically been given low priority in the BPA's program. Fish must compete with the energy, irrigation and recreation roles which the Columbia plays.

- Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., will introduce amendments to assure that fish are given high priority. Rep. Dingell will be a strong ally in this endeavor.
- Public participation. The energy bill sets up a process by which the administrator of BPA plans the region's energy future. He must first conserve energy, then use cost-effective renewable sources of energy (solar, geothermal and wind). Only when those sources have been exhausted may the administrator plan for construction of new power plants. Contained in this provision is a definition of cost-effectiveness. Another controversial matter will be the regional councils which the legislation defines to review the BPA administrator's forecast of the region's energy needs and his program of conservation and renewables.
- Assuming that the issues remain the same, there will be some new players, and some old players will take on new roles.
- With the retirement of Rep. Lloyd Meeds, D-Wash., two voids were created. Meeds was House sponsor of the energy bill, and he was chairman of the Subcommittee on Water and Power Resources of the House Interior Committee, which shared split jurisdiction over the bill with the Subcommittee on Energy and Power of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, chaired by Dingell.

Meeds' subcommittee chairmanship likely to be taken by Rep. Abraham Kazen, D-Texas. The role of House sponsor seems to be taken by Rep. Bob Duncan.

At a recent Northwest congressional caucus, Duncan made a brief plea for cooperation and consensus on the energy bill, while Duncan tries to downplay his role as House leader of the bill — Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., says: "He (Duncan) is my leader on this issue."

Duncan says he will introduce a bill identical to Jackson's, plus some amendments which were agreed to in House subcommittee sessions last year. He has been in close touch with Jackson's staff, Jackson says of Duncan, "Bob has been very helpful. I have nothing but admiration for him."

Says Duncan, "We need substantial unanimity. We can continue to squabble and hassle with each other for a little advantage, and we can kiss it good-bye."

But don't expect the Northwest delegation to line up solidly behind Duncan. "It's one thing to hang together," says Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore. "It's another to have a bill dropped into the hopper without prior consultation. Amending of the bill should go on before hand, so the working vehicle represents as much agreement as we can obtain."

Rep. Bonker projects the same attitude. He will have substantial amendments in the areas of fisheries and public participation. Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., will probably introduce amendments in the areas of rate structure, conservation and renewables, and public participation.

The other major actor in the House will be Dingell, who now has the benefit of field hearings in the Northwest.

"I think something can move through here," says Dingell. "But the people in the Northwest will be agree. There is great controversy in the Northwest as to whether there is need for the power that would be generated by new plants."

Dingell lists the bill's problems: "Lack of support from public power people out there (in the Northwest). Lack of agreement in the Northwest in general. The fairly open opposition in Idaho and Montana. The failure to include fisheries and natural resources values in the bill. Lack of proper and broad representation on advisory panels."

Cult foes, followers square off at hearing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Foes and followers of religious cults, interrupted by cheers, boos and shouts, squared off Monday at a raucous Senate hearing called in response to the Jonestown massacre to look into the "battle for the mind" of young America.

The cultists compared themselves to early Christian martyrs, while their arch enemies — the "deprogrammers" — accused them of raping the minds of America's youth.

The informal hearing — organized by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan. — quickly turned into a noisy debate over the First Amendment rights of religious cults.

Civil libertarians and establishment religious groups, worried about the far-reaching implications of a cult investigation, joined the cultists in attacking the rump hearing as a witch hunt.

Rabbi Maurice Davis of White Plains, N.Y., who claims to have deprogrammed 120 youths, compared the cults to "the Nazi Youth Movement."

Davis, interrupted by shouts of

"fiat" and "garbage," accused the cultists of luring "children with candy-coated lies in order to rape their minds."

Ted Patrick, who makes a living "deprogramming" young adherents, said the cults are trying "to make willing slaves" of youngsters.

"It's a battle for the mind," he said.

But the head of the American branch of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's controversial Unification Church said the real target of the critics "is not cults but religion itself."

"Like the early Christians our faith has given us the strength to withstand public ridicule, discrimination or even government harassment," Neil Salonen said.

Salonen received a standing ovation from cultists at the well-attended hearing. Outside, several hundred members of Moon's church sang patriotic songs and held banners denouncing Dole.

Other groups or beliefs mentioned by the 23 witnesses at the hearing were the Hare Krishnas, Scientologists, The Way International, Children of God, and Transcendental Meditation.

The Rev. Barry Lynn, an official of the establishment United Church of Christ, said the hearing "has come dangerously close to what some might label a witch hunt."

Lynn went as far as saying the methods of religious cults "are not as a legal matter different in quality every religious faith and secular institution in this country."

The Rev. Dean Kelley of the American Civil Liberties Union said the Jonestown massacre "should not blind citizens to the serious constitutional questions raised by demands for government investigation of cults."

But Dole insisted the hearing was "not an inquisition, not a witch hunt, not a media event, but an effort to learn something."

Jackie Speler, who was wounded when her boss — Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif. — was killed in Guyana, told the hearing of "perhaps the singularly most important fact of Jonestown: it can happen again."

Expert says taped voice not shah

WASHINGTON — A voice analysis expert has labeled as fraudulent a tape recording purported to be of Shah Mohanmud Reza Pahlavi's final remarks to military leaders before his departure from Iran.

Anthony Pellicano, who runs Voice Interpretation and Analysis, a leading voice identification company, said his tests on the tape, which includes mention of a prolonged fight to return the shah to power, showed that it was not the shah's voice.

"My final conclusion is that the shah is not the speaker," he said.

Pellicano, who has also done work for the House committee investigating the assassination of President Kennedy and on the 18-minute tape that appeared in one of President Nixon's tapes, was commissioned by The New York Times to test the tape. The Times received a copy of the tape from a member of the Iranian National Front, which is opposed to the shah.

Last week, CBS News, one of a number of news organizations that were given a copy of the cassette tape, said that three independent voice experts had verified that the man speaking was the shah.

A spokesman for the State Department said he did not believe the tape was genuine, and in Morocco, a spokesman for the shah called it a complete fabrication.

The tape is said to be a copy of a purported secret speech the shah made to his top military commanders and leading members of Savak, Iran's secret police, a week before he left the country.

Nuclear test ban negotiations resume

GENEVA (UPI) — The United States, Soviet Union and Britain Monday resumed negotiations on a comprehensive nuclear test ban with little likelihood of early agreement.

U.S. officials said "many critical technical questions" have to be resolved concerning verification controls to guard against cheating.

Opinion in Washington also is sharply divided about concluding a ban on all nuclear tests before or after a new U.S.-Soviet treaty at the separate Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT).

British officials conceded that they in effect are "waiting in the wings" for the two super-powers to come to a decision.

France and China, the two other nuclear powers, further have expressed reservations about adhering to a complete test ban treaty if and when it is negotiated.

Both the Chinese and French have said they may well have to continue underground testing to ensure their nuclear weapons remain in working order.

It was thus the sixth round that began Monday with delegations headed by Dr. Herbert F. York for the United States, Andrei M. Petrov for the Soviet Union and John Edmonds for Britain.

The United States, which originally wanted a treaty of indefinite duration, apparently now is holding out for an agreement to last from three to five years. The argument is that nuclear weapons should be tested at some point to check on reliability.

Treasury chief backs value added tax idea

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal Monday gave a boost to the idea of a value-added tax, a form of sales tax, as a partial substitute for other federal taxes.

Without committing himself, Blumenthal called the VAT "a very important issue that ought to be thoroughly explored" and said, "I am not unsympathetic to it at all."

The Treasury will be ready whenever Congress holds hearings on that, he said. No one expects action on the proposal this year, but it should be discussed and legislation might be considered in 1981, he said.

Although Blumenthal emphasized at a meeting with reporters that he has not made up his mind about the VAT, his remarks were mostly positive. His comments were the clearest indication so far that the Carter administration is seriously considering a VAT for the future.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., is promoting the VAT to replace Social Security payroll taxes and to permit "drastic" reductions in income taxes to a maximum 33 percent rate for individuals and below 40 percent for corporations. Long plans hearings on VAT later this year, but acknowledges "that no legislation" can be expected for a couple of years.

A VAT is a form of sales or consumption tax that is levied at each stage of production and consumption and ultimately is passed on to consumers through higher prices.

The subject of VAT arose as Blumenthal discussed the movement for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget. He opposed a constitutional amendment for that purpose or to set limits on federal spending because the government would lose its flexibility to deal with economic emergencies.

Blumenthal did not comment directly on Long's proposal of a constitutional amendment to limit the federal income tax rate on individuals to a maximum 33 percent, which Long considers part of a VAT package.

Vance pushes aid fund

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance urged Congress Monday to go along with the Carter administration's 1980 budget request for nearly $9 billion in foreign aid.

Vance defended the $9.9 billion economic and military aid request — the largest slices going to Israel and Egypt — in a presentation to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The secretary of state said the assistance would better the quality of life for millions of people in the developing world and help the United States by "improving our relations with individual developing nations."

He said the United States winds up getting much of the money back through exports. A third of all American sales abroad — $42 billion in 1977 — go to developing nations.

The developing world buys about half of America's wheat exports, 60 percent of its cotton exports and 70 percent of its rice exports.

Vance defended America's military assistance programs for the 1980 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1, 1979. The aid would go primarily to Israel and Egypt.

Tennessee man sues on finding he was freed 10 years ago

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — John Currier was supposed to have been a free man as of 10 years ago, but he says no one bothered to tell him.

However, now that he knows, the 46-year-old man has asked his attorney to sue for $500,000.

It was in 1963 that Currier, who had been sentenced to life in prison for murder in 1949, was paroled to the custody of a wealthy suburban farmer. But instead of gaining his freedom, he continued to work as sort of an indentured servant on the sprawling farm of the late Hubert L. Worrell.

