

More talks needed before SALT II signing

By RICHARD BURT
N.Y. Times Service
WASHINGTON — Senior administration aides after an extensive review at the White House of the negotiations with the Soviet Union on limiting strategic arms, have concluded that further talks with Moscow are necessary before a new accord can be reached, government officials said Thursday.

State Cyrus R. Vance said a new agreement limiting nuclear missiles and bombers through 1985 might be completed in a matter of days. But after an unusual, two-hour meeting of the cabinet-level Special Coordinating Committee Wednesday, officials said two or three technical issues still were holding up the treaty and a meeting between President Carter and Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet leader.

Officials said the administration remained committed to completing an agreement soon and that a summit meeting as early as next month was still possible. But the White House was said to be wary of accepting Soviet proposals at this stage that could weaken its ability to gain Senate approval for the controversial accord. "We've come this far," a White House aide said, "and there's little reason for us to risk Senate approval by making last-minute concessions."

Officials said another factor in prolonging negotiations was skepticism among senior military officers about the proposed treaty. They said that the Joint Chiefs of Staff had recently taken a tougher line on the talks and that the White House was under pressure to clarify some "ambiguous" aspects of the treaty.

At the same time, some officials voiced concern that the longer a treaty was delayed, the more likely it would be that new issues could further prolong the talks. They noted that the outlines of the proposed treaty were agreed upon in September 1977 and that negotiators have been haggling over a small number of technical issues ever since.

Officials said it was unclear how long it might take to clear up the unresolved issues. Although Carter is known to want a speedy conclusion of the talks, the White House, officials said, is willing to defer completion of negotiations until after the signing of the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty here on Monday.

State, county officers raid naturopathic clinic

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — State and county law officers raided the Twin Falls Naturopathic Clinic Thursday morning and arrested its two naturopathic physicians.

Dr. Fielding Harris, 64, and Dr. Roger Harris, 34, the father-and-son team that staffs the naturopathic clinic on Kimberly Road, were charged with practicing medicine without a license and with obtaining money under false pretenses.

A small posse of Twin Falls County sheriff's officers, joined by special investigators from the Idaho Attorney General's office, made the surprise raid on the clinic about 9:30 a.m.

The attorney general's office had been investigating the Harrises for about two months.

Rodger Harris was taken into custody at that time and sheriff's officers arrested Fielding Harris at his Twin Falls home later in the morning. Both were arrested Thursday afternoon and released from Twin Falls County jail on their own recognizance.

The arresting officers spent most of the day searching the Twin Falls Naturopathic Clinic and seizing evidence to support their main charges: the two naturopaths had been practicing medicine without a license.

Among the evidence seized Thursday from the Twin Falls Naturopathic Clinic were office date books, receipt books, cash receipts, files and medical equipment. At one point during the search and seizure, officers called in a tow truck to help remove a large egg-shaped hyperbaric oxygen chamber from the naturopathic clinic.

As part of the case against the Harrises, state investigators have obtained affidavits from two of the Harrises' patients.

The criminal complaint filed against them states that Betty Burgess visited the Twin Falls Naturopathic Clinic on Jan. 22, 1979. The older naturopath allegedly advised her she was suffering from an ovary infection, a uterus infection and a malignant growth. The state says these ailments did not exist.

A second woman, Judy Burton, visited the Harrises on Feb. 6, 1979, according to court documents. The naturopath allegedly told her she was suffering from multiple sclerosis, a vaginal infection, lymphatic congestion, toxins in the colon, a weakness in the bronchial tube area and an unspecified problem in the left kidney. The state says these ailments did not exist.

Naturopathic doctors are to be distinguished from regular medical doctors. Naturopaths are educated at different schools and they receive different medical training.

Chinese reflections

Little public information, little crime, but a good supply of uniformed soldiers

(This is the last in a series on a Twin Falls couple's recent visit to mainland China.)
By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Much to his surprise, Paul Ostyn was told while in China that the Chinese now enjoy the right of freedom of speech.

But though they may have the right to express themselves, Ostyn said the Chinese are, for the most part, uninformed on day-to-day developments affecting their nation.

During his 18 days in China, Ostyn frequently saw huge groups of Chinese gathered around large posters on the walls that surrounded virtually every Chinese city, town and commune.

Finally his curiosity prompted him to ask one of the interpreters accompanying his group what the posters said.

His guide, who said he was a member of the communist party, as were all the group's guides, told Ostyn the posters were messages from people who disagreed with government policies or decisions. The posters explain opposition positions and even give the dates and locations of meetings where opposition viewpoints will be discussed.

His guides said since the Gang of Four was deposed in 1976, Chinese have been allowed to openly criticize the government. His guide also stated that in his opinion the government had perhaps "gone too far" in allowing such open criticism.

Although the average citizen is allowed to criticize his government, he probably knows very little about what his government is doing, Ostyn concluded.

Ostyn said in Shanghai, a city of 11 million people, he saw only two newspapers, containing only four to eight pages of print per edition. He asked the interpreters what the news was in the papers, and they said it was mostly local news.

China invaded Vietnam while Ostyn was in China, but he said even his interpreters had no knowledge, or admitted none, of what was happening just across their country's border. He said the Shanghai newspapers carried no information concerning the war.

Ostyn said there appears to be very little crime in China, and the only police he saw were directing traffic at busy intersections, which were clogged mostly with millions of bicycles, not automobiles.

He noted, however, that he saw many more people in army uniforms in China than are seen in the United States.

Once, while sightseeing, he and his wife unknowingly walked into the center of a Chinese army drill.

They were in Hangchow, a resort town about 150 miles from Shanghai. They decided one afternoon to take a walk around a lake in the town.

As they were walking through an area of trees and shrubs along the lakeshore, Ostyn said he noticed firing range silhouettes scattered among the shrubbery.

They continued walking, and it was not until they had passed several silhouettes that they looked up to see Chinese soldiers, armed and deployed behind bushes, benches and trees, staring at them but saying nothing.

They momentarily froze, until they saw that Chinese civilians were passing through the area as if nothing were happening.

Ostyn decided the soldiers were "dry firing," and the Ostyns continued their walk.

He said one group of soldiers was armed with World War II vintage Browning Automatic Rifles (BARs): "I've fired it too many times" not to recognize it, Ostyn said of the gun he used as a marine in World War II. He said he also saw another group armed with bolt action rifles.

He concluded they must use the outdated weaponry strictly for training purposes.

Ostyn quipped that "There are over 800 million people in China, and I swear I saw them all," but he said nowhere did he see people starving and nowhere was he accosted by beggars.

China apparently is vastly different from the Indian subcontinent, where starvation is widespread and Americans visiting there invariably return with a new appreciation of human suffering.

Ostyn said China is not ready for an influx of tourists, but he added, "If anyone wants to visit China, the earlier you can go the better."

He predicted that within the next two to five years "great changes" will occur in China.

He said the Chinese are building new hotels, and he understands the Chinese have been approached by the Hilton and Sheridan Hotel chains and Pan American World Airways for permission to build hotels in their country.

Ostyn advised travelers not to carry American Express traveler's checks as he did.

He said the Chinese will accept any traveler's checks except American Express. He said he never found out exactly why, but he was led to believe it was something to do with American Express involvement with Taiwan.

Ostyn said he learned much from his visits to China and to Russia two years ago.

"Nobody's been more anti-communist than I have down through the years. I don't believe in communism, but it seems to be working for them. I didn't see anyone starving there. I understand it (communism) better after visiting those countries."

Peace treaty to be signed Monday in Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty will be signed by President Carter, Anwar Sadat and Menachem Begin on the White House front lawn Monday in an outdoor ceremony televised live to the Middle East.

Details of the ceremony were announced by the White House Thursday, along with plans for the visits Israel Prime Minister Begin and Egyptian President Sadat will be making to Washington beginning Sunday.

Taking full advantage of Washington's lovely spring weather, Carter decided the signing would be held at 2 p.m. EST Monday on the north lawn of the White House, which faces Pennsylvania Avenue and is usually open to public view. Invitations to the signing will be sent to 1,200 persons.

Monday night, after an ecumenical prayer service for Christian, Jew and Moslem, a state dinner will be held under huge tents on the South Lawn of the White House — a more secluded area where presidents often greet visiting dignitaries.

White House communications director Gerald Rafterson said the signing itself — an emotion-charged occasion for the entire Middle East — would be held at 2 p.m. EST (9 p.m. Middle East time) so Israelis and Egyptians could watch it live on television.

Meanwhile, the United States and Israel began high-level negotiations Thursday toward an agreement that will assure the Jewish nation of American diplomatic and political support if the peace treaty is violated.

"We are not asking for any military pact or defense agreement or anything of that sort," said Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan after a two-hour negotiating session with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and some of his top Middle East policy advisers.

"We in Israel think that the United States, more than just a mediator, is a partner and we would like the United States to have a role or some responsibility in the implementation" of the peace agreement, Dayan said.

"We want to be sure that the agreement we are now going to have with Egypt would be honored and we are looking for the United States to do what you can to see that the agreement will be carried out."

Dayan said the negotiations will continue early today at the State Department.

U.S. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said there would be no similar pact between the United States and Egypt, apparently because Cairo has not requested one.

He said the agreement "was considered to be of use by the government of Israel, the United States concurred, and there was no objection by Egypt."

Carter said the negotiations will be conducted by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Dayan, who flew from Israel early Thursday for the Washington talks.

Jury apparently stalled in Mary Vincent case

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — While the 15-year-old rape victim leisurely played backgammon with friends outside the courtroom, a jury Thursday was apparently stalled in its efforts to decide the fate of a man accused of chopping off her arms with a hatchet.

The nine-man, three-woman Superior Court panel retired Thursday afternoon after deliberating for nearly 11 hours since receiving the case the previous day.

Jurors indicated to Judge Earl Maas Jr. that they had reached a snag earlier in the day when they asked to hear again a 75-minute taped interview with the defendant made by Nevada authorities shortly after his arrest last October.

The jury is considering seven counts against Lawrence Singleton, 51, including the attempted murder of Mary Bell Vincent of Las Vegas, Nev., rape, sodomy, oral copulation and mayhem.

Teamsters say no

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Teamsters union rejected the trucking industry's initial contract offer, and trucking industry negotiators met Thursday to consider their next move.

A special White House collective bargaining panel headed by Labor Secretary Ray Marshall kept watch on the situation as formal talks between the two sides took a one-day break.

Two hostages freed

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Four leftist guerrillas held up in a bank Thursday released two of their 16 hostages but ignored the government's threat that troops would storm the building. Four other captives escaped.

The mediator between the guerrillas and authorities, Aquiles Centeno Perez, said the guerrillas told him in a telephone conversation that four leftists including one woman had seized the building — not three as previously reported.

Newton jury still out

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — The jury in the Huey Newton trial retired for the night Thursday after 9 1/2 hours of deliberation, still unable to decide whether the Black Panther Party co-founder killed a teen-age streetwalker.

Jurors asked that the full tape of testimony by the key prosecution witness, Carlos Bulce, 26, be played for them this morning. Bulce was one of two prosecution witnesses who said they saw the Black Panther leader kill Kathleen Smith, 17.

British struggle

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister James Callaghan's minority Labor government was plunged into a life-or-death fight Thursday by a call from the opposition Conservatives for a censure vote in Parliament.

If an expected vote next Wednesday passes, Callaghan's government could fall, a week short of three years after it was formed, and Britain would be forced into early general elections.

Tipster helps

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — An anonymous tipster who led police to the body of a kidnapped coffee millionaire promised Thursday to give authorities information about three foreign businessmen held hostage by leftist guerrillas.

The body of Ernesto Liebes, owner of the leading coffee-exporting firm in El Salvador and honorary Israeli consul, was found inside an abandoned car in a sparsely populated neighborhood south of the capital.

Killing of ambassador leaves police baffled

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (UPI) — Two terrorist marksmen killed Britain's ambassador to Holland, Sir Richard Sykes, and his manservant Thursday, then escaped without a trace, leaving police groping for clues and a motive.

Police said the killers — two men aged 35 to 40, wearing nondescript clothing — were "highly trained professionals," possibly linked to the Provisional Irish Republican Army. An IRA source in Belfast said that was "very possible."

Sir Richard, a 58-year-old security expert, was gunned down as he left his unguarded 17th-century residence for the embassy — the same routine he followed every day. His Dutch footman, 19-year-old Karel Straub, who was holding open the door of the diplomat's Rolls-Royce, also was shot.

"It is obvious that these shootings were carried out by marksmen, because both victims were killed by a single bullet in the head," a police spokesman said. They died in a hospital without regaining consciousness.

Police said eight shots were fired, six of them from a large-caliber weapon. They theorized the footman may have been slain because he caught a clear view of the gunmen.

The embassy driver and a woman official from the British foreign office who was riding in the car were unharmed.

Police said the Provisional IRA "is a possibility that springs to mind" because of the skilful execution of the attack. The Irish group has the support of Dutch extremists, and it gets arms via channels running through Holland.

"Who else would want to shoot the British ambassador?" a Dutch police official asked.

Legionnaires' puzzle close to being solved

BOSTON (UPI) — Riddles surrounding Legionnaires' disease, which claimed 29 lives at an American Legion convention nearly three years ago are close to being solved, scientists reported Thursday.

Efforts by the medical community to determine the cause and nature of the respiratory disease which struck the Philadelphia convention in July 1976 is the subject of a report in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The surprising thing about the disease is that it defied detection for so long, said Dr. Jay M. Sanford of the Uniformed Services University School of Medicine in Bethesda, Md.

"We've had a lot of other new diseases that have occurred in recent years; but to have a newly recognized disease occur in the United States — which almost certainly has been here for a number of years — is remarkable," he said in an interview.

Trust fund for wastes proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of the National Governors Association urged Thursday that Congress create a $200 million trust fund to help states deal with the "nightmare" of hazardous wastes, and then bill industry for all costs.

"Adequate resources and the proper governmental mechanisms which are essential to dealing with these problems are non-existent," Kentucky Gov. Julian Carroll told a House subcommittee investigating the problem of dangerous and useless chemical byproducts.

"We simply have been struggling along on a wing and a prayer."

"I'm not suggesting that the federal government should pay the bill," Carroll said. "I am suggesting that they (dumps polluting the environment) were caused by the hazardous waste industry, and the hazardous waste industry ought to pay the bill."

Naturopathic clinic raided by law officers

Naturopathic medicine is generally understood to be drugless medical therapy. It is defined as a system of disease treatment that strives to heal by assisting nature. It includes the use of medical substances such as herbs, vitamins and salts, and certain physical techniques such as massage and electrical treatments.

Idaho law, however, requires all doctors practicing medicine in the state to be licensed. Naturopathic physicians are not licensed in Idaho. Consequently, most naturopaths are careful to carry on their practices without actually doing things that could be interpreted as practicing medicine.

The Idaho Code states, in part, that the practice of medicine means "to investigate, diagnose, treat, correct, or prescribe for any human disease, ailment, injury, deformity or other condition, physical or mental."

Fielding Harris is charged with 10 counts of practicing medicine without a license and with two counts of obtaining money under false pretenses.

The state charged Rodger Harris with 10 counts of practicing medicine without a license and with one count of obtaining money under false pretenses.

The two naturopathic doctors are being represented by Twin Falls attorney James May. Twin Falls County Prosecutor Jeff Stoker and lawyers with the attorney general's office are handling the case for the state. A preliminary hearing has yet to be held.

If convicted, the Harrises would face prison sentences on each count of not less than six months nor more than one year, or fines not less than $1,000 nor more than $3,000, or both imprisonment and fines.

'Catastrophic' health insurance planned

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Carter will ask Congress for legislation to protect all Americans against the cost of catastrophic illness as the first step toward a comprehensive national health insurance program, HEW Secretary Joseph Califano said Thursday.

The administration's step-by-step proposal was certain to set off a battle between its supporters and those like Sen. Edward Kennedy and the AFL-CIO who want immediate cradle-to-grave coverage.

White House sources said the president's proposals would be ready within a few months and would also broaden Medicaid and Medicare coverage.

Califano said the "Phase 1" program would cost an estimated $10-15 billion dollars, would not take effect until 1983 and be contingent on congressional passage of hospital cost containment legislation.

Carter's proposal would be accompanied by a message outlining a universal, comprehensive national health plan.

Kennedy, D-Mass., said, "The administration is attempting to lead the country down the path of piecemeal health reform that has failed in the past and that already threatens to bankrupt the health care system."

He said in a statement he would introduce legislation next month to meet his comprehensive goals and said it would be less costly than the administration's plan. AFL-CIO President George Meany commented the Phase 1 proposal "would be a roadblock" to Kennedy's all-embracing plan which the union organization supports.

Meany said "The inherent danger in the administration's approach is that a piecemeal, misdirected first step could undermine enactment of a truly comprehensive national health plan.

America has had experience with fragmented approaches to health problems, and that experience has been excessive cost, poor quality and unnecessary services."

Califano said in a speech, "With few exceptions, the overwhelming sentiment among legislators is that the 96th Congress cannot and will not digest a complete national health plan in one bite."

Extension suits to be filed ERA battle resuming

Phyllis Schlafly argues against extension

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supporters and opponents of the Equal Rights Amendment agreed Thursday they will do battle in the courts, as well as in the legislatures whose votes could make it part of the Constitution. The original deadline for ratification expired Thursday — and a court test shaped up to determine whether Congress acted legally in extending it until June 30, 1982.

So far, 35 of the needed 38 states have ratified ERA.

The first suit against the extension will be filed today in Washington state, where a legislator demanded Gov. Dix Lee Ray get the state's ratification papers back from the federal government.

"The extension is the law of the land," said Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y. "It will be the responsibility of the United States Department of Justice to defend it — and they will."

"The Supreme Court has already ruled that Congress and Congress alone determined the period for ratification of constitutional amendments," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women. "We're ready to fight in the courts."

"The extension is wrong, illegal, immoral, unprecedented and unconstitutional," countered Phyllis Schlafly, chairman of Stop ERA.

Questions about irrigation? Ask me.

Let's talk custom design...

Q. Isn't custom-designing a center pivot going to be more expensive than buying a standard, mass-produced system?
A. No... in fact, just the opposite is true. A custom-designed Zimmatic is tailored to your specific situation so that you get maximum efficiency with minimum investment. Why pay extra for what you don't need?

Q. What determines the final design of my Zimmatic?
A. As your Lindsay dealer, we study your operation in detail — length of system, friction loss, well capacity, pump horsepower, crops to be irrigated, anticipated hours of operation annually, soil conditions... everything. Then we design a Zimmatic to fit these requirements.

Q. Is each design really that individual?
A. You bet. Over a million different combinations are possible! We'll deliver the one that's just right for you.

Mideast treaty won't boost Carter's popularity

By PATRICK OSTER

Chicago Sun-Times
Washington — How quickly they forget. The scene of President Carter returning home to an airport crowd that cheered his triumph in the Middle East is still fresh in some minds.

But many, particularly those on Capitol Hill, though expressing grudging admiration for the President's accomplishment, are voicing the old political adage: "What have you done for me lately?"

Carter has won other hard-fought battles in the past, especially in the field of foreign policy — ratification of the Panama Canal treaties, approval of the Middle East arms sales, lifting of the Turkish arms embargo. But like his latest victory, such feats have left him with little political currency to spend on other difficult projects on his agenda.

