

Federal government may 'go out of business' Tuesday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal government will be unable to meet its financial obligations next Tuesday unless Congress approves a bill to raise the national debt ceiling, it was announced Friday.

"In effect, we'll be out of business," a Treasury spokesman said.

The Treasury, which already has postponed five monetary bill offerings because of the debt bill delay, postponed its weekly auction of Treasury bills as well as the sale of U.S. savings bonds.

The Treasury's money woes come from the failure of Congress to pass legislation to increase the temporary national debt ceiling from the current $798 billion to $830 billion.

Both the Senate and the House have passed such legislation, but the Senate attached budget-balancing language that forced the two bills to be reconciled.

House Democratic leaders have attempted to get the membership to approve the Senate version, but Republicans are pushing hard for a balanced budget rider that is even stronger than the one in the Senate bill.

The bill is scheduled to be considered in the House Monday.

The Treasury said that the only other time in history a weekly bill auction was suspended came Dec. 1, 1973 — and for the same reason, failure of Congress to extend the debt limit.

A spokesman for the Social Security Administration said $8 billion worth of April Social Security checks will be the mailboxes of Americans on Tuesday. The spokesman refused to speculate what would happen if Congress fails to pass the debt limit increase.

A spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service said the agency still is sending out income tax refunds.

In the face of impending money shortages, the Treasury announced six moves:

- The regular weekly auction of $6 billion in Treasury bills, normally held each Monday, will be postponed.
- All sales of U.S. savings bonds will be suspended Monday.
- A department spokesman said cash projections confirm "that without an increase in the temporary debt ceiling, the Treasury will be unable to meet its obligations on Tuesday, April 3."
- All the Treasury's funds in tax and loan investment accounts at commercial banks were called in to "maximize operating balances at Federal Reserve Banks."

- Available securities in the Treasury's Exchange Stabilization Fund have been redeemed in order to allow the Treasury to borrow approximately $3 billion from the Federal Reserve without exceeding the current debt ceiling.
- The Treasury asked the Federal Reserve to accelerate by one day its regular monthly payment of earnings of $700 million to the Treasury.
- Beginning Monday, cash inflows into the Social Security, Civil Service and other trust funds will not earn interest.

Melt-down fears raised

Engineers try to cool hot reactor

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Thousands of residents packed up and fled their homes near the Three Mile Island power plant Friday while nuclear engineers sought a way to shut down its overheated reactor in the next few days without setting off a catastrophic "melt-down."

Officials said the reactor had stabilized late Friday and there was "no immediate danger," but critical decisions would have to be made in the next few days to find the safest means of shutting down the reactor and keeping the worst U.S. nuclear power plant crisis from turning into a nuclear nightmare.

After a day of conflicting reports about the severity of the accident, Gov. Richard Thornburgh Friday night said there was no plan for a full evacuation of the area — although contingency plans exist.

Earlier, he did urge pregnant women and pre-school children, who might be particularly susceptible to low-level radiation, to leave their homes if they lived within a five-mile radius of the plant. The order was issued after an uncontrolled Friday morning radiation leak from the plant.

Thornburgh canceled effective at midnight, an appeal to some 500,000 residents within a 10-mile radius of the damaged nuclear plant to stay indoors.

In Washington, Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials acknowledged they will have to make unprecedented decisions in the next few days to complete the plant shutdown and avert a melt-down.

"Depending on which options are taken and what changes are made, we can get the (nuclear) core into trouble," said Dudley Thompson, a senior official in the NRC's office of inspection.

"We are faced with a decision within a few days rather than hours," he said.

Thompson stressed the chances of a total melt-down — which would send a lethal radioactive cloud over an area of many square miles — were "minuscule." But he said there was a chance of a partial melt-down which he said could be contained within the plant and not emit deadly radiation.

The most nerve-wracking moment will occur when plant workers try to remove a troublesome bubble of steam, 15 or 20 feet wide, from the top of the reactor so they can finish cooling it down, Thompson said.

The NRC said it has sent eight senior officials to the plant as advisers.

Taking cover

Despite promises that residents are safe near the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, Catherine Mayberry of Middletown won't even take her one-year-old daughter, Kimberly, out to the car without covering her head with a blanket. "I don't want anything to get on her," she said.

Melt-down: the ultimate nuclear risk

Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) said Friday afternoon the crippled reactor at Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island atomic power plant faces "the ultimate risk of melt-down" and that the entire population within five miles of the plant may eventually have to be evacuated.

"There's evidence of severe damage to the reactor fuel," said Brian Grimes, a top official of the NRC Office of Nuclear Regulation. "If we lose the coolant going to the fuel, we face a melting of the core," he said here.

NRC officials presently at the plant believe the reactor will be different, he added.

He said the threat is posed by a bubble containing lethal radioactive gases — between 15 to 20 feet in diameter — that is inside the reactor and could increase in size as heat and pressure within the reactor are lowered, leaving the core containing uranium pellets without vital cooling water.

The NRC, he said, must decide within the next day or two, rather than hours, on a method to cool down the super-heated reactor. "If there's even a small chance of a melt-down, we will recommend that precautions are taken to evacuate the population."

A melt-down, considered the most serious type of nuclear catastrophe, occurs when a reactor core loses its cooling water and causes temperatures to increase high enough to melt right through the thick protective concrete shell of the containment building.

No such accident has ever happened, but if it did, NRC officials have said, it could contaminate many square miles of land and conceivably kill thousands of people.

NRC officials said there would be sufficient time to evacuate the entire population if that becomes necessary. No nuclear blast as might result from a melt-down, but it could trigger "explosions" that could cause the release of large amounts of radioactivity.

"It's possible that as much as 25 percent of the fuel has already been damaged," Grimes said.

He said that continued releases of radioactive gases, such as xenon, caused "unprecedented" levels of radiation above the plant that reached 1,200 millirems an hour. The levels on the ground were reported to be between 20 and 30 millirems which could pose a danger if they are not dispersed by wind.

The gases spewing from the auxiliary building are "uncontrolled" and could continue to pour into the environment. For the next few days, he said.

Officials at the plant are trying to transfer the radioactive coolant water back into the primary building containing the reactor. Some pockets of gas exist within the cooling system, further complicating efforts to hold down the temperatures and pressure within the reactor. He said that only "low levels" of the gas were leaking through the containment building's concrete walls.

U.S. criticizes Libya's air raid against Tanzania

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Tanzanian forces massed at the edge of Kampala Friday and residents said the surrender of President Idi Amin's Ugandan capital appeared imminent.

In a desperate attempt to turn the tide of battle in Amin's favor, Libya made an abortive bombing run against Tanzania, sending one of its supersonic Soviet-built warplanes on an airstrike against Mwanza. The United States, which said about 100 Americans live in the area, warned Libya its air raid was "irresponsible" and a "serious escalation" of the conflict.

The rebel government-in-exile awaiting Amin's downfall said it had gained the allegiance of Uganda's defense minister, who reportedly switched sides with a number of troops.

There was no definite word of Amin's whereabouts. His opponents reported Thursday that he had fled to northern Uganda.

