8,000 Americans unprotected in Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The U.S. Embassy, conceding it could no longer protect Americans in violence-torn Iran, Thursday warned more than 8,000 Americans still in the country to prepare for airlift evacuation with only one suitcase each.

Aides of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who before his seizure of power four days ago had demanded that a "holy American" leave Iran, reportedly will bring to the U.S. evacuation order and refused to help with the planned exodus.

In Tehran, widespread looting broke out for the first time in the 15 months of street violence which culminated in the flight of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi from Iran and the victory Sunday of followers of Khomeini over the shah's last government.

Unidentified gunmen ransacked shops along Pahlavi

Avenue, Tehran's Fifth Avenue, stripping stores' of everything from bathroom fittings to sporting goods.

The night of looting coincided with a spate of hit-and-run attacks on mosques, radio stations, power plants and other government installations by left-wing gunmen. Those attacks, which began with the assault and seizure of the U.S. Embassy Wednesday, continued Thursday.

Following Wednesday's U.S. Embassy attack, Ambassador William Sullivan issued a directive to the more than 8,000 U.S. nationals still in Iran which said:

"We cannot protect American lives in Iran. We strongly recommend evacuation from Iran. You should prepare for evacuation."

Sullivan said all evacuees should only carry one suitcase in addition to the clothes they are wearing. "We have aircraft planning to arrive on Saturday, Feb. 17," he said.

The State Department said the evacuation would involve civilian airliners and possibly U.S. military planes and helicopters. Spokesman Hodding Carter said that two chartered Pan American 747s, each capable of carrying 400 people, would be flown to Tehran on Saturday.

Carter said the planned evacuation could not proceed before Saturday because of religious holidays in Iran Thursday and Friday. During those festivities, American planes will not be allowed to enter the country.

The Pentagon said its military airlift command centers in Europe and the United States were being made ready for possible use. Planes that could be used in the evacuation include C-5A Jumbo transports and C-141 four-engine jets.

Processing centers were being set up around the city for the American evacuees to gather. Embassy sources said as many as 6,000 of the more than 8,000 Americans would probably take advantage of the evacuation airlift.

However, when embassy officials asked the new Khomeini regime for buses to help pick up Americans from around the battle-scarred capital and take them to the processing centers, aides to the 78-year-old Moslem holy man brusquely turned them down.

"When the time comes, we will give you buses and everything you require, but not before," a Khomeini aide reportedly replied.

The American evacuation plans clearly irked the Khomeini camp.

A spokesman for the Khomeini camp said, "You can tell the American public, frankly, I don't give a damn for the American government."

Teen-agers beaten, kidnapped; four suspects arrested

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

JEROME — Two Jerome teen-agers were found nude and beaten along a rural highway early Thursday.

Four persons later in the day were charged with the kidnapping and beating of Dennis Abbott, 19, and Douglas Norgard, 17.

In addition, the four suspects also were charged with kidnapping a 5-year-old girl related to one of the victims.

Magistrate Judge Daniel Meehl and Jerome County Prosecutor Gene Frederickson asked that the young girl's name be withheld.

The beating and kidnapping incident apparently developed out of an argument Abbott and Norgard had with their abductors last Friday.

The argument turned worse Wednesday night or early Thursday when the four people charged in the incident reportedly went to a mobile home in Jerome where Abbott and Norgard live.

An argument ensued and the beatings began, police reported.

Then, according to police reports, Abbott, Norgard and the 5-year-old girl were forced out of the trailer and into a vehicle.

They allegedly were driven out of town, stripped, beaten, kicked again and abandoned, according to Jerome County Sheriff Eliza Hall.

The girl was then taken back to the trailer and held there.

Each of the four people arrested and charged in connection with the incident are juveniles.

Magistrate Judge Meehl, who presided in place of Judge Russell Shaud, has complied with Shaud's policy of allowing the names of juveniles charged with a serious crime to be printed in the case of the two juvenile boys.

Those charged with kidnapping are Pete Chittock, 17, Clarence Edward Lippert, 16, and Victor Chittock, 24.

The three men are being held in Jerome County Jail pending further court action. The older Chittock is being held on $12,000 bail.

The 16-year-old girl charged, but whose name has been withheld, is remanded to the custody of the Volunteers in Correction agency, which will locate a home for her to stay in while the case is being heard.

All four defendants are charged with three counts of kidnapping and two counts of assault and battery.

In addition, the three males are charged with one count of committing an infamous crime against nature by forcing one of the victims to perform a sexual act on them.

Dennis Abbott was listed in satisfactory condition Thursday night by St. Benedict's Hospital authorities with a broken jaw and a tooth floating in his throat.

Douglas Norgard and the young girl were not hospitalized.

The four defendants were arrested Thursday afternoon after Twin Falls and Jerome city and county police and sheriff's officers located them in a house east of Twin Falls about 11 a.m.

The three juveniles charged with kidnapping will be given a denial or admission hearing under the purview of the Youth Rehabilitative Act early next week.

As juveniles, the crimes they are charged with could be considered felonies. If convicted, several things could happen. They could spend 30 days in jail for each count, be fined or be sentenced to a state rehabilitation camp or foster home or be put on probation.

The older Chittock, if convicted, could receive a life sentence for the charge of committing an infamous crime against nature. He will have a preliminary hearing in Jerome Magistrate Court within 10 days.

The three male defendants are represented by the Jerome County public defender's office while the girl is represented by Twin Falls lawyer William R. Hollifield.

Gooding papers at war

By DOUG TULLIS
Times-News writer

GOODING — A near life-and-death battle between Gooding's two weekly newspapers comes to a head today.

The Gooding County Commissioners are scheduled this morning to decide which paper, the Gooding County Leader or The Enterprise of Southern Idaho, both in Gooding, will print the county's legal advertising.

Publishers of each paper asked the commission earlier this week for the county's business, but action was delayed.

The Leader now publishes Gooding County's "legals" and Publisher Robert Crompton vows court action if the commissioners shift advertising to the Enterprise.

"We will immediately take legal action if they do (give the legals to the Enterprise) based on evidence that the Enterprise is padding paid circulation," Crompton said Thursday.

The loss of legal advertising would have little effect on the Leader, Crompton said, but Enterprise Publisher Robert "Pa" Brown said legals comprise a "substantial portion of profits to our paper."

Brown and Crompton each claim the circulation of his paper exceeds that of the other.

Crompton said he believes the Enterprise mailing list contains the names of people who have not paid for the paper but still receive it.

"The quality of circulation is important. Subscriptions that are paid in advance are more likely to be read than those given for free," Crompton said.

Brown countered by saying many of the Leader's subscriptions were given free or are not canceled when requested. He claimed the Leader's statements of circulation are incorrect and are much lower than postal reports indicate.

Crompton said the county legal advertising accounts for about three or four percent of revenue for the paper and the loss would not hurt the Leader.

"Regardless of what happens, we will continue to publish and we will begin publishing a shopper in March," he said.

Brown said not getting the county legals and the possible loss of city legal advertising revenue would mean the end of the five-year-old Enterprise.

"I'm afraid it would close us down," he said.

The Enterprise began carrying Gooding city legals in 1977 when Leader Editor Kim Crompton was elected to the city council.

When elected, Crompton requested the Enterprise be allowed to publish city legals to avoid any conflict of interest because of his position. When he resigned Jan. 8, Crompton asked the city council to allow the Leader to again publish city legals. The council took no action on the request.

Brown, however, promises legal action if the city legals are taken from the Enterprise and returned to the Leader.

The Idaho Code specifies that local and county legal notices be published in a single general circulation newspaper published in the county or city, but gives no direction for choosing between more than one newspaper.

The commissioners have given no indication which paper will receive the legals, but Commission Chairman George Lemmon said he would like some public comment before making the decision.

"We were elected by the public and I think they ought to have their say in the matter. After all, we're supposed to be representing them," he said.

Carter again meets Portillo

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — President Carter, publicly rebuked by his host on arrival, met again Thursday with President Jose Lopez Portillo in an attempt to patch up suddenly worsened U.S.-Mexican relations and to deal with the touchy topics of migrant workers and access to Mexico's vast oil and gas reserves.

The talks lasted three hours and 15 minutes, 45 minutes less than scheduled.

Asked if energy would be the focus of attention, press secretary Jody Powell smiled and said, "I wouldn't be a bit surprised."

As juveniles, the crimes they are charged with could be considered felonies. If convicted, several things could happen. They could spend 30 days in jail for each count, be fined or be sentenced to a state rehabilitation camp or foster home or be put on probation.

The older Chittock, if convicted, could receive a life sentence for the charge of committing an infamous crime against nature. He will have a preliminary hearing in Jerome Magistrate Court within 10 days.

The three male defendants are represented by the Jerome County public defender's office while the girl is represented by Twin Falls lawyer William R. Hollifield.

Califano warns of Darvon's dangers

Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Sales of Darvon, a controversial pain-killer linked to more drug deaths than heroin, will continue unrestricted as a result of Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano's refusal to ban the drug.

Joseph Califano

"A lot of people will die as a result of this decision," said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the Health Research Group, a Ralph Nader organization. The group asked in November for a ban on Darvon — estimated at 30 million prescriptions a year — charging that it is an imminent public health hazard and is, no more effective than aspirin in relieving pain.

"There's no question that it's a dangerous drug," Califano said at a Thursday news conference. "I think physicians ought to count to 10 before prescribing Darvon."

"But the only question facing me is removing the drug without a hearing as an imminent public health hazard. That is not justified on the basis of evidence available to me or my advisers at this time."

Califano noted that he had invoked the "imminent public health hazard" provision of the Food and Drug Law in banning sales of phenformin, a drug prescribed to control diabetes, because even when used as directed, it caused deaths and its effectiveness was questionable.

Darvon, he said, has not proven fatal when taken in prescribed doses — although Califano acknowledged it is unclear how many of the 607 Darvon-related deaths reported in 1977 were the result of accidental overdoses, abuse by persons seeking intoxication, or suicides.

In his petition calling for a ban on Darvon — which is sold under that trade name, in compounds, and under the generic name propoxyphene — Wolfe had cited scientific studies showing that the drug is not as effective as much cheaper, over-the-counter aspirin.

Califano alluded to these studies in his statement, saying: "Propoxyphene is occasionally sold alone, and it may have some therapeutic advantages for people who react adversely to other pain relievers."

"But it is far more often sold as a compound with pain relievers such as aspirin or acetaminophen (an aspirin substitute). Several studies indicate that most or all of the effectiveness of these combinations is due to the elements other than propoxyphene."

"Nevertheless, since pain is such a subjective symptom, some people may experience, psychologically or physically, more relief from propoxyphene which is prescribed by a doctor than they would from over-the-counter pain relievers such as aspirin.

"Overall the best evidence thus far is that propoxyphene is no more effective and may be less effective than aspirin."

Wolfe said Darvon is dangerous because it can be addictive in doses no larger than twice the recommended levels.

"That means that completely innocent people can easily become addicted and die over accidental overdoses, while we're waiting for restrictions on it," Wolfe said.

"The federal government is doing a much better job of regulating heroin and morphine than Darvon — although it now exceeds heroin and morphine as a cause of death," Wolfe said.

Califano announced that he had ordered the Food and Drug Administration to begin deliberations on whether the Drug Enforcement Administration should reclassify Darvon as a Schedule II substance, putting it in the same class as amphetamines.

Darvon currently is classified as a Schedule IV drug under the Controlled Substances Act, which means prescriptions can be filled by a telephone call from a doctor to a druggist and patients can receive five refills within six months without further approval from a physician.

SECRETARY GENERAL

U.S. Secretary Waldheim addresses General Assembly

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim Thursday castigated the world's leadership for trying to solve problems through battles and wars and then expecting "miracles" from the United Nations when things go wrong.

Killer's wife knew

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The wife of Lionel Williams, convicted of fatally stabbing actor Sal Mineo, told investigators her husband had admitted killing the actor but she refused to testify at his trial, authorities said Wednesday.

According to law enforcement sources and documents, Theresa Williams told officers her husband was splattered with blood when he returned home Feb. 12, 1976, the night Mineo was stabbed in the heart near his West Hollywood apartment.

She said Williams, who was convicted of the murder and several robberies Tuesday, first told her only that he had killed someone.

When a picture of the slain actor appeared on the television screen, she said, Williams told her, "That's the dude I killed."

Prosecutor Michael Genellin called Mrs. Williams to testify during the trial, but her attorney, Vernon Putnam, said the woman could not testify against her husband.

According to documents, sheriff's investigators interviewed the woman April 26, 1977, the day Williams was extradited to Michigan where he faced a forgery charge.

Williams was not linked to the slaying until the woman came forward, authorities said.

More cuts proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chairman of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce urged Congress Thursday to cut another $10 billion in spending from President Carter's proposed 1980 budget.

Shearon Harris told the House Budget Committee $3 billion of this spending cut should be applied to reducing Carter's proposed $29 billion deficit to $26 billion and the other $7 billion should go to reduce personal income taxes.

Specific steps urged by the chamber include reduction of federal regulation adding to costs of both business and state and local governments and restraining federal pay to make it comparable to that of the rest of the economy.

In his first news conference of 1979, Waldheim looked at the crisis in Indochina, foot-dragging in southern Africa, stalled negotiations in the Middle East and the prospects for a "very serious oil crisis" and conceded he was "rather gloomy."

"It will be a very difficult year," the secretary general said. "We will be faced with many problems and unresolved issues, and the prospects for their solution are not good."

At the heart of the problem, he said, is the political will — or lack of it — on the part of the leadership in the world to use the machinery of the United Nations to solve problems.

"Everybody tries to solve problems on his own, through his own means, using military power and perhaps other means, and when that doesn't work, if it doesn't work, they are coming to the United Nations and are expecting miracles from this organization."

"They blame each other but they don't blame themselves... As long as a party is winning, or is on the winning side, it forgets about the United Nations. The moment it loses, the party comes to the United Nations and then is disappointed that we cannot solve the problem immediately."

Polish bank burns

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — An explosion ripped through the Polish Savings Bank in the heart of Warsaw Thursday, killing at least 10 people and totally gutting the structure during peak banking hours.

Shortly after the noon blast, police and firemen said they had pulled 10 dead and 30 injured from the rubble.

Hours later, ambulances still screamed up fashionable Marzowska Street and it appeared the final casualty count would be higher.

Parity plea made

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Farmers shelved tractorcade demonstrations and paraded statistics and emotional pleas Thursday in an effort to convince Congress they need higher prices for their crops.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland reiterated he could not agree to American Agriculture Movement demands to raise crop loan rates to 90 percent of parity.

Loans, which farmers pay back with interest or repay by turning over their crops to the government, have the effect of setting a price floor for commodities.

Business regulations: wasteful and costly

ATLANTA (UPI) — President Carter's chief inflation fighter criticized government regulation of small businesses Thursday, calling it costly and time consuming.

Alfred Kahn, speaking to the White House Conference on Small Business, said regulations had increased the cost of doing business. But he said regulatory reform was "a central plank" of Carter's anti-inflation program.

"There is no denying that these regulations have increased the money costs of doing business, and that they have in a real sense contributed to inflation," Kahn said. He acknowledged that meeting federal standards and filling out required forms had increased operating costs.

"Recently, the General Accounting Office identified 2,100 separate reporting regulations imposed by government on private industry, excluding taxes, at an estimated cost of $1 billion a year," Kahn said.

He said the Occupational Safety and Health Administration had eliminated some 40,000 small businesses from reporting requirements and OSHA was conducting a survey of the costs of government regulations to small businesses.

Kahn also called for the removal of "the heavy hand of government where it restricts competition and innovation — but only with an acute sensitivity to the great social value of protecting our environment and our health."

"In a large part what we are talking about is a change in the attitude of regulators," Kahn said. "Not in any sense a dilution of their obligation and determination to serve and to protect the public, but a recognition that the way in which they go about doing so they can make an enormous difference in the end result."

He said one of the most "frustrating, intractable, pervasive defects of the regulatory process is delay. It is the aspect of regulation that is most universally condemned by its victims."

Kahn said he was skeptical that a reduction of regulatory delay would be achieved.

Kahn warned again that if Carter's anti-inflation plan did not succeed business would be faced with the possibility of "mandatory, universal wage and price controls." He said such a government action would be a "nightmare" for business and industry.

Escaped killers sought

MARION, Ill. (UPI) — More than 100 trackers, including FBI SWAT teams, used dogs and a helicopter in a search Thursday for two "extremely dangerous" murderers who fled in dense fog from the nation's toughest federal prison.

Officials said a third inmate was captured before he was able to scale the double chain-link fences surrounding the Marion Federal Penitentiary Wednesday night.

FBI agent Kenneth Walton said a fresh team of dogs was brought to search an area about three miles south of the prison near the intersection of Interstate 57 and Illinois 37. One dog team tracked the prisoners through the snow to that point before being called.

Walton warned residents and motorists that the inmates were "extremely dangerous and could be armed."

The fugitives, both serving life sentences for robbery and murder, were Albert Garza, 33, of El Paso, Texas, and Howard Allen Zumberge, 23, of Minneapolis.

Walton said they may have picked the lock or opened a lock with a homemade key to gain a food service department door to open access to the fences.

A guard, patrolling outside the fences as an extra security measure during fog that limited visibility to 20 feet, spotted convicted murderer Daniel Caldwell, 32, of Las Vegas, Nev., between two guard towers as he prepared to scale the inside fence. He was apprehended immediately.

A portable radio was found between the fences and the fugitives may have a radio with them, said J.J. Clark, executive assistant to the warden. Clark said a pair of broken homemade wirecutters were found near one of the fences.

Walton said Garza and Zumberge were wearing white trousers and green shirts when they fled.

Zumberge was described as 5-foot-9, 170 pounds with blond hair and blue eyes. Garza is 5-foot-8, 190 pounds with dark hair and eyes and a full mustache.

The prison opened in 1963 as successor to Alcatraz and houses some of the nation's most-violent prisoners among its 500 population.

There have been seven previous escapes. The first was bank robber Warren George Briggs who scaled the fences in 1951 and ran through hall of bullets to two weeks of freedom before surrendering.

Five prisoners, using a homemade electronic device to open three sets of doors, walked out of the prison Oct. 10, 1975, but were captured several days later.

An attempt to free convicted airline hijacker Garrett Brock Trappnell last May ended with a St. Louis chartered helicopter pilot shooting hijacker Barbara Oswald to death near the prison.

On Dec. 21, Mrs. Qswald's daughter, Robyn, 17, who acquaintances said regarded Trappnell as a father figure, attempted to spring Trappnell by hijacking a TWA jetliner with 87 persons aboard to Marion. She surrendered 10 hours later and is awaiting trial.

Government pursuing overdue college loans

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The federal government said Thursday it intends to collect $90 million worth of defaulted student loans from residents of California and three other western states this year.

Charles Hampton, regional administrator for the federal Bureau of Student Financial Aid, said $65 million worth of defaulted loans — or nearly one-sixth the nationwide total of $407 million — are owed by 70,000 residents of Southern California.

No other region in the country ever approaches Southern California either in numbers of defaulted student loans or massive dollar volume," Hampton told a news conference. He said the another $25 million is owed by people living in central and northern California and in Arizona, Nevada and Hawaii.

"The government is dead serious about collecting," Hampton said. "We intend to collect the defaulted student loans as pleasantly as possible, or by through the courts if necessary, or by a private collection agency. Collection is inevitable."

He said the government has now begun using the IRS, computers and other modern techniques to locate defaulters. He added, "There's little likelihood now of a loan defaulter escaping the collection net."

Hampton said the monthly collection rate for the four-state region had increased from approximately $500,000 three years ago to a record $1 million in January.

"We are determined to resolve the backlog of defaulted loans by the end of this calendar year," he said.

Tomorrow

Among the stories in tomorrow's Times-News:

- Idaho's lobbyists are lobbying less but enjoying it more. According to disclosure reports filed with the secretary of state, lobbyists spent almost $20,000 at the Idaho Legislature during January compared to $32,000 last year. While spending decreased, the percentage spent on entertainment, food and refreshment increased.

Millionaires

by the bushel

MENLO PARK, Calif. (UPI) — There were more than 500,000 millionaire households in the United States in 1977, a study by SRI International said Thursday.

The study, prepared by a division of the Stanford Research Institute, also said more than half of the 7 million American families with annual incomes exceeding $30,000 have a net worth of at least $200,000.

Curiously, the study concluded that some 74 percent of these well-to-do families do not consider themselves financially knowledgeable and at least 70 percent are worried about maintaining their current standards of living with inflation.

The study was commissioned by a group of 100 banks, insurance and financial companies.

Bee Gees win four Grammys

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Bee Gees' driving disco songs won four Grammys but lost out to Billy Joel and "Just the Way You Are" for the coveted awards of record and song of the year in the Grammy Awards telecast Thursday night.

Former President Richard Nixon was beaten by Orson Welles and the late Elvis Presley was defeated by Willie Nelson in competition for two of the 52 Grammys handed out by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

The Bee Gees, nominated for a total of six awards, won the Grammy for best male and female pop vocal performances.

In winning the record and song of the year Grammy's, Joel's rendition of "Just the Way You Are," written by Joel and produced by Phil Ramone, twice defeated both "Stayin' Alive" and "You Needed Me."

"Fantastic, I think it's fantastic," Maurice Gibb, one of the three Bee Gees, told reporters backstage after picking up his Grammy for album of the year. Ramone said it was a "total shock" that Joel, who is in Europe and did not attend the show, won the two big awards.

"I figured it was a Bee Gees' year," he explained. "I think it's terrific that he's being recognized after so many years."

Manilow said he was also surprised at his award because "Copacabana wasn't made to be a hit record. I thought it was a novelty tune."

Miss Murray, who was originally scheduled to perform at the show, had to cancel because of illness.

"Three Times A Lady" and "You Don't Bring Me Flowers" were also nominated for song of the year, while "Baker Street" and "Feels So Good" were competing for record of the year.

The other nominees for album of the year were the soundtrack of "Grease," Manilow's "Even Now," Jackson Browne's "Running on Empty," and the Rolling Stones' "Some Girls."

Academy officials also announced during the telecast that pop singers Les Paul and Mary Ford, jazz artist Count Basie and classical composer Rachmaninoff had been inducted into the group's Hall of Fame.

In awards announced before the start of the televised portion,

"Saturday Night Fever" won the Grammy for best pop vocal performance by a group, "Stayin' Alive," won for best arrangement for voices, and the Bee Gees were named producers of the year.

The recording of David Frost's interviews with Nixon was defeated in the best spoken-word recording category by Welles' recording of the motion picture soundtrack of "Citizen Kane."

