Carter, Sadat hitting snags during talks?

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Carter, buoyed by a tumultuous welcome from one million cheering Egyptians, Thursday began what he said were "crucial" peace talks with President Anwar Sadat. But already there were signs of snags and American officials termed the first meeting inconclusive.

"There was a full thrashing of outstanding issues. But it is too early to say whether there can be a successful conclusion," one U.S. official said after the first round of talks lasting almost two and a half hours.

Both sides were aware that Carter's own reputation as well as an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty were riding on the outcome of his personal mission to the Middle East. But despite that, diplomatic sources said, the Egyptian side to the first round of talks "did not appear to be too happy" when they ended.

"American officials asked the Egyptians to maintain a strict news blackout on the talks, an indication that both sides considered the negotiations to be active and serious despite the fact that no progress was reported.

A high official with Carter's party said the president was "not particularly optimistic" he could persuade Egypt and Israel to sign a treaty at this point because "it is much easier for things to go wrong than to go right."

One snag cropped up when Egypt warned it had "counter-proposals" to Washington's latest peace treaty suggestions — and "Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said in Tel Aviv if Israel did not like the counter-proposals, "We shall not accept them."

Carter is scheduled to go to Jerusalem Saturday night. Another snag appeared when Sadat gave the U.S. leader a sharp reminder that the Palestinians were the crux of the problem. In his welcoming speech at the 300-room, 19th-century Koubeh Palace, Sadat said, "We are determined to enable our Palestinian brothers to realize their national rights and regain their freedom."

Self-rule for Palestinians in the Gaza Strip and Jordan's West Bank had been a major stumbling block to success in the talks.

The remark prompted Carter to introduce an off-the-cuff sentence into his prepared speech saying, "President Sadat and I pledge ourselves not to disappoint those here, in Israel, among the Palestinians, among countries also possibly in a state of war, who depend upon us among others to realize their deepest desire to bring peace to this region."

CIA's Vietnam War files full of American names

By SEYMOUR M. HERSH

©N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — Formerly classified documents released by the Central Intelligence Agency show that its Office of Security conducted far more extensive surveillance activities inside the United States in the period of the Vietnam War than was previously known.

The documents reveal that the agency's Office of Security kept files in the Vietnam War that indexed 50,000 members of the California Peace and Freedom Party alone. It was one of hundreds of antiwar groups under agency surveillance at the time.

Previous investigations have reported the existence of the Office of Security's files but have placed the total number of names indexed at no more than 16,000.

The once-classified documents, released to the Peace and Freedom Party late last year on a request under the Freedom of Information Act, are dated March and May 1974 and indicate there was a dispute inside the agency over an order to abolish the listing of Peace and Freedom Party members.

"The actual indexing during this period, of some 50,000 names and addresses of registered members of the California PFP was undoubtedly deemed justified and was based on policy emanating from the Director of Security's Office," one document noted. At the time, the document added, there had been acts of violence against CIA facilities on college campuses and protests against agency recruiting efforts, all linked to antiwar activities.

"Such indexing of a name," the document said, "did not automatically denote something derogatory about the individual but was deemed to be done for lead purposes only."

The agency documents raise questions about two major investigations into unauthorized domestic CIA activities, the 1975 Rockefeller commission report and the later hearings of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

In its report, the commission headed by the then Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller cited the testimony of one senior Office of Security official who "guessed" that the number of names included in that office's domestic files was "somewhere between 12,000 and 16,000." The report also said 500 to 800 files were created on dissenting organizations and specific key individuals.

In its final report in 1976 on domestic surveillance, the Senate committee relied extensively on the Rockefeller commission data. One former senior staff member of the committee, told about the new documents, said "It is always possible" the committee did not get accurate information from the CIA.

Agency officials had no immediate comment, citing the difficulty of locating relevant documents.

The two CIA documents released to the Peace and Freedom Party initially were published last December by The Santa Cruz Sentinel but attracted no attention nationally. Subsequently, the Center for National Security Studies, a nonprofit Washington research organization that often has been critical of intelligence activities, made the document available.

The center's director, Morton H. Halperin, a former White House and Defense Department official, noted that the CIA was formally seeking authorization to collect against some domestic intelligence in the proposed new intelligence charter now being discussed in Congress.

Departmental transfers

House approves proposal for monitoring resources

By DAVID MORRISSEY

Times-News writer

BOISE — Transfer of air and water quality monitoring to the Department of Water Resources was approved by the Idaho House Thursday.

State representatives voted, 42-38, to transfer the Division of Environment and Welfare, amid vocal concerns by some lawmakers the move might lead to lowered water quality in Idaho.

Titled House Bill 47, the move enacts a policy of the State Water Plan, which was adopted by the 1978 legislature. The consolidated department, which will have responsibility for water quality and quantity programs, as well as air pollution responsibilities, will be renamed the Department of Air and Water Resources. The proposal of Gov. John V. Evans now goes to the Senate.

In debate that lasted more than an hour, and during which more than half the members of the House spoke for or against the bill, Rep. Vard Chaburn, R-Abbot, argued the responsibilities for water quantity and quality had been separated for too long.

roof would force them to work out those differences, he said.

Chaburn, the chairman of the House Resources and Conservation Committee, which last year spent hundreds of hours drafting and writing the State Water Plan, said the move would make both agencies more efficient. "There is overlapping in 12 separate and distinct places," between the environmental division of the Department of Health and Welfare and the Department of Water Resources, he said.

Chaburn drew support from Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, who told lawmakers "only environmentalists" opposed the merger. Environmentalists consider the Department of Health and Welfare more environmentally oriented than the Department of Water Resources, Bateman said.

But the Idaho Falls Republican said "the key" to whether the new department will tilt toward development or environmental interests will be found in the eight member board running the new agency. "If you have a good governor who appoints good people, you'll have good boards," Bateman said.

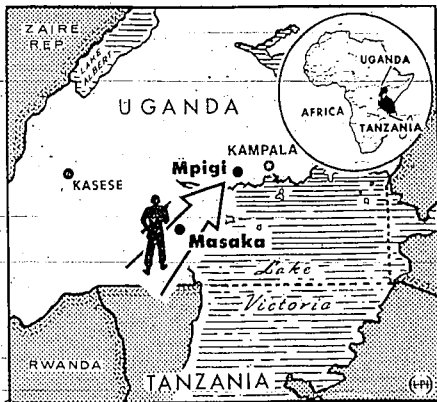

Endorsement for the merger plan also came from Rep. Ray Infanger, R-Salmon. According to Infanger, both agencies now perform streamlined inspections. If a consolidated agency is performing that task, Infanger said, $369,000 could be saved through elimination of duplicated services.

But Rep. Elaine Kearns, R-Idaho Falls, chairman of the House Health and Welfare Committee attacked the move. The two existing agencies have different purposes, Kearns said, and are often working toward contradictory ends. The state needs the "checks and balances" of the two departments, to prevent one from dominating the other and to ensure that the needs of all Idaho citizens are met.

Criticism also came from Rep. James Stolecheff, D-Sandpoint. The arguments of "increased efficiency" were untrue, Stolecheff said. His questions to the two agencies revealed no employees would be laid off, that no dollars would be saved and that there is no statistical proof the change will produce more efficiency.

"Let us make haste in boots of lead," Stolecheff said, "because if you ask questions and get no answers then these questions and get no answers then gain by it." The Department of Water Resources must feel it will gain by this move, Stolecheff said, or they wouldn't support it.

The measure now goes to the Senate.

Tanzanian invasion unit close to Ugandan capital

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — A Tanzanian invasion force swept unopposed to within 30 miles of the Ugandan capital of Kampala Thursday, bound for a showdown battle with President Idi Amin's demoralized army.

Amin told his nation the "situation is very grave," and the official radio for the first time admitted the Tanzanian forces were deep inside Ugandan territory, almost within artillery range of the capital. A special broadcast conceded the Tanzanians had overrun two southern towns, Masaka and Lukaya, "and are nearing Mpiigi, which is less than 25 miles from Kampala and Entebbe."

Mpiigi is actually about 30 miles from Kampala. A Ugandan armed forces have constructed what one diplomat called an "iron wall" defense line there. The strategic crossroads guards both Kampala and Entebbe, site of the International Airport that is Uganda's lifeline to the outside world.

Small rise in budget due CSI

BOISE — The College of Southern Idaho appears headed for a budget that is slightly larger than it had last year.

Late Thursday afternoon, members of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, the key legislative budget committee, voted to give CSI a 4.6 percent funding increase in addition to voting approval of operation and maintenance costs at last year's levels.

In response to passage of the 1 percent initiative, the committee has been holding marathon money sessions this year, seeking to cut funds wherever possible. Thursday's vote of support for CSI came only after a personal appearance by college president, Dr. James Taylor.

The general fund appropriation for CSI for fiscal year 1980, the committee said, should be $1,871,500. CSI funds from all sources total $4,759,600. The committee approved new funds totaling $55,200 for capital outlay expenditures.

"This is not the year to run to Boise and ask for the moon," Taylor said. "If anyone can live with this, we can live with it. We will run the same high class school as we always have."

Teen-agers escape

JAMESTOWN, R.I. (UPI) — Two teen-agers abducted at gunpoint as they left for school Thursday morning and held for $500,000 ransom escaped unharmed 12 hours later. Police arrested two suspects and were searching for a third.

One suspect, apparently distracted when the youths fled, was arrested hitchhiking on a nearby highway. A second was apprehended at an undisclosed location several hours later. A third was underway for the third man, identified as Alan R. Gormel, 42.

Nevada 29th to sign

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — Nevada has given final legislative approval to a resolution urging Congress to call a constitutional convention to require a balanced budget in the absence of a national emergency.

Wednesday's 31-9 vote by the state Assembly made Nevada the 29th state to adopt a similar resolution. Thirty-four must do so to convene the convention.

The Nevada resolution would limit the subject of the convention to the one constitutional amendment.

Bomb story banned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government Thursday night filed suit to block The Progressive magazine from publishing an article entitled, "How a Hydrogen Bomb Works."

The government said publication of the information could increase the number of nations able to build thermonuclear weapons.

Nuclear report

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — A cloud of radioactive material hung over the Los Angeles area for four days following a 1968 Nevada nuclear test but it probably wasn't hazardous to the health of residents, a newly declassified Federal study showed today.

The study, released by state Health Officer Dr. John Carr, also said southern Nevadans and residents of Utah received radiation levels higher than considered safe during the above-ground nuclear explosions in the 1950's at the Nevada Test Site, about 100 miles north of Las Vegas.

McClure responds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James McClure said Thursday he is not a "welder boy" for radical Arab nations as charged by Sen. Frank Church, but a promoter of a balanced U.S. policy toward the Mideast.

Church, the Idaho Democrat who is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, lashed out earlier this week at McClure and Rep. Steve Symms for carrying favor with Libya and other Arab nations.

Certificate rules

ONLY Times Service WASHINGTON — The Carter administration announced Thursday night new rules that will make less attractive the now-popular high-interest certificates being issued by commercial banks and savings and loan associations.

In a joint release, the nation's bank regulators said they were making the changes, effective March 15, "in further support of efforts to restrain inflation."

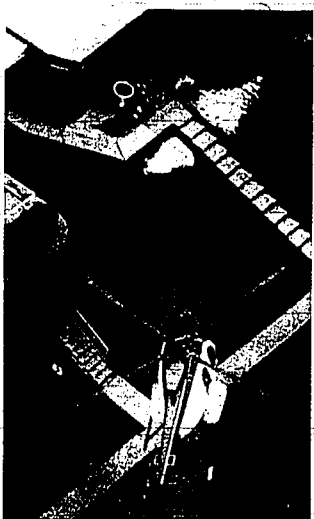

According to administration and regulatory officials, there are two reasons behind the decision: President Carter's economic advisers want to slow down housing construction, which is largely financed by savings institutions; and the bank regulators want to protect those institutions, whose profits have been squeezed by the so-called money market certificates.

Indochina charges

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Vietnam charged Thursday that retreating Chinese troops were laying waste to northern cities and said other battalions launched fresh border attacks on the 26th day of the Chinese invasion.

The official Vietnamese News Agency reported from Lang Son that the provincial capital — which fell to China a week ago — was "reduced to ruins and ashes" by continual shelling from retreating Chinese units.

"The town of Lang Son has remained under Chinese round-the-clock shelling since the night of March 5," said the agency report, monitored in Hong Kong.

Radiation search

A helicopter dispatched by the U.S. Department of Energy flies over Denver in an attempt to locate more radiation hotspots. Wednesday was the first day of actual searching by helicopter.

Kankakee flooding

By United Press International Floodwaters bearing ice floes "as big as a house" smashed and washed away homes along Kankakee River in Illinois Thursday and forced dozens of families to flee.

Floodwaters on ice-choked New England rivers gradually receded.

Sgt. Steve Rehnbub of the Will County Sheriff's Office described the Illinois flood as a Joliet: "One of the houses got hit by such a large chunk of ice we thought at first it had exploded."

He said, some of the ice floes were "as big as a house" and "shattered" homes as the river spilled 10 to 20 feet over its banks, carrying debris and wood.

Abortions fall

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The number of federally funded abortions dropped nearly 99 percent last year, and the author of legislation credited with bringing this about said Thursday he will try to make the restrictions even tougher.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., reacting to government reports of a dramatic reduction in Medicaid abortions, acknowledged his amendment "appears to be working where it is implemented."

But Hyde said he is concerned about the number of states continuing to finance abortions themselves.

French clash

DENAIN, France (UPI) — Steelworkers clashed with riot police Thursday and forced the government and steel mill owners to suspend plans to lay off thousands of workers.

The rioting workers won an additional victory when authorities, faced with the threat of even worse violence, ordered riot police to withdraw from the heart of the steel-producing town in northern France.

Spy ring cracked

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (UPI) — The West German government said Thursday the government had cracked a Communist spy ring involving nearly 50 people in what was termed the most serious blow to Eastern espionage in decades.

Chief Prosecutor Kurt Rebbmann said an East German secret police official defected, 12 suspected had been arrested, 12 had fled to escape arrest and 23 others were under investigation of the ring which was linked to East Germany.

Checking Soviets now harder task?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said Thursday the loss of electronic spy stations in Iran leaves "the United States unable to check Soviet compliance with the SALT II restrictions in the emerging SALT II treaty."

Jackson urged the administration to insist the treaty would contain this and other "verification" loopholes so Americans may "decide whether to accept the risks that the administration is inviting us to share."

His challenge, though not unexpected, underscores the problems President Carter will face when he submits a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty for Senate ratification.

Jackson, a defense expert and an outspoken critic of Soviet policies, will be a pivotal figure in any SALT II ratification debate and his views will prevail with many conservatives.

Meanwhile, trouble arose from the opposite quarter last Saturday. Three Senate liberals — Republican Mark Hatfield of Oregon and Democrats George McGovern of South Dakota and William Proxmire of Wisconsin — announced they might find it "difficult if not impossible" to support SALT II unless it means a genuine reduction rather than just a re-direction in strategic weapons.

Jackson, releasing excerpts of a speech he plans to deliver Friday morning to the Forum Club of Houston, made clear he will oppose or at least try to change any SALT treaty does not provide for full verification of Soviet compliance.

Rejecting the contrary assurances of administration officials, he said the loss of U.S. electronic listening posts in Iran, near the Soviet border, had done "irreparable harm for years to come" to U.S. surveillance capabilities.

Kerr-McGee manuals claimed inadequate

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A nuclear scientist, testifying in an $11.5 million lawsuit filed by survivors of Karen Silkwood, said Thursday that manuals for teaching safe handling of plutonium at a Kerr-McGee Corp. plant were inadequate and contained false information.

Dr. John Gofman, who helped develop the atomic bomb, testified he never saw the word "cancer" in Kerr-McGee's training manual for the Cimarron nuclear power facility near Crescent, Okla., where Ms. Silkwood was employed.

"If I were writing that manual, I'd have had the word 'cancer' on every page," Gofman told the six-member federal court jury.

Gofman, of San Francisco, was the trial's first witness. The lawsuit alleges Ms. Silkwood's contamination by plutonium, shortly before her death in a traffic crash in November 1974, resulted from negligence of Kerr-McGee where she worked.

Libya to slash petroleum sales

By United Press International Libya, the fourth largest exporter of oil to the United States, will slash petroleum sales by as much as 18 percent in a move that means less oil for Americans and higher world prices. London trade sources said Thursday.

Meanwhile, Allegheny Airlines, the Flying Tiger cargo line and West Germany's Lufthansa Airlines joined airlines announcing flight cancellations because of serious jet fuel shortages in the United States.

In Geneva, the International Air Transport Association said about 60 airlines would meet at the end of March to discuss possible hikes in passenger fares and freight rates because of escalating fuel costs.

United, American, and Trans World Airlines already have proposed fares boosts to offset higher fuel bills.

Congress rejects bills on Taiwan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House and Senate Thursday both rejected amendments declaring that an attack on Taiwan would be a threat to American security, and the House refused to give the island government diplomatic status.

All the votes were victories for the Carter administration, which does not want anything added to its Taiwan legislation that would antagonize Peking.

In the House, the administration won a clear victory when members rejected, on a 221-149 vote, an amendment offered by Rep. Ken Kramer, R-Colo., saying the United States would act if Taiwan were attacked.

By a smaller margin, 181-172, the House rejected an amendment that would have set up an American liaison office in Taipei instead of a corporate institute.

Crackdown threatened after February report shows prices soaring

By JAMES HILDRETH
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale prices, led by food and gasoline, soared for the sixth consecutive month in February, prompting the administration Thursday to crack down on big and small companies that are violating anti-inflation standards.

Wholesale prices, which offer an advance look at future consumer costs, surged by 1 percent last month — a compounded annual rate of 12.7 percent. The February rise was only slightly less than January's 1.3 percent, the biggest in more than four years.

The new price report from the Labor Department offered additional evidence inflation is maintaining a tight grip on Americans' wallets — with no relief in sight.

"There is a backlog of bad news down the road" for consumers, Labor Department economist John Early commented.

A few hours after the inflation statistics were made public, the Council on Wage and Price Stability announced it has "intensified its price monitoring effort" of the nation's businesses.

Alfred Kahn, the council chairman, called the early 1979 price performance "disturbing." He also announced a new series of actions aimed at inducing companies to comply with the voluntary price guideline. They included: —For the first time, asking all companies dealing in industries "where inflation has been most severe" to file reports on their price actions during the six months President Carter's program has been in effect. Previously, just firms with sales in excess of $250 million were required to file such data.