Official Kampala radio claimed the Ugandan army was "launching a general attack to surround and destroy the enemy," and Lt. Broadcaster what it said was Amin's call to all "who were not cowards" to stand and fight.

The rebels' government-in-exile said it could take over Kampala at will, but its forces were holding back, "giving enough time for innocent citizens and foreigners to leave."

The center of Kampala was reportedly deserted as thousands of residents fled the town for the north of the country or toward the Kenyan border, carrying their possessions on their heads or in makeshift pushcarts.

Residents of the capital said a combined force of 29,000 Tanzanian troops and Ugandan exile guerrillas had massed in the southwestern suburbs of the city, waiting to occupy the town. They kept up a heavy artillery barrage on the city.

"Nothing short of an atom bomb could save Idi Amin now," one diplomat said.

The residents said the Ugandan army had collapsed completely in panic and its soldiers fled in disarray, presumably joining the general exodus to the north.

But there were also unconfirmed reports that a force of 2,000 Libyan soldiers, under the command of a Libyan brigadier general, had taken up the defense of the capital, and that the Tanzanians were meeting some resistance.

In Dar es Salaam, the Tanzanian government said in a communique that the key northern town of Mwanza, 500 miles northwest of the capital, was attacked Thursday night by a Libyan TU-22 jet bomber.

The communique said the plane dropped five bombs, several of which fell harmlessly into nearby Lake Victoria. Some hit an animal sanctuary on an island two miles from Mwanza.

One person was reported injured, wounded on the head and hands.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said, "Although there appears to have been no casualties and only limited damage, we consider this a serious escalation of what had previously been a localized conflict. We deplore and condemn this irresponsible action."

Mwanza is a strategic city for the Tanzanians because of its location at the head of the rail line which carries war supplies from the capital at Dar es Salaam.

Boy killed in crash

JEROME — A 4-year-old Jerome boy was killed Friday morning when he was thrown from a small pickup which went out of control and overturned on the Bob Barton Highway southwest of Jerome.

The boy, Wade Smith, was probably killed by the vehicle rolling over him, Gooding County Coroner James L. Molchan said judging from the extent of injuries.

Idaho State Police Sgt. Bob Wright said the vehicle was driven by the boy's mother, Rose Marie McKee, 24, of Jerome, and a brother, Jeremy Smith, 2, was a passenger. Neither was thrown from the pickup truck.

Both were admitted to St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome. Ms. McKee's condition is listed as stable with a back injury and some internal injury. Jeremy Smith was transferred to Magie Valley Memorial Hospital in Twin Falls Friday afternoon with a head laceration and minor injuries.

Wright said the accident occurred about 9:40 a.m. as Ms. McKee was heading east on the Bob Barton Highway about 8 1/2 miles southwest of Jerome in Gooding County.

Saturday briefing

Begin issues warning to hard-line Arabs

By United Press International
Prime Minister Menachem Begin Friday warned the hardline Arab nations meeting in Baghdad that if they attack Israel, the Jewish nation will counter-attack and carry the war to their soil.
Begin was keeping a wary eye on its border with Jordan and Syria in expectation of stepped up Palestinian guerrilla attacks.
Egypt was keeping a wary eye on its border with a hostile Libya with whom it warred in 1977 although Cairo military analysts said it would be "sheer madness" if Libya attacked.

In Egypt, where Friday is the Moslem sabbath, millions of faithful throughout the nation knelt in special prayers for peace as they awaited the return Saturday of President Anwar Sadat.
"Bring peace to our land, O Lord," imams intoned. "Amen," congregations responded.

Trucker talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Teamsters union and the trucking industry reached agreement Friday on wage proposals and neared final settlement on a new three-year contract, sources close to the negotiations said.
The sources said the wage agreement came after the industry offered a new proposal earlier Friday.

Passman trial

MONROE, La. (UPI) — Former Rep. Otto Passman, D-La., refused to accept cash or gifts from South Korean businessman Tongsun Park on at least three occasions, the brother of Gov. Edwin Edwards testified Friday.
The remarks by Marion Edwards came in the second day of defense testimony and contradicted earlier testimony by Park, the government's star witness in Passman's bribery, conspiracy and tax-evasion trial.

Waste campaign

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Six environmental and public interest groups with a membership of 4.5 million said Friday they will launch a campaign to get dangerous chemical dump sites cleaned up.
"The recent surfacing of long-buried toxic and poisonous wastes at thousands of sites around the country should signal local citizen action to prevent future disasters," said the American Public Health Association, one of the groups.

Charges from Laos

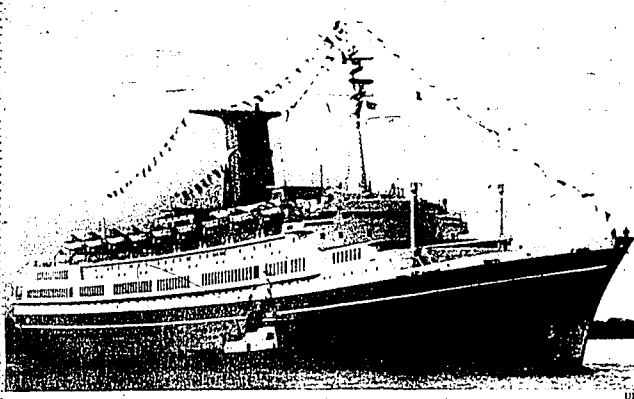

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Laos Friday charged that China has armed "several divisions" along its border for an armed invasion, and appealed to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim to "take appropriate measures to safeguard peace."
In a letter to Waldheim, Laotian Foreign Minister Khamphay Boupha said Chinese troops already had driven twice into Laos, once with two battalions.

Talks delayed

PEKING (UPI) — Peace talks between China and Vietnam are being held up by Vietnam's refusal to negotiate the disputed boundary between the two countries, an official Chinese source said Friday.
The Chinese official accused the Vietnamese of infringing on the traditional boundary between the two countries by changing the positions of boundary markers before the outbreak of fighting Feb. 17.

Arson charges

BOSTON (UPI) — An unemployed, teen-age busboy and dishwasher was arraigned Friday on charges he tried to burn down two luxury hotels that had fired him. He was ordered held on $200,000 bail.

The 800-passenger "Angelina Laura" sunk after a fire raged on board. Crewmembers feared dead in ship fire.

CHARLOTTE-AMALIE, U.S. Virgin Islands (UPI) — An 800-passenger Italian-cruise ship caught fire and sank in flames in St. Thomas harbor Friday, possibly taking a number of crewmembers down with it, officials said.
An official of the rescue operation said all passengers were safe, but a civil-defense spokesman said he was unsure whether all the crewmembers were accounted for.
Gov. Juan Luis called out the National Guard, the police and all of the island's firefighters to combat the blaze that raged "like a flaming inferno" through the 24,000-ton Angelina Laura for four hours Friday night, spreading perilously close to a large dockside fuel depot.

After efforts to extinguish the blaze failed, Luis ordered firemen to tow the ship out to sea and let it sink. When two attempts to tow the vessel also failed, officials flooded the ship at dockside and sank it in port.