And as agendas go, his current one is a killer. The energy bugaboo is still with us, despite Carter's having fought "The moral equivalent of war" (MEOW) to vanquish it.

Most Americans still don't believe that events such as the slowdown of Iranian oil have brought things to a crisis point. And nothing Carter or his bumbling Energy Sec. James R. Schlesinger has said has inspired citizens to conserve or otherwise act to stem the level of oil imports or the inflationary trade deficit they engender.

Carter's next big decision, to be announced March 22, is whether to decontrol prices of domestic crude oil. If he does, he will anger consumers because prices of oil-related products seem sure to go up — and there may be an inflationary impact of the move to boot.

If he doesn't, the oil companies have all but said they won't have any incentive to produce more domestic oil, so U.S. dependency on Middle East and other foreign oil seems sure to increase. On top of that, his prescription for dealing with the Iranian shortage is being challenged by those who have examined its bases.

In particular, many — consumer and oil company types alike — are taking potshots at a proposal to those gas station on weekends, saying the cure is worse than the disease, because not that much gasoline would be saved and the economic side effects would be disastrous.

On the inflation front, the economy is showing surprising growth rates — surprising at least to the President's economic advisers, who had predicted more modest growth. Low growth rates were vital, in their thinking, to cool down the inflationary economy. But, in a perverse sense, help may be on the way: some private economists are predicting a mild recession, which certainly will cool things down — but probably more than the President wants. To complicate matters, the President chief inflation fighter Alfred C. Kahn says Carter's voluntary inflation program isn't working.

Carter also faces a tough schedule of legislative fights based on the proposals he has sent or will send to Congress. At the top of the list is the proposed strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II), which could prove a devastating blow to Carter's prestige if not ratified by two-thirds of the Senate, a still uncertain eventuality.

Other knotty issues include a 98-nation multilateral treaty negotiation agreement that is expected to bring out the worst of protectionist sentiments in the country during these hard economic times; costly legislation to implement the Panama Canal treaties; and the President's anti-inflation package, which includes a proposal for hospital cost containment.

The gloves are off on both sides of the political aisle with regard to the President's handling of many such issues. Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd attacked the President Saturday for not "having his act together" sooner on the energy problem, which he said required a standby authority to deal with the problem two years ago rather than the authority request that came in only a month ago.

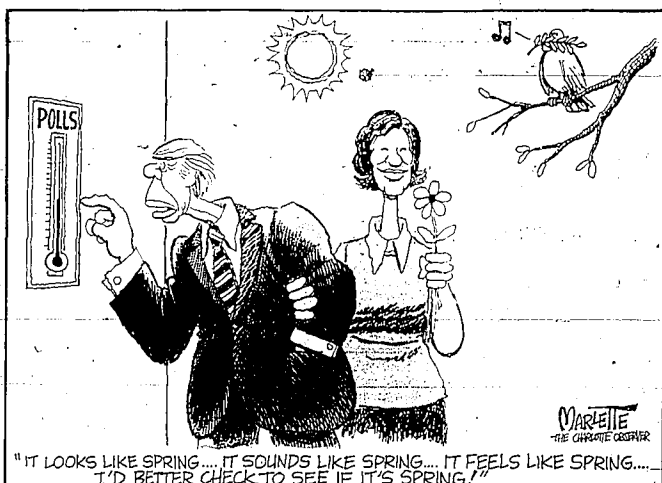

California Gov. Edmund G. ("Jerry") Brown Jr has carpied on this subject as well.

Republicans have dropped their long tradition of bipartisan support in foreign affairs, roundly criticizing Carter for sitting on his hands while Afghanistan went communist and Iran fell out of the pro-U.S. column into "revolutionary non-alignment." Likely presidential contender Ronald Reagan, the former California governor, has made a point of drawing applause by jibing that the symbol of the United States has become a U.S. ambassador with the flag tucked under his arm scrambling onto the escape ladder of a helicopter — a not so subtle reminder of the fall of Saigon.

It's not clear that effect all this atmosphere of criticism and this prospect of defeat are having on Carter's chances for re-election, should he decide to run as most think. It is clear that his approval rating among the public is still in the low 40 per cent category in most polls.

But at the same time, he beats his likely GOP opponents in hypothetical elections conducted by the polls in recent weeks. The same cannot be said for hypothetical challenges within his own party. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) has consistently outdistanced Carter in such paper races. And Gov. Brown also has done respectably.

Last week however was a terrible one for Brown, whose in-state set backs and political embarrassments may only serve to show that no leader is immune from looking vulnerable if not in the face of today's intractable, myriad problems.

Environmentalists still fight to save coastline

Take another look at an old resource

Before there was petroleum, there was agriculture.

Not that it's a matter of which came first, but as oil and gas supplies dwindle and prices ooze ever upward, this country will have to return to one of its previous major sources of materials — agriculture.

The number of uses for petroleum has expanded in recent decades. Derivatives were developed that could be made into "cloth," like polyesters, and plastics, paint, medicine, even parts of buildings.

The petroleum industry is diverse, but the same is true of agriculture. And it may become more so.

On a swing through southern Idaho this week, a national gasohol advocate made this point, saying, agriculture is misidentified as "merely a food production system."

From the standpoint of Robert Soleta, National Gasohol Commission director, agriculture is an energy producing system. He sees no incompatibility between using agriculture for energy as well as food.

Gasohol is nine parts gasoline and one part alcohol, which can be made from "anything green." Alcohol production is suited to corn, sugar beets, potatoes, wheat and barley.

The U.S. cannot consume all its farm products and yearly has trouble finding adequate markets abroad. To channel some of that large production into energy makes more and more sense as world oil prices rise and America's balance of payments falls behind.

Right now, turning crops into alcohol is approaching profitability for farmers.

According to figures from Soleta, one hundred pounds of cull Idaho potatoes will produce 1.4 gallons of alcohol worth $1.85. That is close to the amount paid by potato processors for culls, those spuds not saleable in the supermarket, usually because of size.

Idaho farmers could sell part of their crop for gasohol production — if an alcohol factory were close by.

That appears to be the stumbling block. Soleta says the factory must be within 25 miles of a farmer or shipping costs will outweigh benefits.

A 70-page planning book for an alcohol processing plant is being made available from a Golden, Colo., engineering firm within about two months.

Idaho farmers should take a serious look at the plans. There may be something in it for them.

Anyone who mistakenly assumes that the environmental movement is everywhere in retreat — buffeted as it has been by the misleading economic arguments almost daily leveled against it — would gain a different perspective by observing in action one of the aggressive, knowledgeable, young environmentalists who have recently launched a brand new environmental crusade to halt the alarmingly rapid deterioration of one of America's most important natural resources — its coastal zone.

This is the "thin edge," as Anne W. Simon calls it in her fine new book of that title, the linear frontier of varying widths — of fabulous beauty and biological productivity — where land and water meet at the borders of the sea. So much of this critical area — whether along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts, the Great Lakes or the Pacific — has already been "developed," polluted or otherwise degraded and so great is the imminent threat of more to come, that the young representatives of major conservation organizations have formed their new group to focus public attention on this clear and present danger to the American coastline. The grouping is called the Coast Alliance.

With the formal or informal support of such nationally-known conservation organizations as the Sierra Club and Friends of the Earth, the Natural Resources Defense Council and the Conservation Foundation, the goal of the Coast Alliance is to educate Americans to the immense importance of the fragile coastal ecology and the vital need for its preservation, as well as to stimulate protective legislation to fill the gaps and tighten the loose controls of present law. This effort is geared to next year, which, it is hoped, will become known as "The Year of the Coast."

Why is this new effort necessary? The coastal zone, which is as varied as it is extensive, is of prime importance not merely for its esthetic and recreational value (alone reason enough for its better protection) but also for the tremendous economic significance of its natural resources. Parts of it — especially the estuaries and tidal marshes — are among the most productive areas on earth, forming the breeding and feeding grounds for countless species of fish, crustaceans, birds and mammals, as well as forming a kind of natural pollution-control mechanism, cleaning inland waters on their way to the sea. These same estuarine areas, together with sandy beaches and shifting dunes, also form a protective barrier and buffer for the mainland against flooding and erosive action of wind and wave.

It is estimated that two-thirds of the specie that together make up more than 90 percent of the total sea food catch in the United States depend on such estuaries as Chesapeake Bay wholly or in part for their survival. On the other side of the continent, where the coastal zone is generally of quite different nature from that of the Atlantic and Gulf and Great Lakes shores, the waters of Puget Sound, for example, are among the most productive in the world.

Yet on Atlantic and Pacific, on the Lakes or on the Gulf, it is this same coastal zone that is under the most severe developmental pressures, which, while completely legitimate from the point of view of the economy, can be completely disastrous from the point of view of the ecology. These pressures come not only from industry, which often finds coastal areas the most economically efficient in which to locate, or from oil prospectors exploring the mineral resources of the Continental Shelf, or from dredging and filling to promote commerce, navigation or trade, but also from real estate developers trying to satisfy the recreational or "second home" demands generated by the country's explosive growth in population and in affluence. The familiar conflict between industrialization and urbanization on the one hand and ecological understanding and developmental restraint on the other is nowhere else so well defined as in the coastal zones of the United States, and nowhere else are sensible, effective controls more urgently needed to keep in balance the requirements of the economy and the imperatives of the ecology.

A bewildering variety of federal and state laws of different degrees of effectiveness and with different — sometimes contradictory and conflicting — aims already exist. While these laws have been of some use and are certainly better than nothing, the Natural Resources Defense Council points out in a recently-published, brilliant summary of the whole coastal problem, that the present state of federal legislation suffers from confusion, incoherence, inherent weakness and administrative chaos. One major goal of the Coast Alliance is to achieve a basic, clearly-defined and consistent national coastal policy and to establish along with it a national coastal preservation system — an issue destined to rank in importance along with land-use, wilderness protection and air and water pollution as one of the highest priority environmental questions of the coming decade.

Transistors vs. seeds

DISNEY WORLD — The moment of truth came at 3 p.m. on our second day in the Magic Kingdom. There, in the middle of Fantasyland, a small brown bird got up and flew away.

Now I know that small brown birds do this sort of thing all the time. But not, I assure you, in Disney World.

In Disney World, they may sing, they may bob their heads, kick their legs, move their beaks, blink their eyes and flap their wings. But they do not fly away. And so, I stood there for several dumbfounded seconds, looking for his wire.

We'd been in Disney World long enough.

For two days we'd been awed and delighted by a world in which anything was mechanically possible, but a world in which the only Real Thing was the Coke.

The hotel we were in was so committed to the Dutch motif that anything that wasn't nailed down was molded in the shape of a wooden shoe. There, we swam in a pool in the shape of a windmill. From this absolute tully of a spot we shuffled back and forth to the Magic Kingdom. And there, too, everything was in the shape of something else.

Each bus was a toply version of a dragon, or an elephant balancing on its trunk. Trees were carved into crocodiles. Wax was molded into Presidents. An entire zoology department was created out of the endangered species known as plastic.

Disney World is nothing if not homage to the Mickey Mouse that lurks in each of us, an advertisement written to the life-like. It is a tribute to the life-like. As opposed to, say, the live.

Am I grousing? No, I loved it. I loved the rides, loved the fantasy and the monorails. It is the cleanest, most trains-run-on-time amusement park in the world. Like the 13 million other Americans who'll visit this year, I was awed by the creations of Frontier Land and River Country and the sheer cleverness of the people who created all the characters of the cartoon world from Peter Pan to Cinderella.

Still, you don't have to be a Save-the-Snail-Darter fan to see something weird about the idea of taking acres of "natural land and carving out artificial streams and waterfalls — each with its own plastic inhabitants.

And you don't have to be a Restoration Bug to notice that millions of tourists every year gasp with awe at the reproduction of Main Street — just like the original one being torn down at home.

Over $700 million was invested in this place, and there are enough Mickey Mouse T-shirts sold there every year, I'm sure, to double the bank account of the Sierra Club. The $50 million that went into building the Space Mountain could save a whole lot of other mountains. If only it were profitable.

Well, I refuse to fume about the inconsistencies and contradictions of society. It's too simplistic. You can't take the money from Tomorrowland and use it to save seals.

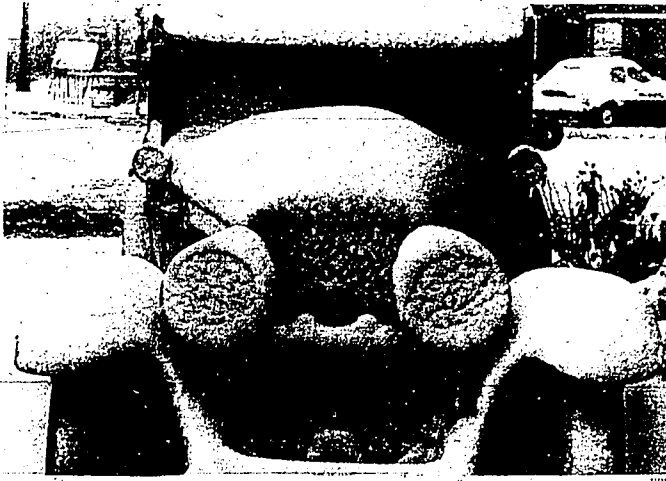

But standing there, watching the flight of the brown bird; I thought of that 1960s song, "Pave paradise, put up a parking lot." The writer was way off the mark. If we were to pave paradise, we'd put up a perfect imitation. Plastic apple and all.

We are much more fascinated with the man-made than with the natural. We are more impressed with what we have made than with what is just there. We are constantly making improvements on nature and applauding our cleverness. We prefer our animals to be anthropomorphic and our mice to be Mickeyes.

We also seem to get much more excited about making something "new" — even if it is a New Historical Village — than saving something old, like a house or a train station or a drug store on the corner.

It's a form of human narcissism, I suppose. We find tiny transistors more marvelous than seeds, Disney lands more extraordinary than natural ones. But it is the sort of pride that can be shaken by a small brown bird in a big plastic world.

This antique car in Denver received its share of the springtime snowfall Thursday

Spring blizzard hits Colorado

By United Press International
A spring blizzard raked Colorado Thursday, closing schools and burying roads in deep drifts. Rains doused Texas and melting snow sent rivers pouring over their banks in the nation's midsection.
Up to 2 1/2 feet of new snow, whipped into blinding clouds by mile-a-minute winds, made travel virtually impossible in the foothills and plains of Colorado.

All schools in the Denver metropolitan area, except in Denver itself and Englewood, closed because of blowing snow.
Ice up to 6-inches thick toppled utility poles like matchsticks in rural areas of eastern Colorado, leaving as many as 6,000 persons without power. Telephone outages also were common.
Up to 30 inches of snow fell in the foothills near Palmer Lake, southeast of Denver. The plains areas of eastern Colorado got 2 to 4 inches of snow. Strong winds piled towering snowdrifts over roads across eastern Colorado. Travel was discouraged, and nearly impossible. Interstate 25 was closed for a period south of Denver at Monument Hill.

An avalanche warning was continued in the central and southern Colorado Rockies because of new snow in recent days.

Senators look at compromise for balancing federal budget

By DONALD H. MAY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senators explored the possibility Thursday of compromise language calling for a balanced federal budget.
If a compromise could be drafted it would get both proponents and opponents off the hook.

The issue arose over a bill on the Senate floor which would increase the national debt ceiling to $830 billion and extend it through Sept. 30, 1979.
Several senators have offered amendments seeking in various ways to force a federal balanced budget.
One pending amendment, by Sens.

Robert Dole, R-Kan., and William Armstrong, R-Colo., would forbid any increase in the debt beginning in 1981 unless the budget is balanced by then or two-thirds of the House and Senate agree to a deficit.

Another, by Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., would merely require that whenever the president sends Congress a budget calling for a deficit he also send an "alternate" budget which would be in balance, so Congress could see where cuts might be made.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Finance Committee and manager of the debt bill, said talks were going on behind the scenes to try to put together a compromise amendment all could accept.

Antipoverty fraud possible

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional investigators said Thursday they are probing misuse of federal funds and possible outright fraud in antipoverty programs in Cleveland and the Chicago area.
Some abuses reported by private auditors in Cleveland continue, General Accounting Office investigators told a Senate appropriations subcommittee.

They said they have only recently begun finding similar practices in federally funded community action agencies in the Chicago area.
"You're talking about Cook County (Chicago and suburbs) so this probably will be much larger" than Cleveland, said GAO management analyst George Egan.

ROBERT GARWOOD
...coming home

Garwood facing charges

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Pfc. Robert Garwood, listed as a prisoner of war for 13 1/2 years despite reports that he crossed enemy lines to fight with the Vietnamese against U.S. soldiers, Thursday returned voluntarily to the Marine Corps, which has accused him of desertion.

Garwood refused to discuss the charges against him, but before he left Vietnam he told a reporter to send this message to his family: "Please don't misunderstand me until you've met me and heard what I've had to say."

Vietnam's first comment on the Garwood case, broadcast by Radio Hanoi a short time after Garwood arrived in Thailand, tersely noted he had "changed sides to the Vietnam Liberation Army in 1965."

In Washington, the Marines disclosed a series of formal charges filed against Garwood accused him of desertion in time of war, unlawful communication and intercourse with the enemy and misbehavior as a prisoner of war.

Two other charges filed later said Garwood solicited American combat forces to throw down their weapons and refuse to fight and attempted to cause insubordination, disloyalty and refusal of duty among prisoners of war.

If the charges are borne out by an investigation, they could lead to a court-martial with the power to impose the death penalty on the 33-year-old native of Greensburg, Ind. No American serviceman has been executed for desertion since World War II, however.

Freelance reporter John Alpert interviewed Garwood for NBC News Wednesday, before the Marine left Ho Chi Minh City for home.

In a message that he asked to be sent to his family in Indiana, Garwood said: "After 15 years I'll be coming home and ... I'm hoping that I will have a reception by my family ... in the meantime I want to send to the family all my love, you know ... and, please ... don't misunderstand me until you've met me and heard what I've had to say."

Garwood, who approached a foreigner in Vietnam last month and said he wanted to return home, refused to talk about his activities when he arrived in Thailand Thursday.

Helen Garwood now is sure he's her son

GREENSBURG, Ind. (UPI) — The face on the TV screen smiled. In that moment, Helen Garwood knew the man on the screen was the boy she raised, Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, who had been missing in action in Vietnam for nearly 14 years.

Mrs. Garwood, the Marine's stepmother who raised him from age 4 to 17, said Thursday she wasn't sure it was him at first.

Later, she said, after watching the tape several times on the monitor at an Indianapolis television station, decided it was her stepson because "he looked right at you and smiled with those little wrinkles under his eyes."

Helen and Jack Garwood watched the tapes over and over.

Until Wednesday night's tape-watching session at an Indianapolis television station, Jack Garwood was not convinced the man who finally left Vietnam and is heading home was actually his son.

"After viewing the videotapes taken in Vietnam, he said he was '75 to 80 percent convinced.'"

"I wasn't convinced the first time they showed the tape," he said. "But after seeing it over and over it had a lot of his features."

Although there were charges that Garwood collaborated with the enemy, his father was more concerned about a ring he saw on his son's left hand.

However, Garwood left Vietnam alone and there were no reports about any Asian wife being left behind. "I'm up tight, I guess," the father said.