The former president was in good company. Other losers in that category were Henry Ford with a reading of "The Grapes of Wrath," the television soundtrack of "Roots" and a recording of "Weathering Heights" featuring Dame Judith Anderson, Claire Bloom and James Mason.

Presley, who won three Grammys all in gospel categories before his death last year, was defeated in the competition for best country male vocal performance by Nelson's reworking of the 1940s song, "Georgia On My Mind."

Nelson and Waylon Jennings won the Grammy for best country group vocal performance for "Mamas Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up To Be Cowboys," and Dolly Parton was named best country female vocal performer for "Here You Come Again."

New Iranian leaders charge leftists with disruption

By YOUSSEFM. IBRAHIM N.Y. Times Service

TEHRAN — Three top officials of the new Islamic regime in Iran accused leftist guerrillas Thursday of mounting attacks on government installations and foreign embassies in Tehran with the express purpose of spreading fear and civil disorder in the country and undermining the provisional government of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan.

The officials also said some of the armed assaults were instigated by agents of the defunct Iranian secret police, the Savak. But they placed the main burden of the continued fighting throughout the country on the Peoples' Fedayeen, a Marxist urban guerrilla group that is estimated to have from 2,000 to 4,000 seasoned fighters under arms.

The charge, made by Hashem Sabaghtian, deputy prime minister for the transfer of power in the government of Bazargan, in an exclusive interview, was reiterated in separate interviews Thursday with two other high officials, Dr. Ibrahim Yazdi, deputy prime minister for revolutionary affairs, and Abbas Amir Entezam, deputy prime minister for public relations. The interviews took place at the heavily guarded offices of the prime minister, which were subjected to another armed assault in the morning, and where all three key officials keep their offices.

"The shooting and the attacks are the work of the fedayeen and some members of Savak," said Sabaghtian, who spoke in Persian through an interpreter. He said the Savak agents, whose number he estimated at "under 10,000," were fighting a rear action.

"They know their days are numbered and some decided they prefer to die with a bullet rather than be jailed or executed. It is estimated that the Savak agents were doing much of their fighting outside of Tehran, in such cities as Tabriz, Esfahan and Shiraz.

He said the fighting in Tehran, which has been sporadic but on a massive scale, was the work of the Peoples' Fedayeen, who have been active for years, but whose ranks are believed to have swelled dramatically since Sunday when thousands of new weapons fell into their hands.

Wednesday, the leftists issued a statement declaring that the "fight was still on" and that because "it is our duty to safeguard the people's victory" the group will not obey Ayatollah Khomeini's orders to turn their weapons over to the government or to the mosques.

Other sources at the provisional government's headquarters charged that three massive attacks that took place Wednesday night on the water, power, and radio and television stations in Tehran were the work of leftists and "were meant as a diversion, to allow other leftists to raid three mosques where piles of arms which were returned to the government were being stored. The mosques were raided and all the weapons taken.

The charge of Sabaghtian was the first direct one launched by the government against the fedayeen, after trying for days to keep a united front and to maintain the impression that all fighting groups in the country were operating under the umbrella of the ayatollah's government.

The leftists have been saying for days that they will not turn their arms in, until they know "what our place is under the new regime and what is the role reserved for us in policy-making," in the words of one of their many anonymous spokesmen.

Thursday, Sabaghtian, who is the most religiously inclined of all three deputy prime ministers, said flatly of the leftists, "Since this is an Islamic regime they have no place in it," adding that the regime, however, will try to avoid a direct conflict with the leftists.

New Orleans mayor may cancel Mardi Gras

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Mayor Ernest Morial Thursday night made a counterproposal to police officers threatening a strike and delayed his decision on whether to cancel Mardi Gras.

Morial agreed to accept conditional binding arbitration in police contract negotiations if officers dropped their plans for a strike that could cancel the annual carnival scheduled to begin this weekend.

Union officials did not comment immediately. Their next meeting with city officials was scheduled for 10 a.m. today.

Morial had previously rejected any form of binding arbitration, claiming it was illegal under the city charter.

Under his latest proposal Morial would agree to recommend the salary and benefits suggested by the arbitrator to the City Council and Civil Service Commission Board, which actually set the pay rates. However, the council and commission would be free to accept or reject the suggestion.

Morial also withdrew his deadline of noon today for a decision on whether to cancel preliminary Mardi Gras festivities Saturday, Sunday and Monday. He said he would wait until the police strike deadline of 7 p.m. Friday or later if necessary, before deciding whether to let the parades roll.

Morial's offer capped a busy day during which a breakdown in contract negotiations brought the city perilously close to its second police strike in eight days and threatened to intrude on Mardi Gras.

A strike by 1,200 of the 1,480 policemen last week forced the city to recognize the Police Association of New Orleans, a Teamster affiliate, as a bargaining agent. Union President Vincent Bruno threatened another walkout Friday night unless the city came to terms on a contract.

Morial's latest offer came after a high-ranking Louisiana National Guard official said later his men could not control Mardi Gras crowds even if the governor granted them arrest powers.

Less Heroin available in U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Peter Bensing, head of the Drug Enforcement Administration, said Thursday heroin availability in the United States has reached its lowest level in this decade and that "significant heroin networks (have) been broken."

Bensing said average purity of heroin in the streets fell from 6.6 percent in early 1976 to 3.5 percent by the end of 1978.

In remarks prepared for delivery to an annual meeting of the United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs in Geneva, Switzerland, Bensing said the overdose death rate from heroin "has decreased from 150 deaths per month in 1976 to less than 50 (per month) at the present time."

"Heroin injuries have likewise decreased from 1,600 per month two years ago to 700 at the present time," he said.

Bensing credited the success to "more effective targeting of major (heroin) organizations ... significant heroin networks (having) been broken up ... and the permanent Mexican government opium poppy eradication program."

(DEA officials said the agency, along with the FBI and other agencies, currently is conducting several more "high level international drug money flow investigations.")

While Bensing said Southeast Asia remains a major source of heroin for the United States, he commended the governments of Thailand, Burma and Malaysia for their determined efforts to keep the supply from increasing.

He expressed concern over the increased availability and use of cocaine and marijuana in the United States. Although law enforcement officers seized nearly 5.6 million pounds of marijuana in a nine-month period of 1978, "these large seizures have yet to make a measurable impact on domestic availability," he said.

But Bensing said he was encouraged by anti-drug smuggling efforts by the Colombian government under the leadership of President Julio Cesar Turbay. Colombia is becoming the leading source of marijuana smuggled into the United States — operations Bensing termed a multi-billion dollar industry.

Ford pleads innocent in Pinto fire

ELKHART, Ind. (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. pleaded innocent Thursday to reckless homicide charges in the deaths of three girls — passengers in a Pinto that was struck by a van and exploded into flames.

Elkhart County Superior Court Judge Donald Jones did not set a trial date — because — Attorney Richard Steinborn, representing the No. 2 automaker, said Ford would seek a change of venue within the next 10 days.

On Feb. 2, Jones denied Ford's motion to dismiss the reckless homicide indictment. The firm then asked the judge to certify an appeal of his ruling. Without certification, the company could not appeal a pretrial motion.

"I will not certify and I will now deny the motion to appeal," declared the judge, who heard arguments on the request last week.

He then held an arraignment on the charges, and Steinborn entered an innocent plea on behalf of Ford.

Steinborn did not indicate in court why the automaker wanted a change of venue, but he told newsmen one reason was extensive pretrial publicity.

The Elkhart County grand jury indicted Ford on three counts of reckless homicide, a Class D felony, for the Aug. 10, 1978, deaths of three girls riding in a 1973 Pinto that burst into flames when struck in the rear by a van.

Carter had Montezuma's revenge

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo smiled wilyly. Rosalynn Carter, sitting at the head table, covered her face with her hands in embarrassment. And there were a few snickers from the other guests.

President Carter had just old an elite Mexican luncheon gathering Wednesday that on his last trip to Mexico he was afflicted with the tourist ailment known as Montezuma's Revenge.

Carter's remark came during a toast in which he noted that both he and his host, President Jose Lopez Portillo, like to run.

"As a matter of fact ... I first acquired my habit of running here in Mexico City," Carter said. "My first running course was from the Palace of Fine Arts to the Majestic Hotel, where me and my family were staying."

"In the midst of the Folklorico performance I discovered that I was afflicted with Montezuma's Revenge," Carter said.

Only one Mexico City newspaper, Uno Mas Uno, reported the incident, using the Mexican word Montezuma. But Montezuma's Revenge is a gringo expression unknown in Mexico and Uno Mas Uno did not explain what the meant.

Idaho memorials come a dime a dozen

BY RAND MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

In the Idaho Legislature, the President of the Senate and the President of the House.

Idaho's memorials petition process is so common that it is almost a tradition of groundhog day. More often than not, the legislative memorials will be filed during the legislative session.

Idaho's way it seems, the legislature considers memorials, frequently on subjects which Idaho has no national or international frequency on. Idaho legislators need to publicly support to gain re-election. Why memorials and not bills, which would have the force of law? That difference is much of the explanation.

Memorials (formerly known as Senate and House Joint Memorials) are nothing more than petitions, requesting some action or making known the views of the Idaho Legislature. Making the request garners the publicity without the sticky requirement that follow-up legal action be instituted.

Not all petitions are worthless. Many serve a legitimate purpose in notifying Congress of Idaho's position on a particular problem. But few legislators will not agree that at least some of the memorials which come before the legislature are a waste of time and effort.

In 1978, the legislature considered and passed 22 memorials. To date only nine have found their way into this year's session. They are:

House Joint Memorial 1. This petition Congress to enact legislation which is not specified in the memorial) providing profitability and stability for the domestic sugar and sugar beet market. HJM 1 is in the Senate Agricultural Affairs Committee.

House Joint Memorial 2. This petition Congress to prevent adoption of an Internal Revenue Service procedure which sponsors of HJM 2 said would have established minority quotas for tax-exempt private school.

But IRS officials, said HJM 2 supporters totally misunderstood IRS law, and that the memorial argues against an action never taken or contemplated.

HJM 2 has passed both the Idaho House and Senate.

House Joint Memorial 3. This petition the President and Congress to adopt a federal policy which would recognize the role of state officials in resource management decisions. HJM 3 is in the House Resources and Conservation Committee.

Senate Joint Memorial-101. This memorial calls on Congress to grant a $150 monthly pension to every honorably discharged indigent veteran of World War I. SJM 101 is in the House State Affairs Committee.

Senate Joint Memorial 102. This petition Congress for faster construction of nuclear power plants and criticizes the federal government for adopting overly stringent safety requirements for this and other "safe, non-polluting forms of electrical energy." SJM 102 has passed both houses of the legislature and been sent to President Carter and the Congress.

Senate Joint Memorial 103. This memorial petitions Congress to exempt light-duty trucks and vans from emission requirements of federal air pollution laws. SJM 103 is in the House Transportation Committee.

Senate Joint Memorial 104. This memorial calls on Congress to adopt legislation which will insure "the continued existence, stability and profitability of the total domestic nutritive sweetener industry." The specific method of this action is left to Congress. SJM 104 is in the House Agricultural Affairs Committee.

Senate Joint Memorial 105. This petition calls on Congress to continue Amtrak rail service to Idaho. SJM 105 was introduced Monday.

Senate Joint Memorial 106. This measure criticizes the federal government for infringing on state rights, and urges Congress "to refrain from— withholding, withdrawing or threatening to withhold or withdraw federal funds from a state as a means of requiring a state to implement federal policies or practices." SJM 106 was introduced Tuesday.

Everything is fine at King Hill

After 71 years of trouble-ridden irrigation, King Hill area farmers lost their water delivery system last summer.

Until Thursday, it was touch-and-go whether they would be able to irrigate their crops this year. That would have meant a loss of $4 million to $5 million and the probable economic ruin of the area.

Many farmers were already suffering from the low yields caused by last year's short irrigation season, when mud slides destroyed their water pipeline.

Under the threat that water would not arrive at all this year, banks were reluctant to lend farmers more money, tax collections were likely to drop and customers even became late in their car payments.

More than approximately 120 farmers and many people in the towns of King Hill, Hammett and Glenn Ferry who depend on them can again look forward to the future, if all goes well.

The approximately 120 farmers and many people in the towns of King Hill, Hammett and Glenn Ferry who depend on them can again look forward to the future, if all goes well.

Thursday, the Public Utilities Commission approved an agreement between the King Hill Irrigation District and Idaho Power Co., which will help finance the system, and earlier this week the Legislature approved an unprecedented $500,000 loan to the district from the Idaho Water Resources Board.

Construction of the new system was undertaken by Cook Electric of Twin Falls on Monday before these approvals were made. But the risk had to be taken if water were to be delivered by May 1.

But before these good acts, came the efforts of the King Hill farmers, their leaders and local businessmen.

After first voting to issue $2.8 million in bonds, the district's farmers pledged their lands as collateral for $250,000 worth of short-term loans which the Idaho State Bank made to the district for the reconstruction. The time-consuming process of issuing the bonds would have delayed the project until it was too late.

The irrigation district's board of directors, its secretary Barbara Crane, attorney William Ringert and State Sen. J. Wilson Steen worked to gain the financing for the reconstruction.

They managed to take out three loans, hire a contractor and develop an $1 million deal with the power company.

At 6 p.m. Thursday, Cook Electric President Warren Chapman received the down payment on the new system, a $310,000 check from the Idaho State Bank.

"Now everything is fine," Chapman said, stating what all concerned with the King Hill district must be feeling today.

New views of adoption

BOSTON — Not long ago, the adoption of a child was handled like a top secret real-estate deal. The birth parent signed away the deed to her property, relinquishing her rights forever, and the adoptive parents became the exclusive new owners.

The adoption agency acted as a kind of real-estate broker in this business. In the course of their negotiations, the birth mother was promised anonymity and the adoptive parents were promised a clear title. They were now, and forever more, The Only Parents.

The role of the agency after the deal was closed was simply this: to keep the birth parent free from exposure and the adoptive parent free from intrusion. And the child was freed from what they felt would be the pain and confusion of having "two mothers" or "two fathers."

The theory was that then everyone could forget the past.

But secrecy never kept anyone from wondering. Over the last few years, as illegitimate birth has become less shameful and roots more meaningful, birth mothers and adoptees have wondered out loud about each other.

Some have gone further. Adoptees like Betty Jane Lipton have written publicly of their search for birth parents. Many birth mothers have formed support groups where they can remember and recover together. And today there are several organizations, like Orphan Voyage or the Adoptees Liberty Movement of America, which will assist adults in finding their parents.

So increasingly, adoption agencies find themselves handling requests, pleas and court orders to open up the old sealed records. The changes in attitudes and actions are coming so fast that it may not be possible any longer to respect the old property lines and Do Not Trespass signs.

Last week in Washington, for example, a 22-year-old mother of two, Carolyn Brinker, won the right to see her sealed birth records. Under the terms of the decision, the D.C. Department of Human Resources first will try to find her, parents themselves. If the parents are unwilling to meet with Brinker, she will see the information about her medical background. But if the department can't locate her birth parents within 60 days, she'll be given their names and last known addresses.

The careful decision is one of a few in which the old "property" has become a principle, and in which the adoptee's "need to know" has been considered paramount.

I suspect that it won't be very long now before goggle information is routinely given to adult adoptees. It may not be much longer before birth parents and adult adoptees who want contact with each other can be routinely matched. Nor will it be long before many of the best and worst fantasies of thousands are fulfilled.

We assume that there will be some good effects from all this, if only eliminating the terror of the unknown. But there may also be some difficult implications for the future.

We don't know what the effect will be on adoption itself. This is an era when most unwed pregnant women have abortions or raise their own babies.

Valentine's Day spat ended unhappily

By ROGER SIMON
Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — It was a typical Valentine's day: a wife testified in court that her husband sneaked into the house, forced her to submit to sexual acts and then tried to force her to abort a pregnancy.

The husband had this to say: "My wife has become a woman of independent type. All these charges are untrue. This is a conspiracy of women against men. Our marriage has changed from a husband-and-wife thing to a three-women woman thing."

The wife said this: "He used me. He used me as if I was a piece of property. And he should be punished for it."

The husband, who is officially known as Marjorie Sumida and a high school senior, is a civil hearing, not a criminal one. That is because in Illinois it is legally impossible for a husband to force sexually abuse his wife. The law simply does not recognize that a wife cannot be used sexually at her husband's bidding.

What is not to say that husbands can knock their wives around at will. It is a crime for a husband to batter or assault his wife.

But even though the Sumida case is a civil one, Sumida faces a possible jail sentence if found guilty.

Such cases were virtually unheard of in court a short while ago, and with the new, famous Grata Rideout case in mind, there was little attention paid to them. In that case, Grata Rideout accused her husband of rape, which is a crime in Oregon. He was found not guilty and the couple divorced.

A lot of time was poked at the Rideouts, and indeed, the legal case was not the best in the world. But the whole thing did seem too funny when you actually go into court and listen to the testimony. Or when you consider what the subject can mean to both sides.

Marjorie and Philip Sumida seem unlikely adversaries. On Wednesday, she sat in court wearing a shapeless gray dress and endlessly worrying a paperclip between her right and left hands. She is quiet, calm. She is a good witness precisely because her testimony does not seem smooth or rehearsed.

Phillip, to the distress of Marjorie's lawyers, is a small slender man, about five-foot-seven and 135 lbs. Best testified while standing before the judge, instead of sitting in a witness chair. Phillip gently gripped the little bronze ledge in front of him as he spoke. He was dressed casually, but neatly, in a blue sweater and corduroy pants. He was totally non-threatening. He spoke with a quiet confidence. There was no outburst from either side.

Marjorie, 30, and Phillip, 31, are an educated, middle-class couple, who grew up in Chicago and have known each other since they were 13. He is a Vietnam veteran and an electrical engineer. She grew up in a happy home on the Southwest side, where she says she never heard her father raise his voice to her mother.

She was a Girl Scout. When she was 18, she married. For Love. They have four children, the oldest of whom is 9 and the youngest 2.

"He beat me repeatedly," she said, "ever since the first baby was born. He knocked me down and kicked me in the stomach with his shoes on. It went on for years."

"Except for one time, when I slapped her, I have never beat her," he said. "I am confused by all of this. Why is she trying to put me in jail?"

A number of times during their marriage, Marjorie left home with the children, sometimes checking into a nearby Holiday Inn. Always, she returned.

"I believed I still loved him," she said.

In February, 1978, she left home, claiming to have been beaten and sought shelter from the Salvation Army. She also contacted the Legal Center for Battered Women, a non-profit group of lawyers who provide legal help for victims of domestic violence. Later, she returned home.

In May, claiming that the beatings had continued, she went to court where Judge Charles J. Fleck, Jr., issued an order forbidding both Marjorie and Phillip from "striking, harassing or interfering with one-another's personal liberty." Such an order is not uncommon in such disputes.

In September, having already filed for divorce, Marjorie went to court seeking Phillip's eviction from their home.

She also asked the Judge to find Phillip guilty of violating the Judge's previous order, because, she claimed, Phillip had beat her.

The Judge granted the eviction order, but just for two weeks, and denied the other motion, ruling that the charge of beating had not been proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

And then, as they say in court, there came the day in question. Marjorie swears that on Oct. 5, just four days before Phillip could have legally come home, he entered the home against her wishes; prevented her from calling the police; kissed, bit and otherwise forced her to submit to sexual acts against her will; tore her pants off and attempted to penetrate her sexually.

Phillip tells a different story. He swears that he was invited into the home on Oct. 5 to discuss visiting the children. He says he knocked and entered through the back door. He says that his wife voluntarily hugged and kissed him, he never tore her clothes off, never tried to keep her from calling the police and never attempted to have intercourse with her against her will. He testified that in their 12 years of marriage, the worst he ever did was slap her once.

Marjorie is now claiming that Phillip has violated both of the Judge's previous orders and should be found guilty of contempt. "If the Judge feels he should go to jail, then let it be what should happen to him," she said.

As is common in such cases, the lawyers have become almost as great adversaries as their clients. Leonard Timpane is, in court jargon, an arm-waver and a table-pounder. In his line of work—divorce law—that is not a criticism.

In court, he is loud, tough and sarcastic. "This is a conspiracy," he told me outside the courtroom. "These women, including the Legal Center for Battered Women, have entered into a conspiracy to get my client."

"They are like the People's Temple. Really. This is all a scheme. I've had to put $10,000 worth of work on this case. It's ridiculous. They are doing this because of the Rideout thing. These girls are obsessed."

"Sure, I'm aggressive in court. I have been in divorce work for 10 years. I only handle divorce and I only handle men. I give 'em a good trial. None of my clients can ever complain I didn't try."

Marjorie's lawyer is Kathleen Flaherty. She is quiet, tough and well prepared. During a recess, she and other attorneys from the legal center, mapped out strategy and included Marjorie in their decisions.

"Timpane is a sarcastic guy," she said. "Once, after Marjorie had begun to cry a little while testifying, he whispered something about having to mop up the tears."

Both sides thought they did well on Wednesday. Only one side did. On Feb. 23, Judge Fleck will rule. Fleck, 38, who is head of the divorce division, is credited in legal circles with intelligence and a knowledge of the law, two compliments not universally bestowed upon judges in Cook County.

He will, along with the legalities, have to decide one thing and wrestle with another:

— Did the evidence that Marjorie describe on Oct. 5 actually take place?

— If they did take place, were the wrong? That husbands undress wives, kiss and bite them, and attempt intercourse with them, usually is not considered a crime. Was it really forced? Was it really so bad? Is it a family matter that courtrooms and lawyers and judges really have no place entering into?

Aside from the legal issue, moral and societal issues are being decided here. The way that society looks upon liberties and sex and marriage is being reevaluated.

In "Gone With the Wind," shown to millions and millions of viewers this week, there is a famous scene where Clark Gable, drunk and angry that his wife is retiring to sleep with him, sweeps her up in his arms, charges up the staircase with her, and, off-camera, takes her sexually by force. In the morning, she is all smiles and singing, happy that he has done what he has done.

But that was in the 1860's. Times have changed. And frankly, my dear, the women are beginning to give a damn.

Panama Canal treaties may cost U.S. after all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite earlier administration assurances that ceding the Panama Canal would cost taxpayers nothing, a State Department official said Thursday it might wind up costing $350 million.

But Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher stressed in his testimony before the House Panama Canal subcommittee that the expense would not violate the treaty requirement, attached by the Senate, that no funds will be paid to Panama in the 21-year transition from U.S. to Panamanian control.

