Carter winds up Mideast mission

JERUSALEM (UPI) — President Carter, unable to bridge the gap between Israel and Egypt, was scheduled to hold final talks today with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and then shuttle to Cairo for talks with President Anwar Sadat, the White House announced Monday night.

Carter, in a speech before the Israeli Knesset (parliament) earlier in the day, said "We have not yet fully met the challenge" of attaining an Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty and he admitted in somber tones, "We must again contemplate the tragedy of failure."

The "tragedy of failure" appeared closer Monday night when White House spokesman Jody Powell said Carter will depart Jerusalem without the agreement he had sought and will fly to Cairo for an airport meeting with Sadat to report on the Jerusalem talks before heading back to Washington.

"It is safe to conclude there are issues that remain unresolved,"

Powell said in a briefing to reporters. He declined to call the Carter mission a failure, but he said Carter acknowledged he was unable to close the gap between the two nations that have fought four wars in 30 years.

Powell said it seemed impossible that a peace treaty would even be initiated on this trip and when asked what would happen next replied, "No one really knows." He said the decision to end the U.S.-Israeli talks was "certainly mutual."

Carter's decision to extend his stay in Israel came after eleventh hour efforts in a flurry of high-level meetings designed to avoid a breakdown of the negotiations on proposals for concluding a treaty. The president put his prestige — and possibly his political career — on the line when he undertook his dramatic mission to try to clinch the pact.

Carter will have been in Israel 64 hours before his scheduled departure about noon (3 a.m. MST) today.

"Compared to the distance traveled, the distance left is very small," Powell said of the exhaustive treaty negotiations. "This treaty either happens or doesn't happen."

He said Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will return to Washington with Carter and will not make any other stops. Originally it was thought Vance would shuttle between Egypt and Israel in a "salvage" mission if the talks failed.

Carter invited Begin to a working breakfast today at his Jerusalem headquarters in the King David Hotel. Vance and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan met for 30 minutes at the hotel at mid-evening in what appeared to be their final round of discussions. Neither commented to reporters.

There were further negotiations throughout the day to try to salvage the peace treaty that had its beginnings at Camp David last fall. After one session, which Carter did not attend, Begin emerged from a meeting with Vance and key members of the Israeli Cabinet with an optimistic note.

Cameras rolling

Ketchum and Sun Valley have come alive during the past week with the sights and sounds of Hollywood.

Twentieth Century Fox Television crews began shooting Swan's Song, a made-for-television movie being filmed throughout March in this resort community.

Shooting for the $1.5 million movie began at the Hobbit Inn in Ketchum and then moved this past weekend to the slopes of Bald Mountain, where film crews shot the Hawaiian Tropic Pro Circuit ski races.

"Swan's Song," featuring television star David Soul, is the story of downhill ski racer Jesse Swan who must choose between big money as a professional racer or the purer glory of the 1980 Olympics.

Film crews went all out Friday and Saturday to capture the breath-taking drama of a downhill ski race. Cameramen shot footage of the Hawaiian Tropic on Baldy as racers sped down Sun Valley's Hartman downhill course at speeds up to 75 miles per hour. To film the races, cameramen followed the racers down the course while hanging by harnesses outside two helicopters.

In the scenes pictured here, film crews had it easier as they shot the opening scenes before the big race in the movie.

In the top picture, the movie's co-producer Rene Valenti clocks the scene in which a hometown band strikes up music during the celebrations before the big downhill race. A Fox crew member begins this scene in classic Hollywood fashion by clapping a scene-take slate and another crewman holds up a reflector to provide better light for his cameraman.

In the bottom photograph, Director Jerry London (left) and David Soul, who is the film's star, discuss strategy before another scene take.

Much of the budget for "Swan's Song" is filtering down into the local Ketchum and Sun Valley economy. Twentieth Century Fox has hired about 200 local residents as extras and several others for small bit-parts. Considerable money is also being spent to house and feed the approximately 130-member Twentieth Century Fox crew.

The pro racers, movie crews, and press all came together Saturday evening for a posh dinner following the downhill race.

Shooting on the movie, which will be sold to one of the three major television networks, is scheduled to be complete by March 27. — By Christopher Bogan, Times-News writer.

Energy outlook gloomy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Persian Gulf producers hold the key to "the free world as we know it" unless the United States can get along with much less imported oil, a pessimistic Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said Monday.

In testimony before the Senate Energy Committee, Schlesinger drew an energy picture so gloomy that Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., said, "I have never seen you so despondent."

Schlesinger said the only way the outlook will change is for Americans to have "the national will to do it."

Schlesinger said energy consumption continues to increase; Iran is not likely ever to get back to full oil production, the option of nuclear energy "is barely alive," clean-air rules inhibit coal use, and planners of a West Coast pipeline to carry Alaska oil eastward "have about thrown in the towel" because of delays.

However, Schlesinger said, America's resources and the fact of oil production, the option of nuclear energy "is barely alive," clean-air rules inhibit coal use, and planners of a West Coast pipeline to carry Alaska oil eastward "have about thrown in the towel" because of delays.

However, Schlesinger said, America's resources and the fact of oil production, the option of nuclear energy "is barely alive," clean-air rules inhibit coal use, and planners of a West Coast pipeline to carry Alaska oil eastward "have about thrown in the towel" because of delays.

Schlesinger displayed a list of steps, some already started, to reduce U.S. consumption by the equivalent of more than 1 million barrels of oil a day.

The steps (with potential daily saving in barrels):

- Force industry to switch to coal or temporarily surplus natural gas (200,000 to 500,000 barrels daily).
- "Wheeling" electricity to shortage areas (100,000-215,000).
- Ease clean air rules on high-sulfur oil (10,000-20,000).
- Boost production from federal reserve lands (170,000).
- Delay phaseout of lead in gasoline, allow other additives (45,000-70,000).
- Such mandatory conservation as lighting and temperature controls and shutting service stations periodically (200,000-400,000).

He was at his gloomiest when talking about the dependence on the oil-rich Persian Gulf nations.

Committee Chairman Henry Jackson, D-Wash., pointed to a map showing the narrow strait through which most Persian Gulf oil must pass. Jackson said a sunken ship or other disruption there would cut off half the world's exported oil.

"If that cutoff lasted for a year, we would be into rationing, wouldn't we?" Jackson asked.

"The impact of a year's cutoff would be devastating," Schlesinger said. "The free world as we know it in 1945 would be over."

Schlesinger said the free world alignments and alliances would be shaken by such an oil emergency "if a hostile force were to control the oil taps of the Middle East."

Tsongas asked Schlesinger what choice a Soviet military leader "in intent on the destruction of the United States" might make from these alternatives: a nuclear strike, moving armies across Europe or "killing off" the oil production of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"Unquestionably, the Persian Gulf is the most tempting target around the globe," Schlesinger said.

Jackson repeated an earlier warning that the Middle East oil fields are vulnerable to a guerrilla attack that could wipe out America's supplies.

Cancer risk from water in Colorado town far above normal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An expert on plutonium contamination believes if Broomfield, Colo., residents are ingesting as much plutonium in their drinking water as one sample indicates, their risk of contracting cancer is 30 percent higher than average.

The appraisal was made before a U.S. Senate committee by Dr. Karl Morgan of the Georgia Institute of Technology's School of Nuclear Engineering in Atlanta.

Morgan's chaired committee on international plutonium dosage standards for both national and international agencies that studied the matter 20 years ago. Their findings set domestic and foreign standards that have existed ever since.

The amount of plutonium contamination of the Broomfield water supply is disputed. State officials insist there is far less radioactive pollution than Dr. Carl Johnson, Jefferson County Health Department director, believes exists.

Morgan's assertion before the Senate Subcommittee on Energy, Nuclear Proliferation and Federal Services last week was based on information provided by Johnson. His sample indicated a plutonium content of 3.03 picocuries per liter in Broomfield water.

"This is about 20 times the permissible limit," said Morgan.

That contamination level is substantially higher than Colorado Health Department sampling has found. Department records show a high of 2.25 picocuries per liter in four 1973 samples, a 1.13 picocuries level in April 1974, and 0.10 picocuries per liter in October of the same year.

The sampling is part of a continuing controversy surrounding the presence of the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant northwest of Denver.

'Secret' stamp smacking official papers often

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite presidential orders to cut down on government secrecy, federal agencies may be stamping millions of documents "secret" without admitting it, the General Accounting Office said Monday.

The investigative arm of Congress said a White House inter-agency panel presented a "misleading picture" of the situation by reporting 4.5 million documents classified secret in 1977.

The GAO said its own investigation of the government's most secret agencies indicated at least 70 million — and perhaps more than 100 million — documents were actually classified secret during the year.

It made the charge in a report on the classification system for the Joint Economic Committee's subcommitee on priorities and economy in government.

The GAO primarily attributed the discrepancy to the Defense Department and Central Intelligence Agency significantly understating classification actions.

Funding cut will cost Idaho 120 teaching posts

BOISE (UPI) — The president of the Idaho Board of Education urged Monday increased funding for higher education, saying that without it the state's higher education institutions will lose approximately 120 positions next year.

Dr. Leno D. Seppi, Lava Hot Springs, said he was "dismayed" at the $59.1 million proposed from the state's general fund by the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

"We were told education would not be damaged as a result of the 1 percent initiative, but it looks like one part of education is taking it on the nose," Seppi said.

Seppi said the proposed recommendations will fall short by about $3 million of the amount needed just to continue present programs and give the salary increases already established by the Legislature. He said it appears Boise State University could lose 30 positions, Idaho State University 29, the University of Idaho 50 and Lewis-Clark College 11.

"The only positive note right now is the 'no strings attached' directive from the joint committee, which means the board and the institutions can decide how best to use these funds," Seppi said. "But right now it looks like the only way to ease the burden of state schools is to require a greater reduction at another — ease the pain a little here but create a lot more there."

Seppi said reduced positions would mean dropping programs and "the ones to suffer will be the students of Idaho who may not find what they want as they continue their educations."

Passman trial starts

MONROE, La. (UPI) — A federal prosecutor said Monday the government would use financial records and diaries to prove its bribery and tax evasion charges against former Rep. Otto Passman, D-La.

But Passman's lawyer said the charges stemmed from phony documents written by South Korean businessman Tongsun Park.

Teacher strike ends

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Striking public school teachers approved a new two-year contract late Monday, ending the longest teachers' strike in Missouri history.

Sources who had been inside the closed meeting said the standing vote was overwhelmingly in favor of acceptance.

Tanzanian drive begs

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — A Tanzanian offensive to capture Kampala petered out in Uganda's southern swamplands Monday and a confident-sounding President Idi Amin threatened to take action against Britain for halting his lucrative "whiskey runs" to London.

President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania ignored an offer Amin made Sunday to hold face-to-face peace talks in a neutral country once the Tanzanian invasion force withdrew from Uganda.

Indochina war escalates

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Fighting escalated again Monday as Chinese troops slowly withdrew from Vietnam and intelligence sources said newly fortified positions in some areas suggested the war may not be ending.

Intelligence reports said some Chinese troops crossed back into China and Hanoi said the Chinese were moving border markers as if to hold on to new territory.

The official New China News Agency blamed the escalation on Vietnamese attacks against "temporary positions" the troops returning to China's Guangxi (Kwangsi) province.

Iranian women protest

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Thousands of women, supported by Iranian feminist Kate Millett, fought with black-ead Moslem traditionalists Monday for the right to wear Western clothes and attacked a car carrying the chief of Iran's broadcast network.

A radio broadcast said one woman whipped out a gun and fired at the auto and another pulled out a knife. There were no immediate reports of casualties nor of the whereabouts of Sadeq Ghotbzadeh, the director of Iran radio and television.

Despite crack, experts say Leeds Dam 'stable'

Residents nervous below leaking dam

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (UPI) — Residents living below the crumbling Leeds Dam are apprehensive the century-old granite structure will burst and flood their homes, but city officials Monday said there is no immediate danger.

City workers Monday continued to drain Leeds Reservoir so that structural engineers can get a better look at five cracks, which are allowing 3,000 gallons of water per minute to pour through.

The 25-foot high, 475-foot long dam is holding back about 60 million gallons of reservoir water. The city has put a 24-hour watch on the dam and prepared evacuation contingency plans in the event it gives way.

Mayor Harry Chapman Monday said he and other city officials planned an informal "informational" meeting Monday night with worried area residents to reassure them that the dam is not about to give way.