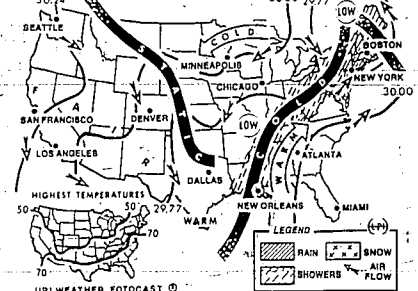

Today's weather

Going out like a (tame) lion

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Gooding-Jerome areas:
Continued cool and windy at times with variable clouds and scattered rain or snow showers today. Partly cloudy with a chance of showers on Sunday. Highs in the middle 40s to the lower 50s both days. Overnight lows middle to upper 20s.
Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley:
Cool, locally windy at times. Variable cloudiness with scattered showers, mostly of snow, through today. Partly cloudy with a chance of showers on Sunday. Highs in the 40s both days with overnight lows in the teens to low 20s.
Synopsis:
An upper air trough continues to dominate Idaho's weather, producing a series of minor disturbances reflected in clouds, showers and winds. This system is moving slowly southward across the state and will produce conditions of this nature through today and possibly into Sunday.
Friday afternoon, winds with velocities of more than 20 miles an hour were reported across much of southern Idaho. Gooding reported 22 mile an hour winds, Burley 23 and Pocatello 25. Temperatures across the state were mostly in the 40s. Low readings Friday morning were in the 20s at most reporting stations although Stanley had the coldest at 14 and other readings in the teens came from mountain points.

The field preparation and planting outlook for Monday through Wednesday calls for mostly dry although there is a chance of showers about midweek. Temperatures will remain near normal. The spraying and dusting forecast calls for winds of 15 to 20 miles an hour this afternoon with stronger gusts. The four inch soil temperatures will be down about a degree today for the maximum with the minimum tonight down two degrees.

The extended forecast for Monday through Wednesday calls for dry conditions with a chance of showers over the mountains about midweek. Temperatures will range from highs in the 50s to lows in the upper 20s and 30s.
The Utah forecast calls for decreasing showers today but increasing again on Sunday with continued cool temperatures. For Nevada, cool and windy conditions will prevail with cloudiness and scattered showers over the weekend and the snow level down to 4,000 feet.

United Airlines shut down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some 18,000 mechanics and ground crew workers went on strike at midnight Friday against United Airlines, the nation's largest airline with about 130,000 daily passengers.
United canceled its 1,600 daily scheduled flights through Monday, April 9, but said it is accepting additional reservations for flights scheduled for Tuesday, April 10, and thereafter.
No new negotiations were scheduled.
Flights en route at the strike deadline were expected to proceed to scheduled destinations, the airline said.
Union spokesman Larry Rubin said members had "overwhelmingly rejected" a tentative contract agreement for seven times.
Spokesmen for American Airlines and Trans World Airlines in Chicago said they will try to absorb most of the passengers who had planned to fly United.

"We're on red alert right now," said Roy Dean of American. "American Airlines will be standing by to handle as many United passengers as possible. We've all been through this before."
The National Mediation Board said the union nor United had requested a resumption of bargaining.
"The board is ready to meet again with both parties to help end this strike," said board member Robert O. Harris, who presided over marathon talks that brought about the second pact. "However, at this time, neither party has indicated a desire to resume immediate negotiations."
The union blamed administration policies for the impasse.

Thousands fleeing nuclear plant area

The NRC also confirmed Friday night that "possibly... one quarter of the total 177 fuel assemblies," mostly in the center of the reactor's core, may have been damaged in the chain of accidents that began Wednesday. Some of the temperature readings were off scale — over 700 degrees Fahrenheit.
NRC officials refused to discuss the significance of the high temperatures and extensive fuel damage. But Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor Henry Kendall of the Union of Concerned Scientists said the report could mean "Trouble with a big T."
Governor Thornburgh made his statement following a 90-minute meeting with Harold R. Denton, President Carter's representative at the scene, who is director of Nuclear Reactor Regulation for the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission and spent most of the day at the site.

"Warning" areas around nuclear power plant. Thousands fleeing nuclear plant area.

Denton, answering questions after the governor's statement, did not rule out the future possibility of a meltdown, but said the chances were "very remote."
Carter's personal representative said the total radiation exposure to the population "might cause a one to two-tenths (percent) latent health" hazard to the population.
Denton explained the total exposure was estimated at present to be "1000 man rems."
The Pennsylvania National Guard remained on alert and officials had contingency plans to evacuate one million residents from a five-county area should it become necessary.

Mother cuts hands off girls

HAMPTON, Va. (UPI) — A 23-year-old mother who thought she was "John the Baptist" apparently cut off a hand of each of her two daughters, then chopped off one of her own hands with a butcher knife.
Bernadine Hill, her 7-month-old daughter Shonda were rushed to Norfolk General Hospital Friday where doctors successfully reattached the girl's limbs.
Mrs. Hill's mutilated hand could not be saved and her arm was amputated at the wrist.
"She claimed to be John the Baptist in the flesh," a neighbor who saw Mrs. Hill Thursday told police. "She said John the Baptist was beheaded and that she was going to be beheaded."
Police said Mrs. Hill's mother discovered the three shortly before noon Friday in their blood-spattered apartment. The woman was sprawled on the kitchen floor and the children were in their bedrooms, each with a hand cut off and knife wounds on their bodies.

Anti-IRA crusader killed by bomb blast in London

LONDON (UPI) — A bomb planted in the car of an anti-IRA crusader, a key strategist for the Conservative Party, exploded and killed him Friday near the House of Commons — the first murder in the precincts of Parliament in 167 years.

The blast followed by less than a week a warning from the provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army that it intended to use violence to disrupt Britain's election campaign. Two different groups with links to the IRA claimed responsibility for the bombing.

The victim, Airey Neave, was the political strategist who steered Margaret Thatcher to leadership of the Conservatives. He was in line to become Northern Ireland Secretary if the Conservatives win the May 3 election.

The 63-year-old war hero, decorated by Britain, France and the United States and the central figure in a celebrated escape from Colditz prison in Germany, was driving out of the House of Commons underground garage at the time.

His blue Vauxhall was ripped apart less than 50 yards from the foot of Big Ben, just as the famous clock was striking 3 o'clock, he was trapped alive in the twisted metal for almost 45 minutes, and died shortly after arrival at Westminster Hospital.

Scotland Yard said a half pound of explosives had been hidden inside the front of the car.

"The man's face was completely blackened, his trousers were shredded and he was bleeding profusely," one of the first witnesses on the scene said.

Shah moves to the Bahamas

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — The exiled shah of Iran and his family moved from Morocco to the Bahamas Friday and declined to say how long they would be staying at the palatial home of the head of the island's gambling empire.

Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, who had dodged reporters and photographers all day, made a sudden appearance late in the afternoon on the breeze-swept grounds of the posh Ocean Club, next door to the home of his host, James Crosby.

The family posed for pictures along a picket fence that encircles the resort's swimming pool. Robert Armao, who identified himself as a family friend, said there would be no questions.

Iranians' approval expected

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iranians Friday voted on Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's plan to mold Iran into an Islamic republic, a measure expected to have overwhelming approval despite opposition from tribesmen, leftists and women.