Under the treaties narrowly ratified last year, the United States will gradually cede control over the waterway and its surrounding zone until Panama takes full control on Dec. 31, 1999.

At the time the pact was under debate in the Senate, treaty negotiators repeatedly felt the impression all transition costs would be financed from conservative or other sources and not from taxpayer funds.

Conservative opponents later drew up lists of expenses they said would have to be covered by the taxpayer.

"It is correct there will be payments by the United States ... for things in the interest of the United States," Christopher said in response to questions from Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., an opponent of both the treaty and the complementary legislation now under consideration.

Christopher estimated the cost at $350 million over the life of the transition, which begins officially Oct. 1.

He described the costs as going mainly for "relocation of defense facilities, early retirement and (other U.S.) expense benefits."

For example, it will cost $1.5 million more than expected to relocate American residents of the Zone.

Homesick Marine in Vietnam may face a court-martial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Marine Corps said Thursday it is possible that a former POW who has surfaced in Vietnam could be court-martialed after his return to the United States, but it declined to speculate on what the charges might be.

In a written reply to questions about the status of Pfc. Robert Russell Garwood, 32, of Greensburg, Ind., the Marines also declined to say whether Garwood might be the same man other POWs have accused of donning a North Vietnamese uniform and joining patrols against U.S. forces.

They said that since he is still considered on duty with the Marines he "could be charged with and tried by court-martial for offenses, but added it would be inappropriate to speculate on the nature of potential charges.

prisoners brought treason charges against several GI's accused of collaborating with the enemy, but senior Pentagon officials ordered them dropped.

The Marines said Garwood, a driver at Marine headquarters in Danang in 1965, disappeared while enroute between two locations less than a half-mile apart inside a U.S. controlled perimeter. He was 19.

They said it was learned a short time later he was in the hands of the North Vietnamese, but added it is not known exactly how that happened.

Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., described Garwood Wednesday as a collaborator against whom legal action should be taken.

The Marines said it would be "premature" to comment because information about him "has not been fully developed."

Reports from other POWs held in South Vietnam told of a Marine who was captured near Danang in September, 1965, refused an offer to be repatriated two years later, wore a North Vietnamese uniform and took part in patrols against U.S. forces. This individual was last seen in 1969.

Intelligence reports identified the collaborator, but Pentagon spokesmen say they are barred by Privacy Act restrictions from confirming whether it was Garwood.

The Marines said Garwood would be entitled to back pay for the 13 years he has been listed as a POW, unless it is determined that his conduct while in the hands of the North Vietnam forces legally precludes such payment.

The U.S. government has discussed his case with Hanoi officials and asked the International Red Cross to help in returning him to the United States.

The Corps did say, however, that unlike other POWs who received regular promotions while in captivity, a decision was made in 1968 not to give similar treatment to Garwood.

The State Department said Wednesday that Garwood — listed as captured on Sept. 28, 1965, and still carried on "missing" rolls as a "war prisoner" — recently handed a foreigner in Hanoi a letter saying he wants to return to the United States.

Garwood was described as having voluntarily remained in Vietnam. If it were decided to prosecute him, he would be the first Vietnam POW to face such action. In 1973, fellow

Taiwan plans councils

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — Taiwan said Thursday it will establish councils in nine U.S. cities in place of their official mission to resolve diplomatic problems between China and the United States.

Government spokesman James Soong said Taiwan with U.S. support has agreed to open Coordinating Councils for North American Affairs in Washington and eight other cities to replace Taiwan's official mission, scrapped as of March 1.

The United States officially recognized Peking on Jan. 1 but gave the Nationalist government two months to decide the nature of its future relations with branches of the Taiwanese council will be New York, San Francisco, Chicago, Los Angeles, Honolulu, Seattle, Houston and Atlanta.

President Chiang Ching-Kuo, son of the late Chiang Kai-shek, issued a message to the nation Thursday defending the new arrangement.

"In the last two months, we have endured the heavy pain in our hearts to negotiate and talk with the United States amid danger and concern," he said. "We wanted to do all we could to mitigate damage from the tragedy and protect the interest of the country people."

Idaho memorials come a dime a dozen

By William Morrissey
Times-News writer

In the Idaho Legislature, memorials to Congress and the President are as common as dimes.

They are introduced by Representatives, Senators, the nation's chief executive, and the agency head, to respect the traditions of founding the state that more often than not are legislative memorials will go up on the floor of the Capitol building.

They are introduced in the House of Representatives, frequently on the floor of the Senate. Idaho has no special rules more frequently on the floor of the legislature need to publicly support to gain re-election. Why memorials and not bills, which would have the force of law?

That difference is much of the explanation.

Memorials (formerly known as Senate and House Joint Memorials) are nothing more than petitions, requesting some action or making known the views of the Idaho Legislature. Making the request garners the publicity without the sticky requirement that follow-up legal action be initiated.

Not all petitions are worthless. Many serve a legitimate purpose in notifying Congress of Idaho's position on a particular problem. But few legislators will not agree that at least some of the memorials which come before the legislature are a waste of time and effort.

In 1978, the legislature considered and passed 22 memorials. To date only nine have found their way into this year's session. They are:

House Joint Memorial 1. This petitions Congress to enact legislation (which is not specified in the memorial) providing profitability and stability for the domestic sugar and sugar beet market. HJM 1 is in the Senate Agricultural Affairs Committee.

House Joint Memorial 2. This petitions Congress to prevent adoption of an Internal Revenue Service procedure which sponsors of HJM 2 said would have established minority quotas for tax-exempt private school.

But IRS officials said HJM 2 supporters totally misunderstood IRS law, and that the memorial argues against an action never taken or contemplated.

HJM 2 has passed both the House and Senate.

House Joint Memorial 3. This petitions the President and Congress to adopt a federal policy which would recognize the role of state officials in resource management decisions. HJM 3 is in the House Resources and Conservation Committee.

Senate Joint Memorial 101. This memorial calls on Congress to grant a $150 monthly pension to every honorably discharged indigent veteran of World War I. SJM 101 is in the House State Affairs Committee.

Senate Joint Memorial 102. This petitions Congress for faster construction of nuclear power plants and criticizes the federal government for adopting overly stringent safety requirements for this and other "safe, non-polluting forms of electrical energy." SJM 102 has passed both houses of the legislature and been sent to President Carter and the Congress.

Senate Joint Memorial 103. This memorial petitions Congress to exempt light-duty trucks and vans from emission requirements of federal air pollution laws. SJM 103 is in the House Transportation Committee.

Senate Joint Memorial 104. This memorial calls on Congress to adopt legislation which will insure "the continued existence, stability and profitability of the total domestic nutritive sweetener industry." The specific method for this action is left to Congress. SJM 104 is in the House Agricultural Affairs Committee.

Senate Joint Memorial 105. This petition calls on Congress to continue Amtrak rail service to Idaho. SJM 105 was introduced Monday.

Senate Joint Memorial 106—This measure criticizes "the federal government for infringing on state rights and urges Congress to refrain from withholding, withdrawing or threatening to withhold or withdraw federal funds from a state as a means of requiring a state to implement federal policies or practices." SJM 106 was introduced Tuesday.

Everything is fine at King Hill

After 71-years of trouble-ridden irrigation, King Hill area farmers lost their water delivery system last summer.

Until Thursday, it was touch-and-go whether they would be able to irrigate their crops this year. That would have meant a loss of $4 million to $5 million and the probable economic ruin of the area.

Many farmers were already suffering from the low yields caused by last year's short irrigation season, when mud slides destroyed their water pipeline.

Under the threat that water would not arrive at all this year, banks were reluctant to lend farmers more money, tax collections were likely to drop and customers even became late in their payments.

Now, approximately 120 farmers and many people in the towns of King Hill, Hammett and Clewiston who depend on them can again look forward to the future, if all goes well.

At 6 p.m. Thursday, Cook Electric President Warren Chapman received the down payment on the new system, a $310,000 check from the Idaho State Bank.

"Now everything is fine," Chapman said, stating what all concerned with the King Hill district must be feeling today.

precedented $500,000 loan to the district from the Idaho Water Resources Board.

Construction of the new system was undertaken by Cook Electric of Twin Falls on Monday before these approvals were made. But the risk had to be taken if water were to be delivered by May 1.

But before these good acts, came the efforts of the King Hill farmers, their leaders and local businessmen.

After first voting to issue $2.8 million in bonds, the district's farmers pledged their lands as collateral for $250,000 worth of short-term loans which the Idaho State Bank made to the district for the reconstruction. The time-consuming process of issuing the bonds would have delayed the project until it was too late.

The irrigation district's board of directors, its secretary Barbara Crane, attorney William Ringert and State Sen. J. Wilson Steen worked to gain the financing for the reconstruction.

They managed to take out three loans, hire a contractor and develop an $1 million deal with the power company.

At 6 p.m. Thursday, Cook Electric President Warren Chapman received the down payment on the new system, a $310,000 check from the Idaho State Bank.

"Now everything is fine," Chapman said, stating what all concerned with the King Hill district must be feeling today.

New views of adoption

BOSTON—Not long ago, the adoption of a child was handled like a top secret real-estate deal. The birth parent signed away the deed to her property, relinquishing her rights forever, and the adoptive parents became the exclusive new owners.

The adoption agency acted as a kind of real-estate broker in this business. In the course of their negotiations, the birth mother was promised anonymity and the adoptive parents were promised a clear title. They were now, and forever more, "The Olsons."

The role of the agency after the deal was closed was simply this: to keep the birth parent free from exposure, and the adoptive parent free from intrusion. And the child was freed from what they felt would be the pain and confusion of having "two mothers" or "two fathers."

The theory was that then everyone could forget the past.

But secrecy never kept anyone from wondering. Over the last few years, as illegitimate birth has become less shameful and roots more meaningful, birth mothers and adoptees have wondered out loud about each other. Some have gone further. Adoptees like Betty-Jane Lipton have written publicly of their search for birth parents. Many birth mothers have formed support groups where they can remember and recover together. And today there are several organizations, like Orphan Voyage or the Adoptees Liberty Movement of America, which will assist adults in finding birth parents.

So increasingly, adoption agencies find themselves handling requests, plans and court orders to open up the old sealed records. The changes in attitudes and actions are coming so fast that it may not be possible any longer to respect the old property lines and Do Not Trespass signs.

Last week in Washington, for example, a 22-year-old mother of two, Carolyn Brinker, won the right to see her sealed birth records. Under the terms of the decision, the D.C. Department of Human Resources first will try to find her parents themselves. If the parents are unwilling to meet with Brinker, she will still see the information about her medical background. But if the department can't locate her birth parents within 60 days, she'll be given their names and last known address.

The careful decision is one of a few in which the old "property" has become a private, and in which the adoptee's "need to know" has been considered paramount.

I suspect that it won't be very long now before genetic information is routinely given to adult adoptees. It may not be much longer before birth parents and adult adoptees who want contact with each other can be routinely matched. Nor will it be long before many of the best—and worst—fantasies of thousands are fulfilled.

We assume that there will be some good effects from all this. If only eliminating the terror of the unknown. But there may also be some difficult implications for the future.

We don't know what the effect will be on adoption itself. This is an era when most unwed pregnant women have abortions or raise their own babies.

Valentine's Day spat ended unhappily

By Roger Simon
Chicago Sun-Times

It was a typical Valentine's day: a wife testified in court that her husband snuck into the house, forced her to have sex with him and then tried to force her to have sex with him.

She testified that this is what she said: "My wife has become a man's obsession type person. All these charges are against me. This is a conspiracy of women against men. Our marriage has changed from a husband-and-wife thing to a man-and-woman thing."

She testified that she had sex with him as if it was a business transaction. And he should be punished for it.

The man, who is officially known as Marjorie Sumida but whose name is a civil hearing, not a criminal one, lives in Illinois. It is legally impossible for a woman to sue a man for sexually abusing his wife. The law simply does not recognize that a wife cannot be used sexually at her husband's bidding.

What is not to say that husbands can knock their wives around at will. It is a crime for a husband to batter or sexually abuse his wife.

But even though the Sumida case is a civil one, Sumida faces a possible jail sentence if found guilty.

Such cases were virtually unheard of in court a short time ago and until the now-famous Rideout case in Oregon. There was little attention paid to them. In that case, the husband accused her husband of rape, which was not in Oregon. He was found not guilty and the couple divorced.

Sumida was poked at the Rideouts, and indeed, the Rideout case was not the best in the world. But the whole thing doesn't seem too funny when you actually go into court and listen to the testimony. Or when you consider what the verdict can mean to both sides.

Marjorie and Philip Sumida seem unlikely adversaries. On Wednesday, she sat in court wearing a shopless grey dress and endlessly worrying a pipeclip between her fingers and reduced hands. She is quiet, calm. She is a woman, precisely because her testimony does not seem smooth or rehearsed.

Philip, to the distress of Marjorie's lawyers, is a small slender man, about five-foot-seven and 135 lbs. Both testified while standing before the judge, instead of sitting in a witness chair. Philip gently gripped the little bronze ring in front of him as he spoke. He was dressed casually, but neatly, in a blue sweater and corduroy pants. He was totally non-threatening. He spoke with a quiet confidence. There was no outburst from either side.

Marjorie, 30, and Philip, 31, are an educated, middle-class couple, who grew up in Chicago and have known each other since they were 13. He is a Vietnam veteran and an electrical engineer. She grew up in a happy home on the Southwest side, where she says she never heard her father raise his voice to her mother.

She was a Girl Scout. When she was 18, she married. For Love. They have four children, the oldest of whom is 9 and the youngest 2.

"He beat me repeatedly," she said, "ever since the first baby was born. He knocked me down and kicked me in the stomach with his shoes on. It went on for years."

"Except for one time, when I slapped her. I have never beaten her," he said, "I am confused by all of this. Why is she trying to put me in jail?"

A number of times during their marriage, Marjorie left home with the children, sometimes checking into a nearby Holiday Inn. Always, she returned.

"I believed I still loved him," she said.

In February, 1978, she left home, claiming to have been beaten and sought shelter from the Salvation Army. She also contacted the Legal Center for Battered Women, a non-profit group of lawyers who provide legal help for victims of domestic violence. Later, she returned home.

In May, claiming that the beatings had continued she went to court where Judge Charles J. Fleck, Jr., issued an order forbidding both Marjorie and Philip from "striking, harassing or interfering with one another's personal liberty." Such an order is not uncommon in such disputes.

In September, having already filed for divorce, Marjorie went to court seeking Philip's eviction from their home.

She also asked the Judge to find Philip guilty of violating the Judge's previous order, because, she claimed, Philip had beat her.

The Judge granted the eviction order, but just for two weeks, and denied the other motion, ruling that the charge of beating had not been proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

And then, as they say in court, there came the day in question. Marjorie swears that on Oct. 5, just four days before Philip could have legally come home, he entered the home against her wishes; prevented her from calling the police; kissed, bit and otherwise forced her to submit to sexual acts against her will; tore her pants off and attempted to penetrate her sexually.

Philip tells a different story. He swears that he was invited into the home on Oct. 5 to discuss visiting the children. He says he knocked and entered through the back door. He says that his wife voluntarily hugged and kissed him, he removed her clothes off, never tried to keep her from calling the police and never attempted to have intercourse with her against her will. He testified that in their 12 years of marriage, the worst he ever did was slap her once.

Marjorie is now claiming that Philip has violated both of the Judge's previous orders and should be found guilty of contempt. "If the Judge feels he should go to jail, then that is what should happen to him," she said.

As is common in such cases, the lawyers have become almost as great adversaries as their clients. Leonard Timpane is, in court jargon, an arm-waver and a table-pounder. In his line of work—divorce law—that is not a criticism.

In court, he is loud, tough and sarcastic. "This is a conspiracy," he told me outside the courtroom. "These women, including the Legal Center for Battered Women, have entered into a conspiracy to get my client."

"They are like the People's Temple. Really. This is all a scheme. I've had to put $10,000 worth of work on this case. It's ridiculous. They are doing this because of the Rideout thing. These girls are obsessed."

"Sure, I'm aggressive in court. I have been in divorce work for 10 years. I only handle divorce and I only handle men. I give 'em a good trial. None of my clients can ever complain I didn't try."

Marjorie's lawyer is Kathleen Flaherty. She is quiet, tough and well prepared. During a recess, she and other attorneys from the legal center, mapped out strategy and included Marjorie in their decisions.

"Timpane is a sarcastic guy," she said, "Once, after Marjorie had begun to cry a little while testifying, he whispered something about having maps up the tears."

Both sides thought they did well on Wednesday. Only one side did. On Feb. 23, Judge Fleck will rule. Fleck, 38, who is head of the divorce division, is credited in legal circles with intelligence and a knowledge of the law, two compliments not universally bestowed upon judges in Cook County.

He will, along with the legalities, have to decide one thing and wrestle with another:

Did the events that Marjorie describe on Oct. 5 actually take place?

— If they did take place, were the wrong? That husbands undress wives, kiss and bite them, and attempt intercourse with them, usually is not considered a crime. Was it really forced? Was it really so bad? Is it a family matter that courtrooms and lawyers and judges really have no place entering into?

In "Gone With the Wind," shown to millions and millions of viewers this week, there is a famous scene where Clark Gable, drunk and angry that his wife is refusing to sleep with him, sweeps her up in his arms, charges up the staircase with her, and, off-camera, takes her sexually by force. In the morning, she is all smiles and singing, happy that he has done what she has done.

But that was in the 1800's. Times have changed. And frankly, my dear, the women are beginning to give a damn.

She also asked the Judge to find Philip guilty of violating the Judge's previous order, because, she claimed, Philip had beat her.

The Judge granted the eviction order, but just for two weeks, and denied the other motion, ruling that the charge of beating had not been proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

And then, as they say in court, there came the day in question. # Panama Canal treaties may cost U.S. after all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite earlier administration assurances that ending the Panama Canal would cost taxpayers nothing, a State Department official said Thursday it might wind up costing $350 million.

But Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher stressed in his testimony before the House Panama Canal subcommittee that the expenses will not violate the treaty reservation, attached by the Senate, that no funds will be paid to Panama in the 21-year transition from U.S. to Panamanian control.

Under the treaties narrowly ratified last year, the United States will gradually cede control over the waterway and its surrounding zone until Panama takes full control on Dec. 31, 1999.

At the time the pact was under debate in the Senate, treaty negotiators repeatedly left the impression all transition costs would be financed from canal revenues or other sources and not from taxpayer funds.

Conservative opponents later drew up lists of expenses they said would have to be covered by the taxpayer.

"It is correct there will be payments by the United States... for things in the interest of the United States," Christopher said in response to questions from Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., an opponent of both the treaty and the implementing legislation now under consideration.

Christopher estimated the cost at $350 million over the life of the transition, which begins officially Oct. 1.

He described the costs as going mainly for "relocation of defense facilities, early retirement and other U.S. employee benefits."

For example, it will cost $1.5 million more than expected to relocate American residents of the Zone.

Homesick Marine in Vietnam may face a court-martial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Marine Corps said Thursday it is possible that a former POW who has surfaced in Vietnam could be court-martialed after his return to the United States, but it declined to speculate on what the charges might be.

In a written reply to questions about the status of Pfc. Robert Russell Garwood, 22, of Greensburg, Ind., the Marines also declined to say whether Garwood might be the same man other POWs have accused of donning a North Vietnamese uniform and joining patrols against U.S. forces.

They said that since he is still considered on duty with the Marines he "could be charged with and tried by court-martial" for offenses, but added it would be inappropriate to speculate on the nature of potential charges.

The Corps did say, however, that unlike other POWs who received regular promotions while in captivity, a decision was made in 1968 not to give similar treatment to Garwood.

The State Department said Wednesday that Garwood — listed as captured on Sept. 28, 1965, and still carried on missing rolls as a war prisoner — recently handed a foreigner in Hanoi a letter saying he wants to return to the United States.

Garwood was described as having voluntarily remained in Vietnam.

If it were decided to prosecute him, he would be the first Vietnam POW to face such action. In 1973, fellow prisoners brought treason charges against several GIs accused of collaborating with the enemy, but senior Pentagon officials ordered them dropped.

The Marines said Garwood, a driver at Marine headquarters in Da Nang in 1965, disappeared while enroute between two locations less than a half-mile apart inside a U.S. controlled perimeter. He was 19.

They said it was learned a short time later he was in the hands of the North Vietnamese, but added it is not known exactly how that happened.

Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., described Garwood Wednesday as a collaborator against whom legal action should be taken.

The Marines said it would be "premature" to comment because information about him "has not been fully developed."

Reports from other POWs held in South Vietnam tell of a Marine who was captured near Da Nang in September 1965, refused an offer to be repatriated two years later, wore a North Vietnamese uniform and took part in patrols against U.S. forces. This individual was last seen in 1969.

Intelligence reports identified the collaborator, but Pentagon spokesmen say they are barred by Privacy Act restrictions from confirming whether it was Garwood.

The Marines said Garwood would be entitled to back pay for the 13 years he has been listed as a POW "unless it is determined that his conduct while in the hands of the North Vietnamese forces legally precludes such payment."

The U.S. government has discussed his case with Hanoi officials and asked the International Red Cross to help in returning him to the United States.

Taiwan plans councils

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — Taiwan said Thursday it will establish councils in nine U.S. cities in place of their official mission to resolve diplomatic problems stemming from established relations between China and the United States.

Government spokesman James Soong said Taiwan with U.S. support has agreed to open Coordinating Councils for North American Affairs in Washington and eight other cities to replace Taiwan's official mission, scrapped as of March 1.

The United States officially recognized Peking on Jan. 1 but gave the Nationalist government two months to decide the nature of its future relations with Washington.

The eight "branches" of the Taiwanese council will be New York, San Francisco, Chicago, Los Angeles, Honolulu, Seattle, Houston and Atlanta.

President Chiang Ching-Kuo, son of the late Chiang Kai-shek, issued a message to the nation Thursday defending the new arrangement.

"In the last two months, we have endured the heavy pain in our hearts in order to negotiate and talk with the United States amid danger and concern," he said. "We wanted to do all we could to mitigate damage from the tragedy and protect the interest of the country people."

'Superman' won't pass 'Star Wars'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Superman is off to a flying start, pulling in an average box office gross of $1 million a day, but among movie immortals the Man of Steel probably will finish third behind a pair of robots and a mechanical shark.

Since its release in mid-December, the movie "Superman" has grossed $75 million at the box office, says Robert Dorfman, a spokesman for Warner Communications, Inc.

The early figures indicate the movie will well worth the $50 million spent on it before its release.