"Some residents have had some apprehensive feelings about how the city is secure in saying the dam is all right," Chapman said. "I think that word of mouth creates more of a fear factor than what is taking place. If it were you and you were below it, you'd probably have some doubts."

Mrs. Helen Huntington, who lives below the dam, said "I didn't get excited until everyone else got excited."

Chapman said about 100 persons in more than 30 homes had been contacted about the contingency plans.

The dam cracked in five places and began leaking last Wednesday. Northampton City Engineer Francis P. Ryan said the structure probably will have to be rebuilt at the cost of $300,000.

Ryan said it will take one week to 10 days to drain the reservoir halfway. When the job is completed Ryan said officials will be better able to judge the extent of the damage, which he speculated was caused by stress from an ice buildup inside the dam.

During the rainy weekend, about 12 area families left their homes to stay with relatives and friends. But there were no forced evacuations.

Fish loss warnings unheeded

BOISE (UPI) — The loss of fish resources below dams because of a lack of adequate oxygen failed Monday to sway a majority of Idaho senators.

A resolution which would amend Department of Health and Welfare regulations to reduce the amount of oxygen from 8 to 5 parts per million was approved 18-6 by the Senate, despite the argument it would destroy the fishery.

Most of the argument centered around the fishery below American Falls Dam. Opponents pointed out that a contract was made with Idaho Power Co. that it would assure 6 ppm below the dam.

Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, floor sponsor, said the Idaho Water Users Association requested the reduction in the amount of oxygen and this resolution was a compromise between that group and the health and welfare agency.

He said studies had indicated that trout could survive with 5 parts per million and the change in regulations would only affect some six dams.

Sen. Leon Swenson, R-Nampa, said the change in regulation would not destroy the fishery.

But Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-St. Maries, said it was like using marijuana because "we don't know how much damage is being done."

"We're gambling with what happens and what the consequences will be," said Chase.

Sens. Chick Bilyeu, D-Pocatello, and Ken Robison, D-Boise, agreed with Chase, contending that there already has been damage to the fishery below American Falls Dam and the resolution would allow the same thing to happen at other dams around the state.

Bilyeu said an area below American Falls has been damaged and the resolution would "further deprive the people who want to fish that part of the river."

Robison said the resolution was not talking about saving Idaho Power money at one specific area but "will affect all waters" in the state.

Today's weather

Enjoy the sunshine but remember it's still March

Twin Falls, Gooding-Jerome and Burley-Rupert areas:

Fair through Wednesday with highs about 55 to 60 degrees and on Wednesday 60 to 65. Lows tonight 30 to 35.

Halley, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River valley:

Fair through Wednesday with high temperatures 45 to 55 degrees today and on Wednesday in the 50's. Overnight lows mostly in the 30's.

Synopsis:

High pressure continues to build over Idaho in the wake of a weak disturbance which passed over the state Monday morning, bringing prospects for fair weather at least through midweek.

But the long range forecast for the rest of the week Saturday calls for dry, and mild Thursday followed by a cooling trend on Friday and Saturday with an increasing chance of rain in the valleys and snow in the mountains.

Temperatures across southern Idaho will be mostly in the 50's to the middle 60's early in the period, dipping to the middle-40's to middle 50's by Saturday. Lows will be mostly in the middle 30's to the middle 40's.

Conditions are expected to remain mostly dry across Idaho through midweek, and there was no precipitation reported Monday.

Temperatures Monday recorded some of the warmest levels of the year, with a 72 at Payette the highest reading. Temperatures reached into or near the 60's across southern Idaho, but in the southeast were still in the 30's in the afternoon. Bear Lake's 1 degree above zero was the coldest spot in the state on Monday morning.

In Nevada, mild temperatures will be accompanied by variable cloudiness and isolated showers with gusty winds near showers. Generally fair weather is forecast for Utah, although partial cloudiness and a few showers may develop. Temperatures will continue mild.

Balanced budget amendment debate opens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, Monday argued Congress has enough fiscal restraint to wipe out deficits without a constitutional amendment favored by a group of Senate Republicans and conservative Democrats.

Legislatures began petitioning Congress to call a constitutional convention or draft its own amendment to halt deficit spending they blame for inflation.

Muskie testified before the Senate judiciary subcommittee on constitutional amendments that a constitutional mandate for a balanced budget is too inflexible to meet quickly changing economic conditions. He also took issue with the widely held belief that federal budget deficits are the major if not the sole cause of inflation. Muskie said, "There simply is no strong historical correlation between deficits and inflation."

Muskie conceded that "under most conditions of economic health a federal deficit is unacceptable" and said Congress must take "aggressive and sometimes painful steps" to wipe them out.

But Muskie, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said, "The new congressional budget process has brought an historically unprecedented level of discipline and control to (Congress) budgeting procedures and capabilities."

Other witnesses — Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond, S.C., and Robert Dole, Kan., and Democrat John Stennis, Miss., and Harry Byrd, Va. — shared the view that federal spending is out of control.

"I think the fiscal condition of our country is very much like a man who drinks too much whiskey at night and in the morning must suffer from a hangover or drink some more," Byrd said. He said members of Congress have become "spendaholics."

'Long shot' Weicker jumps into GOP nomination chase

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Liberal Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut launched his presidential campaign Monday, declaring he's the "longest shot" for the GOP nomination but the party's best bet to win in 1980.

The maverick 6-foot-6 millionaire, who made his national reputation as Richard Nixon's strongest Republican critic on the Senate Watergate committee, vowed to run in every GOP primary next year "whether I can win or not."

Weicker, the 10th Republican who has either announced or formed a campaign committee for 1980, assessed his chances this way: "For the nomination, the longest shot in the field. For the election, the best shot in the field."

Before a sign-waving, standing-room-only crowd at Hartford's historic Old State House, Weicker urged apathetic Americans to get out their "duffs" and start working for better government.

"I want to say to Americans, as long as only 34 percent of you vote, you're going to get lousy government," he said. "Either serve or get somebody good to serve."

Weicker, 47, is the only liberal Republican to enter the presidential against possible Republican presidential candidates like former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and former President Ford.

"But put us in the same ring together and I have a strange feeling it is no Weicker said before his supporters cut him off with a loud outburst of applause.

If elected, Weicker would become the nation's first president born on foreign soil. He was born in Paris and reared on New York City. Weicker said because his parents were Americans traveling abroad, he is a natural citizen and he feels he can meet any constitutional test of his candidacy.

Heir to the Squibb Drug fortune, Weicker was elected to the House in 1968 and the Senate in 1970 and 1976.

Other announced GOP candidates include former Texas Gov. John Connally, Rep. Phil Crane of Illinois, former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen, and former Republican National Committee official Benjamin Fernandez.

Those who have formed campaign committees include former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, former ambassador George Bush of Texas, Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois, Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee and Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas.

SEN. LOWELL WEICKER joins hopeful crowd race so far. He got a 60 percent approval rating by Americans for Democratic Action in 1978 — fourth highest among Republican senators. With his wife Camille standing by his side, Weicker said at "arm's length" he doesn't stand a chance

Hospital lid bill backed by Al Ullman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration, pledging to "shed blood" to reduce inflation, was the backing Monday of influential House Ways and Means Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., for its hospital cost containment proposal.

Ullman made a special statement at a joint hearing of two key subcommittees that must first vote on the legislation — the cornerstone of President Carter's anti-inflation package.

"The bill, defeated last year and facing an extremely tough fight this year, would ask hospitals to limit the rate of their annual cost increases to 3.7 percent. Standby mandatory controls would take effect Jan. 1, 1980 if the voluntary plan is unsuccessful.

"I say this not to imply that it is an ultimate solution to the problem," Ullman said in announcing his support, "but a very necessary holding action."

Judge bars union disclosure effort

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge Monday blocked an attempt by the Teamsters union to force a reporter for U.S. News & World Report magazine to disclose her notes in an interview with a union dissident. U.S. District Judge John Pratt issued a protective order sought by Sara Fritz, the magazine's associate editor for labor coverage, to prevent all sides in the case from pursuing such subpoenas any further.

The Teamsters had subpoenaed Ms. Fritz's notes and other material on an interview last June with Peter Camarata of Detroit, the candidate of the dissident Teamsters for a Democratic Union for union presidency in 1981.

Speaker believes lid delay unlikely

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Monday there was no chance the House would mimic the Senate and postpone limits on outside earned income for its members. But O'Neill made clear he did not think it was fair to allow senators to earn more than House members. He said income limits hamper political parties in their efforts to convince bright young people to join for public office.

"It's going to be hard to attract bright, able, successful people," he said at a news conference. Despite his misgivings, O'Neill said he can read the sentiments and any effort to abrogate income limits in the House would be a disservice to the public.

Carter probe call issued

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican leader Howard Baker called on President Carter Monday to "bite the bullet" and appoint a special prosecutor to investigate questions about the Carter family peanut business.

The FBI, meanwhile, was checking a Washington Post story that quoted former bonded warehouseman Jimmy Hayes saying he helped Billy Carter falsify records to hide lack of collateral on a large bank loan the business got.

Hayes refused to answer UPI questions Monday about his dealings with the president's brother. But a Georgia radio station quoted Hayes saying the Post story, based on tape-recorded interviews, contained both "truth and lies."

The FBI said two agents were ordered to question Hayes Sunday night about the allegations.

Baker made his appeal for a special prosecutor in a speech on the Senate floor, and his office said he will give the White House a chance to act before he writes a formal request to the Justice Department.

Chicago can't bid Daley goodbye, yet

CHICAGO — A couple of high-rise dwellers, Lakefront speculators, were sipping their drinks and having a satisfied laugh at the thought that the Bridgeport crowd was politically doomed at last.

They talked about how the election of Jane Byrne as mayor will mean that Chicago would no longer be ruled by mummy men from the politically obsessed little South Side neighborhood.

They were having such a fine time wallowing in their political innocence that I didn't have the heart to tell them that they might be giggling too soon.

Yes, the defeat of Mayor Michael A. Bilandic was an earthquake for Bridgeport. Powerful Richard J. Daley proteges like Tom Donovan, Ed Bedore and others will soon be out of City Hall, replaced by non-Bridgeporters.

And being from the 11th Ward will no longer mean that a city job-seeker automatically moves to the front of the line. Things aren't going to be quite the same, at least for awhile, in the neighborhood that has dominated Chicago politics for several decades.

But is Byrne's amazing election really the end for the Daley group? Is the 11th Ward regular Democratic organization going to shrink and wither? Will we see the sons of the former mayor on the street panhandling nickels?

No. And he ho.

The night Bilandic lost, the Bridgeport crowd was already planning on how to get the mayor's job back. They are mayor addicts. Four straight Chicago mayors came out of the 11th Ward, and they think the job belongs there, almost like a Civil Service position. And like any addict, they'll do almost anything to satisfy their craving.

So I will make a political prediction, which you may cut out and keep and then laugh at me some day. Or marvel at my ability to peer into the future.

In four years, when Jane Byrne has finished one term in office, Chicago will elect a new mayor.

That mayor will probably be Richard M. Daley, presently a state senator, boss of the 11th Ward Democratic organization, and heir to his pa's blueprint for political success in Chicago.

Actually, young Richie and the Bridgeport crowd were planning on it, anyway. That's why they put Bilandic in the job in the first place. They figured he could keep the seat warm for Richie, while they conspired Bridgeport's hold on City Hall and took over the Cook County Democratic organization.

They knew that Bilandic was politically inept enough to be content with being mayor and would leave the politics to them. He would jog and go to French restaurants with wife Heather and attend La Salle Street luncheons, while they ran things.

Unfortunately for them, they didn't know Bilandic was so wonderfully inept that he would get himself blown out of office by a snowstorm.

Nevertheless, their goal is still the same — put another Richard Daley in the mayor's office and get the magic name back on those Welcome to Chicago signs at O'Hare. And with Byrne's election, the only change will be in their strategy.

It's not difficult to guess what the strategy will be. It seldom is. The Bridgeport crowd isn't made up of original thinkers. But they're usually smart enough to ask themselves: "How did the Old Man do it?" Then they try to do the same.

The way the late Mayor Daley did it was to first take over the party. He became chairman in 1953, two years before he ran for mayor.

So the Bridgeport crowd is already planning to push George Dunne out as chairman, and to move Richie Daley in. It will probably happen in next year's primary, when the commitment of the city's 50 wards and the county's 30 suburban townships will be elected. A few weeks later, the committeemen meet to elect a chairman.

Most people don't understand how the voting for party chairmen works. It isn't done on a "one man one vote" principle. Instead, each committeeman casts the total number of Democratic ballots that he produced in his ward or township in the primary.