—The council will notify "several firms" within the next 10 days they are not in compliance. All such firms will be publicly identified unless they can talk the council out of it within the following 10 days.

—Kahn will meet with "major business leaders" next week "to discuss the price situation."

"Most of the wage settlement since the anti-inflation program went into effect have been relatively moderate," Kahn said. "Success in the anti-inflation program will require more than just labor's adherence to these standards — wage moderation alone will not do the job."

The wholesale price index stood at 207.4 in February, meaning goods and services priced at $100 in 1967 cost $207.40 last month.

The Labor Department's wholesale price report for February again cast food as the main culprit in the steep climb.

Conglomerates under fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy, the chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and a Navy admiral Thursday strongly opposed conglomerate mergers, charging they put too much political power in the hands of a few corporate giants.

Opening Senate Judiciary Committee hearings on legislation to stop conglomerate mergers, Kennedy

D-Mass., the committee chairman, said the 500 largest American companies now control more than four-fifths of U.S. manufacturing assets.

Although antitrust laws can stop mergers that restrict competition within an industry, they have failed to stop conglomerate mergers, Kennedy said, allowing the biggest companies to branch into a variety of unrelated activities.

Tale of man found innocent of raping wife

By ROGER SIMON

Chicago Sun-Times
 CHICAGO — The night before he was to get the verdict on charges that he sexually abused and attempted to rape his own wife, Philip Sumida went to a party.
 "It was a going-away party for me," he said. "My friends told me I was going to jail."
 But he isn't. Instead, on Wednesday, he was fined $65.
 The judge ruled that his wife had failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Philip had thrown her on the floor, forced her to commit sexual acts, ripped off her pants and attempted to sexually penetrate her.
 One of his wife's attorneys put the verdict this way: "The judge said that if you are going to rape your wife, it's best not to do it in front of witnesses. That's what he told the men of this country."
 Philip's attorney said this: "The feminists tried to get him and they blew it. They wanted to make him a symbol and they failed."
 The $65 fine was levied because Philip was in his wife's home even though the judge had forbidden him to enter it. The case took about four months to get to trial and about four minutes to announce the verdict.
 Husband-and-wife stood nervous, but quietly, before the judge and both seemed a little stunned when it was over.
 The Sumida case was unusual because in Illinois, as in 45 other states, the law does not recognize the possibility of a husband raping—or attempting to rape—his wife.

 Under Illinois law, if you physically force your wife to have sex with you, you may have marital problems, but not legal ones.
 You cannot, however, use your wife as a punching bag. It is still a crime to assault or batter your wife.
 So the case of Marjorie Sumida vs. Philip Sumida was a civil one. Marjorie claimed that Philip had beaten her for a long time, starting shortly after the birth of their first baby.
 "He beat me repeatedly," she said. "He knocked me down and kicked me in the stomach with his shoes on. It went on for years."
 Philip denied it. "Except for one time, when I slapped her, I have never beat her," he said. "My wife has become a women's-liberation-type person. All these charges are untrue. This is a conspiracy of women against men."
 Marjorie left Philip many times. They had known each other since they were 13 and they had gotten married when she was 18 and he was 19.
 Now, they are 30 and 31, have four children, a divorce well along the way and a lot of problems.
 In May, 1978, Judge Charles J. Fleck Jr. had forbidden both of them from "striking, harassing or interfering with one another's personal liberty." Later, he evicted Philip from the home for a two-week period.
 During that period, on Oct. 5, Marjorie claimed that Philip snuck into the home through a basement window, prevented her from calling the police, kissed her, bit her and otherwise forced her to submit to sex acts, tore off her pants and attempted to rape her, not once but a number of times.

 Philip told a different story. He said that Marjorie had invited him over and that he knocked and entered through the back door. He said that his wife was happy to see him, that she kissed and hugged him voluntarily and that he did not attempt to have intercourse with her against her wishes nor did he tear her clothes off.
 Marjorie claimed that Philip's alleged attack on her constituted a violation of both the judges' orders—that he shouldn't physically abuse her and that he shouldn't be in the house. She wanted him found in contempt of court. She was hoping he would be sent to jail on a work-release program where he would be free in the daytime, but would return to jail at night.
 Wednesday, Judge Fleck found that there was not sufficient evidence of the first charge, but that Philip was guilty of being in the home on Oct. 5 in contempt of the judge's order. Judge Fleck figured that a fine would take care of it, even though he could have sent Philip to jail for six months.
 Marjorie was visibly shaken as the judge spoke the words. "My husband abused me," she said afterwards, fighting for control. "He tried to rape me. And all it was worth was a $65 fine."
 Philip, needless to say, was a lot happier. "I'm willing to pay the $65," he said. "No problem. My wife was conditioned to do this. She was in a strange state. She was heavily influenced by the feminists."
 Philip's lawyer became almost as important a figure during the trial as Philip. His name is Leonard Timpane and he said: "The women were looking to convict him. This is going to hurt them. They wanted to make a big case, a big example out of him. They wanted to get him. Now they'll try for someone else."

 Timpane's legal style is aggressive, loud and sarcastic. He handles only divorce cases and only men. After a session in court with him, the other side sometimes feels like they've been mugged.
 "I'm an animal," he said Wednesday. "I admit it. It's a sickness with me. I could have taken the case against my client and won. Yes! I could have sent Philip away. You bet—that's how good I am. But don't get me wrong. The guy's innocent."
 Marjorie's chief attorney, Kathleen Flaherty, is a quiet, careful attorney, who presented a detailed case. "We made legal history just getting the case to court," she said resignedly Wednesday.
 "We got this kind of case out from behind closed doors. Sure this will discourage some women, but women are used to being discouraged. This is just the first step. There will be more to come."
 Marjorie, herself, sat on a little bench outside the courtroom while her friends tried to console her. She said she was going to try and help battered women, but she had some strong words on the charge that she was part of a feminist conspiracy.
 "I am not even sure what a feminist is," she said. "I have never been part of the feminist movement."
 "I am just an ordinary housewife with four children. A housewife who was beaten and abused for years. I did this to try and get out of the hell I was living in."
 Philip buttoned his coat and walked out of court. "I'm still all for marriage," he said. "I think it's a great institution."

Challis' isolation led to blunder

The half wild area on the East Fork of the Salmon River near Challis is a long distance from Twin Falls, not to mention Washington, D.C.

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management bungled in its handling of the Challis grazing unit just because of that great distance.

Officials in Washington, single-tracked on restoring the natural habitat, couldn't hear the warnings of ranchers and Challis BLM employees transmitted over the long distance phones and the written memos.

Idahoans, at least, should not let the disaster worsen because of their distance from the isolated valley in Central Idaho. A solution is yet to be found, but statewide attention and concern can help.

It will help because the Challis unit is the first in the nation to come under a new BLM management program.

Congress specifically wrote Idaho's Challis area into the Public Rangelands Act mandating the new program, and high officials from Sen. Frank Church to Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus to Gov. John Evans have taken a hand.

Eyes are focused on Challis as the forerunner of future management of grazing lands which also have native habitat and wildlife in the rest of the country.

Unfortunately, the rest of the country will benefit from a mistake made in Idaho.

In the short space of time since last fall, when the BLM announced grazing reductions averaging 40 percent for 37 Challis area ranchers, rapid land speculation by mostly out-of-state developers has intruded for the first time.

 Two ranchers on the East Fork have sold out because of sharp cuts in grazing allotments. A Lake Tahoe, Calif., developer proceeded to chop the land into lots, doubling his money. Some of those parcels have changed hands five times while further tripling in value.

BLM officials say the now inevitable development of the East Fork area will cause more harm to wildlife and native habitat than continued ranching would have.

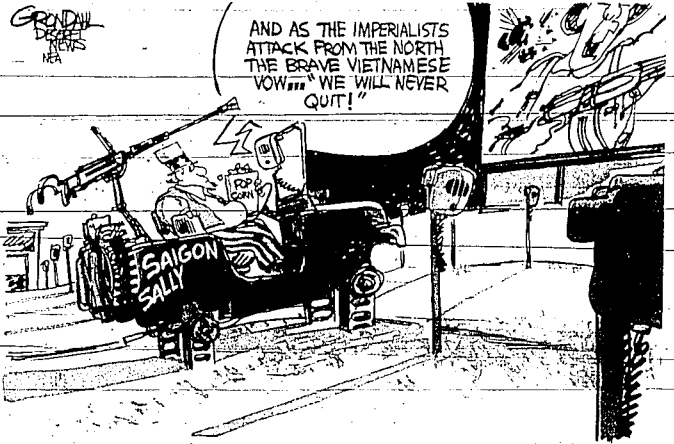

The start-up of the management program for the Challis unit was met with great fanfare and optimism last year. But the scene was already set for a come-down.

Idaho BLM officials predicted in 1975 the sale of ranches to developers would happen. And in a 1977 environmental impact statement, Challis BLM people wrote: "The demand for recreation property in Custer County coupled with adverse impact to livestock income may pressure livestock operators along the East Fork of the Salmon River to sell their properties to developers."

Washington officials chose not to believe. They had their directive, and not being a part of the scene, they did not think seriously about the implications for an isolated valley in far Idaho.

Bighorn sheep graze in the East Fork area, salmon spawn in the river and other wildlife share the place with livestock. The scenery is some of Idaho's best.

The grazing land needed restoration, but immediate heavy cutbacks have now brought a worse problem.

Stopping the con con steamroller

By MARTHA ANGLE and WALTER WALTERS
 WASHINGTON — It may be a case of too little too late, but opponents of a constitutional amendment to require a balanced federal budget — including the White House — are finally beginning to mobilize.

The immediate objective is to slow the stampede of state legislatures demanding Congress call a constitutional convention to write a balanced budget amendment.
 At least 26 states, by most counts, have already petitioned Congress to call a "con con." If eight more join them, a convention theoretically must be called — although there is a good deal of dispute about the validity of some of the existing petitions.

President Carter has publicly opposed the amendment drive, but his White House staff is just now starting to seek ways of dissuading more state legislatures from acting.
 Cabinet Secretary Jack Watson, who is in charge of intergovernmental relations, and political aide Anne Wexler, in charge of liaison with outside groups, are at the core of the staff group grappling with the problem.

"We haven't decided on a strategy yet," one White House source said. "We've got to be very careful that the president isn't perceived as opposing a balanced budget when he's been the foremost advocate of one for so long."
 "This amendment business is hard to stop. It's a visceral thing. People don't want to be confused by facts. In the early days, nobody took the amendment drive seriously. Now the momentum has built up to the point where it may be impossible to stop."

Technically, the president has absolutely no say in the constitutional amendment process. Only Congress and the state legislatures play a role. Yet both Carter and his wife haven't hesitated to use their moral influence on behalf of the Equal Rights Amendment, in some instances actually telephoning key legislators in states which have not ratified the ERA.

Carter apparently won't go that far in trying to block a balanced budget amendment for fear that voters might misinterpret his opposition.

Other groups, however, are belatedly moving into the fray. AFL-CIO President George Meany last week sent a letter to every state federation urging union officials to launch an educational campaign aimed at deterring further "con con" petitions.

The Coalition of American Public Employees, which includes groups ranging from the National Association of Social Workers to the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, is likewise organizing.
 And Common Cause last week asked its state offices across the country to lobby for more thorough, cautious consideration of the entire issue.

That suggestion, at least, is well taken. As Common Cause President David Cohen noted, in his memo to state chairmen, in all too many states "the legislative process for considering the balanced budget resolution has been shockingly irresponsible—and has failed to meet even minimum standards of accountability."

A few examples prove Cohen's point. Public hearings on the budget resolution were held in only six of the 26 states which have passed it. Written committee reports were prepared in only six states. Recorded floor votes in both houses were taken in only 12 states — less than half.

That is a pretty shoddy performance on the part of state legislatures when the stakes are so high. There has only been one constitutional convention — the original one of 1787 — in the entire history of the nation.

To force another one, in such a casual, slap-dash fashion, is the height of recklessness. With or without cautionary pressure from the White House, the remaining states have a responsibility to look before they leap into this particular bandwagon.

Berry's World
 By R.H.C. STEED
 Daily Telegraph, London

All too frequently, when writing editorials, I have found myself criticizing President Carter—for being weak and vacillating, for preaching too much and acting too little, for not giving the free world the confidence-inspiring leadership it so desperately needs. Nor am I alone. Such complaints are widespread throughout Europe.
 The impression may even be given that these strictures are delivered not only presumptuously, but with a kind of perverse relish. Quite the contrary. So far as I am concerned, they are offered with a sense of deep unease. The safety and freedom of the democracies depend on Carter's getting it right.
 Yet at the same time they are offered with a putty feeling that every complaint ought to be accompanied by an apology for Europe's not pulling her weight; for leaving him carrying not one baby, but a whole creche; for making his efforts for the common good incomparably more difficult.
 Britain is a case in point. While still depending for her existence on worldwide trade and communications she has almost totally withdrawn from worldwide commitments. Even her contribution to NATO is falling ever farther below par. Now she is tearing herself apart in an industrial civil war and devolution games.
 Many things have shaken Europe's confidence in Carter. High among them is his continued support for the fatuous Ambassador to the U.N. Andy Young, who considered

"This is ANOTHER line mess you've gotten us into!"

U.S. foreign policy worries Europe

Cuba's invasion of Angola "stabilizing" and is unworried by the Soviet Union's subsequent grabbing of strategic areas around the globe, because she will eventually "burn her fingers."

The Europeans, especially the ex-colonial powers, who know the score, are aghast. Yet, apart to some extent from France and from Belgium's brief rescue operation in Zaire, they keep well away from individual or combined action, and are rapidly shedding the necessary military means.

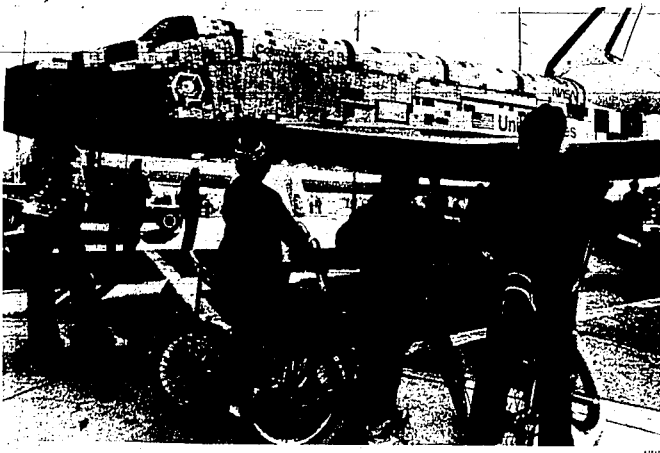

One could go on. Most serious of all, however, are the long-standing European misgivings because of the United States superpower relationship with the Soviet Union, presumably soon to be reinforced by the SALT II nuclear arms agreement that Carter so desperately seeks. Europeans fear that he will "to some extent sacrifice her regional nuclear interests for the sake of an agreement, on which her defense ultimately depends. Yet, perversely, for the sake of a "détente," which few really believe in now, Europe also clamors for a SALT agreement, even on the present disavowed terms. She would then blame Carter for letting it go down."
 The nuclear problem has, for many years been the basic cause of most Euro-American friction. The seeds were sown when Europe took it for granted that America's nuclear weapons would remain vastly superior to the Soviets and would always compensate for NATO's chronic conventional inferiority. From the start there were insoluble problems about what share Europe should have in nuclear control. Now the Soviet Union has not only increased her conventional superiority—NATO has now even lost its qualitative lead—but also caught up with the United States in nuclear weapons.

By the early '80s, Russia will have attained such a clear superiority in land-based missiles — which are of unique importance when the stakes are so high. There has only been one constitutional convention — the original one of 1787 — in the entire history of the nation.

Boys in Lancaster, Calif., watch space shuttle orbiter "Columbia" roll by Space shuttle journeying to Florida

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — The space shuttle Columbia, which will fly men into space and land them at an airport, began its journey to Cape Canaveral, Fla., Thursday — a 38-mile snail's-pace crawl from factory to airstrip.

The 12-foot space ship will make its first manned orbital flight later this year.

Partly covered with heat-resistant black and white tiles, the craft was hauled from the Rockwell International assembly plant at Palmdale aboard a tractor-trailer rig especially designed for the job.

The mating process to attach the Shuttle to the back of the jumbo jet began Thursday afternoon and the operation was completed at about midnight PST, a spokesman for Dryden Space Flight Center said.

"We'll be working around the clock," he added.

The shuttle and jet were scheduled for a 30-minute test flight around the base today, before the first hop on their piggyback trip east.

The tandem craft wags to land at El Paso, Texas, for refueling, and then fly to San Antonio, Texas, for an overnight stay before proceeding on to Florida.

Voyager findings analyzed

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — A preliminary look at Jupiter's orange moon Io suggests it has been "cooked and steamed," depositing salts and sulfur on its ragged surface, a project Voyager geologist said Thursday.

"We are seeing a surface that has been heated from the interior and put into solution, water being the vehicle," said Dr. Laurence Soderblom. "It has very curious patterns, difficult to explain. Trying to read the topography is next to impossible, it's so bizarre."

The surface of the orange-colored moon was particularly puzzling, he said, because of the lack of impact craters from meteorites which indicated a dynamic process that cleaned the surface. He said there is evidence of volcanic activity on the satellite.

Thirteen project scientists outlined their findings so far from Voyager 1's spectacularly successful Jupiter encounter and confessed they were buried under a "mountain of data," much of it still puzzling.

"We've had a decade worth of science in the last two weeks," said project scientist Edward Stone at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory news conference. "We will be studying it for the next five years."

Voyager 1, which passed by Jupiter and its moons Monday and Tuesday, was 2.5 million miles beyond Jupiter Thursday, speeding toward an encounter with Saturn on Nov. 12, 1980.

Lee Marvin's exhaustion becomes new issue in trial

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The attorney for Lee Marvin sought to show Thursday that on many occasions when the actor was with Michelle Marvin he was so exhausted by his "physical" acting roles that he returned home at night too tired to do anything but eat and go to sleep.

Marvin Mitchelson, Miss Marvin's attorney, objected, saying that most actors worked hard and it was "ridiculous and chauvinistic, if not worse" to imply that Marvin was so married to his work that Michelle's companionship mattered very little.

But Marvin's attorney, David Kagon, replied that Marvin, indeed, had highly physical roles in almost all his movies and at the end of the day he was so exhausted that he had little desire to do anything but rest.