"It definitely will be the biggest in Warner Brothers' history," Dorfman said, "and it will probably end up in the top three to date."

But Dorfman conceded "Superman" probably won't catch the No. 1 grossing movie, "Star Wars."

At the time "Superman" was released, "Star Wars" already had grossed $275 million in the United States and Canada since it came out in May 1977.

Dorfman says "Superman" does have a chance to overtake the No. 2 movie, the original "Jaws" released in June 1975.

Dorfman said "Superman" won't be released in some foreign countries until June, and if the film is extremely well-received in the Orient it "could pass 'Jaws.'" Personally I find it doubtful it will pass "Star Wars."

But no matter what the final outcome, "Superman" already has created a legion of followers, the same sort of see-it-again-and-again fans who boosted "Star Wars" to the top.

"We can tell from the letters we get," said Dorfman.

"We get letters saying 'I've seen it six times and I love it.'"

Nazis plan a march to Independence Hall

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — City officials said Thursday they cannot deny a group calling itself the American Nazi Party permission to hold a rally outside Independence Hall next week.

Frank Collin, head of the National Socialist Party of America, said he may attend the demonstration and that those participating in the rally would carry guns if police did not provide protection.

Hobart Cawood, superintendent of Independence National Park, said a man identifying himself as James Guttman, 21, had applied for a permit to rally Tuesday, Feb. 20, but later called to say the date may be changed to Feb. 21.

Guttman said the "white power" rally would include members of the Ku Klux Klan and Collin, who led a rally in Chicago's southwest side last July.

Bernard Goodman, assistant superintendent for the park, said that on the permit application Guttman identified himself as the "leader" of the "American Nazi Party."

Goodman said park officials did not know if Guttman's party was affiliated with Collin's group.

Collin, reached by telephone in Chicago, said he didn't know if this campaign for alderman would interfere with his participation.

However, he said if reports that Mayor Frank Rizzo was not going to provide police protection were true, "We are going to be armed for the first time."

"We are going to carry guns," he said. "We have no intention of breaking the law but if he will not provide simple protection, then we will be armed."

Dallas cheerleaders fight X-rated movie

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal judge Thursday ordered the arrest of workers at a Times Square movie house showing the porno flick "Debbie Does Dallas," which purports to give the inside, explicit picture of the Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders squad.

Acting at the request of attorneys for Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders Inc., U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Griesa also hit the operators of the Pussycat Cinema II with a fine of $6,000 for each day the film is shown.

U.S. marshals said they expected the arrests would be carried out Thursday afternoon. The fines were imposed retroactive to Wednesday.

Griesa said he ordered the arrests and the fines because the exhibitors of the film showed "contemptuous and defiant conduct" in violating his order last Tuesday to stop showing the film, which bills star Bambi Woods as an "X-Dallas cowgirl."

The judge ruled Thursday, "Anyone who is there today participating in the showing of that film is in contempt of court."

Among those cited by name in the order was Michael Zaffarano, of Wantagh, N.Y., identified as the owner of the theater. Zaffarano "willfully disobeyed" the injunction, Griesa said.

The arrest order also covered any others who were found to be working on the premises.

Attorneys for the cheerleaders said they served the theater with the injunction at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday.

What's what

Sometimes it's not how cold it is outside but, in fact, how cold you really think it is Just about 125 people each year die of the cold in Miami, Fla. That's more fatal hypothermia cases than turn up in International Falls, Minn., where between 50 and 60 people chill to death annually. And more than those in Buffalo, N. Y., too, where from 10 to 30 such deaths occur annually. Think of that! To run from the winter, a lot of snowbirds go south, but not far enough south, evidently.

Rare is the citizen so seasoned as to remember when the Arkansas Razorbacks called themselves the Arkansas Bug-caters. Before 1900, that was.

Just about half of the people who regularly read books do so in bed as a pre-sleep ritual.

KISS

Q. "Seriously, ask your Love and War man why people tend to close their eyes when they kiss?"

A. When you shut down one sense-vision-you open wider the other four senses-touch, taste, smell and hearing. How many of these other four you put to use during a kiss depends, certainly. You may tend to close your eyes just thinking about it.

Q. "Who invented that game called Chinese Checkers?"

A. Can only report it first turned up in Sweden where it was originally called Halma.

Q. "In jail jargon, what's an 'habish'?"

A. An habitual criminal.

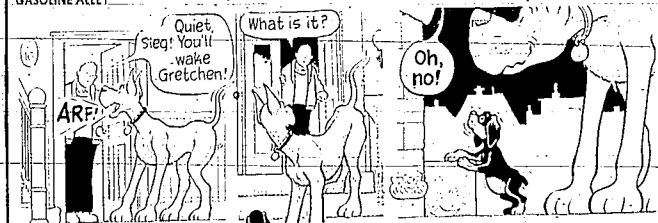

SATCHMO

Client asks, "How come Louis Armstrong was called 'Satchmo'?" Once during a stint in England, he read a British critic's description of him as "satchel mouth" and he himself cut it down to Satchmo.

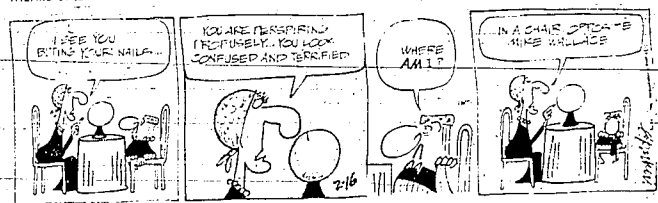

Thirty years ago, autopsies were performed on almost half of the people who died in hospitals. Today, they're done on only about a fifth of such.

Commodities broker admits fraud scheme

Industrial production slumps

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Board Thursday reported that industrial production inched upward by just 0.1 percent in January, the worst performance by the key indicator in a year.

However, government economists cautioned they would have to study the output figures for February and March before making a determination that the economy has started its anticipated slowdown.

Meanwhile, an influential group of business leaders issued a revised economic forecast predicting a growth rate considerably slower than administration predictions as well as higher inflation and unemployment.

The Business Council, a group of about 100 top corporate executives, said its "scaled back" projections call for inflation-adjusted economic growth of less than 1 percent, an inflation rate of more than 7.5 percent and a year-end jobless rate of 6.8 percent.

President Carter has said the economy will expand by about 2.25 percent, inflation will advance by 7.4 percent and unemployment will increase from the current 5.8 percent rate to 6.2 percent.

While predicting inflation will "decline modestly" during 1979, the business leaders said 1980 will see "little, if any, further progress in getting price increases down."

The industrial production report said overall output was adversely affected by poor weather last month and a sharp drop in automobile production.

The 0.1 percent gain was the slowest since output declined by 0.6 percent in January, 1978, the Federal Reserve said.

Gains had ranged between 0.5 percent and 0.7 percent during the last five months of 1978.

Industrial production is the output of the nation's mines, factories and utilities. It is considered to be an important economic barometer because when production slows some workers are laid off from their jobs.

The administration has predicted that economic growth this year will not be as healthy as in 1978 when it rose by 4 percent.

The Federal Reserve said its industrial production index stood at 150.7 percent of the 1977 average last month, and 8.6 percent higher than in January, 1978.

In a separate report, the Commerce Department reported that inventories held by the nation's businesses rose by $2.37 billion or 0.6 percent.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Wall Street commodities broker Thursday admitted defrauding investors in 45 states of nearly $5 million through three schemes involving the sale of London commodity options, commodity pools and contracts for deferred delivery of gold.

Steven Arabatzis, 43, pleaded guilty to four counts of mail fraud before U.S. District Court Judge Kevin Duffy in Manhattan. Each of the counts carries a maximum penalty of five years in jail and a $1,000 fine.

More than 1,200 investors in 45 different states were defrauded by Arabatzis, court papers charged.

Individual investors bilked in the scheme ranged from Frank and Doris Wisor of Portland, Ore., who put up $2,790 to buy cocoa options, to Philip Hamilton, of Dudley Drive, Shreveport, La., who paid $50,000 to participate in a commodity pool.

Using "tar" to 60 sales people at a time, Arabatzis sold commodity investments by phone and mail from tenth-floor offices of two Wall Street firms — Fairchild, Arabatzis & Smith, and Astor & Montclair.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Audrey Strauss said the defendant used the Wall Street address "to create an impression of respectability with out-of-state residents."

In reality, Ms. Strauss said, the offices were nothing more than "a high-pressure, telephone sales operation" to "induce people to send money for commodity investments which, in almost all cases, resulted in a total loss for the investor."

In the gold scheme, Arabatzis gave customers the right to buy gold at a particular price at the end of a six-month period. But, the U.S. attorney's office said, "fees and charges were built into the contracts, virtually insuring a total loss to the customer."

Gas rationing not forecast by Blumenthal

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (UPI) — Abu Dhabi and Qatar raised oil prices up to 7 percent Thursday, and Iraq reportedly was considering even greater hikes, heralding a general increase by OPEC nations as a result of the crisis in Iran.

The 7 percent increase would be in addition to the total 1979 price hikes of 14.5 percent set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Iraq's price increase plans were not clear, but it appeared they would be far in excess of 7 percent, possibly 75 percent or higher.

Qatar and Abu Dhabi produce only about 6 percent of OPEC's oil, but energy experts in Washington said they expected their moves would trigger a general price hike among other members of the 13-nation cartel.

One U.S. official compared the situation to the steel industry, where one firm's price hike often is copied by all others if the market shows it will take the increase.

"The increase is to compensate partly for the huge differential between the OPEC price and the free market, where oil prices are now between $6 and $7 a barrel (higher)," the United Arab Emirates news agency said.

Last week the Emirates' oil minister charged Western companies were "overcharging" during the Iran crisis and said extra revenues generated by tight market conditions should go to the producer nations, not the international oil companies.

The current OPEC price is $13.40 per barrel, but prices as high as $24.50 per barrel have been reported in some recent spot transactions — 83 percent above the cartel's nominal price level.

The effect of Abu Dhabi and Qatar's new price increases on U.S. gasoline prices could not immediately be calculated. Experts noted the "light crude" that flows from Abu Dhabi's wells is used to produce unleaded fuel.

Iraq's price-increase intentions were reported by oil industry sources in Tokyo, where representatives of the Iraq National Oil Co. reportedly suggested a complicated, three-tier price system that would bring oil prices up to the maximum now being charged in the open market.

Iraq, which reportedly made its proposal during a meeting with Japanese officials on 1979 trade between the two nations, said it would adhere to the OPEC price schedule for the first 4.2 million tons oil sold to Japan this year.

For everything between 4.2 million and 5.07 million tons of oil shipped, OPEC's highest price — the Oct. 1 rate of $14.54 per barrel, scheduled to take effect Oct. 1 — would prevail under the Iraqi arrangement.

Two nations raise price 7% on oil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal said Thursday U.S. oil prices must go up to promote conservation despite the inflationary threat of such an increase.

Other officials said a new price hike just announced by Abu Dhabi and Qatar may drive gasoline prices up a penny a gallon by the year's end.

Blumenthal, the president's chief economic spokesman, said he sees no need for mandatory U.S. gasoline rationing despite shortages caused by the loss of Iranian oil because the potential for increased conservation is so great.

"I think the price of oil will go up for all kinds of reasons, and should go up so that we can conserve more," Blumenthal said in an interview on the NBC "Today" show. "I think it has to go up."

Without going into specifics, Blumenthal said he expects President Carter to suggest a series of new measures to reduce fuel use in the near future. The only step he discounted was a new U.S. oil tax.

Administration officials are preparing for Carter a list of actions the government might take to spur conservation, Blumenthal said.

Another Arkansas sniper reported

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — Authorities Thursday reported another in a growing list of sniping incidents on central Arkansas highways amid law enforcement officials' statements they were doing everything possible to halt the attacks.

Capt. Dale Bruce of the North Little Rock police said an engineer for a Missouri-Pacific freight train reported his engine had been struck by what he thought was a bullet as it rissed through a crossing in North Little Rock Wednesday night.

"The engine didn't stop, but the engineer, D.R. Owen, radioed back that the engine had been hit by a gunshot," Bruce said.

In other developments, police reported traffic on the interstate system in central Arkansas has fallen off in the wake of the snipings.

Usury group may spring media blitz

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Gov. John Evans may be subject to an expensive advertising blitz designed to flood his office with phone calls if he threatens to veto a repeal of Idaho's usury limit.

The Times-News has learned the Homes for Idaho Committee, a coalition of 14 banking, construction, realty and housing associations has prepared a tentative $19,000 two-week media blitz which would urge voters to call Evans and sign House Bill 66.

That measure, which has passed the Idaho House of Representatives and is now in the Senate, would repeal Idaho's usury limit on loans not covered by the Uniform Consumer Credit Code. It would largely affect loans for homes. Numerous amendments to the measure have been proposed by senators. Evans says he might veto a bill completely eliminating Idaho's usury limit, but might sign a measure raising that limit to either a new fixed or a floating limit.

If the lobbying effort is conducted, the Homes for Idaho Committee would take place in two weeks about what was spent by all 256 registered lobbyists during the entire month of January. Those lobbyists last month spent a grand total of $19,812.18. The advertising campaign to pressure the governor into scrapping Idaho's usury limit would cost $19,036.59, most of which would be spent in eight days.

According to Robert D. Glaisyer, president of United First Federal Savings in Boise and the chairman of the committee, no definite decision has yet been made whether the lobbying effort will take place. The committee is waiting to see what action the senate takes on HB 66.

But the media campaign has been turned over to BB&W Advertising in Boise. According to Richard Martin at that company, the firm is handling the account and is waiting to receive final authorization for the blitz from Glaisyer.

The proposed campaign calls for purchase of 111 one minute commercials on eight Idaho television stations in five Idaho cities. The proposed budget for the television ads, which would air during an eight-day period, is $10,200.

The campaign also outlines purchasing $3,775.00 in newspaper advertisements in 12 Idaho newspapers in 12 Idaho cities. Radio advertising would cost $3,461.50 and would buy 660 one minute commercials on 29 Idaho radio stations.

The grand total is $19,036.59. Although most of the expenditures would take place in an eight day period, some radio advertising is outlined over a two-week period.

The ads as now written by Evans is threatening to "veto the bill that would make it possible for you to buy or build a new home!" Saying "there isn't time to write," the ads urge phone calls to the governor's office, and list the phone number of that office.

The Homes for Idaho Committee is not registered under Idaho's Sunshine Law for lobbyist and candidate disclosure. According to Glaisyer, each of the 14 member organizations will report any contributions to the committee for lobbying efforts in their own individual Sunshine Law disclosure reports.

But according to Chief Deputy Secretary of State Ben Ysursa, this may make it impossible to ever determine exactly how much money the Homes for Idaho Committee ever spends on lobbying activities. Ysursa said late Thursday it was too early to determine if any violation of the Sunshine Law had occurred, but said he would investigate the committee's actions on Friday.

Member organizations of the Homes for Idaho Committee include the Idaho State Homebuilders Assn., the Homebuilders Assn. of Southwestern Idaho, the Idaho Bankers Assn., the Western Building Materials Assn., the Idaho League of Savings Assn., the Idaho Mortgage Bankers Assn., the Idaho Assn. of Realtors, the Idaho Mobile Home Dealers, the Western Manufactured Housing Institute, the Idaho Concrete and Aggregate Producers Assn., the Idaho Concrete Pipe Co., the Mortgage Guaranty Insurance Corp., the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry and the Idaho Forest Industries Inc.

Convention opens on wildlife issues

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Friends of wildlife from across Idaho will gather in Twin Falls today to discuss the survival of wildlife.

More than 200 Idahoans are expected to attend the Idaho Wildlife Federation Annual Convention, which lasts through Sunday at the Holiday Inn. IWF President Don Zuck said Thursday.

Idaho Gov. John V. Evans, Sen. James McClure and Idaho Fish and Game Department Director Joe Greenley will address the conservation and education organization Saturday.

An Evans aide said the governor's speech will probably touch on the Clearwater Bridge controversy, the wilderness question and other issues relating to wildlife. Greenley will speak on new developments in the Fish and Game Department.

The group will also hear panel discussions on "Southwestern Idaho's Fish Farming and Its Impact"; on the "Challis Issue" (range management controversy); and on "Sawtooth National Forest, Cassia Division, Timber Sale Road Development Plans and Problems."

During the next three days, wildlife experts will address the group on a variety of issues, including the impact of road development in the Clearwater River drainage on water quality and fish habitat, elk-lynx management relations and the environmental impact of the proposed Wiley Dam near Bliss.

The IWF will also elect new officers for the coming year and conduct other internal business at the convention, including the adoption of position statements on critical issues concerning wildlife.

Zuck said the group will consider whether to take stands on the following issues:

- Whether the Clearwater Bridge at Lewiston should be modified to allow barge traffic.
- Whether a referendum should be called to insure that the Fish and Game Department receives interest on dedicated funds derived from fishing and hunting license sales.
- Whether bait travel on the South Fork of the Snake River should be limited to boats with engines of 25 horse power or less.
- Whether the commercial use or sale of bighorn sheep horns should be prohibited.
- Whether the Idaho Department of Water Resources and the Environmental Division of the Department of Health and Welfare should be merged.
- Whether electronic calls for big game should be outlawed.

High water menaces Mini-Cassia area

DECLO — The quick response of Declo citizens aided by a backhoe narrowly averted flooding here as high water continued to threaten areas of Cassia and Minidoka counties Thursday.

Declo Mayor Jones Leonard said ice jammed under a bridge across Marsh Creek about one-quarter mile east of Declo about 4 p.m., blocking the flow of water. Leonard said city employees had been checking the bridge periodically to "make sure it remained unblocked, but between checks the ice lodged itself under the bridge and flooding began almost immediately.

As soon as the flooding was discovered, Leonard said, several city employees and numerous volunteers rushed to the scene with a backhoe.

The backhoe was operated by Wayne Hayden of Burley, who had been called by the city earlier in the day to keep a bridge over Marsh Creek in the center of town free of ice jams.

Leonard said Hayden drove the backhoe onto the bridge through water about one foot deep. Parked in rushing water overflowing the stream banks, Hayden repeatedly swung the shovel of the backhoe under the bridge from both sides, before he could dislodge the ice, stacked squarely under the center of the bridge.

Once the ice was out, the stream returned to its channel, but not before it deposited about one foot of water in the Cowboy Corner Cafe.

Leonard said he knew of no other homes which were damaged by the flood, although waters reached the steps of two or three homes.

Leonard said Idaho State Police and Cassia County Sheriff's officers aided in the situation. He said he also called the Idaho Department of Highways because at one point he feared the bridge would have to be broken to stop the flooding. By the time highway crews arrived, however, the crisis had passed.

Marsh Creek was rampaging through Albion Wednesday night, but Mayor Chris Cagle said Thursday it had calmed down considerably.

"I can see where Declo might be in trouble, though, as it is getting all of the water from here plus what it picks up along the way," he said.

Albion was severely hit by flooding in January and low areas where damage occurred were sandbagged by the town's citizenry. Cagle said the sandbags are still in place and helped prevent damage Wednesday night. He added they will stay in place until after the spring run-off is over.

Several rural roads in Cassia County were also reported still in poor condition Thursday night. According to Radio Station KBAC in Burley, Cassia schools are open today while Minidoka County schools are closed. Idaho State police said areas of Interstate 80-N near the Salt Lake City interchange east of Burley and in the Raft River area were open and in no danger of flooding Thursday night.

Most of the lower elevation snow has melted, but sunshine all-day Thursday and recent warm temperatures have melted snow, causing runoff from the foothills. A sudden drop in temperatures Wednesday night slowed down the flood waters and improved road conditions.

Officers say motorists traveling at night should watch for flooding in low areas and for ice in others.

U.S. Highway 30 between Filer and Buhl was described as having "hot ice cover" Wednesday night after a brief snow storm combined with puddles of water in outside lanes to coat the highway with ice as freezing temperatures hit about 7 p.m.

74-year-old dies in crash

TWIN FALLS — A 74-year-old Twin Falls man plunged to his death in Snake River canyon north of Twin Falls Wednesday night.

The body of Wilber Steele, 74, was recovered shortly before 8 a.m. Thursday from the south side of the canyon following an all night search by Twin Falls and Jerome County sheriff's officers, Search and Rescue groups from the two counties and the Magic Valley Ambulance Service personnel.

County Coroner Cloyce Edwards ruled the death a suicide.

Sheriff James Munn said search and rescue and ambulance personnel rappelled the face of the canyon walls late Wednesday night in a search for the missing man.

A relative notified city police Steele was missing about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday. About midnight his car was found at the north end of Washington Street, parked beside the canyon overlook.

Sheriff Munn said a search immediately began in the canyon area and when the man was not located, search and rescue units were called to assist. At about 4 to 5 a.m. the search was called off and resumed again at 7 a.m. Munn said the body was found about 200 to 300 feet below the overlook on Washington Street and had come to rest at the foot of the canyon wall, and at the top of a slope leading to the floor of the canyon.

Coroner Edwards said the man apparently died instantly of multiple internal injuries.

King Hill district construction blessed by check, PUC decision

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

BOISE — The King Hill Irrigation District handed over a long-awaited check Thursday to the man who is building its new irrigation system.

"I've got a check in my pocket for $310,000," said a relieved Warren Chapman as he left the Idaho State Bank in Glenn Ferry at 6 p.m.

Chapman, president of Cook Electric Co. in Twin Falls, said the money is "security" for the $1.9 million construction project.

Thursday afternoon at 4:30 p.m., the Public Utilities Commission approved joint construction plans of the district and Idaho Power Co. With the PUC decision, the cash began to flow.

The payment ended two-and-a-half months of scurrying for cash since district water users approved money to rebuild the system. In that time, the district has taken out three loans, negotiated a $1 million deal with the Idaho Power Co., and authorized $2.8 million in bonds.

Chapman took a gamble by ordering work to start on King Hill's new irrigation system Feb. 1. Commission approval was needed since the project was funded by bonds.

"Now everything is fine," Chapman said Thursday.

The King Hill district has pledged Cook Electric $1.9 million, with the rest to be paid in monthly installments and upon completion of the work. He said the system, utilizing four high-lift pumps to draw water out of the Snake River, will be ready to deliver water May 1.

The news is a relief to 120 King Hill farmers, who will now probably get water in time for the irrigation season. "The district's old siphon irrigation system was destroyed last summer by land slides.

Idaho Power has agreed to give King Hill $1 million to fund the project in exchange for 14 million kilowatt hours per year of electricity. Another $1 million in loans has been offered by the State Water Resources Board, the Idaho State Bank and the Bank of Idaho.