Final results were expected Sunday night — the referendum will last until sundown Saturday — but Khomeini's followers expected victory for the plan to convert this former kingdom into a strictly religious republic.

Voters cast colored paper ballots — green supported for Khomeini's plan, red opposed it. Trash baskets next to the ballot boxes at voting stations in Tehran overflowed with torn-up red ballots, indicating most Iranians supported the Moslem leader.

Under his proposal, Iranians would function under laws of Islamic conduct set by the prophet Mohammed, the founder of Islam, in the 7th century.

The first day of voting appeared to pass peacefully in Tehran and Iran's provinces, Tehran radio said. But Turkoman tribesmen battled government forces in Gonbad-e Qaboos, near the Soviet border, and prevented voting in much of the city.

Women's liberation groups, tribesmen in the Kurdish region bordering Iraq and the region of Baluchistan, near the Pakistani border, boycotted the referendum.

GENE LEROY HART found innocent

Gene Hart acquitted of murder

PRYOR, Okla. (UPI) — Gene Leroy Hart, an elusive jailbreaker with a history of rape and kidnapping, was acquitted Friday of the sex slayings of three Girl Scouts.

Tears streamed down Hart's cheeks and his lips quivered as the verdict was read by jury foreman George Kelly. Defense attorney Garvin Isaac, threw his arm about his client's shoulder for support.

"God's going to bring my boy back to me," said the defendant's mother, Ella Mae Buckskin, who had waited outside the courtroom for the verdict.

"It had to be Jesus."

The verdict ended a 26-day trial that included numerous defense allegations that Hart, 35, had been a scapegoat selected for political gain. Hart's friends and relatives — derisively described by prosecutors as the "cheering section" — leaped to their feet, shouting and applauding, when the verdict was announced.

Sheriff Pete Weaver, listed by defense attorneys as one of the men who would benefit politically by a Hart conviction, ordered the courtroom cleared. As family members helped Hart's weeping sister, Millie Littlepage, from the courtroom, the defendant — who has been sentenced to prison terms totaling 305 years for other crimes not relating to the Locust Grove massacre — asked permission to thank the jury. Judge William J. Whistler refused the request and Hart was led off to his cell by highway patrolmen.

The families of two of the slain girls walked silently from the courtroom without comment. Sharon Farmer, the mother of the third victim, wept and leaned on her husband's arm.

Hart had been charged with first-degree murder in the deaths of Doris Denise Milner, 10; Michelle Guse, 9; and Lori Lee Farmer, 8. Their bludgeoned bodies, crammed into blood-soaked sleeping bags, were found June 13, 1977 — their first night at Camp Scott.

Karen Silkwood trial

Nuclear agencies criticized for hiding radiation dangers

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Government agencies regulating the nuclear industry have not been candid in informing workers of the dangers of radioactivity, a union official said Friday in the Karen Silkwood plutonium contamination trial.

Sue Wodka, of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, testified the Atomic Energy Commission has downplayed the long-term cancer risks of continuous radiation exposure.

Wodka, whose testimony came as the fourth week of the trial came to a close, said both the AEC and its successor, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, "have not been candid with workers in these facilities. They haven't taken adequate steps to protect workers."

Wodka, whose union responsibility is for health and safety, testified in the trial of the $11.5 million damage suit the family of Ms. Silkwood has filed against Kerr-McGee.

The suit contends negligence by Kerr-McGee, employer of Ms. Silkwood, caused her contamination with radioactive plutonium.

Kerr-McGee, owner of a plutonium fuel processing plant near Oklahoma City, has contended it stayed within federal safety guidelines at the facility, which closed in 1975. The company has also alleged Ms. Silkwood was responsible for her own contamination.

Kerr-McGee tests showed both Ms. Silkwood and portions of her apartment had been radiated a week before she died in a traffic accident Nov. 13, 1974. Wodka has testified she died while en route to a meeting with a reporter to present evidence of Kerr-McGee's alleged negligence.

Defense attorney Bill Paul, in cross examining Wodka, asked if the union official believed the NRC "is acting in bad faith" in terms of worker safety.

Man charged in crossing guard case

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI) — A man questioned but later released as a suspect in the sex-slaying of Linda Vanderveen, was charged Friday with murder of the 11-year-old school crossing guard.

Police said the suspect, Albert Lee III, 27, lives in a suburban Kentwood neighborhood only blocks from where Linda, daughter of a city official, was kidnapped Feb. 12 and dragged kicking and screaming from her safety patrol post.

Sgt. Bruce O'Conner, a member of a special task force investigating the case, said Lee was first stopped and questioned by police about three hours after the kidnapping. His car resembled the kidnap vehicle described by witnesses, but he was released a short time later because of insufficient evidence, O'Conner said.

Police say after being raped, beaten and strangled with her own necklace, Linda's body was dumped in a snowbank about a mile from the kidnap scene, just an hour after her abduction.

Lee, who is unemployed, was arraigned Friday before District Judge Gordon Doherty and remanded to jail without bond pending a preliminary examination.

The tall, bearded suspect stood silently as the charges were read and was led from the courtroom in handcuffs.

Police refused to say if Lee had any criminal record. O'Conner said he was one of many men questioned in Linda's death, the last of three kidnap-slayings involving young women or girls in western Michigan during a six-month period.

"He was a suspect from the beginning but he was not the only suspect," O'Conner said.

Linda, daughter of the city civil service director Andrew Vanderveen, was a sixth grader at Mulick Park Elementary School.

"Speaking as a parent myself, there's still a great deal of tension although I suppose the arrest provides some sort of relief," O'Conner said.

Eiffel Tower turns 90 today

PARIS (UPI) — What's big and brown, looks like a clothespin, has appeared in hundreds of films and paintings, weighs 7,000 tons and turns 90 years old Saturday?

It only could be the Eiffel Tower, one of the world's most visited tourist sights.

Since its opening at the Paris Exhibition of 1889, more than 70 million people have visited the tower, sometimes referred to as the world's tallest lamp post.

Each year, Gustave Eiffel's engineering wonder has more than 3 million visitors, who take away 1.9 miniature copies of the tower.

"I should be jealous of the tower — it's more famous than I am," Eiffel said shortly before his death in 1923.

Cagney improves

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The condition of Actor Jimmy Cagney, hospitalized for an inflamed sciatic nerve, has improved.

The 79-year-old Cagney, listed in fair condition when he entered Good Samaritan Hospital with severe pain late Wednesday, was described as in good condition Friday.

George Washington the ambassador

DETROIT (UPI) — George Washington was bestowed Thursday with the title of ambassador, but he was denied diplomatic immunity.

Washington, a 60-year-old taxi driver, has done his damndest to give the city a good name, telling his patrons, "The only place that could be better is heaven."

His efforts were rewarded Thursday at the annual meeting of Detroit's Central Business District Association, which officially honored him as one of 10 Downtown Detroit Ambassadors. Washington, who came to Detroit 26 years ago with 80 cents in his pocket and no job, had officially been selected for the honor earlier and quickly became a celebrity with his 25 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Detroit Police, however, were not impressed. Washington quickly found out that his ambassadorial status carried with it no diplomatic immunity.

