

Love: the code word that opens safes

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Shaken by the disclosure that another secretary with access to Western military secrets was a Communist spy, the West German government is warning love-starved women employees that their boyfriends might be agents of the East German secret police.

The warning was prompted by the belief that the East German espionage service is sending handsome and personable agents to West Germany to romance lonely government secretaries.

"Women of a certain age are in special danger," said Chief Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann.

West German security has printed thousands of leaflets for distribution in government agencies with the heading, "There is a code word that opens safes — love."

The leaflets warn, "It begins innocently. You get to know each other. There is affection and trust. You gladly discuss your life. Intimate, private things. And your work. Then you do small favors. They become bigger and bigger. For love. And it ends up treason. For at times the love is planned. And your partner has been married a long time — to the East German State Security Service. Please think about it."

The latest in a long series of West German women who spied for the East is Ursel Lorenzen, a 42-year-old secretary at NATO headquarters in Brussels, who fled to East Berlin last week with an East German secret police official she had known for years. The official, Dieter Will, used his cover as a Hilton Hotel employee to direct Miss Lorenzen's spy work in the office of NATO Council Operations.

Appearing on East German television, Ursel boasted she had access to the Western military alliance's alert plans and many other secrets. Security officials here called her defection the most serious espionage case in recent years.

"The East German Ministry for State Security is sending in particularly god-looking and personable agents to make contact with secretaries," Herbert Hollenbroich, the chief of counterintelligence at the West German Office for the Protection of the Constitution, told the newspaper Bild am Sonntag.

"They comb cafes Saturdays and Sundays and recognize their prey at a glance."

"Particularly endangered are single women over 30," he said. "East Berlin has learned that some of these women are susceptible and fear they do not have much time left to find a partner."

Peace debate lasts all night in Israel

JERUSALEM (UPI) — The Israeli Cabinet met all night on an Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty and Prime Minister Menachem Begin said today the cabinet took "very reasonable decisions" following his Sunday talks with President Carter.

Begin said he expected a positive reply from Egypt.

The Israeli prime minister said he assumed Secretary of State Cyrus Vance would leave for Cairo after the cabinet's meeting with Carter and the U.S. delegation, which had been scheduled for 10 a.m. (MST) today.

"I expect a positive reply," he told reporters who interviewed him as dawn broke over Jerusalem. "I think we took very reasonable decisions."

Begin declined to reveal the contents of the decisions, saying he thought it would be best for Egyptian leaders to hear of them from Vance rather than from the news media.

Begin said aides kept Vance informed of the decisions as they were being made throughout the night in the Israeli Cabinet's emergency session called after six hours of talks between Carter and the Israeli delegation on Sunday.

"I am quite tired," Begin told reporters as he left the Cabinet meeting wrapped up against the dawn chill in a dark overcoat and black hat.

Begin said the Cabinet debated all the outstanding problems between Egypt and Israel.

He said he expected Vance would inform Carter of the decisions when the American president awakened at his suite in the King David Hotel in Jerusalem.

Carter is expected to return home this afternoon after addressing the Knesset.

As he called the Cabinet into session Sunday night, Begin made it clear he felt Israeli security was at stake.

Begin was in a somber mood as he said twice at a state dinner for President Carter Sunday that it was his duty to say "there are serious problems to solve before we can sign the peace treaty." All indications were the negotiations were nearing a climax.

Carter, looking tired and worn after long hours of negotiations, listened glumly to Begin's statement and, in an answering toast, pledged U.S. support for a strong, secure and free state of Israel and said "we realize that our own security is intimately tied with yours."

Despite the tough statements by Begin there was still a possibility the urgent meeting of the divided Israeli Cabinet could bring a breakthrough. Begin's official spokesman told reporters earlier in the day there was no deadlock in the negotiations and Carter said he was "absolutely confident" the "few remaining differences" can be resolved.

There were persistent reports Carter would extend his visit to Israel another day in hopes an agreement would be reached but White House aide Hamilton Jordan said there were no plans for this at the moment. Carter had been scheduled to meet at breakfast with the Israeli Cabinet this morning to hear its reply to the still secret Egyptian proposals that brought on the Begin statement Sunday night.

Both the Israeli state radio and television said Carter would send Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to Cairo to report to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat on the talks. American officials said it would be a good sign if Vance made the trip to Cairo.

Carter told reporters after the dinner that from his point of view "we have problems. They don't seem to be too serious, though from the Israeli standpoint they seem to be serious."

He was asked if there was going to be a treaty signing.

"I don't know," he replied. "We'll have to see."

Begin, asked the same question, said, "Maybe we'll sign and maybe we won't. There are still difficulties Hopefully we shall overcome them." Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, said the president was considering whether to send Vance to Cairo. Another U.S. official said it all depended on what the Cabinet decided.

"By noon tomorrow (Monday) we should know what the situation is and whether Vance will go to Cairo," Brzezinski said.

A U.S. official close to the negotiations said both Sadat and Begin have made concessions. He said both have agreed on the concept of a target date for implementation of Palestinian self-government.

"When you get over the palaver, we're inching toward the decisive moment," he said. "A month ago both sides were adamant and would not give at all. But both Sadat and Begin have made concessions."

Begin and Carter toasted each other at a state dinner in the president's honor held in the Marc Chagall Hall of the Knesset (parliament) building. Begin convened his cabinet immediately afterwards for what his spokesman termed a decision making and clarification session.

Outside the Knesset, balancing police scattered about 300 right-wing extremists protesting Carter's peace mission in a scene reminiscent of anti-war demonstrations in the United States during the 1960s. Police said they arrested about 40 people.

A tired foreign minister

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan sat through a marathon debate on the proposed peace treaty with Egypt Sunday. The climax of the treaty debate, brought to the Middle East personally by President Carter, is expected today.

U.S. promises Egypt millions

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Carter has assured President Anwar Sadat of greater military and economic aid to Egypt than ever before once a treaty with Israel is signed, Egyptian officials said Sunday.

But radical Arab groups vowed Sunday to do whatever they could to bring Sadat's government to its knees if Egypt signs a peace treaty with Israel.

"Never before has the United States gone this far in relations with Egypt and in such clear-cut terms," said a senior Egyptian official, citing unequivocal remarks by Carter in his speech to the Egyptian parliament Saturday.

Carter pledged economic aid to Egypt apparently surpassing the $1-billion annual assistance extended over the last four years, the official said.

Referring to Sadat's national development plans, Carter told the Egyptian parliament Saturday. "My government, for its part, with the full power and influence of the United States of America, is ready to share the burden of that commitment with you."

Responding to Carter's remarks, radical Palestinian guerrilla leader George Habash urged Arabs Sunday to take decisive action against Egypt and use the oil weapon to give President Carter a "few slaps" in the face.

Habash, leader of the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, criticized all Arab governments for being "too soft" with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

"I tell this to the leaders of Syria, Libya, Algeria, South Yemen and the other progressive regimes ... you must take decisive action against Sadat and imperialist interests in the region," Habash told a cheering crowd at Beirut's Arab University to commemorate the PFLP's Martir's Day.

Iranian upheaval cut oil cushion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A report published by the Heritage Foundation says the disruption of oil production in Iran has reduced world oil supplies to a level that had not been anticipated until the late 1980s.

One of its policy analysts, James Phillips, said in an article that the Iranian upheaval "has demonstrated the extent to which oil-importing states have become vulnerable to unpredictable events beyond their control."

He said the initial impact of the Iranian oil shutdown was not as severe as the 1973 Arab oil embargo but implications in the long run are worse.

"The Iranian crisis has removed the world's cushion of excess oil production for an indefinite period, leaving the taut global supply system fragile and more vulnerable to other surprise interruptions," Phillips said.

Evans says teacher layoff bill needed

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — To deal with the implementation of the 1 percent initiative, Idaho school boards should have the power to lay off teachers if necessary, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans said Sunday.

In Twin Falls Sunday for the dedication of the new $4.9 million Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School, Evans said this year is difficult, but the 1979-80 school year will present the real crunch in Idaho's public schools.

The funding crisis could be so bad some districts will be forced to lay off teachers, Evans said, adding that he would support a bill giving school boards the power to do that.

But how difficult next year will be will depend on the results of the special revaluation of all property in the state," Evans said.

Evans said a revaluation of all property for tax purposes is one of the provisions of the 1 percent initiative implemented by Gov. John Evans on Friday.

Evans is optimistic about funds for education in Idaho in spite of the 1 percent bill.

"We'll always have children to educate, and we will always have parents who want the best possible education for those children," Evans said. "And I am optimistic enough to think that they will demand and get what is necessary for that good education."

Evans said he favors a bill now before the Idaho lawmakers giving school boards the authority to establish "layoff" policies.

"The school boards have the authority to employ people and to terminate them if the service they perform is not satisfactory. They don't currently have any authority to terminate the individuals who are doing satisfactory work."

"Our teachers need protection, but our school administrators and boards also need protection in the face of what may become crucial funding shortages," Evans added.

He said the bill would provide reasons for layoffs. These would primarily be for economic reasons such as implementation of the 1 percent, he said.

School districts would have to show proof of the financial necessity of terminating a teacher or teachers, and these employees would be given proper notification and opportunity to respond, Evans said.

"I hope we will never have to use the authority the bill provides, but if the need arises, we have to have the proper tools," he said.

Evans said tax rates frozen at 1978 levels apply only to one taxing potential the schools have. Only property taxes are frozen, and the 1 percent bill does not freeze sales tax, income tax and other special revenue sources.

Evans explained the public school systems have two important sources of revenue — the property tax within their own districts and the state school funds which come from other tax channels. The state educational leader said districts will probably get a smaller increase in the coming year from state sources, and they will probably not meet cost of living increases. Evans said most districts will get between 2 and 3 percent more money in the coming year and there will have to be some belt-tightening, but it will not be a drastic cut.

U.S. courts can learn from Europe, study says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A study for the Justice Department suggested Sunday that the United States look to Europe for some novel ideas that could help unclog court calendars.

The study, which examined practices in 11 European countries, concluded that some cases should be handled by administrative rather than criminal panels and minor crimes should be decriminalized.

"If you decriminalize some of the relatively minor violations that are treated as crimes in the United States, you solve a lot of problems," wrote William Felstner, the University of Southern California professor who conducted the study for the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

However, he added, "We will never be able to assess the systematic value of such innovations unless we give them a trial on a small scale and under experimentally controlled conditions."

European techniques reviewed included on-the-spot fines by police officers, prosecutorial fines for petty crimes and the use of lay judges and lay courts in civil and minor criminal cases.

Switzerland had had spot fines on a fixed schedule since 1973, the report said. Swiss officials estimate about 50 percent of all traffic offenses are cleared immediately by police officers. In 1973, $9,733,600 was collected under this system.

Swiss officials told Felstner they did not believe the cash system leads to police corruption. In any case, the report said, the use of credit cards in the United States might further inhibit corruption problems.

Belgian offenders of minor traffic violations buy an amount of postage stamps equal to the fine, fit them to the violations notice and mail them to their traffic departments.

Sweden started an on-the-spot fine system in 1968, the study said, "to reduce the work of an overloaded court system and to eliminate the stigma felt by people who became defendants in the criminal courts for minor offenses."

Felstner advocated West Germany's use of negotiated pleas or penal orders, prepared by a prosecutor and approved by a judge, for misdemeanors. In these cases, no jail sentence can be imposed.

A controversial "Peoples Court" in West Germany handles cases of workers caught committing criminal acts at their factories, the study said. The accused are tried on the premises before a joint council of management and workers. The penalties include dismissal, threat of dismissal, fines, reprimands, demotions, exclusion from social benefit plans and reduced chance of promotion.

Felstner said European procedures of using administrative courts for land use, health and safety violations also could help ease the overburdened U.S. court system.

The study was conducted in West Germany, Sweden, Yugoslavia, Denmark, Norway, Belgium, Hungary, Austria, Poland, Switzerland and France.

Italian freed

POTENZA, Italy (UPI) — Police wearing bulletproof jackets and firing submachine guns raided a hideout in a wood Sunday and freed a chained Christian Democratic party official kidnapped four days ago.

The Red Brigades and Front Line urban guerrilla gangs claimed responsibility for the kidnapping of Francesco Falco, 38, last Thursday, but police said after his release it appeared to have been an underworld job.

Police at Potenza said Falco, a minor party official in Rome, was rescued when 24 specially trained police surrounded the hideout near the village of Vulture, 25 miles from here.

Murderer sought

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — City and state authorities, working from an anonymous tip that led to a secret witness, say they have solved the murders of six restaurant employees and three members of a Texas family, but the suspect has eluded police.

Nine charges of first-degree murder were drawn up Sunday against Roger Dale Stafford, 27, and were expected to be filed Monday.

A nationwide bulletin was issued Saturday for Stafford's arrest. Stafford was identified as a transient, but police said he was believed to be in the Decatur, Ala., area.

City police and Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation officials said Stafford was implicated in the slayings by a secret witness who has been in protective custody for the past week.

The witness was identified as a woman, but police are withholding her name for security reasons and would not comment on reports she was the wife of one of the Staffords and had driven the getaway car in the killings.

Authorities said the case-breaking lead came from a call Jan. 3 concerning composite drawings of the suspects that had been released.

Officials said the anonymous phone call was made by a truck driver who gave authorities the names of the suspects. The information led police to Chicago where the woman was found. Police said the woman returned voluntarily to Oklahoma to aid the investigation.

Weicker running

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker, whose star shone brightest during his party's Watergate trauma, has scheduled a Monday news conference at the historic Old State House in Hartford to announce his candidacy for president.

He becomes the fifth man to make a formal bid for the GOP presidential nomination.

Five other Republicans have formed campaign or exploratory committees, but have not yet made their intentions official.

Weicker, 47, has been a familiar face in Connecticut politics since the early 1960s. He made his mark nationally a decade later as a highly visible member of the Senate committee that investigated Watergate.

Plane-launched missiles would render Midwest a prime Soviet target

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — A top Air Force general says basing MX missiles aboard aircraft would make the north-central United States more of a target for Soviet missiles.

Lt. Gen. Tom Stafford, Air Force deputy chief of staff, told the Omaha World-Herald in a copyright story Sunday that MX-carrying planes would have to be based at least 800 miles inland to enable the aircraft to become airborne before submarine-launched Soviet missiles began falling.

Therefore, he said, an air-mobile MX system would have to be based in a 14-state area extending from Michigan's Upper Peninsula and northern Illinois to just beyond the Continental Divide and into northern New Mexico.

States in the region are Omaha, Denver, Des Moines, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Milwaukee and part of the Chicago metropolitan area.

Stafford said the area, which now contains Minuteman missiles and nuclear-armed bombers, would have ten times as many missiles aimed at it if the air-mobile system were adopted.

He said "every little town that has an airport is probably going to be a target" if the air-mobile system is adopted, and he said the Soviets "could use an air barrage" and "could explode a whole series of ICBM's in the air and cover the whole area."

Stafford said the Air Force normally does not fly planes with nuclear weapons on board because of the potential hazard from plane crashes. But he said an air-mobile MX system would require planes to carry live nuclear weapons and large boosters to disperse altitudes.

He also said he feels more than 300 airplanes and missiles would be needed, and more military air bases would be needed in the north central region.