Special prosecutor demanded for Carter probe

By STEVE GERSTEL
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republicans — including three presidential hopefuls — charged Thursday that the administration is trying to undercut the investigation into President Carter's family peanut business.

They demanded that Attorney General Griffin Bell name a special prosecutor in the case, armed with total independence and free from the fear of being fired in another Watergate-style "Saturday Night Massacre."

One, Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., called for creation of a special Senate committee, patterned after the Watergate panel; to investigate the allegations and "offset this administration's half-hearted efforts."

Senate Democratic leader Robert

Byrd said he too would have preferred a special prosecutor to the "special counsel" post created Tuesday for Republican lawyer Paul Curran, who will run the investigation into loans the Carter peanut warehouse got from the National Bank of Georgia from 1975 to 1977.

But Byrd told the Republicans, "Let's not engage in partisanship. Let's all hope and expect that Justice will be done."

Among the Republican critics, Senate Republican leader Howard Baker, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Weicker are considered candidates for the GOP nomination. Baker and Weicker served on the Watergate committee and Weicker has already announced his candidacy.

At the end of a series of speeches by Republicans, Baker said, "I do not want to suggest a close parallel between this case and the Watergate investigation which traumatized the country five years ago.

"But neither will I willingly permit a double standard of justice and ethics to be established in American politics, with Republicans held to one standard and Democrats to one much less exacting."

In some of the sharpest language of the hour-long debate, Weicker called Bell a Carter "crony" and said he has "danced and dogged around the Bert Lance case," in which a grand jury investigating Lance's activities as Georgia banker.

Dole said it was in Carter's best interests for Bell to change his mind and name a special prosecutor.

The Alabama electric chair is ready and waiting for John Louis Evans III on April 6

Alabama convict wants to die

JOHN LOUIS EVANS III
... 'disgusted and mad'

By BESSIE FORD
MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — John Louis Evans III, condemned to die in Alabama's electric chair April 6 for shooting a pawnbroker in the back, says he is "disgusted and mad" at lawyers for asking the courts to halt his execution.

Attorney John Carroll of the Southern Poverty Law Center, in defiance of Evans' orders, Wednesday asked the Alabama Supreme Court to review what he contends is a "newly discovered error" in an effort to overturn Evans' conviction and death sentence.

He asked the court to consider the failure of Circuit Court Judge Joseph Hochlander of Mobile, Ala., to explain the elements of robbery to the jury in Evans' 1977 trial for the robbery and murder of a Mobile pawnbroker.

Evans, 29, told prison officials he was "disgusted and mad" that Carroll and another lawyer were trying to block his execution against his wishes.

Carroll and attorney Al Pennington of Mobile took the action as "friends of the court."

"In good conscience we could not let Evans' execution take place without this being brought to the attention of the court," Carroll told reporters.

"There are certain legal elements that constitute robbery and the judge should have told the jury," he said. "It's not a legal technicality. We think we've made a meritorious argument to the court."

Nightclub singer testifies

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A nightclub singer who worked with Michelle Marvin testified Thursday that actor Lee Marvin was frequently drunk and "waved his arms around like a gorilla," during a 1965 slinging engagement of Michelle's, causing her to work under a strain.

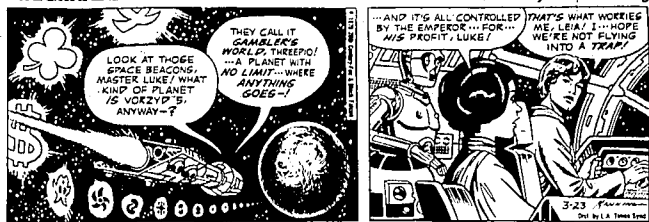

Patti Casey, former wife of the owner of Holiday House in Malibu where Michelle worked for several weeks, said she volunteered to appear in the property settlement trial to impeach the earlier testimony of Wally George.

Miss Marvin is seeking half of Marvin's estimated $3.8 million earnings acquired during the six years, 1964 to 1970, they lived together.

George had testified that Michelle was able to secure the engagement only because of her relationship with Lee Marvin.

Policemen of Twin Cities to try Crime Stopper show

By CHRIS ALLEN
MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Twin Cities television viewers may soon notice some cops-and-robbers shows with a new twist.

Instead of watching police nail the bad guys, they'll see the crooks make a clean getaway. Clean, that is, unless the viewers happen to know something the cops don't. And if that's the case, they may be in for some loot of their own.

June 4 marks the premier of a new Crime Stopper program — directed by two policemen, sponsored by area businesses and, authorities hope, starring John Q. Public.

The idea, say officers Stephen Golden of St. Paul and Douglas Danielson of Minneapolis, is to help curb serious crime by re-enacting unsolved cases and inviting the public to volunteer tips for a reward.

While the form of the 90-second re-enactments will vary, Golden said, four metropolitan television stations will air information on a single unsolved case during their Monday evening news programs. Radio stations also were expected to broadcast such Crime Stopper shows.

"This initially started in Albuquerque, N.M.," Golden said. "and in one year the program changed it from the No. 1 crime-rated city in the country to the middle or lower 20s."

In three years, he said, Albuquerque solved 608 felonies through its Crime Stopper project, including many crimes whose details were not publicized. Police, paying out $78,000 in reward money, recovered about $300,000 in stolen property, he said.

"No matter how well organized, equipped and energetic our law enforcement agencies may be," Danielson said, "they cannot function effectively without the cooperation of the community citizens."

Individual rewards in the Minneapolis-St. Paul program will range from $25 to $5,000, payable upon arrest of a suspect and filing of formal charges.

Golden said he hopes local companies will pledge about $100,000 this year to foot the reward bill.

Tipsters can remain anonymous. The reward depends on the information, the crime, and the degree of assistance.

"If someone helps solve a TV re-enactment," Golden said, "he can get up to $2,500. If someone agrees to testify, he can get up to $5,000."

Compassion in Salt Lake

Widow gets a helping hand

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Salt Lake County Treasurer Arthur Monson has appealed to the County Commission to let an elderly disabled widow keep her home, even though she cannot pay the back taxes on it.

Monson Wednesday asked the commission to grant relief to Laura Hastings, 64, a victim of crippling arthritis whose home is scheduled to be sold by the county if she does not come up with $603.91 in back taxes, interest and penalties by the end of the month.

"I don't know where on earth I'd be able to move to," said Mrs. Hastings, who has lived in the house for 54 years. "I have a roof over my head and that means a lot to me. There's never been anything else for me but this home."

In a letter to the commission, Monson said Mrs. Hastings, whose only income is $2,249 per year in benefits from her late husband's Social Security, has always paid the county as much of her tax bill as she could afford.

"I haven't always been able to pay all of my taxes on the house," Mrs. Hastings said. "But I've come up with a pretty good payment when they were due and I'd send in $25 or so when I could."

That's been all right with the county until now. But now for the first time they want every red cent and I don't know what I'm going to do."

The commission referred Monson's request to County Auditor Craig Snow, who serves as the clerk of the County Board of Equalization, for study.

Commissioners decided not to act on Monson's proposal immediately because, they said, they feared granting special relief to Mrs. Hastings would set a precedent that would prompt a flood of similar requests from other delinquent taxpayers.

Mrs. Hastings' plight was brought to Monson's attention by the woman's physician, Dr. J.O. Brinton, who certified the widow as "totally and permanently disabled."

The woman said she does not want her property taxes canceled by the county. Instead, she said, she would prefer to pay off her bill "a little bit each month."

"If the county can help me some more that would be fine. But I'll make it somehow. I always have and I always will," Mrs. Hastings said.

Times-News Comic Poll

"Star Wars" is the latest addition to the Times-News family, but we want to know if we should include it in the Times-News' daily comic pages.

At the same time, we want to know which comics you like and which ones you don't.

If "Star Wars" is included in the daily comic pages, then another strip will have to be discontinued.

Help us make the decision. Fill in the form below and mail it to: Comic poll, c/o the editor, The Times-News, Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83301.

All forms should be mailed by Saturday, March 31.

The result of the poll and the corresponding decisions will be announced in April.

List your three favorite comics (in order of preference) appearing on the daily Times-News comic page:

1. _____
2. _____
3. _____

List your three least favorite comics, or ones you have never read or never knew existed (in order of non-preference):

With $90,000 and hard work Mitch and Vennie Thorson realized their dream...

of the TIMES-NEWS

To live in a barn

BUHL — Mitch and Vennie Thorson always wanted to live in a barn. And now their dream has come true.

With "a lot of plain hard work," the Thorsons have converted a huge wood and stone barn southwest of Buhl into a showplace of modern carpentry mingled with turn-of-the-century motifs.

"I think everybody thought we were out of our mind," Mrs. Thorson recalled about their unusual project. "People would stop and say they'd been watching."

"One man said, 'You're going to live in that barn?' I'm sure people couldn't realize what the outcome would be."

Built by a German immigrant farmer named Lawrence Jess, the old barn had watched local farm folk passing by on Deep Creek Road for more than 60 years.

Whooping and hollering country people spent many a festive night dancing in the huge old barn, and it was hard for them to picture anybody living there.

But the Thorsons had no trouble with the idea. Aside from friendly Idaho people, barns were the main attraction bringing them to Idaho from their California home.

"There are no barns like this in California," Mrs. Thorson explained. "We just always wanted to remodel a barn."

"We took a float trip down the Middle Fork of the Salmon, liked the people here and zeroed in," her husband, an award-winning designer and builder, added. "We wanted to move to Idaho and we bought that place because it had that barn."

Thorson, who has been recognized by "Better Homes and Gardens" and "Sunset" magazines for uniquely designed homes he has built in northern California, thought he might market his specialty homes in Idaho.

He came to Buhl, moved his family into a small house on their property and began the arduous task of making the barn livable.

Nailing 13,000 board feet of tongue-and-groove cedar to the inside of the empty building and using 500-pound beams to build two mezzanines for bedrooms kept the family busy from July well into the fall of 1977.

Todd, 17, Megan, 16, and Matt, 13, the Thorson children, provided manpower to rip out old flooring and nail a new cedar complexion on the walls of the barn.

At first the emptiness of the vacant barn was disconcerting to Mrs. Thorson. She had trouble deciding where to put the kitchen, the living room and other components of her new home.

"At first it was overbearing to see such a great big empty place," she said. "It was hard to visualize. I didn't know where to start. I just went through and figured things were going to be here and there and went ahead and did it."

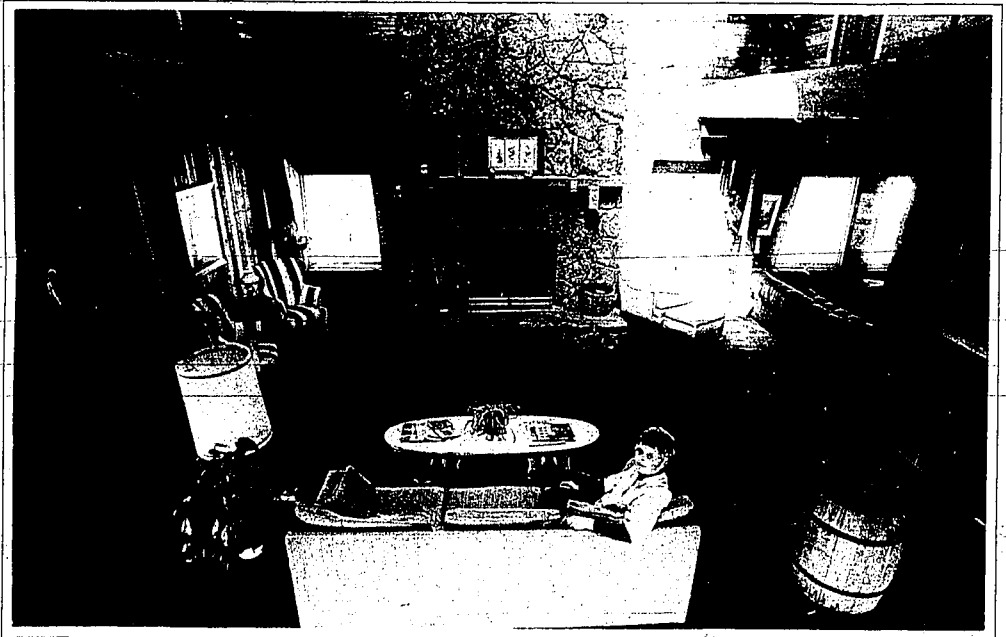

The Thorsons replaced the floor before continuing to remodel in order to seal off any odors which might seep through the floor boards in rainy or humid weather.

Floor-space counting that on the second story and in two lofts high above the floor of the barn amounts to enough room — 3,100 square feet — for a spacious living room, l.v. room, kitchen, dining room, five bedrooms and three bathrooms.

The barn sits on a solid basalt foundation two feet thick and the Thorsons have built a deck around two sides of it with a stairway to the main entrance.

Two large skylights and numerous wall and dormer windows supply generous natural light.

An imposing lava rock fireplace dominates the airy living room and, at the peak of the ceiling, the family has left the original hay track once used by farmer Jess to move hay into his loft.

Cedar walls, a lava rock fireplace and window light add warmth to the Thorsons' barn

"We wanted to bring it back to the early '1900s," Thorson said about the interior decor. "But we wanted to add modern amenities."

The bathrooms are a striking combination of old and new. Replicas of wooden pull-chain toilets contrast with tile laid by an Italian tile setter.

An antique roll-top desk and an ornate antique icebox combine with an early wall telephone and other replicated fixtures to create a turn-of-the-century atmosphere.

Under the main house, the rock basement is still unfinished the way it was when farmer Jess kept his cows there and Mrs. Thorson said they will finish the lower level when finances permit.

The project has not been without flaws.

She said an insulation job proved insufficient to ward off subzero temperatures even with the aid of two heat pumps. The power bill during the coldest part of the winter barnstormed to $327 and the family put on an extra layer of insulation this winter.

At the moment, money delays their progress on their new home, but the $90,000 they have spent so far would have been about $200,000 if they had started from scratch.

Meanwhile Thorson continues to build homes in California. He is waiting for a chance to put the finishing touches on his barn home in Idaho.

"I've still got about $20,000 worth of work to do," he said. "I've got a lot of loose ends to finish up, but I was too busy duck hunting."

Dear Abby

Should boyfriend spend night when young son is home?

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
 © The Chicago Tribune
 New York News Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR ABBY: I've been divorced three years and have a 15-year-old son who lives with me. For the last eight months I have been dating a man I care a great deal for, but we are not engaged. (I'll call him Bob.)
 When my son visits his father, which is nearly every weekend, Bob sleeps over, but I never let him sleep with me when my son is home.
 This has caused some serious arguments between us. Bob insists that it wouldn't make any difference to my son if we slept together while he was home. I think it would, and I'm not about to ask him.
 Do you think I'm being "deceitful" and phony" to stick to my decision? My friend says I am.
 How do other women in my position handle this?

NAMELESS, PLEASE
DEAR NAMELESS: I think your behavior can be more appropriately described as "discreet" than deceitful.

Students presented in recital

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Frank E. De Luca presented her students in piano recitals March 17 and 18 at her studio on 972 Gallup Dr. in Twin Falls.
 Students participating were Shawna Stutzman, Scot Andersen, Cindy Morris, Molly Harney, Michael Parry, Chariton Sharp, Alan Stutzman, Kathleen Morris, Erin Andersen, Simone Savage, Kelli Stewart, Jan Jackson, Melanie Savage, Michelle Petersen, Marily Mosley, Brent Ansley, LeAnne Malone, Megan Wilson, Shawn Maquire, Mitchell Baker, Damon Baker, Ebony Stewart, and Jon Glenn.
 Concerts were performed by Melanie Savage, Michael Parry, and Erin Andersen, with a duo-piano selection presented by Jan Jackson and Mrs. De Luca.
 The next recital will be the annual "Pop for Pops" concert, to be scheduled in June.

Home sewing gets dual trace wheel

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (UPI) — The idea is so simple and practical, you wonder why nobody thought of it before: a dual tracing wheel for home sewing that marks seam and cutting lines simultaneously on paper patterns and fabric.

and phony.
 Stick to your decision.
DEAR ABBY: I'm sure you've heard of Peeping Toms, but I'll bet you've never heard of a Peeping Tina. Tina is my wife, and she's got this thing about looking at naked men.
 We have a view of a large apartment building from our bedroom window, and Tina gets a kick out of looking at men in various stages of undress. While I'm watching TV she's standing in the dark bedroom hoping to get a glimpse of a naked guy. She knows what time certain neighbors undress for bed and who pulls down the shades and who doesn't, and that's her entertainment.
 Now I'm not a prude, and I've never denied Tina a good look at me in my birthday suit, so I can't understand why she's so fascinated with naked men. Is something wrong with her? She's 35 and I'm 37.

PUZLED IN MANHATTAN
DEAR PUZZLED: If Tina's preoccupation with naked men is sudden, maybe something is wrong with her. Such curiosity is considered normal in adolescent children, but at 35 your wife should have outgrown it.

She's too young to be considered a dirty old lady, but don't laugh it off. Talk it out. It's obviously sexual. Maybe Tina's missing something.
DEAR ABBY: I know a widow in her 70s who is quite remarkable. (I'll call her Aunt Libby.) Circumstances are such that this lady has had to make her home with her daughter for the last 12 years. Aunt Libby is active, cheerful and a joy to be with. Best of all, she knows how to keep from being in the way.

 Aunt Libby makes herself available to stay in the homes of parents who want a responsible adult there for a weekend or longer.

 She does this not so much for the money (which she can use, of course) but she likes to get out of her daughter's home for a while. I have even known her to spend her own money to go to a motel for a few days—saying she needs HER privacy, when it is really her wish to give her daughter's family THEIR privacy.

 What do you think of a woman like that?
IDAHO READER
DEAR READER: I think she deserves to be nominated for mother of the year.

Anniversaries

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cammack Sr.

BUHL — Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cammack Sr. will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary March 31 with an open house hosted by their family at the Buhl church of the Nazarene Fellowship Hall from 2 to 5 p.m.

Dorothea Hudson and Francis Cammack were married March 25, 1929, in Vancouver, Wash. They came to Buhl shortly after they were married and have lived in Buhl since, where they have farmed.

The couple have three children, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cammack Jr. of Flier, Mr. and Mrs. L. James Cammack of Leander, La., and Mr. and Mrs. S.M. (Marilyn) Davis of Elk River, Idaho. They also have 12 grandchildren and 7 great-grandchildren.

All friends and family are invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle R. Alley

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Lyle R. Alley of Twin Falls observed their 25th wedding anniversary Sunday, Feb. 25, at their home with friends and family.

Clara Sheely and Lyle Alley were married Feb. 26, 1954, at Hillsboro, Ore., and moved to Twin Falls shortly thereafter.

The silver anniversary was observed with family and friends over lunch and an anniversary cake.

Home can be school for violence.

DALLAS (UPI) — The home can be a "school for violence" and even minor forms of physical punishment can give children violent tendencies, a family behavior researcher reports.

The child who is subject to physical punishment or sees his parents abusing each other is more likely to become a violent person, Dr. Murray A. Straus, director of the Family Violence Research Program at the University of New Hampshire, said.

Straus told the 10th Annual Child Abuse Conference, coordinated by the Mental Health Association of Dallas and Tarrant counties, he based his conclusions on a recently completed survey of 2,000 families. His findings will be published this summer in a book, "Family Violence."