Correction Department records show a letter was sent to Worrell and Currier in 1968 saying the period of supervision and parole was over.

Currier was to become a free man. But Currier, who has the equivalent of a third-grade education and cannot read, said he wasn't given the news until last October when a probation officer produced a copy of the 10-year-old letter.

"I'm still angry about it," he said. "But it don't do no good. You can get in a lot more trouble."

During his years at the Worrell farm, Currier's suit charges his living conditions were grim. He said he was forced to bathe "in a horse trough with a garden hose hung over a ceiling beam," and slept in a drafty trailer.

It was 1970, Currier said, before he started receiving any wages for his work. His pay started at $5 a week and climbed to $20 a week in the past few years.

"They kept him as kind of an indentured servant," said Sam Lippford, state director of probations and parole.

J.H. Worrell Jr., son of the man charged with supervising Currier, said his father died three years ago. Worrell said the first time he saw the letter was when Currier did. In his suit, Currier said if he had known he was a free man he would have returned to Kingston, Tenn., where his family still lives. Now, he said, his plans are uncertain.

"I haven't made up my mind," he said. "I'll have to see how things come out. I'll cross one bridge at a time."

UN yawns at anti-divorce law campaign

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — North American male liberation movements failed Monday to win United Nations support for their campaign to change U.S. and Canadian divorce laws.

MEN International, a coalition of men's rights and male liberation organizations in the United States and Canada, said divorce laws in those two countries violate the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

"The multibillion dollars divorce racket" is based on financial extortions, judicial sex bias and tyrannical postures against parents and fathers in particular, he said.

On Fathers Day, June 19, "thousands of fathers" will march on Washington to protest against official failure to change the divorce laws, Abbruzzese said.

Carlo E. Abbruzzese, chairman of MEN International, based in Santa Ana, Calif., called on the U.N. Human Rights division Monday to seek backing for the campaign.

He said 93 percent of fathers involved in U.S. and Canadian divorce cases are denied custody of children involved "or even decent visitations."

But U.N. officials informed him that no punitive action can be taken.

Reader names winter of '79 in Illinois 'Incredible Bulk'

DE KALB, Ill. (UPI) — "The Incredible Bulk?"

That was the winning entry in a De Kalb Daily Chronicle contest which asked its readers to name the miserable winter of 1978-79. It was one of more than 300 suggestions, some of which were unprintable.

The newspaper in this city 60 miles west of Chicago offered cash prizes and published a list of all the entries last week.

The longest name, which caused some problems for the Chronicle's typesetting computer, was "Supercalifragilisticexpialidociousnowslush" — a takeoff on the Mary Poppins nonsense song.

The entry stopped over onto three printed lines.

Many readers adopted names from movies, such as "The Blizzard of Odds," "Snow Wars," "White Beauty," and "Snow White."

Other entries included "The Winter of Our Discontent," "Snowy," "Killin' it," "The Year of the Blankly Blanket," "Baby Makin' Time of '79," "Super Dump," and "Snow Blower."

Last week here to get postmark

LOVELAND, Colo. (UPI) — This is the last week, so haste is advised for those who want the "Sweetheart City" postmark on their valentines, says Loveland Postmaster Henry Porter.

Volunteers in Loveland each year re-mail valentines with the Loveland postmark and stamp each envelope with a four-line cachet. The envelopes then are held by the post office for mailing just before Valentine's Day.

Requests come from every state and many foreign countries. Porter said Saturday that last year, a record 200,000 valentines were re-mailed. He said expectations are for this year's total to be substantially higher.

The service is free except for the 15-cent postage required on each card to be re-mailed. Porter said valentines should be addressed: Postmaster, Loveland, Colo., 80537, to arrive by Feb. 9 for mailing.

Taurus — listen to advice but do your own driving

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Morning is especially good for getting in touch with other persons and for putting in motion whatever logical course of action appeals to you. The afternoon gradually becomes worse and considerable problems attend forcing any issues or taking chances.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is fine for working out problems with others, but the evening is not so good. Much care must be exercised in driving, walking, talking with others. Take it easy, then.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Put those ideas to work that will help you to add to abundance, but use caution later in the day. You get excellent advice in the morning but later could be given the wrong steer.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get into activities that bring you greater success and carry through all day. Combine good judgment with intuition for best results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Analyzing your present status will show you how to proceed in the days ahead. Do some studying that equips you better for work that has to be done.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Go after your most positive ambitions since the planets are favorable and you can start gaining them. Make appointments with persons you most admire for best results. Gain their cooperation.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into those activities that will help you to have more respect in your community. The favor of bigwigs can help you to expand.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get into new interests. A real scope and gain headway now. Pay more attention to your hunches, which are good. Avoid one who could give you big trouble and have an eye on your assets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You now know what higher-ups expect of you and can carry through intelligently and get good results. Get into some new work that will add to present abundance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan social affairs early, then handle important business matters. Introducing kin to a bigwig can bring about something interesting.

What's What

Cabbies — you have to tell the deadbeats from corpses in Connecticut; is there a skid row on Mt. Trashmore?

Consider those marriage that don't end in divorce. At the turn of the century they were expected to last 30 years. Today they're expected to last 50 years. Now consider those marriages that do end in divorce. Not all break up in the first 10 or 20 or even 30 years. The discount not only lingers but sometimes grows. It is no longer remarkable to read of middle-aged and even elderly couples who wind up divorced. The point? One reason the divorce rate has risen of late is the couples live longer. They have more time to decide to call it quits. That's item No. 692C in our Love and War man's file labeled "Misleading statistics."

BLONDES

Q. "I know most American women aren't blondes. But what proportion of them were born blondes?"

A. About 55 percent. A lot of pretty women in their twenties look in the mirror and wonder where the fair hair went. They ought not fret. For larger cause, a lot of men do that, too.

Q. "Did the ancient Romans take a census?"

A. Did indeed. And on it, plus the usual, they listed each citizen's debts and the names of the creditors.

Q. "How much does a newborn hippo weigh?"

A. Maybe 40 pounds. It's expected to gain about 360 pounds the first year.

In Hartford, Conn., any taxi driver who carries a corpse in the cab is subject to a $5 fine.

COLOR MEMORY

Some people have a knack for remembering the precise color of things. Most don't. Some can go to a textile shop and pick out a matching color even though they don't have with them the color they want to match. Most can't. It's odd. This thing called color memory is inherited. You can't learn it. You either have it or you don't.

If a girl is to engage in a brief career of shoplifting, the most likely to do so at ages 15 to 17. If a boy is to do that thing, he is most likely to try it at ages 12 to 14. Or so the juvenile records indicate.

The citizens at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, are getting ready to build a ski slope over the city's garbage dump, and call it "Mt. Trashmore."

"This IS my homework. In history we're studying the fifties."

The Jota, a traditional Basque dance, found participants wheeling and spinning throughout the evening

A bash for the Basques

JEROME — Once the Basque dance marked the end of lambing season and served as a final social gathering before shepherders took their flocks to the loneliness of summer ranges. But times have changed.

Many of the large sheep operations in Magic Valley have gone out of business, partly because of the scarcity of Basque shepherders, long considered the best in the trade.

So the ethnic quality of these dances has diluted in recent years.

The Basque dances last Friday night at the Jerome Elks Club, sponsored by the Shoshone Basque Ladies, was a good illustration of the "Americanization" of this once nearly exclusive folk tradition.

Probably 75 per cent of attending the Jerome event had no family ties with persons of Basque nationality, according to Juanita O'Malley, chairman. Although married to an Irishman, Pat O'Malley is Basque herself.

But traditional ethnic dances such as the jota still were danced with vigor by the Jerome crowd, although not all the participants were well versed on the sequence of steps in the folk dance. The dance, done to fast music, calls for participants to put their hands in the air, kick their feet and spin around, but in a definite sequence of steps—unlike much of the informal modern dancing.

Another traditional folk dance included in the Shoshone-Basque Ladies' annual event was a march where dancers join hands and follow the leader. When the beat changes, dancers jump on one foot for several seconds, then as the music stops, all bend to touch the floor.

As the music resumes they stand up and again take off in a circle.

Colorful Basque costumes which once marked these dances also seldom seen now at such dances, but a few berets were apparent—Friday night.

Refreshments still reflect Basque cuisine, with chorizos, made from pork mixed with dried pepper pulp, featured. Chorizos, served on a bun, are considered Basque sausage, Mrs. O'Malley said.

Proceeds from the annual dance are used for charity.

While Basque dances no longer attract the crowds they did years ago, some type of event, such as a dinner, still is held in several Magic Valley communities such as Halley, Rupert and Gooding, Mrs. O'Malley said. Buhl and Shoshone groups are about the only places where the traditional dance is still held.

Dancers stepped lively to the sounds of Jim Jausoro and his band

She's losing interest due to his savings

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 33, divorced, and have been dating for two years. He says he loves me and wants to marry me, but I'm not ready for another marriage just yet. My problem is the way Gary holds on to his money. He's never offered to pay my baby-sitter. (I have two children.) I wish I had to ask Gary to lend me money for the baby-sitter because I was short.

How he wants me to go on a ski vacation with him and expects me to pay all my own expenses — plane fare, lodging, meals and even the ski-lift tickets!

My girlfriends tell me that when they go on trips with their boyfriends, the guys pay for everything. It's not that Gary can't afford to treat me. Far from it. He is very well-heeled.

This money problem is making me resent him. Am I expecting too much? What do you think?

DEAR TROUBLE: Generous he's not. But before you label him a well-heeled heel, consider this. Gary may need to prove to himself that he's not buying your companionship. Rejoice. If you decide to say goodbye, you'll owe him nothing.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old woman who gave birth to a fine, healthy baby boy three weeks ago.

What should I say to women who criticize me for not breast-feeding my baby?