The Air Force has spent several years studying ways to base the MX, a powerful long-range missile the Air Force said it needs to compensate for the increasing vulnerability of the Strategic Air Command's Minuteman missile force.

Iranian executions continue

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Islamic revolutionaries Sunday executed six men convicted in summary trials on mass murder, sex and drugs charges, revolutionary officials said.

Other persons were flogged for gambling and promiscuity and two youths were sentenced to die — one by stoning — for raping an 11-year-old girl.

The deaths brought to 50 the number of announced executions by revolutionary courts headed by turbaned mullahs acting on behalf of the 78-year-old Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The executions were carried out in defiance of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan's provisional government. Bazargan has called for an end to the summary trials.

An estimated 1,000 women, protesting Khomeini's demands they stop wearing Western dress and return to the traditional head-to-toe black veil, demonstrated outside the foreign ministry Sunday. But male revolutionaries, who called the women "whores," "American agents" and "Pahlavi (shah) dolls," Saturday, stayed away.

Observers said the latest trials indicated Bazargan still was having to share his authority after bargaining with Khomeini in the holy city of Qom, south of Tehran.

Bazargan, 71, apparently was unable to control marauding armed revolutionaries.

Ibrahim Yazdi, assistant to the prime minister for revolutionary affairs, said Sunday all revolutionary committees would be gradually disbanded.

But revolutionaries in Tehran divided the city into 14 committees working on law enforcement duties, indicating they had no intention of abandoning their role. A communiqué from a supervisory body communique, however, limited militiamen's operations within set areas by forbidding arrests without written warrant.

At present, the revolutionaries work on behalf of Khomeini and, quite often, carry out arrests and executions on their own.

On revolutionary court in Astara, on the Soviet border, sentenced to death two youths found guilty of raping an 11-year-old girl. One of the youths was condemned to be stoned to death compounded by the dissemination of Persian-language Kayhan newspaper reported.

Seven men accused of gambling received five lashes each and a man and a woman accused of promiscuity received 20 lashes each in Shahre Kord, west Iran.

Bazargan's problems have been compounded by the disintegration of police and army authority following the shah's ouster.

Top mileage cars

The car which turned up with the worst mileage on the list was the Aston-Martin V8, at 8 m.p.g.

The Environmental Protection Agency said the only difference in the top 10 cars in the latest list compared with the initial one released last fall was the addition of the Honda Civic.

The new top 10 Volkswagen Rabbit Diesel, five-speed manual transmission, 41 m.p.g.; Volkswagen Rabbit Diesel, four-speed manual transmission, 40 m.p.g.; Volkswagen Dasher Diesel, four-speed manual transmission, 38 m.p.g.; Datsun 210, five-speed manual transmission, 35 m.p.g.; Dodge Colt hatchback, four-speed manual transmission, 34 m.p.g.

Census Bureau chided

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Uncle Sam is getting ready to count heads again — and, not surprisingly, he's running into his share of criticism.

In the past, the Census Bureau has been chided for asking an assortment of sensitive questions about babies, family income and bathroom fixtures. But critics of the 1980 census — apparently reflecting the cost-cutting times — are asking whether America's once-a-decade head count is worth all the money, $1.50 for every man, woman and child in the country.

The critics are complaining that the 1980 census will cost $1 billion — more than four times the $220 million cost of the 1970 census.

Much of the increase, according to the Census Bureau, is to correct 1970 census errors that led to short-counting the entire population by 2.5 percent — 1.9 percent for whites and 7.7 percent for blacks.

Associate Census Director Daniel B. Levine told a House subcommittee last week the bureau will rely chiefly on mail returns next year as it did a decade ago. The returns are now ready for the printer.

But instead of getting addresses solely from postal information, the bureau will now search through commercial mailing lists, driver license data and utility records.

He said the bureau expects 80 percent of the returns to be mailed back. It will telephone households that fail to mail them back or answer all the questions.

In addition, a multi-lingual crew of 265,000 census takers will swarm into minority residential areas, check vagrants on the street and even search for occupants of "abandoned" buildings.

But the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, says it doubts the results will be worth the $1 billion cost.

And Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., chairman of the House census subcommittee, says he doubts there'll be much improvement in accuracy despite the increased cost.

Getting back to the reason for it all, how many people does the Census Bureau expect to find when the 1980 questionnaires are sent out, filled in, returned and compiled?

About 222 million, a spokesman said.

Only the West basks in spring weather

By United Press International
Southern Idaho enjoyed spring-like weather Sunday with temperatures in the high 50s.

Temperatures are expected to be even warmer this week. Many people from Weiser to Idaho Falls took advantage of the warm weather and began cleaning their yards, their garages or simply lounged in the moderate weather.

Other parts of the country weren't as lucky. An unseasonable blast of arctic air swept across the Great Lakes Sunday with a frigid reminder of the bitter winter but provided at least a temporary reprieve for bottom lands along rivers swollen by the Great Flood.

The mercury plunged to a record low of 3 degrees in Chicago to stem the flooding tide in rampaging northern Illinois rivers.

"Everything's at a standstill. It's not melting, that's for sure," Will County Sheriff's dispatcher Bonnie Williams said of the ice-glutted Kankakee River south of Chicago that has forced the evacuation of dozens of residents.

"Some of the people have gone back to their homes, but at their own risk. We've been checking the area every hour."

The cold front spread rain mixed with snow over most of the Atlantic Coast before heading out to sea. Showers lingered over the northern half of Florida and snow spread from the Ohio Valley into the Great Lakes and western New York.

"The (cold) weather has had a moderating influence on the flooding," said Fred Meier of the National Weather Service in Chicago. "It has halted the input of new water and is helping reverse the (flooding) situation. Almost everywhere, flood crests have been reached and the rivers are receding."

"There are no big storms seen in the immediate future that would make a significant contribution to the runoff. But ice jammers are the big problem on the Kankakee."

Panel wants vitamin E sales throttled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of experts Sunday recommended that the Food and Drug Administration crack down on vitamins sold strictly for therapeutic reasons — a small segment of the market.

The FDA commissioned the panel to study the issue as part of its review of all non-prescription drugs.

The panel recommended that the government forbid sales of Vitamin E by itself as a drug and sold all vitamins sold as over-the-counter drugs be labeled for use only "when need for such therapy has been determined by a physician."

The FDA said the recommendations, if adopted, would affect only a small percent of the vitamins American take.

The rules would not cover any vitamin sold as a dietary supplement, such as the "One-A-Day" brand and related products, since the FDA considers them a food — not a drug.

Even vitamin E could continue on the market, as long as it was labeled as a dietary supplement and not as a drug. The panel said vitamin E "has no proven therapeutic value and vitamin E deficiency is virtually unknown."

The experts singled out nine vitamins — C, B12, folic acid, niacin, B6, riboflavin, thiamine, A and D — and three minerals — calcium, iron and zinc — that they said should be allowed to continue on the market as single ingredient drugs.

"Products containing combinations of vitamins and minerals may be sold as non-prescription drugs because most conditions that cause deficiency affect more than one nutrient," the panel said.

"Non-prescription sales of products containing several minerals should not be allowed, since few mineral deficiencies can be treated safely with non-prescription drugs."

In addition, the experts said no vitamin-touted as a drug should be allowed to call itself "natural." Since there is no evidence that "natural" vitamins and minerals are better than synthetic ones.

Study claims state certificate-of-need laws don't do much

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new study says state laws designed to cut hospital costs have failed and in some instances have frustrated anti-inflation efforts.

The study published by the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research was written by Associate Professor David S. Salkever of The Johns Hopkins University and Professor Thomas W. Brice of the University of Washington.

Their report was issued while Congress is considering an administration plan to place a voluntary lid of 9.7 percent on the annual rate of hospital cost increases.

Salkever and Brice contend that certificate-of-need legislation that requires hospitals to get advance authorization for new capital investments do not significantly affect total investment by hospitals but alter only its composition.

The Idaho legislature currently is considering certificate of need legislation.

The authors caution that their information is based on figures for the years between 1968 and 1972, but said that during that period certificate-of-need regulation "had no appreciable effect on total hospital investment but did bring about changes in its composition. Specifically, certificate-of-need controls resulted in a decrease in the rate of growth of bed supply and an increase in investment in quality-enhancing projects."

They said no significant savings in total hospital costs were achieved through the use of the controls.

"Savings from the lower admission rates and total hospital days resulting from control over bed growth were approximately offset by higher average per diem costs stemming from the upgrading of styles of care," the authors said, adding, "Indeed, the results suggest the possibility that investment controls may actually have exacerbated the cost inflation problem" between 1968 and 1972.

Salkever and Brice said consistent standards for reviewing expenditure plans are virtually non-existent because information about the supply, uses and costs of special equipment and services is generally sketchy.

South Yemen warns U.S. to stop aid

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Marxist South Yemen said Sunday it might reconsider the truce in its border war with pro-Western North Yemen unless the United States ends military aid to the North Yeminites, a Kuwaiti newspaper reported.

The Kuwait Times said the warning came from South Yemen Foreign Minister Mohammed Saleh Motel in talks with Kuwaiti officials. It quoted Motel as saying his government "will reconsider the cease-fire agreement if the United States continues to send military aid to North Yemen."

President Carter last week ordered the Pentagon to speed up arms shipments to North Yemen under provisions that did not call for prior congressional approval.

Carter also ordered the aircraft carrier Constellation and support vessels to the region in a move to ease fears in Saudi Arabia that the unrest or "its southwestern flank might spread north to threaten the oil wealth of the Arabian peninsula."

The Saudi newspaper Arab News said Sunday, however, it feared the U.S. show of strength might prompt similar action by the Soviets, who back the South Yeminites.

"Every day that passes witnesses increased military movement by the United States," the newspaper said. "So does each day witness a move by the Soviet Union in favor of South Yemen."

"This is something that the states of the Arabian peninsula have always dreaded and have so far tried to ward off."

Saudi Arabian newspapers often reflect government thinking.

Einstein: Things are not what they seem

By GEORGE F. WILL
WASHINGTON — There is a gentle but cosmic joke in the fact that the roving gaze of journalism has fallen, appreciatively, on Albert Einstein at the centenary of his birth. Journalists fancy themselves empirical, skeptical —

In a word, modern. Einstein's 10,000,000,000,000,000,000 atoms, give or take a few. Modern physics began with the study of the structure of a single atom, of sub-atomic particles, such as the neutron. From impressionism through cubism and beyond, modern art has reflected modern physics: Artists have reduced visual experience to its molecular units of shape, color, sense data. But as Jacob Bronowski said, modern physics itself is "the great collective work of art of the 20th century."

Modern physics also is the source of the distinctive modern fear. At 5:28 a.m., July 16, 1945, at Alamogordo, N.M., for the first time since Prometheus, some people questioned whether fire is more good than bad. But for centuries the advance of science has been worse than frightening. It has been humbling.

Copernicus removed mankind from the center of the universe, but at least Newton said the universe is intelligible, even decorous. Newton was a great orderer, whose clockwork theory of the universe gave rise, through the seepage of science into the wider culture, to clockwork art — the dignified classicism of the 18th century. And it gave rise to clockwork political theory, the clearest expression of which is the U.S. Constitution, a serene system of "checks and balances," 190 years old this month. Then came the three makers of the modern mind, and of the modern sense of disorder — Darwin, Freud, Einstein.

Darwin imbedded man in the mud; or, more precisely, he said that mankind is continuous with the slime from which mankind has crept. Rather than nature's final word, mankind may be a early bead on an endless string.

Darwin gave an unsettling view of the childhood of the species; Freud gave an unsettling view of childhood. And he linked the artifices of civilization with the uncaged furies in the jungle within man.

Newtonian physics could be explained visually, at least a bit, for laymen, on a billiard table. But Einsteinian physics wraps in uncertainty the concepts we use, from childhood on, to make sense of everyday experience — the concepts of space, time, matter. Modern physics puts laymen severely in their place, which is outside the conversation of science.

Yet Einstein, who expanded our sense of life's mysteriousness, insisted that the essential Einsteinian insight is philosophic, and moral and equalitarian, and it is this: The wiser you are, the more you believe — in equality, because the difference between what the most and the least learned people know is inexpressibly trivial in relation to all this is unknown.

Action spells relief

©The Boston Globe Newspaper Co. BOSTON — I once worked in an office with a sign that read: Don't Just Stand There, Do Something. I always wanted to rip that thing off the wall, but it occurs to me now that it was the perfect American slogan, a motto worth being immortalized in needlepoint.

Americans seem to do "something" pretty eagerly and often pretty well. But we "just stand there" very badly. We get as antsy when our government is doing nothing as when our kids are doing it. We are much more in tune with busy-ness, action, and we prefer living with at least the illusion of purpose.

"Even if it doesn't work," wrote Henry Miller, "there's something healthy and invigorating about direct action." And most of us would agree. I suppose that's half the reason why we were so distracted by the way Carter handled — or didn't handle — foreign policy during the past few weeks. What he called restraint looked a lot like passivity, and there was a general sense of relief when he left for the Middle East.

How do you spell relief in America? A-C-T-I-O-N.

Jerry Brown knows that, too. Since he decided to run for the presidency, he talks a lot less about lowering our expectations and more about raising our eyes to the heavens, or to the exploration of the solar system. He waxes on about expanding, as well as accepting.

"Lower Your Expectations" wouldn't, after all, make a very good bumper sticker. Most of us are the inheritors of a Can-Do philosophy. We instinctively prefer the sort of questions posed by Karl Malden-in-that-silly American Express ad: "What will you do? What WILL you do?"

But now we come smack up against the realities of what we can't do — like dictate events in foreign countries and devise perfect social solutions in our own. We even have to think about when the best thing to do might be nothing.

I don't know many people who truly believe that idle brains are the only devil's workshop. Brains working overtime may be more dangerous. Someone once wrote to me that, "A million professional sunbathers do a whole lot less harm than one very busy criminal or even at times a well-intentioned social planner."

It's true that doctors, social workers, members of Congress are asked, maybe for the first time, to do less. Medical people are criticized when they intervene too eagerly in terminal illness. Congress is criticized if it regulates too much. Social workers are criticized if they "do good" to excess.

It's hard to know these days when inaction is a cop-out and when it's the better choice. It's hardest, though, to do nothing, even when it's "right."

We run into this sort of problem all the time, even with our kids. When should we intervene, "help" with their homework of their social problems or their moral decisions? When do they need our advice and authority? When will our best efforts work? When will they only build a fine resistance? When do kids have to figure things out for themselves?

But even if the best policy is a hands-off policy, it can be agonizing. The agony of not doing. "Action may not always bring happiness. But there is no happiness without action." How far off the mark was Disraeli? For many of us, inaction always feels like repression of will, a conscious suppression of the innate desire to DO SOMETHING.

I suppose that's not the worst of human flaws or of national flaws. It's one that can make us act precipitously, even make mistakes, but it also makes us flexible and searching.

Gas on long-term credit

©1979, Los Angeles Times-Syndicate
WASHINGTON — As the price of gasoline keeps going up, people may have resorted to buying it on long-term credit.

The scene is the branch of Morgan Chemical Bank of America. Mr. Klinge is ushered toward the loan officer's desk.

"Can I help you, Mr. Klinge?"

"Yes sir, I would like to make a gasoline loan."

"Very good. How much gas were you going to buy?"

"A full tank. We want to attend our daughter's graduation."