"The family is a school for violence — the place where we get basic training for violence in a hundred different ways, starting with physical punishment in infancy — even slapping a child's hand," Straus said. "It's done out of love and concern but it teaches violence."

"It teaches you that those that love you also hit you. Looking for parents who don't hit their children is like looking for a needle in a haystack."

"The higher the abuse between husband and wife, the higher will be the abuse of the children," he said. "Children who have observed parents hitting one another are much more likely to become violent people, to abuse their own spouse and children."

Straus said the pressure of 24 hour-a-day motherhood often causes housewives to erupt into violence against their children.

"Men are more violent outside the home and women are more violent at home with children," he said. "It's because the care of the child is so overwhelming and because mothers tend to be blamed when a child misbehaves or doesn't live up to expectations."

He said the incidence of maternal violence was not as great among working mothers.

"Violence is half again as high among full-time housewives as it is with those who work outside the home because the latter can't escape from the stress and frustration of the 24-hour job," Straus said.

"Also, earning wages gives the working mother more say-so in the family, and being more in control of her own life, she will treat others better."

Mental attitude saved family in 26-day ordeal

KETCHIKAN, Alaska (UPI) — "Mental attitude" is what saved Elmo Wortman, 53, and his three children during a month-long ordeal without provisions in the stormy and freezing winds of southeast Alaska, the Coast Guard says.

Wortman, his daughters Cindy, 16, Jeana, 12, and son Randy, 15, were in Ketchikan Wednesday, recovering from frostbite, fatigue and the effects of going for days without food in freezing temperatures.

"I'm amazed that they made it," said Coast Guard spokesman Mark Wegner, who gave a detailed account of the 26-day ordeal. "It sounds like they really had their heads together."

The family has refused to talk about the incident.

It began Feb. 13 when they left Port Rupert on Prince of Wales Island in the family-built sailboat for a 138-mile trip to a dentist in Prince Rupert, British Columbia.

The cruise normally takes 30 hours. But their 35-foot sailboat "Hornet" was wrecked in a howling Alaskan winter storm near uninhabited Long Island — approximately 150 miles southwest of Ketchikan, on the night of Feb. 14. They spent the next three and a half weeks trying to reach safety.

As the boat was going down, Wortman salvaged a small two-passenger skiff, the boat's sail, six apples, some instant orange drink, a gallon of diesel fuel, some matches, plywood and foam material. The boat did not have a radio.

They made their way through winds gusting up to 60 miles per hour and swells raging 15 feet high until Cindy spotted land and they plunged into the icy surf. Turbulence pulled shoes from their feet and ripped off Jeana's pants. Elmo and Cindy lost their

After patching the skiff and using the plywood and foam to expand it to carry four people, they set sail for Dall Island, 10 miles away. It took six days because of the tremendous tides and wind going through the passage.

On Feb. 25, Randy and Elmo set adrift for Rose Inlet, where a wilderness neighbor, Pat Tolson, had a cabin and a skiff.

It should have taken one day to reach Rose Inlet and return, but they didn't see the girls again until March 11.

At the Inlet's mouth they encountered ice that was too thick for the boat to penetrate, yet too thin and mushy to walk on. They abandoned the boat farther up the shoreline and walked — without boots — through three-foot snowdrifts — to the cabin.

Neither Tolson nor a skiff were there. Unable to move after their feet began to thaw, the father and son stayed in the cabin for 13 days. By then their skiff had been blown to shore, and with one using the single oar and the other bailing water, they set sail to pick up what they believed would be the bodies of the girls.

But Cindy and Jeana had miraculously survived. Huddled beneath the sail, snug between two branches they had eaten raw kelp and shellfish.

Dr. Lamb

Smelly feet pose big problem

By LARENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb,

I don't know what to do about a problem my 14-year-old son has. His feet smell so bad, no matter what we do, showers, foot powders or clean socks. By the time he gets to gym, he's ashamed to take off his shoes to put his sneakers on. By the time he takes off his socks to get ready for bed, we don't know what to do with his smelly socks. They smell up the whole upstairs. This only started a couple of months ago and I assume it has something to do with his age, but what do we do?

Dear Reader,

Apparently, nature didn't plan for us to wear shoes. The skin over the feet has sweat glands which produce ordinary, watery sweat and other sweat glands that produce oily scents. Some people produce more oily scent material than others.

You're probably right about the age factor. These skin glands tend to become active at the time of puberty. Actually, these scent glands are rudimentary sex glands which is why they become active at puberty. It might be a bit difficult to think of smelly feet as being sexy, but believe it or not, there's a connection.

If you think about it, the feet are enacted in clothing more than any other parts of the body. There is very little way for the skin to "breathe." Socks fit tightly on the feet, and then the sock is encased in the shoe. No wonder the moisture and odors are entrapped.

Smelly feet is just the beginning of the problem. About 80 percent of all foot problems stem from improper footwear. I am sending you The Health Letter number 11-8, Your Feet. And How To Care For Them. It will give you a lot more information than I can here on smelly feet and these problems. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Briefly, remember that it is not only the socks that smell, but the shoes as well. Your letter indicates that you have already used a number of the deodorizing powders. May I suggest the first step would be to have your son change socks frequently during the day. At least twice and, if possible, three times.

The shoes should be alternated so that he never wears the same pair on successive days. When the shoes are not being worn, they should be aired and, if they are made of material that will permit it, they should be cleaned. The inside of a shoe can be cleaned with an alcohol sponge.

He should wear natural shoes, meaning those that can breathe, made from leather and cloth material. Plastic shoes do not have any pores and are worse about trapping odors and sweat. Of course, the feet should be bathed at least twice a day thoroughly and dried thoroughly. After drying, they may be sponged off with alcohol to help eliminate any excess oils, particularly between the toes.

It would help for him to go barefoot as much as possible. Perhaps he can do this at home. The second best choice would be for him to wear open sandals without socks when he is at home. You have to be careful about overdoing this, though, because such shoes don't provide reasonable support to the foot and really aren't designed for much physical activity.

To these measures you can add powders and deodorizing preparations, but they are no substitute for the basic program designed to remove the source of the odor. (Newspaper Enterprise Association)

It's a family affair

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — When 64-year-old Florence M. Harpster of Tigard, Ore., walks down the aisle on her wedding day Saturday she will be accompanied part of the way by her 101-year-old father.

Her son, Calvin L. Harpster, of Renton, Wash., will walk her part of the way down the aisle. Then her father, Purl A. Mulkey, of Woodland, Wash., will accompany her the last few steps.

Also on hand for her marriage to Arthur Fluharty, 68, of Portland, will be four of her children and 10 of her 12 grandchildren.

GOOD BREAD

- 2 envelopes active dry yeast
- 1/2 cup very warm water
- 1/4 cups warm water
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 2 tablespoons salt
- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 2 cups wholewheat flour
- 4 to 5 cups sifted all-purpose flour

In a large bowl, sprinkle yeast over the very warm water. Add the warm water, sugar, honey, salt and shortening. Stir in the whole wheat flour, then add the all-purpose flour. When the mixture gets too stiff to stir, dump it onto a floured surface and work the rest of the flour in with your hands. This will require about 5 minutes of your time. Knead the dough for a good 10 minutes, adding as much flour as necessary while kneading to keep the dough from sticking to your hands. Let rise until double its bulk, approximately 1 to 2 hours. Put a little butter or shortening on the top of dough to keep it soft. When the dough doubles in size, punch it down and make into loaves and you can also make a few rolls for dinner. Let rise again until double in size, approximately another hour. Then bake at 350° F until golden brown.

Motel 6 springs from ground at north edge of Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — The new buildings that recently sprang out of the ground on Blue Lakes Boulevard North near Ace Hansen Chevrolet are the beginnings of a Motel 6.

Motel 6 is a California based, nationwide, economy motel chain. According to job superintendent Lewis Arrington of Arrington Brothers Construction of Twin Falls, the new motel seemed to appear so quickly because the 850 wall sections for the motel's five, two-story buildings were being pre-framed in Twin Falls throughout the winter. Bill Crimmins, Motel 6 vice president and regional manager in Scottsdale, Ariz., said the new motel will have 146 units.

Crimmins said the motel, on the east side of Blue Lakes Boulevard North between Ace Hansen Chevrolet and the new L'Herisson Furniture building, should be completed and open for business by the end of July.

He said the motel will hire between 20 and 30 employees, all of whom will be hired locally except perhaps the managers.

He said the motel's color scheme will be composed of earthy, desert colors. The walls will be beige, the trim will be dark brown and the doors will be burnt orange, the standard colors used at all of the chain's 254 motels.

The chain also maintains standard rates at all its motels, and Twin Falls will be no exception.

A single room will cost $3.95 per night, a double $13.95, and a room for three or four people $16.95.

Televisions will be available for an additional $.75 per night.

Crimmins said Motel 6 is the original economy motel chain and has been in business since 1962. Since 1968 the chain has been a wholly-owned subsidiary of City Investing Co.

The chain also operates motels in Boise, Idaho Falls, Ogden and Salt Lake City and is building a motel in Pocatello.

He said the company surveyed the market before building in Twin Falls and expects to attract customers driving through on Interstate 80N.

Fewer riders board buses during travel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fewer people took the bus for trips between cities last year, the Interstate Commerce Commission reports.

The ICC said ridership and earnings for the nation's 10 largest bus companies dropped about 8.5 percent in 1978 with each bus firm reporting lower ridership.

The 10 bus companies account for about 75 percent of intercity bus travel, the ICC said. The ICC report also said bus lines' net income declined 20 percent to $28.5 million.

Thermal project advances

MALTA — A Los Angeles firm has been selected to provide engineering services for installation of a five megawatt hydrocarbon generator into a geothermal test loop facility on the Raft River near here.

Burns and Roe Pacific, Inc., was chosen by the Idaho Falls operations office of the U.S. Department of Energy for the work.

The thermal loop facility provides for a dual boiling isobutane Rankine power cycle with energy extracted from the low temperature geothermal source in shell and tube heat exchangers. The isobutane vapor will be expanded through a two-stage radial inflow turbine driving a 7,579 KVA generator.

The scope of the work by Burns and Roe Pacific includes foundations and structures for turbine and generator equipment, piping and supports for installation of the equipment into the thermal loop, auxiliary equipment, and necessary instruments and controls.

Pickets block paper mills

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Picket from the striking Association of Western Pulp and Paper Workers showed up at Weyerhaeuser Co. lumber and plywood plants in Oregon Thursday.

Members of the International Woodworkers of America generally observed the picket lines and did not go to work.

Pickets were reported at Weyerhaeuser mills at North Bend, Klamath Falls, Bly and Springfield.

About 2,200 AWPWF members have been on strike against five Weyerhaeuser mills in Oregon and Washington since Dec. 16. The firm employs about 11,000 IWA members at lumber operations in the two states.

Conoco rebuilding

STAMFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Continental Oil Co. said Thursday it would rebuild its refinery at Commerce City, Colo., near Denver at a cost of $22.5 million.

The refinery has been closed since a disastrous fire last Oct. 3. The rebuilt refinery is expected to be in operation by mid-1980. Capacity will remain at 32,500 barrels a day.

Hog futures plunge, cattle rebound

CHICAGO — Cattle rebounded, pork plunged and metals maintained strength in commodity futures trading Thursday.

Commodity News Service said live cattle opened sharply lower, then rebounded to close near the day's highs. The two nearby contracts closed $2 and 45 points higher with April at a contract high on the close. Other months were off 40 to 102 points but were at the high end of the day's range. Volume was 32,756.

Feeder cattle recovered from a limit down opening, closing near or on the day's highs with April up 30 points and other contracts 25 to 115 points off. Volume was 4,561.

Live hogs dropped the limit in the wake of Wednesday's bearishly construed hog and pig report. About 500 contracts were traded. Pork bellies also closed down the 200 point limit and only 197 contracts traded.

International Monetary Market gold showed a net loss of 10 to 60 points after trading in a narrow range on either side of Wednesday's close. Volume was 10,578 contracts.

Chicago Board of Trade silver gained $40 to 1,000 points except in the highly traded spot March which ended 520 points higher at 7.637. Short covering and professional support near the close lifted prices.

Maine potatoes traded in a narrow range, settling mixed from a cent higher to 3 cents lower. The trade was placed at 21 lots.

Wheat eased slightly, closing ¼ cent to 2 cents down after holding moderate gains most of the day until sales in soybeans sparked speculative selling.

Expansion in hog numbers, closing of the Illinois River and possible blocking of 1978 corn crop from the market supported that feed grain but late hedge sales produced fractional gains of ¼ to ½ cent.

Long profit taking after soybeans failed to push through a key technical point left that item and oil lower although meal gained. Beans ended 1½ to 3 cents higher, meal was up 1.20 to unchanged and oil lost 25 to 33 points.

New York Sugar '11 closed little changed after trading in a 5 point range, with spot May unchanged at 8.65 cents. A bomb threat curtailed trading when the exchange closed early.

Ohio Standard tries again for California-Texas oil line

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Standard Oil Co. of Ohio is making another stab at running the government gauntlet to construct the pipeline from California to Texas that has mixed Alaska oil with the rivalry between the Carter administration and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Ronald Reagan — Brown's predecessor and fellow undeclared presidential aspirant — joined in Wednesday, telling a contractors' convention in San Diego cancellation of the pipeline showed that Democrats like Brown are basically hostile to business, harming the economy.

Prodded by federal Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, California officials agreed to try to wrap up the regulatory procedures in six months.

To the dismay of environmentalists who fought the Long Beach pipeline terminal and had already celebrated its demise, Sohio formally resurrected the project Wednesday, renewing its application to the South Coast Air Quality Management District for a permit.

The district is just one of the many regulatory agencies which must approve the project. Sohio officials announced last week they were abandoning plans for the terminal in Long Beach and a 1,000-mile pipeline to Midland, Texas, first proposed in 1975, because of "endless" governmental permit procedures and pending and threatened litigation against it.

The oil company complained it had spent $30 million in a five-year effort to secure all the required permits and saw no end in sight.

State officials said the permit process was almost complete, and accused Sohio of backing out of the project for economic reasons and using the government as a scapegoat.

Tom Quinn, chairman of the State Air Resources Board and a key Brown aide, told reporters there was still a possibility that for financial reasons Sohio would not build the terminal, even if all permits are granted.

Quinn, returning from the meeting with Schlesinger, called the meeting a "charade" and said he has become "increasingly concerned" about Sohio's motives and was "mystified" by Schlesinger's role in the company's decision.

Pullman drops curtain

CHICAGO (UPI) — Pullman Inc., a name synonymous with luxury rail travel, is drawing the curtain on an era.

The company has announced it will stop manufacturing rail passenger cars "as soon as practicable upon completion of contracts in progress" because its famous passenger and sleeper cars were a steady money loser.

Instead, Pullman will concentrate on its freight car and truck trailer business — and engineering and construction projects.

The Pullman sleeping car, in which passengers could crawl between crisp sheets for a long and peaceful sleep while their train sped through the night, was first introduced in 1865 by George Mortimer Pullman.

A Brockton, N.Y., native, he founded the Pullman Palace Car Co. in Chicago in 1867, building and operating his sleepers under contract to the railroads.

Pullman operated rail passenger car plants in Hammond, Ind., and Chicago. It had contracts, which it plans to fill, with Amtrak for long-distance passenger cars and with the Massachusetts Bay Transit Authority for rapid transit cars.

Spud growers switching to sugar contracts

TWIN FALLS — Farmers may be converting some of their potato fields to sugar beets this year.

Uncertainty about potato contracts, along with optimism about sugar legislation, has prompted growers to want to grow more beets this summer, according to Amalgamated Sugar Co. Manager Ralph Burton.

Burton said Thursday Amalgamated will probably increase its acreage 25 percent around Twin Falls, and 16 percent near Paul.

That will bring Amalgamated's

Twin Falls and Paul processing plants up to full capacity, after two years of low production and poor financial records.

Amalgamated Vice President Larry Corry said the company has been behind in production ever since the U.S. Sugar Act expired in 1975.

"Ever since the sugar act ran out, growers haven't been willing to produce at normal levels," Corry said. The end of the act brought a steady price decline from a high of 29 cents a pound to today's 15-cent price.

Hopes are this year Congress will pass a new sugar bill setting the price at 16.3 cents, and that has sparked new grower optimism, Burton said.

He predicted growers' returns will increase 11 percent if Congress passes the bill.

The potato problems have also helped feed the enthusiasm, Burton said.

Although potato processors haven't finalized contract offers yet, many farmers expect the processors will offer smaller contracts, Idaho Frozen Foods has said it will cut contracts by one-third. Anticipating a contract squeeze, farmers may be planning sugar beet acres instead of potatoes.

Sugar beet growers negotiate for a portion of sugar profits rather than for a set price, and they won't know what they'll earn on 1979 contracts until the crop is processed and sold.

But growers will be paid a minimum of $27 a ton for the 1978 crop, Burton said, and probably $30 a ton next year if Congress passes sugar legislation.

The terms of the 1979 contract are the same as 1978, according to Burton.

Besides expanding former acreage, Amalgamated will pick up 20,000 former U and I sugar beet acres this year. U and I went out of the sugar business last fall, leaving its growers without contracts.

In signing up 10,000 former U and I acres near American Falls, Amalgamated will recover a third of U and I's acreage there. The company has also offered contracts for all 10,000 acres which U and I contracted in the Malta area in 1978.

Altogether Idaho farmers will raise 85,000 acres of beets on Amalgamated contracts, up from 55,000 last year. The company will still operate its two Treasure Valley plants below capacity, Corry said.

Despite stepped up production, no new worker will be hired at the plants, Corry said. He said the temporary workers who run the processing "campaign" will just work extra days to handle the larger crop.

Law enforcement group top-ranks personnel needs

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BURLEY — First priority for Law Enforcement Planning Commission funds should be for regular and investigative personnel, members of the regional advisory board have decided.

The board, made up of law enforcement representatives, state, county and city officials for region 3, the southcentral and southeastern Idaho area, met here Tuesday to review programs and proposals for fiscal year 1980.

Merl E. Leonard, Twin Falls county commission chairman and board member, said the advisory board felt more personnel at city, county and state levels is now the most pressing need for area law enforcement.

He said especially in view of tight budgeting under the 1 percent property tax limitation, many local law enforcement agencies will be hard pressed for adequate staffing.

Law Enforcement Planning Commission funds may be able to solve these problems to some degree.

A second priority was given communications equipment for such personnel and existing staff members in various law enforcement agencies in the region. These would include audio visual equipment, communications units, cameras, fingerprint equipment and other specialized items.

A third priority rating went to electronic apprehension (radar) and audio equipment.

Items considered for priority funding were listed by the regional staff based on public input meetings held in Twin Falls, Idaho Falls and Pocatello earlier this year. During these meetings individuals involved with law enforcement and court programs as well as the general public listed needs they felt were most important in the area.

Other input priorities were listed in the conviction, sentencing, corrections, prevention and juvenile divisions of law enforcement.

In corrections, top items included correctional personnel training and continuation of funding for Volunteers in Correction for an additional year. No estimate of the amount needed was available for the volunteers program.

In the juvenile justice division, the board called for continued support of successful programs such as delinquency diversion programs and drug diversion programs.

Earl Brown, Gooding county sheriff, was re-elected chairman of the regional board and Walter Miller, American Falls police chief, was named vice chairman. Robert Pollock, Idaho Falls police chief, was re-elected secretary.