My mother-in-law suggested I tell them I don't have enough milk to nurse my baby, but that isn't the case. My decision was a personal choice, and one I am happy with.

I talked it over with my doctor, and he assured me that a bottle-fed baby gets as much nourishment as a breast-fed baby, and as long as a close physical contact is maintained during feeding time my baby will not suffer feelings of neglect.

Please help me.

Health

Tinnitus symptoms common

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb:

I am a 62-year-old male—I am—in reasonably good health but I have a problem with my head roaring and my ears ringing. If I wake up at night, it seems worse. My problem started about 12 months ago and became worse in the last six months.

I have been to several doctors and they have not been able to answer my problem. I would appreciate any information that you might offer.

Dear Reader,

I'm not surprised that you haven't been able to get much help for this condition. Until very recently there were limited things that doctors had to offer for this—all too common problem.

Actually, more than 30 million adult Americans have a similar disorder. It frequently accompanies hearing loss but you can have it even if your hearing is normal.

To help you understand this problem and also to give you basic information on what can be done about it, I am sending you The Health Letter number 12-70, Help For Tinnitus—Noise Or Ringing In The Ears. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As The Health Letter I am sending you explains, tinnitus is a symptom. It can be caused by many different factors. It can simply be from wax in the ear. In that case, your doctor would have no trouble treating it. Sometimes it is associated with defects in the middle ear where your tiny ear bones are. If it is a temporary condition and as the problem is corrected, the ringing in the ears also disappears.

If you injure your ear with noise such as being exposed to loud blasts, you may have ringing in the ears until they recover. This is a good warning. Also, various medicines can cause it. You'd be surprised that in a few people a small amount of aspirin is able to produce this problem. After this comes circulatory problems and even various mechanical problems.

Whenever the underlying condition can be corrected, that is the preferred treatment. However, in a large number of people the real cause for the tinnitus can't be found or if it is, it is something that can't be cured. These people can obtain relief from some of the new management techniques that have been developed. If you happen to have associated hearing loss, a hearing aid may solve your problem. You could have hearing loss and not know it, particularly if it is in the high-frequency ranges that don't affect your hearing normal conversation.

For those people who have noise and ringing in the ears and have normal hearing, there is a Tinnitus Masker (TM). This looks just like a hearing aid and is worn like one. It generates a band of noise between 2000 and 7000 Hz. This small band of noise affects the mechanism that receives sounds in some way and masks the objectionable tinnitus.

People who experience their trouble mostly at night and it bothers their sleeping may get some help with an FM radio. All you have to do is tune it so that it is between stations and produces static, then turn up the static so that it is fairly loud. You should have the radio close to the bed for optimal effect.

Power company office lights queried

My wife and I moved here a month ago. We are barely getting by. A large portion of our income goes for utility bills. It makes me mad that Idaho Power Co. leaves every light in their office building on all night long. We live near there, so I know they do it every night. And we are all paying the bill. Maybe the consumption rate has dropped and they have to make up for it every way they can. And they talk so much about conservation. It's like they are thumbing their noses at me every time I drive by. Is there a reason for it? — Ken Bell, Twin Falls.

IPC Division Manager George Elliott responds that his building is "probably the most conservation-conscious building in Twin Falls." Elliott explains that the structure is designed to be heated primarily by its lighting. The small auxiliary unit that powers the building's air movement system is not powerful enough to boost the indoor temperature to a comfortable level by itself in eight hours, he says. But when the lights are left on overnight his employees arrive to a warm work place each morning.

About a year ago we had two storm windows installed by Nu Vu Glass Co. They charged us $200 for the two. The frame of one of them has separated in two places. When we called the company they just told us to put a bit of caulk in the crack. That didn't work. We feel after paying to have these windows installed, Nu Vu should make it right. — D.W. Breeding, Burley.

Mr. Harper, Nu Vu's manager, doesn't remember your call but says he will take care of your window soon.

When Woolworth's opened their Twin Falls store last October, they advertised a sale on 16-foot aluminum extension ladders. But by the time my husband and I got there, they were sold out. They gave us a raincheck and said they would get some more ladders in soon. We have now been waiting over three months. Naturally, we are wondering how much longer it will be. Can you look into this? — Gooding reader.

Your raincheck is one of several which Woolworth's is obligated to honor with a ladder of the same type for $22, as advertised. There is no deadline as long as they are honestly trying to obtain more ladders, which they say they are.

Some chain stores ease the frustration of a long delay by offering the customer even more expensive goods for the advertised sale price, and you might want to discuss this with Woolworth's manager on your next trip to Twin Falls. But that still wouldn't get you your ladder.

Hardware Manager Linda Jensen says Woolworth's sold out of the ladders the first week the store opened and placed an order for more soon afterward from the Ashby Corporation in St. Louis, Mo. Ashby is going out of business. According to employee Patsy Ziegler, the shutdown was announced in a letter they sent to all their accounts last September. All orders since then have been returned with an explanation, she says.

This news is to the local Woolworth's. Perhaps Ashby's answer was lost in the "pile" and bustle of the grand opening. Jensen has since located another supplier on the east coast, however, and a brand new order will be mailed as soon as possible. Hang in there.

I rented a mobile home last September for a month. In December, my landlord, Douglas McFall, told me he had found someone willing to pay more for the place. Since I was having enough trouble paying the $250, I told him I would start looking for another place right away. On Jan. 15, I found a new place, so I told McFall I would be moving out the last weekend of the month. He said that would be fine, but a few days later he asked me to be out by Jan. 24 instead as he had decided to move the trailer to Idaho Falls and live in it himself. I was out two days early. I had to pay my new landlord extra money for the early move-in. When I asked McFall to return my rent for the 10 days I wasn't there, he looked at me like I was crazy. Later I was told I had broken the lease, but my attorney said that wasn't true. I filed in Small Claims Court, but the sheriff couldn't serve the papers because McFall had moved away. So now I am stuck all the way around. What, if anything, can I do to try and get this money back? — D. Mayo, Twin Falls.

This dispute, like many landlord-tenant problems, is just too complicated for Action Line to take sides. Talk to your lawyer about the legal issues involved.

McFall, who now works with the Idaho Falls Police Department, has a different story. He admits suggesting you look for another place in an informal December conversation. He says you told him the only reason you didn't move was the lease, which said you would owe a $250 penalty if you moved out before living there a full year. He then told you he would let you out of the lease, as a favor. And now he feels this favor makes up for your inconvenience and the 10 days rent that you want back. They are separate legal issues, however. He found the other folks to take your place, but they needed a home by Jan. 1, too early for you. He says the rent would have stayed the same. He was taken by surprise when you told him you were moving out at the end of the month.

Later he decided to use the trailer himself rather than leave it vacant and worry about finding new tenants. Once he had made that decision, the obligations of his new job forced him to change the deadline for you moving out. He does admit the rent and monthly due date were never on the lease.

Although it would be easier if more had been put in writing, none of this means you don't have a valid claim. Because McFall left town before the sheriff could get to him, you will now have to file again in Bonneville County Small Claims Court if you wish to continue the case. You can't get your first filing fee back, but you can tack it onto the amount you are already asking. In fact, you might try asking for some transportation costs as well, since you would have to drive to Idaho Falls for the hearing.

To file again, get the right form at the Twin Falls County Courthouse, change the county to Bonneville, enclose $15 for filing and service fees, and mail it to Small Claims Dept., 585 N. Capital Ave., Idaho Falls 83401. The Small Claims office says they only try the place of employment as a last resort. McFall now lives on Vassar Way in an Idaho Falls mobile home park. The manager there can tell the sheriff which trailer is McFall's.

Idaho Legal Aid Services, at 161 7th Ave. N., has a free tenants' rights booklet that might help you, too.

Action Line received the following complaints about Larry Burton and his one-man business, Quality Unlimited Photos:

He took pictures of my family back in July. I paid him $20 toward a $58.95 bill. He keeps telling me it won't be long. But I wonder. Can you help me get the photos? — Marjean Carpenter, Shoshone.

He used to work with me at Tupperware. Last spring, after my granddaughter died, he offered to make me some enlargements of some snapshots we had taken before her death. He said he would do this for free. I'm concerned because I gave him all the snapshots, the only record we had of her. He was going to pick out the best ones and make me "some good ones." He never did, and he still has our snapshots. — Mary Walters, Jerome.

When my daughter was married on Sept. 2 we had him take the wedding photos. The bill, which I paid in full, was around $150. He said if I paid in advance I would get an extra photo free. We got the proofs in November, but he hasn't done anything since then. I've called and called, and when I do manage to get him he just gives me some excuse. — Lonna Smith, Jerome.

Last summer I gave him a negative to blow up. He didn't do it. I don't care about the blowing anymore. I just want the negative back. — Joann Caldwell, Shoshone.

Burton closed down his business in October. Calls to his answering service number no longer reach him. He apparently has no home phone, but his address, in a small subdivision south of Twin Falls, is 1521 Aspen St. He has made the following promises to Action Line: Mrs. Carpenter — He has already sent away for your final prints. When they arrive, within the next three weeks, he will bring them to you. Mrs. Walters — Although he did not remember taking your snapshots, he will hunt for them and return them to you as soon as he finds them. Mrs. Smith — He needs the proofs before he can send for the final prints. He says he left a message with your husband recently. He or someone else will soon make arrangements to pick up the proofs.

Ms. Culver — He will return your negative soon.

I had S&H Construction put rain gutters on my house last September for $150. They must not have done it properly, because water is leaking from the seams and into my house through the eaves. There is a space between the eaves and the gutter in one spot; it looks like the gutter is bent. When the weather is wet, our bedroom rug gets soaked. I've had to do a lot of mopping. They came to look at the problem in December, but I can't get them to do anything about it. Also, I was told my payments would be interest-free, but now they have started charging me interest. — Penney Feriante, Piler.