The loan officer takes out a form.

"We don't usually advance money for a full tank of gasoline without some collateral. What were you planning to put up for the loan?"

"My house. It's in-tiltop-condition on an acre of land."

"And what else?"

"The house won't be enough?"

"Mr. Klinge, do you know what a full tank of gas costs these days? The bank demands more than just a house for collateral."

"I was afraid of that. What about my house and my 1980 Cadillac?"

"Are we talking about leaded or unleaded gasoline?"

Mr. Klinge says nervously, "Unleaded."

The loan officer looks at his chart. "That won't be sufficient. What else can you give as a guarantee you'll pay back the loan."

"I have a hundred shares of IBM which is now selling at $30 a share."

"That just might do it. You'll have to leave the stock with us."

"I'll do that. I didn't know the bank demanded so much collateral for a gasoline loan."

"We consider these loans very high-risk ventures," the loan officer said. "When we first started giving them, people would take the money, buy the gas, use it up, and then default. Since there was nothing left in their tanks to recover, we've had to make sure that in the future we could get something else back in exchange. How long do you want to take to pay us back?"

"How much time do I have?"

The loan officer referred to his chart. "You can pay us over a period of 24 months, 36 months or string it out over four years. I am obligated under the "truth in lending" law to advise you that we are permitted to charge 20 percent interest on gasoline loans. Of course, you can pay the loan back sooner, but there is a penalty."

"I think I'll be able to pay it back in 36 months providing my wife can get a job."

"All right. Here are the papers to fill out and these are for the gas station attendant to sign, attesting to the fact that he filled up your car with a full tank. When you bring in the deeds to your house, automobile, and the IBM stock, we will send the check directly to the gas station."

"Thank you very much sir. You don't know what this gasoline loan means to me."

"Mr. Klinge, I wouldn't approve it if I didn't have faith in you. Besides, this bank believes people should have the good things in life today and not have to wait until they're old and grow before they can afford to buy a tankful of fuel."

Both men get up and shake hands. The loan officer says, "And don't forget — when you pay us back in 36 months we'll be happy to refinance another tank for you. Have a safe trip."

Get behind gasohol, Idaho

Idaho, a state with little oil and even less coal, isn't mentioned much in various plans to lessen the nation's dependence on foreign petroleum.

A group of farmers would like to change that. The Idaho-Gasohol Commission, composed mostly of southern Idaho growers, thinks crops grown in the state and converted to a combustible wood alcohol would help ease the national addiction to foreign oil.

Gasohol, if you haven't heard, is a blend of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethanol (grain alcohol). It can be burned in today's cars without damage to modern engines.

Filer farmer Leo Stokesberry is one of dozens of gasohol believers who have stumped southern Idaho this winter drumming up contributions to aid the Idaho Gasohol Commission's effort to build a gasohol production plant somewhere along the Snake River farm belt.

Stokesberry's and the others who are working on behalf of gasohol have undertaken a commendable project.

The fuel appears to be an easy, efficient way to reduce by as much as 10 percent the U.S. consumption of gasoline.

This savings would amount to more than $600 million a year if gasohol were burned in every car in the country.

But drivers aren't going to be burning gasohol until more states provide the impetus for gasohol production.

The Idaho legislature this session turned down a request to fund gasohol research.

The denial of research funds was made using the now standard one percent argument. The legislature argued tax-conscious Idahoans wouldn't want state money spent on non-essential gasohol research after endorsing proposition 1 last fall.

Research into a product able to lessen our dependence on foreign oil shouldn't, and probably wouldn't, incur the wrath of Idaho's voters.

To the contrary, gasohol research probably would be just the way Idahoans would want their tax money spent.

Other states have found this to be true. In Iowa, 200 gas stations have sold 2.7 million gallons of this hybrid fuel in the last three months after a state effort was begun to market gasohol.

The Iowa gasohol project created a new market for farm goods and helped lessen the energy crunch as well.

The technology needed to produce gasohol on a nationwide scale exists today. The price of gasohol, in the wake of the Iranian oil cutback, is now competitive with gasoline.

Idaho farmers should follow the example of Leo Stokesberry and the others behind the Idaho Gasohol Commission and begin an active promotion of this fuel.

Legislative audit report tells where tax money goes

BOISE — Excluding perhaps, late night re-runs of Lawrence Welk, there may be nothing duller than a legislative audit report.

But pound for pound, there's no better text book on Idaho government than a stack of these thin little folders packed with statistics and figures. Don't ask an agency head if he's doing his job; grab the last audit of his department and see where the money went.

The office of the Legislative Auditor was established by the legislature as a full-time watch dog post, a non-partisan office of bookkeepers charged with telling us, every now and then, just what really happened to our taxes. Creating the office was one of the legislature's better moves.

Unfortunately the watch dog has no teeth. Most taxpayers (and more than a few legislators) are either unaware the office exists or unaware of just what it does. The result is that one of the best tools available for controlling government is largely unused.

The problem is that the follow-up process is inadequate. One recent case underscores the difficulties which exist.

Last January an audit was released on the state-owned Lava Hot Springs Resort, in Bannock County. That audit said serious bookkeeping problems existed at the resort, and that embezzlement of several thousand dollars was a possibility.

The audit went to several committee chairmen, all of whom were at the time more concerned with other items. One budget committee devoted a quick 30 minutes to discussion of the report and hurried on to more pressing matters.

This year, during discussion of an unrelated matter at the resort, members of one legislative committee learned of the audit. For most of them it was the first time they were aware of possible financial irregularities.

But again, the committee in question had a full schedule and more pressing matters than a handful of dollars at a tiny eastern Idaho resort. Employees of the resort denied any real problem existed. The legislative auditor insisted his report was accurate and that state funds had been used unwisely and perhaps illegally. Each side called the other liars, and there the matter rests.

I don't know if funds went into strange pockets at Lava Hot Springs. Unfortunately no one else does either. And it doesn't look as if we'll ever find out. This uncertainty is disservice to taxpayers if irregularities do exist, and a terrible blot on the record of employees at the resort if, as they claim, they are innocent.

The Lava Hot Springs report is important only in that it points to a larger problem. No formal framework exists for follow-up action on audits. Not only do most legislators never learn what these important documents say, but no committee is charged with seeing that the recommendations of the audit are followed. In theory, the attorney general can take legal action. In fact, he too, is limited in staff and time, and will move against only the most blatant abuses.

If legislators wish to leave the state with a true legacy of responsible government then this watchdog should be given teeth. Each time an audit is released it should be sent to every member of the germane committee in both the House and Senate. A formal committee meeting should then be set aside for the legislative auditor to publicly discuss his findings.

While most of these committee meetings would be so technical and dry that Lawrence Welk would seem a relief, the end result would be that a few less tax dollars fall through the cracks.

It seems to happen at the end of every legislative session. Certain legislators seem to go out of their way to speak on every issue, checking with the press to see if they missed anything.

Any yes, it is saying, and the voice of the candidate seeking higher office is heard in the land.

Three legislators are now being seriously discussed as possible congressional or senatorial candidates in 1980. That year, the political heavens are now saying, could see both of Idaho's Congressmen challenging Democratic Senator Frank Church.

This not only means the two congressional seats would be open; but that a third and perhaps fourth candidate would be likely in the senatorial race. In short, 1980 could be a year of flux, when a bright, aspiring politician could make his move.

The three legislators being mentioned most often in having this in mind are Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston; Sen. Dean VanEngelen, R-Burley; and Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho Falls. All are bright, personable, and among the better legislators in this session.

Mitchell might go for the first district seat if Steve Symms challenges Church. Craig has similar thoughts. It's been years since that district has had a congressman who could walk and chew gum at the same time. Voters there might not grow how to react to two literate, intelligent, decent candidates in the same race.

VanEngelen has set his sights a little higher and is toying with the idea of challenging Church.

Man with "atrophied brain" sues Michigan

NEW YORK TIMES SERVICE
TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. — Jack Smith was born in the State Hospital for the mentally ill here 34 years ago and was institutionalized until recently.

As a result he has become a mental cripple. It is charged in a $3 million damage suit filed in his behalf against the state of Michigan.

Smith, a good-looking man with gray hair and blue eyes, now lives quietly in a foster home about 13 miles south of the mental institution where he was born.

He is aware of the sudden public interest in him and enjoys the several interviews he has given reporters, but whether he comprehends what the lawsuit is about is not known, according to Debra and Tom Williams, who own and operate the home.

"He is not mentally ill," his court-appointed attorney, Kenneth Walz, said. "His brain has atrophied from misuse. He is mentally retarded socially and intellectually. He is mentally retarded because of his life-long institutionalization."

The record, Walz said in a telephone interview, shows that Smith's mother, Minnie Smith, was admitted at Traverse City State Hospital in February 1925, that she was "laughing and crying almost all the time" and was unable to walk because of some form of paralysis.

The mother delivered her son two days after admission and died several hours after.

Walz said the baby's father was described as irresponsible and an alcoholic of "rather less than normal intelligence."

The belief was, Walz added, that because of the child's background he must be mentally retarded, and a psychologist involved in the case, George Kinney, agreed that this was "common practice at the time."

"We're talking about guilt by association," the attorney said. "Like mother, like child."

The boy was never put up for adoption or placed in a foster home. He was transferred to a state orphanage for several months, then shipped off to Lapeer State Home and Training School in 1925 for a hernia operation. He stayed there for the next 30 years.

He was described as a "pretty baby with beautiful smiles and dimples" who appeared to be "bright." His I.Q. and achievements improved steadily during childhood though he was classified as of "upper imbecile level, unstable, slightly trainable."

When he was 12 his academic education ceased, despite evidence that he was interested in his school work, because it was thought he could do better in an industrial program.

Lapeer State Home, now the Oakdale Center, was excessively overcrowded and understaffed in the 1940s and 1950s and its patients were poorly clothed and fed. In 1954 a judge reported that 99 percent of its inmates had been illegally committed.

Smith spent his share of time in the medieval maximum security section of Lapeer sitting silently on a straight-back chair all day or scrubbing one spot on the floor for hours.

In 1961 he was classified as "dangerous and aggressive" and was transferred back to the State Hospital for the mentally ill, where he had been born.

Smith's story was brought to light by Probate Judge Kenneth J. Mackness of Grand Traverse County.

"In 1974 the Michigan Legislature enacted a new mental health code, which among things provided for a judicial review of all hospitalized cases," Judge Mackness said.

"Jack Smith's appearance before me in 1976 was just part of the routine for re-determination," Mackness recalled. "I was impressed by the fact that this middle-aged man was present, polite, well-dressed — there was nothing that would suggest long-term hospitalization."

He ordered an evaluation by Dr. Walter Turke, an independent psychiatrist, who indicated that Smith was not mentally ill or dangerous.

The Grand Traverse Area Services for the Developmentally Disabled soon after reported that Smith was a victim of institutionalization, inadequate medical care and lack of education.

"I faced a dilemma — it was clear he should be discharged from the hospital but Mr. Smith was so impaired that it would be unwise to put him out on the street," Mackness said. Smith was placed in the foster home under the supervision of Kinney's organization.

Officials of the State Department of Mental Health will not comment on the specifics of Smith's case because of the suit, but they insist such an incident could "not happen today" because of new state regulations and safeguards.

Name changed for a job's sake

ROCKVILLE, Md. (UPI) — An engineer in a Washington, D.C. suburb has become eligible for preferential job treatment from the county government simply because he changed his name.

The Washington Post reported Sunday that Roberto Eduardo Leon, who was born 56 years ago in San Diego as Robert Earl Lee, legally changed his name Feb. 21. He then asked that county reclassify his race from white to Hispanic, making him eligible for promotion over equally-qualified white males.

Leon said he didn't change his name just for job-related reasons, however. "I was brought up in the Southwest with lots of Spanish influence. I took Spanish in high school, and my grandfather was of Spanish origin."

Leon also said he intends to retire in Chile and will find it easier "to blend in" in the culture with a Spanish surname.

Leon answered in Spanish when a reporter called Sunday morning, after the newspaper story appeared, but declined further comment on his name change.

"I'm not really seeking publicity," he said, in English. "Anything that the press would print they print with their own ideas in mind."

53% of households

have but 2 people

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the first time in American history more than half of all households consist of just one or two people — 53 percent were in that category last year.

And, two Census Bureau analysts predict that 45 percent of all Americans born in 1978 will live part of their lives with just one person.

Felix Clerk and Arthur Norton make the prediction in the current issue of American Demographics magazine, citing current trends as the base for their projection.

Guru, not father,

observed birth

ABERGAVENTNY, Wales (UPI) — A hospital is being sued because the man who sat silent and cross-legged on the floor watching the birth of a baby boy was not the child's father — but the mother's guru.

"We all thought the chap on the floor was the husband. We were amazed to find out he wasn't," said a member of the maternity unit.

The father is suing the hospital in Wales because he had asked to attend the birth but was not informed when his wife went into labor.

Horoscope

Ariens should get early start today; Pisceans should avoid arguing with anyone

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when it would be to your best interests to forget your desires to have a good time and to focus your energies on problems that come up in your line of endeavor.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have much work ahead of you, so be sure to get an early start for best results. The evening is best spent happily at home.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't expect favors from others today. Putting your business affairs on a sound basis is wise now. Think constructively.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you handle our work intelligently during the day. Forget a tendency to spend money unwisely and maintain present security.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure to order needed supplies early and save time for other activities later. Follow the advice of an expert.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You may be tempted to spend more money than you can afford, so try to save money instead and be wise. Set up a workable budget.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study a new system that will make your work easier and bring you more benefits in the days ahead. Take needed health treatments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Not a good day for starting new projects but fine for getting caught up on work you have postponed. Be more understanding of your mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't rely on friends for help today since they need help themselves in their own affairs. Don't neglect important business matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure you follow every rule and regulation that applies to you and don't irk a higher-up in any way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Not a good day for expansion, so postpone for awhile. Show more devotion to loved one. Be more optimistic about the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Pay that debt you've neglected without further delay and keep out of trouble. Take no chances with your reputation now.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Avoid arguments with anyone or there could be serious results. Show others that you are a good citizen. Express happiness.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will likely be one to get bogged down in details and should be taught first to understand the overall picture of any undertaking. Give a fine education and direct the education along lines of research for best results.

What's what

Mr. Bell's Mr. Watson should also be known for his big invention

It's widely known that the first message on the telephone was delivered by Alexander Graham Bell who said, "Mr. Watson, come here. I want you. All I know is it turned up in the 18th century and was then called a bottlescrew.

There are 8,810 promises in the Bible, I'm told.

No, sir, you don't spend forever trying that curious article of wearing apparel known as the necktie. You spend four hours a year at it, though, if average.

THE CORKSCREW

Q. "Who invented the corkscrew?"
A. Now there you have me. All I know is it turned up in the 18th century and was then called a bottlescrew.

An advised jet engine has a point right behind the exhaust where no sound at all is registered. Why is that?

The Pentagon thinks there are about 3,000 deserters from the Vietnam area who aren't aware the Army would like to discharge them officially and get it over with.

A Texas newspaper editor decided his writers were getting too folksy. He told them to knock off the use in print of such undignified nicknames as Tommy and Bobby and Billy. Too familiar, he said. His football columnist then wrote: "Doak Walker was sidled with a Charles horse."