The remaining $500 was raised by the library through the sale of stationary and other special projects.

Call said invitations have been extended to city council, library board members and the public.

Chase nets suspect

GOODING — A Buhl man was arraigned Wednesday on charges of reckless driving and resisting arrest after a high speed chase Tuesday.

Gooding County Sheriff's Deputy Robert Aja identified the man as Ralph Carnahan, 22, of Buhl.

Aja said he chased Carnahan for 14 miles from a county road five miles south of Wendell to a field three miles south of Jerome at speeds up to 95 mph.

Aja said the chase began when he received a report about 6 p.m. Tuesday of a pickup in the middle of a county road south of Wendell. He said the report indicated the driver of the vehicle was slumped over the wheel.

When he went to investigate, Aja found the pickup in the middle of the gravel county road and Carnahan sitting behind the wheel.

He said Carnahan told him the pickup starter had gone out and a friend had walked to town to get a replacement.

Aja was preparing to give Carnahan's pickup a push when he received a radio call that the Buhl police wanted to question the man. Aja said Carnahan then started the pickup and drove away.

Aja said he began following Carnahan, who sped up and began driving at a high rate of speed and running stop signs.

"I finally bumped him in the tail on a curve south of Jerome and forced him into a field," Aja said.

He said Carnahan kept driving through the field until the pickup became mired in the mud. He then jumped out of the pickup and began running. Aja said he finally caught Carnahan with the help of two residents.

A Canyon County court official said Thursday that Carnahan was being sought on charges of possession of stolen property.

Carnahan was arraigned in Gooding Magistrate Court Wednesday and remained in Gooding County Jail Thursday afternoon on $300 bail.

Aja said Canyon County officers may want to transfer Carnahan to Caldwell to face the possession of stolen property charges.

Farmer's night tonight

JEROME — The cold cuts and 60 dozen hard-boiled eggs will be ready for the 500 people expected to attend Farmer's Night festivities tonight at Jerome High School.

Ethel Nelson, secretary for the Jerome Chamber of Commerce, said the annual fête honoring farm families begins in the auditorium at 7:30 p.m., followed by a Dutch lunch in the school cafeteria.

Master of ceremonies will be Dr. L.V. Rubel. The dozen families chosen Farm Family of the Month for 1978 will be honored with a certificate of appreciation presented by chamber Agricultural Committee Chairman Jesse Wilson.

Entertainment will consist of the high school Chancellors, several other singing groups and ventriloquist Ron Piercy.

Co-chairmen Ted Diehl and Wayne Carleton said there is no charge and the public is invited to attend.

Library plans children's room open house

TWIN FALLS — An open house will be held next Thursday from 7 to 8 p.m. in the Twin Falls Public Library to introduce the newly refurbished children's department.

Librarian Arlan Call said the children's department has been carpeted and all new furniture purchased along with other modern decorating. The project, which began five years ago as a Twin Falls Junior Club project cost approximately $5,000, Call said.

The Junior Club contributed $2,000 and the City of Twin Falls provided $2,500 in Revenue Sharing funds. The remaining $500 was raised by the library through the sale of stationary and other special projects.

Call said invitations have been extended to city council, library board members and the public.

Idaho minimum wage bill goes to the Senate

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — A legislative committee Thursday sent to the Senate a bill which would raise Idaho's minimum wage from $2.30 to $3.35 an hour by Jan. 1, 1982.

But by a 6-1 vote, members of the Senate Commerce and Labor Committee also recommended amendments to the proposed legislation which would exempt from minimum wage levels employees at "Mom-and-Pop" small businesses, employees at seasonal, amusement and recreational establishments, and employees who make more than $30 in tips a month.

If the measure — Senate Bill 1054 — becomes law, then Idaho workers covered by the state minimum wage would receive a raise from $2.30 an hour to $2.65 on July 1, 1979, to $2.90 on Jan. 1, 1980, to $3.10 on Jan. 1, 1981, and to $3.35 an hour on Jan. 1, 1982.

The increases would apply to private sector employers who have less than $275,000 gross income. Employers with gross income above that amount are covered by the federal minimum wage, which is slightly higher than the Idaho minimum wage.

Thursday's committee vote came after more than two hours of sometimes heated debate, and only after two attempts to send the measure to the floor without amendments died on strict party line votes.

Every Republican in the committee opposed attempts to have the increases apply to all workers now covered by Idaho's minimum wage.

Every Democrat supported the blanket increases.

The proposed amendments — a compromise without which the measure would have died in committee — came after several witnesses told senators certain areas of Idaho's private sector need special exemptions from the minimum wage.

Barry Stephenson, representing the National Federation of Independent Businessmen, told committee members "hundreds of Mom-and-Pop retail grocers" will have to fire workers if the minimum wage is passed. "Is it better to have a job at less than the minimum wage than no job at all?" he asked.

Tim Miller, owner of Boise Fun Spot, a small outdoor carnival, asked for an exemption for seasonal amusement parks. Miller noted such an exemption is already included in federal law.

Bill Roden, representing the Idaho Beverage and Restaurant Association, and the Idaho Innkeepers Association, told senators special minimum wage arrangements should be made for employees who make part of their salary in tips.

But opposition to the proposed exemptions came from Idaho AFL-CIO President Robert MacFarlane. The minimum wage was created by the 1938 Fair Labor Standards Act, MacFarlane said. It provided wage protection for "those at the bottom, the weakest, the poorest of our workers, who have no such protection."

"Lincoln freed the slaves a century ago," MacFarlane said, adding "no one should stay in business at the expense of his employees." The minimum wage, MacFarlane added, "should not be a poverty wage," so low it forces workers to accept welfare or food stamps.

Resolution adopted to block construction of state offices

BOISE (UPI) — Heeding the 1 percent initiative message that government reduce spending, the Idaho Senate adopted Thursday a House-approved resolution deauthorizing the State Building Authority from spending $10 million for state office buildings.

The vote was 19-16 to block the construction of office buildings in Twin Falls, Pocatello and Coeur d'Alene.

Sen. J. Wilson Steen, R-Glenns Ferry, said the resolution was not an effort to abolish the authority, but was intended to reduce or hold up projects.

Steen said the consequences of the percent could result in cutbacks in programs and employees and "possibility the state may have to pay for empty space."

"I'm not against building state buildings where and when they are needed," he said.

But opponents of the resolution argued that it was just good business to allow the authority to construct the buildings through revenue bonds and in 25 years the state would be the owner of the buildings.

They also contended that while rent would escalate in the private sector, rent the state would be paying on these buildings, if constructed by the authority would remain constant.

Sen. Chic Bilyeu, D-Pocatello, said the state would own the buildings in 25 years and they would last from 25 to 50 years.

"From that standpoint, all I see is financial gain," Bilyeu said.

He said that it would provide consolidation of state agencies and centralization of state offices was good business from a fiscal standpoint as well as from the standpoint of the users of state government.

Sen. Walter Yarbrough, R-Grand View, said that would be the "height of irresponsibility not to pass this resolution."

"The 1 percent directs us to do two things — cut spending and reduce government," Yarbrough said. "With this in mind isn't it prudent to delay these buildings until the directive of the people is shook out and we determine the pressing need for these buildings?"

Sen. Dean VanEngelen, R-Burley, said the "people told us they want less state government and it's obvious they see growth when state buildings are popping up around the state."

He said the buildings were authorized in 1975 and so far it had not been determined whether these buildings were needed.

"There's not one of the 35 of us on this floor who know the needs," he said.

"Is it smart to authorize buildings in 1975 to be built in 1980 or 1981 and may not be built?"

VanEngelen said it was responsible for the Legislature to look at the buildings on a "one by one" basis and determine the need of each.

Republicans agree to seek $35 million in tax relief

BOISE (UPI) — House Republicans narrowed their budget options in a closed-door caucus Thursday when they agreed to seek $35,295,000 in property tax relief next year and replace the money with state funds.

They also agreed to eliminate automatic 5 percent in-grade step increases in pay for state employees and to seek a 7 percent increase in the state "payline" — the equivalent salary for comparable jobs in the private sector.

There were motions, Caucus Chairman B.E. Lewis, R-St. Maries, said, to increase general fund spending next year by between 1 1/2 million to $3 million above the present $319 million level to ease the difficulty in funding the payline increase. All, he said, were withdrawn.

Earlier, the caucus talked of holding the line at $319 million and financing the increase by attrition. However, the Legislature is estimating general fund revenue next year at $357.8 million. Subtraction of $35.59 million for tax relief leaves $322.25 million to spend.

By granting $35.29 million in tax relief, the lawmakers — in effect — would be sweetening the general fund budget by about $3 million next year unless they used the extra money for some other purpose.

Lewis said the motion to "spend $35.29 million on tax relief was approved without dissent in the caucus. He said the Republicans want to roll back the school levies by 13 mills, although, he said, they did not say whether they want to go along with a specific bill under consideration in a tax subcommittee.

He said the caucus did not get around to discussing the bill to implement the 1 percent initiative — a measure up for final consideration on the House floor Friday. He and others in leadership promised to hold another caucus before the House debates and votes on the bill.

Reps. Lyman G. Winchester, R-

Kuna, Wendy Ungricht, R-Boise, and Gary Ingram, R-Coeur d'Alene, want to make some changes in the implementation before the Legislature enacts it.

Winchester and Mrs. Ungricht object to including "functional" as well as "actual" use as a definition of real property market value for tax purposes. Ingram has taken issue with the base year for determining what is market value.

In addition, some legislators on both sides of the political aisle have questioned the wisdom of a tax freeze at 1978 dollar levels for local units of government.

Sunday liquor measure killed
BOISE — Despite claims the measure would add as much as $500,000 to the state general fund in tax revenue, Idaho representatives Thursday bottled up in committee a bill providing for Sunday liquor-by-the-drink sales.

David Hand, a lobbyist for the Idaho Innkeepers Association, and the Idaho Restaurant Association, told members of the House State Affairs Committee only five states now entirely prohibit Sunday liquor sales. In Idaho, Hand said, sales are restricted to convention centers.

Would your son or daughter get more out of college a few years from now?

For reasons of interest, maturity, affordability, whatever, some young people would be better off postponing college.

For these young people the Army can be very rewarding. It's a place where qualified young people can select, learn, and hold a responsible position. Make new friends, travel, find themselves. Even get a start on college with the Army paying up to 75% of the tuition for approved courses taken during off-duty hours.

Maybe your son or daughter should look into the Army. It's a great place for a young person to get started.

Board hears views on hospital management

TWIN FALLS — "I think we're not that far from a decision," Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Board Member Bob Harvey said Wednesday afternoon.

He was commenting upon the board's recent agreement to select one of the three management firms which have made proposals for a management contract for the county-owned hospital.

Harvey said "well over 100 persons," including doctors, nurses, hospital employees and the public attended an all-day session with board members Tuesday to give suggestions on the board's future decision.

"We didn't learn anything new," Harvey said, "but it was a super day. I'd definitely say that the general consensus was that a large majority of the persons meeting with the board) favor a contract with a management firm."

He said there must have been some 40 nurses who met with the board during the time allotted them, and estimated between 25 to 30 persons both at the first hour allotted for the public and the noon hour session with the medical staff.

The last session, for other hospital employees, drew a roomful, Harvey said.

He said many of the nurses asked questions about their future employment, but that the board "was able to answer their questions."

According to Harvey there was no criticism and everyone appearing to give input was "very supportive" of the board's course in listening to proposals of three management firms and their stated intention to hire one of them.

He said there "was no clear cut indication of any particular firm favored by any of the groups."

Elnie Phillips, who, along with Dr. John Affleck, headed a Concerned Citizens Committee last fall, said she was pleased with the turnout. The Citizens group obtained petitions with some 2,000 signatures asking county commissioners to investigate at least three management firms after the hospital board initially turned down a proposal from the Hospital Corporation of America.

"I had the feeling people were there because they are interested in the hospital. One woman who works at Idaho Frozen Foods told the board she had filled six petitions," Mrs. Phillips said.

She said during the session for the public which she attended there seemed general consensus to "go with a management firm on a short term basis with the idea of giving the firm a lease option, with the ultimate idea of selling the hospital."

The hospital board will hold its regular monthly meeting at 7 p.m. Monday but a decision will not be made by that time, Harvey said.

Board members are now conferring with administrators, county commissioners and hospital board members in cities where the three management firms operate hospitals.

The management firms include Hospital Affiliates, Inc., of Nashville, Tenn.; American Medical International of Beverly Hills, Calif., and the Northwest Medical Foundation of Portland, a subdivision of the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

San Tan appeals decision

GOODING — San Tan Ranches of Gooding has appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court a 5th District Court ruling dismissing a $291,000 lawsuit against two firms that sprayed potato fields for the farming company.

San Tan, owned by Mack Martin of Twin Falls, filed suit against Thomas Helicopter Service of Gooding and Spray-Rite Inc. of Oakley in September 1977, alleging that chemicals sprayed by the two firms damaged the potato crop.

In defense, the two spraying firms said "San Tan employees failed to properly care for the potato crop, causing the damage."

Fifth District Judge Douglas Kramer ruled in January that San Tan had no case and dismissed the suit.

Kramer also ruled that Thomas Helicopter was entitled to $15,893, the cost of applying the chemicals plus attorney's fees. He also ruled that Spray-Rite was entitled to attorney's fees incurred in the case.

San Tan attorney Lloyd Webb of Twin Falls said Kramer was in error when he ruled against San Tan in not allowing the case to go to a jury.

"There was definitely enough evidence to give it to a jury," Webb said. He said that is the basis for the appeal to the Supreme Court.

Association meets today

TWIN FALLS — An organizational meeting of the Twin Falls County Heart Association board of directors is scheduled for noon today in the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital annex, east of the hospital building.

Ron Fisse, acting chairman, said the survival of many citizens depends upon the programs initiated by the Heart Association. These include blood pressure screening clinics, risk factor screening and increasing public awareness toward prevention of heart disease, as well as CPR training.

All interested persons are invited. Those attending are asked to bring a sack lunch. Call Fisse at 423-6105 for further information.

Gosche seeks position

HAILEY — If accepted, Dr. Jon Gosche may become the first chiropractor in the nation to hold a hospital staff position.

Gosche is seeking a staff position with Blaine County Hospital so he will be allowed to administer chiropractic treatment to patients that request it, and so he will be allowed access to X-ray and laboratory facilities. "This is important, because it is not a matter of my right as a chiropractor to practice at a hospital, it's the right of you as a patient to request me to come and give you an adjustment if you wish. No one in the hospital is going to receive chiropractic care that doesn't want it," Gosche said.

As far as he knows, there isn't a hospital in the country with a chiropractor on the staff. "In Pennsylvania, the courts ordered hospitals to do chiropractors' X-ray and lab work when requested at public institutions, but it's my understanding they're not staff members. Here, to order lab work, you must be a staff member."

Gosche is a graduate of Northwestern College of Chiropractic at St. Paul, Minn.

The hospital's board of directors had previously approved Gosche's request, but the staff, consisting of physicians, denied the application several months ago. At the January board meeting, board members asked the staff to reconsider their decision. At a staff meeting Monday, staff members requested that Gosche provide references from fellow

JEROME — A Jerome man who pleaded guilty to a felony charge of driving while intoxicated last fall received a one-year probation Tuesday.

Fifth District Judge James Cunningham sentenced Gail Briggs, 47, to a suspended sentence of three years in Briggs was charged last April with the felony count after an Idaho state police officer stopped his vehicle.

Kessinger's 'sure-handed' reputation with Cubs

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — His business is hitting, but Don Kessinger built his reputation in the Chicago Cubs organization with a glove.

The nimble shortstop, a sure-handed Cub infielder for 11 years, keeps in shape during the off-season by playing racquet ball, a hard-hitting sport enjoying a groundswell of support.

A native of Forrest City, Ark., Kessinger shares ownership of racquet ball clubs in Little Rock, Ark., and his current hometown of Memphis, where he plays almost daily.

"As far as an athlete's concerned," Kessinger said, "agility, hand-eye coordination and leg conditioning are vital success. There's no sport as good for those as racquet ball."

Many people apparently agree with Kessinger, 36, because business is booming. He's preparing to build another club in the Memphis area complete with whirlpool, sauna and weightroom.

But the energetic University of Mississippi graduate will soon trade in his racket to begin spring training with the Chicago White Sox — as the only player-manager in major league baseball. Kessinger leaves for Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 17.

Kessinger came to the White Sox via St. Louis, where he played a year and a half before the Sox picked him up in Aug. 1977 to play shortstop. In October, Sox owner Bill Veeck asked him to become manager, filling a vacancy originally created in July when Bob Lemon departed to join the New York Yankees.

"Managing is something I didn't ask for and hadn't thought about, but when I was offered the job there was no doubt in my mind," Kessinger said.

Not since Lou Boudreau did it in the 1940s has a manager called the shots from the field, Kessinger said, although Frank Robinson managed the Cleveland Indians as a designated hitter.

Kessinger is greeting the new assignment eagerly, aware of the challenge facing him.

"It's extremely difficult to be a major league player and it's not easy to be a major league manager, so I assume it will be very tough to do both at once," he said.

When Kessinger was traded to the White Sox, his first worry was whether fans on the South Side of Chicago would deride him as a former cross-town rival.

"I was curious to see whether it was true that everybody there was either a hard-nosed Cub fan or a hard-nosed Sox fan," Kessinger said.

His answer came quickly.

"It was the middle of a game when I came in for the first time — we had about 50,000 there for a game with the Yankees — and they gave me a standing ovation," Kessinger recalled. "They've just treated me super."

Assured of his standing with the fans, the six-time National League All-Star is counting on his rapport with teammates to transform the White Sox into a winning club.

"My biggest advantage is that I know the problems the players face and would hope that we have good communication," Kessinger said.

The White Sox finished second to last in their division in 1978, and Kessinger said the key to a better season is, not surprisingly, better fielding.

"I think we need to strengthen our defense a whole lot, to completely improve on the fundamentals of the game and try not to give up so many runs," he said.

What is the biggest concern for the veteran shortstop and rookie manager?

"The area I worry about most is handling the pitchers," said Kessinger, a switch-hitter nearing the 2,000-hit milestone.

Many aging baseball veterans probably can't be blamed if they envy Kessinger. He controls the lineup card, although his pitcher's position is by no means locked up with the White Sox.

"I'm going to Spring training prepared to play, but how much I play depends on how well the other shortstops play."

Asked who has the ultimate decision, Kessinger chuckled and said, "I do."

Ken Justice helped put CSI on top of Ricks and the regional conference

Leads region CSI roars by Ricks

By LARRY HOWEY
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Regional basketball prospects for the College of Southern Idaho took a decided jump upward Thursday night when the Eagles swarmed past the Ricks Vikings 73-53 during the largest crowd in four years under the Eagle dome.

The Eagles, who bounced into a 10-point lead in the first four minutes and never let Ricks closer than four thereafter, now have a 3-1 record while Ricks dropped to 3-2 along with North Idaho. CSI travels to Treasure Valley next Friday where a victory would put them into a "win or tie" position when it goes to North Idaho for the season final on Feb. 23.

The big crowd, which rivaled the CSI-Utah State Jayvee mob of 1974, came expecting to see a shootout and for a while it was on. But eventually CSI's harassing defense turned the Vikings off while David Thirkhill and Jerry-Williams went into their goal, dust twin act, combining for 48 points.

"I thought we had as good a defensive effort as any team in any game I've ever had," Coach Mike Mitchell exulted afterward. "We took them out of everything."

"This coaching is funny," he continued. "Two weeks ago I'm standing in front of a civic group—here—and telling them I really like the way our team is playing. Then we come up with two bad games and I don't think we can win another game. Then the guys come out and play a game like this."

"But," he added with a coaching smile, "I still can't get them to run. I'm standing on the sideline begging them to run. If we could have taken the ball up court quickly over the last 10 minutes we could have blown them away. (Mark) Stroud was the only one who was willing to start the break and he tried it a couple of times when it wasn't there."

"It was intensity that Coach Mitchell wanted, he got it at the opening tip."

Williams was particularly a picture of defensive concentration and on offense the Eagles came out smoking.

Ricks' Chris Owens got the first point of the game and Larry Tobler threw in a Ricks field goal seconds later. But then Ken Justice, Williams, Richard Prospero and Williams again reeled off CSI points for an 8-3 lead.

After Tobler replied for Ricks,

Thirkhill went on a tear. He hit five straight points and Williams added another to make it 15-5 with 16:08 left in the half.

The Eagles hit a scoring lull over the next couple of minutes as Orsino and Dave Seiber pulled Ricks to within four. For the next few possessions the teams traded buckets and Thirkhill went on a game-breaking spree.

The 6-5 St. Louis freshman hit four straight shots on an assortment of driving and twisting sideline jumpers to keep the Eagles ahead and Williams and Prospero then came up with field goals that started CSI away again. Thirkhill hit two more buckets and by halftime CSI was out to a 36-24 lead.

Early in the second half Orlando Bryant flashed perhaps the best center defense CSI has had in a couple of years as he held everything together and threw in two field goals. Thirkhill and Prospero added buckets to blow the Eagles into a 44-26 advantage.

After Todd Anderson hit for Ricks, Bryant, Thirkhill and Williams ran in unanswered points to give CSI its first 20-point advantage.

From then on it was a matter of the clock running out. CSI's biggest advantage was 25 points at 63-44 with 3:53 remaining.

Coach Mitchell said he anticipated that CSI will have to take Friday off to wind down but said his troops would start gearing up for next week over the weekend.

That schedule starts at home Monday night when CSI hosts Eastern Utah in a return match of this week's two-point victory at Price. Wednesday the Eagles will be in Bend to play Central Oregon and wind up Friday with the key regional game in Ontario against Treasure Valley.

"I like our chances a lot better now," Coach Mitchell said. "We know that Eastern is a good club, they've won 18 games and gave us problems at Price. We want to win that one but the big game for us next week is Treasure Valley."

Hagerman, Richfield score A-4 victories

By RANDY FREY
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Home-standing Hagerman and Richfield along with Kootenai and Garden Valley strode into the semi-finals of the girls state A-4 basketball tournament Thursday.

Garden Valley opened the tournament by knocking off Mackay 47-44, Richfield inched past Troy 23-22, Kootenai edged Highland of Cragmont 42-41 at the buzzer and Hagerman wound it up by downing Midvale 31-27.

Action resumes at the Burley high school gymnasium at 1 p.m. today with Troy meeting Mackay in a loser bracket game and Richfield taking on Garden Valley in the first semi-final. Another loser bracket game, Highland and Midvale, meet at 7 p.m. with Hagerman and Kootenai meeting in the 8:30 semi-final.