Glennis Hopkins, a partner in S&H, says the problem is that your roof is warped. She says they have tried to explain to you that they cannot seal the leak properly until the weather gets a little warmer. She is certain that sealing with tar will close the gap for good, and S&H will come over at their expense as soon as weather permits.

As for your payments, Hopkins says the contract you signed said there would be no interest for the first 90 days only. Ninety days was the deadline for payment of the entire bill.

Aerial photo shows runway of Soviet air base on island which is focal point of Japanese-Soviet dispute

Japan demands Soviet pullout from bases in disputed islands

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan demanded Monday in strong terms that Moscow remove Soviet military forces and bases from North Pacific Islands claimed by Japan, the foreign ministry said.

The protest preceded the arrival in Tokyo of Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping en route home from his historic visit to the United States.

It said: "The Japanese government deeply deprecates the new Soviet measures and strongly demands that such steps be quickly retracted."

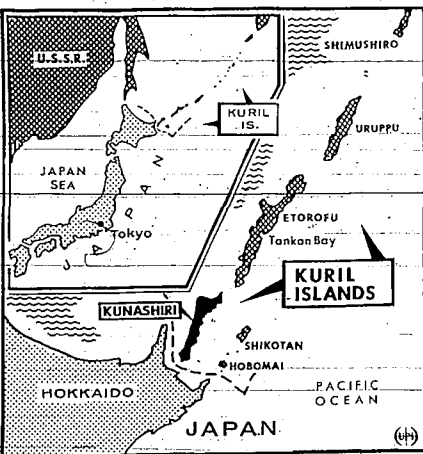

Vice Foreign Minister Masuo Takashima summoned Soviet Ambassador Dmitri Polynskii to the ministry and delivered the protest to him orally. Polynskii promptly rejected it.

Tokyo's action followed disclosure by the defense agency that the Soviets have deployed 5,000 to 6,000 combat troops and built military bases on Kunashiri and Etorofu, two of the four Soviet-held islands claimed by Japan.

Moscow seized the four islands, which also include Habomai and Shikotan, in the latter stages of World War II. They are located north of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island.

The newspaper Sankei Shimbun published Monday a set of three aerial photographs showing a large Soviet military base built on Kunashiri. The pictures showed a runway, a radar station and a cluster of barracks. An accompanying story said the runway is 2.17 miles long and capable of handling all types of military aircraft. It also said a port on the island is able to harbor 20,000-ton class vessels.

Foreign Ministry officials said Polynskii rejected the protest on grounds that the islands belong to the Soviet Union and the Japanese objection constitutes interference with its domestic affairs.

The officials quoted Polynskii as saying, "I want to protest with the Japanese government rather than being protested to in regard to the recent move in Japan over the alleged activities on Kunashiri and Etorofu islands."

"This matter is used as a means to ignite an unfriendly campaign against the Soviet Union. There is no pending territorial issue between our two countries."

The officials said Polynskii's statement was in response to Takashima's remarks that the islands undoubtedly are part of Japan historically and an early return of the islands from Soviet to Japanese rule is "indispensable for the development of stable Japan-Soviet relations based on mutual trust."

Government officials said Teng might discuss Peking's plan for a joint front among China, the United States, Japan and Western European nations to cope with the Soviet global strategy when he meets with Japanese officials.

During his three-day stopover in Tokyo, Teng is scheduled to meet with Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira and Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda and two former prime ministers, Takeo Fukuda and Kakuei Tanaka.

War of words rages on

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Khmer Rouge Radio claimed Monday that more than 700 Vietnamese soldiers have been killed in a week of guerrilla attacks, but parts of the report undercut earlier Khmer Rouge victory claims.

At the same time Heng Samrin, head of the Vietnamese-backed government now in control of the Cambodian capital, muted his earlier jubilant tones to warn that Khmer Rouge remnants continued to be a threat and must be wiped out to the last man.

The Heng Samrin government kept up its barrage of atrocity charges against the Khmer Rouge with a report that the rotting corpses of tens of thousands of massacred Cambodians had been discovered in the Chup rubber plantations of eastern Cambodia.

Its news agency reported that the decomposing bodies found in mass graves were the result of "a bloody repression launched by the Pol Pot government against the workers and peasants" of Military Region 203.

The report claimed Pol Pot had a former region commander order the death of everyone in the region as a traitor when Heng Samrin was announced as the leader of the Vietnamese supported rebels.

Some of the Khmer Rouge radio battle reports contradicted its own previous claims of complete control over certain areas of the country.

Haig thinks Soviets plan for attacks

KATTEBACH, West Germany (UPI) — Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., NATO supreme commander, said Monday that Soviet military forces far exceed Moscow's defensive needs.

He concluded they are meant for another purpose.

Haig rejected the theory held in some quarters that Moscow suffers from paranoia.

"To attribute to paranoia Soviet actions in Africa a thousand miles away is specious," Haig told a news conference.

Haig spoke to reporters at the conclusion of a winter maneuver involving about 66,000 NATO troops, including 14,000 U.S. soldiers flown to Germany from Fort Riley, Kans., and Fort Hood, Texas.

Assessing the improvements in NATO military capabilities in the four- and one-half years since he became supreme commander, Haig said, "We have narrowed the gap of differences with the Warsaw Pact in trends but have not eliminated them."

Of the greatest concern is the continuing unchallenged stepup in a political and military way of Soviet interventionism in the Third World, he said.

Terrorists shoot woman jail guard

ROME (UPI) — Two women urban guerrillas riding a motor scooter and armed with silencer-equipped pistols shot and wounded a female prison guard as she left for work Monday in the first terrorist attack in Italy specifically directed against a woman.

Police said Raffaella Napolitano, 34, a guard in the women's section of the city's New Prison, was shot once in the left thigh. She was later reported in satisfactory condition at a nearby hospital.

Three hours after the shooting the ultra-leftist Front Line urban guerrilla group claimed responsibility for the attack in an anonymous telephone call to a Turin newspaper.

The newspaper also was directed to a Front Line leaflet that said the shooting of Ms. Napolitano was part of a general feminist campaign by ultra-leftist women.

Warmer weather could cause repeat flood

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls city officials are bracing for the possibility that rising temperatures and moist storm fronts expected today will cause a repeat of January's flooding.

The National Weather Service in Boise has predicted highs for the Magic Valley today in the 30s. Occasional rain is also expected from a series of moist weather systems predicted to move across southern Idaho during the next few days.

The five-day forecast calls for occasional rain through Saturday, and the weather service has also warned that many areas in Idaho which experienced flooding last month should be prepared for more of the same.

Twin Falls City Engineer Gary Young Monday predicted if a significant amount of rain falls, flooding around Twin Falls could be worse than last time.

Around Jan. 11, heavy rains, combined with snow melted by rising temperatures caused the flooding, Young pointed out. "There's more snow on the ground now." In addition, the ground is still as frozen as it was in January and unable to absorb rain and melting snow.

Young said the city administration has already planned out work schedules and assignments for city employees in the event of another flood.

He said the city plans to "just irrigate ditches owned by the Twin Falls Canal Co. If necessary to stop flooding in the city."

After investigating last month's flood, city engineers concluded water diverted from natural drainways into irrigation laterals was a major cause of flooding in town.

According to the engineers, obstructions in drainways diverted water into laterals, transferring large amounts of water across ground unable to absorb it into smaller drainways—unable to handle the increased volumes.

Breaking the laterals at strategic points would divert the water back into the proper natural drainways and prevent flooding, Young said.

"We're going to take care of our own first," he declared.

Young said homeowners, especially those whose homes were flooded last month, should be aware of the possibility of flooding for the next few days.

"However, if temperatures rise without significant rainfall, the snow on the ground should melt gradually and the threat of flood should pass, Young said.

Former staff levels charges at PUC chief

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Robert Lenaghen was condemned Monday as a money-wasting, ineffective fraud and praised as a competent, fair president of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

Those widely differing views came in more than five hours of testimony before the Senate State Affairs Committee. Trenching from mid-afternoon until late in the evening, the lengthy hearing saw 54 persons arguing why Lenaghen should or should not be confirmed in a second six-year PUC term.

Sharp criticism of Lenaghen came early in the hearing in a sworn affidavit sent to the committee by Kenneth D. Smith, now the chief auditor for the Public Service Commission of Nevada. Smith stated he worked for the IPUC for approximately 22 years and that during that time Lenaghen:

- Used a state automobile for private personal uses.
- Criticized Smith for advising a legislative fiscal analyst "of an error of $69,000 in favor of the PUC."
- According to Smith, Lenaghen then told him, "if you are going to work for me you must have larceny in your heart."
- Instructed Smith to lobby utility and motor carrier representatives to support PUC's appropriation requests and "commissioner pay raises" in return for PUC support on rate cases.
- Lenaghen was also criticized by Art Hadley of Boise, the former director of utilities with the PUC. Hadley was subpoenaed to appear before the committee and said he would not otherwise have appeared.
- Hadley testified Lenaghen urged staff members of the PUC to sign the testimony in favor of one particular side in a rate dispute.
- Another subpoenaed witness, Gary Montgomery of Boise, former PUC legal counsel, also said Lenaghen instructed him to try to influence utilities to push for salary increases for PUC commissioners.
- The PUC chief drew flack from Rep. Myron Jones, R-Malden, who presented statistics prepared by the Idaho personnel commission. Those statistics showed the PUC with a 40 percent total turnover in staff in the past 12 months.
- Of the 54 persons testifying, 29

supported Lenaghen's confirmation while 25 opposed him.

Leading off testimony was Lenaghen himself. Acknowledging he is "surrounded again by a measure of controversy," Lenaghen said he was responsible for only part of that controversy.

Since he first became PUC president, several new factors have increased the complexity of cases before the commission. These include, Lenaghen said, "unprecedented environmental concerns," new federal utility and energy regulations, the development of a "new consumer consciousness," the Arab oil embargo "and its resultant chaos in the world of energy, price and supply," and "the worst drought in Northwest history."