In other words, a ward boss who can crank out 20,000 Democratic primary votes has as much voting power as two ward bosses who get out 10,000 votes each.

So to become party chairman, you don't need a majority of committeemen behind you. What it takes are the committeemen who get out the biggest block of Democratic primary votes.

That's what makes Bridgeport — even without one of its own as mayor — so formidable as a power base. The 11th Ward is the single most powerful Democratic ward in the city. In a primary, it turns out more than 20,000 votes. Some wards won't produce a third of that.

And the committeemen who are allied with the Bridgeport crowd also run wards that routinely produce impressive figures.

Besides the voting muscle of the Bridgeport crowd, there are other factors, including the hypnotic effect the name Daley has on the machine's cigar puffers, and the natural inclination of many ward committeemen to be bossed by someone.

Add it up and Richie Daley is the most likely choice to be the next party chairman.

At a party chairman, he would have to do to Byrne just what his father did to the incumbent Mayor Martin H. Kennelly in 1955. As chairman, the elder Daley got himself elected by the organization and told Kennelly to take a walk. When Kennelly fought it out in the primary, the machine crushed him.

I'm not saying it will all come about, because anything can happen in four years. But that's the plan of the Bridgeport crowd.

Their biggest problem is going to be overcoming the key difference between the Bridgeport crowd of today and of a few years ago.

It used to be run by Mayor Daley. And whatever else you might say about him, he was the city's smartest politician. His successors — son Richie; Donovan, Bedore and the others — like to think they are smart, too.

But remember this: During the month of January, Bilandic conducted one of the dumbest political campaigns in the history of Chicago and almost anywhere else.

And all those smart guys from Bridgeport were telling him what to do.

...AND WHAT IS WORSE, GUNNED DOWN BY A BROAD!

'Uglies' want liberation

A previously silent minority group is beginning to make itself heard, and to demand that society stop discriminating against its members.

The Americans are not bound together by racial, ethnic or religious ties.

Instead, they share a common affliction that they say is more socially damaging than any suffered by other, more heavily publicized minorities.

These newly vocal protesters are ugly people.

"We try to be the guardians of ugly human beings," said Dan McCoy, founder of Uglies Unlimited, an ugly liberation group with headquarters in Garland, Tex. "Our major goal is to prevent discrimination because of physical appearance."

Ugly people, McCoy said, face humiliation and insults from the time they are children. This constant, negative reinforcement causes ugly people to have a low sense of self, and to grow up thinking they are worthless and not as "good" as attractive people.

"If you are black, if you are of the Jewish faith, if you live on an Indian reservation, then people can accept the idea that you may be discriminated against," McCoy said. "But it is hard to convince people that ugliness is a legitimate and serious cause of discrimination."

Indeed, McCoy said, many people laugh when they first hear of Uglies Unlimited. They think it is some kind of joke.

"Many people write us saying that they want to become members, and we find out later that the person whose name we have received didn't write us at all," he said. "Someone else has sent the name as a practical joke. That's the kind of cruelty that ugly people have grown up living with."

Uglies Unlimited was founded in 1973, when several people in the South — McCoy included — found out that a major airline was including demands on its application blanks that all prospective stewardesses be attractive and be lacking in certain ugly characteristics.

The first Uglies Unlimited members picketed the airline's offices with signs saying "Ugly Ducklings Can Fly, Too," and met with members of the airline's management. Since that time, McCoy said, the anti-ugly language has disappeared from the airline application forms — but he is convinced that ugly women are still screened out before becoming stewardesses.

"Job discrimination is one of the most serious barriers facing ugly people," he said. "Look in the newspaper. How many ads do you see looking for 'attractive receptionists'?" Ugly people are discriminated against in ways that would never be tolerated against other minority groups. Even the blacks, when they were trying to raise their own self image, used the phrase "Black is Beautiful." That in itself is yet another example of how ugly people are told they are bad."

Children are taught early in life that to be ugly is a bad thing, McCoy said.

"In fairy tales, Cinderella is beautiful and the witch is ugly," he said. "Villains in children's stories are ugly. Much of the blame can be placed on Madison Avenue and Hollywood. They teach us to associate beauty with the best. We can turn on a commercial — you never see an ugly person selling perfume or new automobiles. These are glamour products which use sexual stimulation to sell them, and ugly people are not allowed to do the selling."

"It has become a part of the political process, too. With the media becoming so much a part of campaigns, ugly people are at a disadvantage in campaigning for office. Abraham Lincoln would not be elected president today. He was too ugly. He just couldn't make it today."

McCoy said that, although Uglies Unlimited is devoted to raising the public's consciousness about ugly people, some people who write to it think that it can offer help to individual ugly men and women.

"Our files are filled with people like that," he said. "I wish we didn't have to be so serious about our work... but if you could see a letter from an adolescent girl, enclosing her picture, and pleading with us to tell her if she is really ugly, because she has been ridiculed. If we would answer and say, 'Yes, Judy, you are ugly.' It would be the end for her."

"Any job agency will tell you how much more quickly they will be able to place an attractive person than an ugly person, if the two people have exactly the same skills. And studies have shown that attractive waitresses are tipped more highly than ugly waitresses, without regard to the quality of the service or how good the meal was."

McCoy said that the ugly people are stereotyped as "nerd... not doing a good personality... acting very sweet, like a puppy... not competent... of inferior intellectual capacity."

"It takes an extremely mature person to stand up and admit they are ugly. People just don't want to be associated with Uglies Unlimited. And as for the rest of the world... we recommend that they accept people for what they are rather than what they look like. Attractive doesn't mean good, and ugly doesn't mean bad. Whether it's on a blind date or on a job application — give ugly people a chance."

Let others volunteer for 1 percent cut

Bombshells are beginning to explode around Idaho as a result of the 1 percent initiative but the wrong institutions appear about to blow up.

Last week, the Boise Public Library announced plans for a 25 percent cutback in funds.

Then on Sunday, Idaho Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans, lit a fuse under the state's public schools.

Evans, in Twin Falls for the dedication of the new Vera C. O'Leary Junior High, suggested state school boards be given the power to lay off teachers if the 1 percent tax-cutting initiative requires it.

Evans' willingness to back a plan to send Idaho's good teachers packing is perhaps the first offer of an elected official to put his troops on the 1 percent firing line.

You don't hear the heads of Idaho's bureaucracies suggesting their good employees be laid off in the spirit of tax relief.

That's the problem. The wrong groups, i.e.

schools and libraries are volunteering for execution under the 1 percent.

Jerry Evans ought to pass his willingness to sacrifice along to some of the state agencies.

Idaho may need fewer bureaucrats. It doesn't need fewer teachers. Many districts already are overcrowded, including the Twin Falls school district in some grades.

And the state already spends less on education than any of its western neighbors. Twin Falls spends less per pupil than any district in Idaho. The idea of cutting out good teachers from this Spartan system to save money seems ludicrous.

In a general sense, cutting back on libraries, schools and the like could begin a long term decline in the Idaho educational system.

No property tax relief measure is worth that.

Jerry Evans should take the Idaho school system's neck off the 1 percent chopping block.

Let the bureaucracies step up and volunteer, not the schools.

'National security' makes avoiding prosecution easy

NEW YORK — "National security" is a magic phrase behind which dubious deeds and policies have long been hidden, as the nation should have learned in the Pentagon Papers and Watergate cases. Now these marvelously adaptable words are being used in a kind of "graymail" to enable government officials and others to avoid prosecution on criminal charges.

The latest graymail case came to an ignominious end last week when the Department of Justice dropped perjury charges against Edward J. Gerry Jr., a senior official of the International Telephones and Telegraph Corp., rather than suffer disclosure in court of what the department said was "classified national security information." Gerry had been charged with lying to a Senate investigating committee when he testified that he had no knowledge of cooperation between his company and the Central Intelligence Agency to block the election of Salvador Allende Gossens to the presidency of Chile.

In earlier graymail cases, charges against Gerry's ITT associate Robert Berleff were dropped on similar national security grounds, and former CIA Director Richard Helms was allowed to plead no contest to a misdemeanor for much the same reason.

Attorneys for all three men insisted that in order to mount a proper defense, each would have to disclose national security information. In each case the government decided not to pursue the prosecution. This record causes widespread expectation that such graymail threats will be raised again in the cases of L. Patrick Gray 3d and two other former officials of the FBI — and that the Department of Justice will yield again.

Sen. Frank Church, who had chaired the investigating committee, called the action in the Berleff case "outrageous" and charged that the department had acted upon "spurious 'national security' grounds." He repeated these charges after the Gerry case was dropped. Naturally, department spokesmen insisted that the information they had acted to protect really was important.

That is the first question about these cases: whether the information being protected from disclosure is truly sensitive or merely embarrassing to the government, and some of its officials. A transcript of a secret court hearing in the Gerry case (mailed by persons unknown to The Nation magazine) suggests that the CIA feared that some of its paid agents in Chile would be named and that Hernan Cubillos, Chile's present foreign minister, would be alleged to have been one of them.

Even if that were true, it's not clear that the information that justified what amounts to immunity from criminal charges for Helms and the ITT officials. And even if the government were prudently protecting legitimate national security information, the graymail defense would raise other difficult problems.

As Church pointed out, some government officials may now feel that they are "free to mislead Congress with impunity," as long as they can later claim that their defense against prosecution would require the disclosure of security information.

Worse, security officials of the government may be encouraged to engage in or order criminal acts, knowing that a graymail defense probably will head off prosecution.

Whatever the attitude of the Carter administration's Department of Justice, moreover, there's no guarantee that in some future administration there would not be active collusion between the security agencies and federal prosecutors to hide certain activities behind the screen of national security, thus immunizing those responsible.

At issue is not only government credibility, of which there is little enough now, but the principle of equal justice under the law. One proposed remedy, now being studied at the Department of Justice and in Congress, is legislation to provide for secret pre-trial hearings at which a judge could evaluate whether the security information at issue was truly "relevant" to the defense, or whether it could be legitimately excluded from evidence.

But the possibility of hamstringing the legal defense of an accused person in a secret proceeding will not reassure those who favor civil liberties. The probability of leaks might make it similarly unwelcome to the security agencies.

A better answer would be found in a decision by the Justice Department to prosecute even when security information might be jeopardized — for example in the FBI cases. Most claims for the "sensitivity" and importance of such material are overblown anyway.

Surgeon general joins foes of TV ads for sugary foods

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The surgeon general has determined that eating sugar is dangerous to your teeth and thinks the government should consider protecting children against commercials promoting sugary food.

Surgeon General Julius Richmond, questioning the wisdom of barring small children with television commercials for sugary foods, said Monday, "Tooth decay... is the No. 1 chronic disease of childhood."

"I think we should consider seriously the need for government intervention to protect the very young from unfair commercial exploitation," Richmond said in remarks prepared for Federal Trade Commission hearings on its controversial proposal to crack down on children's TV advertising.

The FTC opened its second week of hearings Monday, and Richmond is scheduled to testify today.

"By the time the average child enters school, he or she has five decayed teeth; by age 15 the number of decayed teeth has doubled to 10," Richmond said.

He said tooth decay is the "leading chronic disease affecting America's children... and sugar consumption is unquestionably a cause of caries (cavities) development."

The surgeon general and witnesses who appeared Monday did not strenuously challenge the Federal Drug Administration's view that sugar was a safe food additive.

The Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, in a review of sugar for the FDA, also found that sugar does contribute to tooth decay at current levels of use.

Richmond said sugar's "safe" status "cannot be interpreted to mean that anyone can safely consume any amount of sugar."

"Tooth decay is a preventable disease," Richmond said. Cutting down consumption of sugar "is one of the most effective measures an individual can take towards prevention of caries."

FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said even if the FDA affirms sugar's safe status, that "is not a guarantee of safety over the whole range of real-world consumption possibilities. Those concerned with protecting the public health, therefore, can scarcely afford to lose interest in a substance merely because it is declared 'generally recognized as safe.'"

Richmond said, "I seriously question the wisdom of permitting a steady stream of advertising promoting consumption of sugared foods to children who are too young to make informed judgments about risks to their health."

Spicy testimony due in Marvin case

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actor Lee Marvin has so far skipped over lightly the topic of the elusive Dick Doughty in his testimony in the $1.5 million suit brought by his former live-in companion, Michelle Marvin.

But Marvin Mitchellson, the combative attorney for Miss Marvin, is expected to delve into the subject this week when the trial resumes after a recess Monday.