Richfield's Sandy Anderson scored only two points in the second half Thursday, but her presence on the court was enough to defeat Troy high school in opening round action of the state A-4 girls basketball tournament.

The 5-11 Anderson blocked shots, shuf off the Troy inside game altogether and limited the Trojans to just one shot per try down court as the Tigers fought off several Troy rallies and held on for a 23-22 victory.

"She saves us," said Richfield coach Jim Thomas of Anderson. "Troy wanted to work the ball inside but they couldn't get in."

Troy had two girls who were averaging 10 points per game, forwards Cindy Brunton and Sharon Rauch. But Anderson's play held Rauch to just three points and Brunton scoreless.

Oddly enough, Anderson did not play a full game this year until the district playoffs last week.

"She has had a bad knee and did not even play in a game until after Christmas," said Thomas, whose Tigers upped their overall record to 15-4 with the victory.

The game was close all the way, neither team leading by more than four points.

Troy jumped to a quick 4-0 lead before Anderson scored six points to give the Tigers the edge. Twice Troy led the score but the Tigers never led after that.

Leading by four in the fourth quarter, Richfield saw Troy cut the lead to one with just three minutes to play. But Anderson made it three again when she sneaked inside for an easy bank shot.

Troy's Rachelle Swanson cut the lead back to one with just a minute and a half to go, but despite plenty of action at the end of the contest, no more points were scored and Richfield held on for the win.

The tournament's first game was equally as exciting, Garden Valley rallying from a nine-point halftime deficit to beat Mackay 47-44.

Garden Valley went to the press in the second half and forced Mackay into turnover after turnover while outscoring the Miners 14-4 in the third period.

"We weren't setting it up in the first half but we settled down and played basketball after that," said Garden Valley coach Tom Whitaker. "We did a heck of a job considering we were 15 points down at one point."

Sherry Millican came up with 18 points to lead Hagerman to its hardest fought win over Midvale. Coach Tim Ross described the victory as coming "despite a poor effort" by his charges. "Millican came to play but the rest of the team didn't," the coach said.

Midvale led by four at the end of the first quarter with Hagerman coming back to a 19-17 halftime lead. The Pirates pushed ahead 25-19 in the third quarter and that proved enough.

Carla Diamano turned from the goat to the hero for Kootenai in the final 10 seconds as she hit a jumper with two seconds left to provide the one point victory.

The teams battled through a succession of lead changes and ties.

Allie Swanson and Peggy Crosey twice shot Kootenai into the lead over the last three minutes with Diamano sandwiching in one Kootenai field goal.

Highland took its last lead at 41-40 with 35 seconds left. Kootenai then worked the ball inside to Diamano who was fouled in the act of shooting with 10 seconds remaining. She missed both free throws but got the rebound, took one dribble toward the baseline and threw in the winner. Highland's Denis Hatfield got a half-court prayer shot at the buzzer that bounced off the front of the rim.

Bruin, Minico battle tonight

State's top gymnasts to compete at Sage

RUPERT — The Southern Idaho Conference's leading scorer-and-rebounder will collide when Twin Falls invades Minico tonight, but there's a chance he will get a chance to change his leads.

Twin Falls' Bob Brice is the leading scorer with a 17.9 average — a full point ahead of his nearest competitor — and Minico's Lance Howard reigns at the top of the rebound ladder with 11.8.

"The reason that the two may not get a chance to improve on their leads, according to Twin Falls Coach John Astorquia, is a slowdown."

"Minico has used the corners the last three times I've seen them," the Bruin mentor said. "We are expecting it tomorrow. If not, then I'm sure we'll see it in the tournament."

Minico used the corners offense against Pocatello in a 36-29 score Wednesday night, although that score was further limited by the fact that Pocatello repelled his own corners offense.

"Minico has improved right along in all aspects of the game," Coach Astorquia continued. "They are at the point now where they can beat ranked teams despite their 3-16 record. They've proved that by playing within a point of Highland and Pocatello and they are tied with Skyline for the league lead now."

"Our aim will be to get on them early and not let them build up the enthusiasm they had in the game down here," he continued, referring to Minico's early blitz and 12-point lead at one stage.

"The game means nothing to the SIC race since it is non-conference due to the spill of the league. But both teams want it badly — and not particularly from a season-worn standpoint. It's psychology time for the tournament. Twin Falls wants Minico to understand that it has beaten the Spartans twice and the Spartans, of course, want the Bruins to know that at 1-1 they have as good a chance as any.

Brice shows up in the conference stats four times for Twin Falls. He has 341 points for his 17.9 average while Meridian's Rick Cole has moved into second place at 16.9.

Brice ranks four in field goal shooting, hitting 58 per cent of his shots while teammate Keith Gordon remains in third at 62 per cent. Brice is eighth in offensive rebounds with 3.1 per game and 10th in total rebounds with 7.8.

Howard remains the offensive-rebound leader with 4.5 and has fallen to second, just slightly, in defensive bounds at 7.3. He still is well ahead of in total, however, with 11.8 per game.

TWIN FALLS — Sage Gymnastics of Twin Falls is hosting the United States Gymnastics Federation Class B state championships today and Saturday.

Approximately 50 gymnasts from Idaho and Ontario, Ore. will compete in the meet to be held at Sage, 2042 4th Ave. E. Teams represented will include Sage, Wings of Boise, Mike Young's Gymnastics Academy of Boise, Northern Idaho Gym of Coeur d'Alene, YMCA of Idaho Falls, Teton Tucks of Idaho Falls, Gate City Gym of Pocatello, Paunies Pikes of Blackfoot and Treasure Valley Gymnastics Academy of Ontario.

Compulsory competition gets underway at 7 p.m. today, and the optional judging will start at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Eric K. Gunnerson, meet director and coach of Sage, rates Wings as the favorite in the meet, with Teton Tucks and Mike Young's fielding strong teams.

"Individually, Sage's Kelly King rates as one of the strongest in the floor exercise and vaulting. She also is a darkhorse in the balance beam competition," he said.

Girls competing had to qualify with a minimum score of 30.0 points in the all-around competition during the last season. The four events which make up the all-around include floor exercise, balance beam, uneven bars and vaulting.

There also are two sections of the meet, compulsory and optional. In the compulsory part of the meet, competitors are judged from 0 to 10.00 points. In optionals, the gymnasts perform routines they themselves made up and again are judged from 0 to 10.00 points.

According to Gunnerson, the girls are grouped by age groups: 9 to 11, 12 to 14, and 15 and over. The top five girls in each group will then qualify to compete in the regional championships at Seattle.

For more information on the tournament, call Sage Gymnastics, Inc., at 734-9900 or stop at the gym.

More snow reported by resorts

TWIN FALLS — More than two feet of heavy snow blanketed the northern areas of the Sawtooth National Forest.

The avalanche warning for areas from Fairfield to Halley and north to Stanley will remain in effect through today.

According to Velda Lawrence, public information specialist for the Sawtooth National Forest, settlement of the snow and stabilizing conditions are occurring but slide activity does continue to be substantial. By Saturday, the hazardous conditions should decrease considerably. The avalanche warning does not apply to the controlled ski areas.

Sun Valley resort reports more than a foot of new snow on Bald Mountain with a total depth of 47 inches on top and 20 inches on the valley floor.

Soldier Mountain reports 10 inches of new snow with a total depth of 18 inches at the lodge. The road has been cleared and is in good condition. Homeplace has a foot of new snow for a total depth of 18 inches at the lodge. The road has been plowed and is in good condition.

Magic Mountain received five inches of new snow for a total depth of 72 inches. The parking lots and road have been plowed.

An estimated 50 miles of snowmobile trails have been groomed in the South Hills out of the Diamondfield Jack area. Other areas that report excellent snowmobiling are North Heglar and Howell Canyon on the Burley Ranger District, trails in the Featherhills area, the Little Smoky Play area on the Arifield District, and most areas around Stanley.

The Stanley Ranger station reports five inches of new snow for a total depth of 24 inches.

Tatum not talking to Stingley

BOSTON (UPI) — Paralyzed New England Patriots' wide receiver Darryl Stingley has shown "remarkable" improvement, but he has not been contacted by the man whose farring hit six months ago ended his NFL career.

In his first interview since the Aug. 12 injury, Stingley told reporters he has heard no word, "nope, whatsoever" from Jack Tatum, the Oakland Raiders' defensive back whose hit in the Aug. 12 exhibition game snapped two of Stingley's vertebrae.

The injury initially left Stingley paralyzed from the neck down. His doctor, neurologist Vin Sahgal of Chicago, said the 27-year-old athlete is applying all his professional skills to recovery. "His improvement has been remarkable. I have not seen anything quite like this in similar spinal cord injuries," Dr. Sahgal said. "The things he is doing for himself are remarkable."

But Sahgal — who with Stingley held a half-hour telephone conversation from Stingley's hospital room to reporters in his agent's Boston office — issued a terse "no comment," when asked if Stingley would ever walk again.

Specifically, Sahgal said Stingley can now feed himself, operate a wheelchair and experiences pressure sensations in his leg. He said Stingley would "be able to leave the Rehabilitation Institute in Chicago in four to six weeks if the family can find a house. Stingley goes home to his apartment on weekends.

"There are some rules of thumb to go by in this area, but for every rule there are three or four exceptions. I don't believe in miracles but ignorance in this area is colossal," Sahgal said.

Stingley said he was "shocked" by the intended move of coach Chuck Fairbanks to Colorado and by revelations that Fairbanks was working for the university while preparing the Pats for a playoff game.

"I felt it was kind of an untimely move considering the team was doing so well. It did possibly hurt the team. I know if I had been playing it would have affected me and my play. I'm surprised he did it," Stingley said. Stingley's agent, Jack Sands, used the occasion to announce the formation of a trust fund to educate Stingley's two sons, Darryl, 10, and Derek, 7.

Sands said about $2,000 has been received in unsolicited donations and that he expects $35,000 collected from NFL players will also be placed into the trust.

Sands also said that Stingley's exorbitant medical costs have been paid for by workmen's compensation insurance policies. And he said the family will receive $2,000 a month from the NFL pension fund as long as Stingley is disabled.

Stingley said he has been able to realistically deal with his disability, but said it was "kind of rough" watching and listening to Patriots game.

He said the most moving moments have been provided by the volumes of mail he has received and the get well cards "make me try harder to get myself together."

Stingley's wife, Tina, said in Boston that she has had to attend classes to help her deal with her husband's injury. "I see him every day. It's one of those things you have to do (live with the injury). Any wife would do it if she loved her man," she said.

Boston manager says Yastrzemski will play

BOSTON (UPI) — General Manager Haywood Sullivan of the Boston Red Sox anticipates Carl Yastrzemski will report to spring training despite the 10-year veteran's contention he will not show up unless his contract is extended.

"I anticipate him showing up. I anticipate all of them showing up," Sullivan said Thursday. "People under contract, you expect them to adhere to the rules. But I can appreciate his point of view."

Yastrzemski, who is under contract through 1979, said Wednesday he would not report to spring training unless the team gives him a new contract through 1981.

"If I can't be satisfied on my contract and can't be happy with it, then I don't want to put on a uniform," Yastrzemski said. "I don't even want to start the season. How can you play this game well if you're mad?"

Yastrzemski's flare-up occurred after he met with Sullivan and co-owner Buddy Leroux at Fenway Park. Yastrzemski, who makes between $300,000 and $350,000 a year, told the owners he would not play in 1979 without first signing another contract for 1980 and 1981.

Sullivan said Yastrzemski originally asked to renegotiate his contract but the Red Sox refused.

Buddy Baker, Darrell Waltrip capture final Daytona tuneups

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Pole-sitter Buddy Baker beat three-time NASCAR champion Cale Yarborough by a car-length and Darrell Waltrip out-dued A.J. Foyt to win the twin 125-mile races Thursday that established the full field for Sunday's Daytona 500-mile stock car race. The races were a final prep for drivers and cars before Sunday's $580,000 Daytona and the last chance to find out how the cars performed on the track. For Baker, it was the third trip to a winner's circle this week, marking a bonanza for the 6-foot-5 gentle giant who was winless over the last 19 months. Baker averaged 167.598 miles an hour in the race that he led for 38 of the 50 laps. There were only two other race leaders, Yarborough who led for 10 laps and Richard Petty who was in command for two circuits around the 2.5 mile international speedway. Waltrip's average speed was 153.009 mph as five drivers took turns leading the race. Waltrip gained final command on the 22nd lap and held off Foyt's challenge the rest of the way to beat the four-time Indianapolis 500 champion by two car lengths. In the opening race, Benny Parsons was third, Bobby Allison finished fourth and Ricky Rudd, NASCAR's rookie of the year two years ago, came in fifth. Richard Brooks was the third-place finisher in the 140-second 125-mile qualifying race with rookie Dale Earnhardt coming in fourth and Dave Marcis finishing fifth.

New alarm device detects lethal gases

By GILBERT JIMENEZ
Chicago Sun-Times

A product that detects the presence of lethal gases, covering the reported shortcomings of smoke and heat detectors, has entered into the home fire-safety market.

The device, marketed under the Tri-Sonic Detector label, sounds a loud alarm to alert the homeowner to the presence of toxic fumes, explosive gases and heat that can be fatal before flame and smoke are present, said Paul Silverman, of American International Systems Midwest Inc., of Elmhurst, Ill.

Today's households, he explained, are filled with plastic, acrylic and synthetic furnishings that release a large number of lethal fumes and gases when heated.

"Plastic TV cabinets, for example, will release hydrogen cyanide and hydrogen sulfide," Silverman said. "These and other gases can kill when inhaled in very minute quantities, long before there are flames. Smoke sensors detect smoke and nothing else."

The unit, which resembles an oversized cigarette package, will also detect heat above 232 degrees Fahrenheit and is approved by Factory Mutual Laboratories, the product-testing arm of the Factory Mutual Insurance Co., he said.

"The purpose of the Tri-Sonic," said Silverman, "is to wake you up so you can minimize your property loss, and leave the premises if necessary...in advance of an outbreak of fire."

He estimated that a typical 5-room apartment would require three of the self-cleaning, house-current-operated detectors. Also, a unit may be combined with a transmitting mechanism for remote monitoring of boiler rooms and basins.

Although some 80,000 of the sensors have been sold nationally, Silverman said that the cost of the device and its purpose have prevented an effective mass-marketing campaign.

The Tri-Sonic retails for about $160 per unit, but is considerably less expensive when several units are purchased. It comes with a "no-risk," money-back guarantee if, within seven days, the purchaser can find a device that performs comparably.

In addition, AIS will come to your home to survey your safety needs, install the units in their proper locations with hidden electrical wiring—at no additional charge—and will work with the homeowner to map a personalized fire-escape plan.

"We do a rather extensive safety program," Silverman said. "We want to save lives and property. What's the point of selling someone a device to install himself, and giving them a piece of paper with a standardized fire exit map on it?"

Upholstery fabrics back to traditional

NEW YORK — After periods of contemporary, casual, ultra-modern, Art Deco, Indonesian, Early American and American Indian, the trend in upholstery fabrics is back to the "home" — the more traditional look.

This move back to traditional reflects a new momentum, interest, and determination in the home furnishings industry. It is particularly evident in the latest design, texture, and styling of upholstery fabrics.

Fabrics from The Signature Collection in Heronton echo this trend with improved styling capabilities, durability, and innovative designs.

This season, foliage and floral designs are important. Bird designs are equally in evidence and many of the jacquards are deliciously contradictory with both subtle and bold patterns interplaying. You can see this in the most delicate of leaves resembling a damask design to the most daring and dark mountain, cloud and fern motifs.

Fabrics also offer new designs with stripe formations of single or double borders across the width of the fabric.

Velvets from the collection are as practical as ever, but indeed more sculptured and lush than before. Still standing up to Heronton's reputation of built-in color and performance, the new velvets are textured and sculptured. Sure to be popular in 1979 are the window-pane designs, both obscure and large in two-tone combinations — new geometrics, diagonal stripes, fleur de lis sculptured curves and the most graceful leaves and ferns. These prints, solids, and patterns in velvet are now available in a wide variation of colors, ranging from a navy blue to silver grey.

Velvets prove that there's a new geometry in home fashion. This is plainly evident with the return of solids, waffle weaves and honalis. And it's predicted that these new velvet geometrics will live on, market after market and season after season. Stripes and geometrics are gaining popularity, perhaps because they are understated, spirited, woven ever so subtly, and geometrically exciting (only at close scrutiny could you identify a right angle). These geometrics and stripes can be beautifully coordinated with new velvets and fun foliage fabrics. Some purists may define these stripes and geometrics as contemporary, but most would agree that the look is traditional and more versatile.

Generally, upholstery fabrics this season are ecologically exciting luxuriously livable, and definitely traditional in style. Welcome "home" upholstery fabrics!

Winter weather takes aim at home exterior

By LES HAUSNER
Chicago Sun-Times

When spring arrives this year, the home handyman may not know where to start around the house—especially if the house has been punished by winter weather.

Two components of the house that are certain to need attention are doors and windows. Along with roofs, they are favorite targets of ice, snow, rain and wind.

And, just in time, "Doors and Windows" (Time-Life Books, $7.95) is making its way to the bookstores. This 14th volume in Time-Life's Home Repair and Improvement Library is another example of giving the handyman what he wants and deserves—experts giving easy-to-follow instructions in plain talk and well-detailed illustrations. "We've always found drawings easier to follow than photographs when working on a handyman or craft project, and apparently the editors of 'this series agree."

No matter how well you insulate and caulk, water and wind may find their way through cracks and crevices around doors and windows. Many homeowners have had difficulty closing a door easily these days because ice has built up on the bottom or sides. Having to force an ice-jammed door shut means it's going to get out of plumb—and repairs will be necessary.

"Doors and Windows" can help you through the common problems of wood-rat, sticky windows, swollen doors, slipping windows and any other needed repairs.

And for real accomplishment, consider the chapters on hanging your own doors or windows. There are instructions for installing picture sliding, bay- and circular windows, cutting through brick siding, glass cutting—and repairing—or installing indoor shutters and venetian blinds.

The promise of spring brings to mind another recent Time-Life book, "Outdoor Structures" ($7.95). If you have longed for a back-yard gazebo or your children a tree house, you'll find instructions here. You'll also find a brief course in surveying and reshaping your grounds, ways of halting erosion and improving drainage.

Projects include fences, walls, an A-frame playwood tent—and an all-purpose structure that could be used as a storage shed or garage. Our favorite is the geodesic dome, a shelter built of inexpensive 1-inch-by-1-inch lumber and plastic sheeting.

This is also the time of year that many Americans begin to ponder whether to move to a new home or improve their present home. Cle Kliney and Barry Roberts opt for the latter in "Don't Move—Improve!" (Funk & Wagnalls, $14.95).

The authors describe hundreds of ways in which others have improved their homes by adding on, installing window and door arrangements, creating rooms from existing space such as a garage or basement, finding new storage space, redesigning bathrooms or transforming the yard.

The do-it-yourselfer won't find instructions on how to accomplish a particular project. But whether the reader is considering doing any remodeling himself or hiring a professional, "Don't Move—Improve!" displays some interesting projects completed in other homes and how various problems were solved.

Still on the subject of winter, the fortunate persons who have the time and means are leaving their ice-encrusted homes these days for a more inviting climate. It would be nice if everyone returned home to find all their household belongings in place and their homes intact.

"Renovating for Security" by A.J. Harmon (McGraw-Hill, $14.95) is a sound investment for any homeowner, whether he wants to remain secure while in his "own home or feel reasonably assured while he's away.

Harmon covers it all, from basement to attic, and from sidewalk to the back alley. Alarm systems, special lighting and landscaping, screens, windows and fences are but some of the subjects covered. And through it all, Harmon strives for beauty in design, comfort for the home or condominium owner and increased value of the home.

Much has been said and written about making doors secure, but perhaps no one else has concentrated so much on secure windows as does Harmon.

Security or not, some readers might wish to add to their homes such features as ornate iron shutters and fancy grillwork around windows or balconies for esthetic appearances.

Harmon also explains how to work with architects, designers and contractors or how to do the work yourself.

Net worth figures can help gauge future plans

Chicago Sun-Times

"You can't overestimate the importance of knowing your net financial worth, says John L. Domeler, president of Great American Federal Savings and Loan Association of Chicago.

"Everyone, single or married, should know the value of his personal assets, as well as his liabilities or debts," Domeler says.

"With this information," he says, "you can plan your estate to best prepare for the future and to allow yourself the best possible legitimate tax breaks on that estate. Your lawyer and a good financial counselor can help you with that."

Knowing your net worth also is useful in gauging your financial progress while providing a clearer picture of financial strengths and weaknesses, Domeler says.

"It can also point out what resources you have to draw on in case of an emergency and guide you in decisions on what you can and cannot afford," he adds.

Net worth is what's left after you subtract all your liabilities (what you owe) from your assets (what you have or expect to have), Domeler explains.

"The best way to do this is to prepare a balance sheet of personal assets and liabilities," he says. "The balance sheet reflects net worth at a particular point in time. It's like a 'still photo' of your worth. To make it most effective, you should make the determination of your net worth an annual habit done at the same time each year."

You can begin with the assets column, he says. List all you have in your savings and checking accounts.

Next, list your investments: stocks, bonds, mutual funds, Treasury notes and other certificates. Make sure you know the current market value of each, and add any interest or dividends that you have earned or will earn. Also include the cash-surrender value of your permanent life-insurance policies, Domeler adds.

"Another big item to add is your real estate — home, condominium, summer cottage or even vacant lot," he says. "This can be a major asset, particularly if you keep an accurate estimate of current market value."

"Include the market value of your other possessions, such as your car, boat, appliances, jewelry, furniture, clothing, coin and stamp collections, and so on," he says.

"But be careful not to overestimate the worth of some of these items, as a lot of people unintentionally do," he adds. "You have to allow for depreciation, which is substantial in some cases."

Finally, add figures on money owed to you. Don't forget to include any pensions or profit-sharing plans as long-term assets, he says.

At this point, it's time to figure all your liabilities. You can start with what remains to be paid on your mortgage, or your apartment lease, since this figure is to be your largest debt. Next count installment loans taken out for major purchases, such as an automobile or appliances, plus interest and finance charges.

Add to these any monthly or regularly scheduled bills, including credit-card purchases, utilities, insurance premiums, and accounts due with stores and other businesses.