"What you have is a new world that even many of the brave would assiduously avoid," Lenaghen said.

Lenaghen drew strong support from Nampa City Attorney Robert L. Jones, the former chief counsel to the PUC. Jones called Lenaghen "a competent, talented, diligent individual."

Support also came from Pocatello Attorney Robert Huntley. Huntley praised the professionalism of the PUC staff, insisting "the quality staff is due to the high competence Robert Lenaghen has demanded."

Cassia County farmer Mark Moorman also urged confirmation, telling committee members, "I have spent many days and hearings with Lenaghen and believe he has done an excellent job." Lenaghen, Moorman said, was "fair and honest."

Lenaghen also drew an endorsement from Bruce Wycoff, representing the Wycoff Trucking Co. Wycoff stressed, "We've been treated fairly. Wycoff does not find fault with Mr. Lenaghen's service."

Lenaghen, a 59-year-old former Pocatello legislator, was first appointed to the PUC by Gov. Cecil Andrus in 1973. Last month's reappointment by Gov. John Evans must now be confirmed by the Senate.

Lenaghen won his first term by a razor-thin 18-17 vote in the 35-member Senate. Evans has said he believes Lenaghen will be confirmed by the Senate, but several unofficial head counts indicate this year's vote could be as close as the 1973 tally.

1979 Easter Seal Child Tina Lancaster in her bedroom

Tina is Easter Seal Child

TWIN FALLS — Tina Lancaster, a 5-year-old Twin Falls girl, will be the 1979 Easter Seal Child for Magic Valley.

She is the daughter of Bob and Joan Lancaster of Twin Falls. A victim of cerebral palsy, she receives therapy five times a week from the Easter Seal Center in Twin Falls.

"After a long struggle and much therapy, Tina can now stand on her own — not walk — but a major goal has been accomplished.

Merle Stoddard, center director, who announced selection of the Easter Seal Child, said she is one of a number of multi-handicapped children with birth defects who come to the Twin Falls Easter Seal Center for therapy.

"Most of these children have speech, hearing or language problems," Mrs. Stoddard says. "We have 35 to 45 students a week attending the center. Most of these come in four times a week. Many of them cannot afford to pay the cost of the therapy."

Mrs. Stoddard said the annual Easter Seal campaign will officially begin March 1 and continue through Easter Sunday. In an effort to help finance the Easter Seal Center programs and other assistance to handicapped children.

If the Easter Seal Center is to continue helping children from Magic Valley, it needs the financial support of Magic Valley citizens. If anyone would like to sponsor a child, they may send their donations to the Center at 1827 Laurel Ave., in Twin Falls," the director said.

Additional information is available by calling 733-5745.

Plane lands in field

TWIN FALLS — A 64-year old Pocatello pilot landed his Piper Cub J-3 light plane in a field Sunday morning when he found he couldn't reach the Twin Falls airport in heavy fog.

Gilbert Capps put his plane down in a field on the Dale Messner farm just a mile west and a quarter mile north of the county land fill about 11 a.m. Sunday.

According to Everett Messner, the pilot was flying from Wells, Nev., to Pocatello and ran into thick fog south of Twin Falls. He decided to put down at the Twin Falls airport, but a short distance from the field the fog fed over his windshield and he was unable to see.

Messner said he used a tree for a landing mark and set the plane down in the field with room to spare.

Sheriff's officers said Capps was uninjured and there was no damage to the field. He had contacted the Federal Aviation Administration office in Burley prior to landing and called from the Messner home to report all was well.

Messner said the plane was still in the field Monday morning but the pilot felt he would have no trouble taking off again from the field in good weather conditions.

Officers said the experienced pilot had contacted FAA officials prior to leaving Wells and was told there were marginal fog conditions. Apparently the fog thickened in the Twin Falls area, causing visibility problems.

The pilot told the Messner family he had been in California and was returning home when he made the emergency landing.

Fumes poison band members

HAILEY — Two members of a Reno-based country-rock group were released from Blaine County Hospital in good condition Monday after suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning due to a faulty muffler system on the band's bus.

Richard Rheinholt and Mark Clark, both 25 and from Lake Tahoe, Calif., were transported to the hospital in Hailey at about 3 p.m. Sunday after the bus in which they were riding ran off the road south of Bellevue on Highway 75. The driver, Oakley Cassabomb, was apparently overcome by the exhaust fumes, but did not require hospitalization.

The band was en route to Kelchum for a one-night engagement at Slavey's Club, which was canceled due to the mishap. A club spokesman said the Live Wire Choir is scheduled to return either Feb. 26 or 27.

Man arrested on assault charge

TWIN FALLS — Michael C. Mayer, 29, of Twin Falls, was arrested by city police and charged with assault with a weapon after he allegedly threatened four persons in the Sears parking lot with a gun.

Police arrested the man after spotting a vehicle described by the victims. He was arrested in the 300 block of Fourth Avenue East shortly after the alleged incident occurred.

Police said he was armed with a pellet pistol, which was confiscated from the suspect vehicle where Mayer was arrested.

Public defender appointed for Twin Falls County

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The law firm of Kvanvig, Stoker and Stanger of Twin Falls will be public defenders for Twin Falls County for the next eight months.

County Commission Chairman Merle E. Leonard said the appointment Monday becomes effective immediately but some court appointed attorneys will stay on cases still pending.

The winning firm was one of two submitting bids for the remaining eight months of a two-year contract canceled by the former public defender firm of Bennett and Powers.

Leonard said Rayborn, Rayborn, Ronayne and Ritchie submitted an almost identical bid but that after careful review the commission and district court judges decided the Kvanvig, Stoker and Stanger offer would save money in the long run.

Both firms agreed to handle defense of indigent defendants in misdemeanor as well as felony cases and both at a cost of $3,350 per month. But the firm selected by the commissioners stated the flat fee would cover everything except costs of paying expert witnesses or preparing of transcripts in appeal cases.

The Rayborn firm also excluded some long distance telephone items and the cost of hiring other law firms in conflict of interest cases from the base bid figure.

Leonard said the two firms submitted proposals the county felt were highly acceptable and which would fit within the amount of money already budgeted for public defender services. The county had awarded a two-year contract to the Golden Bennett firm for $39,000 plus a $3,000 per year contingency fund for special costs. Bennett dropped the contract when the work load became excessive.

Since that time, about two months, the public defender services have been assigned by District Judge Theron W. Ward to members of the local Bar Association in alphabetical order. Fees were set by the court on recommendation of the bar association.

Leonard said he believes the budget was set to cover the Bennett contract will allow for the appointive services as well as the eight-month contract with Kvanvig.

"This is one of the things that concerned us, the money we cannot change the budget at this late date, and fortunately we had a little padding which will cover the unusual situation," Leonard said.

Power goes out

BURLEY — Half the city of Burley experienced a power blackout for about two hours Monday when an automobile knocked down a power pole at the West-Burley substation.

The accident occurred at 6:21 p.m. about 1/4 mile west of Burley, according to Cassia County Sheriff's officers.

Both Unity Power Co. and Burley City Power Co. users suffered the power loss for more than two hours after the accident.

Street to be blocked

TWIN FALLS — Cars will be prohibited from crossing Shoshone Street on Main Avenue at the center of Twin Falls beginning March 1.

The Twin Falls City Council decided Monday to place a median between the islands in the center of Shoshone Street at its intersection with Main Avenue for 60 days beginning March 1 as an experiment to attempt to dissolve traffic congestion there.

Down town merchants have been pressuring the city for months to do something about traffic at the intersection, which they claim hurts their business by scaring pedestrians crossing the intersection from stores on one side of the mall to the other.

"At a recent meeting with city officials, however, the merchants voted 13-12 against trying the median solution. Many of the merchants opposing the median wanted a stoplight at the intersection.

But the Idaho Department of Highways has maintained a stoplight at the intersection would only create worse traffic problems by backing up traffic in both directions.

The council tried to placate the pro-stoplight faction by instructing the city engineer to try to obtain from the highway department statistics on the feasibility of placing a signal at the intersection.

The council voted 6-1 in favor of the medians, with Chris Talkington the only dissenter.

Idaho interest earnings up

BOISE (UPI) — State Treasurer Mario-Ruth Moon has announced that interest earnings from investment of idle state monies in January were nearly triple the amount for the same month last year.

"We saw a dramatic increase in the interest earned on overnight investments during January — mainly because of the sudden rise in interest rates on the national money market," Miss Moon said.

Firemen's Retirement Fund, $44,300; Public School Endowment Fund, $729,300; public school income suspension account, $776.

Also, Budge noted, Utah Power & Light Co., which regulates the lake, would have to dredge a channel to get water into the pumps that feed it to Bear River if the lake were dropped to 5,911 feet.

"It would have a catastrophic effect on the homeowners around Bear Lake in low-water years," he said.

Truby's post bid goes to Virginian

BOISE (UPI) — Another try at public office eluded Dr. Roy Truby Sunday when the Arkansas Board of Education named a Virginian school official to head the state Education Department.

Truby said in an interview with UPI in Boise he was not frustrated his application was turned down, but instead glad he had been chosen as one of two finalists from an original field of 40.

The 38-year-old Democrat gave up his post as Idaho public instruction superintendent last year to mount an unsuccessful congressional campaign against conservative Republican Rep. Steve Symms.

The Arkansas Education Board met in Little Rock Sunday to pick Don Roberts, 41, Newport News, Va., for the state's top education office.

Truby said the Arkansas Senate was considering legislation that required its schools chief to have experience in the state and he said that factor counted to Roberts being given the nod of four semi-finalists. Truby was the only out-of-state candidate.

"When you're doing this sort of thing, you have to recognize that you're going to win some and lose some," Truby said. "I just thought when I got into the finals that I had a 50-50 shot."