Richard Doughty, a former Peace Corps member who now gives his profession as actor, testified for three days behind closed doors last month and then slipped away from the courthouse before reporters covering the trial could speak with him.

But the court transcript showed that Doughty, who looks to be in his mid-20s but says he is 38, testified that he had sexual relations with Michelle more than 50 times from the period he first met her and the actor on the Pacific Island of Palau in 1968 until after the couple broke up in May 1970.

Mitchelson complained bitterly about the admission of his testimony and Michelle, now 48, denied in the courthouse corridor that she and Doughty ever so much as kissed.

But Superior Court Judge Arthur K. Marshall ruled that — while there was always the question of whether Doughty's testimony was true — it was relevant to the case since it is a breach of contract suit in which Miss Marvin contends she devoted herself to Marvin exclusively.

Marvin, 55, has virtually ignored the subject in court and out, he told reporters that at the time he was unaware of any infidelities.

Walsh," which Marvin made in 1969 in Tucson, Ariz.

Marvin said Doughty did live with them in a house in Tucson during the filming but his lawyer dropped the questioning there.

Mitchelson said Monday he would recall Doughty to testify in open court and cross-examine him about his alleged secret affair with Michelle.

And on the witness stand, all he said about Doughty was that he and Michelle did meet the young man on Palau and made arrangements for him to have a part as a script and assistant in the movie, "Monte

PATRICIA SCHROEDER...rights disregarded

Khomeini clampdown assailed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., said Monday the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's restrictions on women were a "tremendous step backward, for women and a blatant disregard for human rights."

Ms. Schroeder said women she had talked with over the past few days were outraged by new restrictions on women in Iran, and this outrage may boost the women's movement everywhere by showing women how "tenuous" their rights are.

Ms. Schroeder began gathering signatures of her colleagues on a letter to Patricia Derian, assistant secretary of state for human rights and humanitarian affairs, asking her "not to forget the plight of these Iranian women" as she speaks out on human rights issues.

"In recent days, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Iranian government has imposed stringent restrictions on women's freedom," the letter said. "These restrictions represent a tremendous step backwards for women and a blatant disregard for human rights."

She said "Khomeini's actions unquestionably reduce women to second class citizens despite their participation in the revolution which placed him in power."

"We recognize each person's right to practice the religion of his or her choice. Moreover, if a people unanimously choose to support a religious government, we respect that decision."

"But when a government imposes religious practices on its populace which restrict their basic human rights, it has overstepped its authority," Ms. Schroeder said.

Line of Star Wars toys leads market

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Kenner Products officials figure Star Wars toys remain "The Force" in the toy market for years to come.

Kenner officials held a weekend unveiling of their 1979 toy line, and to no one's surprise, more than 25 of 80 new items related to the 20th Century-Fox film.

The sciatic nerve is one of the largest nerves in the body. Inflammation of this nerve is known as sciatica and it is one of the most miserable of all the nerve ailments. Cases range from mild to very severe, with pain occurring from the low back, down the backs of the legs and even into the balls of the feet.

Sciatica is a "self-perpetuating" illness, resulting from spinal imbalance. Pain caused by the inflamed nerve makes a victim heel to toe, balance and more irritation.

Chiropractic treats sciatica by locating and correcting the primary cause of the original imbalance, relieving the problem. Phone for an appointment.

Taurians must work before their playtime; Aquarians can get rid of some responsibilities

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There could be some confusion early in the day but keep calm for best results. Later you can put in motion a course of action that can bring you closer to the perfection you desire. ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You will not be able to gain a cherished wish in the morning, but later it manifests itself unexpectedly. Take no risks in motion. TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make plans for entertainment after your important work is done and don't leave anything to chance. Maintain a cheerful manner. GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure your home is in fine order before making plans to entertain there. Your hunches are very good at this time. MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get busy at business affairs early so you will have time for recreation later. Handle your money wisely. LEO (July 22 to Aug. 23) You are not thinking clearly in the morning so postpone making an important decision until later. Be alert at all times today. VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23) You can make changes where personal aims are concerned in the afternoon, but not before. Avoid one who is jealous of you. LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23) You have neglected work lately and feel guilty, but if you stop procrastinating and get busy, you will start feeling better. SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21) Steer clear of selfish persons in the morning. Seek the company of those who are helpful to you. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have good ideas about solving outside affairs, so get busy early and get excellent results. Make sure your diet is right. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have to study a situation carefully now if you want to get the right answers. Be sure to keep promises you've made. AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get busy and rid yourself of responsibilities that are annoying. Sidestep one who is detrimental to your progress. PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Listen to the gripes of associates and do something constructive about them. Don't lose your temper with anyone. IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY: ...he or she will be one who can easily find the flaws in people and in situations, so be sure to give a good education so that this ability will be used wisely and constructively. There is much marital happiness in this chart.

What's what

Girls from rich families have more of a problem finding suitable mates than the poorer girls

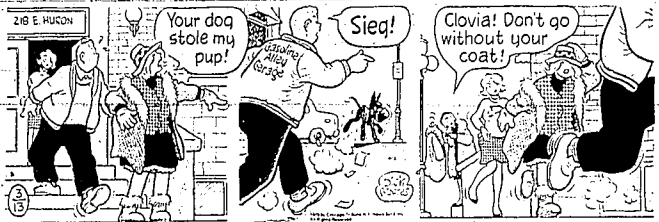

The girl born into a poor family is more likely to get married than is the girl born into a rich family, surprisingly. The statistics prove it. They show that more rich than poor women remain single. Not just remain single longer. But for their entire lives. Our Love and War man is analyzing the experts' explanation. They say men of means willingly "marry down," meaning they go to the altar with romantic partners from more modest backgrounds. But women of means rarely do that. If those high-society ladies can't find matrimonial mates of suitable affluence, they tend to give up, refusing to compromise.

FBI AGE
Q. "What's the average age now of the FBI agents?"
A. 38.
Q. "Did Albert Einstein ever wear socks?"
A. Not while he worked at Princeton, he didn't.
Q. "What's the most common tattoo?"
A. Can only come up with the most common tattoo among servicemen and women. With the men, it's the word "Mom" on the upper forearm. With the women, it's a red rose on the bottom of the big toe.

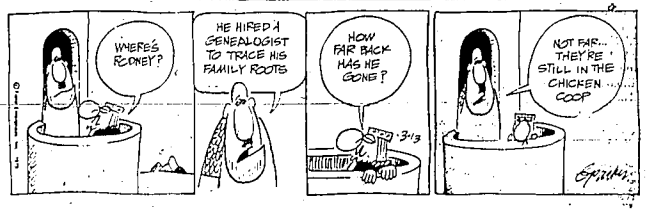

FLIRTS
Client asks, "Do any other animals, besides humans, flirt?" Birds are known to do that thing, Courtship, before mating, flirtation before courtship. Whether other animals flirt isn't in the record at hand, regret to report. Think they do, though. What is in the record is the claim that the more promiscuous the animal, the less it flirts. The beast that mates with any available partner doesn't need to flirt. This supports the ancient contention that some of the most outrageous flirts among women turn out to be the hardest-corest.

A photographer known for the misty appearance of some of his shots says he gets the effect by squirting hair-spray on his camera lens.
A survey among soldiers worldwide indicates their favorite rifle is the Chinese AK-47 assault rifle.
That word "delirium" may mean a confused mental state now, but it started out in old Rome to describe a man who couldn't plow a straight furrow.

Italian princess has strong ties to TF

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS Once an Italian princess, always an Italian princess. Tatina d'Ambrosio, who is visiting in Twin Falls this week, is an American citizen, and to obtain her American citizenship, she had to renounce her Italian title, but she says it didn't make any difference to her people in Italy. There she is still a princess.

"This is my country and I am very fond of America, but Italy is also my country and my family is there so that is where I live," says the petite, dark-eyed Italian woman.

Tatina di Marzano (her maiden name) married to a handsome American army officer, Jack Rodarme, who was stationed in Italy during World War II.

She returned to the United States with him following the war and lived in a number of cities and areas as his military career took him around the country.

In 1947, the couple moved to Twin Falls where he served as military adviser to veterans and returning servicemen.

When the Korean war began, Capt. Jack Rodarme was sent back into active duty and served there until his death in May 1951. He was commissioned a major in the field and would have become a lieutenant colonel 15 days after his death.

His wife remained in Twin Falls while he served in Korea and for a brief time after his death.

Tatina probably knows more about American history than she does Italian history. She had to study to get her American citizenship which she received on Lincoln's Birthday in 1952.

"Do you know when the United States acquired the Virgin Islands?" she likes to ask her fellow American citizens who were born with their citizenship.

"It was in 1917," she informs her listeners. "That was one of the questions in the citizenship test."

"I knew Jack had always wanted me to become an American citizen, but he never told me so in so many words," she says when asked why she applied for citizenship after her husband's death.

"I thought that was something I should do for him."

Although she only lived in Twin Falls about five years, she has strong ties with the community and many friends. One close friend is Dorothy Fortner. She and her husband, Harley Fortner, became friends of the Rodarmes when the latter couple first arrived here.

"We heard their house was for rent and went to look at it. My husband looked and liked it so he asked if his wife could come in. We ended up going to dinner as guests of the Fortners, and we have been friends ever since." Mrs. Fortner and Tatina have corresponded frequently, and the Fortners visited her in Italy a number of years ago.

When Tatina took her citizenship test, she was called into the chambers of the late Federal Judge Chase Clark after completing the difficult exam.

"I thought I had failed and that was the end," she recalls. "But he sat me down and said, 'You have a title in your country, you know, and you will have to denounce that.'"

"I told him, 'That's all right if that's what you want.' I didn't mind saying I would give up my title, because when you are born in Italy with a title, in Italy you always have the title."

And Tatina still has her princess title in Italy. She was born the eldest of three daughters in her family. Her father was a prince of one of many small provinces or kingdoms in Italy before Mussolini and his regime came to power in 1922.

After Benito Mussolini and his government took over Italy, all of the land held by the royal families was taken from them, but the princes and princesses and their descendants retained their titles.

In Tatina's case, her family's title was bestowed some 500 years ago when the area the family ruled was still under Spanish control.

Her official title is princess of di Marzano, the name of the kingdom where her forefathers held title. Her father was killed during the German bombardment of Italian cities during World War II.

The princess met her husband when he served as commanding officer of the 442nd regiment, a group of Nisei soldiers who fought in Italy.

When Tatina first saw them she and her sisters rushed into their home and hid, thinking the Germans and Japanese were back in the area and bombing and fighting would begin again.

After her marriage, Tatina and her husband came to the United States and lived in New York and Texas before coming to Idaho. A native of Joplin, Mo., Capt. Rodarme accepted an assignment in Idaho because he thought it was just a short distance from California where he wanted to be stationed.

"When we got here, we found out it was quite a distance from California," laughed Tatina.

As a princess in Italy, Tatina spends much of her time helping the poor and doing community service work. She was able to obtain land in Rome for a playground for underprivileged children, and often collects, sorts and repairs clothing for needy persons in her area.

Mrs. Fortner said the princess maintains a home in Rome and has a villa at Forte Delmarini. This is where the family stayed during most of World War II in an attempt to escape the heavy bombing and attacks over Rome.

Her visit this week to Twin Falls is the first since Tatina presented the American flag given her on her husband's death to the Catholic school here in 1956. She spent a day at Sun Valley with Mr. and Mrs. William Fetters of Twin Falls and visited Mrs. Robert Magel Sr., Laura O'Toole, Mary Jo Cahill and says she hopes to have time to get in touch with others who may still live here.

The royal visitor says she can see a great change in Twin Falls since her last visit.

"It is so much bigger, and what they have done to the downtown area!"

Giving up luxury for savings

Warehouse foodstores claim 30 percent savings

By PATRICIA WELLS
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Like supermarket shoppers throughout the country, consumers in Gainesville, Fla., have come to expect certain amenities with their weekly visit to the grocery store. Soft lights, wide, clean aisles, piped-in music clerks to bag and carry their purchases to the car all serve to soften the blow of the ever-rising food bill.

But since Thanksgiving, shoppers at Gainesville's Lo-Lo Discount Foods have been part of a totally different scene. There they shop in a warehouse atmosphere in a tiny former A&P lightbulb bare fluorescent bulbs. The store carries fewer than 500 nonperishable items — there are no fresh meats, no eggs, no milk, nothing that requires refrigeration.