The 55-year-old Oscar-winning Marvin testified at the property settlement trial brought by his one-time live-in companion to give his version of their six-year relationship.

Marvin said that after Michelle moved into his beach house in early 1965 he made many trips to film festivals in London, Germany and France, to a White House dinner for Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and to a presentation to him of the "Iron Mike," the Marine Corps' highest civilian award. He said Miss Marvin accompanied him on none of these trips.

The actor said when he was preparing for his role in "The Professionals," he spent hours reading books about the Mexican American War and thinking about his role while Miss Marvin three or four times a week drove from the beach house in Malibu to Los Angeles and occasionally stayed overnight with her mother and father or friends.

Marvin said they ate out three or four times a week. He said that occasionally she cooked the breakfast and occasionally he cooked.

The type of tactics Miss Marvin used to try to get Marvin to cut down on his drinking near the end of their relationship could have led the actor to drink even more, a doctor testified earlier.

Dr. Jokichi Takamine, an internist and specialist on alcoholism problems, was called as a witness by Marvin's attorney to counter Michelle's claim that she tried to help Marvin with his "alcohol problem" in the late 1960s.

Dr. Takamine said he had never met either Marvin or his former live-in companion and knew nothing about their relationship but that his long experience with problem drinkers had shown that certain behavior on the part of a non-drinker could be "counter-productive."

Rape charges wrong way to deal with marital assault

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The attorney who successfully defended a married man against raping his wife said women should not be subjected by their husbands to forced intercourse, but "there has to be a better way" of dealing with such situations than charging the men with rape.

Attorney Charles Burt, who defended John Rideout, 21, a Salem cook, against a charge of raping his wife, Greta, appeared at a Multnomah County Bar Association meeting with Marion County District Attorney Gary Gortmaker.

Burt said three approaches have developed over Oregon's marital rape law since the Marion County Circuit Court trial in December, which resulted in Rideout's acquittal.

He said one favors making no changes in the law to "see what the courts will do." A second, he said, favors making rape a possible charge only if the married couple is separated.

Burt said he favored a third approach that would have men or women prosecuted for marital assault for instances of violence, including forcible intercourse.

Both Burt and Gortmaker said they were surprised at the attention media paid to the case.

"Before I got into this case," Gortmaker said, "I thought that basketball was the leading indoor team sport."

Breathing may pause during sleep

BOSTON (UPI) — It is apparently normal for men to stop breathing for short periods of time while they sleep, according to a new study on sleep patterns.

The phenomenon, known as apnea, was observed in test subjects on an average of five times a night by a team of doctors at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Gainesville, Fla.

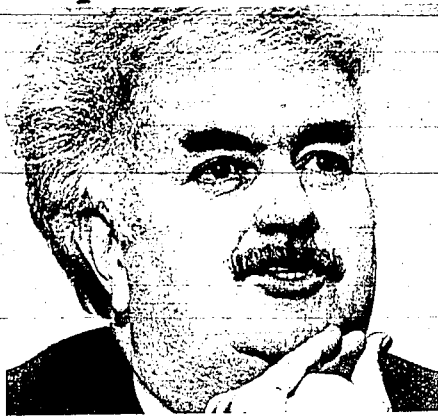

Results of the six-month study indicated the condition is much more common in men than in women. The report was published Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Dr. C.A. Jay-Block conducted the six-month study that recorded night-time events in 49 volunteers.

"Wives who see their husbands stop breathing in the middle of a snore, don't need to run to the doctor," Block said. "Those people have sleep apnea, but it's apparently normal."

The irregular breathing associated with apnea cuts the amount of oxygen in the sleeper's blood stream, Block said in an interview. In most people, episodes last only a few seconds and the drop in oxygen has little or no effect.

Captain Kangaroo says hands off TV ads

Robert Keeshan talks at FTC hearings

By MICHAEL J. CONLON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert Keeshan, TV's "Captain Kangaroo," told the Federal Trade Commission Thursday it should keep its hands off children's TV ads because controlling what youngsters see is the job of parents, not the government.

Besides, Keeshan said, his 25-year-old show would probably be one of the first to be driven off the air if the FTC banned commercials on programs aimed at very young children.

"Parenting is the cornerstone, the foundation of our society," Keeshan said. "It saddens me to see more government in the living room... When a child in the supermarket grabs a box of cookies or cereal from the shelf, it is not for the mother to cringe and shout, 'Oh, no! Television made me buy that.' Her answer is a simple 'no' — and that matter is between parent and child."

Keeshan said he would like to see the FTC's hearing into children's TV advertising. "Parenting is a non-transferable responsibility."

University of North Carolina School of Medicine, reported Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine, indicates it is unlikely a vaccine could completely prevent infections from the virus.

New owners operate Snelling office

BARBARA MacNEIL
...now a partner

DWAINE ANDERSON
...franchise co-owner

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls office of the national employment firm of Snelling and Snelling is now under new ownership.

Barbara MacNeil and Dwaine Anderson, who have been associated with the Twin Falls office for several months, have formed a partnership to purchase the local franchise.

Former owners, Chester and Linda Bohannon, are relocating in Oregon.

Anderson joined Snelling and Snelling eight months ago as an employment counselor and has 18 years experience in personnel work. He spent 14 years in the U. S. Army in personnel assignments and four years in private industry in the same field. He is a native of Cassia County and has lived in Magic Valley all of his life with the exception of his service in the military.

MacNeil has 15 years experience in secretarial work, teaching and nursing. She is currently president of the Twin-Ida chapter, of the National Secretary Association (International). She has also served as treasurer of the chapter. Ms. MacNeil joined Snelling and Snelling four months ago and has been specializing in office, secretarial and clerical jobs while Anderson specializes in sales and mid-management positions.

He said the facilities at 1033 Shoshone St. N. include private offices where employers may come to interview prospective employees. Snelling and Snelling also provides a professional resume service for persons seeking to better their employment. There are four members on the present Snelling and Snelling staff in Twin Falls.

The new owners will increase office hours to better serve people.

Inn becomes Alpenrose

KETCHUM — In April, Ketchum's Holiday Inn on Saddle Road, will become "The Alpenrose."

Norman and Judy Fuller, who live in California and maintain a Sun Valley address, plan to finalize the sale on April 2. The purchase price is not being released. Now in escrow, the Holiday Inn is owned by Fraser Mortgage Co. of Cleveland, Ohio. Fraser also owns the Holiday Inn in Twin Falls, along with eight others in the East and Midwest.

The Inn has been in operation since the early 1970s and has drawn criticism over the years for the size of its sign and exterior design. The hotel no longer will be a Holiday Inn after the sale is completed.

Fuller said he is assessing the amount of advanced bookings with the present management in order to plan for the renovation of the facility.

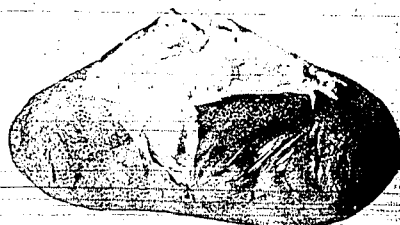

"We're presently planning on turning it into a Bavarian or Alpine type of structural appearance. We're looking at commencing with the exterior and some of the interior work right after the escrow closing. We'd then proceed during the slack period into July with most of the external facade work, and carry out some of the major changes that we'll be planning on in the fall slack period," he said.

Fuller said the work might require some kind of temporary closing.

Jerry Note, the current manager of the Holiday Inn, said he plans to continue his employment with Fraser Mortgage Co. following the sale.

What's what

Just because a man is a minus a right arm doesn't mean that he can't steal watermelons

What's so special about the girl with a naturally exquisite voice who cuts a hit record? Or the chess prodigy who grows up to gain championships? Or the talented toastmaster who wins an election? They work their gifts, true, and that's good. But what of the rarer folk—those who override the obstacles to success? This comes to mind because of a letter at hand from a southern client who said he lost his right arm in a tractor accident at age 3, but nonetheless became the best watermelon thief in the county. Remarkable! Here's to the one-armed watermelon thief!

Every twentieth little girl who sits on the lap of a department store Santa Claus during the holiday season says she wants a baby brother for Christmas.

Not everything has gone up. Bananas 100 years ago in Boston cost 51 a piece.

STAR CLUB

The death of Elvis Presley must have been particularly significant to Woody Allen, Carroll Baker, Carol Burnett, Steve Lawrence, Carol Lammery, Johnny Mathis and Lee Remick. They, too, were born in 1933. It's a star club, sort of. The one that blazed most brightly burned out first.

Seven percent of the Protestant clergy nationwide moonlight on jobs unrelated to the ministry. That would be expected. What wasn't expected—by those moonlighting ministers, at least—was that on the average they lost more money than they made because of the taxes they faced when they used their cars for business.

SHORT TEMPER

It has been claimed repeatedly that short men tend to lose their tempers more readily than do tall men. Client asks if this is true. Don't know, don't know. Do know, however, that the belief is widespread. So widespread it has popularized an ancient aphorism. Namely: The smaller the pot, the more quickly it boils.

Was a time in Burma when cats therein were regarded so highly that only the exceedingly-rich-could-afford-them, and those Burmese cats each had its own servant.

Mentioned that a 10-pound raccoon can crawl through a 3½-inch hole. But failed to report that a 10½-pound fox can do likewise.

Land board members favor Center plan

By DOUG TULLIS
Times-News writer
GOODING — Two members of the Idaho State Land Board approve of a plan to "sell" most of the lands surrounding the former state tuberculosis hospital in Gooding.

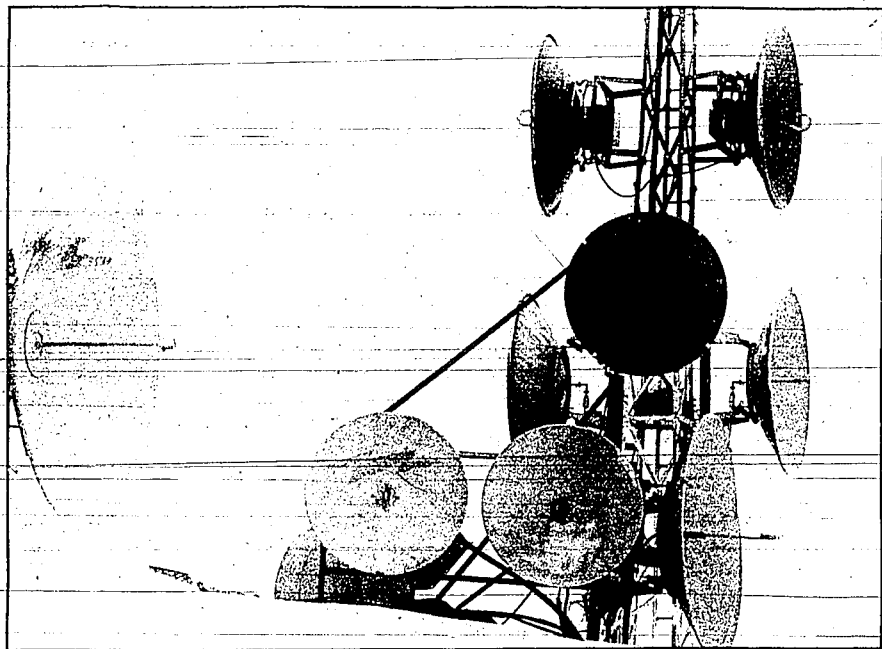

The two land board members, Secretary of State Pete Conrussa and State Treasurer Joe R. Williams, Thursday expressed their approval of a plan proposed by the alcohol treatment center now housed in the old hospital buildings. That plan is to demolish the two older buildings and sell all but six acres of the land at a public auction. The main building and the six acres would be retained by the state and leased to the Southern Idaho Alcohol Treatment and Training Center.

Williams and Conrussa, along with Gov. John Evans, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans and Attorney General David Leroy, make up the land board, which has control over the disposition of surplus state property.

"I'm becoming more and more convinced that the Center's plan is the way to go," Williams told those assembled at an informal hearing in Gooding Thursday.

The two men listened to comments from Center officials and those interested in the disposition of the buildings and land and then toured the site. After examining the two older wood frame structures, both men said they favored the plan to raze the older buildings.

Bob DeLashmott/Times-News

A new transmitter, to broadcast Idaho public TV, will join these on Flat Top Butte east of Jerome

KAID transmitter awaits grant OK

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer
JEROME — Most residents in the five North Valley counties may be able to watch Boise public television station KAID by next summer.

Jack Schaeffe, KAID station manager, said Magic Valley is first on its list of 32 Idaho sites for a signal translator.

The necessary equipment making that signal available would be added to its antenna already on Flat Top Butte east of Jerome.

Schaeffe said installing the translator and additional antennas could take place this year, possibly in late summer or fall.

The installation is contingent upon the station getting approval from the national Telecommunications Information Agency in Washington, D.C., for a 75 percent matching grant, Schaeffe said, to cover the total project cost of $274,000.

The additional equipment out at Flat Top Butte would cost $6,700 of that total. The state share of the costs was appropriated by the Idaho Legislature during the 1978 session.

Schaeffe said the equipment changes would eliminate signal interference problems that KAID now has in the Magic Valley.

A channel 4 translator located on Mt. Baldy in Ketchum makes it virtually impossible for most valley residents to receive a clear picture.

The station manager said the signal would be rebroadcast on channel 65, originating from Hagerman, to eliminate the signal interference problem.

Additional directional antennas would be attached to the existing tower to provide better signal transmission to the "back side" of the valley, he said. This would mean a better signal would be sent to the communities and rural areas near Shoshone, Dietrich, Richfield and Hazelton. Other Magic Valley communities that will receive the rebroadcast signals if a translator is installed are Twin Falls, Jerome, Filer, Kimberly, Hansen and the surrounding rural areas.

The new antennas might not be as effective for communities notorious for poor signal reception because of their location, Schaeffe said. He explained that people in and around Shoshone and Hazelton not on cable TV might find the rebroadcast signal only marginal because of the lay of the land between the tower and the communities. Shoshone drops in behind Notch Butte while there is another butte between the Flat Top Butte and Hazelton.

Schaeffe said the Magic Valley communities rank at the top of the priority list because a translator here could bring in more viewers than any other Idaho location.

He said the station has until May 13 to apply for the federal funds, but a reply from Washington might not be given before October.

However, Schaeffe said the NTIA has said signal expansion is its No. 1 priority and that will be considered when the grant applications are being reviewed.

"At the present time, we feel KAID-TV programs reach about 69 percent of the people in Idaho, and with the completion of the translator system they will be available to 96 percent of Idaho people."

He said the programming will be especially beneficial to school systems, such as smaller districts which can use the shows at little cost to broaden their visual programming.

Areas now receiving direct broadcasts from other television stations won't receive KAID programming because of Federal Communications Commission regulations.

Justamere Inn project acquires needed parking

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The historic Justamere Inn in Twin Falls will be preserved as a converted office building after all, with the purchase by its owner of space to meet parking requirements.

Twin Falls attorney Kent Taylor's plan to convert the Justamere Inn from residential use to professional offices was approved by the Planning and Zoning Commission last month.

After Taylor told the commission the historic building would have to be razed if not converted soon to offices, the commission decided Taylor's plan deserved special consideration because it involved a historic building. The commission allowed Taylor to proceed even though his plans called for 19 fewer parking spaces than required by the city zoning ordinance. The city council reviewed the commission's decision to relax city parking requirements on the grounds that it set a dangerous precedent.

Fearing a reversal of the commission's decision, Taylor set out to find more parking for his potential tenants.

In the meantime, despite the impending council review, Taylor's crews began work on the building on the strength of a building permit incorrectly issued by building inspector Darrell Howard.

Building permits are not supposed to be issued until approval has been received from all appropriate governing bodies. Howard's permit was issued after an appeal of the commission's decision was made to the council by the city administration and before the council reached a decision. Taylor has now acquired three additional lots, including the site of the Carillon building. Taylor said the building will be razed to make room for more cars.

Taylor's acquisitions brought his parking space total to 70, nine more than the ordinance requires.

Taylor told the council this week he thinks the parking requirements are too stiff for his type of low-traffic professional office development.

He asked the council to review the requirement and said, "If you stick to the code, it's going to necessitate the demolition of certain historical buildings to meet the requirements."

Since Taylor had met the requirements, the ordinance and no longer needed a zoning variance, the council voted to overturn the commission decision.

New stoplight on

TWIN FALLS — At 9:30 a.m. today the Idaho Department of Highways will turn on the new stoplight at the corner of Washington Street and South Park Avenue.

Plane lands safely

HAILEY — The pilot and his passenger escaped injury when the landing gear on a twin engine Cessna collapsed upon landing at Friedman Memorial Airport about 5:40 p.m. Wednesday.

The plane, owned by an Ohio company, received an estimated $4,000 to $5,000 damage. The pilot, Charles Ferries of Sun Valley, was taking lessons from instructor Orin Day of Kettering, Ohio, the only passenger.

Enclosed baggage pickup facility to be built at Twin Falls airport

TWIN FALLS — An enclosed, weatherproof, baggage-pickup facility will be built at the Twin Falls City-County Airport.

The facility will be added to the east side of the existing airport terminal and will include a large waiting area and an adjacent corridor by which the baggage carts can enter and leave the terminal.

The baggage carts will enter their corridor through roll-up doors, which will be closed as soon as the carts have entered.

Motorists using the intersection should exercise a little more than the usual amount of caution for the next few days.

Since Washington Street has always been an unregulated street and a state highway as well, drivers should be on the lookout for other motorists who may not be aware of the new stoplight.

Ferries had 17 hours flight time in the plane, and was practicing short field landings.

The corridor will be separated from the waiting area by sliding doors, which will be opened only after the outside doors have been closed.

The baggage will be deposited on a metal slide similar to the one used now, and then the sliding door will close and the carts will leave.

In approving the new facility Monday, the Twin Falls City Council chose the least expensive of the five plans presented by architect Harold

Potato firm curtails contracts

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley's third largest potato contractor will cut its contracted potato acreage by roughly one-third this year.

Idaho Frozen Foods contract manager Gary Bliok, calling his company's contract cuts "fairly drastic," said Idaho Frozen will keep overall acreage at 1978 levels but will buy more potatoes on the open market this year.

No final 1979 acre figures have been fixed, but "there will be quite a little cut," Bliok said.

Idaho Frozen contracts all of its acreage between Rupert and Mountain Home, and contracts more Magic Valley acreage than any other firm except J.R. Simplot and Ore-Ida Co.