STAR WARS

U.S. doctor's race pays off

By ROLAND TYRRELL, MOSCOW (UPI) — "She just looked up at me and smiled," the doctor said. At that moment Dr. Warren Zapol of Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston knew his race across the Atlantic to try to save the life of a young Soviet woman had not been in vain.

Zapol had no ticket and no visa when he grabbed a flight on five hours notice from New York — only a plea to help a 28-year-old woman dying of a blood infection.

He declined to identify the patient. But Western sources said she was the daughter of Dr. Vladimir Burakovsky, director of Moscow's Bakulev Institute of Cardiovascular Surgery.

It usually takes 10 days to two weeks to get a visa to the Soviet Union, but Zapol didn't get his until after he had arrived to take over the case.

Zapol, director of Massachusetts General Hospital's center for research of adult respiratory failure, said when he arrived the patient had only about a 10 percent chance of survival.

The young American surgeon slept for only six or seven hours in the next three days. And on March 16th — Zapol's 37th birthday — his young patient opened her eyes and smiled.

"That was the best kind of birthday present, the best I've ever had," he said.

Burakovsky, who declined to identify the patient as his daughter, called Zapol a "very outstanding specialist" and said the operation was a great act of medical cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Can the air waves be too deregulated?

A license to broadcast may not always be, as Lord Thomson of Fleet once said, "a license to print money," but it can be darn lucrative.

No doubt, as broadcasters point out, the publishing industry can be a profitable business too. However, there is a higher percentage of failure in the printing game. One reason is that the medium of the message, i.e. paper and ink, constitutes a high percentage of the costs of publishing, while the air remains free to those who have the necessary equipment and who are licensed.

The free use of the air is now at issue in the form of a proposed "spectrum fee." Naturally, the broadcasters oppose it. That's only natural. A person can't be expected to like paying for something he used to get for free.

But as Federal Communications Commissioner Charles Ferris explains it, "If cows graze on public lands, the rancher pays for it; oil companies pay for offshore drilling rights; broadcasters should pay for use of the spectrum."

That makes sense, especially when one considers that the broadcasting industry is in the process of being deregulated, a process that seems to be quite popular in the regulation-minded city of Washington.

If the broadcasters are winning their long-standing case against certain regulations and are approaching what they believe to be more of a "free enterprise" situation, they should be expected to pay for the resource they are using in going after those profits.

The "spectrum fee" is part of a new House version of a bill introduced Thursday to deregulate the broadcast industry. It has a weaker sister in the Senate.

It is about time for some changes in the broadcasting rules, but some of the changes proposed prompt serious questions. For example, is the "permanent license" provision that wise a move?

Should not the public have an occasional official input into a station, which the process of license renewal accommodates? As long as the broadcasting air around a given area is limited to a few individuals, those individuals should be held accountable in a means other than realized by the usual merchant-customer relationship.

If this "permanent license" structure is adopted, and mixed with another proposal that would, in effect, decrease the range of the giant 50,000-watt AM stations (such as KOA in Denver and KSL in Salt Lake City), the radio listener may find even less variety than provided now.

It is far cheaper to spin record after record on a station than to, say, produce documentaries or stimulating talk shows, and it is the fear that the smaller stations, spurred on by deregulation, would cut corners by continuing in the non-stop music vein.

In the meantime, the person in the hinterlands wanting something else (usually provided by the bigger stations with the money to produce quality broadcasting) would be far less able to be satisfied by the tuner.

Former FCC member Nicholas Johnson, an outspoken critic of the broadcast industry, denounced the congressional deregulation moves, saying, "There is virtually nothing" in any of the three major bills now pending that helps the public."

Actually, there are a few things in the proposals that help the public, but many that don't, and the package should be analyzed judiciously before it is given a stamp of approval en masse.

Airport electronic maze

There are no answers to this. Now that it is with us, we probably will live with it forever. The line in the airport concourse is stretching for 30 feet, hardly moving, but everyone is waiting patiently. No one is angry. Up against the wall over there, a businessman is being frisked. He looks at his watch while it happens, wanting to be sure he does not miss his plane. No one glances back at him as they walk past.

Another man walks through a big metal-detecting shed. Apparently he does not pass the test, for he too is told to wait. A uniformed security policeman approaches, holding an electric cattleprod-like device with a long metal loop on the end. The security policeman sticks the device under the man's arms, between the man's legs, inside the man's suit jacket. No one stops to watch.

In the end it is not the big events of history by which we remember our times, not the presidential elections or World Series that we flash back to when we try to remember a time in our lives. Those are just guideposts. Rather it is the little parts of life, the things we deal with every day without noticing or thinking, that come back to us later to remind us what it was like.

And when we think back to this part of our times, the image that may haunt us most is that of an airport, and of the citizens of the United States of America being frisked and searched and poked at and funneled through electronic mazes. All of them presumed innocent, but all of them also suspected of the possibility of harboring a secret madness.

Of course it has to be this way. Of course, with things as sick as they are in the land, it is absolutely essential that this has happened. Of course, ugly as it is to watch and be part of, there is no real alternative, and it must be done.

But knowing that does not make it any better. Finally we are beginning to realize that so many of our beliefs about the openness and warmth and fundamental goodness of this country are turning out to be myths. The new airport scenes say it for us: We are afraid of each other, we are terrified of the evil that may lie inside our neighbor's heart, we cannot afford to be trusting anymore. We do not and cannot accept the sanity of strangers on faith. We want everyone to be searched, including ourselves. It makes us feel better.

All the American children who are growing up now, who have yet to take their first airplane ride, will never know it was ever any other way. They will not know of the days when a person carried a shopping bag full of gifts onto an airplane with just a nod and a smile to the stewardess. They will not know of sitting in a departure area all day, without a ticket, just to watch the planes take off and land. They will not know of wandering around an airport as if it were a public library or a ballpark or an art museum, an open, cheerful place instead of a hall of suspicion and fear.

On some flights, one of the selections on the stereo headsets is a series of spoken-word essays from an album by John Wayne entitled "America, Why I Love Her." Over a background of inspiring, patriotic music, Wayne talks about what he calls "the good things." He says, "We hear a lot about war, the hurricanes that hit our shore, but all that does is sing the blues about America. What about the good things, the men who love their wives and take their sons fishing?" He says, "In my son's eye, I spotted a gleam. I wanted to surprise you, Dad — I'm on the football team." He says, "You ask why I love America; give me the time and I'll explain. Have you seen a Kansas sunset, or a Louisiana rain? Have you strolled along a New York dock? Have you seen the mighty Tetons, have you watched an eagle soar?" But then the airplane's captain cuts in and says, "Sorry for that delay in taking off, but we had to wait a while due to airport security, which unfortunately is all too necessary these days."

It would be so nice if John Wayne's America were the real America anymore. But it isn't, and pretending that the most striking thing about the United States is still its open skies and beautiful scenery just isn't enough, not in a time of grayness and distrust and fear and noises behind you in the airport ticket line.