And customers not only carry their own groceries to the car, but also bag the items themselves, using their own bags and boxes, paying cash on the line for their purchases.

But Lo-Lo has one advantage over its competitors — lower prices; prices the store claims save shoppers as much as 30 percent on their weekly supermarket bill.

For instance, a recent comparison between prices at Lo-Lo and a nearby conventional store found a one-pound can of coffee at Lo-Lo for $1.75; at the conventional store, $2.39. A five-pound bag of flour sold for 69 cents at Lo-Lo; the same product was priced at 97 cents at the store with services.

With food prices up 10 percent in 1978, and another 7- to 10-percent jump expected this year, Lo-Lo, along with stores such as the newly opened Edwards Supermarket-Warehouses on New York's Long Island and Red Owl Country Stores in Minneapolis, are finding that many consumers are willing to give up the common luxuries to reduce their weekly food bill, which took up a full 30 percent of their after-tax dollar in 1977.

After decades of a "bigger is better" approach, supermarket chains such as A&P, National Tea, Kroger and Jewel-T are picking up at the warehouse movement actually began in West Germany more than a decade ago, hoping to recapture a larger share of the nation's $143 billion food bill.

Although the warehouse-type stores, which vary somewhat in just how stark they choose to be, still account for fewer than 1,000 of the more than 175,000 grocery stores in this country, the number of such stores has doubled in the last year.

The warehouse trend is just one of the many measures the supermarket industry is taking to woo consumers, boost sales and counteract effects of the growth of the restaurant industry.

According to United States Department of Commerce figures released last week, restaurant sales accounted for 37 cents of the American food dollar in 1977. But by the 1980's that figure is expected to rise to 50 cents or more, a statistic that has the supermarket industry scampering off in all directions to stem the tide.

Industry spokesmen see promise in the warehouse idea: Each week, with food and nonfood merchandise stacked in half-opened shipping cartons, these no-frills supermarkets are attracting more and more customers.

"It's a true bare-bones operation," said an A&P spokesman, Daniel Doherty, of the new stores. "All you're really doing is moving the food in and checking people out."

Operating costs are reduced by offering a limited selection of products. At a typical warehouse store, one, instead of six different brands of canned beans may be offered and 10 instead of 20 cereals.

Electricity, a major expense for most supermarkets, can be cut by about 25 percent with the elimination of a frozen-food section.

Some warehouse-type stores choose to eliminate the pricing of each item and instead simply hang a price over a group of products.

NYT NEW YORK: of products.

Others report savings of $80 to $90 each month by doing away with free shopping bags, and gain additional savings by cutting way back on advertising. Some stores eventually expect to stop advertising altogether and to depend on word of mouth.

And while across the country consumer acceptance of the new concept has been somewhat slow and decidedly skeptical once the idea is approved, the warehouse stores generally prosper.

"I don't miss any of those frills," said one Gainesville shopper on a recent Lo-Lo visit. "I've got six kids and if I can save a quarter on every box of cereal I buy, then I'm not going to care if I have to carry out my own groceries."

Some consumers, unwilling to give up all the extras, find themselves shopping at warehouse stores for staples and specialty markets for meats and produce.

At the Warehouse Market in Newington, Conn., south of Hartford, Marsha Gadrowski reported that she found the store offered less variety but better prices, so she continues to shop there.

"You can't get as good a selection on cereals here. Sometimes the meats are not as good and the vegetables and fruits are not as fresh," Mrs. Gadrowski explained.

At another Newington warehouse store, the 2,000-item Heartland, shoppers Al and Kathy Olson said that they drove 25 miles one way to shop there simply to save on staples.

Mrs. Olson said the family of three spent about $120 a month for staples, compared to former grocery bills of $60 a week, excluding meat.

"We have to buy some items in the supermarket, we can't get everything here," Mrs. Olson said, noting they still bought all their meat, milk, bread and juices elsewhere.

Adding that the store's crowded atmosphere and long drive were not particularly appealing. Mrs. Olson said, "We wouldn't do it if it were just the two of us, but with a family, we have to."

In this country, the warehouse supermarket actually began to take off in the Middle West in 1976, when a West German grocery store chain opened a series of warehouse stores under the Aldi name. Other chains were quick to cash in on Aldi's success, with some stores offering more services than others.

The same year the Middle Western Red Owl chain opened its first limited-service Country Store, where customers now save four cents on each shopping bag by supplying their own, and five cents on every dozen eggs by packing them themselves.

Today the chain has converted 10 of its 260 stores, but decided to retain some amenities. The Country Stores sell frozen foods as well as meats and poultry, but instead of the 10,000 items in an average supermarket, the Red Owl Country Stores offer only 4,000 to 5,000 items.

And, according to Kit Searight, a Red Owl spokesman, the lettuce isn't trimmed, the celery isn't washed, and instead of a choice of four or five different cans of green beans, there may be only two.

"Our slogan is 'Work a Little and Save a Lot,'" she explained, adding that most consumers saved 15 to 20 percent at the Country Stores.

NYT NEW YORK: country stores.

Because the warehouse stores are often in low-income areas, some communities are wary of the growth of such stores. The middle-class Chicago suburb of Oak Lawn recently passed a local ordinance requiring all stores to supply bags and affix a price to each individual item, a ruling aimed directly at limiting the no-frills movement.

And while the Middle West, the South and sections of the Pacific Northwest have embraced the warehouse concept, only a few stores are beginning to crop up in the East.

The normally trend-setting West Coast has accepted the idea not at all, choosing to attract customers by offering games with such prizes as a Jaguar XJ-S instead of discounts.

Whatever road the supermarket industry takes, economists and industry spokesmen agree it will likely be an unconventional one. At the same time the warehouse concept is going through its growing pains, the industry is experimenting with forms of computer technology that could attract enough attention to bolster the sagging industry.

In some cities, shoppers can now do all their grocery shopping by phone, calling the order into a computer, which automatically selects the items and prepares the order for delivery. In others, in-store, fast-food eateries have been added to directly combat the encroachment from the competing restaurant industry.

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in hopes of comforting the many wonderful, loving parents who live in shame because their child has chosen to live with his or her mate without marriage.

My girlfriend (18) and I (21) have lived together now for three years. We share all the responsibilities equally — the bills, rent, laundry, dishes — everything.

We help each other, and are each other's best friend, we are together because we love each other, and are very happy.

My parents and hers love us and are quite proud of us. As a matter of fact, they are overjoyed to see us so happy and fulfilled. Now, does that sound so bad?

Parents are proud of this happily unmarried couple

DEAR RICH: No, it sounds almost too good to be true. A little more about it would be helpful.

What should I do? I'm afraid Mom will get caught and sent to jail and the reputation of our whole family will be ruined. Should I tell my father?

I can't take a chance on getting a letter from you at home, so please answer in the paper, but leave out my city. Thank you.

DAUGHTER (AGE 12): Your mother could be a kleptomaniac — a person who has an uncontrollable urge to steal. Kleptomaniacs can be cured with treatment.

Tell your mother you know about her problem, and urge her to get professional help. If she refuses, and continues stealing, tell your father . . . not as a little tale, but as a loving daughter.

DEAR ABBY: In response to FEELING GUILTY: her story sounds like a carbon copy of my life.

I'm 27, and when I was younger I had an abortion. It was the only thing to do at the time, but I am a good Catholic and I was scared to go to confession.

After seven years of great anxiety, I finally went. The priest never said a word. I'm sure he has heard the story many times. I was not excommunicated (he didn't even know who I was) but granted absolution.

I wish I had gone sooner.

I am glad you told FEELING GUILTY to go to a priest and confess. If she follows your advice, she will feel like a new person.

Anniversaries

MR. AND MRS. LESTER McNEIL

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Lester McNeil of Buhl will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary March 18 with an open house hosted by their family at Lincoln Courts from 2 to 4 p.m.

Lester McNeil and Madeline Cutshals were married March 21, 1929, in Logan, Utah, at the courthouse. They lived in Logan following their marriage where Les worked for a building contractor, and later moved to a farm. Following this Les worked for the Santa Fe Railroad in Colorado, and in 1931 the couple moved to Buhl where they have since resided. McNeil was employed with Rangens, Inc., until his retirement in 1971.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McNeil are members of the LDS church.

The couple has four children, 11 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Their children are Mrs. Charles (Rose) Mattice, Robert McNeil, LeRay McNeil, all of Twin Falls, and Lester McNeil of Eden.

All friends and family are invited. The couple requests no gifts.

Parenting class open Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — The next series of parent and infant care classes at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital begin Wednesday, according to James Alger, interim administrator.

Classes, for couples with infants under 18 months, are held from 7 to 9 p.m. on Wednesdays for six consecutive weeks.

The last class on infant care is open to any interested person.

Classes are taught by members of the nursing staff of the hospital's obstetrics department. The course informs expectant mothers and fathers on pregnancy, growth and development of the unborn child, hospitalization, labor and delivery and other aspects of the care of infants during the first year.

Lectures, discussions, film showings and printed materials are included in the classes.

Anyone desiring further information may call Roberta Reynolds or Pat Hollibaugh at the hospital at 733,1511, extension 220.

LYLE HALE ... earns Eagle

Lyle Hale presented scout award

TWIN FALLS — Lyle Hale, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger A. Hale of Twin Falls, has received his Eagle Scout award.

He is a member of Troop 70, sponsored by the 10th Ward LDS Church in Twin Falls and a student at Robert Stuart Junior High School.

He plays saxophone in the school band and is interested in hunting and camping.

Young Hale organized a service project which involved a survey of stop signs throughout the city and a report to city officials on any signs which were damaged or obscured from motorists' views. Areas where the Scouts felt additional stop signs were needed were also listed.

Cancer nursing seminars slated

TWIN FALLS — Cancer nursing seminars will be held in Jerome, Rupert, Burley and Sun Valley during the next two months, according to John Maxfield, executive director of the Southeastern Idaho Center for Health Resources, Inc. at Idaho State University.

These programs are open to registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, aides, and other interested persons. Registration will take place at the door and there is no fee.

Seminars will be held in Rupert at the Minidoka Memorial Hospital on the mornings of March 28 and 29 on "Pain" and "Sexuality and the Cancer Patient," respectively.

Burley will have a seminar on "Laetrile" March 28 at the Cassia Memorial Hospital.

On April 18 Jerome will have a seminar "Psychosocial and Psychological Aspects of Cancer" from 10 to noon at St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome. The same seminar will be given in the afternoon from 9 to 5 p.m. at the Moritz Community Hospital in Sun Valley.

The faculty members teaching the seminars will be Amy Savage, R.N., M.S., coordinator, Mountain States

Tumor Institute; Cordella Persigich, R.N., director of Family Support Services, Mountain States Tumor Institute; and Henry R. Parker, M.S.W., Mountain States Tumor Institute.

For more information, those interested may contact Maxfield at 386-2711, or Persigich at MSTI at 386-SICH8R at 238-2636; Savage at MSTI at 2711.

Film Thursday

TWIN FALLS — A film titled "It's Okay to be Deaf, Denise," will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the College of Southern Idaho main cafeteria.

The film is sponsored by the Magic Valley Parents of the Deaf who encourage parents, teachers, friends and interested persons to attend. Refreshments will be served.

Redwood indoors

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Redwood furniture is moving indoors. Manufacturer Harry Gillespie says his company's indoor redwood furniture is lighter in color than the traditional dark, coppery red, to blend with living areas. The wood varies from white through several stages of red to brown.

More complaints received from patrons of photo business

We are both part owners of a car that raced last summer at Thunder Bluff Raceway. Two guys named Larry Burton and Lucian Jones, doing business as Quality Unlimited Photos, spent a lot of time at the track taking pictures of the cars and the fans. We paid in advance for the photos they took for us. Our bills were $15 and $7.11. This was in July or August, and Burton said he would have the prints for us in a week. But when he showed up the next weekend, he just wrote down our addresses and said he would mail us the prints. We haven't heard a thing from him since. We think a lot of our fellow race club members are in the same boat. — Frank Zambie and Bruce Wegener, Buhl.

It sounds like the quality of Quality Unlimited's photography, just like unicorn ivory or jackalope fur, is beyond compare. You are one of two of 10 unhappy people who have contacted Action Line about this duo. This is the fourth and final mention of them in this column. Up to now we have patiently given these two the benefit of the doubt. We must now conclude that Burton and Jones have been uncooperative.