Simplot field Director Tom Ruty said his firm's contract level hasn't been established yet, and Ore-Ida officials couldn't be reached for comment.

Bliok said Idaho Frozen Food's production, which will become official when contract offers are made March 19, will bring the company's total contracted acres to about 6,600, compared to the 10,000 acres signed up in 1978. Bliok said the cuts are the result of two previous years of unusually high potato yields, which prevented the company from buying in the open market.

While Idaho Frozen expected to get 3 million hundredweight from its contracts last year, it ended up with 4 million, Bliok said.

He said Idaho Frozen prefers to get 35 percent of its potatoes through open sales, but with last year's bumper yields, the company ended up buying 50 percent of its needs through contracts, leaving only 10 percent for open sales.

Overall 1978 Magic Valley yields were 30 percent above normal, according to Minidoka County Agricultural Extension Agent Brent Smith. Smith said the contract acreage could hurt growers if potato prices stay at current low levels.

Skiflation ruling ready

WASHINGTON — U.S. Forest Service executive officials in Washington have ruled on the Skiflation Committee's appeal of this season's lift rate increases at the Sun Valley resort.

The final appeal decision, however, will not be released by the Forest Service for several days.

A U.S. Forest Service spokesman said Thursday the decision has been made and simply awaits final reading and signature by the Forest Service's deputy chief, Thomas Nelson.

"It's before him at the moment, and when that comes up on his schedule, he'll be looking at it," Forest Service spokesman Fred Trevis said. "I really can't predict when that will occur, but it should be very soon."

Nelson could not be reached for comment.

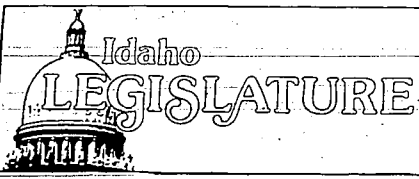

The Skiflation Committee's appeal was heard in November 1977 by the Forest Service's assistant deputy chief, F. Leroy Bond. Bond, however, retired from the Forest Service in November and the decision was delayed.

The Ketchum-based Skiflation Committee seeks a rollback of the 1977-78 ski lift prices. At present, Forest Service officials earlier approved an increase from $13 to $16 per day pass.

Sawtooth Forest Service's Ed Forner heard the original Skiflation appeal last fall. Forner approved 16 of 23 price increases requested by the Sun Valley Co. and Forest Service regional officers in October and his decision.

If Nelson denies the Skiflation Committee's appeal, then the only remaining course of action for the group would be to take the issue to court.

State spending lid rejected

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

BOISE — Calling the attempt well meaning but unrealistic, Idaho representatives Thursday killed a move to lock a constitutional ceiling on state spending.

Under the amendment, state spending would have been limited to one of two amounts: either an increase of 7 percent over the previous year's expenditures, or the amount obtained by averaging the percent of increase in gross per capita personal income over the previous three years, whichever amount was least.

Government has grown at an excessive rate, Ungrecht said, "particularly in the last 10 to 15 years." Her measure, the Boise Republican added, "will show the fiscal responsibility of the members of this state, that we're serious about cutting government spending."

But other representatives, while agreeing with Ungrecht's plea to reduce spending, disagreed this was the path to travel. Rep. Steve Scanlin, D-Caldwell, warned legislators that setting a fixed spending ceiling without first determining future state needs could in the long run prove disastrous. Scanlin also called HJR 4 "redundant," pointing out Idaho's constitution already contains a provision requiring a balanced budget.

Looking back at President Nixon's wage-price controls and President Kennedy's wage-price controls, Gwartney said, "those became floors — without exceptions they became floors."

Gwartney also questioned Ungrecht's charge that in previous years the Idaho Legislature had allowed government to grow too rapidly. The state Legislature had increased appropriations in most of the past years by less than the 7 percent yearly increase which would be allowed in HJR 4, Gwartney said. "You people who have been here a long time have been darn responsible."

Ungrecht's measure died 31-38, seven votes short of a majority, and 16 votes shy of the two-thirds majority it needed to be sent to the Senate.

Senate kills driver's exam, keeps presidential primary

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Senate found no value Thursday with a requirement that a person take a written examination to obtain a driver's license.

With only four dissenting votes, the Senate passed and sent to the governor a bill to eliminate the test. The vote was 41-1.

Motor vehicle operators still would have to take eye and hearing examinations and could be required by authorities to take a driving test if felt necessary.

Sen. Chic Blythe, D-Pocatello, argued a driver could travel down a one-way street 11 times and be arrested on each occasion and a person could be seven-eighths drunk and not lose his license, but "miss four questions and you can't drive."

Democrat Sen. Art Manley, Coeur d'Alene, noted the highway death rate in surrounding states that didn't require a written examination was lower than in the states that required it.

He also noted that it would result in a savings to the counties at a time when savings were needed.

Senators also killed an effort to eliminate the Idaho Presidential Preference Primary election and then passed and sent to the House a bill to combine it and the August primary election in May.

There was very little sentiment to do away with the preference election, with supporters arguing that the people should have a voice in selecting the candidates they want for president. The vote was 8-27 against the measure, which earlier in the session passed the House by a vote of 43-25.

Senators then took up the question of moving the August primary to May and combining it with the preference election. The vote was 23-12.

During the brief debate to combine the two elections, only two senators debated against moving Idaho's present primary from the August to the fourth Tuesday in May, beginning in 1980.

Sens. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, and Michael Black, D-Craigmont, argued that it would make campaigning too long.

In the House, a constitutional proposal to limit the state's general fund spending increases to no more than 7 percent a year was killed 31-38.

New European style kitchens work

By JUDY MOORE
© Chicago Sun-Times
Chicago — Wirksam. It's a German word that means it works.
And that's the best way to describe the super-efficient kitchens created by Ben Karlson. They work.
Karlson, who has been designing and planning kitchens for the past 15 years, says about 75 per cent of the kitchens he remodels feature Poggenpohl kitchen cabinets from West Germany. The company is one of the leading European cabinet manufacturers.
"We shouldn't refer to German so much as European styling, which is very contemporary," said Karlson, who travels to Europe five times a year in search of the fine kitchen equipment for his firm, Karlson Kitchens, of suburban Evanston. "This is high quality styling not offered by any American manufacturer today."
In addition to the styling, Karlson says he's selling space.
"In kitchens, it is most important to take advantage of every square inch, then find the best cabinets that don't waste space in corners or near the ceiling. We go right to the ceiling with cabinets," Karlson says.

"And at the bottom of the cabinets (where most provide kick space) we have narrow drawers with pulls on them for storing not too frequently used items, such as linens, placemats or work tools."
Karlson and his designers do not consider a kitchen strictly a workroom.
"It is a big part of the family living area and we try hard to make it that when we plan a kitchen," he said. "Now men and women are both working in kitchens together, so we have to plan for two people working and cleaning. When it comes to entertaining, why should a housewife have to be behind closed doors while the guests are in another room cooking? Now we make one big room so she can be part of the activity."
Karlson enumerated the conveniences and some of the space-saving ideas of the European cabinets:

- In wall cabinet corner units, there are no reach-in corners. The other side opens as well, so you open two doors instead of one to expose the entire interior of the corner cabinet.
- All Poggenpohl shelf heights are adjustable. Spice cabinets have a small, rotating shelf (about 5 or 6 inches in diameter) to eliminate hard-to-reach corners.
- A lockable compartment is available that not only requires a key, but a special pushing technique, to open. It's a safety feature when there are small children in the home. A good place to store medicines, pills and poisonous cleaning solutions.
- "In Europe, they shop more than we do," said Karlson. "We shop once a week. They shop every day, or every other day, but they are concerned about leftovers. One cabinet has a built-in electric slicer that folds out of a drawer and up onto a counter. Use it to slice leftover roast beef, sausage, or for making salads."
- Bottle storage units are provided in very narrow cabinets (about 8-inches wide) with an interior that

- pulls out. Stand-up bottle storage is two high and two wide, and can be used for vinegar, oils, dressings, etc. It's compartmented so one bottle doesn't touch the other.
- One cabinet has a built-in cleaning cart on casters. Open the door, pull out the cart, and roll it around your house or apartment. When you're through with bucket, mop, cleaning solutions, etc., push it back into its cabinet.
- One unit has a French bread storage bin that tilts open like a hamper. Store a loaf of long, narrow bread inside. There is also a cutting board that pulls out in a second. Knife storage in back of the cutting board is out of reach of children. Each knife is designed to slide into an individual sleeve.
- A ventilated towel storage cabinet works like this. When you open the door, a five-prong towel bar slides out. At the end of the day, slide the towel bar back in. There is a little button inside the cabinet. When you set the button, a small heater goes on automatically when you close the - door. It automatically shuts off 15 minutes later. The towels are dry and smell clean the next morning.

- Slide out shelves in cabinets are adjustable in height. Lights underneath cabinets are optional.
- Clients have the option of choosing doors on upper cabinets that slide up (like a garage door) instead of swinging out.
- Open the door of a cabinet and the movement automatically pulls out a waste basket and opens the lid. When you close the door, the wastebasket disappears, and you have an air (light lid) — no odors from waste.
- Pots-and-pans cabinet has full suspension drawers and rubber-lined bottoms so pots-and-pans don't slide around. Vertical storage is also provided for lids.
- Mixer shelf pulls out and up in one motion to counter-top height.
- "No American firm makes these kinds of things," said Karlson. "And we have asked them, many many times. They're not so concerned with features, as they are with the styling. But features are just as important as

- styling as far as I am concerned. I think eventually we will have all these features too, because it's just plain wasted space. Plain fronts and ease of cleaning are what people are after today."
- Recently, Karlson remodeled two kitchens. One was originally small and extremely narrow, was made to appear larger by dropping the slab window to allow more natural light into the room. The wall between the family room and kitchen was opened, and the two rooms joined by an island. More storage space was created with space-saving European-style cabinets. (Twenty-five square feet of extra space was added by using the soffit area—above—the cabinets.) Cabinets were hung within two inches of the ceiling with one full-height door.
- The combination kitchen and family room area got black-and-white cabinets and white counter tops. An oak floor was installed and a green jungle print vinyl wallpaper covered the walls. Flexible track lighting over the room divider counter can be turned in any direction in the room.

Don't ignore blemishes when wallpapering

By ARTHUR S. GREEN
© Chicago Sun-Times
After improper adhesive selection, the next most common mistake made in applying wallcoverings is inadequate surface preparation.
Just because the wall is going to be totally recovered, some people think that all blemishes can be ignored because they will be safely interred beneath the new covering. Not so! In fact, as much care has to go into preparing a wall for papering as is necessary before repainting.
Here are a few pointers:

- It is possible to apply new wall covering over old wallpaper, but this should be done only if: (1) The old paper is still tight to the wall or (2) there is only one layer of paper already on.
- If the old wallcovering was applied with lapped joints, which create bulges, they should be stripped with a razor. Gaps can be filled with joint compound, then sanded. Of course, once you get into this, you may find it just as simple to take all the old wallcovering off. The basic idea is to wet down the old paste, which is water soluble, so that the paper will be - released. You can do this by using a rented steamer, which sends little jets of steam right through the paper, or you can just wet the wallcovering thoroughly with warm water, slopping the water on with a big brush. Let the water soak in long enough to loosen the old glue; if it starts to dry out before the paper loosens, rewet the wall. Wallpaper that has been painted prevents the water from getting to the glue. The only way to get this stuff off is to cut through the paint film by sanding with a coarse sandpaper.

- Two handfuls of washing soda added to a bucket of warm water will - aid in penetrating and softening the paper. (Warning: Don't use this washing soda solution unless you are also planning to repaint your woodwork. It really eats paint.) Special long-handled wallpaper scrapers are available. Be sure you get one; a putty knife just won't cut it.

- After removing the old wallcovering, wash off any remaining scraps of paper or glue with steel wool and a commercial wallpaper remover solution. Then use a wall washing powder or washing soda to remove any traces of old adhesive that remain on the - surface. Finally, rinse walls with sponge and clean water.

- Vinyl-coated wallcoverings do not provide a good adhering surface and you should never attempt to hang a new wallcovering over them. Newly plastered walls should be primed with a coat of flat primer-sealer. Follow with an application of size. Then you can hang wallpaper. On old plaster walls, cracks and holes should be filled with spackle or patching plaster.
- Any bumps should be sanded off. The patches should be coated with a primer-sealer before sizing.

- On wallboard, all joints and seams between panels should be filled with tape and joint compound in the normal fashion. Drywalls should then be coated with a primer-sealer before sizing. This will help protect the surface of the wall if you ever have to strip the wallcovering.
- Thoroughly wash painted walls with a wall washing compound or washing soda to remove dirt and grime. Walls that have been painted with gloss paint should be deglossed. One way is to wash with a strong solution of washing soda and rinse thoroughly.

Book is spin off from course Self esteem important factor in female looks

By IRENE LINK
Times-News Writer
Lack of self-esteem may be one of the biggest personality problems in contemporary America.
Self-esteem — that feeling of confidence, worth and respect we all want for ourselves — is evidently hard to come by. Americans seem to be in an earnest search for it as evidenced by record-breaking sales of such books as "Your Erroneous Zones," "How to Be Your Own Best Friend" and "I'm OK, You're OK."
Dr. Heinz Kohut, a psychoanalyst, against these teachings by attending modeling school.

She says she observed the improvement in her own life when she did something positive about the way she looked, and decided that the same type of training could help other women.
However, she realized that few women have access to a modeling school and fewer can afford it. She says she also believes modeling schools don't help women deal with the development of inner beauty.
So Mrs. Wallace created "The

Is this course and book of the same genre as Marabelle Morgan's "Total Woman," so popular several years ago?
"No. Our course is not a marriage-improvement course — as such. However, when a woman improves herself, all of her other relationships are enriched and improved. There are so many women who could be much more than they are if they could believe in themselves. We help women do just that. We motivate them to say 'I'll try' instead of 'I can't.'"

"Students are reassured that God made them and loves them. We are the result of what He gave us to start with... To neglect our bodies and appearance is to disregard God's gift."

says, "The basic disorder of modern man is lack of self-esteem, a fragmentation of self."
Another person who recognizes this widespread problem is Joanne Wallace of Salem, Ore., who visited Twin Falls this week on a promotional tour for her recently published book, "The Image of Loveliness."
The book, in its second printing after four months, is a spin-off of a self-improvement course begun 10 years ago by Mrs. Wallace. The course is offered in 83 locations around the United States, Canada, and most recently, New Zealand. In Twin Falls, it is taught by Carol Brockway.
Mrs. Wallace, the 1969 Mrs. Oregon and a finalist in the Mrs. America Pageant, is warm, direct, self-confident and attractive. But she says she was not always so.
Mrs. Wallace recalls she felt homely and socially insecure as a young woman. Her early religious training had taught her to believe a Christian woman must be plain and avoid enhancing her physical attributes.
She says, "As children, my sister and I could spot a 'Christian' a mile away. Christians were the ones who made themselves look as plain and unattractive as possible. Even then I knew that God didn't intend for us to neglect the exterior. After all, He is the creator of beauty and He loves beauty."
Mrs. Wallace, now the mother of two college-age children, rebelled image of "loveliness" self-improvement course. Mrs. Wallace says she incorporated religion into her course because she believes self-improvement includes dealing with the spiritual and emotional, as well as physical, aspects of a person.

The book and course, however, do not espouse any denomination.
— She says, "Including religion in our course has made it unique. The course is taught in a warm, loving atmosphere by carefully selected instructors. Students are reassured that God made them and loves them. We are the result of what He gave us to start with. We need to take care of and nurture ourselves. To neglect our bodies and our appearance is to disregard God's gift."
She adds that about half of the

"My course and book build self-esteem by dealing with the total person. We urge students to act on themselves first, then go on with improving. We need to look at ourselves three ways. First, we need to look at ourselves objectively, just as we are. Secondly, we must try to see ourselves as others see us. And, finally, we must try to see ourselves as God sees us, as special and unique."
While assertiveness training is not a specific part of Mrs. Wallace's course or book, she says, "When self-esteem and confidence are increased, we can more easily assert ourselves."
Even though Mrs. Wallace is not active in the Women's Liberation Movement, she feels that gaining self-esteem helps to liberate anyone. And while she is not actively supporting the Equal Rights movement, she says she definitely believes in equality for all.
Some might say all of this concern ration... on self-improvement is a problem of vanity.

"We often look in our potential. We fear the unknown. Any change... involves some risk taking. We're afraid of change and what others will think."

students who enroll in her courses are not affiliated with any church.
Like any personal improvement course, "The Image of Loveliness" includes, instruction and training in wardrobe, hair, skin care and makeup, conversation, etiquette, personality, diet and exercise, and posture and body language. And the course is applicable to women from 9 to 90.

Mrs. Wallace says, "Vanity and conceit are not the same as high self-esteem. I don't believe that we can get to the point of loving ourselves too much. Caring enough about ourselves, to improve our looks, our minds, our spirits, simply makes it easier for others to care for us. After all, we must love and really like ourselves before anyone else can."

Vandaleers concert slated Monday in TF

TWIN FALLS — To commemorate Idaho's 90th year, the University of Idaho's Vandaleers concert choir will perform in Twin Falls at 8 p.m. March 12 at the new O'Leary Jr. High School Auditorium.

The 48-member group will present the program "Sounds of Idaho" under director Glen R. Lockery. Featured will be a medley of favorite Irving Berlin melodies, special pieces by the men's chorus and a medley of Idaho favorites.

The concert is open to the public with a one dollar donation charge for adults. All students admitted free. A no-host reception with dancing and refreshments will be given at the Pepper Tree Lounge of the Blue Lakes Inn following the concert.

Housing is needed for the chorus (two students per home, if possible) for the evening of March 12. If you can assist on the project, call Ken Stearns at 733-1722 (work) or 734-2874 (home).

YFCA rate increase planned

TWIN FALLS — YFCA rates will be raised, effective April 1, to $105 per year for a family membership, according to Chuck Upton, executive director of the Magic Valley YFCA.

At a recent meeting the board of directors raised the rates to meet rising costs of running the facility. Adult memberships will go to $50 per year; youth memberships, $23; and Senior Citizens, $18. Upton stated the fees are still far below costs charged by neighboring YMCAs in Boise, Pocatello and Idaho Falls.