"It was a good compromise," Truby said of Roberts' selection, indicating he believed he might have won had he been affiliated with Arkansas in the past.

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton attended the Board of Education meeting and said afterward he was pleased with its

Volunteers solicited

GLENN'S FERRY — Volunteers to assist in planting-bitterbrush seedlings on the big-game-winter range near Arrowrock Reservoir are urgently needed, according to John Edwards of the Boise Ranger Station.

The project is an effort to improve critical range conditions for deer and elk winter range. Planting will be done on weekends only from Feb. 24 through March 18.

The bitterbrush or ice cream plant is eaten by deer and other wildlife and also helps to control soil erosion.

Groups or individuals interested in volunteering may call Edwards at 884-1572 or visit the Boise Ranger Station at 5485 Warm Springs Avenue.

Property valuation amendment voted down by subcommittee

BOISE (UPI) — A move to amend a property valuation increase limit out of the 1 percent tax measure was voted down over the weekend by a joint legislative subcommittee.

The limit, which along with several other features in the measure would hold down property tax bills, would restrict increases in valuations on county tax rolls to 2 percent annually.

Democrats who moved to strike the limit from the measure reasoned that inflation is causing real property values to rise much faster than 2 percent a year.

"The county people that I've visited with say the 2 percent limit is going to put them down the drain within a few years," said Sen. Lester Clemm, D-Troy.

However, Sen. Veart Crystal, R-Idaho Falls, said the change "would be such a departure from the initiative that we'd be so far out on a limb that I wouldn't want to be any part of it."

The subcommittee, after defeating the amendment 7-4, approved the reworded section in the measure with the 2 percent limit intact. It also approved three other sections in the measure, including the one that would limit property taxes to 1 percent of market value.

Rep. Morgan Munger, R-Ola, saying the subcommittee was making progress, indicated he felt it would be necessary to hear from city, county and school district representatives, once more before sending the measure on to committee.

Income tax source School fund plan proposed

BOISE (UPI) — The Moscow School District asked the Legislature Monday to consider replacing property tax revenues with income taxes as a source of funding for public schools.

Harold Gibson, business manager of Moscow school systems, presented the plan to levy 1.2 percent of a citizen's adjusted gross income for public schools instead of the present 27 mill property tax.

Rep. Lindsay Bakeman, R-Idaho Falls, said the current property tax base was very stable and that income varies from year to year. He asked if this would not cause problems in maintaining a stable tax base.

Gibson said that if a district's income dropped, the state could help that district to maintain funding levels.

"If income dropped on a statewide basis, the property tax is more stable, but it is not based on an individual's ability to pay," Gibson said. "What difference does it make if property tax is more stable if people can't afford to pay it?"

According to the plan, a comparable amount of corporate and non-resident income would be levied and added to the state's general education fund. These additional funds would be equalized and distributed to all school districts throughout the state.

"As long as people can see where their money is going, I think they will support the income tax levy," Gibson said.

District of Columbia plan rejected

BOISE (UPI) — A proposed U.S. constitutional amendment to allow the District of Columbia representation in Congress was rejected by the Idaho Senate Monday, but Sen. Richard High, R-Twin Falls, served notice of possible reconsideration of the vote by which the resolution was passed.

Sensors voted 21-14 for a concurrent resolution which said there would not be an advisory vote by the Idaho electorate on the proposed amendment.

Sen. James Risch, R-Boise, the bill's sponsor, said the District of Columbia was not a state and "Idaho wants to see it kept that way." He said Idaho does not have to spend $5,000 required for an election on the amendment.

Risch said it was a "bad amendment" which would have "dire consequences on Idaho and the West. The cards are stacked against us badly enough without this amendment."

The amendment has almost "zero sentiment" among Idahoans, Risch said, adding his resolution would avoid an election and the expenditure for an advisory vote when "we know the sentiment of the people of Idaho."

Republican Sens. Ron Twilgar and Edith Miller Klein, both Boise, both opposed the resolution because they felt that the action should be taken by joint resolution, which traditionally is used regarding constitutional amendments and requires a two-thirds vote instead of a simple majority required on a concurrent amendment.

Mayor sees crime rate hike when law agencies hit by 1%

BOISE (UPI) — The only way to prevent severe reductions in police and fire department services is to exclude them totally from the effects of the 1 percent property tax measure, Caldwell Mayor Bob Pasley said.

Pasley said on KIDO Radio's "Boise City Potato" program that unless law enforcement operations are protected from the initiative, crime rates will rise drastically.

"As it stands now, the initiative has the ability to completely destroy local governments — as we know them today," Pasley said. "And it seems very hard to get anyone not connected with local governments willing to accept this fact."

Boise Mayor Dick Eardley, appearing with Pasley and Garden City Mayor Rav Eld, said he soon would present to the Legislature results of a study conducted by his office to determine the possible effects of a 25 percent revenue cut.

Eardley also said he believed revenue losses probably would surpass 25 percent when the 1 percent is implemented.

Police and fire budgets — which Eardley said will have first priority — would be sliced 14 to 16 percent under a 25 percent revenue loss, while other departments would lose 50 percent of their funds.

"In Boise, more than 60 percent of our tax dollars go to police and fire," Eardley said. "So if we have any sizeable cuts at all, you're going to have to cut police and fire. There's no way we can get around it. We could cut every other program in the city and still have to cut police and fire."

Eld said he hoped the Legislature would consider amending the statutory limit on city mill levies so "conservative-budgeting" cities will not have to pay for the excesses of others when cuts are made.

Sugar operation decision expected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. George Hansen said Monday parties considering taking over some or all of U and I Sugar Co. operations in Idaho, Utah, and Washington hope to make a firm decision in the next week.

"I'm confident that whoever takes over the U and I operation can make a success of it," Hansen said. He added that the firm has made a profit on its plants in all but one of the last 33 years.

"Sugar beets are a viable crop, especially in a nation having to import half of its sugar supply. We shouldn't make the mistake of thinking that this crop can no longer be profitable just because U and I is pulling out."

How to change the NBA all-star contest

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — Pro basketball's talent showphre one thing with the All-Star games of other sports — someone has a suggestion for improvement.

Rick Barry, who wasn't there, and Dick Motta, who was, both have ideas how to change Sunday's game in which the West All-Stars defeated the East, 134-129.

Motta, who coached the losing East team, was hurt because his squad only had three guards and he finally resorted to shifting 6-foot-7 forward Julius Erving of Philadelphia to the backcourt.

"The fans pick the starting five and that's all right because the game belongs to the fans," said Motta, coach of the NBA champion Washington Bullets. "But I think the six chosen by the coaches pick should be selected by position."

"We were instructed to pick the best six players regardless of position," Motta said.

Pete Maravich was Motta's only playmaker, but the New Orleans guard, who underwent summer knee surgery, has little speed and lateral movement.

When guard Doug Collins of Philadelphia was deleted due to injury, his replacement, named by NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien, was center Bob Lanier of the Detroit Pistons. That gave the East its only backup center.

Houston's Barry was not participating in the All-Star game for the first time in seven years, but did drop in Saturday to make an appearance for his basketball shoe company.

"They shouldn't have us playing league games on Friday night and then holding the All-Star game on Sunday," said Barry. "But you know they're not going to give up a Friday night date."

"If they don't want to give up Friday nights, they should move the game to prime time on Monday night instead of Sunday afternoon so that players wouldn't have to fly in right after playing."

Other items to come out of the weekend NBA meetings: The league brass has noted its lower television ratings this season and O'Brien, while professing not to be concerned because network advertising revenue is up, said they are taking steps in hopes of improving them.

O'Brien said he wants to "humanize" the broadcasts with short pre-game features and post-game interviews.

The three-point basket is expected to be on the NBA's June agenda and sentiment within the league is for its approval. But first it must be shot past meetings of the coaches, general managers and rules committee, all of which reportedly favor the old ABA innovation.

Valley cinches trip to state

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

WENDELL. — The Valley Vikings, riding the scoring of All-Dixon and Wendy Schwarz, defeated Filer 42-35 Monday to advance to the fourth district A-3 finals — but more importantly nailed down a trip to next week's state tournament.

Schwarz hit most of Valley's points in the early and late going while Dixon was the scoring bastion in the middle periods as the Vikings led their division in the middle of the fourth quarter.

Earlier, Shoshone, trailing most of the game, broke away in the last four minutes of the third quarter to beat Wendell 48-37 and stay alive.

The results mean that Shoshone and Filer will play at 8:30 tonight with the loser going home and the winner, who will also, get a trip to state, advancing against Valley-Wednesday night for the championship. Valley now must be defeated twice to lose the district title, and if the extra game is necessary it will be played Thursday at the Wendell gymnasium.

Valley's press caused some turnovers in the opening minutes and Wendy Schwarz hit eight points and Dixon two in the first period as Valley mounted a meager four-point margin.

The second period was low scoring, Debbie Allen hitting a pair of field goals to tie things at 12 with 4:20 left but Dixon and Schwarz got Valley going again and the Vikings led 18-12 at intermission. Valley's biggest lead — except for the final — came in the third period when the Vikings stretched ahead 26-19 before Filer sophomore Rhonda Dey got the Wildcats back on track. She hit four straight free throws and then an inside jumper to reduce the deficit to one before Dixon replied with a Valley field goal.

Allen scored five straight points, giving Filer its first lead at 30-23 54 seconds into the fourth period. Dixon, who missed just two of 11 free throws tries, got one back for Valley, but Allen hit again to give Filer its biggest lead of the game at 32-29 with 5:33 remaining.

Schwarz, who hadn't been heard from much since the first quarter, then ran in two quick field goals and a pair of Dixon free throws with 4:08 left took the Vikings out to 35-32. Nancy Bloxham converted a crumpled off a steal with 3:52 left and Dixon picked up two more from the line to settle things.