If the mighty Tetons and the soaring eagle are the symbols of John Wayne's America, then the terrible, necessary scene inside the airports is the truest symbol of the new America. Strangers searching through our bags and feeling at our clothing do not seem to bother us much; that kind of privacy is just another principle that we have had to give up, another trade made inevitable to deal with the terrors of our time.

"Hey Jim," one security guard in the airport called loudly across the concourse to another. "Give me a hand here, will you? This fellow says he's wearing a leg brace."

The man with the leg brace stood very still. He was about 35, thin, wearing an olive business suit. The guards knelt on the floor in the middle of the concourse and felt his legs. The fact that he had a handicap was hidden pretty well; it wasn't until the guards pressed the cloth in that the shape of a metal brace became obvious. If he was hurt that the other people in the airport now knew that he could not walk without support, his face did not show it. The others hurried past him as the guards continued to feel at his legs. It probably will never be any other way in America, never again.

Ellen Goodman

Those who save may not reap rewards

BOSTON — I don't usually play the great American game called Categories. There are already too many ways to divide us into opposing teams, according to age, race, sex, and favorite flavors. Every time we turn around, someone is telling us that the whole country is made up of those who drive pick-up trucks and those who do not, and then analyzing what this means in terms of the Middle East.

Still, it occurs to me that if we want to figure out why people are angry right now, it's not a bad idea to see ourselves as a nation of planners and non-planners. It's the planners these days who are feeling penalized, right down to their box score at the bank. The part of us which is most visibly and vocally infuriated by inflation, for example, isn't our liberal or conservative side but, rather, our planning side. Inflation devastates our attempts to control our futures — to budget and predict and expect. It particularly makes fools out of the people who saved then to buy now. To a certain extent, it rewards instant gratification and makes a joke out of our traditional notions of preparation.

It is no news bulletin that the people who dove over their heads into the real estate market a few years ago are now generally better off than those who dutifully decided to save up for a larger downpayment. With that "larger downpayment" they can now buy two double-thick rib lambchops and a partridge in a pear tree.

But inflation isn't the only thing that leaves the planners feeling betrayed. There are other issues that find them actively pitched against the non-planners.

We all know families who saved for a decade to send their kids to college. A college diploma these days costs about the same amount as a Mercedes-Benz. Of course, the Mercedes lasts longer and has a higher trade-in value. But the most devoted parent can be infuriated to discover that a neighboring couple who spent its income instead of saving, is now eligible for college financial aid, while they are not. To the profligate go the spoils.

This can happen anywhere on the economic spectrum. There is probably only one mother in the annals of the New York welfare rolls who saved up a few thousand dollars in hopes of getting off aid. But she would have been better off spending it. When she was discovered this year, the welfare department took the money back. She, too, was penalized for planning.

In these cramped times, the Planned Parents of the Purse are increasingly annoyed at other parents — whether they are unwed or on welfare or just profligate. For the first time in my own town, you can hear families with few children complaining out loud at the tax bill for the public schooling of families with many children.

One man I heard even suggested charging tuition for the third child. He admitted, "It's not a very generous attitude. I know. But I'm not feeling very generous these days." He is suffering from planner's wars.

At the same time I've talked with friends whose parents prepared, often with financial difficulty, for their "old age" and illness. They feel sad when this money goes down a nursing home drain, but furious when other people who didn't save get this same care for free.

Now we are all aware that if many people don't plan their economic lives, it may be because they can't. It does no one any good to keep the cashless out of college, to stash the old and poor into elderly warehouses, to leave the "extra" children illiterate. We do want to help others, but we also want our own efforts to make a difference.

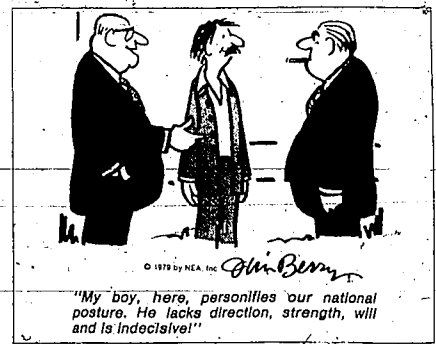

There is nothing that gratifies a planner more than seeing a non-planner profit. It's as if the ant had to watch the grasshopper get the goods.

Our two notions about what's fair end up on opposite sides. It isn't fair if the poor get treated badly, and it isn't fair if those who work and save, plan and postpone aren't given a better shake. We want the winners to be deserving. Only there is no dividing rod for the deserving.

The hard part is to create policies that are neither unkind nor insane. It is, after all, madness not to reward that kind of behavior we want to encourage. If we want the ranks of the planners to increase in this massive behavior modification program called society, we have to give them the rewards, instead of the outrage.

What's what

The divorce statistics of the South Africans continue to climb

In South Africa at last report, almost two out of three married couples were getting divorced within a year after the wedding ceremonies. What's causing these breakups is not in the record at hand. Do know, though, that the most common grounds for divorce there are desertion and adultery. Desertion is particularly worn, because South Africa allows as how a wife whose husband walks out on Monday can declare him a deserter on Tuesday.

One sort of entertainment business that really prospered during the gasoline crisis of 1974 was the bowling alley operation. People chose to go there, if close to home, and stay put, seemingly. Lane proprietors expect it to happen again.

There's a nine-inch snail in Africa that can polish off a head of lettuce at one sitting.

WOMEN IN UNIFORM

Question arises as to which country has the most women in the military. The United States merits that distinction, research reveals. Women comprise 5.5 percent of this country's uniformed folk. Israel comes in second with 5 percent. Footnote: Only 1 percent of the Soviet Union's troops are women.

Hardly anybody realizes that the first meaning of the word "powwow" is not a discussion, conference, social get-together. A powwow, foremost, is an American Indian medicine man. Or was. Incidentally, aren't powwow and glowworm the only two words in the language that contain the "owwa" in sequence? Bow wow is two words, doesn't count.

SENSES

Why your senses of taste, smell and sight tend to be sharper around 7 p.m. and 3 a.m. I do not know, but such is the claim of the medical researchers.

How will you ever be a successful radio-TV announcer? If you stumble over the pronunciations of such a simple speech as this: "Sheep shouldn't sleep in a shack. Sheep should sleep in a shed." No, say it faster.

 2nd, 4th, 5th Tuesdays — Smithfield, Trementon, Trementon South.

WHAT DO YOU SEE?

There is a very important message in this headline. The world has never seen a more important one. Unfortunately, most people never see it. They look at it; they even stare at it. But they don't understand the message. Yet, once they've seen it, they never have trouble seeing it again. As it says in John 10:27-28: My sheep hear my voice and I know them and they follow me, and I give them eternal life and they shall never perish, and no one shall snatch them out of my hand. If you see the message, we invite you to worship Him with us tomorrow at any of our worship services.

Defense opens in rape trial

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The state rested its case in the week-long rape trial of Rodney Starr, 25, of Twin Falls, Friday afternoon.

Judge James M. Cunningham said he will continue court sessions through today in an effort to conclude the lengthy trial as soon as possible. Starr is accused of the rape of his former wife at her home the night of Oct. 5.