In other business, the Board changed the peanut sales program so that those who want to sell peanuts to earn money must pre-pay for the peanuts taken out. Over $1,000 has been lost in the past year and a half on peanuts taken from the YFCA to sell and then not paid for or returned. The selling price of the peanuts was also raised to $2 per can.

Also, the date for the 1979 annual meeting of the association was announced as April 23 at the YFCA by Jo Ann Shaub, chairperson. Dessert will be served at 8 p.m. in the lounge with the annual meeting taking place in the all-purpose room at 8:15 p.m. All members are asked to attend and the public is invited.

Computer programming school set

MOSCOW — Some 70 high school juniors will be selected later this spring to attend the 12th annual computer programming school and special "Women in Engineering" program June 11-12 at the University of Idaho.

The computer training is offered by the UI College of Engineering in cooperation with the Idaho chapter of the Junior Engineering Technical Society (JETS), according to Roland O. Byers, general engineering department chairman and computer school coordinator.

A special, two-week "Women in Engineering" program will follow the computer school. Hosted by the UI Department of Chemical Engineering in conjunction with several industrial companies, the women's program aims to acquaint 16 of the women chosen for the JETS program with engineering career opportunities.

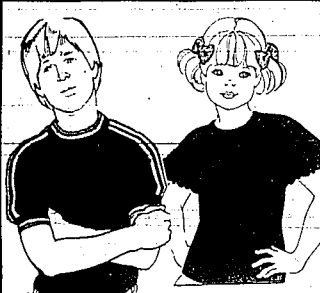

Eligible to apply for both programs are high school juniors who have an overall grade point average of 3.0 or better. In addition, candidates should have completed at least three credits in mathematics with grades of "B" or better.

Applications for both programs are available from high school counselors or by writing to Byers, UI Department of General Engineering, Moscow, Idaho 83843. All application forms must be returned to the University by April 1.

Canine cabin fever

CHICAGO (UPI) — Dogs need special care in winter to avoid weight gain, shodding and cabin fever, says a pet food manufacturer. They should be exercised outside, even in snow, at least twice a week, to benefit their general physical condition, circulation and mental health.

Save money and energy with a custom-designed Zimmatic

Lindsay's system design approach to irrigation allows you the flexibility of buying the most cost-effective Zimmatic for your farm's application needs.

We can now integrate several pipe sizes into one Zimmatic. Traditionally center pivot manufacturers have used the same size pipe throughout the length of the system even though much more water passes through smaller lines than the last. Lindsay's system pipes, and compatible models, spurs and components offer custom design flexibility that takes into account such factors as length of system, friction loss, system pressure, water horsepower, hours of operation and soil conditions. We're professionally trained to accurately evaluate these variables, into a system design that'll save you money now and in the future.

Ask us about custom tailoring a Zimmatic to fit in work on your farm. We'll estimate your run-out in years of depreciation versus the best warranty in the business, and advise you on the choice. Stop in and see us today. We have some size and tested time offers that make right now the best time to buy a Zimmatic.

Factors thought to cause obesity may be actually results

BY JANE E. BROD
©N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK — Recent studies suggest that many of the factors thought to cause obesity are actually its results.

The new research challenges the long-standing notions that most people who are fat get that way because of their genes, because they are lazy, greedy or weak-willed or because they are psychologically disturbed or cursed with a low metabolism.

Rather, the studies show, many of these characteristics are the consequences of eating too much and weighing too much in a society oriented toward slimmness.

While offering no panacea to the millions of overweight Americans who have been unable to shed excess pounds permanently, the new findings help explain why obesity is such a persistent problem for so many people and why most popular solutions fail in the long run.

The findings also suggest alternative approaches, starting in infancy, to the prevention and treatment of serious weight problems. And they emphasize the need for some people to come to terms with the fact that they were never meant to match society's widely advertised standard of fashion-model slenderness.

Researchers have found that the obsession with slimmness has precipitated serious disturbances in some people. Anxiously over being slightly overweight, they say, and perpetually gaining and losing weight cause more physical and emotional harm than the excess pounds ever would.

Of even greater concern is the appearance of a serious new eating disorder that is brought on by the social pressure to be thin. Increasing numbers of slender young women who want to be thinner are being caught in a physically—and psychologically damaging cycle of starvation, binge eating and punishing purges.

College health officials report that this syndrome, which two Cornell University psychologists have named bulimarexia, is fast becoming widespread. One off-the-cuff estimate is that as many as one-quarter of freshman women may be afflicted.

Yet for an estimated 40 million Americans, overweight is a real and perplexing problem, causing damage to psyche and soma that is hard to ignore. Recent research on the causes and consequences of obesity has raised the following key points:

— Environment is a far more important cause of obesity than heredity.

— Low metabolism is more likely to be a result than a cause of obesity.

— Likewise, psychological disorders are commonly consequences of obesity but rarely cause it.

— Many fat people, conditioned early in childhood to overeat, eat in response to emotional disturbances and environmental cues instead of real hunger.

Obese people are inactive because of their excess weight, rather than the other way around.

While obesity afflicts only seven percent of the children of parents who themselves are normal in weight, the research shows that 40 percent of the children with one fat parent and 80 percent of those with two fat parents also become fat. But this can result from an environment that fosters overeating as well as from inherited tendencies.

Studies of adopted children and identical twins reared together and apart have shown somewhat conflicting results, but the preponderance of evidence indicates that environment plays a stronger role than heredity. A genetic predisposition to be fat will be expressed only if the environment in which the person is raised permits it. A study in England disclosed that the pets of fat people are twice as likely to be fat as the pets of thin people.

Regardless of genetic tendencies, early eating patterns can make an enormous difference in a person's later struggle with excess weight. Research by Dr. Jerome Kaitile of Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York and others has shown that fat babies and fat children are more likely to grow up to be overweight adults because they develop a permanent excess of fat cells. This leaves them with a lifelong storehouse of fat cells in want of filling. Controlling weight gain in early childhood may therefore thwart a tendency to later obesity.

Among those who become overweight, as adults, the existing fat cells enlarge but do not increase in number. When such people lose weight, the cells shrink to normal size. On the st of genetics, certain strains of laboratory rats and mice become obese when given the opportunity to eat all they want. The final weight these animals can be reduced if by are underfed early in life, but they cannot be made normal.

The late research suggests that most fat people probably start out metabolically normal and gradually develop derangements in their internal chemistry when they gain weight. A many fat people have complained these derangements can cause "everything" they eat to turn to fat and null in weight gain even though they do not seem to overeat. Dr. Jud Rodin, a psychologist at Yale University, pointed out that fat people produce higher levels of insulin, a hormone that promotes the storage calories as fat. High levels of insulin also cause hunger and result in increased food consumption. The faster person eats and the more caloriferous carbohydrates the meal contain the more insulin is released, creating a cycle of more eating and more insulin. In a Vermont study, prisoners of normal weight were fed two to three times more calories than they normally ate, resulting in a 26 percent weight gain — and hormonal and metabolic changes just like those seen in the obese.

Dear Abby

She longs for widowhood

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

© The Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR ABBY: Now I know why God lets the woman outlive her husband by about 10 years. She needs at least that much time to rest and recuperate. Pity the poor woman who's been married 50 years. I've been married 17 years, and if this man of mine doesn't go pretty soon, I pray to God that I will soon be laid to rest. I couldn't take another 33 years of this.

It's nag and brag. Rant and rave! Yell and cuss! All he has in his mind is eat, sleep and sex (especially sex). A poor woman goes to bed tired and wakes up tired. All a man is good for is his paycheck.
 I've heard women talk about how lonely they are after their husbands pass on. Well, here is one who is looking forward to that day.

NO SIG IN GARDEN CITY

DEAR NO SIG: Too bad you didn't sign your name. A husband is entitled to know how his wife feels about him. He may want to hire a food taster.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from LIXESS IT LEGAL, who complained because her boyfriend told her that the men in his family never married—they just took common-law wives.

While your response was sound, you missed a good opportunity to correct a common misconception about common-law marriages.

A common-law marriage is a legal and binding marriage, just as valid as a ceremonial marriage with a license.
 A couple who live together, cohabit, and have established a reputation in their community as man and wife, are, in the eyes of the law, LEGALLY married.

Furthermore, common-law marriage cannot be ended by one spouse simply moving out. Each party has legal obligations to the other, just as husband and wife have in a so-called "legal" marriage.

Thus, common-law marriage is much more than just "shacking up" or living together, and it should be made plain that all couples who decide to live together do not necessarily establish a common-law relationship.

Abby, 20 states still recognize common-law marriage, and Ohio is one of them.

OHIO LAWYER

DEAR LAWYER: Thank you for pointing out that in those states where common-law marriages are recognized, they are as valid and binding as a marriage can be. And thank you too for letting my readers know that "shacking up" does not necessarily constitute a common-law marriage.

Soviets observe Women's Day

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN
 MOSCOW (UPI) — Millions of Soviet women stayed home from work Thursday and nobody seemed to mind.

In fact, most men also took off to help the women celebrate International Women's Day.

Women traditionally get to put their feet up while husbands and children tend to the house and scrub up a few meals.

Last minute male shoppers snapped up flowers and boxes of candy late Wednesday, but a few were too late, since most shops and offices called it quits shortly after noon to get a head start on a three-day weekend.

The government threw in Friday off as well, but notified workers they were expected to work on Sunday to make up for it.

The Russians call it International Women's Day and most are convinced

It is a major holiday around the world. It began 69 years ago as part of a heavy political statement on behalf of socialist women, but has turned into a nice, sleepy, sentimental holiday, much like America's Mother's Day.

But whenever any large group of Soviet Citizens get together, politics can't be too far behind.
 Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and Premier Alexei Kosygin headlined a gala Women's Day celebration at the Bolshoi Theater Wednesday night complete with a ballet performance and a children's choir that heaped flowers on the stage.

And the Tass news agency took the opportunity to note that nearly a third of the almost 1,500 members of the Soviet parliament are women. That's more than all the women in the capitalist parliaments put together, said.

But it neglected to point out that only a fraction of the more powerful Central Committee members are females and there are no women on the all-important Politburo.

Hiatal hernia explained

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb,

Would you explain what causes a hiatal hernia? Should I have it repaired now? I am 47 years old and in good health. It bothers me occasionally. I'm wondering if it gets worse as you get older. Is the operation a serious one? And, could it affect my heart?

Dear Reader,

A hiatal hernia means that the normal hole in the diaphragm where the esophagus (food tube) passes through to the stomach becomes enlarged. If the hole gets big enough, it lets part of the stomach slide through it. To state it another way, your stomach ruptures (herniates) through the diaphragm.

One of the major problems associated with the hiatal hernia is the leak of food out of the stomach into the lower esophagus, particularly when you are lying down. I am sorry to say that surgical repair of the hernia itself doesn't guarantee that the closure mechanism in the opening of the stomach will then function normally.

In fact, you can have a leak out of the top of the stomach without having a hiatal hernia. This is the major reason that many patients don't get the benefits that they think they'll get from surgery to repair a hernia through the diaphragm. The leaky closure mechanism persists and the problems associated with it still cause symptoms.

There is no reason that your hiatal hernia should be significantly worse during life if you alter your life style now along the lines suggested in The Health Letter I am sending you. High on this list of things that will help prevent the hernia from getting worse is to stay lean. You don't want any large amounts of fat deposits inside your abdomen. The pressure caused by the build-up of fat inside the abdomen literally tends to squeeze the stomach through the hole in the diaphragm.

Of course, I presume that it is not in your plans for the future to get pregnant. One factor that causes women, as a group, to have a hiatal hernia much more often than men is the fact that women get pregnant. As the uterus enlarges and increases pressure inside the abdomen, many women develop a hiatal hernia. It does point out how important it is to you to remain lean and prevent any build-up of pressure inside the abdomen.

Don't wear tight girdles, belts or any constricting item around your waist. Eat frequent small meals but be sure that doesn't mean consuming more calories. Wait at least two hours before you lie down after eating. And you will do better if you lie down or sleep with the upper part of the bed elevated.

Curtain goes up on NCAA playoffs tonight

By United Press International
Like a well-constructed drama, the NCAA basketball championships lift the curtain with only a moderation of teasers to set the mood before the frenzy of action on the road to the grand climax in Salt Lake City.

There are 40 teams that will be battling for a spot in the national finals later this month in Utah, but only two of the top-ranked 20 schools will see actively tonight when the championships get under way.

Temple, which is ranked 16th following a 25-3 regular campaign, meets St. John's, a surprise entry, in the East regional at Raleigh, N.C.

and Detroit, No. 20 with a 22-5 mark, takes on Lamar in the Midwest regional at Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Top-ranked Indiana State, sporting a 29-0 record, begins its NCAA action Sunday against the winner of Friday's Virginia Tech-Jacksonville game at Lawrence, Kan., and the big issue there will be the condition of All-American Larry Bird. Bird broke his left thumb last Saturday, and although he claims he'll be able to play, it is questionable how much he'll be affected.

"I don't know about defense, but I can definitely shoot with it," Bird said earlier this week.

Temple locks size in its starting lineup, and is led in scoring by point guard Rick Reed, who had a 15.8 average with 205 assists.

The four regional semifinals and finals will be played March 16-18 at Greensboro, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Provo, Utah. Salt Lake City will be the site of the national semifinals March 24 and the final March 26.

Vikings earn spot in tourney

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Larry Tobler hit Ricks' last five points — including the decisive bucket with eight seconds left — to carry the Vikings past North Idaho 72-71 and into the region 18 junior college tournament.

Tobler glassed in a short jumper on the back end of the press to give Ricks a three-point lead and the Vikings then let North Idaho have the final triple as the game unfolded.

The victory moves Ricks against Oregon Community College Conference champion Southwestern Oregon at 3 p.m. today in the regional tournament opener. Host College of Southern Idaho will take on Oregon runner-up Chemeketa at 5 p.m., with the two winners advancing to the finals at 9:15 p.m. Saturday.

In a game of fluctuating tempo, Ricks had North Idaho on the ropes with a 15-point lead with five minutes left in the first half but let the blowout chance slip away on a rush of nine turnovers and three missed free throws.

After North Idaho closed to within four at intermission, the Cardinals appeared on the verge of taking complete command when they rolled to a fast five-point lead.

But in both cases, the team with the advantage changed tempo and let the other back in. For North Idaho it proved fatal.

After some early lead changes, the teams went to a 14-14 tie and suddenly it was all Ricks. The Vikings blossomed for 14 unanswered points and with 5:44 left in the half controlled the scoreboard 35-20.

Ricks then tried to force the issue and immediately ran into bad passing turnovers on the fast break. Five sailed out of bounds — Meanwhile, North Idaho, which was having trouble finding field goals, got back into contention on free throws as just about all the starting Vikings had three fouls on them by halftime.

North Idaho hit 17 free throws, Claude Butler getting the majority of them, in clawing back to within 39-35. Scott Thomas' long shot two minutes into the second half gave North Idaho a 42-40 advantage and Butler and Wendell Denton took that to 45-40. Then the Cardinals went into a deliberate offense and Ricks immediately stalled.

It looked bleakest for Ricks with 12 minutes left when 6-10 center Chris Owen fouled out and from then on North Idaho completely dominated the boards — but couldn't get the following shots to fall.

Ricks appeared struggling as Butler hit five straight North Idaho points for the last lead of any sort in the game with nine minutes left. Tobler and Todd Anderson pulled Ricks into a tie and then the lead. Denton tied it with a free throw before Dave Sever sent Ricks back on top with two charity points.

Over the next three minutes the teams had a couple of more ties with Ricks holding the lead in between. With three minutes left — Todd — Anderson sent Ricks ahead to stay and Ricks went into a slowdown, leading to another Anderson field goal 48 seconds later.

Tobler then came up with a fine offensive rebound, getting a layup in on the third try for a 69-65 lead with 1:31 left. Tobler sandwiched a free throw between field goals by John Bell and Thomas, leaving Ricks up by one with 19 seconds left. Ricks broke the press for Tobler's final bucket to tie the game.

Camas County's Rick Simon goes up for a reverse layup against Mackay.

Murtaugh, RR fall Camas County opens with win

By RANDY FREY
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Only one of three Magic Valley schools remained alive following first round action in the state A-4 boys basketball tournament.

Camas County advanced to the semifinals with a 60-43 victory over Mackay while Murtaugh surprisingly fell to Friends Academy 62-59 and Raft River lost to Plummer 57-36. Nezperce whalloped Cascade 84-36 in the tournament opener.

Murtaugh was supposed to be the tournament favorite, a role coach Barry Berg did not take. He said prior to the tourney that as long as he can remember the favorite team has not won the state title.

Friends Academy coach Bill Burns was impressed with the Red Devil team, but it was his Grizzlies who won the game.

Trailing 36-23 at the half, the Grizzlies did not allow a Red Devil field goal in the third period and outscored Murtaugh 18-6 in the quarter.

"We changed defenses in the second quarter, and it was the wrong decision," said Burns, who watched Murtaugh score 22 points in the period.

"So we went back to the 1-3-1 zone in the third period and it paid off," he said.

"Our defense in the third quarter was the key to the game," Burns said. "They played just super, and if you play good defense the kids just get excited and play that much better."

Burns was impressed with Murtaugh as a team, saying the Red Devils are a "tough outfit". Murtaugh tried to get back in the game by fouling in the waning minutes, but Friends made 12 of 13 free throws down the stretch to put the game away.

Plummer put Raft River away early in the game, straggling off a slow start to build up a 26-18 halftime lead. The Trojans scored the first four points of the game but then went cold and watched Plummer reel off seven unanswered points.

Alan Haas scored nine of his game-high 18 points in the third period as Plummer burst ahead 45-27 at the end of three periods. At one point in the quarter, the Pirates scored 11 straight points.

Although Camas County won its A-4 state tournament opener, coach Lou Anderson was not happy with his team's performance. The Musers burst out to a 10-1 lead early in the game, but from there they simply played mediocre basketball.

"We had better play with a little more intensity tomorrow or we will not win," Anderson said. Nezperce's big win still fresh in his mind. One reason Mackay was able to stay so close in the early going was the frequency with which the Miners went to the foul stripe.

Wildcats manhandle McCall 77-49

IDAHO FALLS — Lanky Jay Decker scored 12 points in the first quarter and the Filer Wildcats blazed into a 77-49 decision over McCall. Donnelly in the state A-3 playoffs Thursday night.

In a game expected to be tight, Filer jumped ahead 22-10 in the first eight minutes and dominated throughout. In other action Thursday, defending champion Westside defeated Pollack 68-51 and Sugar-Salem knocked off Rimrock 80-72.