The regional board also approved a budget of $44,689 for the coming year depending on available funds in view of the 1 percent initiative implementation.

Sheriff catches flasher

TWIN FALLS — Thirteen 4-H Club members on a tour of the county jail Wednesday night just missed seeing Sheriff James Munn apprehend a flasher right outside the county courthouse.

Thomas Howard Wood, 36, of Erie, Pa., was sentenced to 45 days in the county jail Thursday by Magistrate Judge Paul Smith on a charge of indecent exposure.

Munn apprehended Wood at 9:05 p.m. after he saw him outside the doors of the courthouse near the sheriff's office with nothing on but his socks. Munn said Wood ran, but after a short chase Munn corralled him.

Wood made his appearance only a few minutes after Munn had finished guiding the Builders 4-H Club members, all of whom are teen-agers, through the county jail.

Health district expects to lose four workers

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The regional health district will lose four employees under its tentative budget for fiscal year 1980.

A tentative South Central Health District budget of $399,413, based on the assumption counties in the district will be able to furnish the same amount of funds as last year, was presented Wednesday afternoon to the district health board.

James Ingalls, deputy district director, said the budget will provide for four less employees in 1980 than

Mike Gann, new supervisor of the Twin Falls sewage treatment plant, took over difficult job this week

Plant designers present case to state board

BOISE — Twin Falls sewage plant designers Hamilton and Voeller Inc. asked the Idaho Board of Health and Welfare Thursday to indicate it did not necessarily accept all conclusions of a report critical of the designers.

The board recently granted the city's request for two more years to fix its malfunctioning plant based on the report.

Hamilton and Voeller said the board's unqualified grant of an extension based on the report by the city's consultant, James M. Montgomery, Consulting Engineers Inc., had given the firm "bad publicity," in that it implied to the public that the board felt poor design of the plant by Hamilton and Voeller was responsible for the plant's failures.

Dr. Lee Stokes, administrator of the Division of Environment of the state Health and Welfare Dept., commented, "I don't think anybody questions, including Hamilton and Voeller, that something needs to be done with the plant. They just want a clarification of what the board was thinking in extending the compliance schedule."

The board members took the request under advisement and indicated they may issue a statement today in regard to the information presented by Hamilton and Voeller.

The Montgomery report pointed the finger of blame for the plant's problems directly at Hamilton and Voeller by concluding that the plant had failed to meet federal pollution standards because of poor design and faulty equipment.

According to Stokes, Hamilton and Voeller "asked the board to issue a statement indicating that in extending the compliance schedule for Twin Falls that the board was not necessarily accepting all the conclusions of the Montgomery report."

In support of its request, Hamilton and Voeller presented information to the board designed to refute some of the conclusions of the Montgomery report.

In other action Thursday, the board approved an order requiring improvements to the Sportsman Lodge water system in Hagerman Valley. Some 30 families are supplied by the system. They have been forced to boil the water to kill bacteria in it.

Health district expects to lose four workers are allowed in the current budget. This is because of a mandatory state 7 percent salary increase without a balancing revenue increase.

Dr. Wayne Carte, medical director for the district, said the proposal will be presented to each board of county commissioners in the district in individual sessions. He said the same appropriation as was given last year will be asked from each participating county.

The budget calls for $402,755 from the eight counties in the district, $269,487 from the state, $41,822 from fees, $164,903 from contracts and $20,086 from other sources.

Carte said it now appears state funds may be a bit higher than last year and fees will be increased. Higher costs of maintaining the existing level of services, however, will require more funding of various programs.

In addition to the budget proposal, the district board received a list of priorities for various health programs computed from their earlier ratings.

At the top of the list of 37 priorities is the immunization program.

Other top priority programs, many of them required under state law, are emergency medical services and dental health.

The board agreed to join with the Region 4 Development Association in sponsoring a solid waste seminar. Frederick Brailsford, commissioner from Gooding, said his county will host the event. Plans are to provide information on recycling and other alternatives in view of changing legislation concerning solid waste responsibility.

Dr. Carte reported on legislative measures pertaining to public health including House Bill 47 designed to combine the state health department's environmental division with the Water Resource Department.

The bill was killed by a House committee Wednesday.

Carte said in his meetings with legislators during the past several weeks he has protested the change.

James Ingalls, who has served 31 years with the health district, was honored by the board. He is retiring from state service.

New charge filed

TWIN FALLS — A charge of assault with a deadly weapon against Brenda Valenzuela, 18, of Twin Falls has been changed to assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder.

The original charge was filed against Valenzuela following the March 10 stabbing of Fernando Hernandez, 21, of Twin Falls, outside a dance at the Elks Lodge in downtown Twin Falls.

Judge alters ruling

TWIN FALLS — Fifth District Court Judge Theron Ward Thursday revised part of an earlier decision to allow Twin Falls realtor Frank Feldtman to open a real estate office in a house on the corner of Addison Avenue and Lincoln Street.

In his original decision on the case, in which Feldtman sued the city for refusing to allow him to open the office, Ward rezoned the property to the C-1 (commercial) zone. Ward found that the city had "abused its discretion in refusing to rezone the subject property."

At the request of the city, which contended that an R-8 zone would have been sufficient to allow Feldtman to open an office, Ward changed the property's zoning to R-6 (residential-professional), a more restrictive zone than commercial.

Ward also ruled that the city is not responsible for Feldtman's attorney's fees in the case.

Charges dropped

TWIN FALLS — Charges have been dropped against Tony Wrobel, who was taken into custody Saturday evening at the Twin Falls apartment of Brad Ruby.

Charges were dropped Tuesday by Ruby, who said he had given Wrobel, a friend, permission to be in his apartment. Ruby had earlier told police he had not given him permission to be there.

Food stores warned of ad violation

TWIN FALLS — Use of unlawful advertising practices in Twin Falls county have brought a word of warning from Prosecuting Attorney Jeff Stoker.

Stoker said the Idaho Consumer Protection Act states it is unlawful to advertise goods or services with the intent not to supply reasonably expectable public demand, unless the advertisement specifies a limitation of quantity on hand.

Stoker said the incident brought to the county attorney's attention was a newspaper ad for soap at a discount price.

"The ad did not disclose a limitation on the quantity. A purchaser entered the store intending to buy a quantity of the soap on sale. The store told the prospective buyer he could buy only one bar of soap," Stoker said.

He said this practice is expressly unlawful under Idaho law. In addition, the merchant could be subject to a civil lawsuit by the buyer, the attorney explained. He said the buyer would be entitled to recover actual damages or $500 and the court could award punitive damages and reasonable attorney's fees as well.

Stoker said if the merchant intends to advertise goods or services, he must be prepared to supply "reasonably expectable public demands" or disclose a limitation of quantity in his ads.

Curt Larson of the office of Idaho Attorney General David Leroy, said there is sometimes confusion over wording in the Consumer Protection Act.

He said it is not legal for a merchant to limit the number of items one customer can buy, unless that is all of the items he has available. If the merchant has advertised saying he has three television sets only at a special price, Larson explained, he cannot tell a prospective customer he can buy only one unless the two others are sold.

"He can advertise a limited quantity of a certain item, but the first customer in the store cannot be denied the opportunity to purchase them all," Larson said.

Even though the ad may have stated there were only three items which would constitute advertising quantity limitations, Larson said, the merchant cannot sell one and hold the others back if the customer wants all three.

On the other hand, Larson said, advertising special sales on the basis of "one to a customer" does not legalize limiting the customer to one item only if he has more in stock.

Idaho Power granted 14.3% rate increase

BOISE (UPI) — The state Public Utilities Commission Thursday granted Idaho Power Co. an across-the-board, 14.3 percent rate increase which will mean $11 million in additional revenue for the firm. Rates charged five major Idaho Power customers — Monsanto Co.,

FMC Corp., J.R. Simplot Co., the U.S. Department of Energy and Machinery Center — also will be subject to the 14.3 percent increase because they receive special low rates at the expense of other customers, the commission ruled. Idaho Power had asked for a 19.2

percent increase which would have brought in $27.5 million in additional revenue. The commission said it limited the rate hike below the amount requested because it said the firm should not be able to charge its customers for its "image-building" advertising.

Only advertising that is "information-oriented, such as safety or conservation tips" may be considered an operating expense, the commission ruled.

The PUC also said Idaho Power's charitable donations should be paid for by shareholders, not customers. In its order, the commission delayed consolidation of six rate schedules until more information required by new federal regulations, could be collected. In addition, the commission decided not to institute a voluntary energy conservation program as recommended by the Idaho Electric Consumers Office. A PUC spokesman said the commission would hold hearings on the program "in the near future."

House passes bill for Gooding Center lease

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer
BOISE — Gooding's former tuberculosis hospital now seems destined to be converted to a full-time alcoholism treatment center. Thursday the Idaho House voted 66-3 to pass House Bill 291. That measure gives the State Land Board authority to lease six acres of the Gooding property to the Idaho Regional Treatment and Training Center, a private alcoholism clinic which has been using part of the Gooding facilities. The bill had been temporarily held up because of legislators' earlier objections to the proposed length of the lease. As initially drafted, HB 291 would have granted a 99-year lease to the center. The measure passed Thursday trims the leasing period to 25 years. Legislators last week argued the shorter lease period would give the state a chance to reconsider the use of the Gooding property within a realistic time period. There are 40 acres of land and three buildings at the former TB hospital complex. Current plans call for demolition of the two oldest buildings on the site, with conversion of the newest and remaining building into a treatment clinic. State agencies, which have been using part of the office space in that building, will also remain in the structure.

The land on which the building is located and the land around it will be included in the lease to the center. The remaining acres will be sold by the state at a public auction. The date of that auction has yet to be announced.

HB 291, sponsored by Rep. John Brooks, R-Gooding, and Rep. Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home, now goes to the Senate. According to Brooks, the plan provides "a chance to dispose of the property so that we won't have any more cost to the taxpayers."

The state-owned property, which has been largely vacant for several years, was costing more than $100,000 in yearly maintenance and operation costs.

Stivers' LID bill approved, 60-9

BOISE — Idaho representatives moved to rein in city councils Thursday, saying those governmental units can initiate local improvement districts (LID's) only with a three-fourths vote of council members.

Under House Bill 177, which passed the House by a 60-9 vote, LIDs can be initiated in two ways, either by petitions signed by not less than 60 percent of the property owners within the proposed LID district, or by vote of three-quarters of the council members.

According to Rep. Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, sponsor of HB 177, the measure was drafted as a result of actions last year in Twin Falls. A proposed LID in Twin Falls sparked sharp opposition and triggered an abortive recall of the town's mayor.

Existing Idaho law says a council can begin a LID with a simple majority vote, Stivers said, "and that requirement has caused some damage."

HB 177 now goes to the Senate.

Christopher Columbus was the one who started the traffic rolling

Whether it was Christopher Columbus or some earlier soul who first discovered the Western Hemisphere has been much debated. But it's fairly pointless, really. No doubt the Middle Easterners showed up previously. Maybe the Middle Easterners and Siberians, too. But they didn't get the big significant traffic rolling. Before Columbus' trip in 1492, neither a single food plant nor a domesticated food animal was common to both the Eastern and Western hemispheres.

In 1842 at Lockport, N. Y., a safemaker named Jacob H. Myers got pretty upset by the way a certain politician was tampering with the ballots. So Jacob put together a fancy device that looked just like one of his bank vaults. It was the world's first voting machine. It pleased the voters mightily. But not that politician. It surprised him right out of office.

Among the countless things sent to Germany under the Marshall Plan after World War II were tons and tons and tons of corn meal. German bakers weren't used to it. Their cornbread came out badly. Odd, thought the American supply officer who was responsible for all those shipments. He'd taken a survey of German ex-soldiers, and he knew for a fact that corn was what those Germans wanted most. What he didn't know was that Korn in German means whiskey.

Was a time in Texas when the state government leased out black convicts to work for plantation owners.

That word "pal" meaning friend comes from a gypsy word for "brother."

SHOPLIFTERS

One year, most of the shoplifters seem to be teenage girls. Another year, the majority appear to be elderly women. Still another year, most of them turn out to be retired men. Nobody yet has explained why shoplifting types tend to run in cycles. What is known, though, is that these cycles show up in all the big stores across town fairly uniformly.

Correspondents report that a sizable group of citizens in the Austrian province of Styria eat arsenic habitually. They've made themselves immune to arsenic poisoning, evidently. They show no signs of said sickness, unless they stop taking it. And when they die—they, too, do that—their bodies tend to remain well preserved.

Fight looms on 1% override bills

BOISE (UPI) — A House leadership committee introduced three tax-freeze override bills Thursday but the Printing Committee refused to print two of them, setting up a possible floor fight today.

Under the bill implementing the 1 percent property tax limitation in all local units of government are limited to 1978 tax revenues for the next two years.

An attempt to introduce a so-called compromise proposal through the Revenue and Taxation Committee failed Wednesday on a 6-3 vote, with three Democrats — members of the governor's party — absent. One Democrat also voted against introduction.

After that the governor appealed to the leadership House Ways and Means Committee and that group introduced not only the one turned down by the taxwriters but two others.

These include measures to:

- Allow a simple majority of the voters to exceed the tax freeze by 10 percent for one year at a time if an emergency is declared, the compromise proposal the tax committee refused to introduce Wednesday.
- Authorize a simple majority of the voters to exceed the freeze one year at a time if an emergency is declared, a proposal suggested by House Minority Leader Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello.
- Permit a simple majority of the voters to exceed the freeze one year at a time to replace federal funds that may have been lost, a proposal suggested by House Majority Leader Walter Little, R-New Plymouth.

But when the bills hit the Printing Committee later in the day that group on a 3-3 tie vote refused to print the 10 percent bill. Rep. John Brooks, R-Gooding, argued that the germane committee already had rejected it.

The Printing Committee did agree to print the bill by the majority leader to replace the federal funds, members of the committee calling that a vital measure to protect cities and counties from loss of revenue-sharing funds.

When it came to Miss McDermott's bill the committee — on a 2-4 party line vote — refused to print it.

Besides introducing this legislation, the Ways and Means Committee — which is composed of the House leadership — introduced one to ease the pain of the tax freeze on school districts which reduced mill levies last year.

Rep. Melvin Hammond, D-Rexburg, said his district and several others "cut both mill levies and revenue last year after property was reassessed. While one bill going through the Legislature would permit school districts to override the freeze by a simple majority he questioned whether districts that just went through reappraisal would approve an override.

Hammond's bill would let the districts levy currently allowed mills for maintenance and operation without an override election. A tax relief bill passed by the House Wednesday would have forced the districts to cut back from the current levels unless voters approve an override.

Meantime, Chairman Steve Antone, R-Rupert, of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee forced printing of a bill to permit county sales and use taxes on a local option basis.

The Printing Committee had refused to print the measure but Antone successfully moved, 50-18, to print it. Based on previous floor action, its future appears dubious, however.

Elsewhere on the legislative scene:

• A compromise designed to resolve fiscal differences between the governor and the Legislature and grease the path toward final adjournment was introduced in the Senate. It would boost spending by $3.1 million, with $2.5 million coming from the fiscal 1980 funds and $500,000 in carryover money from 1979.

• The House approved 66-3 a bill authorizing the Land Board to lease a six-acre tract of land and buildings at the old Tuberculosis Hospital in Gooding for an alcoholic treatment center for up to 25 years. The bill goes now to the Senate.

• House members voted 63-2 in favor of a bill prohibiting the transfer of golf course, ski resort, or lake resort "liquor licenses" to other locations or facilities.

• After the chairman of the Appropriations Committee called it a "rip-off, rip-off," the House killed 26-43 a bill to give Lava Hot Springs 10 percent of the receipts from its state-owned hot baths there.

• To alleviate a problem in the collection of delinquent child support payments in Idaho, the Senate passed 31-4 a House bill to allow the Department of Health and Welfare to retain private counsel to carry out the job.

• The House paused in its adjournment drive to instruct the U.S. Congress on foreign policy by passing a memorial 54-13 encouraging recognition of the Republic of China on Taiwan. It goes now to the Senate.

• The House easily approved a $70 million appropriation supporting the state's four colleges and universities and two junior colleges, apparently ending the likelihood they will have to declare financial exigency. The appropriation marks a 2.2 percent hike over last year's funding.

Education funding approved

BOISE (UPI) — The House quickly and convincingly approved a $70.7 million appropriation supporting the state's four colleges and universities and two junior colleges Thursday, lessening slightly the likelihood any will have to declare financial exigency.

The appropriation marks a 2.2 percent hike over last year's appropriation and includes $22.5 million from the general account, $4.8 million from the miscellaneous receipts account, and $3.4 million from other accounts.

Educators expressed the fear during a State Board of Education meeting early this month that the appropriation might be trimmed to $60 million or less. Such a cut, some educators claimed, could force massive layoffs and the declaration of financial exigency.

Rep. Patricia L. McDermott, D-Pocatello, said the budget approved Thursday still will force some 90 layoffs.

"I don't think it's fair that higher education take the heavy brunt of the axe because of the 1 percent," she said. "I think that's what has happened."

The appropriation for junior colleges is up 4.45 percent from last year while colleges and universities received a 1.1 percent increase.

In other action, the House approved 66-2 a $130.3 million appropriation for the Idaho Transportation Department. The money will come from federal and other funds and will be used to fund the department during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1980.

Wiretap guidelines considered

BOISE — State representatives will consider today a measure setting legal guidelines for wiretaps by Idaho law enforcement personnel.

Senate Bill 1148, passed the House Thursday, on a vote of 35-33. But after sharp debate, legislators agreed to reconsider the bill today.

Supporters of the measure insisted the bill merely updated existing legal codes to deal with the ever-widening field of electronic listening devices. But opponents charged the measure made wiretapping at the local level too easy.

Idaho's legal statutes have not been amended on questions of electronic security since 1903, said Rep. Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, House sponsor of the measure. Similar legislation has been enacted in 38 states, Stivers said. SB 1148 merely specifically lists the circumstances under which wiretaps are or are not permitted, he said.

The measure also includes tough safeguards against illegal wiretaps, Stivers said. Illegal wiretapping is a felony under the act, he said, and could result in a five-year prison term.

But House Minority Leader Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, criticized the measure. As drafted SB 1148 gives county prosecutors authority to begin wiretaps if permission is granted by local magistrates, McDermott said "I would much prefer the U.S. attorney and FBI to be conducting investigations into national security and interstate crime, with all due respect to prosecuting attorneys," McDermott said.

McDermott said SB 1148 permits wiretaps to be placed on telephones for up to 48 hours in some circumstances before legal authority for those wiretaps is granted. If the law enforcement officer placing the wiretap decides not to press charges, McDermott said, then SB 1148 has no requirement that the person whose phone has been tapped "even be advised of this intrusion."

The measure is "an intrusion on individual rights," McDermott said.

But Stivers disagreed. "I see nothing wrong with law enforcement agencies being given power to stop organized crime," Stivers said.

Idahoans fight '02 law enforcement

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Water Users Association went to Washington Thursday to fight against enforcement of the 1902 Reclamation Act.

In testimony before the Senate Subcommittee on Energy, Research and Development, IWUA Executive Director Cheryl Chapman criticized a bill being considered by the Senate.

"We commend you and our sponsors on the introduction of S-14," Chapman began, but then went on to suggest several modifications to the bill, which would reform the 1902 Act.