Both men say they are now out of the photography business. Burton says he has the negatives for the Thunder Bluff orders, which he thought were all filed. He could not find your names in his records. He did promise, however, to make fresh prints for whoever shows him their receipt, so you might relay this message to your friends when your race club meets tonight. If that doesn't work, call the Twin Falls Courthouse at 734-3300 for information on how to file in Small Claims Court. The Idaho Attorney General's office may also be willing to help out. Call its toll-free consumer number, 1-800-632-5937.

Burton lives at 1521 Aspen St., south of Twin Falls, but spends most of his time at 624 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., where he works. His number there is 734-6181. Jones also lacks a home phone but spends a lot of his time with his daughter Tammy at 523 3rd St. N., where the number is 734-2942. Tammy hung up the last two times we called.

On Jan. 26 Burton promised Ellen Bruesch, her daughter Marjean Carpenter, and Action Line that he would have their prints for them in 30 days. He took the photos last July. He says the Indiana processing company still hasn't returned them, but he would not give us the company's name.

Promising to make enlargements, Burton took all the snapshots Mary Walters had of her granddaughter, who died soon after the photos were taken. He says he mailed these back to her, care of her employer, Feb. 6. She never got them.

Burton says he mailed Joann Culver's negative the same day, minus the blowup he had promised her. But she never got it.

He says Lonna Smith's prints are still being processed in Indiana.

He can't find the snapshots Edna Hatfield gave him a year ago to be enlarged.

On Feb. 8 Lucian Jones told Action Line he had just sent Mary Evans a letter explaining why he still hadn't sent her the photos she paid for in a Lewiston bowling alley last fall. He said she would have them by the end of the month. She doesn't have her photos, and she never got a letter from him.

Last month Jones and his daughter both promised to call Becky Rudolph, who has waited over a year for her wedding pictures. They didn't.

I read about a new hotline for "whistleblowers," people who want to report fraud or wastefulness in government. What is the actual telephone number? — Sandy Garbrecht, Twin Falls.

It's 1-800-424-5210. The General Services Administration will investigate your complaint and turn it over to the proper authorities. The new Civil Service Reform Act, which took effect in January, protects the jobs and promotion schedules of whistleblowers who are federal employees, including those who alert the press. Thanks to Senator Church's local office for this information.

The Idaho legislature is considering similar legislation to encourage state employees to report improper governmental actions without fear of reprisal. The bill is S1117, which has passed the Senate and is now in committee in the House.

I need the address of the Belvedere Sewing Machine Company. I was given a 1956 Adermatic machine, but I have no instructions for it. — Barbara Eskridge, Twin Falls.

Take your machine to Skinners Sewing Shoppe in the Lynwood Shopping Center. They will match it to the right instruction book. Couldn't find Belvedere's address.

We paid the same $43.01 delivery bill twice, and we've been trying to get a refund. The company is System 99, based in Oakland, Calif. My son-in-law paid in cash at the time of delivery, Oct. 5. We have the receipt to prove it. Later we got a bill in the mail, and my wife paid it by check before we caught the mistake. I've written them five or six letters with no answer. — William Hafner, Twin Falls.

What is that terrible odor I smell every time I cross Rock Creek on Eastland Drive? — Kimberly reader.

Independent Meat Co.'s primary waste treatment system is to the west of Eastland along the creek, and the Amalgamated Sugar Co. maintains disposal ponds to the east, full of wastewater from their factory.

Each company points to the other as the cause of the double-barreled odor, according to Russell Renk, environmental engineer with Health and Welfare's Division of Environment. And both companies are right, depending on the prevailing wind at the time.

State regulations prohibit the release of odors in a quantity or duration which would endanger human health or interfere unreasonably with the enjoyment of life or property. Renk says the odor in the immediate vicinity of the two factories is not a health hazard but "probably would interfere with the reasonable enjoyment of life and property."

Renk's office can recommend to prosecuting attorney Jeff Stoker or Attorney General Dave Leroy that legal action be taken against an offending business, but first they conduct a thorough investigation and try informal persuasion. Persuasion is difficult when the Division of Environment is tucking the politics of our agricultural economy, and more so when the cost of compliance is high, as Renk says it would be for the sugar factory.

Citizens living near either factory can file private civil suits as well.

"There is probably cause for concern," said Renk. "We will probably be looking into the situation out there when spring comes and the wind dies down."

To complain directly to Environment's office, call 734-4000.

In October I ordered several items from Lee Ward's in Elgin, Ill. I received everything but the most expensive item, a paint kit. I have written to them three times with no reply. I asked them for a refund of $25.52. — Lorn Bartome, Halley.

Your refund is on the way. Customer service aide Dorothy Rebeck says her records show the paint set was backordered and sent separately, but her United Parcel Service return slip is stamped "delivery refused."

Depending on where you live, electric rates are from 30% higher to double the rate of natural gas. And electric rates are predicted to increase more rapidly than gas over the next 15 years. Gas supply for the Pacific northwest has never been better. Considering these two factors — supply and price — it just makes good sense to use gas for heating and water heating. City's 1% panel listens, but few talk

George Scott points at City Manager Jean Milar as an example of where to cut city government

Twin Falls Councilman Talkington warns public to put up or shut up

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The two people who turned out to tell the Twin Falls City Council where to make cuts demanded by the 1 percent initiative agreed administrators and "dead wood" among city employees should be eliminated.

Council Member Mary McClusky, chairman of a special committee studying city government to see where cuts can be made, thanked the two concerned citizens and then expressed her disappointment at the turnout.

"This is discouraging to me as a new council person," she said. "We're criticized but nobody will come out and let us explain why we do as we do."

Councilman Chris Talkington, who along with Councilman Jim Smallwood round out the committee, warned Twin Falls citizens, "If we don't get more suggestions next time, the people have failed to put up so they better shut up."

Another meeting to gather input on how to cut city government will be held March 26 at the City Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Sixty-two-year-old George Scott, who said he has lived on Washington Street North for 21 years, was the first citizen to speak, and he pulled no punches.

"There's a man we can do without," he declared, pointing at City Manager Jean Milar. "And his assistant," Scott added, and other city employees who waste time.

Scott also asked why the city hires engineering firms at high rates to design streets when the mayor and city manager are engineers along with the engineers in the engineering department.

Mrs. Sidney Knight, a 7th Avenue East resident who appeared at the meeting with her husband, then asked the committee to set up criteria to determine which city workers were "doing the job and which were dead wood and can be eliminated."

She suggested the departments may be "top heavy with assistants and assistants to assistants."

She also proposed that the city should fire the city attorney and hire private attorneys by the hour to do legal work.

The city should also "eliminate the assistant city manager," she continued. "Not exterminate him, just eliminate his job."

"Twin Falls is not big enough" to warrant the expense of an assistant city manager, she insisted.

She also asked the committee to study the engineering office to see if it is really necessary to hire outside firms to do city engineering work.

She also said the city should drop out of the Association of Idaho Cities and get out of the golf course business by leasing the course to a private party.

The meeting lasted about 15 minutes and was attended by twice as many city council members and employees as concerned private citizens.

Three face charges in weekend knife incidents

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An 18-year-old Twin Falls woman has been charged with assault with a deadly weapon in the Saturday night stabbing of Fernando Hernandez, 21, of Twin Falls.

Police Chief Tim Qualls said a 16-year-old juvenile boy also faces court action in the same incident, and Joe Garcia, 20, of Twin Falls, who is charged with a Sunday night stabbing at Shoshone Falls, also faces assault and battery charges in connection with the Saturday night incident that resulted in the wounding of Hernandez.

Hernandez was hospitalized shortly after 1 a.m. Sunday following a fight outside the Elks Lodge in downtown Twin Falls. He was released from Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Monday in good condition.

Twin Falls police arrested Brenda Valenzuela, 18, Monday along with the 16-year-old juvenile. Garcia was already in the county jail charged with assault with a deadly weapon in connection with a Sunday knife in Shoshone Falls Park.

Jeffery Manners, 20, of Twin Falls, remained in fair condition Monday at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital after being stabbed in the abdomen. Officers said he was attempting to go to the assistance of a young boy who appeared to be taking a beating from a group of young men at the park, when someone reached from behind him and stabbed him.

Juan Antonio Silva, 26, of Twin Falls, who was charged with assault with a deadly weapon after he allegedly threatened his wife and an off-duty city police officer with a knife, was arraigned in Magistrate Court Monday afternoon.

The alleged threats also occurred in connection with the Saturday night benefit dance in which Hernandez was wounded. The alleged threats against Mary Lou Silva and officer H. B. Brown, who was working as a security officer at the dance, occurred in the alley behind the Elks building.

Silva was released on his own recognizance by the court and requested a preliminary hearing which will be set later. He is represented by his attorney Robert Alexander.

Brenda Valenzuela appeared in Magistrate court on the assault with a deadly-weapon charge and requested the services of the public defender. She remained in the county jail Monday night in lieu of $3,000 bond.

Garcia was also arraigned and will be represented by his own attorney, John Ritchie. He was being held in the county jail in lieu of $5,000 bond.

He had not appeared on the assault and battery charge Monday evening.

Sawtooth's Ed Fournier Departing forest boss leaves SNRA legacy

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Edwin A. "Ed" Fournier, supervisor of the Sawtooth National Forest with headquarters in Twin Falls since 1969, will transfer to the Dixie National Forest at Cedar City, Utah at the end of April.

Fournier will also be supervisor in his new Utah assignment, according to Vern Hamre, regional forester in Ogden, Utah.

Fournier said he leaves Twin Falls and the Sawtooth area with much regret but expects to find some new and enjoyable challenges in his new position.

"I think the highlight of my 10 years here came with the establishment of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area in 1972," Fournier said. "Our efforts since then to implement the legislation which established the area have also been important."

Fournier said the designation of the National Recreation Area for the scenic Sawtooth region has proven to be good for the area.

While serving in the regional headquarters' office in Ogden, Fournier spent one year in Ketchum directing the preliminary planning for the SNRA, then only a proposed designation.

"The present area, 754,000 acres, is much larger than our original plan which did not include the White Clouds (mountains) and Boulder Mountain areas or anything south of Galena Summit," Fournier said.

He said he is hopeful the SNRA program will continue toward completion of acquiring scenic easements on private lands. This will require appropriations by Congress from the Land and Water Conservation Funds, as proposed for FY 1980 by President Carter.

In 1972, also under Fournier's direction, the Sawtooth Forest's eight ranger districts were consolidated into four districts. Fournier said this move has produced greater efficiency and economy.

An avid skier, Fournier said he has been pleased to see major expansion and improvement in all four of the ski resorts located within the Sawtooth National Forest and creation of the Diamondfield Jack Snowmobile area in the Twin Falls ranger district. The latter was established using off-road vehicle funds from the state and snowmobile licensing funds returned to counties served by the area.

Timber sales in the South Hills area are now in a holding pattern, Fournier said. "Hopefully the (current reevaluation) study will help bring about a solution to the dead timber problem in the area that will be supported by all interested factions," the supervisor said. "The overmature timber infested by Mountain Pine Beetle will remain a problem until such a solution is reached. It must be a solution that is compatible to wildlife values, recreational uses and other factors."

Fournier came to the Sawtooth Forest from the Ogden regional office where he served as branch chief of winter sports and dispersed area management for the Intermountain region. In this position he was involved with identifying and managing special areas and was in charge of avalanche hazard control for the region.

Earlier assignments included deputy forest supervisor for the Boise National Forest in Idaho and staff officer in the division of range management in the Ogden regional office. He served as district ranger on both the Twin Falls and Halley districts and began as a forester on the Payette National Forest.

A native of Seattle, Wash., he is a graduate of the University of Washington and completed graduate work in public administration at the University of Michigan in 1962 and 1963. He is a member of the Society of American Foresters and the U.S./Ski Association and served on the board of directors of the Intermountain division.

Fournier, his wife, Dixie, and their daughter will be moving to Cedar City, Utah about the end of April.

Smith resigns as magistrate

TWIN FALLS — Paul Smith, magistrate in the Fifth Judicial District Court in Twin Falls, announced his resignation Monday.

Smith said he has submitted a letter to the administrative judge of the district, Douglas Kramer of Gooding, and will leave the bench effective May 31.

"I am submitting my resignation at this time to give the Magistrate Commission sufficient time to select a replacement," Smith wrote.

He said his resigning to return to private practice in Twin Falls. Smith was appointed to the bench in October 1974.

"I have enjoyed the opportunity to serve in the magistrate position, but I feel it is time to return to the private sector," Smith said.

He has purchased an old home near the former Vera O'Leary Junior High School building which is now part of the county courthouse property, and plans to refurbish as a law office.