Filer now advances to the championship semifinals at 8:30 p.m. Friday against Firth, which toppled Kamiah in the first evening game.

McCall-Donnelly, which had the second best record among the state A-3 teams at 22-3, never was able to solve the problem of the 6-8 Decker. Only in the third quarter when Decker had 16 fouls for a while because of four fouls, did McCall manage to play anywhere near even. The Wildcats shot 51 per cent for the night.

There was a tie at six in the early going before Tony Smith and Decker broke the Wildcats into a 12-6 lead. Then while McCall was getting four points, Decker hit six more and Smith added four.

Brian Ochsner opened the second period with two field goals and the lead hung about 10 through the rest of the half, although McCall once cut it to seven. Smith and Brilo hit closing buckets for an 11-point halftime lead.

Westside held off a third-quarter Portchall rally behind the game-high scoring of Dan Ralphs with 22 points.

Sugar-Salem got two long shots from the win and a seven-for-eight overall shooting performance by forward Ron Hardy in blunting the strong inside scoring attack of Rimrock. Junior guard Ron Clark backed Hardy with 22 points for the Diggers, who trailed until late in the third period. Layne Hyvonen then went on a 10-point scoring spree.

Burley bows, CDA upset in A-1

FOCATELLO — Rick Cope and Dave Rumble proved too much for the Burley Bobcats Thursday night as they lifted the Meridian Warriors to a 77-60 decision in the final game of the class A-1 state basketball tournament.

But the big news of the day came in the afternoon when Highland went with a deliberate offense and knocked off consensus favorite Coeur d'Alene 43-41, pinning the first loss of the year on the Vikings. In other action, Blackfoot, playing without its 6-3 center, knocked off Borah 62-57 and Skyline's Grizzlies drilled Mountain Home 76-56.

Burley led only once against Meridian, that at 4-3 after the Warriors had scored the first three points. Cope, a 6-2 jumping jack, then hit two straight field goals and ended the quarter by trading buckets with Burley's Jeff Wright.

Early in the second period Burley kept the lead at five or six before Wright went to the bench with four fouls and took a lot of Bobcats rebounding with him. Meridian, with Rumble starting to warm up, had leads up to nine points.

Cope started the second half by upping his total to that point to 13. By then Meridian was up 12 points and for all intents and purposes the Bobcats were out of contention.

They made one run midway through the period when Wright collected five points and Kerbs had a string of six points. Three times Burley cut the deficit to seven but four points from Cope broke Meridian into an 11-point lead again—Early in the fourth period Rumble hit six straight to hike the advantage to 14 points and the Warriors coasted in.

Earlier in the evening session, Blackfoot hit 11 of 12 shots in the third quarter to explode a tight game and whip Borah. Brad Gardner hit 14 of his 23 points in the decisive span and the Lions were never able to recover. Jeff Ereksten topped Borah with 18 points.

Scott Hansen hit a 14-foot jumper with a second left to carry Highland past Coeur d'Alene, which had won 23 straight coming into the contest. A desperation shot by Tom Prannington had little chance to save the Vikings.

Forward Cleve Lewis dumped in 24 points to pace Skyline past Mountain Home. The Grizzlies had no trouble with the Tigers' zone defense and went inside consistently in the second half to run up the score. Lewis hit eight of 13 shots from the floor and eight of 11 free throw attempts.

Methodists claim title

TWIN FALLS — United Methodist whipped First Nazarene 31-14 Thursday night to claim the Magic Valley Church League tournament championship.

The Methodists completely shut off the Nazarenes' offensive effort, limiting them to only four field goals for the evening. At halftime the Methodists led 15-4.

St. Edwards, the regular season champion, was upset in the first round of the three-week tourney.

In the consolation championship, Trinity Lutheran beat Redeemer Lutheran 39-28.

Buhl advances to semi-finals in A-2

NAMPA — David Davis, Jim Smutny and Robin Juger combined for 50 points Thursday night to lead the Buhl Indians to a 68-56 state A-2 tournament victory over Grangeville.

In other action at the tourney, Kellogg squeaked by Preston 66-64, Rigby edged Emmett 60-59, and Soda Springs beat Vallivue 64-61.

The win moved the Indians into a semi-final game against Soda Springs at 8:30 tonight. Other pairings will send Preston against Emmett at 1 p.m. in a loser out game, Rigby and Kellogg at 2:30, and Vallivue and Grangeville at 7 p.m. in a loser out contest.

The Indians took the lead about midway through the first quarter and never were in trouble. After Grangeville took a short-lived 4-3 lead, Smutny, David and Juger all responded with buckets to pull the Indians away for good.

Smutny hit consistently from outside all night, while Davis, a well-built forward, made some good inside shots as well as pulling down several rebounds. Juger also was tough on the boards.

By the third quarter, the Indians had built up a 25-point margin, and the second half was played with a lot of substitutes.

Others who contributed to the scoring for Buhl were Vince Hamilton with 2, Larry Allen 2, Roland Hansen 0, Mark Schaal 2, and Bob Hollingsworth 2.

Alex Flores scored 27 points as Kellogg won its opening game. Kellogg jumped to a 10-lead, but had to hold on as the Indians, behind Curtis Adler's 18 points, narrowed the gap in the late going.

Star Indian Center Todd Thomas was hampered with a hand injury he suffered Tuesday, which required 30 stitches. He was limited to 11 points in sparse playing time.

Soda Springs blew a 14-point lead, but hung on to beat Vallivue. Key free throws by Randall Bagley and Jeff Crowell iced the win for the Cardinals, who ran their winning streak to nine. Crowell finished with a game-high 25 points and Alan Clegg pumped in 20.

Soda Springs was cruising with a 46-32 lead late in the third quarter when Vallivue switched to a man-to-man defense, clawing its way back, eventually tying it at 54-54 midway through the fourth quarter.

Vallivue's losing effort was topped by Ed Traywick with 16 points and Robert Sevy 15.

Defending champion Rigby hung on for its win over charged-up Emmett.

Despite 23 turnovers and a raft of missed free throws in the final quarter, Rigby's size advantage prevailed. Led by 6-4 center Dana McCandless' 19 points and 12 rebounds, Rigby was able to subdue the four-prone Huskies.

Greg Darnell's 22 points paced Emmett, which lost four starters on fouls.

Sub shoots Purdue past C. Michigan

By United Press International

Mike Seacore grew weary of sitting on the bench and watching his teammates do all the work, so he decided to take matters into his own hands.

The Purdue substitute rifled in 26 points Thursday night to lead the 14th-ranked Bolleermakers to a 97-50 opening-round-victory over Central Michigan in NIT play.

"We got exceptional performances out of two players (Seacore and reserve center Nell Bemenderfer) that haven't contributed as much offensively as others have," said Purdue Coach Lee Rose, who was especially pleased with Bemenderfer's 17-point effort.

Purdue advances to the second round Monday night against Dayton.

The Bolleermakers, 24-7, enjoyed their highest offensive production of the year as they raced to a 46-31 halftime lead that was never threatened.

The closest Central Michigan came was 71-61 midway through the second half, but Bemenderfer scored six straight points to wipe out any hopes of a comeback for the Chippewas, who were paced by Dave Grauzer with 17 points.

Elsewhere in opening-round NIT action, Dayton slugged Holy Cross 105-81, Indiana downed Texas Tech 78-59, Alabama topped St. Bonaventure 98-89, Alcorn State edged Mississippi State 80-78 and Texas A&M tripped New Mexico 79-68.

Mike Woodson scored 30 points to lift Indiana over Texas Tech, sending the Hoosiers into the second round against Alcorn State. Indiana built a 39-19 lead at halftime on the strength of 18-for-25 shooting from the floor. Ray Tolbert added 18 points and Butch Carter 11 for the Hoosiers.

Reggie King scored 29 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to lead Alabama past St. Bonaventure. Alabama will play Virginia in a second-round game in Birmingham Monday night. King, who set an Alabama season scoring record during the game, had 16 points in the first half to push the Crimson Tide in front, 48-40, at halftime.

Larry Smith grabbed a loose ball and banked in a shot at the final buzzer.

Levi, Aaron tied for lead in Jackie Gleason tourney

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (UPI) — Young Wayne Levi and oldtimer Tommy Aaron shot 6-under-par 66 Thursday for a one-shot, first-round lead in the $300,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Golf Classic.

Both golfers got hot on the back nine. At one point, Aaron reeled off six birdies in eight holes and Levi carded four in six holes.

One shot back of the co-leaders at 67 was Larry Nelson, a latecomer to the golf tour who has been making a lucrative living out of being an also-ran. Two shots behind the leaders at 4-under-par 68 over the demanding par-72 Inverrary East Course were transplanted Australian Bruce De Vlin, Texan Charles Coody and Mark James, a little-known British pro playing in his fourth tournament in this country.

Jack Nicklaus, who has won the last three years over the Inverrary course, shot a 74, but he pointed out he had won last year after shooting one round of 75.

"I don't know if I really played that poorly today," Nicklaus said. "It was just that nothing happened. If I had the ball near the hole, I missed the putt. If I made one mistake, I made bogey."

"I've got to get it in my head that I'm going to get a good score on the board. I will — it's just going to be a matter of time."

Both Levi and Aaron have yet to win a tournament this year, but both have been making money. The blond, 26-year-old Levi is 16th on the money list with $33,897 and Aaron is 22nd with $22,490.

Levi, whose only win was shared with Bob Mann in the Disney Team Play event last fall, said he had been playing better since he got married last October.

He said he used to get too upset at a bad shot and give up.

"My wife, Judy, got on my case real bad about it. She'd even call me over to the ropes during a round and yell at me," said the third-year pro. "I still do it but not as bad."

Aaron told a similar story. "I try not to get too high or too low — too excited or too upset," Aaron said. "Nobody likes to hit a bad shot, but maybe it doesn't bother me as much."

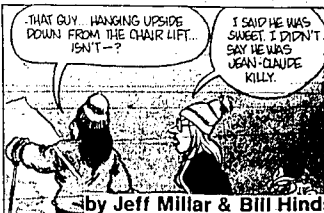

"And I'm swinging better now and have a lot more confidence," added the 42-year-old pro, beginning his 19th year on the tour.

Aaron has not won since the 1973 Masters, but hopes some brief lessons from the late 1931 PGA Tournament champion Tom Creavy in Delray Beach, Fla., may help him get another win.

Bid's rider undecided

HALLANDALE, Fla. (UPI) — The owners of early Kentucky Derby favorite Spectacular Bid will spend the weekend deciding who will ride the 3-year-old.

Ronnie Franklin, who was criticized for his circuitous winning ride on the colt in Tuesday's Florida Derby, is one of the four riders in contention. The other possibilities are veteran Bill Shoemaker, Darrel McHargue and Jacinto Vasquez.

Trainer Buddy Delp said owners Harry and Teresa Meyerhoff and their son planned to get together for dinner Thursday night to discuss Spectacular Bid's jockey.

"I told them all the facts about the four riders."

Gomez will defend title

NEW YORK (UPI) — Unbeaten Wilfredo Gomez, the World Boxing Council super bantamweight champion, is already looking past his title defense tonight against Nestor "Baba" Jimenez of Colombia and toward a showdown with WBC featherweight champ Danny Lopez.

Gomez, a 22-year-old Puerto-Rican making his Madison Square Garden debut, doesn't see any way Jimenez, a 31-year-old veteran of 89 pro fights, can dethrone him from the crown he captured in 1977 and has successfully defended six times.

"Now I am working toward Danny Lopez," Gomez said. "I expect to move up to featherweight later this year, and I've received offers to fight Lopez already. I'm aware he is a good puncher. But he also gets knocked down a lot. Against me, he might get up but he will fall down several more times. I think he will run into the same trouble as Zarate."

After a six-round draw in his first pro fight in 1974, Gomez has knocked out 23 consecutive opponents, including the previously unbeaten Zarate of Mexico in five rounds in his last bout, Oct. 28. Gomez, who comes from a polished boxing skills with devastating punching power, already has many experts proclaiming him the world's best fighter pound-for-pound.

Jimenez is unbeaten in his last 15 fights, his last defeat coming in 1975 when he was knocked out in two rounds by Zarate. His 66-13-1 record includes just 23 knockout victories. "People might say he's the best fighter in the world but I don't think he's fought anyone as experienced as me," said Jimenez. "Zarate was supposed to be considered the best but I know Zarate had to lose five pounds the day of the fight against Gomez. That was the difference."

Both fighters are expected to enter the ring at the 122-pound super bantamweight limit.

Four 10-round bouts will precede Gomez versus Jimenez.

Highly regarded Maurice "Termitte" Watkins of Houston, the No. 5 WBC lightweight with a 48-2 record, makes his New York debut against No. 3-ranked (USA) Theo Osuna of the Dominican Republic.

Saul Mambly of New York City, the No. 1 world junior welterweight (21-12-5), faces Norman Gains, the Indianapolis puncher (19-8-1) who twice floored unbeaten Howard Davis.

Yanks, Dodgers made favorites

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Harrah's Reno Race and Sports Book Thursday installed the Los Angeles Dodgers as 2-1 favorites to win the National League pennant and rated the New York Yankees even to win the American League title in the coming baseball season.

The Philadelphia Phillies at 11-5 were given the next best chance at the National championship, followed by the Cincinnati Reds at 12-5. Behind New York in the American League were the Boston Red Sox at 2-1 and the California Angels at 4-1.

"The rest of the pennant odds: National — Pittsburgh 4-1, San Francisco 10-1, Houston 25-1, San Diego and St. Louis 50-1, Montreal 75-1 and Atlanta, Chicago and New York 100-1.

American — Kansas City 5-1, Baltimore 10-1, Texas 20-1, Milwaukee 30-1, Detroit 50-1, Cleveland, Minnesota, and Chicago 100-1 and Oakland, Seattle and Toronto 200-1.

Briefly in sports

Page suspended

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — Hard-hitting Oakland A's outfielder Mitchell Page was suspended by owner Charlie Finley Thursday for refusing to take part in training camp activities.

Page, upset with the salary contract offered him by Finley, said he could not take part in an intra-squad game Thursday because "my mind is not right."

Finley offered Page, who batted .285, hit 17 homers and drove in 70 runs last year, a $10,000 raise, which would put his salary at $70,000.

"I think I deserve a lot more than that," said Page, who lacked one day of service to take his dispute to arbitration. "It's just as well I not take part in anything here until I get my mind right to play. If I played, I would be wasting everyone's time, and I don't want to do that."

Kinshofer first

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — West Germany's Christa Kinshofer continued her mastery of the women's giant slalom Thursday, winning her fourth World Cup race at Battlemark Mountain.

The 18-year-old skier, who has lost only one giant slalom this season, finished 44 of a second ahead of second-place teammate Irene Epple.

Kinshofer's time for the two courses was 2:30.81.

Theres Nodig of Switzerland was third with a combined time of 2:37.77, World Cup leader Hanni Wenzel of Liechtenstein was fourth at 2:32.98 and Fabienne Serrat of France fifth at 2:33.13.

No defection

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The mystery of the three "missing" Soviet basketball players was solved Thursday, the State Department reported.

They did not defect.

The players were never lost. It seems the Soviet team simply had three extra airplane tickets.

The Soviets returned home last Sunday after a North American tour. In New York to catch a connecting flight for Switzerland, it was discovered there were three unused tickets.

European champ

ROTTERDAM (UPI) — Rudie Koopmans of Holland scored a knockout over Aldo Traverso of Italy when the latter failed to answer the bell for the seventh round Thursday to become the European light heavyweight boxing champion.

"It was the best moment of my career when I saw my opponent go to the canvas late in the sixth round," the 31-year-old new champion said.

After six rounds, British referee Ronald Dakin had Koopmans ahead 60-55 points, the French Judge had the Dutchman leading 60-56 and the Spanish Judge put him ahead at 58-56.

Brewers' signee

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The Milwaukee Brewers signed pitcher Larry Sorenson Thursday to an estimated $30,000 one-year contract, leaving only shortstop Paul Molitor unsigned.

But Sorenson, who was 18-11 last season, said Molitor probably will sign soon.

Indoor meet set

DETROIT (UPI) — Renato Nehemiah and Henry Rono are back to dazzle crowds and attempt to set records today and Saturday in the 15th NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships at Cobo Arena.

Capacity crowds expected both days also are likely to find some new favorites among such foreign competitors as Suleiman Nyambul of Tanzania, Keith Connor of Great Britain and Sydney Marec of South Africa.

Distance runner Nyambul and triple jump favorite Connor are two reasons defending champion Texas-Esri Paso is expected to take the indoor title for the fifth time in the past six years.

Seven individual event winners return to defend their titles, including Washington senior Scott Neilson.

Butler, a repeat selection to the writers' District VII team, was named the top player in the district.

He also was one of five players named to Basketball Weekly's All-Plains team.

Marijuana smoker to get scrutiny

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (UPI) — A spokesman for Bowie Kuhn said Wednesday the baseball commissioner's office will take a close look at ex-Boston Red Sox pitcher Bill Lee and his admitted use of marijuana.

"We have turned the matter over to our security people but we don't know in what direction they will go," said Kuhn spokesman Art Burke.

The commissioner has conducted an earnest program against the abuse of drugs and alcohol. We feel we have to protect the integrity of the game. Our fans would be disappointed if we did nothing in this matter."

Lee, traded in the off-season to the Montreal Expos, told reporters Tuesday he has smoked marijuana since 1962. But he said he never smoked at the ball park.

Red Sox vice president Buddy Reddy, a former trainer for the Red Sox and Celtics, said he was with the player in 1968, "but I never saw any evidence of drugs." And Leftoux said Lee was not traded for any drug reason.

The basic reason Lee was traded and Bill will admit it, is that he and Manager Don Zimmerman had a personality conflict. Bill always did his job. Whenever he crossed the white lines, he gave it his best."

Red Sox General Manager Haywood Sullivan said he was surprised when he heard of Lee's admission.

"You're always concerned with the image of any athlete," Sullivan told the Lawrence (Mass.) Eagle-Tribune. "I'm not knocking Bill. Like him as a person. He has done so much work for charity and he's visited so many hospitals. He'd be the first one to come running into the office if you asked him to visit a kid in a hospital."

Moser leads PBA field

ADELPHI, Md. (UPI) — Paul Moser rolled 279 in his final qualifying game Thursday to take the lead going into match play in the $80,000 Fair Lakes Open in suburban Washington.