COW IS BOSS

Remember, it's a cow, not a bull, that leads the buffalo herd.

Why the whimsical legislators of Mississippi made it against the law there to play the Missouri Waltz I don't know.

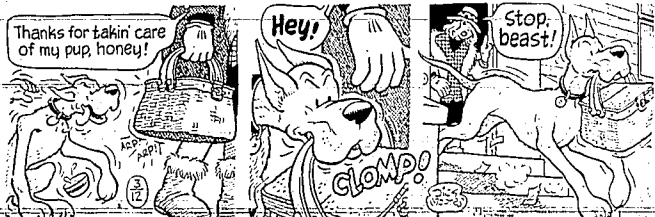

The British call "The Channel" is known in France as "La Manche" meaning "The Sleeve."

In the Soviet Union, members of the Orthodox Church outnumber the members of the Communist Party by two to one, bear in mind.

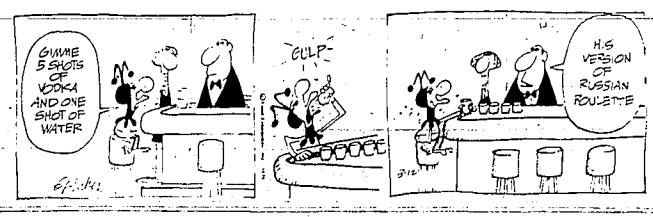

Most everybody knows that Harvard and Yale have the biggest and second biggest college libraries in the country. But who's No. 3? If you said the University of Illinois, you win the stogie.

TF team wins district

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls High School Debate Team won the Class A District IV debate tournament in Twin Falls last week.

Debaters for TFHS placed first, second, third and fourth in the district tournament. All four Southern Idaho Conference teams will represent TFHS at the state tournament in Nampa.

The Twin Falls debaters last January defeated all comers in Boise to bring home the SIC championship trophy for the first time in the history of the high school.

At the district competition seniors Barry Webb and Stuart Starry nabbed first place with their fast talking and persuasive arguments while Juniors Scott Woodruff and Eric Kahn placed second.

Senior Nancy Atkinson and sophomore Mary Ellen Boldman, placed third and seniors Keith Briggs and Mike Harrison placed fourth to complete the team's round robin.

All four teams will go to state competition in Nampa later this month to face stiffer competition. If the team brings home the trophy this year it should be. It will be the first state win for TFHS debaters since 1949.

In the class B division of the district tournament, Jerome placed first followed by Glenn Perry and American Falls.

Dear Abby

Burglars stole more than her material possessions

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: If you have never had the privacy of your home violated by burglars, skip this column.

If you have... welcome to the club. I want to share a particularly timely and enormously moving piece I recently read in the Los Angeles Times. I welcome your reactions.

AN OPEN LETTER TO BURGLARS
By Fay Cohen

Dear burglars: Having spent my childhood in a clean but poorly furnished home, I set out in marriage to make up for this by decorating our abode in an attractive and cheerful manner. My furniture is comfortable and tastefully coordinated, the wall hangings are equally eye-appealing. My housework and leisure time are made pleasant by up-to-the-minute appliances.

If you want all this, boys, you better bring a moving van. Pull it right up to my apartment door next time. No one will notice or question you — or will they?

You already have taken what could be carried away in a sack. How much did you get for my string of pearls, given to me by mother more than 30 years ago? Did the love that permeated them enhance their value?

My late husband's watch was cold metal when you snatched it. He often laid it on his nightstand, and I'd feel the warmth of his body still on it, giving it momentary life.

And that gold wedding band with the Hebrew lettering — King Solomon's lovely: 'I am my beloved's and my beloved is mine.' How much did that net you?

After the police dusted for your prints, I was left alone, by choice, to try to put myself together. I scrubbed your presence away with soap and water, angry but not afraid.

You did frighten me two years ago when you broke in and took my son's photography equipment and my color television set. It wasn't so much what you took — how can one become sentimental over things that are so easily replaced? What upset me so much was that my secure home was intruded upon. It took me a long time to return to normal and lose the fear that you might return.

And return you did, last week. This time my reaction is not one of fear, but livid anger. I'm mad at the world, at my vulnerability, at a society where even things under lock and key are not safe — and I'm very angry with you!

Did I say I'm not afraid? Yes, I am — not of you, but of myself and the way I shouted to the police — "If you were to find them now and bring them here, I'd kill them!"

Do you know what disturbs me about that threat? I really, really meant it. For one insane moment I was capable of committing a crime. If I'd had a gun, I might have used it, thereby stooping to your gutter level. No, no guns in my house, thank you.

You took my precious possessions and you stole one thing more: my former self, the non-violent, secure, trusting person I used to be. I am sad — depressed — here in my fortress, now secured with double-bolts and a burglar alarm."

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal unpublished reply, write to: Abby: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90060. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Idahoans may be cool to federal crop insurance plan

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho farmers may be cool to a plan to expand governmental disaster payment and loan programs and replace them with federal crop insurance.

Federal insurance, which would provide all-risk insurance for 18 crops, would attract "low" involvements of farmers, predicted Jerome County Extension Agent Jesse Wilson. "Most farmers around here tend to be optimists," Wilson said, and he doubts they would buy government policies, at least at first.

If federal crop insurance is enacted, other farm aid programs, including the U.S. Department of Agriculture Disaster Payment Program, Farmers Home Administration Emergency Economic Loans and Small Business Administration farm loans, would be ended.

Twin Falls County Agent Bill Hazen said the phase-out of disaster payments would be felt by Idaho wheat growers, who rely on these payments from time to time. Hazen said many wheat growers, especially dry farmers in Albion and in Camas County, collected payments following the 1977 drought. He said FmHA and SBA loans are not used much in this area.

As a consolidation of services, the new program might save money but "would not increase service to the farmer," Hazen said.

"You won't see an overwhelming jump to grab the federal program," he predicted. "Whether they (farmers) would be willing to pay the premiums remains to be seen."

In the insurance program proposed to the House Agriculture Committee last week, USDA officials said farmers and the government would share the cost of premiums. There would be three levels of coverage, and the greater the coverage, the greater the farmer would pay.

Protection against hail, fire and all other disasters would be offered for 18 crops. The crops are barley, corn, dry beans, sugar, sunflowers, wheat, soybeans, citrus, cotton, flax, grain sorghum, oats, peanuts, raisins, rice, rye, sugarcane and tobacco.

The new program would cost $632 million a year, compared to the $653 paid out in existing programs.

Federal insurance exists in many counties already, providing coverage on certain crops. In Idaho, federal insurance is available in 27 counties, including Twin Falls, Camas, Gooding, Lincoln, Jerome, Cassia and Minidoka. The insurance covers beans, wheat, barley and sugarbeets.

Wilson said few farmers have participated in the programs. But Hazen said that's because few crops are covered.

Despite low participation, Hazen and Wilson agreed federal insurance has been helpful in the past.

However, Hazen also warned crop insurance could be misused.

"Some crops are an absolute hazard to raise. If you are trying to raise beans in some outlying area, where chances are you'll get a good crop once every four years, you could take advantage of the program," he said.

"We get freezes all the time that should be considered normal hazards," rather than insured risks, he said.

Looking ahead to 1979 taxes

(Tenth of 11 columns)

As you might expect, the biggest change of the '79 Revenue Act, passed so late last year, will be on the income taxes you will owe for '79 and be reflected on the tax returns you will file in the spring of 1980.

These points stand out above all others.

(1) For millions of Americans, higher Social Security taxes will more than offset the income tax cuts voted by Congress.

The following figures, prepared by the Research Institute of America, shows the net tax change from '78 to '79 for individuals in various income groups — when the Social Security tax bite has been placed against the income — tax — reduction. — The RIA assumes your deductions equal 23 percent of your income. (Minus means you pay less, plus means you pay more.)

As a dependent also increases from more than $750 in '78 to less than $1,000 in 1979.

(2) But while you are getting higher exemptions, you will be losing the '78 general tax credit of $35 per exemption, or 2 percent of up to $9,000 of taxable income, whichever is the larger. While most of you will benefit from this change, many of you actually will be worse off with the new higher exemption and no credit, than you were with the $750 exemption plus the general credit for '78.

Worse off, for instance, will be all of you who are single with $9,000 or more of taxable income claiming one exemption!

The extra $250 exemption can't save more than the taxes at your highest bracket. Regardless of whether this bracket is 30 percent, 40 percent, 50 percent, or even 70 percent, it can't make up for the loss of the $180 general credit (2 percent of $9,000 of taxable income) that was allowed for '78. Whatever tax savings you receive from the bracket and rate changes in '79 will be reduced by your loss of the general credit.

(3) There will be no deduction allowed on your '79 return for state and local gas taxes on nonbusiness cars, etc. But this generally is a small amount and is completely immaterial if you use the standard deduction.

(4) The standard deduction (now known technically as "zero bracket amount") goes up a bit for '79. If you are single or a head of household, you will get $2,300 instead of $2,200; if you are married filing a joint return, your standard deduction will be $3,400 instead of $3,200. As in former years, the standard deduction will be built into the tax rate schedules or tax tables as a zero bracket amount.

(5) A revolutionary change (as tax changes are measured) will be the completely new tax rate schedules to apply in '79. The schedules are much shorter, with wider brackets and changed rates. These rates and brackets are built into the tax tables that millions of you will use for your '79 return.

As an illustration, the 1978 tax rate schedule for married taxpayers filing jointly has 25 separate income categories and the brackets are close to each other: ($3,200, $4,200, $5,200, etc.). The 1979 tax rate schedule for married taxpayers filing jointly has only 15 separate income categories and the brackets are much wider: ($3,400, $5,500, $7,600, etc.). The top bracket below the 70 percent rate in the 1978 schedule for married taxpayers filing jointly ran from $183,200 to $203,200; the 1979, from $162,400 to $215,400.

Realistic budgets to help loan seekers

Chicago Sun-Times

As credit continues to tighten, small business applicants with the most severely realistic budgets and forecasts will fare best in the scramble for loan money, according to restaurateur Jim Errant.

"Until recently, an entrepreneur could afford to take a number of risks and still succeed," Errant told graduate business students at the University of Chicago. "But today's economic climate forces him to hedge his bet by taking a much more analytical look at his plan of action before committing himself to local or national expansion."

Therefore, the "astute entrepreneur" will estimate his costs high, then add 20 per cent to cover inflation and the unexpected, said the 38-year-old Errant, whose Errant Enterprises Inc. operates Jansand and the Chicago Claim Company restaurants.

Virginia power units last less than decade

SURRY, Va. (UPI) — Virginia Electric & Power Co.'s first two nuclear power units began operating in 1972 and 1973 with boasts they would last 30 years and save customers hundreds of millions of dollars.

In the past month, however, Vepco was forced to begin an unprecedented program to repair the two Surry Nuclear Power Station units that could eventually cost customers $130 million.

The utility may try to recover the money from the generators' manufacturer, Westinghouse Electric Corp., but credent customers may be asked absorb much of the cost.

One of the two reactors, Unit 2, was shut down on Feb. 6 for a six month project to replace three faulty steam generators. Unit 1 is to be closed for six months next year for a similar replacement program.

Vepco says it will cost $77 million to replace the generators and could cost customers another $60 million for coal and oil that must be burned for power while the nuclear reactors are down.

"It is unfortunate this has happened because you must realize that overall the power station has saved customers money and will continue to do so," said Ralph Sylvia, Vepco's director of nuclear operations.

He said the power station, which cost $409 million to build, has already paid for itself in the amount of money it has saved customers through reduced fuel costs.

Sylvia said if Vepco built a conventional oil or coal station, instead of the nuclear station seven years ago, customers would have had to pay over $500 million more in higher fuel costs.

Congress will intensify struggle with oil crisis

Sen. Jackson predicts a recession, suggests Egypt, Israel protect oil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Henry Jackson Sunday suggested Egypt and Israel form a task force to defend Mideast oil fields from possible attack, saying the oil situation already is so bad that it will cause a "deep recession in America."

Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, said there is no doubt that his previous predictions of $1 a gallon for gasoline will be true within a year.

He said skyrocketing oil prices affect so many other products in the United States that they will throw the entire economy out of whack.

"You're going to see, I think, a recession because of the developments in the Middle East and they're just as serious as the 1973-1974 (oil) embargo," he said. "You're going to see a deep recession, not just an ordinary recession."

Jackson, interviewed on ABC's "Issues and Answers" program, repeated his earlier warnings that the Middle East oil fields are vulnerable to a guerrilla attack that could wipe out America's supplies.

He said the United States should not just stand idly by and let such an attack occur and should be ready to send in its own forces as a last resort.

In the meantime, he said, "there needs to be a contingency plan so that local forces, Egyptians and Israelis or a combination of both, should be available to defend these oil fields in the event of sabotage or in the event of a direct assault on those fields."

Jackson said an American backup would be essential, but Egypt and Israel could form a task force now without any help from the United States.

"The two countries have right now the means of defending these oil fields without one bit of support from the United States," he said. "It's only if it should break out into a larger situation that American forces would be needed."

Jackson's energy committee opens hearings Monday on the energy problem.

Sen. Henry Jackson talks of recession

Energy, Taiwan and debt ceiling highlight the week in Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senators commence an "A to Z" examination of the energy crunch this week as Congress tries to find Americans some relief from soaring oil prices and expected summer gasoline shortages.

"There are a lot of rumors and allegations flying around and we need to get all the facts," said Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., in announcing that his Senate Energy Committee will begin hearings into the energy situation.

"We are facing some real energy problems in this country and they must be addressed. This will be the first real examination, from A to Z, of the entire situation."

Both houses resume debate Tuesday on the Taiwan legislation, which would establish an American Institute in Taiwan to handle U.S. relations with that country on an unofficial basis.

The prospect is that the bill finally sent to President Carter will emerge pretty much to the administration's liking.

Both chambers beat back efforts to incorporate language virtually guaranteeing U.S. defense of Taiwan in the event of an attack by China.

The last major hurdle is expected to be an attempt in the Senate to amend the bill so that Taiwan would retain ownership of its diplomatic buildings and economic assets in the United States. The administration opposes the amendment but it is already in the House bill.

The House Thursday plans to act on legislation increasing the national debt ceiling from $781 billion to $830 billion through Sept. 30.

The House also plans to act on a two-year extension of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which oversees Carter's voluntary wage-price guidelines. There are no substantive changes in the program but the budget is greatly increased in order to accommodate a staff that has grown from about 40 to more than 230.

Jackson's hearings open Monday with Energy Secretary James Schlesinger as the first witness.

Jackson called the problem two-fold — shortages and price — and said he will ask Schlesinger to estimate the supply increases and demand reductions needed to bring supply and demand into balance.

CIA once pondered ESP as an espionage weapon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA looked into the possibility of turning ESP into a "atom bomb" of espionage with a team of mind spies searching the world for such intelligence targets as underground submarine pens, it was disclosed Sunday.

ESP or extrasensory perception is the ability to perceive things beyond a person's usual senses.

CIA documents made public under the Freedom of Information Act indicated the intelligence agency also expressed interest in Nazi studies of ESP and even looked into the possibility of using dogs as mind spies.

But the information, distributed by American Citizens for Honesty in Government, an affiliate of the Church of Scientology, failed to reveal whether the Central Intelligence Agency ever got around to setting up an ESP espionage team.