Smith said he received an acceptance letter from Kramer. The Magistrate Commission, made up of the chairmen of county commissioners in the eight counties of the Fifth District, mayors of three towns in the district, two lay people and one attorney member of the district bar association, will meet to decide on a replacement.

The commission will accept applications for the post. There are two magistrates in Twin Falls county. Others are Daniel Meehl and Melvin Edwards.

Jerome youth wins oratory contest

TWIN FALLS — A Jerome high school senior, Seth Winterholler, 17, was named Idaho American Legion Oratorical Contest winner here Monday.

Winterholler was one of four finalists from as many districts in Idaho who competed Monday at the College of Southern Idaho.

Chris Talkington, contest chairman, said the runner-up was John Kidd of Chester, a student at Madison High School in Rexburg. Other contestants were Darin Dawson of Weiser and Marcia Pelterborg of Lewiston.

The winner received a gold medal and a $100 cash scholarship and will represent Idaho in the regional contest April 22 at Great Falls, Mont.

The American Legion contest included two sections. Contestants presented a prepared, original speech, then each was given a extemporaneous subject and only a few minutes to prepare a speech.

Talkington said judges felt the speech contest was extremely close but that Winterholler performed well ahead of the others in extemporaneous speaking.

Judges for the event were Rev. Robert Van Nest, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church; Paula Hoffield, National Guard officer; Marjorie Sloten, chairman of the Democratic central committee in Twin Falls County and active League of Women Voters member; Dr. Ernest Ragland, retired Twin Falls School superintendent; and Dave DeVault, KMYT-TV news director.

Garage burglarized

TWIN FALLS — Fred Cottrell, 160 9th Ave. N., Twin Falls, told city police someone broke into his garage and took about $200 worth of tools and equipment.

He said the theft occurred sometime between 6 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday.

Missing were an electric miter box and saw as well as smaller items. About $15 damage was caused by thieves in gaining entry to the locked garage.

Plane overturns

HAILEY — The pilot of a single engine airplane escaped injury when a gust of wind brushed his plane off the runway as it was landing in Hailey Monday.

James D. McLaughlin of Sun Valley was landing at Friedman Memorial Airport when wind picked up his light plane and pushed it westward across the runway and into a snowbank. The plane flipped on its nose and landed upside down.

The propeller and tail assembly of the 1977 Maule plane received an estimated $5,000 in damages.

Body recovered

TWIN FALLS — A body believed to be that of a Twin Falls woman missing since Dec. 22 near Phoenix, Ariz., was pulled from a river Saturday.

Maricopa County officials said a park ranger discovered remains presumed to be those of Diana Rose Livingston, 20, drowned in a flash flood. Positive identification from dental records is expected Thursday.

Miss Livingston and Debbie Beam of Jerome were riding in two pickup trucks which were swept away by flood waters. Margaret Livingston, mother of the dead woman, said her daughter didn't know how to swim.

The women were in Arizona looking for jobs before the Livingston family was to move there. The body of Miss Beam hasn't been found, Arizona officials said.

County farm bureau holds annual banquet

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Farm Bureau will hold its annual banquet tonight at the Turf Club in Twin Falls.

Representatives of the Amalgamated Sugar Co., the Idaho Dairy Commission, the Production Credit Association, the Idaho Livestock Commission and the Bean Commission will speak at the banquet. Dancing music will be presented by country musician Marty Brown.

The banquet begins at 7 p.m. and tickets, which cost $5, must be obtained in advance from the county offices, 191 Addison Ave., Twin Falls.

NIT not good to ACC teams either

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL.
It's been a tough two days for the Atlantic Coast Conference. First the league co-champions North Carolina and Duke were knocked out of the NCAA tournament on Sunday, then Monday night two more conference cohorts were eliminated from the National Invitation Tournament. In second-round action of the nation's oldest basketball tournament, Clemson lost to Old Dominion 61-59 in double overtime and Maryland fell to Big Ten power Ohio State 79-72. Bobby Hallcock scored the first points since the end of regulation play when he hit both ends of a one-and-one with one second to go in double overtime to give Old Dominion its hard-earned victory. After Tommy Branch tied the score 59-59 to send the game into overtime, the Tigers stalled the entire five-minute first overtime period, waiting for one shot.

Sophomore guard Larry Nance's jump shot hit the back of the rim and fell off, sending the game into its second overtime. Clemson took the tip in the second overtime, stalled and missed again. Nance was called for a foul, sending Hallcock to the free throw line for the winning free throws. Forward Ronnie McAdoo led the Monarchs with 14 points, while Hallcock had 13 points. For Clemson, Billy Williams had 14 points and Johnson 12. In the Maryland-Ohio State match, Kevlin Ransley fired in 23 points to lead five Buckeyes scoring in double figures. Ohio State, 19-10, built a 46-37 lead early in the second half but the Terrapins, 19-11, pulled within five, 67-62, with five minutes left. Then Ransley, who had 16 points in the second half, connected three straight times from the free throw circle.

to ensure the victory. Albert King led all scorers with 27 points and Ernest Graham added 20 for the Terrapins. In other games, Indiana broke Alcorn State's 28-game winning streak 73-69, 14th-ranked Purdue eased past Dayton 84-70 and Alabama edged Virginia 90-88. A drawing this morning among the six NIT winners Monday night will determine which two teams draw byes into the semifinals. The remaining four teams will play off later this week for the other two semifinal spots. Mike Woodson, held to six free throws in the first half, tossed in 13 in the second half to spark Indiana past previously unbeaten Alcorn State. Alcorn State took an early lead but Indiana pulled even, broke a 20-20 tie on a shot by Ray Tolbert and led by as many as 12. Tolbert backed Woodson with 16 points while James Horton paced the Braves with 12.

Joe Barry Carroll, the Big Ten scoring champion, led five players in double figures with 25 points to lead Purdue, 25-7, over Dayton. The Boltermakers led by as many as 15 points in the first half. Armette Hallman, who suffered a leg injury against Central Michigan last Thursday, had 15 points for Purdue while Jim Paxson led Dayton with 18 points. Reggie King scored a career-high 43 points, 26 in the first half, to send Alabama to the next round. With 21 seconds left, a basket by Virginia's Bobby Stokes pulled the Cavaliers within two, 88-86. But Eddie Phillips came back with a basket with 15 seconds to go to clinch it for Alabama. Jeff Lamp, who has averaged 23 points per game for the Crimson Tide, was held to 19 points. Lee Raker paced Virginia with 20 points and freshman Jeff Jones added 18. In a late game, Texas A&M beat Nevada Reno 67-64.

Getting 'up' for new season
Getting in shape for the new track season has its ups and downs as Eric McManaman (center) and the rest of the Twin Falls High School track team found out Monday afternoon. Stretching exercises, and mentally preparing themselves for the two month season ahead, becomes a regular part of the team's daily routine. The Bruin boys and girls teams won't have too much time to get ready, as they open their season Friday afternoon at 2:45 by hosting Highland, Skyline, and Jerome in a quadrangle.

Cleveland counts on Clyde (Who?) to be starter

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Remember David Clyde, the high school pitcher the Texas Rangers exploited and almost ruined? In case you lost track of Clyde, he's with the Cleveland Indians this spring and he is being counted on as a starter in Manager Jeff Torborg's rotation. Clyde was traded to the Indians by Texas last spring and was put in the bullpen. Then Wayne Garland, the big free agent signing, came down with a shoulder problem which finished him for the year, and Clyde was given a chance to be a starter. He won eight games and lost 11, which isn't anything to write home about, but after falling with the Rangers and coming down with arm trouble in the minors, simply pitching again in the big leagues was an accomplishment. "David has done it on his own," says Indians manager Jeff Torborg of Clyde's comeback. "You have to admire what he has done. Two years ago it seemed he was finished even before he started. I'll say this, his record with us last year doesn't even begin to tell how well he pitched on occasions. The only thing he lacks now is consistency with his breaking pitches." Clyde, who will be 24 on April 22, came out of high school in Texas to sign a bonus contract with the Rangers in 1973. He made his big league debut against Minnesota on July 27, a month after graduation, and beat the Twins 4-3. The game was historic for the Rangers because it produced the franchise's first home sellout. Clyde says his fastball still is his best pitch but that he relies almost as much on breaking pitches. "That's the biggest difference in me now than from the time I started out with the Rangers," he says. "No one really bothered to teach me much in these days. All they did was confuse me. But I'm not looking back. I'm still awfully young and most of my career is ahead of me." Clyde says maturity has helped him become a better pitcher.

Can Nicklaus polish his game at Doral tourney?

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus will take another shot at improving his game this week with an unscheduled appearance at the Doral Open in Miami. Nicklaus had planned to skip the Doral this year, but changed his mind because of dissatisfaction with his game last week in the Inverrary Classic, won by little-known Larry Nelson. "I missed playing at Doral only once since the event started in 1962 and that was because of my father's death," he said. "The schedule was such this year that I had to take a break and it looked like the week of the Doral Open would be it. "I wanted to play Arnold-Palmer's tournament at Bay Hill which was the first year there and I was defending champion at the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic and Tournament Players Championship. "All these were bunched together with Doral in the middle," Nicklaus said. "But he added, "I decided to enter in order to sharpen my game, which was disappointing to me at Inverrary." Nicklaus finished that event at 6-over-par 294 after shooting a final round 3-over-par 75. The three-time Inverrary winner had insisted throughout the week his game was almost where he wanted it to be except for his putting, considering it was only his third tournament of the year. He also denied a rumor there was something wrong with him physically. "I wish there was, so I could blame my game on something," he said. Another off-again, on-again contestant in the Doral will be defending champion, Tom Weiskopf.

Fish and game

Board sets new chinook limit

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News writer
ROGERSON — New fishing limits have been established for chinook, coho, and kokanee salmon caught in the Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir near Rogerson. A basic limit of 25 fish, either in combination or singly for the three fish, was adopted by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission last week by telephone agreement. According to Stu Murrell of Jerome, fish and game conservation officer, the limit became necessary because of the "excessive number of fish being taken from the reservoir by fishermen this spring." "The fish there were overlooked in the original fishing regulations established for this year," he explained, "because it wasn't a normal planting." About 110,000 fall and spring chinook salmon were planted in the reservoir April 18, 1978. Since then, most of the fish have grown to the 10 to 12 inch size and they make for tasty eating, he said. The planting was made by the department after the federal fish hatchery at Hagerman completed an evaluation project at the chinook. It is the first time that chinook have been planted in a reservoir, rather than river water, Murrell said. "They have done quite well in the reservoir," he said, "and fishermen have flocked to the area for some fine fishing." Murrell himself caught 25 of the fish on Sunday near Gray's Landing. He said the best way to catch chinook is to use a fluorescent orange lure dropped into the water along the edge of the ice at the reservoir. The reservoir itself is 8 to 10 miles long. Murrell explained that the chinook salmon have a deeply forked tail; compared to trout which have a rounded broad tail. Chinook also are heavily spotted on the back. Bob Bell, fish biologist for the department, said one problem which has developed with the chinook is an infestation of external parasites on the gills and fins of the chinook. Known as copepod (fresh water louse), Bell said the parasites appear as small crustaceans on the fish. "It's strictly external," he noted. "There's no danger to the fish or someone who eats it." He also pointed out the parasites run in about 2 1/2 month cycles, and eventually die on the fish after that period.

Fines levied against Heyburn men

TWIN FALLS — Two Heyburn men are learning the hard way it doesn't pay to illegally kill deer. Lonnie J. Wodskow and Dick Stealman were charged by the fish and game department with six counts of illegally killing deer during a closed season. The incident occurred on the Minidoka Wildlife Refuge last summer. Wodskow last week received a total of $1,102.50 in fines, 120 days in jail and had his hunting privileges revoked for three years. Stealman was assessed $790 in fines, a 60-day suspended jail sentence and had his hunting rights revoked for three years. The case which culminated last week was investigated by conservation officers Bud Stackler of Burley and Dan Poppelton of Rupert. In a related case, Glenna Kay Hansen and James Trujillo, who were accused of knowingly accepting the illegal meat from Wodskow, each received $100 fines and suspended jail sentences. The meat processor, Frank Bolen, was assessed a $300 fine, 15 days in jail, three years revocation of hunting privileges and was put on one year probation. In another incident, Lawrence Kimball of Carey pleaded guilty to illegally shooting an elk with a rifle in Unit 50 (Minidoka County). He was fined $150 plus $500 in civil penalties and his hunting license was revoked for three years. According to Stu Murrell, conservation officer, many people aren't aware that each illegal deer and antelope now carry an automatic $200 civil penalty charge over and above the standard misdemeanor fine. Elk, bighorn sheep, mountain goats, moose and caribou each carry a $500 civil penalty as a mandatory fine attached to each illegal kill. There is a bill currently in the legislature which would increase this to $1,000 for each illegal kill of bighorn sheep, mountain goat, caribou or moose, Murrell said. The civil penalty is returned to the fish and game department for fish and game management. The standard misdemeanor fines are still returned to the counties in which the violation occurred.