"Don't overlook less obvious miscellaneous expenses and debts," Domeler says. "Bills for medical expenses and prescriptions, federal and state taxes and school tuition bills are examples."

After subtracting current and future liabilities from your present and long-range assets, you should have money left over, Domeler says.

"If you come up with a negative number, you could be in financial trouble," he warns. "This should be a signal to re-evaluate your finances and change your spending and saving habits accordingly."

"If you have a positive number, as most people will, keep in mind that this figure is not money you can get your hands on quickly," he adds.

"Most of it is in the form of frozen or intangible assets that may take awhile to turn into cash. Selling your house is an example. The net worth is an approximate figure that should tell you quite a bit about your financial health."

Use the figure to plan your estate carefully, he says. Since this should become a yearly practice, use the numbers to judge how much, if any, financial progress you're making.

"If your net worth barely increases or stays the same year after year, you're falling behind," he adds.

Credit bureaus offer valuable service

By CLARK BELL
Chicago Sun-Times

The omnipresent credit bureau is the economy's memory bank. And while most consumers realize its power, not many understand the nuts and bolts of credit intelligence gathering.

Although credit bureaus provide the data that may decide whether a person is eligible for a mortgage or can borrow to buy a new car, they DO NOT determine who receives credit nor do they establish credit granting standards. Those decisions are made by each creditor's own standards.

The highly profitable credit information industry is dominated by Trans Union Credit Information Co. of Chicago and four other firms. Trans Union, for instance, has 5,500 Chicago area business customers who pay $50 a year and a fee of under $2 for each report requested. Company operations manager Robert F. Ryan said his staff will receive as many as 20,000 inquiries a day from banks, finance companies, realtors, auto dealers and other retailers.

Credit history information includes standard personal information such as the name, address and employer of the consumer. The rating also contains a brief account of how the person meets credit obligations. More juicy items you may find are information on civil suits, financial judgments and bankruptcies.

However, credit bureaus aren't allowed to poke around for information about your friends and relatives or on your life-style, personal habits or sexual preferences. It is taboo for them to report on your medical history, political activity or religious beliefs. And most airlines and oil companies don't report your bill-paying conduct to the credit bureau.

Dear Abby

Son's religious cult affiliation worries parent

By Abigail Van Buren
 ©The Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR ABBY: I need your help. Or maybe one of your readers has the answer.
 Where does one start in having a religious organization investigated? Can someone be deprogrammed after six years of indoctrination?
 My academically gifted son became interested in different philosophies, lifestyles and religions while he was a college student. Now he has given up his goals and become a religious fanatic.
 He's a slave to the head of a religious cult who lives in luxury while my son is always broke and borrowing money from me so he can give more money to the cult.
 Now he spends all his time recruiting members: he's so brainwashed and blinded by "loyalty" he can't see how he has been used.

 What can I do?
—LOST A SON IN PITTSBURGH
DEAR LOST: Don't send him any more money, but do keep in communication with him and let him know that you love him. There are many organizations throughout the country that exist to help parents who have "lost" their children to unscrupulous religious cults.
 The organization nearest you is: Individual Freedom Foundation, Box 131, Allison Park, Pa. 15101. Write to them and enclose a stamped (15 cents) self-addressed envelope for their reply. They are a non-profit group. Good luck.
DEAR ABBY: My wife has been trying to lose weight for years, but she's never stayed on a diet for more than three days at a time. (If she lost about 20 pounds she'd be perfect.)

 Right after the first of the year, she and a guy she works with (also overweight) had a weigh-in and made a deal. Whoever loses the most weight in 90 days will have to treat the other to a steak dinner in the best restaurant in town. (Just the two of them.)
 I trust my wife, but I don't like the idea of her going out to dinner with another man—bet or no bet. He's married, but I'm told his wife doesn't object, because she'll do anything to get him to lose weight.
 What do you think of a deal like this?
—CHUBBY'S HUSBAND
DEAR HUSBAND: It sounds like a healthy deal for everybody. Give Chubby your blessings, and may the biggest loser win.

DEAR ABBY: Is it legal, when interviewing a person for a job, to ask if that person has ever been arrested?
—NEEDS TO KNOW
DEAR NEEDS: No. A person is not judged GUILTY by an arrest.

Health

Tinnitus problem explained

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb,
 I am a 62-year-old male. I am in reasonably good health but I have a problem with my head roaring and my ears ringing. If I wake up at night, it seems worse. My problem started about 12 months ago and became worse in the last six months.
 I have been to several doctors and they have not been able to answer my problem. I would appreciate any information that you might offer.
Dear Reader,
 I'm not surprised that you haven't been able to get much help for this condition. Until very recently there were limited things that doctors had to offer for this all too common problem.
 Actually, more than 30 million adult Americans have a similar disorder. It frequently accompanies hearing loss but you can have it even if your hearing is normal.
 To help you understand this problem and also to give you basic information on what can be done about it, I am sending you The Health Letter number 12-10, Help For Tinnitus — Noise Or Ringing In The Ears. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.
 As The Health Letter I am sending you explains, tinnitus is a symptom. It can be caused by many different factors. It can simply be from wax in the ear. In that case, your doctor would have no trouble treating it. Sometimes it is associated with defects in the middle ear where your tiny ear bones are. If it is a temporary condition and as the problem is corrected, the ringing in the ears also disappears.

 If you injure your ear with noise such as being exposed to loud blasts, you may have ringing in the ears until they recover. This is a good warning. Also, various medicines can cause it.

You'd be surprised that in a few people a small amount of aspirin is able to produce this problem. After this comes circulatory problems and even various mechanical problems.
 Whenever the underlying condition can be corrected, that is the preferred treatment. However, in a large number of people the real cause for the tinnitus can't be found or if it is, it is something that can't be cured. These people can obtain relief from some of the new management techniques that have been developed.

Dr. Lawrence A. Krames helps patients understand their ills

Cartoon-booklets explain about ailments

By GORDON SAKAMOTO
DALY CITY, Calif. (UPI) — At times as a youngster, Lawrence A. Krames found medical explanations difficult to comprehend so, as a practicing physician, he has done something that makes it easier for today's patients to understand the nature of their ailments.

Now an eye-nose-throat specialist, Krames divides his time between his practice and serving as president of Physicians Arts Service, a publication firm that specializes in producing inexpensive, cartoon-style information booklets for doctors, clinics, hospitals and state-and-federal agencies across the country for distribution to patients.

The patient information library ranges from simple themes such as cast care and the importance of an annual physical examination to more delicate subjects such as breast care, venereal diseases and contraception. Several editions are in foreign languages.

Many of Krames' own artistic ideas are incorporated into the booklets and posters and all materials — both the text and artwork — are thoroughly examined by practicing health care professionals with expertise in specific fields.

"Feedback from physicians and patients suggests to us that adults like the cartoon format," Krames said. "They feel less intimidated and they see certain humor in it. We make an effort to tailor our cartoon presentations to, say, for example, an older population as we did in 'Seeing Again' booklet on after-cataract surgery—it is less cartoon-like than the booklet on tonsillectomy, which is geared for children."

In tracing the founding of the firm, he said, "The idea for Physicians Arts Service, I would have to say, started when I was a teenager. I was extremely interested in art, especially illustrations."

But rather than create simplified medical concepts for the medical profession, Krames, who received his medical degree from the University of West Virginia, focused his product on the patient.

"I think the concept of making the key transference from an illustrator for doctors to an illustrator for patients became very clear when I was at the National Institutes of Health," he said. "I was doing research and I became increasingly aware of the medical informational needs of patients regarding the nature of their illnesses."

"Of course, in medical school, I got the very strong impression that patients wanted something that they would enjoy reading if the medical subjects were presented in an unthreatening and, more importantly perhaps, an entertaining way so that they were motivated to understand.

"From that developed the formula for color, graphics, warmth and simplified text to reinforce medical subjects."

In 1973, after completing his specialty training at the University of California-San Francisco, PAS became a reality.

By FRED FERGUSON NEW YORK (UPI) — Whether the everyday housewife could match the meal Jean-Jacques Joutoux cooked...

Each course was served on a fresh plate with the food arranged artfully. Nothing was served from a platter.

"In haute cuisine, service is everything," said David O'Connell, publisher of Esquire Magazine...

At the corner of the kitchen, Joutoux and his sous chef (that means assistant) had been arranging the table for each course since 8:30 p.m.

"How was Jean-Jacques doing out back?" "He's all red and sweating," said Janique.

The waiters squeezed four desserts at each place: cold soufflé with apple sauce, chocolate charlotte in egg sauce, snow on eggs poached mer...

Jean-Jacques and sous chef Michel Derbanc took a bow to a standing ovation as the triple orange, strawberry and blueberry sherbets he made that morning were served.

One reason that everyday housewife would have trouble matching the meal: she could never get all the dishes done. Each person served used seven knives, eight forks, four spoons, seven glasses, 12 plates.

Jean-Jacques, over demitasse and brandy, said the American housewife could undoubtedly get the ingredients.

After formal study of traditional French cooking, he said, "She may go from there."

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The student won the club lead with the queen and continued with the king. The Professor ruffed, drew trumps, played ace, king and another heart which he ruffed in dummy; ruffed dummy's last club and his last heart, and was ready to look for the queen of spades.

He wasted little time in the process. He simply led dummy's king and then finessed against East.

"How did you figure that out?" asked the student.

had already shown up with nine points in clubs and the lack of hearts. Didn't you think I would have opened the bidding if I also held the queen of spades?"

"I also knew that you are quite capable of false-carding," replied the Professor. "You could have won the first club with the king and played ace next to conceal the queen if you had wanted to hide that card."

"That could not fool your partner. So I knew you were going out of your way to show me your nine points in clubs. You wanted me to think that you could not possibly hold the spade queen so I played you for that card."

A Maine reader wants to know what you bid now to spouse to your partner's opening notrump (16-18 points).

We just raise him to four. We have 18 points and our spot cards are about as small as possible. We only want to be in a slam if he holds a maximum.

The Magic Valley Symphony's final concert of the season will be held Saturday, Feb. 17, at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium at 8 p.m.

The first half of the program features the Russian Sailors Dance from the ballet "The Red Poppy," by Glilere, Bartok's "Rumanian Folk Dances," Wagner's Overture to "Die Meistersinger" and Schabrier's "España."

The second half will feature two works for small ensembles — "The Unanswered Question" by Ives and a work for brass quintet by Malcolm Arnold — before the final selection, the ballet music from "El Cid" by Massenet.

This program will conclude the twentieth season for the orchestra. Lawrence Curtis is the conductor.

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students and may be purchased at the door. This program is free to patron ticket holders.

CSI students will be admitted free.

"Friday Night Live" features Bill Studabaker, College of Southern Idaho English professor and author of "Everything Goes Without Saying," who will give a poetry reading tonight at 7 p.m. at Book Magic, 121 2nd Ave. E. The program is sponsored by Book Magic and Open Space. Admission is $1 and reservations are advised as seating is limited. For more information and reservations call 734-8039.

The College of Southern Idaho's Drama Department will present an evening of three one-act plays Feb. 22, 23 and 24 at 8:15 p.m. in Theater 119 of the Fine Arts Center. The plays will be "The Still Alarm," by George S. Kaufman; "The Dark Lady of the Sonnets," by George Bernard Shaw and "Lou Gehrig Did Not Die of Cancer," by Jason Miller. Robert Daughters offers impressionism in oils

Paintings exhibit

SUN VALLEY — A one-man show and sale of Robert Daughters' paintings will be held at the Redwood Room in the Sun Valley Lodge this weekend. A percentage of the sales will benefit the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities.

Daughters, born in Missouri, is well known as a contemporary impressionist. He studied drawing in Germany and graduated from the Kansas City Art Institute. He received many awards — with the National Society of Art Directors and the Kansas City Artist Guild as an illustrator and designer. In 1970, he and his family moved to New Mexico where he now devotes full time to his painting career. His work was exhibited in the 1978 Western Art Show at Grand Central Galleries in New York and at the Western Heritage show in Houston. His paintings were featured in the 1978 New Mexico calendar and were in two shows at the Governor's Gallery in Santa Fe.

The show, which will include about twenty oil paintings, will open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. tomorrow and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Daughters, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Max Shriver of the Shriver Gallery, will be visiting from Taos to attend the exhibit.

SUN VALLEY — The Sun Valley Center's Photography Department will offer a special visiting-artist workshop with Roger Meritt Feb. 26 through 28 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The intensive class, for intermediate and advanced photographers, will deal with the technical and aesthetic problems of both color and black-and-white photography. Emphasis will be placed on the relationship of the photographer to subject. Because the workshop will meet for three sessions only, students may want to explore photographic possibilities with Polaroid materials.

Meritt, who is currently an assistant professor at the University of Rochester, was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1974 and a National Endowment for the Arts grant to pursue his own photographic work in 1976. He received a "BFA" from the Rochester Institute of Technology and an MFA from the Visual Studies Workshop (State University of New York/Buffalo). His work has been published in "Photography in the Twentieth Century," "Vision and Expression," "The Print" and "The Great West: Real/Ideal." He was recently a visiting artist at the Polaroid Corporation, where he worked with the new 20x24 inch camera.

Bon Mauldin, CSI's video studio engineer, blocks out lower right hand corner of screen for Ameslan translator.

Video aid promises a breakthrough for deaf

TWIN FALLS — Learning the English language has not been easy for Timothy Owlabi.

A native of Ibadan, Nigeria, he could have learned English in Nigerian public schools starting in the second grade, but he had one problem — he is deaf.

At age 11, though, Owlabi, now 28, was able to enroll in a special school for deaf students in Nigeria and the long lack of learning English finally began.

After about 18 years of study, he can converse in sign language with English-speaking people and can read English books if the vocabulary level is not difficult.

Owlabi is now enrolled at the College of Southern Idaho and hopes some day to return to Nigeria to help educate some of the 80,000 deaf people in his native land.

But his desire to be a teacher does not make the task of learning new English words an easy one. He still must wrestle with classroom techniques and learning aids primarily designed for people with normal hearing.

Help is on the way, though. A group of CSI faculty members are designing a lecture series Owlabi and other deaf students can use to speed up their learning.

Once the series is complete, deaf learners like Owlabi will be able to learn new words and concepts simply by watching a television set.

Pioneering in the wilderness of deaf education, the faculty members are video taping basic biology lectures students can watch on closed circuit television.

The series could be the only one of its kind in use for education of deaf students, according to CSI audio-visual coordinator Holly Houtburg.

Instead of sitting the college's television studio still, Houtburg and video studio engineer Bon Mauldin are taping Dr. Don Puder's beginning biology lectures in the facility.

Puder has written a lecture series which covers the basics of biology from microbiology and higher plants to plant and animal problems and evolution.

He has condensed his lessons into 17 30-minute talks which Houtburg and Mauldin capture on video tape in the fully-equipped electronic video studio in the CSI vocational building.

"Welcome to Bio Concepts," Puder tells his unseen audience. Then, using prepared charts, he outlines the characteristics which all animal life has in common.

"Life is the sum total of various life functions," Puder explains for the camera. He tells his students all living animals exhibit basic traits, such as eating food found outside their body, motility and coordination of functions.

To this point, Puder's taped lecture is of no more value to a deaf student than sending him to an ordinary classroom lecture. But the next step in the taping process transforms the tape into a valuable learning tool for deaf students.

During the initial taping, Mauldin and Houtburg carefully block out the lower right hand corner of their cameras to leave an empty space for Josh Edwards.

Edwards, an associate professor at CSI, works in the college study skills center with deaf students. He is accomplished in Ameslan (American Sign Language).

In the finished video lecture, Edwards appears in the lower corner of the screen moving her hands and lips to convey Puder's verbal message to those who cannot hear it.

"The result is like having a translator present at the lecture. Puder's taped lectures are "very much help to me," Owlabi told Edwards by sign language.

"Before I was taking it, I had problems in class.

Just seeing the Ameslan translation of the lecture, however, is not enough for a student like Owlabi who may not know words like "morphogenesis," "homeostasis," and other scientific terms Puder includes in his lectures.

Edwards has added an idea which makes Puder's lectures even more understandable to deaf students.

To help her students learn the vocabulary necessary to understand Puder's lessons, Edwards tapes a video vocabulary lesson to accompany Puder's lectures.

Gesturing and mouthing-her words, Edwards explains each word in the lecture which could cause her students to stumble.

Jim Palmer, counselor for the deaf at CSI, has helped Edwards translate many of the words into Ameslan and the two have even had to coin new Ameslan gestures for such concepts as "evolution."

In order to coin a new term in Ameslan, Edwards must okay the new word with members of the deaf community.

But once the terms have been translated into sign language, deaf students get three exposures to the new word. In Edwards's vocabulary tape, the word is printed on the screen by a special electronic character generator in use at the studio. Then she signs the word and explains its meaning.

Finally, the student is exposed to the new term in the context of Puder's taped lecture. With Edwards filmed in the corner translating it into sign language a second time.

Edwards got the idea for including lettered captions from members of the deaf community in Twin Falls.

She asked local deaf people to watch the lectures and vocabulary tapes. Then she asked if the tape could be effective in teaching new words and concepts to deaf students.

The deaf community responded by suggesting the captions to increase visual exposure to the word.

"Deaf students learn in groups of letters, rather than entire words," Edwards said. "The word has no meaning until they put it together."

Puder's lecture series should be unique in the world of deaf education, Edwards said. She said she will take a copy of a lecture and vocabulary tape to a deaf education symposium in the Midwest next April. She expects educators to view it as an innovation in deaf education.

"This is kind of like the pilot project," Edwards said. "There are probably no others like it. CSI is so good about pioneering a project such as this which may or may not have wide application."

Owlabi said learning biology is much easier for him after he watches a vocabulary tape prepared by Edwards.

"The lessons are so much easier when you know the vocabulary," Owlabi said in gestures with Edwards translating. "The program reading helps me a lot and I can watch it over again. I am sure it will help other deaf and hearing people with the problem of learning."

A concerned group of faculty members at CSI hopes so.

Roll over Shakespeare — heeere's Neil

By SHELLY KINZEL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — I often wonder after seeing a Neil Simon play or film, if one hundred years from now people will be quoting his lines as they find Shakespeare's. My literary friends will probably raise an eyebrow, but I would not be surprised at all. Simon's mastery of the English language is laudable; many of his comic lines are sheer genius.

No where could this be more apparent than in his new hit "California Suite," which opened last night at the Jerome Cinema and the Mall Cinema in Twin Falls. The film version of one of his most successful Broadway plays is about four groups of people who check into the posh Beverly Hills Hotel. The casting is absolute perfection — the couples are played by some of filmdom's most exciting and talented performers.

Alan Alda and Jane Fonda are at the Hollywood screening. And his show-longue ex-wife, an eastern intellectual who dubs California "a parrot with a lobotomy." The two meet again after nine years in a bittersweet confrontation about the custody of their teen-aged daughter.

Maggie Smith and Michael Caine portray an Oscar-contending British actress and her antique dealer husband, who come to a deeper understanding of their unique relationship. Walker Hottel is a happily married man who is faced with the dilemma of disposing with a passed-out call girl, an unwanted present from his girl-chasing brother, before the arrival of his wife (Elnore May).

The fourth party is composed of two doctors from Chicago and their wives. Bill Cosby and Sheila Fryzier are vacationing with Richard Pryor and Gloria Gifford. In several uproarious sequences, the former best pals discover that they really despise each other. Those with a taste for slapstick will especially enjoy this tale. Although very funny, it is more superficial than the other three, and, therefore, my least favorite.

For me, Simon's strength is that his comedies are "not simply a series of gags, but emanations from his perception of the human condition. In all of our laughter, we are never very far away from tears. The writer, of course, cannot be given all the credit. The film's director Herbert Ross, who also directed Simon's "The Good-Bye Girl" was amazingly adept at intercutting back and forth between stories without breaking the continuity or destroying the various moods and styles.

Go see "California Suite" — a comic gem with something for everyone. . . . .

A second comedy currently appearing at the Twin and Jerome Cinemas has already become a social phenomenon. National Lampoon's "Animal House" is not only doing well at the box office but has triggered three TV takeoffs.

Why has a film about college fraternity pranks become so popular? I'm sure I don't know. I can only surmise that many people today crave a mindless escape from pressure and worry. Ours is not a carefree time, nor is it a rebellious one. Most of the news we hear is bad news, and we are increasingly aware of living in an economically depressed era.

"Animal House," although exaggerated, takes us back to 1962 when college life still centered around the frivolities of fraternities and sororities. Nothing else mattered except pledging for and being accepted into a popular Greek-letter house. Concern with the Vietnam War was not yet a priority — the motto was still "fun, fun, fun." The only bad thing that could happen to you was being rejected, unless you happened to create a group of your own.

"Animal House" is about such a group of losers who band together and become one of the most obnoxious fraternities on campus. As underdogs, some of the members are humorously appealing as they thumb their noses at a disapproving administration. The film consists finally of their merry capers which include peeping at naked girls, petty vandalism, and continual partying.

Tim Matheson, Thomas Hulce and John Belushi (of "Saturday Night Live" fame) are among the cast of young performers. Belushi is particularly gross as the slovenly and lewd Blurtarsky. The versatile Donald Sutherland has a small role as a professor who doesn't mind participating in extracurricular activities. The characters are pretty much stereotypes, but what one would expect in a film which depicts college as a perpetual merry-go-round.

"Animal House" is neither very good nor very bad. There are some funny situations and characters, but much of the humor is juvenile and unoriginal. Perhaps the success of this feature depends more on timing than on its actual quality. Personally, I would welcome more films with a positive approach to the future, than a nostalgic retreat to the past.

Canada finances film investments

By ALJEAN HARMETZ
©1979 N.Y. Times Service
LOS ANGELES — A ghost story and a thriller — "The Changeling," a $6.8 million film starring George Scott and "Agony," a $4 million production starring Robert Mitchum — are pioneering a dramatic change in the Canadian movie industry: The films are being financed as a government-regulated, tax-shelter investment, on a par with building apartment houses or exploring for oil and natural gas.

"What's new is that shares in a motion picture can be offered on a widely held basis to the public and sold through licensed dealers," Garth Drabinsky, co-producer of "The Changeling," said.

The Quebec Securities Commission cleared a prospectus for "Agency," last September. A month later, the more stringent Ontario Securities Commission for the first time permitted a public offering of securities in a motion picture when it approved the prospectus of "The Changeling."

That movie was then authorized to raise $6.6 million by selling 264 shares at $25,000 each. The majority of the shares were sold by the time the picture started production Dec. 4; the remainder were sold by the tax deadline of Dec. 29. The film co-stars Scott's wife, Trish Van Devere, and is directed by Peter Medak, who is best known for "The Ruling Class."