A heavily censored April 8, 1952, memorandum said the CIA gave "some serious consideration" to subsidizing research into the possibility of applying ESP "to matters of pure intelligence."

"If a number of individuals could be found in the U.S. who have a very high ESP capacity, these talented individuals could be assigned to intelligence problems," the note said.

It said the mind spies could work on such problems as whether a nation "had a submarine pen at a given port or area."

A Jan. 31, 1952, memo described a conference concerning the possible use of ESP by the CIA. An "outstanding authority on ESP" whose name was censored briefed intelligence officials at the session.

"The expert was quoted as saying, 'researchers were "approaching a solution to the problem of how to control and direct this ESP capacity."

"He insisted that the knowledge on ESP at this point was far in advance of the basic knowledge that was held on atomic energy and atomic weapons before the first atom bomb was developed," the memo said.

A Feb. 7, 1952, memo said an undercover CIA agent contacted a scientist about the possibility of using dogs on an ESP espionage team.

But the scientist "disqualified himself and his department from any work on sensory perception in dogs, pointing out that they had not a great deal of specific experience with dogs as subjects."

The scientist, whose name was censored, advised the CIA man to look for "a research-psychologist, strong in comparative animal psychology," and provided a list of potential candidates.

Kirbo scoffs at Carter business abuses

ATLANTA (UPI) — President Carter's business trustee said Sunday an ex-worker at the Carter peanut warehouse "doesn't know what he's talking about" in alleging that Billy Carter hid a $500,000 loan deficit during the 1976 presidential campaign.

The Washington Post reported Sunday that Jimmy Hayes, a warehouseman who worked for an independent company whose bond covered a Carter loan from the National Bank of Georgia, had said in a series of interviews that he and Billy Carter altered warehouse records.

He said they used the same collateral — bins of peanuts — twice during the spring of 1976 to cover deficits of up to $500,000 in overdue payments on the NBG loan.

Hayes, 31, told the Post he was paid $150 a week by the bonding company and up to $350 a week by Billy Carter. He said the president's brother also arranged personal loan of $2,500 for him, gave him several $100 Christmas bonuses and gave presents to his wife and children.

Neither Hayes, described by the Washington newspaper as a part-time south Georgia preacher now working for an automobile dealership, nor Carter, who was admitted to the Navy's Long Beach, Calif., regional medical facility for treatment of alcohol abuse last week, could be reached for comment on the published report.

Atlanta attorney Charles Kirbo, who administers the blind trust in which the president's 63 percent share of the Plains peanut business is kept, said Sunday company records showed no concealment of deficits or absence of collateral for the NBG loans.

"There's nothing in the company records to indicate that," said Kirbo, who became trustee of Carter's private financial holdings after he took office. "As far as our records are concerned, we've got no record of it."

Kirbo, one of Carter's closest personal advisors, said he was not serving as trustee of the family business at the time involved. He said, however, "I don't know of any misuse of collateral on the NBG loan."

"It sounds like the fellow that they were talking to doesn't know what he's talking about," Kirbo said of the Post report. "All I know is there's nothing in the records of the company that would indicate anything wrong."

Former federal budget director Bert Lance, another longtime family friend and political ally from Carter's days as Georgia governor, arranged the loan for the Carter warehouse shortly after taking over as NBG president in 1975.

"It began as a $3 million line of credit and was stretched to $3.7 million during the presidential campaign, with the borrowed money used to buy peanuts from southwest Georgia farmers. The peanuts were pledged as collateral. Hayes said the collateral peanuts were not to leave the warehouse for shelling unless a proportionate part of the loan was repaid, under terms of the NBG contract, but that

Billy Carter routinely ignored that requirement.

Hayes told the Post he wrote a warehouse receipt for peanuts delivered by farmers each day, and that he was to have sent a check for $50,000 plus interest to NBG each day that the peanuts left the warehouse for the sheller.

Hayes said Billy Carter, who ran the family business during his older brother's then-obscure bid for the presidency, began refusing to sign the checks to NBG. He said the warehouse fell behind by about $100,000 in 1975, and that the backlog of unsigned checks and release forms reached about a half-million dollars by late April or early May, 1976.

Church says Carter's prestige on the line

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said in an interview published Sunday President Carter has put "his own personal prestige on the line" with his mission to the Middle East to secure a peace between Israel and Egypt.

Church said the president "crossed the Rubicon on this issue" when he invited Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to Camp David last fall.

"He assumed the political risk of failure then, and has lived with that risk ever since," the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said in an interview with U.S. News and World Report.

Church said Carter should be credited with any success that may evolve from his trip. "He will have deserved it by having put his own personal prestige on the line," he said.

He said the deadlock in the Middle East following the Camp David summit between Sadat and Begin was not a result of negotiations, but a reassessment of the situation in the wake of the turmoil in Iran.

"Both Egypt and Israel are attempting to look at the future through the dust that has spread over all of the Middle East from this political earthquake in Iran," Church said.

Church also defended the president's actions in Iran against critics who felt Carter should have prevented the downfall of the shah.

"What was it the president was to do?" Church asked. "What could he do that 700,000 Iranian troops could not do?"

He praised Carter for securing the departure from Iran of all Americans who wanted to leave. "And he hasn't received a word of credit for it," he said.

Church said he supported administration statements indicating the United States is prepared to use troops to counter Russian threats to Middle East oil and is ready to send F-15s to Saudi Arabia.

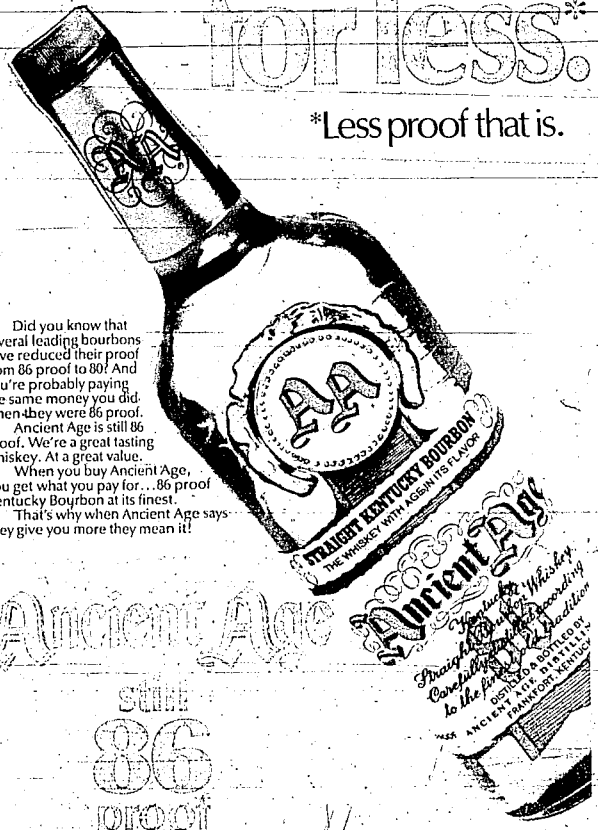

But he said Saudi Arabia should reciprocate by "discreetly" assisting the United States in the Middle East peace efforts. "The fact is that they are in a position to exert influence where it counts the most," he said.

He said it "would be foolhardy" to ratify a new Strategic Arms Limitation Talks treaty to Soviet behavior in other countries, describing a break in SALT negotiations "a monstrous mistake."

Senate rejection of an arms limitation treaty "would be the worst setback since the Senate defeat of the Versailles treaty following the First World War," he said.

China may withdraw this week

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Western military sources said Sunday the first troops from China's 100,000-man invasion force have pulled out of Vietnam and Hanoi accused the Chinese of massacring hundreds of women and children.

Vietnam also said the withdrawing Chinese moved border markings to expand their occupied territory.

Western military sources in Bangkok confirmed that "a few small units" of the Chinese invasion army pulled out of Vietnam late last week.

It was the first independent report of a Chinese withdrawal since Peking announced last Monday it was pulling its troops out of Vietnam after an invasion designed to "punish" that country for its takeover in Cambodia. Vietnam said its Red Cross society issued a statement Saturday accusing Chinese forces of violating the 1949 Geneva Convention on treatment of civilians during war.

"In some places, (Chinese forces) even massacred hundreds of children and women at a time," the government quoted the Red Cross statement as saying. "They also burned and destroyed many dwellings and seized cattle and chickens."

Radio Hanoi charged Chinese forces moved demarcation markers in Cao Bang province further into Vietnamese territory in an attempt to expand their occupied territory, according to Japan's Kyodo news service.

The foreign ministry statement broadcast Sunday by Radio Hanoi was much harsher in tone than other recent statements by the Vietnamese government.

It demanded Peking "respect the historic boundary between the two countries, and said, "The Chinese aggressor army must withdraw totally, immediately, and unconditionally from Vietnamese territory and stop killing, looting and committing new crimes against the Vietnamese people."

A Hanoi broadcast said Chinese forces had launched new attacks near the Tinh Tuc tin mines around Cao Bang town, 25 miles into Vietnam, and reported continuing fighting and shelling Sunday along the 450-mile-wide frontier.

As the reported pullout continued, effects of the war spread to tiny Laos.

China said the Hanoi-backed Vietnamese government had ordered an estimated 5,000 Chinese aid workers and road builders to leave for home.

Unofficial reports from Hanoi said Chinese forces had occupied a Laotian border post in northern Phong Saly district, but Peking denied taking any military action against the tiny nation.

Amin warns of pending massacre

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — President Jid Amin, claiming new battlefield victories for his Libyan-backed army, accused a Tanzanian invasion force Sunday of plotting to massacre hundreds of thousands of Ugandans if it succeeds in ousting him from power.

He said the Tanzanians had prepared a 13-point "document of death," including "diplomatic analysts" discounted the charge as a propaganda ploy.

In the latest peace moves, representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization held talks with both countries, but independent observers said they had virtually no chance of reaching a compromise between Kampala and Dar es Salaam.

A special Nigerian envoy joined PLO representatives in shuttling between the two capitals in the latest peace efforts and Amin said he would be willing to meet Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere to discuss peace.

But Amin, as quoted by Radio Uganda, said Tanzanian troops must first withdraw from his country, a summit meeting must be preceded by a ministerial conference and the face-to-face meeting must be held in a neutral, third nation.

Nyerere thus far has spurned all efforts to arrange peace terms with Amin.

After claiming his army, bolstered by the arrival of 1,000 Libyan troops and military equipment, had forced the Tanzanians to retreat at least 40 miles from Kampala, Amin Sunday charged the 4,000-man invading force with preparing the "document of death."

Independent diplomatic observers suggested Amin was trying to frighten Uganda's 10 million population into supporting him and to secure further aid from sympathetic Arab countries.

Oil recommended

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — A dermatology professor at the University of Texas Health Science Center recommends baby oil as a moisturizer, applied over moist skin to keep the water from evaporating. Dr. Bobby Lee Limmer says many lotions and creams are complex compounds that can plug pores and cause whiteheads.

Smallwood to avoid conflicts of interest

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Councilman Jim Smallwood says he will be more careful in the future to avoid potential conflicts of interest.

Smallwood's statement came after Mayor Leon Smith told Smallwood at a city council work session last week that Smallwood had acted improperly in representing one of his clients in a hearing before the city Planning and Zoning Commission.

Smallwood, who is the city council liaison to the commission and regularly attends commission meetings, represented one of his clients in asking the commission for a zone change at its January meeting.

Smallwood, an architect, had designed structural modifications which would allow his client to add four units to a sixplex near Falls Avenue, and commission permission was needed for the change.

The commission denied his request. The issue of conflict of interest was not raised until the matter reached the city council last week.

At a city council work session, as the council was about to take up discussion of Smallwood's client's request, Smith asked Smallwood if he intended to represent his client before the council.

Smith advised Smallwood that such action would constitute a conflict of interest.

In fact, Smith said, two members of the Planning and Zoning Commission called him after Smallwood's appearance and charged Smallwood with a conflict of interest.

Smith said he agreed with the commissioners that Smallwood's actions before the commission constituted a conflict of interest.

"I don't know about your professional ethics, but it wouldn't be allowed in the law or engineering professions," Smith, a lawyer and an attorney, told Smallwood.

"What you're doing is peddling your influence," he added.

Smallwood said he did not intend to represent his client before the council and considered his client's request a "dead issue." He said builders were already tearing out the construction, which necessitated the zone change request.

Smallwood then asked, "At what point can you serve on a public body and still make a living?"

Smith said whenever a councilman's client or business associate is involved in a matter before the council, the councilman can avoid a conflict of interest by not voting on the issue.

But even if he is not voting, it is a conflict of interest for a councilman to argue his client's position, Smith added.

City Attorney Charles Brumbach, at Smallwood's request, delivered his opinion that there is a difference between abstaining from a vote and "openly coming before the council and advocating a position."

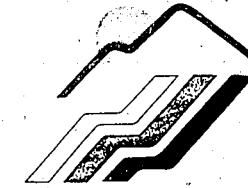

Smallwood said he was not aware that his action before the commission constituted a conflict of interest.

"I didn't know that. Whether I should or I shouldn't, I didn't know that," he stated.

Whether Smallwood's action constitutes a violation of law is questionable.

Man drowns in car crash

GOODING — One young Gooding man was drowned and two others escaped when the car in which they were traveling plunged from a bridge into Wood River northwest of Gooding Saturday night.

The victim was identified as Murray Sigdestad, 20, of Gooding, who was a passenger in the front seat of the late model sedan when it left a bridge on a county road and dropped into a deep hole in the river.

was unable to get out of the overturned car. Sheriff Brown said the victim could not swim and his family said he had a fear of water.

Officers were unable to recover the vehicle or body Saturday night but resumed efforts early Sunday morning. Brown said the Gooding National Guard unit brought a tank recovery unit to the river, and two divers went into the water to hook chains to the vehicle.

Gooding County Sheriff Earl Brown said the driver, Kent Gold, 19, also of Gooding, and another passenger, who was riding in the back seat, Dennis Slatter, 18, managed to climb out of the vehicle and swim to safety.

The sheriff said it was necessary to use a magnet to locate the car in the muddy water. The divers followed the rope attached to the magnet down to the submerged vehicle and attached chains to it. He said the body of the victim was recovered from the car as it was brought part way out of the water. Jim Jax and Darwin High, Wendell divers, went into the water Sunday morning to hook chains on the vehicle. Brown said the car was brought out of the water about 11:45 a.m. Sunday.

Sheriff Brown said the accident was reported at 9:52 p.m. one mile north and one and one-half miles west of Gooding. He said the vehicle failed to negotiate a corner approaching the bridge and went into the river over the side of the bridge. He said the vehicle was completely submerged in about 25 or 30 feet of "mucky" water. It overturned onto its top after it entered the river.

According to Brown there is a deep hole in the river at the point where the vehicle entered. Without the use of special equipment such as the tank recovery unit from the Guard, the sheriff said, it would have been difficult to recover the car. Brown said the car had to be lifted over what amounts to a rock ledge forming the river bank at that point.

The driver and passenger who escaped were able to get out through a front door and a rear window, according to Brown, and both said they shouted to Sigdestad to follow them, but he apparently panicked or about 10:15 p.m., and one of them reported her former husband had kicked her and threatened her life. The woman, 40, officer Brown said he believed her former husband was armed.