Hunter report cards sent out

TWIN FALLS — Hunters — 6,654 of them — have again been asked to tell the Department of Fish and Game about their success during the last big game seasons. The report cards went to those who failed to return the first questionnaire they received as part of the percent sample of persons who bought Idaho big game tags in 1978. Information requested includes the sex and species of the animal harvested, the management unit where the animal was taken and number of days in the field. There also is a "no success" space to be checked, if it applies. Data collected from the cards helps the department in preparing recommendations for 1979 big game seasons and regulations. Hunters are asked to return their cards as soon as possible to allow completion of the final report by the end of March.

Cartwright doesn't concern the Bruins

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — UCLA Coach Gary Cunningham isn't worried just because his No. 2-ranked Bruins won only 76-70 over Pepperdine in the second round of the NCAA West Regional playoffs. The Pacific-10 champions will face 17th-ranked San Francisco in the West Regional semifinals at Provo, Utah, Thursday night. "I think we've become very consistent the last three weeks," said Cunningham. "Give Pepperdine all the credit for Sunday. They played a very well." "I'm sure we'll play better as the playoffs progress," said two-time All-American forward David Greenwood. "I'm sure we'll look a lot better against USC than we did against Pepperdine." "San Francisco has some great basketball players," added Cunningham. "They're a great basketball team. But we have some players who can play, too." The UCLA-USF game is a seeming mismatch at center where the Bruins starter is 6-9, 235-pound Gil Sims and the Dons go with 7-1, 285-pound Bill Cartwright. "I'll front Cartwright," Sims said. "I've said all season long that UCLA is the best team in the country," said USF Coach Dan Belluomini, who was on hand at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion to scout the Bruins in their game against Pepperdine. "You have to remember that talent wise, UCLA has at least one high school All-American at every position." In the other semifinal game at Provo, No. 8-rated DePaul, an 89-78 second-round winner over Southern California Sunday, will go against 13th-rated Marquette. DePaul shaded Marquette 61-60 at DePaul in a regular season game. "We're looking forward to playing them on a neutral court," said Marquette Coach Hank Raymonds, who scouted the DePaul-USC game. "As the score of our first game indicates, the game went down to the wire." "I'll tell you right now," said Ray Meyer, DePaul's 37-year coach, "our game Thursday night will be another one or two-point game. I'll be a Mexican stand-off. We both nullify each other's styles so well because we know what each other does so well." UCLA will be returning to the site of one of its biggest basketball disappointments. It was an upset 78-75 defeat to Idaho State in the West Regional at Provo two years ago.

Briefly in sports

Ivie, Buckley top A-4

TWIN FALLS — Murtaugh's Bill Buckley and Camas County's Dave Ivie head the A-4 boys basketball All-State tournament team chosen recently by the Times-News.

Buckley led the Red Devils to the consolation championship, scoring 61 points in three games, while Ivie was the mainstay of the Camas County attack.

Rounding out the first team were brothers Clarke and Craig Bradley of champion Nezperce and Larry Choate of the Greenleaf Friends Academy.

The Bradley brothers combined for 40 points in the tournament final, and scored a total of 106 points in three games. Both brothers hit double figures in each game.

The second team includes Tony Dallin of Camas County, Jerry Siron and Alan Haas of Plummer, Terry James of Nezperce and David Eisenbeiss of Cascade.

Rifle tourney ends

TWIN FALLS — Neil Farmer and Brenda Fouts of Twin Falls captured top honors in the sub-junior division of the 1979 Southern Idaho Junior Rifle Championships last weekend.

Farmer, 13, was the top boy in the shooting competition, while Fouts, 12, took the honors for the girls. The division was for competitors up to the age of 14.

More than 45 shooters belonging to rifle clubs from Boise, Meridian, Pocatello, Rupert and Twin Falls competed.

In the junior division (for those 14 to 19), Riter Taylor of Boise was the high boy, and Kristi Eaton of Meridian top girl.

Each shooter in the sub-junior bracket took 20 shots each from the prone and sitting position. Junior competitors shot 10 shots each from prone, sitting, kneeling and standing stances.

Others who placed in the sub-junior division included: David Lowe, Meridian, first aggregate; Russell Van Zant, second aggregate, Twin Falls; Jennifer Lowe, Meridian, first marksman; Vince Kite, Meridian, second marksman; Curt Burgess, Meridian, first pro marksman; and Troy Williams, Twin Falls, second pro marksman.

Other junior winners were Barry Ticknor, Pocatello, first distinguished expert; Kelly Wilde, Meridian, second distinguished expert; Danny Treman, Boise, first expert; Robert Hart, Boise, second expert; Lane Hansen, Boise, third expert; Pat Christensen, Boise, first advanced sharpshooter; Sven Iverson, Meridian, second advanced sharpshooter; Garen Erdolse, Boise, first sharpshooter; John Garrett, Boise, second sharpshooter; Neal Farmer, Twin Falls, first marksman; and Trudy Charles, Rupert, second marksman.

The high boys and girls from this match will compare scores with the Idaho match and winners will be proclaimed Idaho State Junior Champions.

Fill permit sought

TWIN FALLS — An application for a permit to place fill and riprap adjacent to Salmon Falls Creek has been filed by the Twin Falls County Department of Parks and Recreation.

The department is asking the Idaho Department of Water Resources for permission to place the fill at the creek in the Balance Rock Park area above the Balance Rock crossing near Castleford. Its intent, according to the application, is to improve fishing and access and increase the usable size of the park.

Bowling

Beutler, Wallace top city's junior tournament

TWIN FALLS — Tracy Beutler and Eugene Wallace won the all-events scratch and handicap championships at the Twin Falls City Junior Bowling Association Tournament Sunday.

Beutler edged Julie Ochsenr 1587 to 1487 for the scratch title, while Wallace outplayed Chris Cummings 1933 to 1836 for the handicap victory.

Utah State coach quits

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — Utah State University Head Basketball Coach Dutch Belnap has resigned after six winning seasons to go into the banking business.

"I don't think coaching at the collegiate level is a life-long career," the 46-year-old coach said after giving his letter of resignation to USU Athletic Director LaDell Anderson Monday.

Belnap never had a losing season in his six years as head coach, compiling a 106-58 record. He led three teams to the post-season playoffs, including this year's squad, which lost to the University of Southern California in the first round last Friday.

Belnap's team finished this season with a 19-11 record, second place in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. USU joined the PCAA this season.

You can still get a tax break for '78.

It's not too late. You still have until April 16 to open and deposit to your First Security Individual Retirement Account and get credit on your '78 tax return. You can tack away up to $1500, or 15% of your income, (more if you have a non-working spouse) to earn 8% quarterly compounded interest. And defer all the taxes on both principal and interest until you withdraw the money when you retire. By then, you may be in a lower tax bracket.

If you have a Keogh plan that was opened before December 31, 1978, you can add to that 'til April 16, too.

So look at the alternatives. IRA or IRS. We think you'll make the obvious deduction.

Bruin golfers open season with win

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruin golfers opened their 1979 season with a solid 25-shot victory over Idaho Falls Monday afternoon.

With only a couple days of informal practice, the Bruins won the match 376 to 401.

Medalist for the Bruins was Junior Gary Baum who shot a 72 over the city's municipal golf course.

"I was real pleased with their showing," said Coach Ron Boyd. "Considering we're young and a little inexperienced, the team looked real good."

Boyd said he has lost many of the competitors off last year's team which placed second in the state.

Other Bruin scores were junior Bill Long 73, sophomore Jim Rasmussen 75, freshman Dave Rasmussen 77, senior Mike Schlagenhauf 79, and sophomore Scott Beer 80. Idaho Falls was led by Dave Winters of Idaho Falls with a 73.

Twin Falls' next match will be March 22 at Burley against the Bobcats and Minico.

Buhl board gives coach its support in discipline case

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BUHL—The Buhl School Board has given its support to a school coach for his disciplinary action of members of the Buhl girls basketball team during a recent incident in tournament play at Post Falls.

In an executive session of the school board last week, several parents of the girls involved met to protest the action of coach Tom Chivers. He suspended five girls from team play for allegedly drinking alcoholic beverages while at the tournament. However when injuries and personal fouls against other players left the team short of players the suspended first team had to be pressed into action.

come a travel policy for students when away from home on school functions such as sports events, music festivals, speech debates or other contests.

He said the policy gives the advisor, if a teacher, authority to take disciplinary action but asks that first the advisor contact either the school principal or superintendent. The policy also requires the principal or administrative officer to follow up on the action and results.

Pratt said the school has a policy for conduct of students while in school and the new travel policy will simply extend this for the time the student is traveling. Pratt said in the future it will be considered students during travel are "in school" 24 hours a day.

The girls involved in the Post Falls incident were disciplined by Principal Dale Thorsberry on return by being suspended from other school sports activities.

The superintendent said Buhl School District has an on going program on drug and alcohol use.

"We use the awareness approach, believing keeping the students informed about the hazards of drugs and alcohol and the consequence is the best policy," he said.

The superintendent said Buhl School District has an on going program on drug and alcohol use.

"We use the awareness approach, believing keeping the students informed about the hazards of drugs and alcohol and the consequence is the best policy," he said.

School Superintendent Robert Pratt said he was instructed by the board following the closed meeting to notify Chivers the board had taken no action against him and supported him in his handling of the matter.

Parents of four of the girls involved protested Chivers' action to the board, while the parents of a girl who was not involved in the incident met with the board to support Chivers' action.

Pratt said he had received some 70 signatures of parents and community residents were presented at the meeting, all in support of the coach.

Out of the incident, Pratt said, has

NFL owners receive glowing income report

HONOLULU (UPI)—Commissioner Pete Rozelle kicked off the National Football League's Annual winter meeting Monday by presenting a glowing report on the league's prosperity.

Although Rozelle said the television figure of $5.8 million per team was too high, he added, "We've never disclosed TV figures—we think it's private."

But Rozelle denied the league is as financially prosperous as Ed Garvey, head of the Players' Association, says it.

Garvey recently claimed that the pre-tax profit of each NFL team was between $8 and 7 million last year and that each team received $5.8 million in television revenues.

"That's not true," Rozelle said, as he claimed Garvey's figures were too high in both categories. Rozelle refused to give specific figures, but said he would be releasing financial figures before the next round of negotiations start with the players in 1981.

The only NFL team to release financial figures is Green Bay and the Packers' 1978 statement won't be presented to the stockholders until May 14.

Rozelle said the league will study several rate changes this week and also pick a site for Super Bowl XVI in 1981 and, probably, Super Bowl XVII in 1982.

Eight cities are vying for the games, including three with domed stadiums—New Orleans, Detroit and Seattle—along with Houston, Miami, Los Angeles, Mexico City and Dallas.

All eight cities will make their presentations to the 28 owners Tuesday.

A fantasy land slam hand

His problem is that if clubs break, 3-1 his 7-6 of clubs will block the suit and keep him from getting a few club tricks. If he leads hearts, he leads the queen of spades. If West takes his king, South is sure of three spade tricks and will be able to discard a club on dummy's jack of spades. Suppose West ducks. South plays the 10 of spades. West ducks again. Now South leads the queen of hearts. If West takes that South will get a club discard on the jack of hearts.

At the seventh trick and also. Now South does not need five club tricks. He scores three spades, two hearts, three diamonds and four clubs.

Ask The Experts

A California reader asks what is meant by "odd trick"?

It is the seventh trick and is held over from Whist, where there was no bidding and the seventh, or odd, trick was all important.

(Do you have a question for the experts? Write "Ask The Experts" in the margin. Individual questions will be answered if accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelope. Questions will be used in this column and will receive copies of JACOBY MODERN.)

Blackwood describes this hand as near to fantasy land. He gives no bidding, but we have put South in a notrump slam after opening with three notrumps.

South wins the diamond lead and plays his ace of clubs. Both opponents bid and at this point South is sure of his contract against all possible distributions.