S-14, introduced by Sen. Frank Church, would increase the number of acres allowed on federal irrigation projects, under regulations which have been proposed for enforcement in 1980. The enforcement regulations would affect as many and possibly more than 85,000 acres of Idaho farm land.

The Church bill would expand allowed acreage from 100 acres to 1,280. Chapman asked the committee to consider allowing irrigators to farm even more acres, if they're willing to pay more for their water.

Chapman proposed inserting the "Engle Formula," under which a user would pay 150 percent of water costs for each acre between 1,280 and 1,920, and 200 percent for acres up to 2,560.

Chapman also asked for stronger language regarding validation of contracts. He asked that the bill clearly state that the Interior Department will honor past contracts which exempted irrigators from reclamation provisions once they have repaid construction costs of federal projects. Validation would exempt the American Falls Reservoir District and many other Idaho districts.

Chapman also recommended exempting irrigation projects which receive 25 percent or less of their water from federal water systems.

Proposed reuniting regulations, not mentioned in S-14, would apply to lands that receive any federal water.

Chapman also asked that the United States be held responsible for complying with state water laws, and that 1902 regulations only apply to Bureau of Reclamation projects, not those built by the Army Corps of Engineers.

The IWUA represents users who farm a total of 2.75 million acres of land, nearly three-fourths of all irrigated land in the state. Chapman said about 1.5 million of these acres receive BOR water.

Teamster effort attacked

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI)— Kelly Pearce, director of the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement, said Wednesday the Teamsters Union's "ultimate goal" is to unionize all Gem state employees.

The Coeur d'Alene Press checked with Idaho State Police officers and Ada County Sheriff Chuck Palmer who agreed with Pearce's assessment.

One ISP officer said the union, one of the strongest in the nation, is not only working on troopers but ultimately wants to represent employees within the Department of Law Enforcement, the Fish and Game Department and the Department of Corrections.

Ada County Sheriff Chuck Palmer concurred. "I got a letter telling me to keep my nose out of it from the Teamsters," said "I assume they are approaching my men. I would hope they have the good sense not to join."

Rep. Jack Spurgeon said he was "absolutely devastated" by the news.

Easter Seal show slated on weekend

TWIN FALLS — Jack Klugman, star of NBC's Quincy series, will host the annual Easter Seal Telethon this weekend, March 24-25, presented in Twin Falls by the Idaho Easter Seal Society and KMYT Channel 11.

The 20-hour show will begin at 9 p.m. Saturday with a host of stars entertaining direct from Hollywood.

The Idaho Easter Child this year is Chad Tucker, who was chosen to represent more than 2,000 Idaho Children and adults who are handicapped and received help from Easter Seals. Chad, a speech-language impaired child, has received therapy at the Easter Seal Speech and Hearing Center in Boise for two years and has improved greatly. Chad will appear on local segments of the show to be broadcast every hour. Betty Smith of KMYT Channel 11 will emcee local segments in Twin Falls.

has only mild involvement of the upper extremities.

The Easter Seal Telethon, which helps to raise the funds to bring needed rehabilitation services to people with handicaps, has been sponsored by the National Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults since 1972, and has raised more than $25 million to help fund Easter Seal camps and rehabilitation services and programs for handicapped people of all ages.

Proceeds from the Telethon will be used to support vital speech, language therapy and hearing evaluation programs as well as help pay for necessary medical equipment such as orthopedic shoes, braces, and hearing aids. Equipment loan, Camp Easter Seal, information and referral services are also part of the variety of services offered through the Easter Seal Society.

The National Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults is celebrating its 60th Anniversary this year. Since 1919, it has been widely recognized as the organization that has provided more services, to more handicapped people, than any other voluntary health agency in the world.

The National Easter Seal Child, Claire Huckel, will represent the nation's handicapped on the telethon. Claire, born with cerebral palsy, has received treatment since the age of 2 years. Today, at 7, Claire walks — with the aid of long leg braces — but she walks, and runs and plays, and

Vocational competition set for CSI

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho will host the state Leadership Conference and Skill Olympics of the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America March 28, 29, and 30.

Over 300 VICA members, students from Idaho secondary and post-secondary vocational schools, will participate in the seventh annual conference, according to conference coordinator Sho Ueda, of Pocatello.

Leadership contestants will compete in the categories of Job Interview, prepared speech, and extemporaneous speech. The prepared speech topic this year is "VICA — America's New Professionals."

Skill contests include competition in welding, industrial electronics, radio-TV repair, auto body repair, auto mechanics, machine shop, small engine repair, drafting, law enforcement, cosmetology, dental assistance, dental lab, nurse's aide/orderly, and practical nursing.

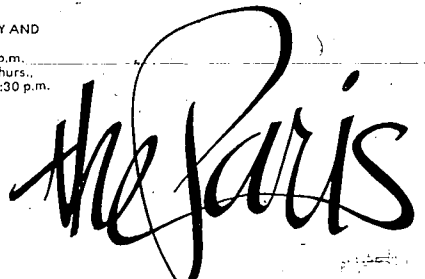

Judges for the events will be school instructors, administration officials, and technical personnel from private industry.

An awards assembly will conclude the event. First place winners will receive a gold-medallion and the eligibility to attend the United States Skill Olympics in Atlanta this July.

National winners will then advance to international competition scheduled for 1980 in Cork, Ireland.

High school VICA members will attend the CSI event from Blackfoot, Boise, Bonneville, Burley, Caldwell, Idaho Falls, Rupert, Nampa, Pocatello, Preston, Shelley, Skyline, Fremont, Salem, and Wallace.

Primitive area hearing at Lewiston

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate subcommittee hearing on proposed reclassification of the Idaho and Salmon River Breaks primitive areas will begin at 9:30 a.m. April 2 at Lewiston, State — O'Leary — in Lewiston, Sen. Frank Church said.

Church said he will chair the Parks, Recreation and Renewable Resources Subcommittee session. Similar hearings have been scheduled for later in the year at Salmon and Boise.

Three alternative proposals now before Congress centering on what degree of the primitive areas should be classified as wilderness will be the focus of the hearings, Church said.

The Idaho Democrat said the Lewiston-Clark hearing would take place in the Spalding Hall conference room.

Meyer wants NCAA title before retiring

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Ray Meyer may be 65 with 37 years of college coaching behind him, but the retired DePaul coach says the last four years — and especially this season — have erased any thoughts of retiring.

"I haven't considered retiring lately," said Meyer. "It's been too much fun, especially this year and these past few weeks."

The past few weeks for DePaul include an 89-78 win over Southern Cal. in the first round of the NCAA Western Regionals at Los Angeles, followed by victories over Marquette (62-56) and UCLA (95-91) at Provo, Utah, last weekend in the West finals.

The three wins sent DePaul into the NCAA championships Saturday and Monday at the University of Utah. The Blue Demons' first-round opponent Saturday at 3:15 p.m. (MST) is top-ranked and unbeaten Indiana State, led by All America forward Larry Bird. In the other semifinal game, Michigan State meets Penn at 12:45 p.m. (MST).

Meyer said he plans to be at DePaul for "a few more years. I promised Mark Aguirre I would stay around a couple more seasons for him."

Aguirre — the nation's No. 1 scoring freshman this year — and senior Curtis Watkins, both forwards, are the heart of DePaul's five-man team. Aguirre is averaging 24 points per game and Watkins 17.

But Watkins, not Aguirre, will be the key to DePaul's game plan for Indiana State. The 6-foot-6 Watkins was injured in the last minute of the Demons' win over UCLA, leaving with 24 points, eight rebounds and a sprained knee.

Meyer said, "We still don't know if he'll play or how long he'll play Saturday. We'll practice him Friday, and we'll know then if he can play. Curtis has been running, and he can run straight ahead and cut to the left. But, when he turns to the right, the knee hurts him."

If Watkins is out, that will throw off Meyer's game plan. He plans to put Watkins on Bird. But DePaul has no reserve who can replace Watkins. In fact, DePaul has not had reserves, just a handful of players who sit on the bench for 40 minutes.

"If Watkins can't play, we'll start Dennis McGuire, and put Mark Aguirre on Bird. Mark always rises to the occasion. We don't expect him to stop Bird," Meyer said. "Nobody else has all year."

Meyer said DePaul will let Bird "have his points, and try to hold the others down. It's a mistake to double team or triple team Bird. He then hits the open man so well his passing kills you. It's hard to discipline your boys, to stop them from watching him and taking their eyes off their man."

As for Bird and his injured thumb, Indiana State coach Bill Hodges says his forward "has practiced well and has not had any problems."

But Hodges says he's worried about DePaul's speed. "They have great quickness. We can keep them from hurting us with their presses. We can overcome their speed if we keep calm and avoid risky passes."

The first-year coach said DePaul guards Gary Garland and Clyde Bradshaw have combined for more than 200 steals this year. "To win we've got to stop them from stealing the ball, continue to play our good defensive game, and have a good rebounding game."

Bird has led Indiana State to its 32-0 record, averaging 29 points and 14.8 rebounds per game. But the Sycamores have four starters who complicate Bird's passing game, and bench strength to give their regulars a breather.

Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote says starting center Jay Vincent will see only limited action Saturday against Penn, due to a foot injury he suffered against Wisconsin in the Spartans' final Big 10 game.

But without the sophomore center in the starting lineup, Michigan State has demolished Lamar (95-61), Louisiana State (87-71) and Notre Dame (80-63) in the NCAA Midwest playoffs, so the 24-4 Spartans appear solid with forward Ron Charles back in the starting rotation in place of Vincent.

Greg Kesler and Earvin Johnson are the one-two punch in the MSU lineup, averaging 18.5 and 16.5 points respectively.

Heathcote says he hopes to pull 25-5 Penn out of its "intelligent" style of play, "by controlling the tempo. We want a fast game, but we've got to stop Penn's fast break and control the boards."

NJCAA fills field for semifinals

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (UPI) — Thurston Weaver and Marc McCrary combined for 46 points Thursday night to pace Three Rivers (Mo.) to a 110-81 rout over Coffeyville, Kan., in a quarterfinal game of the NJCAA Basketball Tournament.

Western Texas defeated Brevard (Fla.) 84-72 in another quarterfinal. In earlier consolation games, Brevard (N.C.) defeated Nebraska Western 75-63, Westchester (N.Y.) thumped Tunxis (Conn.) 83-68, Burlington (Iowa) stopped Bellevue (Ill.) 83-60 and Vincennes (Ind.) nipped Lindsey-Wilson (Ky.) 77-76 in overtime.

The Missouri team soared to a 50-37 halftime lead and kept its crushing attack to the finish. Weaver scored 25 points, McCrary 21 and Robert Kirby came off the bench to add 18.

Craig Tucker of Coffeyville scored 40 points for game high and the tournament's best individual scoring performance so far. The loss put the Kansans, now 25-7, in the losers bracket. Three Rivers moved into Friday's semifinals against Western Texas.

Paul Pressey scored 18 points to lead four players in double figures and Western Texas to its triumph over Brevard (Fla.).

Western Texas held a 34-32 halftime edge, but the Florida club staged a 12-2 spurt midway in the second half to tie it 48-48. Then Greg Stewart hit a slam dunk and the Texans sped away to lead as much as 17 points before the end.

Others in double figures for Western Texas were Michael Smith 17, Stewart 15 and Bill Patterson 12. Bobby Ford of Brevard was game high with 25. Larry Jewell scored 20 points and Benton Wade 16 to pace Brevard (N.C.) to its victory over Nebraska Western.

Canyon Conference whips Magic Valley

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

EDEN HAZELTON — It was called an all-star game, but it turned into the Tony Smith showcase.

Smith, a 6-1 senior at Filer High school, went on an early point blitz that carried the Canyon Conference stars past the Magic Valley league 101-75 Tuesday night to ring down the curtain on the Magic Valley high school basketball season.

Smith made it a one-man show in the early going, hitting inside and out and picking off a half dozen rebounds when the Canyon Conference was piling up 20-point leads in the second quarter. He hit 23 points in the first half and subsided substantially thereafter but his teammates came up with backboard control and balanced scoring to keep the Magic Valley stars from ever contending.

The victory made it two straight for the Canyon Conference in the short series, and Coach Rich Thompson admitted he was surprised that the A-3 aggregation had controlled the scoreboard so well all night.

"I thought it would be a close game," he said, adding he didn't know if things went according to game plan because he didn't have any. The teams had just one night of practice — and that was Wednesday.

"Last night at practice I just told them to pass the ball, screen and cut and take the shot. That's what they did and it worked pretty well," Thompson said.

Thompson agreed that the early firepower of Smith probably turned the game from a donnybrook into the comfortable victory.

"Smith was complaining of shin splints in practice last night. I felt that he looked a little tight in the (Magic Valley all-star) game at CSI Tuesday. I told him to try to drive to the basket for some inside shots early and hoped if they went in, it would relax and start hitting well from the outside. You saw what happened," he smiled.

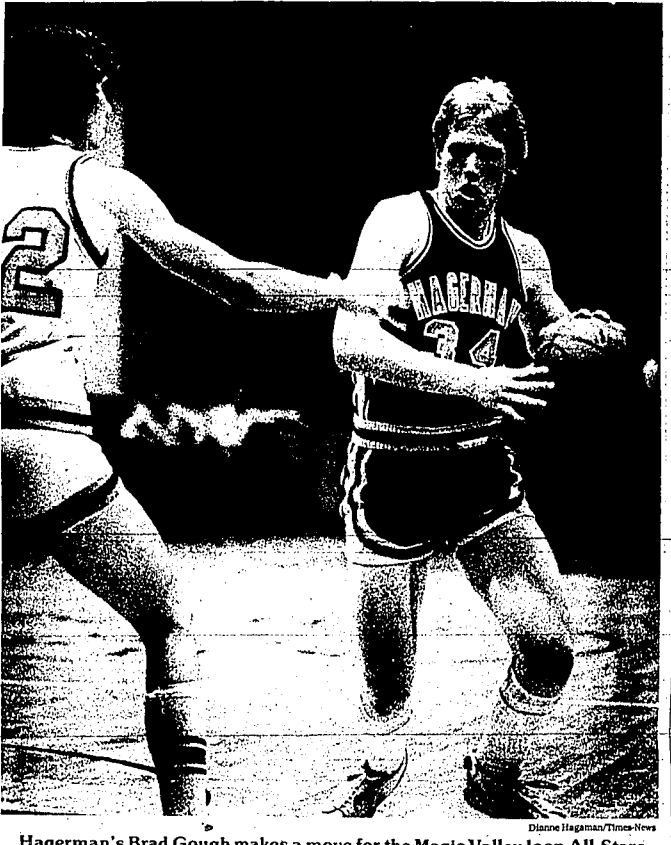

On the other side of the gymnasium, Hagerman coach Ron Knowles assessed the game about the same "give us Smith and we'll play them tomorrow night," Knowles smiled. "He had a great game."

The Magic Valley league stars could trace a lot of their problems to rebounding — not getting many offensive follow shots and giving up to many to the Canyon Conference. "Our big guys really weren't strong offensive rebounders during the season," Knowles said. "They are excellent offensive players and do pretty well on the defensive boards but we weren't expecting to get a lot of offensive rebounds."

The Canyon Conference hit the first five points of the game and after three minutes held at least a six-point lead the rest of the way. In the 10-minute first quarter, Smith hit 13 points and 6-5 Eric Smith of Granite Ferry came up with three field goals to provide most of the offensive punch in a 28-14 lead.

The Canyon Conference coaches took the opener 98-89.

Holmes defends heavyweight crown tonight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Unbeaten Larry Holmes, World Boxing Council heavyweight champion still laboring in Muhammad Ali's giant shadow, will defend his title Friday night against Ossie Ocasio, an undefeated Puerto Rican nicknamed "Jaws" by his manager because he once bit an opponent's ear off.

For Holmes, 29, the Easton, Pa., Assassin, it will be the second defense of the title he won from Ken Norton on a split decision in Las Vegas last June 9.

Borrowing a baseball phrase, the 6-foot-3 WBC champion pitched a shutout in his first defense, destroying Alvaro Evangelista of Spain in six rounds at Las Vegas last Nov. 30.

Holmes will take a 29-0 record with 20 knockouts into the scheduled 15-rounder at the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel against Ocasio, who is 13-0 with 9 KOs. The heavyweight from Puerto Rico is the WBC's No. 3 contender.

In a scheduled 12-rounder, Norton and Earnie Shavers, a pair of aging but still proficient fighters listed one-two in the heavyweight contender rankings by the WBC, battle with the winner expected to be Holmes' next opponent if Holmes gets Ocasio, something that is expected.

The Holmes-Ocasio and Norton-Shavers bouts will be featured on a 2 1/2-hour national telecast (ABC-TV). The card starts at 8:30 p.m. est.

Ocasio, 23, doesn't figure to have much of a chance against the powerful Holmes, who has demonstrated marked improvement in his last five fights, all in Las Vegas.

Ocasio earned the right to bid for Holmes' title with a pair of decisions over Jimmy Young, of the Holmes-Norton card last June and at San Juan Jan. 27. But in boxing circles there has been a question about how well Young, the man who put former heavyweight king George Foreman into retirement, is taking care of himself these days.

Ocasio got his nickname "Jaws" from his manager, Bill Daly, for his unorthodox methods in his second professional fight. He wound up winning that bout on a second-round knockout over Rafael Guerrero at San Juan April 5, 1976. After Guerrero hit Ocasio in the groin in the first round, Ocasio retaliated like the famous movie shark and attempted to sever Guerrero's ear from his head.

"It'll be coming into the ring at 7 o'clock and leaving at 7:02," Holmes promised. "Do you think I'm going to let a man come out of Puerto Rico who can't speak English represent the American public as their heavyweight champion?"

"Everything is going to turn out well," Ocasio claimed. "I'm going to break his jaw. It's going to be a quick fight."

Added Holmes, "Ocasio says he'll knock me out. Well, there have been 29 other guys who have tried that and I have 29 wins. So my record speaks for itself."

With All, the World Boxing Association heavyweight champion, still not totally out of boxing, Holmes isn't receiving the credit he should. Most boxing people feel his head and shoulders above all the other heavyweights in the world today, including All. Holmes' manager for the past six years, Richie Glacetti of Cleveland, thinks the day is coming when Holmes will get all the acclaim that is due him, though.

"It's a matter of exposure," said Glacetti. "The more exposure Larry gets, the more the general public will realize just how talented he is. Leon Spinks (former WBA heavyweight king) got his exposure from the Montreal Olympics in 1976. When Spinks won his gold medal, all of America watched it on television."

Holmes is earning $1.5 million while Ocasio is being paid $350,000.

The loser of the Norton-Shavers fight is expected to slip from the heavyweight title picture for good. Norton is 33 — and some think he is older — and Shavers is 34.

The WBC has ruled that Holmes must fight the No. 1-ranked contender by September. That could enable Holmes to beat Ocasio, to risk another defense before fighting Norton or Shavers.

Holmes got his opportunity to fight for Norton's WBC crown by easily decimating Shavers in 12 rounds at Las Vegas almost a year ago to this date — March 25, 1978. Norton will take a 41-5 record with 33 knockouts against Shavers, who is 56-7 with 54 KOs.

Canadians tough again in Dannon Series race

SUN. VALLEY — The Canadian National cross country ski team continued to dominate the action in the Dannon Series races with impressive finishes in two races Thursday.