Fernando Hernandez, 21, of Twin Falls, was listed in fair condition Sunday at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital with a stab wound in the left side near the waist. He also suffered a cut above his eye, which officers said was made by a belt buckle.

Officer Brown said he was escorting the women to their parked automobile when a man appeared in the alley and attempted to detain the complaining witness, Mary Lou Silva. The officer reported the man drew a knife when ordered to leave and held it in a manner threatening the officer. Brown reported he ordered the suspect to drop the knife several times, and the suspect refused. The officer was holding a gun on the man at the time, reports indicated, but the suspect continued to refuse to give up the knife.

Twin Falls police reported the man was injured in an alleged argument and fight involving several families. The incident reportedly occurred in front of the Elks lodge at about 1 a.m. Sunday.

When a car drew up to the scene and occupants called to the suspect to drop the knife, Brown said the man threw it to the ground and ran. Brown followed and placed him under arrest.

Juan Antonio Silva, 26, of Twin Falls, was hospitalized following an earlier incident at the same dance.

O'Leary school dedicated

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The new Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School in Twin Falls, described as Idaho's best new educational facility, was officially dedicated here Sunday afternoon.

The principal said the building has been 13 years in planning and achievement and said the highlight of the 13 years was the Sunday dedication of the three-building complex.

Some 300 persons attending the dedication ceremony in the school's gymnasium, heard Carl Snow, school principal, say in traveling around the state and country in the past few years he has seen no other educational facility to compare with the new school.

Jerry Evans, Idaho State Superintendent of Public Instruction, in giving the dedication address said the Twin Falls school system is recognized as one of the top in the state and added the achievement of the new junior high school was not by accident, but "because the people of Twin Falls wanted it."

Snow praised the foresightedness of the school board and administration in planning such a facility, saying it is designed to meet current and future needs of Twin Falls students with additional land when needed and a design that can easily be expanded when enrollment reaches capacity.

"Quality education takes place in many settings, but facilities are an important part of any educational program. When the people of Twin Falls adopted a bond issue, they indicated their support of the educational goals of the school district," Evans said.

Evans complimented the community on support of the board and complimented the board for the effort and wisdom of planning the new building, saying accomplishment of such an undertaking requires long hours of work by school board members and community residents who donate their time and effort for the benefit of proper education of children in generations to come.

Rooms and special facilities in the new building complex were open to the public following the program, and P.T.A. members and students assisted in explaining the various areas of the new buildings.

Dr. James D. Sawin, Twin Falls District 411 superintendent introduced board members, builders, designers and volunteer committee members who helped in the planning. He also introduced a surprise guest, Paul C. O'Leary, son of the late Vera C. O'Leary for whom the school is named. Mrs. O'Leary served as principal of the district's only junior high school for many years. Her son attended from Salt Lake City, Utah.

Construction of the new building by Nielsen and Co. began last year as soon as plans for the building were completed.

James Smallwood, architect, presented the building key to Ruth Day, school board chairman.

Voters of district 411 voted overwhelmingly in favor of a $4.9 million bond issue on Oct. 12, 1976, to make the facility possible.

The new three-building complex includes 121,000 square feet of floor space. In addition to the academic building with classrooms, library and other study facilities, the school includes a 500-seat auditorium, a gymnasium, cafeteria or hot lunch facility and industrial arts, agriculture and home economic study areas.

Zoning board okays tennis court enclosure

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — County Planning and Zoning Commission members last week voted to recommend the county commissioners allow a plastic bubble-type enclosure for the proposed new Snake River Racquet Club, a tennis court complex northeast of Twin Falls.

land on Kenneth Road for the development, Thursday night asked for approval of the plastic removable enclosure for three of the facility's 16 courts. During a public hearing on the proposal, seven persons spoke in support of the enclosure, and one letter was read from Dale Aslett who opposed the facility. Approval by the zoning board is contingent upon acceptance of a liner which will be necessary because of the cold temperatures in this area.

Kristy Pigeon, who has purchased

The zoning members also stipulated exits must be provided and marked and that it be kept inflated and meet building, fire and safety codes.

Assault charged

Zoning administrator Ed Woods said the outer plastic shell has been reviewed by all proper authorities, and it does meet requirements, but he said the liner which is being added here because of winter time temperatures has not yet been checked by the fire department and building inspectors.

TWIN FALLS — James Harold Elza, 20, of Twin Falls was in custody Friday night in the alleged beating of a 7-year-old child.

Twin Falls City Police reported the child was treated for bruises at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital and released. The child's mother, Elton Rose Hale, told police her daughter had been beaten at their home sometime between 3 p.m. and 9 p.m. Thursday. The woman said the suspect is the victim's older brother.

The cover is temporary, and can only be used 169 days out of each year to retain this classification. Ms. Pigeon said it will be removed and can be folded up and stored in a building during summer months. The cover is needed to allow year-round use of the tennis courts. She said play will be by reservation on the three year-round tennis courts.

Zoning commission members asked a special review committee to again look at the Blaine Huddleston property just north of Asgrow Research Center and east of Flier.

Huddleston reportedly stores his "personal property" on the land he owns there, and this is drawing objection from neighbors who say it represents a junkyard. When he was granted approval for use of the site to store his property, the commission required he build an eight-foot high fence and that he reduce the number of car bodies to three. Neighbors protesting his operation, said there is no fence and others said a 20-foot fence would not be enough as his property is in a low area and can be viewed from any of the surrounding homes which are on higher elevations.

Ray Crumbles, a realtor, said his firm is planning a low-density residential subdivision in the area. He objected to the use of the property as did Allen Andrew and several other adjoining property owners. Zoning board members asked the review committee to take another look at the property, meet with the county commissioners, and if it is felt Huddleston is not meeting requirements, the prosecuting attorney be asked for action to assure compliance.

In other action the board approved conditional use for a cabinet shop just outside of Buhl and adjacent to the new high school and asked for a public hearing on proposals for a new LDS Church with recreational facilities near Kimberly.

The proposed church would be built north of Red Cap Corner and would include softball and baseball fields, one tennis court and horseshoe pits for members' use. A public hearing is planned for the April meeting.

Commission members turned down a request for a subdivision on land near the Sugar Factory, just south of the old county farm property. The developer, Gene Kirchenwitz, was advised he can appeal the commission's action to the county commissioners. It was denied by the zoning board on grounds it is not adjacent to any other residential development and would create an "island" or a "spot zoning" condition in an agricultural area.

Twin Falls man wounded in fight

TWIN FALLS — Jeffery Manners, 20, of Twin Falls was being treated for stab wounds in the abdomen late Sunday following an incident at Shoshone Falls.

Manners was still in surgery late in the evening and no report on his condition was available.

City police were continuing to investigate the incident Sunday night, but one young man had been arrested on charges of assault with a deadly weapon.

Reports indicated he was in the Shoshone Falls area when he observed a young boy being beaten by a group of older boys and went to the youngster's assistance. He told of being stabbed and stabbed him.

City police arrested Joe Garcia, 20, of Twin Falls on charges of assault with a deadly weapon. Bond was set at $5,000 and he was being held in the county jail.

Statute governs commissioner participation

Section 67-6506 of the Idaho Code, part of the Local Planning Act of 1975, states, "A governing board creating a planning, zoning or planning and zoning commission, or joint commission shall provide that the area and interests within its jurisdiction are broadly represented on the commission. A member or employee of a governing board, commission, or joint commission shall not participate in any proceeding or action when the member or employee or his employer, business partner, business associate, or any person related to him by affinity or consanguinity within the second degree has an economic interest in the procedure or action. Any actual or potential interest in any proceeding shall be disclosed at or before any meeting at which the action is being heard or considered. A knowing violation of this section shall be a misdemeanor."

Smallwood is a member of the governing board, the city council, which created the Planning and Zoning Commission. As such, he is prohibited by the statute from participating in commission proceedings.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Jeff Stoker said a "strictly conservative" interpretation of the statute would hold that to "participate in any proceeding or action" would mean to vote on that action. A more liberal interpretation would mean to influence or make a recommendation, he said. Stoker said the implication of the statute is that politicians should "avoid any appearance of impropriety."

Councilman Chris Talkington said later in the week the statute is "purposely vague" on what specific actions amount to a conflict of interest. Talkington called the conflict of interest issue "a volcano below the surface because it hits at the very motives to why people run for city council."

"Is it to serve the best interests of the community or to further their own business interests?" he asked rhetorically.

He said the question is especially relevant in a small community where councilmen who are deeply involved in the local business community cannot avoid frequent potential conflicts of interest while conducting city business.

Talkington also wondered why the issue was raised in Smallwood's case when it has not been raised under other circumstances. "When the council gets together for a work session, any number of times there have been general conversations about an issue (by councilmen with an interest in the issue) which they later do not vote on. In the final analysis, it's no different than what Smallwood did the other day," he said.

Councilman Gordon Cox said councilmen should participate in discussions even if they have a potential conflict of interest when they have information to contribute which is pertinent to the decision making process.

Smallwood said he won't get caught in a conflict of interest again. "I don't feel I did anything wrong," he said. "I felt no conflict of interest taking it before the Planning and Zoning Commission because I don't sit on that commission."

But he admitted he may have made a mistake.

"I recognize I may have had a casting of influence, and certainly in the future it won't be done. I'll be more careful. I just won't involve myself in those kinds of areas," he said.

"I didn't do it maliciously or intentionally. I just didn't think about it. I didn't have to do it. I've got partners that can do it," he said.

He added that perhaps his predicament will alert other council members to potential conflicts of interest. "Maybe it was good. Maybe it sort of woke everybody up," he stated.

Evans plans to shake up departments

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — Gov. John Evans has announced he wants to mold state government's various departments into a few blanket agencies.

In an Idaho State Journal story, Evans said he expected bureaucrats, the public and the Legislature probably would oppose his plan. The governor added he got the idea from President Carter's recently announced plans for reorganization of the federal government.

Evans said he had no blueprints for the move yet, but said he expected to have a mapped-out plan by fall.

Envisioned is a Department of Natural Resources, including Evans' proposed Air and Water Resources Department, together with the Departments of Land, Parks and Recreation and Fish and Game. Another entrant could be the Transportation Department, Evans said.

A second blanket agency would be a Human Resources Department, which could hold the Departments of Employment, Education, Corrections, Law Enforcement, Health and Welfare, plus the Industrial Commission.

A proposed Department of Economic Development and Regulation would be comprised in part by the Departments of Insurance and Finance, Labor and Industrial Services.

"I'll bet dollars to doughnuts I'll never happen in our lifetimes," said Rep. Vard Chaburn, R-Allon, of the governor's plan.

Chaburn predicted the state Senate would ambush Evans' bill which creates an Air and Water Resources Department out of Water Resources and Health and Welfare's Environment Division.

The bill, behind the urging of Chaburn, already has made it through the House.

Task force supports avoiding all radiation

HINGTON (UPI) — A report released by the federal government refutes the old theory that radiation at low levels is harmless.

The report by the Interagency Task Force on Ionizing Radiation says that there should be reductions in exposure to radiation. The chairman of the task force, F. Peter Libassi, said the recurring theme in the study is that radiation should be avoided at all costs.

Libassi also said the majority opinion of the task force was that low-dose radiation represents some risk of cancer, but no one still knows what that risk is.

"Society ought to do all it can to reduce unnecessary exposures to radiation which do not provide some benefit," said Libassi.

President Carter ordered the study last May to investigate allegations that nuclear tests by the Atomic Energy Commission exposed people to harmful radiation.

The report reminds that there is no "cause-and-effect" relationship yet established between low-dose radiation and cancer.

Herbicide ban to affect forest industry

SANDPOINT, Idaho (UPI) — An Environmental Protection Agency ban on herbicides 2,4,5-T and silvex will reduce timber production in Idaho by 1.5 million board feet annually, forest service officials said.

The herbicides, used in control of undergrowth that chokes out pine seedlings in north Idaho's national forests, is banned under a temporary interim order until the EPA makes a permanent decision late this spring.

Forest Service spokesman Norman Hesseldahl said the loss in board feet would represent 2 percent of the 550 million board feet of lumber Idaho's three national forests produce annually.

Silvex and 2,4,5-T, which contain dioxin, have been described by north Idaho environmentalists who cite EPA test results as "a very toxic and very dangerous" chemical.

Susan Thorpe MacLeod, an official of the Panhandle Environmental League, said dioxin is believed to cause miscarriages in women.

She said she hoped the EPA would not bow to pressure from the forest products industry to lift the ban.

Hesseldahl said the Forest Service was studying other weed control methods, which included such conventional methods as using goats, sheep or manpower to clear forest underbrush.

The herbicides also may be used on rangeland and rice fields.

Some department stores and garden and farm supply outlets in the region have begun removing the herbicides from their shelves voluntarily. The Idaho Division of Agriculture has not received official word on the ban from the EPA.

Bucyrus-Erie hopes for China trade

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — A Milwaukee-based heavy equipment company with a large plant at Pocatello hopes to generate more business as a result of the United States' improved trade ties with China, the firm's treasurer said.

T.G. Follard of Bucyrus-Erie said a delegation of Chinese trade representatives visited the Pocatello facility last September to become familiar with the firm's manufacturing methods. Bucyrus-Erie's Pocatello facility manufactures about half of the firm's output of shovels, drag lines and blast-hole drillers.

Follard said his company and the communist Chinese government were in a "continuous discussion stage" regarding possible sales. He said the two parties had been doing business since the early 1970s, but he declined to disclose volume.

Quake shakes parts of Washington

KELSO, Wash. (UPI) — A small earthquake tumbled through southwestern Washington Sunday morning, shaking buildings and houses but causing no damage or injuries.

The Hall of Justice and other buildings in the town were rattled by the quake and several Coville County residents reported feeling the tremor.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Boulder, Colo., said the quake which

Courtroom stays open to reporter

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — Third District Court Judge Jim Doolittle has rejected arguments that reporters should be barred from a young man's preliminary hearing on a murder charge.

The defendant, now 18, was 17 when he allegedly stabbed to death a 73-year-old woman last March at the Marsing Job Corps Center.

A lower court judge ruled last May the defendant should be tried as a juvenile, but that decision is being appealed by the prosecution.

Doolittle's ruling came Friday after Owyhee County Deputy Prosecutor Don Elsmann asked Doolittle to overturn the lower court's decision and try the youth as an adult.

During his presentation to Doolittle, however, Elsmann also argued that reporters should be barred from the appeal proceedings.

Doolittle then held that Idaho law did not provide a clear basis for closing court proceedings involving juveniles. "The court has no good reason to close this matter to the press," Doolittle said.

The judge said Saturday his decision was not meant to apply to murder trials involving juvenile defendants and did not open the preliminary hearing to camera coverage.

He drew attention to a set of guidelines for media coverage of trials adopted by legal, law enforcement and press representatives Nov. 15, 1969. The 12 pages of guidelines spell out procedures to be followed by the media and the courts to at once insure a "fair trial" for a defendant and yet preserve the rights of a free press.

Penn. St. John's stun ACC powers

By MARK FRIEDMAN
UPI Sports Writer

Bob Weinhauer doesn't ask for much — only a little respect.

"What we're asking people to do is look at us with a clear eye and respect us for what we are," the Penn coach said after his Quakers shocked third-ranked North Carolina, 72-71, in the second round of the NCAA tournament. "We respect other people, but we absolutely fear no one."