Two witnesses for the defense appeared before court recessed shortly before 6 p.m. Friday. A defense witness called Friday afternoon testified there was evidence on clothing of the victim that someone with Type A blood could have been involved. Both the victim, Roberta Starr, and the defendant have type O blood.

Mike Walz, deputy prosecutor who is conducting the case for the state, called three law enforcement officers as his final witnesses, including Ed Brake of the Idaho Bureau of Investigation.

Brake testified he obtained a confession from the defendant on Oct. 11 at the Twin Falls police station. He told the court the defendant admitted to him he placed a hangman's noose in the basement of his former wife prior to the rape, cut her lights and raped her.

Under cross examination the officer denied he "pushed" the defendant into the confession or used threats or promises to obtain the confession. He said, however, he was alone with the defendant during approximately an hour before Starr admitted the crime and asked to be allowed to speak to the victim.

Brake said he did not necessarily want to have the defendant talk with his former wife, but said Starr continued to ask if he could talk with her so the request was made of Twin Falls Detective Lt. Gary Corder.

Brake said the defendant was "tense and worried" but not necessarily hostile when the interview began. He said he cried when he saw his former wife and when he told her he committed the crime.

Twin Falls Detective James Kistler told the court he was the first detective at the crime scene and that he collected ropes which were tied to the couch in the Starr home, a section of a pool cue stick said to have been used in the assault on the victim, and several other items. The victim had testified she was tied to the couch with a rope around her neck, two ropes on her feet and was assaulted with a pool cue stick and raped.

Kistler said Starr was at the scene about the time officers arrived. He said the defendant told officers entry to the home may have been gained through a basement window. Kistler said although the window was open it appeared no one had entered because of undisturbed dust on the window frame.

Earlier testimony established the front door of the home could not be locked and that the victim was asleep on the couch near the front door when awakened by the assailant.

Kistler also identified police records showing the defendant's height and weight at the time of arrest. The victim testified she believed her attacker was 5 feet, 7 to 8 inches tall and weighed 135 to 145 pounds. Police records showed the defendant's weight at 120 pounds and his height at 5 feet, 6 inches.

When the court convened following lunch and in the absence of the jury, Defense Attorney James May offered a motion for dismissal on grounds the prosecution had failed to show proof the defendant had committed the crime. Judge Cunningham denied the motion, saying he would let the jury decide that fact.

May again asked the court to inform the jury that the defendant's father had died on Thursday after suffering a stroke Wednesday after recessed for the noon break.

Judge Cunningham said he would also deny this request for the time and would inform the sequestered jury if a long recess became necessary. The funeral for Lewis Starr, 70, is scheduled for Monday at 10 a.m.

Testimony by the first defense witness, Dr. Edward Thomas Blake of Berkeley, Calif., an expert witness on blood typing and identification of other body secretions including saliva and semen. The witness described the technical process of identifying and typing.

He said samples taken from a house coat the victim was given to wear to the hospital indicated type O blood, the same type of the victim and the defendant.

He said semen taken from the victim's night gown indicated type A in at least one sample tested. He said this could have been produced by someone with type A blood — someone other than the defendant or victim.

Under cross examination the witness said he found no type A blood, and the type A semen only on the victim's night gown.

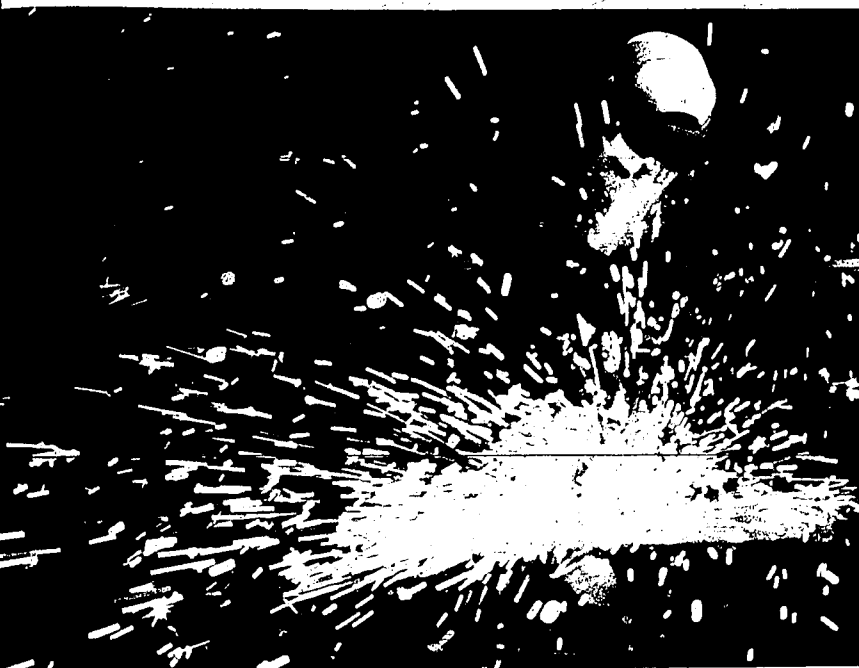

He said the absence of sperm would indicate the assailant had undergone a vasectomy or for some other reason was unable to produce sperm.

A pathologist, Dr. Fred Hurst of Boise, also testified Friday afternoon for the defense.

Ski mishap victim improving

SUN VALLEY — A 13-year-old Shaker Heights, Ohio, boy, Markus Edwards, was reported in serious condition but improving Friday at St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise after receiving head injuries in a ski accident on Bald Mountain on Thursday.

Edwards was transported by ambulance to the Warm Springs area at 11:45 a.m. Thursday, and was taken to Moritz Hospital in Sun Valley. He was then flown by Army helicopter to Boise.

Lanny Morrison competes in the welding competition at the VICA Skill Olympics Friday

More school job training advocated

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — "All parents visualize their child as growing up to be President," said Roland Pywell, supervisor of Idaho's trade and technical education programs.

Pywell, who works in Boise for the Department of Vocational Education, was in town for the seventh annual Skill Olympics at the College of Southern Idaho Wednesday through Friday. The conference, at which vocational students from around the state competed in 30 categories from welding to practical nursing, was sponsored by the Idaho Association of the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America.

"I feel there is a need for more vocational training in Idaho schools," said Pywell, who cited parental dreams as one reason the state does not offer students more technical training at the high school and junior high levels.

"Don't get me wrong. It is probably a desirable element of our society," he continued. "Everyone wants the best for their child. But later, as long as that child gets a respectable, honest job, the parents will probably end up as proud of them as if they were the President."

Pywell was instrumental in organizing VICA chapters in Idaho high schools and vocational-technical schools in the mid '60s. The organization, which sponsors national skill competition every summer, is designed to stimulate leadership training, speaking ability and pride in a trade.

"These students have set a goal in their life to be somebody," he said. "So at events like this we give them a chance to show their stuff. It helps them overcome stigmas. It gives them dignity." Pywell said his office tries to make the Idaho skill contests more difficult than the national ones, in hopes that Idaho winners will do well in Atlanta this July.

Pywell said industry in the Northwest has more job openings, particularly in the electronics and diesel mechanics fields, than vocational schools can fill at present enrollment levels.