Reino Keski-Salmi, who finished fifth in a 10-kilometer race Wednesday, rallied to win the 15-kilometer event yesterday at Galena Lodge with a time of 45:31.7.

The Canadian, finished over 20 seconds ahead of fellow Canadian Stephen Sander.

Wednesday's winner, Jon Bjorkheim of Norway, took third with a time of 45:54.7 while Monte Straley of Wyoming was fourth. Richard Weber of Canada rounded out the top five.

Sharon Firth won her second race in two days and sixth win of the season when she captured the women's 10-kilometer event with a time of 35:34.8.

The Canadian National Team member recorded her fourth straight win in Idaho and has won every race in the western series.

She was followed by Ruth Baxter of the U.S. Ski Team who came in at 35:46.9, and "Angela Schmidt" of Canada who had a time of 37:56.8.

Rounding out the top five were Eileen Dehn of Norway and Celine Giguere of Canada.

Next week will be the final stop in the Dannon Series at Jackson Hole, Wyo., with races Saturday and Sunday. Men will race 30 kilometers next weekend with women traveling 20 kilometers.

McEnroe advances with New Orleans win

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Third-seeded John McEnroe avoided the same fate that had stunned Jimmy Connors the day before and advanced, to the quarterfinals of the $75,000 New Orleans Tennis Festival with a 6-4, 6-2, win over Kim Warwick Thursday.

Connors was eliminated from the tournament Wednesday night by Tom Gullikson, who rebounded from a first set loss to take a 3-6, 6-4, 6-2 decision. The loss ruined a possible showdown between Connors and second-seeded Bjorn Borg.

Borg, who defeated Gene Mayer in straight sets earlier this week, was scheduled to play Dick Stockton in the last of the second-round matches late Thursday.

The winner of Borg-Stockton match was to meet fifth-seeded Brian Gottfried in the quarterfinals Friday. Gottfried advanced earlier Thursday with a 6-3, 7-5 win over Sherwood Stewart.

McEnroe's opponent in Friday's quarterfinals will be Tommie Smit, who defeated Bob Lutz 7-2, 2-6, 7-6 in second-round play. Lutz had advanced to the second round when his opponent, Ili Nastase, was disqualified for unsportsmanlike conduct.

Austin upsets Evert in quarterfinals

NEW YORK — Tracy Austin, winning 10 consecutive games, reached a new age of maturity by stunning her one-time idol, Chris Evert, 6-1, 6-1, Thursday night to join Martina Navratilova in the semifinals of a $275,000 women's tennis championship.

"It was really tough on me the first couple of times I played her," said the 16-year-old Austin, showing little emotion after what may have been the best match of her career. "I was always trying to make too many good shots. Today I just thought of her as anybody else."

Navratilova also earned a day off Friday by winning her second match of the tournament with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Virginia Wade.

Since it is a double elimination tournament, Evert gets another chance at the $100,000 winner's jackpot when she plays Friday night against the winner of Thursday night's final match between Dianne Fegnholtz and Greer Stevens.

Sue Barker also evened her record at 1-1 by beating Wendy Turnbull, 6-4, 6-2, in the opening match of the program. She next meets Wade, with the two Friday night winners moving into the semifinals.

Optimists lead YFCA olympics

TWIN FALLS — The Optimist Club is leading the YFCA service club olympics entering Saturday's final event.

With impressive finishes in the volleyball and table tennis competition this week, the Optimists moved into first place while the Rotary Club fell from first to third. The Lions Club took second place.

Saturday's final event will be a racketball tournament at the Canyon Walls Racket Club beginning at 8 a.m.

The Optimists have racked up 53 points so far, well ahead of the second place Lions who have 39 points. The Rotarians have 22 points while the Kiwanis have only six and the Exchange Club three.

Five points are awarded for a first place finish in both individual and team events with three points for second place and one point for third.

The Optimists picked up 6 points Wednesday night with John Page's first place finish in the individual table tennis competition and a third place finish in the team event.

The Lions took the team portion with the Rotary Club third.

In volleyball last Saturday, the Optimists were the winners with the Rotary second and the Kiwanis third.

Ribbons are awarded to the top three finishers in each event, with the overall winning club taking home a trophy.

Magic Valley aids Ricks nine

REXBURG — Five area baseball players are on the Rick College baseball roster as the Vikings prepare for the upcoming season.

Ricks will open its season today with a doubleheader against the BYU-fresh-in-Prvo. The teams will play two more games Saturday.

Gary Miller of Twin Falls has been named co-captain of the team, and he will also be one of the main pitching hopes for the Vikings.

Joining Miller in the pitching corps are Scott Ehle of Burley and Kelly Ferrin of Rupert.

Tony Brighurst of Rupert will play third base for Ricks while Kerry Van Every of Tupper, a sophomore shortstop, is sidelined for the remainder of the season with a broken leg suffered in a skating mishap.

Ricks will play a 42-game schedule, including eight games with College of Southern Idaho. Four games will be played in Twin Falls with four played in Rexburg, and the team with the best record in the series will represent the region in the northwest regional tournament in Oregon May 17-19.

Ricks will not visit Twin Falls until May 11.

Signups end for free swim

TWIN FALLS — Signups for the YFCA's free learn-to-swim program will end Saturday.

The week of free swimming lessons will be offered during the spring school break, beginning Monday.

Lessons will last one hour beginning at 9 a.m. and concluding at 4:45 p.m. in the YFCA swimming pool.

People are encouraged to sign up as soon as possible to guarantee a preferred hour of swimming.

Rasmussen leads TF golf win

BURLEY — Freshman Dave Rasmussen fired a one-under-par 70 Thursday to lead Twin Falls High School to a golfing victory over Minico, Idaho Falls and host Burley.

Rasmussen was co-medalist with Minico's Greg Tolson.

The Bruins came in with a team total of 292 strokes, well ahead of second place Minico which totaled 321. Idaho Falls came in with 331 and Burley was last at 349.

Another Twin Falls freshman, Steve Meyerhoeffer, shot a one-over-par 72. Rounding out the Bruin scores were Mike Schlaggenhauf with a 74, Bill Long with a 76 and Jim Rasmussen with a 79.

The Bruins also took the junior varsity match with a team score of 324. Minico came in at 368, Idaho Falls at 369 and Burley at 431.

Junior varsity medalist was sophomore Scott Beer, who carded a 74. Gary Baum came in with 77 and Greg Cook with an 86.

Although school will end next week in the Magic Valley, Twin Falls golfers will not get a break. The Bruins will host the eastern SIC schools at the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course next Thursday.

Five years in jail for Hayes

DALLAS (UPI) — Convicted on cocaine distribution charges, former Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Bob Hayes was ordered to spend five years in the state prison despite pleas from prominent sports figures.

Hayes was allowed to remain free until the formal sentencing order was actually filed by the judge with the clerk's office.

Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach was among those asking Dist. Judge Richard Mays to spare Hayes from the ordeal of prison. But the judge sentenced Hayes to two five-year prison sentences and a seven-year probation sentence on related drug charges. Hayes had been convicted of the charges last week.

The judge ordered that the sentences be served concurrently, meaning Hayes is to spend five years behind bars unless he is released earlier because of good behavior.

Staubach told the judge Hayes should not be sent to prison and was a citizen with good potential but fell in with a group of people who influenced him adversely.

Hayes was arrested by police during a raid at his north Dallas apartment last year.

CSI opens track season

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's men's track team invades Utah Saturday for its first taste of outdoor competition.

The Eagles, who missed their scheduled opener at Boise State last week due to a combination of several things, will meet the three major Utah schools, Idaho State, Wyoming and possibly more Saturday afternoon at Brigham Young University.

Coch Kari Kleinkopf said the CSI women would not run this week and would open their season the following Saturday at Idaho State while the CSI men are running at Weber State.

"We're expecting some heavy competition," the coach said of Saturday's opener. "Right now I'm not looking for any great things because we're in the middle of the spring break, missed that track meet last weekend and the weather last week wasn't conducive to good workouts. But we've had three hard workouts this week and I think we're starting to come back."

The coach said he was looking forward to the running of the 5,000 meters, the longest event planned Saturday day. "BYU has that runner who beat Jairo (Correa of CSI) at the midline last month and I expect those two will run an excellent time," he said.

Kleinkopf added "we're trying to put two relay teams together for the first time this year (including indoor) so it will be the first time we've tried a sprint relay."

One investment that always guarantees a high rate of return.

Six teams to run in TF track meet

TWIN FALLS — Long time track watchers will be seeing new schedule events when the track in-season kicks off at 2:45 p.m. today at Bruin Stadium.

Answering the questions of fans for the past several years, the program now is started off with the two-mile run, which will be run at the same time as the field events. The mile run will move to the old two-mile spot — second to last event — and the half-mile will take the No. 3 spot in the schedule. The remainder of the events will stay in usual sequence.

Part of the reason for moving the two-mile was the addition of that event to the girls schedule. It was felt the girls and boys, running consecutive two-miles, would cut about 30 minutes out of the meet if left in its usual place. Since distance people are allowed to double up, the shifting of the events — plus a good break between the end of the two-mile and the start of running events — will allow the athletes recovery time.

The girls format also takes on two new looks, one being the two-mile and the other being replacement of the 75-yard dash with the 300-yard intermediate hurdles. The girls hurdles are the same distance as the boys except the barriers are six inches lower.

Wood River has joined the field, giving the meet six participating teams. The others are Buhl, Burley, Blackfoot, Jerome and Twin Falls.

There are a lot of questions to be answered among all of them. Wood River Coach Bob Shay believes this year's Wolverine edition could be the best in several seasons — "but with Buhl and Jerome I don't know if we can win a first in (A-2) district," he said. "We'll be happy with a bunch of seconds, though, because those other two teams have some great individuals and being second to them will mean we are pretty good in some events."

Buhl Coach Hank Savage tells his fans not to expect too much from the Indians.

"Our kids have had a great year winning state in football and basketball but because of the playoffs and the tournaments they haven't had much time off. We aren't pressuring any of them to come out. We feel like most of them will be out when they feel ready to come out. When they all show up, we should be a pretty good track team," he says.

Twin Falls and Jerome, who have been battling among the best in the state for the past several years, appear to be down a little this year and the word from Blackfoot is the Broncos won't have a crackerjack team by any means.

Host Coach Jerry Kleinkopf said he is expecting good performances from senior Pat Allison and junior Ken Stagemeyer. "Allison has been looking good in the quarter and I think he'll have a good season there," the coach says.

In the girls division, Twin Falls appears to have the upper hand with a trackload of returning veterans from the state championship team. Jerome will be strong among the girls. The Tigers have good distance folks returning again.

Cunningham resigns UCLA post

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Gary Cunningham resigned Thursday as head basketball coach at UCLA, saying he had coped with the pressures of the job but needed more "freedom of time" than the position allows.

Cunningham, 38, a former John Wooden assistant whose teams posted a 50-8 record the past two years, said he decided at mid-season to give up the job this year but did not disclose his decision to anyone except J.D. Morgan, the UCLA athletic director.

He also announced that he has agreed to take an administrative position at UCLA, but said he could not reveal his new job until next week.

Bob Fisher, assistant athletic director, said UCLA officials have not offered the coaching position to anyone yet but said there were several potential candidates and predicted a new coach would be named next week.

"I don't know who my successor will be," Cunningham said. "I will be available for any help or consultation that they may ask of me."

Asked for his personal preference, Cunningham replied:

"I would endorse Larry Farmer," one of his two assistants. His other assistant, Jim Harlick, was hired this week as head coach at Pepperdine University.

Cunningham said there are "several other candidates" for the job, mentioning among them Larry Brown, the former coach of the Denver Nuggets, who quit the NBA last month on grounds of tension and poor health.

"I want a different lifestyle," Cunningham told reporters who asked why he was giving up his post. "The job has become very demanding. It just took me away from home an awful lot."

"I only had five weekends free last year out of the 52. I just wanted more freedom of time. My family is the main reason for this change."

Cunningham said he first began thinking about resigning last fall and made a firm decision on Feb. 12, after the Bruins beat University of Southern California in overtime and then downed Notre Dame at South Bend. He said he then informed Morgan of his plans.

"Nobody else knew," he said. "It was between myself and L.D. I talked to my team last night and told them about this. I also told them I loved every one of them."

Staub asks boss to reconsider

HOUSTON (UPI) — Detroit Tigers designated hitter Rusty Staub wrote his boss a letter Thursday reiterating his demand to obtain a contract extension so that he could end his retirement.

"My preference is to play baseball," said Staub, 35, in a telephone interview a day after announcing his retirement because of what he called the "inflexibility" of Tigers' President-General Manager Jim Campbell.

The letter followed a Wednesday

phone conversation in which, Staub said, his boss told him: "Enjoy the restaurant business."

Staub, owner of a New York restaurant, has said unless he was given an extension to his present two-year pact he would enter the restaurant business fulltime and end his career during which he has played with the Houston Astros, New York Mets, Montreal Expos and Detroit.

Last year, Staub hit .273 with 24 home runs and 121 RBI as a designated hitter.

Staub read part of the letter he was writing.

"I remain hopeful," Staub said, "that you will give consideration to further negotiations so that I can remain with the Detroit Tiger organization. If not, requesting that I be traded to another ballclub so that my talents can be more appreciated, does not seem too much to ask."

Bronco's Alzado to fight Ali

DENVER (UPI) — The Denver Broncos apparently know who the money will be on when defensive end Lyle Alzado meets heavyweight champ Muhammad Ali in an exhibition match this spring.

The Broncos have demanded a $1 million insurance policy be taken on Alzado before he steps into the ring against the 6-foot-6-inch Sports Arena in Denver.

Broncos' general manager Fred Gehrke said Wednesday night he didn't know until he returned from recent National Football League meetings in Hawaii that Alzado had agreed to box four rounds with Ali.

Upon learning of the agreement, Broncos general manager Fred Gehrke contacted Denver promoter Lyle Pedersen about the insurance policy.

"It's not that we're against it (the bout), but if (the Alzado) broke his leg, we'd get a defensive tackle... It would cost us a lot to replace him," Gehrke said Wednesday night. "I'm sure that if Ali planned to play in an NFL game, his managers would take some steps to protect themselves."

Gehrke said Pedersen assured him that insuring Alzado "doesn't seem to be a problem."

Pedersen said the policy could be purchased through an International known firm for "about $5,000."

The Ali-Alzado exhibition is scheduled for late April or early May, but the exact date hasn't been set because of the possibility that the Denver Nuggets may play at McNichols Arena in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Tickets for the bout will not be available until a date is set.

House allocates money to F&G

BOISE — Outdoorsmen drew support from the Idaho House Thursday, as that lawmakers body passed almost without debate appropriations for the Department of Fish and Game and the Department of Parks and Recreation.

Senate Bill 1206, the Fish and Game Department appropriation, allocates approximately $10.7 million for the next fiscal year. SB 1206 passed 59-2.

Senate Bill 1207, the Parks and Recreation Department appropriation, allocates approximately $4.4 million for the next fiscal year. It passed 62-5.

Zarley has early lead in richest PGA event

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Kermit Zarley, a journeyman pro who hasn't won in seven years, turned in a record-tying, 6-under-par 66 Thursday to grab the first round lead in the $440,000 Tournament Players Championship, richest stop on the PGA tour.

But the 37-year-old Texan was only one stroke ahead of the fearsome threesome of defending champion Jack Nicklaus, U.S. Open champ Andy North and 1977 PGA champ Lanny Wadkins, and he expressed doubts he or anyone else will find the usually tough Sawgrass course so easy the remainder of the week.

More than 50 of the golfers broke par Thursday and 20 of them were in the 60s. That is about double the number for all four rounds in last year's TPC when Nicklaus' winning score was 1-over-par 289.

"When they start putting in some tough placements, it's going to be another story," said Zarley, who has made the cut in only one previous TPC — last year when he tied for 28th place.

"I don't know how many more days we'll play like this at Sawgrass," he said. "The course has never played more fairly. The wind didn't blow and the greens were as soft as we've seen them here. When the wind is blowing, and they don't count it on the scale around here until it hits 30 or 40 miles per hour, you've got a different ballgame."

High schools need trained team doctors

CHICAGO (UPI) — The recovery period from injuries to prep athletes could be reduced if the nation's high schools spent more money to recruit and educate school doctors, a Chicago physician with nearly two decades of sports medicine experience said Tuesday.

Dr. Richard Shaw, an official of Blue Cross-Blue Shield in Chicago, said high school athletic programs have advanced far more rapidly than schools' ability to provide medical care for their athletes. He said an extensive training program, possibly funded by the states, could help provide the needed experience for high school doctors and nurses.

"I think we can cut down the recovery period from many of the injuries if we have the people at the scene who know what they are doing," Shaw said in an interview. "I'm not saying we can prevent injuries this way, but having the properly trained doctor who knows about sports medicine is a must."

Shaw said the problems of treating prep athlete injuries have grown in the past two or three years because of increased participation by girls in high school athletics.

"Most of the injuries to women are caused by improper conditioning but many schools don't have the people there who are familiar enough with the female structure to properly diagnose a recovery period," Shaw said.

Shaw, who spent 17 years with a Hartford, Conn., insurance company working with athletic medical injuries, said problems with trainers and physicians are not confined to small, rural schools. He said many large city schools in the U.S. with sophisticated programs do not always have the type of medical personnel needed for today's athletes.

"Some schools are fortunate enough to have orthopedists on hand or doctors with enough training who serve the school on a part-time basis, but many do not," Shaw said. "Of course, we are talking about money, but the schools who have the choice whether to cut back their athletic programs or not are the ones who are most likely to be unwise in cutting back the medical side."

Shaw said Wednesday a conference will examine possible state funding to aid schools in providing money for training seminars or trips for school physicians to attend facilities like Northwestern University's Center for Sports Medicine.

Yaz finally inks contract

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (UPI) — Carl Yazdzemski, who one month ago threatened to sit out the season, Thursday signed a two-year contract extension for what club termed an "increase."

Yazdzemski, who turns 40 in August, was in the final year of his contract. But, upset with long-term money given to Jim Rice and others, the Red Sox captain demanded his estimated $300,000 a year pact be extended and increased. The Red Sox obliged.

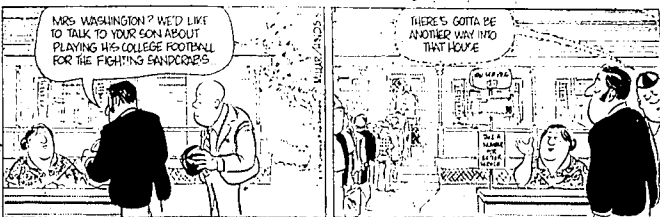

General Manager Haywood Sullivan would not release details of the two-year pact, which runs through the 1981 season. One published report had the 18-year veteran seeking $2.1 million over the next three years.

"It has always been club policy not to reveal the terms of any contract," Sullivan said. "But I would be less than candid if I said the new agreement did not include an increase."

Yazdzemski, who began his career with the Red Sox in 1961, said he was "completely happy" with the contract extension. "I never considered either giving up baseball or playing for any other club," he said.

Paterno eyes college grid playoffs

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Penn State Football Coach Joe Paterno has renewed his call for a four-team college football playoff involving winners of major bowl games.