"Four pictures applied before us," Drabinsky said. "But we were the first to qualify. If you're certified, it means that the contents of the prospectus have been scrutinized by the securities commission and they are satisfied about the disclosure of all pertinent facts."

He hears Broadway's siren song

By WILLIAM A. RADY
Newhouse News Service
NEW YORK — Michel Legrand's official biography makes note of the fact that he "detests American coffee, neckties and haircuts." But he loves American musical comedies, and this is the reason. "The Umbrellas of Cherbourg" currently is enjoying nightly sell-out business at Joseph Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival Public Theater here.

Legrand, as Gallie as cafe filtre and Gauloises, is best known to Americans as the composer of two Academy Award works, "The Windmills of Your Mind" and the score for the film "Summer of '42," as well as his unmemorable composition "What Are You Doing the Rest of Your Life?"

Among his own countrymen, however — despite the scores he has composed for more than 100 films — he always will be known as the man who created "Les Parapluies de Cherbourg," which first brought a ravishing young Catherine Deneuve to stardom in 1965.

Legrand — Helmut not quite in need of a haircut, and still protesting his eternal love for New York (where he first arrived as piano player for the late Maurice Chevalier many years ago) — spoke with us over a slice of country pate and the happy news that his "The Umbrellas of Cherbourg" is back as an American stage musical. (Sheldon Harnick, who has such credits as "Fiddler on the Roof" and "The Rothschilds," helped with the English translation.)

"Jacques Demy — who wrote the story for the film and has been a long-time friend — and I have wanted to do an English stage version for years," the composer said. "And here, 15 years after the film, 'The Umbrellas' has an entirely new life — a different life. "When people first said that this film should be done as a Broadway musical, we thought: No. It's too soon after the film." Then we started talking about it a few years ago and felt that the time was right.

"Three years ago I saw Sheldon in New York. We had been working on some film things together, and we decided to go ahead and do it. After we had finished, we got involved with a group of producers. I don't like to say anything, but they weren't very nice people. I won't give you their names — but nothing, NOTHING happened. Just promises.

"Finally we broke off and I said: 'Now let's think. Who in the world would we really want to be our producer?' The answer was Joe Papp — a fantastic man truly interested in theater for what it should be — art.

"We went to him and he said: 'It's an interesting idea. But let's do it first as a concert and see.' One year ago, Joe invited 100 friends — and my, what famous friends — to a private concert where the play was sung with a single piano background. Some of the people — like Den Pittchford and Steffanlance Christopherson, who play the boy and girl — sang for us. Afterward, Joe came over and said: 'We'll do it.' And that's how it happened."

It's 16 years now since writer Demy first showed the composer a script called "The Infidelity," which was eventually to become "The Umbrellas of Cherbourg." Legrand, who had worked as background music composer with Demy on such films as "The Bay of Angels," read it and told his friend: "It's such a romantic story. Why don't we make a musical film out of it?"

Legrand said he then started to write "an American-style musical" with songs interspersed throughout. "We then gave up the idea for a few months," he recalled. "I thought: 'Why not have all the dialogue done in music?' The words sung."

"We went off to Switzerland in the winter — I love to ski — and finished it in six weeks. Then we had a hell of a time getting anyone to produce the movie. Who wanted to see a movie that was entirely sung — like an opera? Finally we met one crazy lady who said she'd put up some of the money. That crazy lady became very rich and very famous. She has produced 15 films since, but I'm sorry to say she is broke again."

Not so Michel Legrand, who used his "Umbrellas Of Cherbourg" as a base for a meteoric career in films and recordings. In the early days of the "New Wave" French films, Legrand created scores for the greatest — including Godard and Truffaut.

Then came dozens of American films, two Oscars, an Emmy and countless nominations. The energetic Legrand, who makes a converted water mill 40 miles from Paris his general family headquarters and commutes to recording sessions and concerts in his own self-piloted plane, has had an incredible career as concert pianist, recording artist and conductor. Recently, for example, he wrote and conducted a violin concerto for the London Symphony Orchestra, performed in Albert Hall, and even more recently cut a new record, "Le Jazz Grand," featuring such musicians as Gerry Mulligan playing Legrand's new jazz suite and four new songs.

Lately, Hollywood's favorite film composer has turned his back on that occupation. "I'm experimenting with new things," the composer explained. "I'm interested in finding a new rapport between music and the screen. I see a common open idea which is so unique I really can't tell you about it. Someone else may beat me to it. Anyway, I've bought the rights to a wonderful book I read called "Blind Love" by Patrick Cavin. It's a beautiful love story and I've found this idea for using music in the film in a very unusual way. It's so different, I feel I must write the script, direct the film, and of course, compose all the music.

"And I also want to do something else — another musical for the American stage. It is my passion. And I'm thinking of a musical based on 'The Mad Woman of Chailloit'."

Legrand, who confesses he hates one thing even more than neckties and haircuts — rest — has been a musician since he was first admitted to the Paris Conservatory by special decree at the age of 10. Being an aviator, he says: "I have to — shall we say — move to another altitude. The theater is my truest love. I think it's because a work is never finished. Never..."

Detour ahead: taking the studio-road

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International
The "overnight sensation" was once a rarity in rock 'n' roll.

Talented new bands and artists faced years of grueling, unglamorous work in the recording studio and on the road, before they could hope to gain even a taste of the rewards enjoyed by the superstars.

But the system seems to be changing. Over the past couple of years, we have seen an increasing number of bands whose debut albums leap up the sales charts with amazing speed. Boston's first record sold five million copies. Foreigner's debut sold three million.

Now we have Toto, six young West Coast musicians whose first album, "Toto" (Columbia), has already achieved "platinum" status for sales of one million copies, largely because of a powerhouse hit single, "Hold the Line." A second single, "I'll Supply the Love," should spark even more album sales.

It all came so fast, even the band was surprised.

"Things have been happening really quick for us," says drummer Jeff Porcaro, who organized the band with keyboardman-arranger David Paich. "We didn't expect to be doing so well this soon."

Toto's average age is about 22, but young, as they are, these players are studio veterans: 6 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho

Individually they have worked for many top artists, from Boz Scaggs and Alice Cooper to Steely Dan and Barbara Streisand. So they knew what they were doing before the tape started rolling.

"We've all been on platinum albums before, for other people," says Paich. "But we've also been on albums we thought were going to go big and they just fell away. So making a record is a little like throwing dice. We though we had something good, but we were still throwing the dice. Fortunately, the dice came out seven."

Ironically, the studio background and versatile musicianship that helped Toto become an instant recording success has hampered the band's development as a performing unit. In the hard-knocks school of the studio, they learned to play in a variety of styles, competently and dispassionately interpreting others' music.

But performing live is an entirely different thing. Toto is now faced with the need to create an honest musical rapport with an audience and to relate to one another not as an assemblage of independent musicians, but as a team. And so far, though the playing is flawless, Toto's on-stage efforts leave a bit to be desired.

"We were great performers in high school," says Porcaro. "But now the guys are used to being in the studio, behind someone else, or as sidemen. We have to relearn how to get up and muster that professional style on stage."

Toto is playing the rock 'n' roll success game backward. The records are selling, the money is flowing in, but the audiences are turning out. But the six of them are faced with a lot of hard work, sweat and — yes, honesty — before they can become a real, live band.

Gossip

By ROBIN ADAMSSLOAN

Q: Since Gayle Hunnicutt is such a beautiful actress, why hasn't her career taken off more than it has? We hardly hear anything about her. — R.F., Providence, R.I.

A: Our bet is you'll be hearing a lot from Gayle in the coming months. Something-of-a-victim-of-the-Hollywood system, Gayle was tabbed as a start-up type early on, and her career went nowhere fast. But she picked up stakes for England where she blossomed in a host of stage and TV roles. Now she's being talked up as a simmering property stateside, and can be seen as Wayne Rogers' love interest in Frank Capra's movie, "Once in Paris." Gayle is also in the line for the romantic lead in "North Dallas Fort," this time as the love interest of Nick Nolte, who'll play a quarterback in this football opus.

GAYLE HUNNICUTT
... ready to boil

Q: Why is Tony Randall bitter about his TV experience? Aren't two hit shows enough to satisfy him? — X.M., Nyack, N.Y.

A: Tony says he's disenchanted with TV because, among other things, creativity is stifled, citing his "The Tony Randall Show" which the network axed after two seasons. And even though "The Odd Couple," Jack Klugman, was a super-hit, it was also cancelled. The show is doing sensationally in reruns. So, Tony says he's concentrating on movies right now. He plays a lecherous butler in "Foolin' Around," with Gary Busey, and has just signed on in something called "Scavenger Hunt."

SHAKY ROMANCE: While all the gossip columnists were busy reporting on whether Liza Minnelli and her new love, Mark Gero, were going to announce their engagement, my spy was eavesdropping on a terrible spat. True, all lovers fight, but the word on this one was it was pretty bitter with Liza shouting, "I'm tired of footing all the bills — get out of my life?" Well, maybe they'll kiss and make up.

Q: I loved Donna Reed on TF and especially in "From Here to Eternity" opposite the late Montgomery Clift in 1954. She's such a fine actress; I can't believe she's decided to call it quits. Where has she been in recent years? — D.S., El Paso, Tex.

A: Donna has spent the last dozen years traveling with her family but far away from the cameras. It was in 1966 that she did the sign-off segment on ABC of "The Donna Reed Show." But she's returning with gusto now in a real heart-grabber, a TV movie called "The Best Place to Be," with Helen Hayes about a middle-aged woman battling for her emotional life. Possibly in Donna's future before the cameras is a "Donna Reed Show" TV reunion, despite the death last year of Carl Betz, who was Donna's co-star on the original show.

Q: Isn't British actress Joan Collins getting a bit old to play the kinds of sexy parts she does? — I.M., St. Paul, Minn.

A: Joan, who's 45 and happily married to producer Ron Kass, claims sexiness is a matter of attitude and energy and not chronology. And since Joan looks great and has scads of energy and, she says, the "right" mental attitude, she doesn't hesitate to take on spicy parts. The British public, at least, agrees with her — Joan was voted England's top sex symbol in a recent poll. She bested, incidentally, two other over-40 beauties, Jane Fonda and Brigitte Bardot.

Q: Whenever I catch Charles Nelson Reilly on TV, he's very funny. If slightly off the wall. Can this comedian sustain his "spontaneous" behavior away from the little screen, too? — C.S., Detroit.

A: Reilly can be quite a sketch — consistently. Friends say he'll do just about anything for a laugh. A favorite attention-getting gambit is going out in public wearing clothes with the price tag still attached. The flamboyant performer knows how to get laughs at the drop of a hat — or a toupee. For example, this practical joker is exceedingly fond of breaking up conversations or onlookers during a guestery by suddenly doing his absurd hairpiece, revealing a full head of skin.

Q: Is Richard Burton all set to play the lead in the movie version of Graham Greene's latest novel, "The Human Factor"? I loved the book and can't wait to see Burton in the movie. — C.T., Cincinnati.

A: You may have to wait, and for quite a while. Producer Otto Preminger, who hasn't had a hit film in a long time, intends to make Green's powerful book into a movie but hasn't nailed down the leading part, that of an over-the-hill double agent married to a black South African. Burton is interested but hasn't seen a script. Meanwhile, reports are that Preminger is also eying Michael Caine for the lead. So the movie may be a long time in coming.

Q: How come John Belushi doesn't get star billing in "Animal House"? — G.D., Denver.

A: National Lampoon magazine, which hatched the movie, explains that the comic actor was identified primarily with his work on TV's "Saturday Night Live" so there was no reason to star him when his film debut was being planned. Says a spokesman, "Here, nobody gets star billing, not even John."

Q: When I took my kids to see Wall Disney's "Snow, White, and the Seven Dwarfs," I was struck by the fact that Snow White is a perfect cartoon lookalike for the young Hedy Lamarr. Can this be? — H.B., Chicago.

A: It's true. During her Hollywood heyday, Hedy's exotic features were the rage, serving as a prototype for an impressive roster of screen beauties. The stars of 1930s were emulated by such stars as Joan Bennett, Gene Tierney and even Joan Crawford, who donned a Hedy Lamarr wig in a dud titled "Ice Follies of 1933." When Miss Lamarr declined the lead in Warners' huge "Saratoga Trunk," the producers then cast Ingrid Bergman in the role, with brunette wig. After this film was released, Ingrid asked Hedy, "Do you really think I look like you?" Smiled Hedy sweetly, "You sure did your best!"

Q: Is Julie Andrews still being typed as strictly a "Mary Poppins" character in the movies? — S.J., Amityville, N.Y.

A: It's been a long time since Julie played that "marvelous singing nanny, but she has had difficulty in shaking off the pristinely pure "Poppins" image. And her role in "The Sound of Music" didn't help either. But we're told Julie's latest movie, her first film in four years, will do her job for good. The movie is called "10," and it's expected to be a strictly R-rated affair on the strength of some sexy goings-on. Julie won't be involved in the raunchier stuff, but she will play an actress decked out in some pretty revealing costumes. Julie's husband, Blake Edwards, has no beads since he's the producer.

TV's 'The Shakespeare Plays' goes paperback

BY PEGGY CONSTANTINE
©Chicago Sun-Times
Shakespeare is coming to the tube in television's most ambitious dramatic series. Over the next six years, the BBC-TV will be loaning us new productions of all 37 of the Bard's plays.

It follows that there is a major book tie-in with the series.

Mayflower, a relatively new publisher, has prepared paperbacks of the plays to accompany the BBC-TV-Time-Live Television series. The first six plays were in bookstores by the end of January so prospective viewers could get a head start in their reading.

These are good reprints at $2.95. Mayflower has printed the full Shakespeare text but has coordinated editions with plays as they will be telecast. Brackets in margins show where lines were omitted from the television adaptation. As Shakespeare wrote it, "Richard II" has 2,737 lines. The BBC cut 287 lines for the telecast.

There are additional, extremely interesting materials preceding the text of each play. So far I've seen only the copy of Richard II, but learned from the introduction common to all the reprints, that the BBC decided on its ambitious Shakespeare task in 1975, hired Sir William Walton to compose the introductory music, secured such superior performers as John Gielgud, Wendy Hiller and Clive Bloom, (as well as thousands of others), and chose David Giles, who filed-generated some "Forsythe Saga" episodes, as director.

The text of the Mayflower editions, and television dramas, was prepared in 1951 by the late Shakespearean scholar—Peter Alexander, a language professor at the University of Glasgow, Scotland.

Each book also includes color and black and white photos of the BBC at work on the plays, comments on the individual play, a list of the cast, and a glossary, which tells the viewer-reader that Elizabethan English "agitate" means "fever," and that "nobs" were Irish foot soldiers.

The play's the thing, of course, and here's a slight rub. The type for the Shakespeare text is small. The introductory material and glossary are easily readable. You may have to squint as you follow the drama. But with a reduced type size, the light, slightly oversized book is easily held in the hand.

Most TV adaptations with simultaneous book tie-ins have been mediocre. Only a few should have made viewers become readers. For example, the BBC's marvelous Forsythe Saga, based on six of the nine John Galsworthy novels, was one. Still, that triple trilogy, which Scribner's published, is now out of print except for a single novel, "The Man of Property." Another strong drama—was BBC's 1978 Marie Curie, based in Robert Reid's book (Signet, $2.95).

Obviously, Shakespeare is a cultural biggie, but you have to wonder how his ratings would be against, say, a TV adaptation of a Harold Robbins potboiler.

More tie-ins of good novels:

• The movie of the late Sylvia Plath's "The Bell Jar" (Bantam, $2.50), the American poet's only novel will most likely be released this spring. The novel, largely autobiographical, is a touching explanation of an American girl figuring her way out of emotional illness, describing confinements in hospitals and her relationship to her mother and men. The novel is a sensible, sensitive but graphic portrait of emotional problems. Marilyn Hassett and Julie Harris star in the movie.

• Joyce Rebele-Burditt's "The Cracker Factory" (Bantam, $2.50) is a novel of a housewife's bout with alcoholism and visits to the sanitarium. It's full of wisecracks and minute observations of hospital life, with emphasis on freaky angles. Some of the jokes are not so funny—illness isn't funny—and the author tries too hard. But this is a popular tale of woman's struggle to get to the bottle to save her marriage and family. Natalie Wood will star in the teleplay to be on ABC sometime in the spring.

FOOTNOTE

John Irving's "The World According to Garp," called by many 1978's finest novel, comes to paper in April. Pocket Book is publishing it for $2.75. You're going to find six covers for the novel. The jacket artist apparently fiddled with six ideas of what Irving's novel means. His boss not only liked the art on all six, but the idea that the novel can be interpreted so many ways. So you get your pick of red, gold, light blue, dark blue, copper or green, as well as various illustrations.

'Austin City Limits' rides again

With roots in folk, rock, jazz and what city folks used to refer to as "hillbilly" music, progressive country music over the past several years has — thanks to the likes of Willie Nelson — taken the nation by storm.

Just as the more traditional country musicians call Nashville home, the new sound has been nurtured in Austin, Tex., and for the fourth season, public television shares the Austin sound with the entire nation as "Austin City Limits" swings into its new season this spring.

Over the past several seasons, "Austin City Limits" has distinguished itself as a showcase for up-and-coming talent, as well as a preferred "gig" for established performers.

In each of 13 weekly programs, this season, one or two acts perform "in the round" before a live audience. The uninterrupted format allows each performer to exercise the full range of his or her talents in the closest thing to a live concert national television has to offer.

Those scheduled to appear on "Austin City Limits" this season include: Taj Mahal, Lightnin' Hopkins, Norton Buffalo, Leon Redbone, Steven Froehlich, Little Joe y la Familia, Bobby Bare and Tracy Nelson, Marcia Ball, Alvin Crow and the Pleasant Valley

Boys, Doug Kershaw, Clifton Chenier, Esteban Jordan, Delbert McCClinton, The Nashville Super Pickers, The Neville Brothers, Robert Shaw, Pure Prairie League, and, in a special "jam," John McEuen with Vassar Clements, Byron Berline, and Elizabeth Cotton.

Carnegie II: Public broadcasting under fire

By FRANK SWERTLOW
©Chicago Sun-Times

The Carnegie Commission's long-awaited report on the future of public broadcasting is a shrewd, politically astute document that, if implemented, could take noncommercial radio and television out of the Stone Age.

But inherent in the 40-page report, issued Jan. 30, are a number of problems that could lead to battles inside and outside public broadcasting.

In-the-study, called "On the Future of Public Broadcasting," the commission found noncommercial systems "fundamentally flawed" and offered a series of recommendations to cure the problems, which the group felt, were practical enough to pass congressional scrutiny.

In 1967, the New York-based Carnegie Commission issued a report on public broadcasting that became a blueprint for the current noncommercial systems. In many ways, the new report, Carnegie II, addresses itself to the failures of the present system and the original report.

A major flaw in public broadcasting today, Carnegie II said, is the lack of financing for programming. For example, the head of the public TV outlet in Springfield, Mass., told PBS executives in Chicago recently that his station allocated $84,000 for programming this year, but it will take $130,000 to buy the same programs for next season. Lawrence Grossman, the president of the Public Broadcasting Service, has said the TV system needs $1 billion now to compete with the commercial networks.

Another flaw in the current noncommercial systems is the failure of public broadcasting to be free of political pressure. This was true especially during the Nixon era when White House staffers and Nixon appointees to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the government conduit for federal funds, were criticized for trying to control the noncommercial systems.

John Jay Iselin, the president of WNET, the PBS outlet in New York, told the Chicago Sun-Times in a phone interview that Carnegie II essentially was "naïve and innocent" when it came to financing. Because of this, he said, CPB eventually fell into the hands of the political patronage system, especially under Nixon. Too often, he said, CPB and politicians were at odds with broadcasters. "We all became disappointed with the management of the federal account," he said.

Although the report found problems, the commission issued a series of suggestions it believed could preserve the system as a "national treasure." Among them was the increase in financing from the present $462 million to about $1.2 billion in 1985.

Under the plan, the stations would receive $1 from the U.S. government for every $1.50 raised locally — or about $80 million in total money. This plan would keep public broadcasting out of the control of a single backer and force the stations to develop other sources of income, such as allocations from state governments.

Carnegie II, however, went on to say that part of the federal grants could be reduced by a special tax on all users of the airwaves, including TV stations, CB radio owners, and short-wave operators. Carnegie commissioners believe the airwaves are a public resource, like the land or the seas, and people who use and reap profits from them should be taxed. It is like taxing oil or mining companies using federal lands and seas.

While money is an important factor for the future of public broadcasting, the commission found that insulating broadcasters from political pressure was just as important. This would be done by creating a Public Telecommunications Trust, which would serve as the administrator of public broadcasting.

The PTT, which would replace the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, would not be involved in programming. A newly created Program Services Endowment, a kind of semi-autonomous cocoon within PTT, would provide the funds for programs. The head of the group would serve as the final arbiter on financing, a position no one now has in public broadcasting. The members of both the PTT and the PSE would be selected through a series of screening processes that would minimize political pressure.

One issue that Carnegie II did not mention specifically was the restructuring of the noncommercial systems into a centralized operation, such as the commercial networks use. William J. McGill, the chairman of Carnegie II, told PBS officials in Chicago that if they "read in between the lines" the suggestion was there. He suggested that public broadcasters consider a possible plan for centralizing their systems.

McGill said while there was some disagreement within the commission on the report, the group decided to write publicly to ensure the acceptance of the document. He suggested public broadcasters do the same. So far, public radio has scoffed at the report. National Public Radio's president Frank Mankiewicz called many of the recommendations "most unrealistic."

At this point, it is difficult to gauge Carnegie II's impact on Capitol Hill. Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin (D-Calif.), the chairman of the subcommittee on communications, said he was "troubled" by the idea of PTT, which, he thought, might add more red tape to public broadcasting. Ernest Hollings (D-S.C.), Van Deerlin's counterpart in the Senate, said he was in no rush to adopt the report.

Even so, the commission was aware of the political battles it may have over the report. One example of this is the recommendation for financing. The $1.2 billion for 1985 actually has been computed in dollars for 1979. The inflation factor has not been added so Congress would not be scared.

McGill said the Carnegie Commission also came up with the spectrum fee or tax as a way of reducing the amount of federal money. More important, taxing commercial operations probably would cause less of a stir, since networks and TV stations make huge profits.

Whether Carnegie II is adopted totally or partially, the process has begun for a complete re-evaluation of the noncommercial systems in this country.