Moser, of Somerset, Mass., totaled 1,015, an average of 223, for the 16 qualifying games. He started the day in third place but rolled 1,356 for the six games to take a 10-pin lead over Dickenson.

Dickenson, of Fort Worth, Tex., started Thursday's action in 31st place, but rolled games of 299, 247 and 273 to climb back into contention.

Second-round leader Teat Seimz, of Five Ridge, N.J., dropped to third as he spilled 3,952 in qualifying. He was followed by Ben Foster, of Allentown, Pa., and defending champion Bud Soper, of Whittier Calif., who tied for fourth with 3,945.

The top 24 bowlers move to head-to-head competition, with 30 bonus points awarded a bowler for each victory. After 24 games of match play, the top five bowlers will compete Saturday afternoon on the Pro Bowlers Tour telecast, with the winner earning $10,000.

Van Brocklin under surgery

ATLANTA (UPI) — Neurosurgeons operated on former Atlanta Falcons center Norm Van Brocklin for four hours Thursday and called the procedure to increase the flow of oxygen to his brain a "technical success."

Dr. Alan Fleischer said Van Brocklin, who last week returned to football as an assistant coach at Georgia Tech, was in satisfactory condition.

The 53-year-old Van Brocklin checked into the hospital Monday after suffering dizzy spells.

A hospital spokesman said the operation entailed removing a blood vessel from Van Brocklin's scalp and connecting it with the brain.

Van Brocklin, a former star NFL quarterback, said prior to the operation that the surgery is not as serious as it sounds. He said he should be out of the hospital in about 10 days.

SUN VALLEY — The Wood River National Honor Society will present Seattle pianist Walt Wagner in concert at the Sun Valley Lighthouse Room March 10 at 8 p.m.

Wagner's musical career has gone full circle since his beginning as a classical pianist. He was rock keyboardist for two groups he formed in the early 60s, played jazz piano in cocktail lounges, and toured with skater Peggy Fleming in a production called "Concert On Ice." Between ice show tours, he performed at the MGM Grand, The Tropicana, and other nightclubs.

In 1974 he decided to quit all his musical activities and concentrate his energies on developing himself as a solo pianist. As a result, Wagner has appeared on the Tonight Show as a solo artist, has toured with Bill Cosby and "Fernwood 2-Night" star Martin Mull, and has performed with tenors Bob Hope, Phillips Diller, Lily Tomlin and Mike Neuz.

Dianne Hagaman/Times-News

Now appearing at the Turf Club. . .

By CHRIS BOGAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — January 1 marked the start of a new year and a new life for one of Twin Falls' oldest night spots, the Turf Club.

Formerly a supper club for the older generations of Twin Falls' night people, the Turf Club closed its doors for two weeks at the start of January and then reopened in the middle of the month as an entertainment club.

Men dressed in jackets and ties and women wearing evening gowns are now a fading memory at the Falls Avenue club. Evening jackets and dress-slacks have given way to levis, corduroys and pearl-button western shirts. The waltzes and fox trots are gone, replaced by disco dancing, country swing and rock and roll.

"It's an entertainment club," says Steve Soran, one of the Turf Club's owners. "That's what we're shooting for — an entertainment club where you can see high quality entertainment."

After running the Turf Club for the past 10 years as a supper club and banquet facility, Soran sat down with his father, Leo, and brother, Tim, and they all agreed to try something new.

The idea, Soran says, is to provide Twin Falls with a versatile entertainment center. A rock and roll one week will give way to folk music the next and rhythm and blues by the end of the month. Soran says he also plans to try out some nightclub entertainment, like a magician, comedian or hypnotist.

So far the Turf Club's young manager has brought in a mixed bag of bands. Gary Lewis and the Playboys came to the Turf Club in early January. An old 1960's band that cut a few hit singles but died before the decade's end, Lewis and his Playboys are trying to make a comeback.

The Diamonds, a popular group in the 50's that recorded the sound track for the Happy Days television series, also has entertained local audiences at the Turf Club. And Tarwater, an Idaho country swing band, packed the house three weeks ago.

This music is a world apart from the cocktail bands that used to play for dinner guests at the old Turf Club. And a new crowd has come with the new music.

Soran says the familiar club with the champagne glass atop its roof, formerly catered to a clientele that ranged in age from about 50 on up. The Turf Club crowd these days is a younger bunch altogether. Soran says they now range in age from about 25 to 50 years old.

The music Soran plans for the Turf Club won't be hometown crooners. He says he will book the best of the local groups and then look around for good bands from throughout the West.

The Coasters, the famous band from the 50's and early 60's, were scheduled to play in late March but had to cancel when their backup group disbanded. Soran already has bands booked through May.

Cobalt Blue, a local rock and roll group, is playing at the club this weekend. The Braun Brothers, a local country folk group, will fill March 9-10 and Cobalt Blue will fill in from March 12-17, when the Coasters were to have performed. The Robert Gray Band, a rhythm and blues band, can be heard March 19-24 and Tarwater returns by popular demand March 26-31.

The Leland Four, a cabaret and ballroom dance band, will head the bill in the first week of April. The Braun Brothers will then kick off the release of a newly recorded album—April 10-14—and a country rock group called the Sleepy Giant will make a quick stop April 20-21. Joe Cannon, a popular Sun-Valley performer, will come south the week of April 23-28 and Rosewood, a country folk group, will kick things off the first week of May.

"Ideally," Soran says, "I would like to have a completely different type of entertainment out there each week."

"I want to keep it on the up and up. I want it to be a place where you can come and have a nice time and not have any trouble."

So far his plan seems to be working. Capacity crowds have filled the Turf Club's tables and dance floor, but Soran says there hasn't been a single fight or a bit of trouble.

The Turf Club has come a long way in its 22-year history. Soran recalls it was built about 1947 by some local gentlemen and served as a town speakeasy with slot machines and all.

"It was one of the only places where a fellow could get a drink." The club later gravitated towards a supper club but had difficulty in staying open: It closed for about seven years in the 1960's and the Sorans purchased it in 1963.

They tried at first to make it work as a fancy dinner club but costs were high and Twin Falls wasn't ready for such a place, Soran says. It soon turned into a club that offered lounge dancing throughout the week and opened for beef and potato dinners on the weekends. It catered to banquets, luncheons and special parties.

That was until this year.

Although the Turf Club continues its "banquet business," it closed down for regular dinners and opened up for popular entertainment.

"Magic Valley is a small area," Soran says. "Word of mouth is really working well at this time. So there's really no sense in knocking down anything and doing a radical facelift to let them know there's something different on the inside."

Soran says his cash volume is already up but he is waiting to see whether his profits follow after he's paid his higher entertainment costs. He notes that where his business used to break down to about 75 percent dinners and 25 percent bar, sales, it has now completely reversed itself. Food sales now account for only about 25 percent of his business and liquor sales account for the rest.

Soran says he hopes variety of entertainment will be the key to new success for the Turf Club.

"The same thing all the time has got to be boring for anybody."

The Turf Club's success so far has fired an initial optimism. In Soran, but he says he plans to wait three or four months before he draws any firm conclusions. He admits he's concerned about the summer. With the warmer weather and longer days, he worries that his audience might dwindle, which could be disastrous if he books expensive bands through those months.

"Really what it boils down to is whether the people are going to come out and take a chance on someone they don't know yet — on music they've never heard."

So far, though, people are turning out in larger crowds than the Turf Club has seen in a long time.

Movies & Music

Ear and eye candy saves 'The Wiz'

By Shelly Kinzel
Times-News Writer
TWIN FALLS — Tampering with a classic is always a tricky affair. By now just about everyone has seen the 1939 film of "The Wizard of Oz," starring the limplimble Judy Garland. This early version was so enchanting that any remake would have to be truly remarkable to win audience acceptance.

In 1975, an all-Black cast transformed this favorite tale into a spectacular Broadway musical entitled "The Wiz." The story and setting remained the same, but the dialogue and music were updated by the popular sounds of today and a definite ethnic quality. The results were smashing!

When producer Rob Cohen, director Sidney Lumet, screenriter Joel Schumacher, and production designer Tony Walton decided to adapt the show to the screen, one looked forward to an equally appealing production. Unfortunately, the lavishly mounted movie version of "The Wiz" lacks the charm of its predecessor and the cohesiveness of the Broadway success.

One reason may be that most of the energy is directed toward the visual aspects of the production which are indeed magnificent. New York City becomes the setting — Dorothy (Diana Ross) is no longer a little girl living in Kansas, but a 24-year-old Harlem school teacher; the Scarecrow (Michael Jackson) is found in a garbage-heaped slum lot; the Tinman (Nipsey Russell) is discovered in an abandoned amusement park (Coney Island); and the Lion (Ted Ross) emerges from one of the statues guarding New York's famous 42nd Street Library. The yellow brick road now leads down to the underground world of the subway and The World Trade Center is the site for the fabulous Emerald City.

These technical conversions are ingenious. The subway sequence in which Dorothy and her friends are menaced by a peddler's accordion-bodied dolls and trash cans which suddenly spout teeth is a creative gem. Yet, despite the imaginative urban concept, the energetic music of Quincy Jones, and breathtaking costumes, the film is noticeably draggy.

For one thing, the feature is simply too long. Every other minute is filled with maudlin ballads or production numbers. While some are moving and dynamic, others are repetitious and showy. "Eyes On Down the Road" and "A Brand New Day," for instance, have vitally and purpose, but the elaborate Emerald City sequence is merely a means of displaying the costumes of New York's top fashion designers. ...

"Overdoing it" is the film's major weakness. There is an attempt to include everything — Black culture, urban culture, social commentary, modern music, old-fashioned sentimentality, lots of pizzazz, and lastly, that loveable story "The Wizard of Oz." What is needed is a unifying style or a more definitive focus.

The original characters, by the way, are still delightful and sympathetically portrayed by Michael Jackson, Nipsey Russell and Ted Ross. Diana Ross has a compelling screen presence, but presenting Dorothy as an adult is a poor choice. Watching a grown-up woman cavort about in fantasy land is both unconvincing and silly. Her intense reactions, perhaps believable in a child or young girl, seem absurdly melodramatic in an adult.

It may be unfair to compare "The Wiz" with the original movie or Broadway show, but adaptations are inevitably subject to this kind of analysis. As a film by itself, "The Wiz" is colorful and entertaining. If you can forget Judy Garland and have never seen the Broadway musical, you may well find this feature an enjoyable treat for the eye and ear.

Jerry Reed now actor

By BILL HANCE
Gannett News Service
France is a long way from Georgia. But don't tell Jerry Reed. Reed's heading to the southern part of France to film a sequel to "Smoky and the Bandits," that funny film he starred in two years back with Jackie Gleason.

"Just want a change of scenery," he said. "I'm already practicing my southern-part-of-France drawl."

"Oul, oul, you all." Reed admits he's paying more attention these days to acting than picking and slinging. In the last few years, he's starred in several movies, all of which have earned him a pretty good reputation as an actor.

He recently completed "Hot Stuff," a police-adventure film co-starring Dom DeLuise and Suzanne Pleshette.

"I know I once told you that acting is a lot of work for me. That was after I did my first film, "W.W. and the Dixie Dance Kings" with (Burt) Reynolds.

"I think I'm also safe at the time I wouldn't do it for a living, not if I could help it.

"I guess I've changed my mind. "At first, acting was a real task. But now, it's easier and easier all the time and I love it."

Reed, a top-notch guitar picker and singer for RCA records, said the professional actors and actresses he's worked with have helped him tremendously in his new career.

Stepping through the silver screen

By ANNA QUINDLEN
N.Y. TIMES SERVICE

NEW YORK The narrow snack bar area at the Eighth Street Playhouse on a Saturday night looks just like backstage at a high-school play. There is the frantic feeling, the tote bags filled with cosmetics and costumes, the last-minute jitters, the bad wigs, the actors dressed and made up and litzed, the pep talks, the prayers.

"Hire everyone," the girl with the vermilion hair says as she breezes in in sequins. "Wait till you see the glitter I have," responds one of her friends.

Waiting outside, three deep in a long line down the block, is the audience. Most of its members are here for two things. One is a movie called "The Rocky Horror Picture Show." The other is the cast inside — the freelance cult members who have made going to see "Rocky Horror" a cross between sitting ringside at a Las Vegas floor show and ogling the crowd at a punk-rock concert, perhaps the biggest audience-participation movie ever made.

Inside, their evening is being orchestrated by a teddy bear of a man, a former schoolteacher named Sal Piro, whose consuming passion in life is the movie that plays here at midnight on Friday and Saturday nights (admission: $3.50). Sal has seen "Rocky Horror" 225 times in the seat on the aisle in the fifth row. He leads the 1,000 members of the national fan club and wants to write a book about the cult that is the film. Most important, he governs the show and enforces the ground rules.

"You wouldn't believe it sometimes," says Sal, wearing a wig that looks like a drowned tawny animal. "People who've never been here before think if they buy a ticket, they can sit anywhere they want. They don't appreciate that there's a whole subculture here."

In fact those who like to choose their seats, watch movies in silence and see clearly all that goes on on the screen should never go to see "The Rocky Horror Picture Show." But anyone who has ever wanted to don a slicker, leap to his or her feet and dance along with Gene Kelly and his umbrella in "Singin' in the Rain" can relate to what happens. On the screen, a stuffy aristocrat-in-a-cavat narrates the tale of Brad and Janet, two fine young kids who wander off the beaten track in the rain and wind up being abandoned and abandoned by a mad scientist-cum-transvestite named Frank-N-Furter.

In the first row, facing the audience, a young man with powdered hair and dressed exactly like the narrator moves his lips in time to the narration. In the wings — side sists to the uninitiated — wait those dressed like Frank's assistants, his unsuspecting visitors, even the red hot that greets the film against a black background: When Brad and Janet walk through the rain to the obligatory eerie cello with newspapers over their heads, the audience puts newspapers over its heads.

Purists use The Cleveland Plain Dealer because that is the paper featured in the movie. But members of the cult contend that it's the thought that counts, and any daily will do.)

There are various explanations of how this came about. Twentieth Century-Fox says it is a nationwide phenomenon, that "Rocky Horror," which opened in 1975 to lukewarm reviews, is doing well in 200 theaters across the country in weekend midnight shows at which the audience dresses like the actors. (Some of those actors, in particular Susan Sarandon, Barry Bostwick and the rock musician Meat Loaf, have done well since; the Eighth Street Playhouse reports that Miss Sarandon, as well as Cher and members of the rock group Kiss, have seen the show at that theater.)

The audience participation exists in all three of the Manhattan theaters that have been showing the movie, although not nearly to the extent that it does at the Eighth Street. At the New Yorker, a big Art-Deco-movie-palace on Broadway, rice is thrown at the wedding scene, and a flashlight is held up here and there during a scene in which the hero and heroine sing about finding a light in the darkness, but by and large it is a more sedate gathering of high-school students in pinks and old-movie aficionados (Friday and Saturday at midnight, $3).

The Festival, on 57th Street, near Fifth Avenue, got wide publicity when some among its audience were accused of "littering" the doorways of exclusive shops nearby; that theater canceled the movie until further notice a week ago because of what its management calls "scheduling conflicts." But people like Sal Piro insist that the first-run cult cast appears in the Village; it was at the Waverly before the movie left there a year ago, and now it is at the Eighth Street.

The film is so popular on Eighth Street that the management has begun a reserved-sales system, which allows people to order in advance and pick up tickets before 9 p.m. on Saturdays. According to Steve Hirsch, the manager, about 300 of the 450 seats are reserved in advance, and seven tickets — as well as a dressing-room area — are set aside for those who dress up and perform.

"A hotbed atmosphere is best for this," says Sal Piro earnestly. "People started here, and they don't leave. Otherwise, someone else would take their part."

That's why Dori Hartley shows up on weekend after weekend — because she wants no one else in her part and because she is without a doubt the star of the show. "I actually started the thing, I couldn't help it, I fell possessed," said Miss Hartley, dressed as Frank-N-Furter down to the tattoo on her upper arm. "Tim Curry — Frank — excited me so much that I had to die it."

She gives her face; made up in blues, purples, blacks and magenta, a quick once-over and adjusts her black sequined corset, garter belt, net stockings and platform shoes. Later she will do her big number, "Sweet Transvestite from Transylvania," but not in tandem with the screen portrayal; she performs before the movie begins, so that the audience calling her name can focus on her interpretation.

"I have now recognized one of my greatest dreams," says Miss Hartley, who is 20 years old and played Frank in the national convention at the Calderone Theater in Hempstead, N.Y. "I have become a personal friend of Tim Curry's. Do you think we look alike? We have the same nose. He made a comment about our noses. He's the only reason I'm here."

Dori Hartley may or may not have started the dressing-up. Louis F. Fursze Jr., who compares "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" to "Citizen Kane," is credited with originating alternate dialogue. "I first saw the film on Labor Day weekend in 1976. I intuitively knew that it was going to be a landmark motion picture. And then one night, I felt compelled to speak to the characters. I remember my first line, as Janet and Brad were walking toward the castle in the rain. I yelled 'Buy an umbrella.' That line is used to this day.

Regular "Rocky Horror" goers — Those in multi as well as the dress-up members of the cult — know these lines, know that when the maid Magenta says, "Master, dinner is prepared," they are to shout back, "And we helped." Most of them know all of the dialogue and move their lips in time to those of the actors. But as Sal Piro indicates, there are always those in the audience who have never seen the film before.

There are even those who have never heard of the cult or the goings on.

"Occasionally, you'll get someone who'll say 'Down in front,' or 'Be quiet,'" said Sal. "We just tell them to go to the New Yorker."

KEITH CARRADINE
... perfectly clear

BY ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN
Q: I read that Natalie Wood and her husband, Robert Wagner, are going to Russia. Will she be doing a movie there? — D.P., Athens, Ga.
A: No—Natalie and R.J.—are taking Natalie's Russian-born parents back to their homeland for their first visit since they left many years ago. Wagner will photograph the sentimental journey for Look magazine.

NEW LOOK: After some halting efforts, Olympic Gold Medal winner-turned-actor Bruce Jenner will be emerging with a new image. His career has been taken over by star-maker Allan Carr and there will be some big changes. Stay tuned.

LIV ULLMANN
... contracts privacy

NO VISITORS: Movie star Liv Ullmann must be feeling rather nervous about doing her first Broadway musical, "I Remember Mama." Liv has banned all guests from attending rehearsals. In fact, she's got it that way in her contract.