With the victory in the East Regional contest, the Quakers helped shed a lot of myths about the "weak" Ivy League programs and advanced to the East Regional semifinal in Greensboro against Syracuse.

Tony Price, who was plagued by early foul trouble, a hostile crowd and a back injury, scored 25 points, collected nine rebounds and was instrumental down the stretch.

"This is one of the greatest feelings I've ever experienced in my life," said Price. "There were a lot of people on the floor who I've seen on television a lot and I just wanted to show that we could play with those guys. I play for the Ivy League, the so-called weak league, and I hope this earned us a little respect."

Price began his respect campaign by scoring 15 of his points in the second half, three of them coming on a three-point play that gave Penn a 55-50 lead with 9:03 remaining.

A persistently annoying back injury has been troubling Price recently, but it may have been a great asset against the Tar Heels. It took the forward from New York a few minutes to loosen up and caused him to miss his first few shots.

"Because I missed a couple early they started giving me some room inside," Price said. "I just started hitting the jump shots after that. I think we really showed something today."

If any skeptics still remain, North Carolina Coach Dean Smith isn't among them.

"They are one of the best teams on our schedule and we played a tough schedule this year," Smith said. "We're very happy to have been here and it's just unfortunate we ran into such an excellent team. I thought they executed very well."

In the Midwest Regional at Murfreesboro, Tenn., fourth-ranked Michigan State crushed Lamar 95-64 and No. 5 Notre Dame held off 18th-ranked Tennessee 73-67. In the Midwest Regional at Lawrence, Kan., top-ranked Indiana State belted Virginia Tech 89-69 and No. 6 Arkansas tripped Weber State 74-63. In the West Regional at Los Angeles, No. 2 UCLA got by Pepperdine 76-71 and eighth-ranked DePaul defeated Southern California 89-78. In the other East Regional contest, St. John's upset Duke 80-78.

Greg Kelsner scored 31 points to power Michigan State past Lamar, though the victory could have been costly for the Spartans with the loss of center Jay Vincent. The Spartans, 22-6, advanced to the Midwest semifinals March 16 but may have to continue without Vincent, who left the game on crutches with an apparent ankle sprain.

Notre Dame now moves to Friday's Midwest semifinal in Indianapolis after the Irish withstood a late Tennessee challenge. The Irish were able to stave off the late-surgings Vols with accurate foul shooting by Kelly Tripucka, a second-team All-America forward, who led all scorers with 21 points, and the outside accuracy of guard Rich Branning. Freshman Gary Carter led Tennessee with 16 points.

Arnold Being best, staying best his goal

SUN VALLEY — Austria's Andre Arnold had already locked up first place in the overall World Pro Skiing standings, and he had already tucked $80,225 tightly under his belt, yet he was skiing as hard as ever this weekend in the Hawaiian Tropic Cup.

The top professional skier in the world picked up another $2,533 this weekend, finishing third in the downhill Saturday.

Yet he was upset because he did not make it past the final 16 in Sunday's slalom competition.

How could a man who has made almost double that of any other skier on the tour be upset with one bad race?

"I don't think about the money, all I care about is my technique and the fact that I did not race well today," said Arnold, who lost to Bellevue's Doug Woodcock in a very close race.

Although Arnold has won the point standings for two straight years, he says he can still be a much better skier.

"My goal is to ski well again next year, and I hope I can do a little better in the slalom," said Arnold, who was the tour's 1978 Rookie of the Year.

Arnold can't really do that much better in the slalom, already having won six giant slaloms and five slaloms.

But he said it was his one downhill win last year at Aspen that was the greatest moment of his racing career.

So what will Arnold concentrate on this summer? He said it will be improving his slalom even more.

"I don't know if I will train in the downhill but I will race for sure," he said. "I will spend most of my time training for the slalom."

The 23-year-old Austrian skier turned professional instead of waiting until after the 1980 Olympics, and he said he has no regrets about the tough decision he had to make.

Training is important for all skiers, but as a professional he said he can train when he wants to, and as hard as he wants to.

As an amateur, he said, skiers have to do as their trainers say and it is very difficult work.

Vanatta rallies for slalom win in pro ski tour

By RANDY FREY
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — When Lonny Vanatta was disqualified during the first run of the Hawaiian Tropic Cup slalom finals, no one, not even Vanatta, figured he could come back and beat Olympic silver medalist Walter Tresh.

After all, he would have to win the second run by more than 1.5 seconds, something that had not been done this year on the World Pro Skiing Tour.

But the Steamboat Colo. skier pushed himself to his limit and won that final race by 1.502 seconds to win the $5,400 first place prize before over 5,000 sun-tanned spectators atop Baldy Mountain.

The win moved Vanatta to fifth place in the overall World Pro Skiing standings, making him the top American skier after the 10-race season.

"It has been two years since anybody has overcome the penalty difference, so all I could do was ski all out and either win or fall," Vanatta said.

The former U.S. Ski Team member not only beat the penalty assessment, he did it against the No. 2 skier in the world.

"I was so happy when I got to the finish line I couldn't believe it," Vanatta said. "It really means an awful lot to me to be the top American skier in the world."

Tresh, who Saturday won the Hawaiian Tropic Cup downhill competition, was obviously disappointed with his final run of the year.

"After he was disqualified I thought I was the victor," said Tresh, who figured all he had to do was keep from falling in that final run.

"But when you try to ski slow you really ski badly," he said. "I almost missed three gates. It was just a bad run."

Tresh still maintained his No. 2 spot in the overall standings behind Austria's Andre Arnold, who for the second straight year was the best on the tour.

Arnold finished with 555 points, good for $82,788 in total prize money.

But the Austrian was eliminated from competition when he lost to Idaho's own Doug Woodcock in the first round of afternoon competition.

Woodcock, of Bellevue, won the first heat by .265 seconds while Arnold won the second run by .221.

It was only the third time this season Arnold had been eliminated before the quarterfinals.

Woodcock was the obvious people's choice, drawing loud cheers with each run.

There was an air of disappointment when he was eliminated in the quarterfinals despite winning the second heat by .157 seconds.

Woodcock had lost the first heat by .376 seconds, so he knew he had to win big on the next run.

Trying to anticipate the opening of the gate, he jumped forward a bit too soon and could not get out of the blocks while Palmer was well on his way downhill.

A gate will not open when pressure is exerted against it, so Woodcock had to move backwards and wait for the gate to open.

"It was a mental error on my part," he said. "I hit the gate a second too early, and by the time I got going I was already a second and a half behind."

Palmer, sensing something was wrong, slowed down a bit and Woodcock was able to overtake him off the final jump. Only a final burst by Palmer kept him from losing the race.

"I really wanted to win for all the people who were cheering for me," said Palmer, who acknowledged the cheers with a wave of his ski pole following his final run.

"There is no question it helps me ski better when I know people are behind me to do well," he said.

After beating Woodcock, Palmer disqualified twice in his semifinal race with Tresh, missing a gate in the first run and falling in the second heat.

He then met Robert Schuchter in the consolation finals, winning the first heat by .386 seconds but falling after crossing the finish line and injuring his knee.

He was able to make the second run, but he lost to Schuchter by .417 seconds and had to settle for fourth place.

Sun Valley's Ken Corroek made his final World Pro Skiing appearance, advancing all the way to the final 16 before losing to Hank Kashiwa.

Corroek, who helped set up the race course at Sun Valley, announced prior to the race that he was retiring from World Pro racing.

Violence on the court: is it getting out of hand?

TWIN FALLS — It would be a shame if basketball courts had to be surrounded by chicken wire fences to keep unruly fans off the court, but that's the only answer.

It is becoming increasingly obvious that something has got to be done to protect both the players and the officials from idiotic fans who have more than once this season turned a friendly game of high school basketball into a very unfriendly fist fight.

It almost happened Thursday at the A-1 tournament in Pocatello, it happened Friday at the state A-2 basketball tournament in Nampa, and it nearly happened Saturday during the consolation final of the A-4 tournament at the College of Southern Idaho.

What's wrong with people that they can't watch a basketball game without taking every call personally? Basketball is a sport, and sports are supposed to be fun, not something to draw blood over.

In Pocatello, Coeur d'Alene went into the tournament unbeaten but fell to Highland and its slowdown offense, 43-41, in the tournament opener.

Coeur d'Alene fans were understandably disappointed, but to offer to punch it out with the Highland fans following the game is a bit too much.

At Nampa, a group of Vall'vue football players charged onto the court following the game and proceeded to fling fists at Soda Springs' starting center.

Fans joined in, and for several minutes there was an all-out brawl. It was something which would have had a place in a Roller Derby contest, but not in a high school basketball game.

And at CSI, Cascade fans were displeased with the calls of officials during that school's consolation final.

It wasn't bad enough that they chastised the referees with personal remarks throughout the contest, but after the game was over they charged the locker room with more than a friendly conversation in their minds.

Only an alert CSI security corps prevented anything serious from happening, but even the thought of a fight turns the stomach of those who enjoy the game for what it is.

High school athletics are supposed to build character in today's youth. Organized sports are supposed to help prepare young adults for the world they will enter in several years.

What are we teaching our youth when parents stand up in the crowd and yell, "You stupid son of a...?"

Booting an official's call is part of watching a game, but when fans start making personal comments and threatening remarks, then it's gone too far.

Cascade fans convinced their players that the officials had cost them the ballgame. After the game a group of players walked by one of the referees and gave him a stare as if to say, "we dare you to step outside."

During the contest, two technical fouls were called on Cascade players, one against a player who cursed an official with language more appropriate in a Marine barracks than on a basketball court.

The player was not taken out of the game, nor was he even cautioned about his actions by his coach.

To condone unsportsmanlike behavior by players, fans or anyone is defeating the purpose of high school athletics.

These 16, 17 and 18-year-old players are supposed to be learning that life is not all winning. With every try they will encounter after high school, there will be an equal number of downs.

Childlike behavior by parents in the stands is going to lead to childlike behavior by the players after they graduate.

Someone suggested beefing up security at state tournament games, but that too is defeating the purpose. Why should there even be a need for security people?

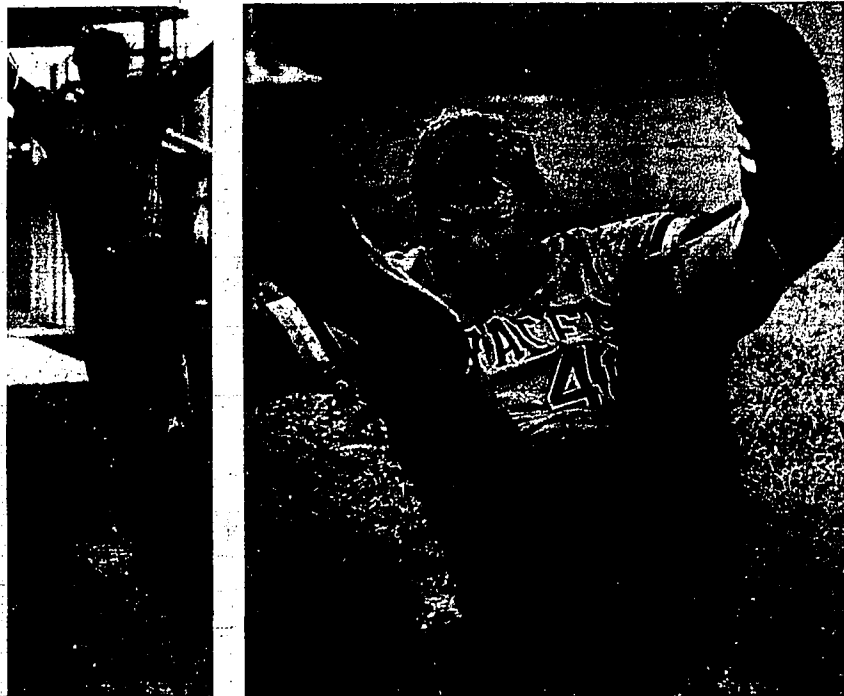

Here in Idaho everyone knows that athletics are taken seriously, that a state championship is something to be cherished for many years to come.

Parents should be on hand to watch their children play, to share with them the glory of winning and to help ease the disappointment of losing.

But to come and make excuses for a defeat, to blame the officials for a 49-point setback, is probably worse than not showing up at all.

Fans should seriously think twice before they yell something ridiculous at a sporting event. All it takes is one person to begin screaming, and before you know it everyone in the gymnasium is yelling at the top of their lungs.

Hopefully it will not take a serious injury to wake up the fans of Idaho.

Purdue, Alabama headline tonight's NIT tourney action

By United Press International

Advancing to the second round of the National Invitation Tournament should bring hope and optimism to victorious coaches. But as the first round became history this past weekend, a few of the winning coaches weren't exactly thrilled.

"We have the distinction of being the best defensive team in the Big 10 and a running game is a format I would not like to be accustomed to," said Purdue coach Lee Rose after his 14th-ranked Bolleymakers

"I was real displeased with some of our defensive breakdowns," Newton said. "I think we've got to go back to Tuscaloosa and get back to some fundamentals in defense."

In second-round action tonight, Purdue, the only nationally ranked team in the tourney, will face Dayton, which has to its credit a victory over Notre Dame earlier this season.

Alabama meets Virginia, a team it beat by two points last December. The Bollermakers may have to go without the services of forward Arnett Hallman, who was injured in the first half Thursday night.

Lopez rallies for victory

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Nancy Lopez birdied the 18th hole to culminate a final round rally Sunday to capture the $100,000 LPGA Classic by one stroke over Hollis Stacy.

Lopez, who started the day two strokes behind Stacy, the U.S. Open champion the past two years, shot a 3-under par 69 for a 280 total, 8-under par on the par-72, 6,268-yard Rancho Park golf course.

Stacy, who blamed her defeat on her concentration failure, shot an even-par 72 for a 281 total.

Reggie King, the Southeast Conference player of the year for the second straight year, will lead Alabama. King scored 29 points against the Bonnies to become the all-time single-season scoring leader at Alabama with 644 points.

The second-round games scheduled for tonight, Alcorn State, which won its 23th straight game by edging Mississippi State, 80-78, will meet Indiana. Texas A&M will face Nevada-Reno. Clemson travels Old Dominion and Maryland hosts Ohio State. Two of the six victors will also obtain third-round byes.

The first-round games last week, Dayton routed Holy Cross 105-81, Indiana topped Texas Tech 78-59 and Texas A&M tripped New Mexico 79-68.

Briefly in sports

Quality Tile wins

GOODING — Quality Tile of Twin Falls, behind the 32-point production of repeat MVP winner Eric Hovey, dropped Kertz Construction of Logan, Utah, 85-59 to retain its Gooding Outlaw Tournament basketball title Saturday night.

NFL meeting to open

HONOLULU (UPI) — The selection of sites for the 1981 and 1982 Super Bowls and proposed rule changes will be the top orders of business today when National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle convenes the NFL annual meeting.

Discussions on where to hold Super Bowls XV and XVI are scheduled Tuesday, and league officials expect a decision on one of both sites the same day. Next year's Super Bowl XIV will be played Jan. 20 at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

Bidding for the post-season extravaganzas are Dallas, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, New Orleans, Pasadena, Pontiac, Mich., and Seattle.