In the first game Wendell made a strong upset bid but Karen Magoffin and Barb Berrichocho blunted it in the third period to send Shoshone into the loser bracket semi-finals.

Wendell controlled the boards over the first half and Shannon Humbach scored eight points during that span to keep the Indians just slightly ahead.

But as the Shoshone half began Brenda Webb tied it with a free throw at 19:19 before Nancy Lancaster gave Wendell its last lead at 21-19. It took nearly a minute before Barb Berrichocho got Shoshone back into a tie and Webb sent the Indians ahead to stay with 3:40 left in the third. Berrichocho came back with two free throws and Magoffin then ran in two field goals. After Brenda Berrichocho scored, Magoffin hit a follow shot to end the Shoshone surge at 32-21 before Wendell finally broke the five-minute scoring drought on a bucket by Tammie Stockham.

In the fourth period Shoshone kept the lead at about 10; then went into a spread with three minutes left and picked up free throws to push into the final margin.

Bruins drop Burley 41-38

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS. — Laurie Kulken lit a third period rally Monday night to lift the Twin Falls Bruins girls to a 41-38 victory over Burley in the opening round of District A-1 play.

The win sends the Bruins to Milco tonight for a game against the Spartans. The winner of tonight's clash gets the inside track to the district championship in the double elimination tournament.

The loser of tonight's game will meet Burley Thursday, and then the winner will play tonight's winner Thursday.

Kulken, playing one of her best games of the season, earned eight points in that key third stanza during which the Bruins went from a 19-15 halftime lead to a 36-23 margin.

And Coach Kathy Anderson and the Bruins needed all the points they could get in that third period, as the Bobcats came roaring back in the fourth period and nearly pulled it out.

"They had me worried there for awhile," said Coach Anderson. "But the girls hung in there."

At one point in that fourth quarter, the Bobcats, getting a majority of their scoring from Colleen Maier and Sarah Chess, had closed the gap to 37-34 with two minutes left in the contest. But two free throws by Brenda Latham put the Bruins out of reach, and a closing basket by Burley's Chess provided the final margin.

From the start, the Bruins played the role of the aggressor. With Kulken hustling on defense and stealing balls, and the offense whipping the ball around the key, the Bruins jumped to a 12-6 first quarter. Karen Harrt hit three shots from outside to key the Bruin attack.

Burley, on the other hand, had trouble with the Bruins' zone defense and had to settle for 10 to 15 pointers. Many of them missed the rim and fell into the hands of Kulken and Suzi Shelby who sparked the fastbreak down the floor.

Twin Falls built their margin to 16-8 before Burley started finding the bucket again. By halftime the Bobcats had cut the margin to 19-15.

In that critical third period, Twin Falls was clinging to a 39-19 lead with 4:58 left. But a jump shot by Kulken, a free throw by Corine Dowd, and a driving layup by Kulken soon turned it into a 30-19 runaway.

Burley responded with a bucket to make it 30-21, but then Twin Falls took off again. Dowd hit a jumper and laid in a rebound off a missed shot, and Kulken characterized her third period with a 25-foot bomb from the left hand side as the buzzer sounded.

Red Sox didn't want Carew

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Red Sox were never really in the running to sign Rod Carew and Boston General Manager Haywood Sullivan said Monday he's happy the team stayed out of the picture.

"He wanted to go to California all the time," Sullivan said. "It's kind of hard to get a player like Carew, who would have loved to have him, but we didn't get into deep negotiations. We just let them know we were interested."

Sullivan said he wasn't too worried about the New York Yankees obtaining Carew, who was traded Saturday to the California Angels. The Yankees reportedly offered Chris Chambliss, Juan Bonieuz and others for the seven-time batting champ.

"Public relations-wise, it would have been a coup for them to sign Carew," Sullivan said of the Yankees.

"But what it does to your ballclub is more important. If he had gone to New York, I was hopeful they would have had to give up enough so it wouldn't have been a real plus for them," he said.

Sullivan said the most pressing needs for the Red Sox are still pitching and bench strength. He said three hurlers projected to fill big roles on the 1979 squad — Andy Hassler, Bob Stanley and Jim Wright — remain unsigned.

Gooding, Buhl score victories

BUHL. — The Gooding Senators and Buhl Indians strode into the semi-finals of the fourth district girls A-2 basketball tournament Monday night.

Gooding had to come from behind, turn back a strong Jerome rally and then hit free throws well to edge the Tigers 54-52 in overtime. Buhl, getting a strong early scoring effort from Laurie Hulse and then good balance the rest of the way in, dropped Wood River 57-35.

The results will send Jerome against Wood River in a loser-out game at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the new Buhl high school gymnasium while Buhl and Gooding meet at 8:30 p.m. The winner of Buhl-Gooding will advance to the finals Thursday night while the Jerome-Wood River winner will meet the Buhl-Gooding loser in a single quarter game Wednesday.

Jerome came out smacking in the opener against Gooding and piled up a 14-6 first-quarter lead. But Gooding started settling down in the second period and inched into a two-point lead. The Senators appeared to have things going well in the third quarter, running into a 39-39 advantage. But then Laurie Ostler sprang to life and staged a strong shooting show. She hit 10 of her 23 points in the fourth period to force the game into overtime. But once into overtime Gooding got the lead and Jerome had to foul in an attempt to get possession. Lisa Childs hit three free throws — Adams, Hobbey and James added a chairty

Madden says no to Giants

NEW YORK (UPI) — Still going around in circles, the New York Giants have offered their Director of Operations job to John Madden for the second time in the past five weeks and he has given them the same answer he did the first time — thanks, but no thanks.

Madden was offered the position by Giants President Wellington Mara and now that he has turned it down, Tommy Prothro, former coach of the San Diego Chargers and the Los Angeles Rams, has moved to the top of the list of candidates for the Giants' general manager ship.

Mara originally was interested in signing Madden as both Director of Operations and head coach last month when he learned Madden was leaving the Oakland Raiders after having coached them 10 years. Madden, citing health reasons, particularly an ulcer which wasn't getting any better, announced his resignation from coaching on Jan. 4.

He said then he had no intention of ever returning to coach again, adding: "I've been an Oakland Raider since I was a kid and always will be for the rest of my life."

Mara, a man of high principle, went through the prescribed channels seeking to get Madden last month. He called Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner, and after Madden was informed of Mara's interest in having him, he made it known to the Giants' president that he appreciated the offer but did not wish to get back into football.

Feeling Madden might have thought it over and possibly changed his mind, Mara called him directly this time.

He would not have to coach, Mara, told him. All he would have to do is run the Giants from upstairs. Madden gave Mara his answer immediately. He meant what he had said a few weeks ago. He was not interested in returning to football.

"Don Klosterman, the Rams' general manager, had been interviewed by both owners of the Los Angeles, Wellington Mara and his nephew, Tim Mara, in Los Angeles a week ago. He had been considered a candidate for Director of Operations but when he heard Madden had been offered the job, he pulled out of Operations. His nephew is leaning toward Gil Brand, personal director of the Dallas Cowboys.

Both Maras have narrow-haired hair list of coaching candidates to four men: Dan Reeves, offensive coordinator of the Cowboys; John Robinson, coach of Southern California; Joe Restic; Harvard coach; and Darryl Rogers, Michigan State coach.

Debbie Suhr's score in the all-around (28 wasn't her highest, but she did rack up a respectable 8.05 in the compulsory events for third.

Michele Doerr, who after her first vault injured her knee, came back to score 24.65 in the AA.

Optional scores included Suhr 7.5 for first; McRoberts 7.3 for second; and King 6.05 for first in her age group.

Scores in the uneven bars were McRoberts 6.75, Suhr 4.5, Stalley 5.0, and King 5.65.

King became the first girl from Sage to qualify both in the compulsory and in the optional for the state championship to be held at the Sage facility Feb. 16 and 17.

Sage will complete their dual meet season Friday at Mike Young's Academy in Boise.

Panthers surprise Dietrich

HAILY — Carey surprised Dietrich with a 21-point first quarter blitz and then went on to upset Dietrich 42-36 in a Northside district girls' tournament action Monday night. The win sends the Panthers against the number one seeded Richfield Tigers Wednesday night in the championship round. Carey must beat the Tigers twice to claim the title. No one in the gym probably expected the outcome. Dietrich had come into the game with only three losses and 14 wins. It and Richfield had led the league all year. But Carey came out fired up and the 13 point first quarter margin was just too much for the Blue Devils to overcome. Dietrich cut the margin to 25-19 by halftime, but despite some fancy shooting by Gwen Powers and Diane Higginbotham, Dietrich couldn't ever get the lead. Higginbotham ended the game with 17 White Powers hits.

For Carey, Linda Hunt and Inge Hoffstetter led the hot hands with both of them getting 11. Carey ..... 21 25 30 42 Dietrich ..... 8 19 26 36 Carey — Shaffer 7, Hunt 11, Peterson 6, O'Crowley 4, Hoffstetter 11, L. Peterson 3, Dietrich — Powers 9, Kelly 7, Higginbotham 7, D. Higginbotham 7.

Castleford nips Hansen

HANSEN — The name of the game was free throws Monday night at Castleford. The Wolves got 20 free throws to Hansen's one to claim a 60-55 boys basketball victory. Despite the free throw margin, Hansen played even ball with the Wolves for all but the second quarter, and that stanza proved to be the difference.

After a 13-12 first quarter, Hansen fell behind 39-21 at halftime and never could quite recover. By the third quarter, the Huskies had whittled the margin to eight and even pulled within one with 33 seconds to go. Ironically, a missed free throw with time running down on the clock doomed the Huskies, even though they got only six chances at the charity stripe all night. Castleford got a fine performance from Tom Quigly who hit 9-13 from the foul line and ended up with 29 points. Jim Adams had 10, Josh Hogan 10 and Virgil Adams 10 for Hansen.