WHY THEY LEFT: Bags of letters keep coming asking why three Lawrence Welk Show stars left the show. Tanya Welk left two years ago to do a nightclub review. She has no plans for returning. Tanya's married to Welk's son, Larry Jr. Sally Flynn left to do concerts and nightclub appearances with her husband, country-western singer Clay Hart. Cissy King stepped aside after she had a personality conflict with her dancing partner, Bobby Burgess. They'd been dancing for 11 years.

GETTING IT RIGHT: Most movie producers spend a lot of time creating the right title for a film. It's important because the handle is often part of the ultimate success of a flick, but the producers of the new Keith Carradine-Monica Vitti production are having trouble staying with one title. The movie deals with the international film festival and first choice was "The Cannes Game"—a try at a pun ("The Con Game"). But the producers—get cold feet when they considered how many people might mispronounce Cannes. Second choice was "Take Two" but this was dropped for similar reasons. Right now, the latest title is "An Almost Perfect Affair." At least there's no pun.

is "Fats," the dummy in the movie "Magie." That malevolent co-star cost $250,000 to carve and construct.

NEW ROMANCE: I hear Shirley MacLaine's latest heartthrob is actor Charles Grodin. Observers say Shirley is really smitten, and so far, Charles is playing it a little cool. All this despite reports that Shirley has been seen with Australian Foreign Minister Andrew Peacock. He saw her off at the airport after a nightclub engage-ment in Sydney. And later, they were seen together in Paris. Meanwhile, Shirley is still married to Steve Parker, who lives in Japan. Theirs has been a kind of open marriage arrangement.

Q: Wouldn't you say that as well as being a fine actress and great singer Barbra Streisand is one of the smartest business women in Hollywood? It seems to me all of her movie deals are pretty shrewd. — S.C., Seattle.

A: Now she is but Barbra got her smarts the hard way, by making a mistake or two at the beginning. For instance she sold her ten-percent share of her first big-hit film back to the producer for $250,000 before the movie was released. That was 1969 and the film was "Funny Lady." The percentage eventually turned out to be worth more than $3 million. Barbra just didn't believe the movie was going to make money so at the time, $250,000 looked like a good deal.

FIRST LADY: It's possible that Phyllis George, who will marry Johnny V. Brown Jr. on St. Patrick's Day, may make the switch from entertainment and sports to politics. Her husband, who owns the Boston Celtics basketball team, is planning to announce his candidacy for governor of Kentucky at the end of this month.

HENRY'S FUTURE: The gossip in Washington now is that Henry Kissinger may have to abandon any dreams he had of running for the U.S. Senate from New York. Reason? The late Nelson Rockefeller was Kissinger's financial and power base and without all that money and clout in back of him the former secretary of state might not be able to mount a senatorial race.

Q: I understand writer Gay Talese has spent years on a book about sex in America. Will it ever get published? — A.L., Valley Stream, N.Y.

A: It's been some time since Talese announced his plan to do the ultimate book on sex. And word is that it will be completed sometime this year. Talese was paid a bundle in advance so it's expected that publication will come shortly after completion. Gay has said over the years that the book will cover every aspect of sex.

Q: I understand Marsha Mason is into meditation. What about her husband, playwright Neil Simon? — K.L., Rome, N.Y.

A: Marsha is a follower of Indian guru Baba Mukhtananda. She was impressed by his work and his emphasis on meditation when she visited him in India a time ago. Although husband Neil didn't make the trip to India with Marsha, he is also interested with Mukhtananda. He tried to set aside half an hour each morning to meditate, saying it clears the mind and helps the creative process.

Q: Jon Voight seems as remote off-camera as he is talented onscreen. Is he a very withdrawn personality in private? — C.T., Creston, Iowa.

A: While Jon expands mightily before the camera lens, he tends toward semi-wallflower in gatherings offscreen. We recently saw him accepting the New York Film Critics award for best actor in the movie "Coming Home" with Jane Fonda. Although he was before a rapt audience, John's acceptance speech was almost inaudible.

Q: As a movie buff I happen to know that there was an earlier version of "The Great Train Robbery" and I don't understand why they don't say this new one with Sean Connery is a remake. — M.H., Berkeley, Calif.

A: They don't say, because it isn't. You're referring to a silent one-reeler made in 1933, which has nothing to do with the new film.

When biographies no longer will do

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT

ON 'X' Times Service
DUBIN'S LIVES. By Bernard Malamud. 352 pages. Farrar Straus & Giroux. $10.

Meet William Dublin, the 56-year-old protagonist of Bernard Malamud's wonderfully bitter-sweet new novel, "Dubin's Lives." Meet William Dublin, if he can spare you a moment from his disciplines. For Dublin works: He works at the craft of biography. He lives in upstate New York with his wife Kitty and studies men's lives to see what he may learn from them and experience through them. "Everybody's life is mine unlive," he has noted impulsively to himself. "One writes lives because he can't live. To live forever is a human hunger." Dublin works to lift himself out of "the self's separate closed self-conscious subjectivity." He has written "Short Lives," a collection of sketches of people who died young, to learn "how intensely and creatively life can be lived even when it is early aborted." He has written "H.D. Thoreau" to learn to see nature. At the start of the novel, he is beginning a life of D.H. Lawrence. Sex.

Dubin, a clenched fist, works. But does it work for him to work? Can he really escape such activity? A delightfully comic scene near the beginning of "Dubin's Lives" suggests not. One morning, after shaving and cursing himself in the mirror, as is his habit, Dublin looks down through the bathroom window on Kitty, who "seemed to be dancing on the lawn. . . a running dance, very expressive — fertility rite! . . . Her arms moved like a bird's wings; she swooped, turned, now hopped sideways toward the trees. He thought she'd duck into the grove of silver maples and dance there — but instead she ran toward the house.

"My God, Dublin thought. He had seen her in some happy moments but nothing to dance to. He felt how strange life was, then began thinking of his 'Passion of D.H. Lawrence: A Life,' before he realized Kitty was in the house, screaming as she sped up the stairs. Dublin opened the bathroom door as she rushed in, shouting at him, her face red, eyes angered, frighted. "Why the hell didn't you come and help me?"

"What for?"
 "A bee . . . William . . . in my blouse. It crawled up my sleeve. Help me!"

He unbuttons her blouse and releases the bee, which promptly stings him. Why, we must wonder, will D.H. Lawrence's fertility rite do to him? We will shortly find out.

Enter into Dublin's life one Fanny Bick, a 22-year-old college dropout "on the edge of being beautiful and looking for someone to define her. After a fumbling start — she offers herself; he reaches for his pen — they take a secret trip to Venice, where Thomas Mann's Gustav Aschenbach, another clenched fist of a writer, met his sexual destiny. For Dublin, the idyll is another abortive romance, like the stinging fertility rite. "He (feels) in his pleasure a loosening of ties, concerns, restrictions — a sense of triumph in the woody distance." She gets stomach cramps and diarrhea, and ends up betraying Dublin with a young singing gondolier. But Dublin is hooked. He has found another life to learn from — a life of sexual youth. He will not get Fanny out of his system as easily as he thinks.

I could go on and on regaling you with anecdotes of Dublin's tumult, our perspective on which continues to be perfectly balanced between the comedy it appears objectively to be and the suffering that Dublin experiences. But much of the pleasure of "Dubin's Lives" depends on the reader's suspense over the outcome of plotting which seems on the surface merely farcical, but which, because of our growing identification with Dublin, comes to matter a great deal. So there is little left to do but celebrate what is priceless about "Dubin's Lives." One must toast the vital specificity of the character, especially Kitty Dublin, with her extraordinary combination of perspicacity and myopia when it comes to her husband's character; and Dublin himself, an essentially humorless and unsympathetic man whom Malamud has made into a comic symbol of human self-alienation.

And one must mark particularly the powerful presence of nature in the novel, something rather new for the urban-spirited Malamud, if memory serves. Where Dublin requires Thoreau to apprehend the world around him, Malamud seems to have his own acute perceptions, for the natural world is lovingly observed and integrated with the story, and the upstate New York countryside makes its presence felt on almost every page of the story.

One might gubbe as well. The hallucinatory episodes in the novel — Dublin, on one of his daily jogs, seeing a man shoot a crow out of the sky without the use of a rifle ("One of us is mad; the biographer thought"), or Dublin's repeated sighting of his red-haired daughter Maud during his idyll with Fanny in Venice — these are not smoothly integrated; they stick out self-consciously. The incestuous aspect of Dublin's affair with Fanny seems too insistent and pat. And the ending, though far more satisfying than those of Malamud's two previous novels, "The Fixer" and "The Tenant," is nevertheless just a shade abrupt and ragged, resolving, as it does, the theme of the novel, but not the plot.

But these are strictly blemishes on an otherwise lustrous canvas. "Dubin's Lives," for my money, is certainly Malamud's best novel since "The Assistant." Possibly, it is the best he has written of all.

Biographies abound in spring releases

By HENRY KISOR

Lifting the veil partway on spring's new fiction, it seems that biographies as usual lead the pack in potential interest. Major-lives-of-Thomas-Edison, Teddy Roosevelt, Buster Keaton, Albert Camus, Martin Heidegger, Anton von Webern, Bernard Berenson — there's something for every taste.

The respected Edmund Morris tells why we were wild about Teddy in The Rise of Theodore Roosevelt (Coward, McCann & Geoghegan, March), the April offering of the Book-of-the-Month Club. Robert Conot's "A Streak of Luck: The Life, and Legend of Thomas Alva Edison" (Seaview, February) examines the inventor's wars as well as wisdom.

Tom Darr's "Keaton: The Man Who Wouldn't Lie Down (Screenwriters' February) could be the season's big movie book. Music devotees likely will find Hans and Rosaleen Moldenhauer's Anton von Webern (Knopf, February) to be indispensable.

Art is represented by "Bernard Berenson: The Making of a Connoisseur" (Harvard, April), by Ernest Samuels, a Northwestern emeritus professor who mined the lode of papers at I-Tatti, Berenson's Italian villa.

Herbert Lottman's big "Albert Camus" (Doubleday, March) has been awaited for a long time, and the brilliant critic George Selaizer addresses himself to the problem of being and its greatest modern exponent in "Martin Heidegger" (Viking, April).

Some intriguing autobiographies loom over the horizon, too. With 200 books already under his belt, Isaac Asimov takes his life story from 1920 to 1954 with "I Memory, yet Green" (Doubleday, March). "My Life," by George Sand (Harper & Row, March), is a one-volume condensation of the novelist's five volumes, the first English translation. A television pioneer, CBS president William S. Paley, tells how it was in "As It Happened" (Doubleday, March).

Leading the category of literary history is Leon Edel's assessment of the complex relationships of the principal members of "Bloomsbury: A House of Lions" (Lippincott, May). There'll be more "Letters of Virginia Woolf: vol. IV" from Harcourt Brace Jovanovich in March.

Life of racy 'Jersey Lily' traced

In the turn-of-the-century London, nothing set tongues wagging faster than a juicy scandal. They wagged like mad when Lillie Langtry, a dazzling "country" girl, marked her arrival in London by having an affair with the heir to the throne.

It was only the beginning. Lillie went on to do exactly as she pleased for the next 50 years — including a number of things that no woman had dared to do before. Just how this single-minded siren, quickly dubbed the "Jersey Lily," went about shaking up and shocking even the "swingers" of her day, will be told in "Lillie," the new "Masterpiece Theatre" series seen Sundays on PBS beginning March 11.

Lillie's beauty and wit made her an instant celebrity, and she quickly realized that celebrity translated into money. The fiery clergyman's daughter, played by Francesca Annis in the Mobil-funded 13-part series, became the first woman ever to endorse a commercial product. The Pear's Soap Company paid Lillie for a series of endorsements — ads bearing her famous profile and signature — under such statements as: "For the hands and complexion, I prefer Pear's to any other." High society was scandalized.

The series begins on the Channel Island of Jersey, where young Lillie is the teen-age tomboy daughter of an Anglican clergyman. The stunning adolescent with the body of a woman soon grows restive in a world only 11 miles long and five miles wide. London beckons, and when Lillie marries a visitor, Edward Langtry, it is less for love of the stodgy yachtman than for passage to the mainland.

The London that Langtry took her to was a city of contradictions. Great wealth and great poverty existed side by side. Queen Victoria seemed to have entered a permanent state of mourning for her dead husband, while her son and heir, Edward Albert, Prince of Wales, lived the life of a rake and gambler. His Marlborough Set spent its time in pursuit of all the things that money and power could command.

The Jersey Lily's conquest of London began in April, 1876, when Lillie and her protesting Edward attended a party at the London mansion of a Lady Seabright, noted patroness of the arts. Lillie, in mourning for one of her brothers, wore a simple black dress, unadorned, and an even simpler hairdo. She created a sensation and found herself surrounded by some of the greats of London's art world who clamored for permission to paint her "artful simplicity."

John Everett Millais, a fellow Jerseyan and eminent portraitist, persuaded Lillie to sit for him. He titled the finished work "The Jersey Lily" and the nickname stuck. Lillie posed for other paintings and sketches, and soon her likeness was for sale in every shop in town.

The woosers followed, chief among them the Prince of Wales, the high-living "Bertie" himself. Lillie's husband faded into the background in the face of this royal falcon. During this period, Lillie also managed to meet and charm the likes of Lord Randolph Churchill, William Gladstone and Oscar Wilde, who dedicated a book of his poems to Lillie: "To Helen, formerly of Troy, now of London."

Lillie and Bertie had a falling-out after a while — the story, never admitted by Lillie, was that she had playfully slipped a piece of ice down the back of the royal neck during a dinner party, leaving Bertie unamused — and it looked as though her "career" had come to an abrupt end.

But Lillie, never at a loss, turned to the stage. Her good looks, her intelligence and — not incidentally — established her as a star of the first magnitude.

She surprised — and embarrassed — producers with her shrewd business sense and made headlines by hiring a special train to take her from Edinburgh to London. No mere actress had ever done that before.

But Lillie was no ordinary woman, as this lavish London Weekend Television production demonstrates. She learned to smoke on stage and continued to do so when she was off stage. Few if any women had ever smoked in public before.

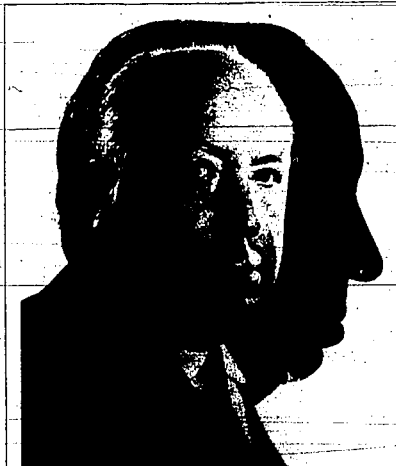

At the height of her career, Lillie went into horse racing in a big way. She once bet more than $50,000 on a single race. Her horse won — at odds of 8 to 1. The Prince of Wales himself led her into the hallowed Jockey Club for a celebration — the first time a woman had crossed the threshold.

Everywhere she went, the glamorous actress answered questions about her lifestyle. Newspaper readers learned that the "Jersey Lily" was passionate about exercise, plain food, and soap (Pear's) and water. Her favorite exercise, it turned out, was to trot a mile or two every morning. Lillie Langtry may have been the first woman jogger.

Lillie remained a star and in the public eye, until her death in 1929 — a triumphant reign of more than 50 years.

GE drops Fonda interview

By LES BROWN
N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — The General Electric Corp. has withdrawn its sponsorship of a Barbara Walters special program on ABC-TV March 13 because the show involves an interview with Jane Fonda, the actress, in which she discusses her new Columbia Pictures release, "The China Syndrome," a fictional story about an atomic power plant disaster at a nuclear power plant.

In a statement, GE explained it was "inappropriate" for a company that was a supplier of nuclear power equipment to sponsor a program containing "material that could cause undue public concern about nuclear power." The company acknowledged the issue was one of "significant public controversy."

GE said it had made no attempt to suppress the content of the interview and that it intended to continue to sponsor the Miss Walters's specials, which it has done since 1976. "The relationship has served us well," the statement said, adding, "This in no respect alters our respect for Miss Walters and her staff."

Miss Walters does four specials a year for ABC, and they are among the handful of programs in prime time that have a single sponsor instead of scatter-shot, spot advertising.

Three former GE nuclear energy engineers — Gregory C. Minor, Richard D. Hubbard and Dale G. Eridenbaugh, who resigned from the company two years ago because they felt the company was not sufficiently concerned about nuclear safety problems — were technical consultants for "The China Syndrome." After their highly publicized resignations, they campaigned actively in California for nuclear safeguards.

Larry Vaber, a GE press representative, said: "We'll stick with our statement, which speaks for itself. There was considerable thought in putting it together."

Ed Vane, vice president of ABC Entertainment, the program arm of the network, said ABC would "not change a single thing in the interview" and had not been asked to. The program, which will also feature interviews with John Wayne and Carroll O'Connor, is being offered for participating sponsorship to varied advertisers who will have no direct identification with the program or its contents. The network expects to lose no money from GE's withdrawal.

Twyla Tharp's dances from 'Hair' premiered

By GLENN CURRIE
UPI Lively Arts Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Twyla Tharp has abandoned touring her dance company temporarily, so she can work on her choreography. Four works were premiered during the Feb. 15-20 season of Twyla Tharp and Dancers at the New Academy of Music. It is the company's first New York since in two years and called. The new works were given their debut.

Most impressive was a suite of three dances from the movie version of "Hair." The first, "Electric Blues," has a woman jogger getting involved in a street basketball matchup; the second, "3-5-0-4," a depressive neo-wedding scene all in blacks and greys; the third, "What a Piece of Work is Mine," has a ghoul robbing a pile of dead bodies.

drumatic impact rare for Tharp, and may signal a new direction for her. As a colleague commented, "At last Tharp has found a scenario."

The opening work was "Baker's Dozen," a set of dances for performers to the piano of Duke Ellington's "The Lion" Suite, choreographed by Dick Higgins.

some interesting lifts, and the girls at times being dragged offstage on their bellies or flat-footed. The final section, "Relax," is a sort of free-for-all, with bodies falling out of the wings and all 25 dancers.

choreography, and fit her style neatly but is not particularly exciting.

The final work, "Chapters and Verses," is strictly comic, and circled into an opening circle for a central section for the men's pants, including the can of deodorant (Gibbs) and a pair of socks (Gibbs), and a