Kerbs leads A-1 team

POCATELLO — Gordon Kerbs of Burley plucked off two more honors in the state A-1 basketball tournament which concluded Saturday night.

Kerbs led the tournament in scoring average with 27.5 for his two outings while the total point leader was Brad Gardner of Blackfoot with 64 points.

Kerbs was named to the all-tournament team along with most valuable player Rick Coeur of Meridian, Bill Ross of Coeur d'Alene, Gardner and junior Brent Koetter of Highland.

The second team was composed of Cleve Lewis of Skyline, Daren Mikessel of Highland, Dave Ruple of Meridian, Mike Parker of Highland, Rick Goodwin of Blackfoot and Jon Nickerson of Coeur d'Alene.

Leading rookie signs

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Third baseman Carney Lansford, who held out the first two days of spring training, signed a 1979 contract with the California Angels Sunday.

Terms of the agreement were not announced but Lansford, who led major league rookies in 1978 with a .294 batting average, reportedly will earn $60,000.

Leigh Steinberg, Lansford's attorney, said an unspecified amount of the 21-year-old's salary would be donated to charity for each home run Lansford hits.

Turnbull beats Wade

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Fourth-seeded Wendy Turnbull recovered from a defeat in the first set Sunday to outlast a fatigued Virginia Wade, 5-7, 6-3, 6-2, and win a $125,000 women's tennis tournament.

The 26-year-old Turnbull, who avenged a loss to Wade in the finals at Houston in January, picked up $24,000 with the victory and increased her 1978 tour earnings to just over $75,000. It was her second win on the tour, the other coming in Detroit.

Bryan race to Johnson

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Gordon Johnson became the first five-time victor at Phoenix International Raceway Sunday, winning the 150-mile Jimmy Bryan, initial stop on the Championship Auto Racing Teams (CART) circuit.

East all-stars named

MAGIC VALLEY — A-1 all tourney coach Gordon Kerbs, teammate Greg Burch and Burley Bobcat Coach Ron Gillett head the eastern division squad for the Magic Valley Easter Seals all-star basketball team.

The squad, selected by a vote of coaches, will meet their western counterparts March 20 at College of Southern Idaho gymnasium. Joining the two Bobcats will be 6-5 center Lance Howard of Milco; 6-4 center Bill Buckley of Murtagh; Kevin Baker of Oakley; forward John Coals of Kimberly; guard Kelly Aldinger of Wood River; forward Tracy English of Valley; forward Scott Panicher of Declo, and guard Marc Perron of Dietrich.

The east holds a 5-2 advantage in the Magic Valley all-star series. The game is designed to provide recognition for graduating seniors throughout the area. All proceeds will go to the Magic Valley Easter Seals Society.

Larry Nelson ends long PGA drought

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (UPI) — Larry Nelson says his first nine holes Sunday were "like a roller coaster," but he hammered it flat on the back side with nine straight pars.

The steady golfer from Kennesaw, Ga., finished the round in par 71 for a 72-hole total of 274 and claimed the championship of the $300,000 Inverrary Golf Classic, his first victory on the tour.

Nelson carded only two pars on the front nine with four birdies and three bogeys, but then he settled down and held off a late rally by Grier Jones.

"From the 10th hole on I was going for the middle of the green and trying not to make any big numbers," Nelson said. "Me and my caddy, Herbert Stevens, were helping each other. I had to calm him down at times and he had to calm me down."

"The main thing you've got to do is not make a dumb mistake. The biggest mistake you can make is looking forward to what might happen or look back to a bad shot," he said.

The slender Georgian's careful, steady play brought him in 14 strokes under par and three shots better than second-place Jones.

Jones shot a 2-under-par 70 Sunday for a 72-hole total of 11-under 277. He mounted a late charge at Nelson with three birdies on the back nine but ran out of holes.

Nelson went into the day with a four-shot lead on the field, extended it to six after nine holes, then played par golf the rest of the way to hold off Jones.

Hale Irwin finished third at 280 after shooting a 73 over the par 72, 7,127-yard Inverrary East course. Lee Elder, with a 70, and Tommy Aaron, with a 72, were tied at 281. Raymond Floyd edged a 74 to finish at 6-under-par 282.

Wait until September says Muhammad Ali

BOSTON — Boxing legend Muhammad Ali plans to enjoy his status as three-time heavyweight champion of the world for as long as possible.

All, speaking Sunday at a news conference at Boston's Logan Airport, reminded all those on hand he has one year before he must defend the World Boxing Association title he recaptured last September from Leon Spinks.

All will fight September 15th to "let or retire," said the flamboyant Ali, who regained his crown from each of the three men who beat him — Joe Frazier, Ken Norton, and Spinks.

"Probably a few days before, then (Sept. 15), I'll make my final decision. I'll milk it (the title) until then," the champ said.

Self-proclaimed as the "The Greatest," All has said he will receive $100,000 for just 15 minutes of boxing at a "Farewell to a Legend" boxing exhibition tonight at the Providence Civic Center.

The session will be highlighted by a five-round match against former WBA title holder Jimmy Ellis, who has served as All's sparring partner throughout the champ's illustrious career.

All added the exhibition also might include "a round or two" with John "Dino" Denis of North Attleboro, Mass., New England's heavyweight champ.

"I don't want to fight nobody," added Ali, who made his one professional non-show 14 years ago in Boston when his championship rematch against Sonny Liston was scratched due to All's hernia operation.

"Right for what? I'm bigger than boxing. They all want to fight me." Ali preached to reporters at the rain-soaked airport.

All also reiterated plans for his world organization, which would, in effect, be a philanthropic undertaking in the future to help the needy.

Gold Glove hopes Cards will improve

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI)—Keith Hernandez doesn't want his Gold Glove to melt during another long, hot summer.

The 25-year-old first baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals suffered through a very forgettable season in 1978 — and even the honor of winning the Gold Glove couldn't sweeten the bitter memories wrought by a fifth-place finish, 24 games below .500.

"Everybody had the same season for us — rotten — and that doesn't figure to happen again," says Hernandez, who dropped 36 points-in-batting average to .255. "We're still missing the one big hitter and we're gonna do a lot of running this year — we're gonna have to."

The Cardinals scored the second-most runs in the National League last season and fell 16 games off the NL East lead by the All-Star break. Those kind of conditions don't make for very interesting baseball, and it had a telling effect on Hernandez.

"Hitting is all mental, and you lose a little of that peak concentration when the team is doing so poorly," says Hernandez, who enjoyed the best season of his four-year career in 1977, when he hit .291 with 15 home runs and 91 RBI.

But Hernandez regressed last season, suffering through recurring slumps that shook his confidence. He says every player goes through periods of "self-doubt." And Hernandez appears ready to reclaim his perch as one of the Redbirds' top hitters. He doesn't have far to climb, however, on a club with a .239 batting average and 74 home runs.

A's expecting a lot of out of Norris

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI)—"That boy can pitch," Willie Horton said with as much conviction as he could muster.

"He has a good arm and he has his head together now. The biggest mistake the A's could make would be to not give him a solid chance to pitch this year."

Horton, who managed Mike Norris in Venezuela this past winter and saw him win nine games with a 2.81 earned run average, needn't worry.

Jim Marshall, the new Oakland manager, had Norris on his Vancouver club in the Pacific Coast League for a time in 1978, so he knows all about the slender San Franciscan who can whip the ball into the plate as fast as most and has an excellent changeup to boot.

"All Mike ever needed, as far as I can see," says Marshall, "is consistency. He could pitch very well for three innings, poorly for one and then come right back and do everything right again. What hurt him, more often than not, was that one poor inning. That's what we think he was able to eliminate in winter ball, and we're very happy about that."

"I'm looking forward to Norris winning a regular job on the A's this year. The only way he won't if he doesn't pitch well. I think he has matured a lot in the last year, and maybe that's what he needed."

"I learned a lot about myself pitching in Venezuela," says Norris, who is hoping that at age 24 he can finally land a starting job with the A's. "The first came to an A's camp five years ago when he was only 19. In parts of four seasons he has a 7-17 big league record, so all he can do is go up starting this year."

NCAA: a shocker. . .

All-America forward Larry Bird, playing with a fractured thumb, scored 22 points, pulled down 13 rebounds and handed seven assists to make top-ranked Indiana State's first-ever NCAA appearance a success. Bird, playing with a rubber pad on his left thumb, also blocked two shots and had one steal to advance the unbeaten Hoosiers to their Midwest regional game Thursday against Big 8 champion Oklahoma.

The tandem of Steve Schall and Scott Hastings combined for 32 points and 12 rebounds to give the Razorbacks a victory over Weber State. In eliminating Weber State from the tourney for the second straight year, Arkansas earned the right to meet 16th-ranked Louisville in the Midwest semifinal. Sidney Moncrief became the first player in Razorback history to top 2,000 career points with 19 against the Wildcats.

straight points for a 54-48 lead they never relinquished. David Greenwood paced the Bruins with 18 points.

Curtis Watkins scored 27 points and freshman Mark Aquino added 25 to lead DePaul over USC. The Blue Demons advanced to the West Regional semifinal at Provo, Utah, Thursday night against 13th-ranked Marquette. Going with five players for the entire 40 minutes, DePaul proved too strong inside for the unranked Trojans, second-place finishers in the Pacific-10 behind UCLA.

Reggie Carter hit a basket with five seconds left to give St. John's an upset victory over injury-plagued Duke. Starting forward Kenny Dennard, with a badly sprained ankle, and starting guard Bob Denker, recovering from an emergency appendectomy, sat on the Duke bench in their street clothes. Carter led the Redmen with 21 points while Wayne McJoy contributed 18.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Alan: "What are we showing today's hand for? South is in a very normal and very unlikely three-notrump contract that goes down one because West gets off to the perfectly normal lead of the fourth-best diamond from a suit headed by ace-queen and East holds the king of clubs."

Oswald: "It is the first hand in a new and delightful book called 'Play of the Hand With Blackwood.' Easley is crowning his distinguished career with a great book."

Alan: "I suppose that he gives this lead to show the effectiveness of the normal fourth-best lead against notrump."

Oswald: "That is part. The main thrust of this hand is to point out that only a low diamond lead will hurt three notrump, but that in case South plays at five clubs then only a diamond lead will give him his contract."

Alan: "All this has to be obvious to any experienced player, but I can see where it is a good start on the general principles of the opening lead."

Atomic error

Trial will determine liability for deaths said related to radioactive cloud released

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Atomic Energy Commission officials gathered shortly after dawn at the Nevada Test Site on Dec. 18, 1970, to conduct an underground nuclear test code-named "Banerberry."

The weapons-related device was planned as one in the lengthy series of AEC nuclear tests spanning two decades at the desert facility, about 100 miles north of Las Vegas.

But something went wrong — the force of the underground blast tore open a 315-foot-long fissure in the earth's surface, less than 100 yards from ground zero, and a radioactive cloud emerged.

Now, eight years later, a lengthy trial is in progress in a Las Vegas courtroom to determine whether two men died from effects of the escaped radiation, and whether the government was at fault.

Banerberry designed by the Lawrence Radiation Laboratory in California, was intended to be a relatively low-yield explosion, believed to be equivalent to less than 20,000 tons of TNT. It was buried in a 910-foot vertical shaft at Yucca Flat in the northeastern part of the 850,000-acre research facility.

Frank Cluff, the AEC deputy test manager at NTS and Banerberry project manager, said that when the blast was detonated at 7:30 a.m., scientists at the control point 19 miles south of the blast site "saw the normal shock wave and dust cloud" on television monitors linked to remote cameras focused on ground zero.

Three minutes later, a shadow passed across one monitor and part of a cloud was visible in one corner of the screen. Cluff said he waited for the remote radiation monitor readings and went outside to take a look at the "vertical cloud of dust, obviously radioactive material."

Winds in the area were forecast to blow about four knots to the north and east, and as was common practice, security guards swept areas north and east of ground zero to evacuate non-essential personnel. A work camp with 900 men, located 3.5 miles northwest of the Banerberry detonation point, was not evacuated.

However, the winds shifted. Between 7:38 a.m. and 8 a.m. the light winds gradually turned towards the southeast, then towards the southwest and finally, began blowing towards the camp. Cluff said he ordered an evacuation at 8:05 a.m.

One of the guards ordered into the camp was Harley Roberts. The 50-year-old former Indiana truck driver moved to Las Vegas in 1966 and his brother-in-law, a test site security guard, got him a job with Wackenhut Services Inc.

Roberts and a dozen other security guards arrived at the camp at about 8:30 a.m. and ran from trailer to trailer, urging the men to leave. The cloud, he said, engulfed the camp.

Recalling that day, the guards said the camp occupants didn't seem to be in any hurry to leave as they packed personal items into their cars. A warning siren, located at the camp's fire station, was sounded at 8:45 a.m.

When the camp finally was evacuated between 9:30 and 10, Roberts was ordered to set up a roadblock at Dead Horse Flats, several miles northwest of the camp. While the other security guards and the camp residents were gathered at a central point several miles south of the camp for a radiation check, Roberts remained at the roadblock until late afternoon when officials ordered him in for decontamination.

Real site welder William Nunamaker, 61, who lived in one of the trailers at the camp during the week, boarded a bus that morning and went to his job in a tunnel operation a short distance north of the campsite. A short time after he arrived at the tunnel, he was ordered to reboard the bus and his crew was evacuated.

Roberts and Nunamaker complained they felt increasingly tired and weak in 1972 and 1973. Both men died of myeloid leukemia in 1974 and their widows filed suit against the U.S. government.

The non-jury trial on the widows' civil suits began in U.S. District Court in Las Vegas on Jan. 16 before Judge Roger Foley.

lowered to $520,000. Larry Johns, the women's attorney, alleges the government was guilty of 20 acts of negligence before, during and after the Banerberry detonation.

The attorney groups his charges into several areas: site selection and drilling; failure to evacuate the nearby work camp prior to the test; failure to adequately train test site personnel and plan for an emergency evacuation; failure to provide guards with protective clothing, and the delay in decontaminating Roberts.

Justice Department attorneys William Elliott and John Thorndal maintain the accidental Banerberry venting occurred when water-saturated soil amplified the device's explosive force near a previously unknown geologic fault.

Both sides agree, however, that the crucial issue in the case is whether the Banerberry radiation caused the men's leukemias and eventual deaths.

Eighty-six persons, including Roberts and Nunamaker, received radiation exposures from Banerberry in sufficient doses to require decontamination. Government records admitted into evidence show Roberts received approximately one roentgen of gamma radiation and Nunamaker was exposed to somewhat less.

Testifying for the widows, Dr. Alice Stewart, a British physician and epidemiologist, said the two men's deaths from a rare bone-marrow leukemia was an unlikely occurrence.

Dr. Stewart, involved in several radiation studies since World War II including an examination of low-level radiation effects on nuclear workers at Hanford, Wash., said she believes low-level radiation does cause cancer.

"It is highly improbable that the deaths of two Nevada Test Site workers in 1974 from myeloid leukemia could have occurred for reasons other than radiation," she testified, and her testimony was echoed by another epidemiologist, Dr. Rosalie Bertell.

Dr. Shields Warren, professor emeritus at Harvard University Medical School and the first director of biology and medicine for the AEC, told the court that radiation from the Banerberry blast was "with reasonable medical certainty" the cause of Roberts' leukemia. He testified he could not be certain about Nunamaker.