"Granted, some people would be unhappy if they weren't picked, but it would be good for college football," Paterno told a final B'n'w gathering Wednesday night. "College basketball has grown tremendously because of the playoffs."

"People won't even look at golf or the NBA (National Basketball Association) on television this weekend," Paterno said.

Paterno, last year's Football Writers Association of America coach of the year, acknowledged Penn State's quest for a national championship has been hindered by a general attitude among voters in the national polls that the Lions' schedules have lacked strength.

Although he disagrees with the generalization, Paterno said he has beefed up his team's schedule anyway — including this year's clash with Nebraska at Lincoln.

"Because we're an independent, we're trying to branch out and play a national schedule," Paterno said. "We aren't bound by a conference commitment."

"We want to be a national institution because Penn State has 200,000 alumni," Paterno said. "Thirteen years ago, we had a 45,000-seat stadium and we couldn't attract the top teams."

Indiana students go wild

...INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — The parties lasted all night. As Indiana edged Purdue, 53-52, for the National Invitation Tournament championship in New York Wednesday night, the celebrations started on the Hoosier campus. Showalter Fountain, on the heart of the campus, which beset by a sea of frolicking students. Hundreds of them headed for downtown, shouting such slogans as "We're No. 1," and "Bring on Indiana State," a reference to the unbecome and No. 1-ranked Syracuse who are in the final round of the NCAA tournament. Some rowdiness and violence accompanied the celebrations. Police said one car was overturned and burst into flames when a firecracker ignited gasoline. At least three students were hospitalized, though none was seriously hurt. Four students were arrested for disorderly conduct.

Smithsonian honors Sons of Pioneers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Smithsonian Institution has invited The Sons of the Pioneers to give a concert Sunday, March 25, to honor them for enriching the national cultural heritage through their contributions to the world of country and western music.

A spokesperson for the Smithsonian's Division of Performing Arts said the Sons of the Pioneers are considered a "national treasure."

Dale Warren, leader of the Sons of the Pioneers, said in a recent interview in Phoenix, "We're very thrilled to be performing in Washington, D.C. on March 25. This honor from the Smithsonian Institution is for all the members of the Sons of the Pioneers... the past members, the members who are present today, and the future members."

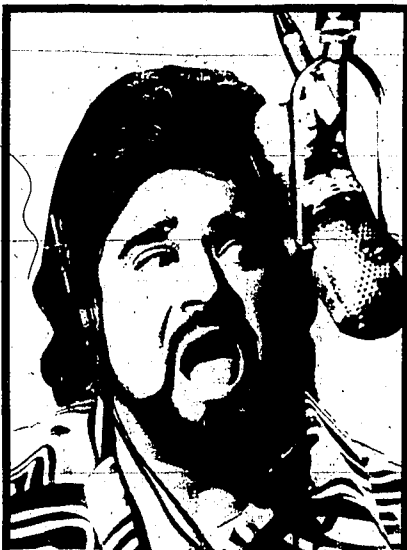

"We plan to continue the Pioneers for at least another 45 years (the group began in 1933) so that future generations can share our Western heritage and lore," he said.

Warren, a member of the Sons of the Pioneers since 1952, added, "Each member of the Pioneers, from Roy Rogers (founder), Bob Nolan, Tim Spencer, and the original group that laid the foundation; through the men like Lloyd Perryman who have continued the work, deserves credit and are equally proud of what the Sons of the Pioneers have done to preserve Western music and our Western heritage."

Critics have praised the current quintet — Warren, Rusty Richards, Rome Johnson, Roy Latham and Billy Liebert — for their refreshing and exciting sounds and for carrying on the distinctive harmony and tradition of the original group. Like their famous theme song by Bob Nolan, "Tumbling Tumbleweeds," the Sons of the Pioneers continue a seemingly timeless tradition.

Red Belly Pacu piranhas are the tank's bullies

Diane Hagaman/Times-News

Catch George K's Fish Tank Revue!

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "Look at him, mama. He wants to get out of the tank," the little girl exclaimed, pointing at the aquarium in George K's restaurant.

As she pointed, a brown frog hopped near the aerator in one corner of the large fish tank, poking his head above the surface of the water, scrambling as if to climb the smooth glass.

The child and her mother were part of a crowd waiting to eat lunch at the busy restaurant. But waiting for a place to sit isn't such a bore since the eatery hired some live entertainment.

Now hungry diners can take their minds off growling stomachs by watching the brown Pipi Pipi (pronounced peepa peepa) frog. Lying at the bottom of the tank, the amphibian may suddenly drift to the surface for a breath of air and then settle back to rest on the bluish gravel at the bottom.

As the crowd stunts in the foyer, a Silver Arowana fish silbers fluidly around the 350-gallon aquarium just below the surface.

George K's tank even boasts a close relative to the dangerous flesh-eating piranha called the Red Belly Pacu piranha straight from the muddy waters of the Amazon River.

"We try to get away from the normal run-of-the-mill type fish," Kerry Kawamoto, part-owner of George K's said. "It has been quite a conversation piece."

Kawamoto said he installed the fish tank at the urging of Ken Davis, owner of the Fish Bowl in Twin Falls. Davis wanted an advertising gimmick and the public exposure at the restaurant has been a boost to his pet store business.

George K's leases the tank, but owns the fish since they are a perishable item. The restaurant feeds the fish fortified beef hearts, nightcrawlers, shrimp in salt brine, lettuce and even live goldfish.

Davis maintains the tank to make sure the fish are healthy. He especially watches for "ick." Fish with ick get white slimy spots on their sides and soon die. They can contaminate other fish in the tank.

Only two fish have disappeared since the tank was installed, Davis said.

"Most fish will eat anything they can swallow," Davis said. "We had an electric eel in there that was eating other fish. We had to take him out."

Compatibility has been a problem with other fish in the display, too.

A fresh water stingray could not get along with the fish in the tank and had to be removed. The ray lost out. Another fish bit off his barbed stinger.

Feeding time, too has proved to be exciting, according to Kawamoto. The Silver Arowana, a long fish with captivating opalescent scales is a voracious eater and has jumped out of the tank several times while going eagerly after his dinner.

The Arowana is a food fish for South American natives, like trout in this country, Davis said. The graceful creature has a mouth like the tailgate of a pickup truck and allows its young to take refuge in its mouth between greedily gobbled meals.

When natives along the Amazon gaff an Arowana, they check the mouth for babies. If the parent's mouth is full, they chop its head off and dump the young into a bucket to be sold to exporters who sell them to American wholesalers.

The smallest Arowana Davis keeps in his store is priced at $13.50. A slightly larger one, about 10 inches in length, is worth $40.

The one in George K's fish tank has been growing. At its present length of slightly over a foot it is worth an estimated $100, Davis said.

The Pipi Pipi frog hails from Suriname and can grow to a foot in length. It is a muddy brown color with a grotesque flat head. Its eyes are like tiny beads glued to the pointed beak. An aquatic frog which never ventures onto land, it eats live food like goldfish and other small fish.

The Red Belly Pacu piranha is the vegetarian counterpart of its meat-eating movie-star cousin. It is more vicious than most fish and sometimes attacks its fellow tank dwellers. It eats goldfish, too. The Pacu has been relatively peaceful in the restaurant milieu. Some Pacus grow to such immense size that aquarium owners must kill them to get them out of the tank, Davis said.

Aside from the three exotic stars in the tank, a Clown Knife fish from Malaysia, several angel fish, some iridescent shark fish and some pink-fellied Chaetodon also swim about for visitors to watch. In addition, there is a fresh water tortoise which visitors rarely see. It spends most of its time buried in the colored gravel on the floor of the aquarium.

Then there is the what the tank owners call the sanitation department. The Peruvian Plectostomus, whose name means "twisted mouth," sucks on the side of the tank and on the rocks to clean off algae and dirt. The Geophagus Jurupari, a pale fish with orange dotted lines around its mouth, helps keep the tank clean by repeatedly taking mouthfuls of gravel, sucking off the dirt and spitting out the tiny rocks. Understandably its name means "earth eater."

Though the aquarium has brought more curious customers to Davis's Fish Bowl on Filer Avenue West, Kawamoto said he notices little difference in his restaurant business since installing the heavy brick and concrete base for the bulky tank.

But he said the hundreds of dollars he has invested in the fish have paid off as entertainment for his customers.

"We were busy before we put it in," he said. "But it complements the front foyer area, and it has been a crowd pleaser. I can't think of anything more soothing to look at."

Silent films' historical moments threatened

By VICTOR WILSON

Newhouse News Service

Veteran film historian Kevin Brownlow has come up with a brand-new slant on the value and accuracy of movies produced before the days of sound.

Collectors ignore them and few archivists preserve them, Brownlow reports. But the circumstance of having been filmed when they were transforms many a two-reeler or crude documentary into priceless, vivid relics of our past, he says.

Who would dispute that early Western films were much closer to the frontier era and reflected it more accurately than Westerns of later vintage?

Writing in "The War, The West and the Wilderness" (Knopf, $27.50), Brownlow says: "I found more substantiation for this theory than I could, ever have Lought possible."

He reports one example he came across in his search through archives, private collections and stock-shot libraries of a film made in 1908. It was filmed in a real Western town, featured a real outlaw, and was directed by a real frontier marshal.

He reports also on silent feature films shot abroad. One, "Hearts of the World," with its footage of World War I, brought that conflict alive for movie-goers, Brownlow says.

The same was true of "Isn't Life Wonderful," shot in Germany. It depicted the financial collapse of the 1920s. Another, a documentary titled "Grass," was the amazing record of the migration of a Persian tribe.

Films like these need to be examined with new eyes, Brownlow says. He reports growing use of silent film footage in education as well as for entertainment.

He relates the tale of a brash newspaper American who eluded his German officer battlefield guides, set up his tripod, and began grinding out film of Kaiser Wilhelm in 1915.

No slouch when it came to publicity, Wilhelm ignored his horrified officers, posed jauntily, then saluted the Yankee cameraman with nerve enough to snap an emperor without permission.

As for the Westerns, it is still possible to "stumble across unique glimpses of Western history," Brownlow writes. He cites a film of the battle of Wounded Knee made in 1913.

Its cast included Gen. Nelson A. Miles, commander of the famed 7th Cavalry in the battle; two other commanders; Buffalo Bill Cody; and some Indians of the tribe that nearly was wiped out.

Miles, who played himself in the movie, was also technical director. He said: "They want me to make sure that everything they do is historically correct." A quarrel over one detail ended a long friendship between the general and Buffalo Bill.

When the movie was finished, the federal government withheld its release, presumably because the Indian side was too accurate. Then edited versions were released. The Bureau of Indian Affairs destroyed the master copy, Brownlow writes. Documentary film-makers have been called:

"someone who went somewhere, saw something, and brought it back for us to look at." Their goal is to make pictures of actual events.

Reviews were scanty. And it wasn't until World War II that the genre peaked, subsiding again until rescued by television. Now the most exotic places on earth have become "well traveled," thanks to sound, color and lightweight equipment.

Meanwhile, Brownlow says, silent movies were printed on film laden with nitrate with deadly explosive power. Their stable storage raises problems, and many containers of film are being destroyed, the author reports.

"A wrong guess," Brownlow writes, "and more precious history hits the junk pile."

But he says he knows of no real solution.

Phyllis Hyman's all-around pop

By GEORGE KANZLER JR.

Newhouse News Service

"Somewhere in my lifetime" Phyllis Hyman (Arista). Phyllis Hyman made her first waves as a vocalist on Norman Conners's slick pop-jazz albums. She's even better than those brief outings would lead us to believe.

To be blunt, Phyllis Hyman is a complete pop singer, capable of bringing heat to funk, sophistication to disco, and dramatic sensitivity to ballads. She has a warm, velvety tone brimming with seduction on slower tunes, but also can be sassy and hip.

Phyllis Hyman does a variety of material, but always manages to shine through with her own voice and put a very personal stamp on the song. That voice can instill itself through the busiest disco arrangement, or glow over simple piano backgrounds. Her treatment of "Kiss You 'All Over" brings new sensual implications to that overly familiar top 40 hit.

MICHAEL CAINE
... in a plain wrapper

AH, FAME: Actor Michael Caine told British reporter William Hickey that he loved living in the U.S. but sorely missed the privacy he had in England. Caine said that he could no longer buy sexy books anonymously. Last time he tried in a sleazy book store on Manhattan's 42nd St. he got as far as the cashier who looked over and said: "Well, look who we've got here."

SINGING SOPRANO: A famous rock star is contemplating a major change in his life style. The rock star has been investigating the possibilities of having sex-change surgery and becoming a woman.

Q: How come we don't see more stories about Eric Roberts, the dynamite actor who was in "King of the Gypsies"? — H.H., N.Y.

A: Eric's agent is very choosy — in fact, very cautious when it comes to what magazines and newspapers he'll let him be in. Press agents for "King of the Gypsies" recently set up Eric for a big interview and cover photo for "After Dark" magazine. But Eric's agent found out about it at the last minute and canceled the whole thing saying he didn't think it was appropriate for Eric to be featured in the publication. Eric got off the hook by telling the magazine he had a dental appointment.

ERIC ROBERTS

Gossip X

Q: I loved seeing Sylvester Stallone in "Rocky" on TV, and want to know if there will be a sequel. — C.A., Philadelphia.

A: Not only will there be a sequel — Rocky II will be out in June — but Sly Stallone would like to do a "Rocky III." Apparently, the hum reaction to his last two movies, "E.L.S.T." and "Paradise Alley," both by critics and the public, has convinced Sly to return to the mother lode. So we think you'll be seeing "Rocky III" in the near future.

Q: Has Faye Dunaway done anything since the film "Eyes of Laura Mars"? It seems we haven't seen her in anything for some time. — C.H., San Jose, Calif.

A: Faye is taking her rather sweet time about choosing her next film project. She can afford to, since she got $750,000 to fill in at the last minute as the female lead in MGM's "The Champ" remake. That movie will be out soon and we bet it will be a real heart-grabber, although Faye's part opposite Jon Voigt isn't the most sympathetic.

Q: What's the status of John Travolta's movie career since his celebrated walkout from his starring role in "American Gigolo"? Didn't that hurt him seriously? — R.F., Akron, Ohio.

A: John's walkout didn't hurt his career very much, but neither was it a serious blow. John's vast popularity still enables him to call the shots on future projects, and how they'll be done. He's starring in a movie version of magazine writer Aaron Latham's story, "Urban Cowboy." John is supposed to play a factory worker who rides a mechanical horse in a Houston bar for kicks at night. But the script is being extensively rewritten at John's insistence. He has his own ideas about the part — ideas that the producers will no doubt go along with.

Q: Saw Brook Adams in "The Invasion of the Body Snatchers" and thought she was terrific. When is her next movie coming out? — N.M., Salt Lake City.

A: She's in a whole batch of movies coming out soon, including "Cuba" with Sean Connery, and "A Man, A Woman, and a Bank" with Donald Sutherland.

How is it possible to write political satire in a world where some evangelical peanut farmer named Jimmy, with a faith-healing sister and a gross, beer-swilling brother, comes up from the Deep South with a couple of punks named Ham and Jody, says he wants to have "an intimate relationship with the American people" and winds up sitting in the Oval Office?

The satire is built so intrinsically into the situation — and indeed the society — that efforts to rip it apart fall flat virtually every time they are attempted.

Yet Joseph Heller, in his third masterful novel, accomplishes the comic devastation of our political structure as he demystifies the similarly self-satisfying world of the military in "Catch-22," not through spoof but through the continuous stripping away of all illusions of rationality within the system, laying bare its fundamental, clinical insanity. He is the Jonathan Swift of our age — and there have been no true inheritors of that role since Swift himself.

Yet the political satire, which incidentally is hysterically funny, certainly the peer of his first black comic masterpiece, is but a layer of this book, one of several. Like the Army in "Catch-22," Washington is only a metaphor for the larger sphere of American life as it enters the '80s.

But to meet the remarkable Ralph Newsome, the principal high-level bureaucrat, who brings Dr. Bruce Gold, the still wandering Jew who narrates this novel, to Washington for a major presidential appointment.

Speaking of an article published by Gold called "Nothing Succeeds as Planned," Newsome quashes, "I can't tell you how you're bogging our minds. If nothing succeeds as planned — and you really present such a strong argument — then the President has just the excuse he needs for not doing anything...."

"We're having photocopies made. We want everyone in government to read it, although we've stamped it top secret so nobody can."

Asked whether the President has read the article, Newsome replies characteristically, "Oh, I'm positive he has...although I can't be sure." And so it goes, the language — and thought — of diplomacy raised to its ultimate level, which is clearly why nothing succeeds as planned, which is the "catch" in this novel.

Gold, the 48-year-old Jewish intellectual, teacher and writer of articles for obscure journals, also revolutionizes the language and thought of the nation's capital by introducing another phrase: "I don't know."

And the comic passages that result from that tiny bombshell also are worth the price of the book.

Along the way, Heller does quite a job on the New York literary intellectual world in the course of some amazing scenes.

7 Myths About Growing Old

Many stereotypes surround old age and most of us fear it, but is aging a gateway to misery? Not according to TV's Hugh Downs, who's tired of this society's clichés and myths about growing old. He debunks common fallacies such as, your I.Q. level will plummet; you'll become senile; retirement will shorten your life. Read all about it in FAMILY WEEKLY.

TV's on-ramp to live political problems

"The Advocates," PBS's award winning public affairs debate series enjoys its seventh season on public television this spring.

Focusing on significant political questions in current domestic and foreign policy, the 1979 edition of "The Advocates" will be produced in association with the Institute of Politics at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government. The weekly series will be taped in the Forum of the Kennedy School's brand new complex in Cambridge, Mass., and deals with such topical issues as covert activities of the CIA, freedom of the press, and minimum competency testing in high schools.

This season, pre-recorded material such as man-in-the-street interviews and news clips will be included to supplement and illustrate the questions being debated.

"The Advocates" presents the pros and cons of the question in a format that combines courtroom confrontation with balanced debate. The advocates argue their respective points of view, usually from a conservative or liberal standpoint, and support their cases through testimony of expert "witnesses" who are subject to cross-examination by the opposing advocate.

This year, "The Advocates" feature a core group who appear on a regular basis. The witnesses will have clearly defined roles as either lead or rebuttal witnesses in the debate.

Already lined up as advocates for the 1979 season are Lewis Crampton, former Commissioner of the Massachusetts Department of Community Affairs; Massachusetts State Representative Barney Frank (D-Boston); Boston lawyer Margaret Marshall, conservative media commentator and Republican Senatorial candidate Avi Nelson; Harvard Law Professor Charles Nesson; and Renault Robinson, executive director of the Afro-American Patrolman's Association in Chicago.

As in past series, the home and audience will have the unique opportunity to express their own opinion on current, unresolved issues. At the end of the program TV viewers are invited to send in a "yes" or "no" vote on the question under consideration. "The Advocates" staff reads every letter and forwards the tally to Congress, the White House and others interested in the result.

How To Deal With An Unhappy Marriage

Many persons may agree that an unhappy marriage is better broken up, but how many are strong enough to face divorce? This week one woman shares the fears, questions, doubts and learning processes that take place after divorce. Her experience taught her that being alone is really an adventure in getting to know oneself and that separation is far better than imprisonment in a bad marriage. Learn about the life-changing revolutions a divorce can bring in this weeks Family Weekly.