21 indicted for bribery

BOSTON (UPI) — A federal grand jury Monday indicted 21 men on 51 counts of racketeering and sports bribery in connection with a scheme to fix horse races in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Pennsylvania, the FBI said. Special Agent James Dunn of the FBI's Boston office said that included among the defendants were three jockeys, two horse owners and two fugitives wanted in similar cases. Of the 21 indicted, 13 are believed to be from Massachusetts, two from Rhode Island, three from Las Vegas, Nev., two from Philadelphia and one from Florida. Defendant Joseph McDonald is on the FBI's Most Wanted List. He and James Sims, another defendant, are charged in two other similar cases for which they presently are fugitives.

Coach Chuck Brown hopes his team will show flashes of speed this year

Stuart success hinges on speed, good defense

By GARY ELIASSEN, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Defense is the name of the game for Robert Stuart Junior High School's Coach Chuck Brown. "If we can't play man to man defense, we're not going to win too many games," said Brown Monday as he prepared his 12-man ninth grade team for tonight's opening league tilt at East Minico of Rupert. The Bears hope to get revenge for a 52-48 loss to the East team in a pre-season tournament last week. "I think we can take them this time around, although I don't really expect to make a lot of changes," he said. "It's just a matter of us playing better defense and cutting off their fastbreak."

Last of two articles

Though Stuart's a small team compared to other squads in the area, Brown thinks by tournament time at the end of the season, the Bears will be able to stay with anyone. The team makes up for their size in speed and quickness. "Team captain Doug Bateman, a 6-0 forward, was described by Brown as the team's "defensive specialist." "Doug may not score a lot, but he's out there hustling all the time and scrambling for that ball. He's quick and heady," said the coach. His speed also is expected to give the Bears some points off the fastbreak once the team develops teamwork and coordination. Todd Wigington, a 5-9 guard, is expected to provide

Phil Mahre wins first cup

JASNA, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — American Phil Mahre, moving into peak form with an eye to putting on a good show when the circuit moves to the World Cup next month, won his first World Cup slalom of the season Monday with an upset victory over Swedish ace Ingemar Stenmark. It was the sixth career World Cup slalom for Mahre, of White Pass, Wash., and moved him up one notch into third place in the current standings. Only eight points behind runner-up Stenmark, Mahre has been the most consistent U.S. skier this year and will be one of the favorites at Lake Placid, N.Y., March 2-4. Mahre had an aggregate time of 1 minute, 43.03 seconds for his two runs. Italy's Leonardo David placed second in 1:43.81 while Stenmark, for third in 1:44.65. Stenmark, who gained his sixth consecutive giant slalom victory Sunday, seemed set to complete a double after posting the best intermediate time on the second run. But due to an error on one of the steepest parts of the course, he was able to clear the next three gates only because of some acrobatic sking. Austria's Christian Orlansky, who was 40th in the starting order, came out of the pack to take fourth place from compatriot Anton Steiner. Mahre's twin brother, Steve, finished sixth, one place ahead of World Cup leader Peter Luescher of Switzerland. Stenmark was not upset about the outcome. "The World Cup doesn't interest me any more. I am not concentrating on it at all," he said.

NHL all-stars set for Russian game

NEW YORK (UPI) — Saying, "We're just here to get our feet wet," National Hockey League All-Star Coach Stanley Bowman welcomed most of his 25-man roster for this week's Challenge Cup series with the Russians at Monday's Madison Square Garden workout. At least four of the NHL players — Tony Esposito, Marcel Dionne, Barry Beck and Ron Greschner — were not present for the mid-afternoon workout. Esposito, Dionne and Beck were hung up with travel problems, while Greschner, who was added to the team Sunday night to replace the injured Jim Schoenfeld, was said to be returning from his grandmother's home in Western Canada. As the All-Stars began preparation for the series, which takes place Thursday, Saturday and Sunday, there remains question marks as to the availability of New York Islander defenseman Denis Potvin and Montreal left wing Bob Gainey. Potvin was injured Jan. 17 and has played only two shifts since. Bill Torrey, general manager of both the Islanders and the NHL All-Stars, said that Potvin's injured shoulder makes him "day to day" and added that the team's Norris Trophy winner will be working out all week. Gainey, who pulled a hamstring this past weekend, is coming along well and should be ready by Thursday night's opener. Within 24 hours of both teams arrival in New York, at least two controversies concerning rules for the series have sprung up. The NHL insists that the series will be played under National Hockey League rules while Russian officials have intimated that the series will be played under international rules. "As far as I know, the contract provides for National Hockey League rules," said NHL President John Ziegler. "The contract has been in existence for a year and I haven't heard any request for changes." The other question that came up concerns the curvature on the players' sticks. The Russians, citing Bobby Hull's usage of a one-inch curve in the 1974 WHA series, said they aren't aware of any restriction. The NHL, on the other hand, says that, as far as it's concerned, there will be a one-half inch limit on the curvature of the sticks. As for the series itself, Bowman said that while "you can't put a world championship tag on it," it still will be an important one. "I'm convinced that the Soviets will have the best representative team they've ever had," the Montreal coach added. "We've got some good young hockey players. We'll have to make some adjustments on defense because of injuries." Bowman was referring not only to Potvin's potential absence, but also the absence of Boston Bruin All-Star defenseman Brad Park, still recuperating from knee surgery. "Our biggest adjustment will be that there isn't a player in our room who doesn't notch at least 25 to 30 minutes ice time a game," Bowman added. "They're all great players. There are some greater than others." Russian Coach Viktor Tikhonov insisted that the series is nothing more than a tuneup for his team for the April world championships in Moscow.

Colorado seeks reversal

BOSTON (UPI) — The University of Colorado was scheduled today to ask the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to overturn a lower court order preventing the school from hiring New England Patriots football coach Chuck Fairbanks.

U.S. District Court Judge A. David Mazzone ruled Jan. 15 that the university could not hire Fairbanks, who has four years left on his New England contract. CU attorneys appealed the decision, but could not persuade the higher court to overturn Mazzone's order at a preliminary hearing Jan. 26.

Mazzone's ruling resulted from a suit filed by the professional football team, which claimed Colorado interfered with Fairbanks' coaching performance by attempting to hire him while he was still working for New England.

The appeals court requested Fairbanks file briefs for the hearing, even though he is not listed as a defendant. Fairbanks' brief contends he has resigned the Patriots job and should be allowed to take the CU job because the college does not compete with New England.

On a countersuit filed by Fairbanks and CU, a Colorado state judge ordered National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle to arbitrate the dispute. Rozelle, however, is not expected to act in the immediate future.

Indiana State second

Notre Dame widens poll lead

NEW YORK (UPI) — Top-ranked Notre Dame increased its lead over second-ranked Indiana State in the weekly United Press International college basketball ratings Monday with more than half of the 42-member Board of Coaches casting their lot with the Irish.

After boosting its season record to 15-2 with a pair of hard-fought victories, Notre Dame received 22 first place votes — an increase of 10 from last week — and 603 points to easily outdistance the Sycamores in this week's voting.

Indiana State (20-0), the nation's only undefeated team, picked up 16 first place mentions and 565 points to maintain its firm grip on the No. 2 position.

LSU, raising its record to 16-3 in the tough Southeastern Conference, advanced five places to No. 7, and Marquette moved up one notch to No. 8 after disposing of two opponents during the week.

Michigan State, a winner three times during the week, returned to the top 10 after a week's absence. The Spartans climbed four places to No. 9 while Syracuse, despite winning its only game, dropped two places to No. 10.

Texas A&M moved up three places to No. 11. Ohio State fell off five spots to No. 12 and Iowa made its first appearance in the top 20, taking over the No. 13 position. The Hawkeyes, 15-4, are in contention for the Big Ten Conference title.

Gushiken chosen outstanding boxer

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — World Boxing Association junior flyweight champion Yoko Gushiken of Japan was named "boxer of the month" for his seventh successful title defense last Jan. 7, the association announced Monday.

The Japanese retained his WBA crown scoring a seventh-round knockout over Venezuelan challenger Rigoberto Mareano.

The WBA made the announcement in its official ranking list for January in which Colombia's Antonio Cervantes (Kid Pambele) received an honorable mention.

Cervantes, holder of the WBA's junior welterweight crown, retained the title last Jan. 18 when he outpointed challenger Miguel Montilla, of the Dominican Republic, in New York to win by a unanimous decision.

The following is the WBA's official ranking list for January:

VOLCO JEROME BURLEY

CAN HARD TO START? COULD BE THE OIL.

Sub-freezing starts

If your car is hard to start or won't start it could be because you have summer-weight oil. Since cold temperatures thicken all weights of oils, a winter oil must be thin enough to allow adequate engine cranking speed at the lowest anticipated temperature. A winter oil must be thin enough to quickly flow to the bearings, but thick enough when the engine reaches normal operating temperatures, to provide adequate protection.

SAE 20W-20	minit-lube uses only these top-grade Pennzoil oils for your car or truck. This is a medium thin oil with special chemical additives which make it good for temperatures down to below freezing temperatures. Recommended for winter driving.
SAE 30	A medium weight oil with no additives — for temperatures below 32 degrees Fahrenheit. Recommended for summer driving.
SAE 10W-40	A multi-grade oil with both thin qualities and special chemical additives for winter and sub-freezing temperatures and thick qualities for high temperature driving. Recommended for all season driving.

Check your owner's vehicle manual for manufacturer's recommended oil and weight.

We'll help your engine turn over on cold mornings. And we'll turn over a real $2.00 bill to you... as a $2.00 rebate for trying our service.

minit-lube

Present this coupon with any full service at the minit-lube nearest you. And we'll give you a REAL $2.00 bill back at the time and place of purchase.