Acknowledging the argument against the controversial "track system" in public schools, Pywell nevertheless points to high unemployment levels among high school or college graduates who did not specialize.

"Deciding not to track is the same as deciding to emphasize college preparatory courses over technical ones," he said.

Pywell is working to minimize the impact of the 1 percent initiative on vocational programs. Concerned that school superintendents are looking for programs to cut, he said high school technical courses are "coming under intense pressure because of our low class populations."

To increase enrollment in future years, he is working with junior high schools to "dovetail in experiences that will encourage a student to follow his inquisitive nature" and spread news about technical jobs most in demand.

The Department of Vocational Education is continually researching the job market and keeping track of Idaho vocational graduates, Pywell said.

"When supply exceeds demand, we begin to reduce training in that area," he said. "Taxpayers don't want to pay for training for future unemployment."

Vocational-technical schools like the one at CST keep track of their graduates for five years and often interview their employers as well, he said. "And advisory committees for every vocational subject offer advice to the faculty. Successful businessmen in each field make up the committees and helped design the tests in this week's competition."

Each of the VICA tests included a written examination as well as a demonstration of ability. In the television repair competition, for example, each contestant had one hour to find two "bugs" in a TV set. Advisers had removed one part and replaced it with a malfunctioning one. Or a part may be missing, or a wire is added to produce a short circuit.

In the job interview competition, professional personnel chiefs and receptionists produced a mock office accepting contestants as applicants. After a written application, the students were interviewed for a specific position. The 38 participants were then narrowed to six, who went through a more in-depth interview.

LEWIS LENKER

QUESTION...

My father is a retired Naval Petty Officer and has requested burial at sea following his death. Is this possible?

ANSWER...

This is quite possible and can be arranged when the need arises. Very little advance preparation is necessary. We should have a copy of your father's discharge papers for our records, and a signed request and authorization form.

There is no cost when burial is at sea beyond that incurred as a mortuary expense. The body must be embalmed and casketed before being taken to the deckside of the Naval vessel at the designated time. Metal caskets as well as wooden caskets are acceptable. In place of a casket the body may be lightly sewn in canvas and adequately weighted at the foot.

The date of burial is determined by the availability of the Naval vessel concerned. Services are held aboard ship in accordance with Navy regulations and the flag used during the services as well as photographs of the burial are sent to the next of kin.

Amys take aim on bareback title

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Mention the Amy brothers to another rodeo fan at the College of Southern Idaho, and it's a sure bet he'll know who you're talking about.

The look-alike Amy brothers — Delwin, 22, and Calvin, 20 — are two of the toughest riding bareback and saddlebronc riders currently competing in the 10-team collegiate rodeo at the Expo Center.

The collegiate rodeo opened to a crowd of about 4,000 delighted fans Friday night with some fine performances.

What makes the Amy brothers story unique is that they probably will be battling each other tonight in the bareback competition for the lead in the regional collegiate standings. After two rodeos, they are tied, with each having registered a victory.

Riding Big Sky, Delwin turned in a startling 67 score in his bareback ride Friday night, while Calvin will be riding for the first time this afternoon at 2.

If Calvin comes through with a good score, they'll both be in the bareback finals which get underway at 8 p.m.

Calvin also leads the regional standings in the saddle bronc, but his brother is not far behind.

"It surprises me a little that we're tied in the bareback," said the amiable Calvin. "But we've both been riding for a long time, so I'm glad to see it."

Delwin didn't expect to be in a dead heat with his brother either, but he's glad it's turned out that way at least right now.

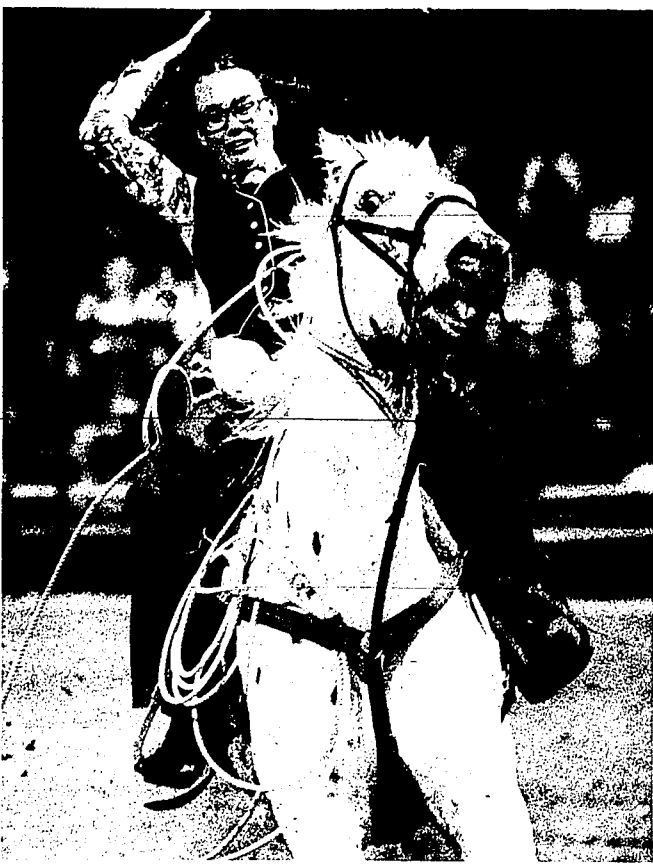

"There's a lot more rodeoing to go this season. I just hope we can both keep it up," said Delwin. "We both help each other, and I think it makes us both try harder."

Calvin said the keen competition has helped to draw them closer to each other.

"Let me tell you, I wanta win this thing, but I'm rooting for Delwin all the time too," said Calvin.

They both grew up in a rodeo family in the Hays, Idaho area. "Our dad did some rodeoing," they said.

Neither can remember a time when weren't around horses. At age six, they both competed in their first bronc-riding.

Fiercely competitive, the Amy brothers have ambitions to someday be tops in the saddle bronc riding and bareback riding.

Bronc riding is Calvin's best event, while Delwin prefers bareback riding. They also compete in team roping.

By the end of today, one of the brothers could be sitting atop the regional standings in the bareback.

One serious injury resulted in the saddle bronc riding, when CSI's Hal Peterson took a blow to the leg from his horse Pike's Peak and reportedly suffered a broken leg.

CSI breaks out of slump

ONTARIO, Ore. — Coach Jim Walker knew it would happen sooner or later. It was just a matter of time before his Eagles broke out of their hitting slump.

Tired of losing games they should have won by not picking up the clutch hits, College of Southern Idaho went wild Friday night and pounded out a 16-5 victory over Treasure Valley Community College.

"We broke out in the rash we have been looking for," said Walker, who had been worried about his team's failure to hit the ball.

"But I told them after the game not to live and die by one game," Walker said, hoping the Eagles will duplicate the feat when they play TVCC in a double-header today beginning at noon.

After picking up just eight hits in their last four games, the Eagles jumped on TVCC pitching for 11 hits and eight runs in the first two innings.

Rocco Zandano was plunked with the first pitch of the game to start an early rally, moving to second when Rick Yraguen reached first on an error.

Albert Romero walked to load the bases and Ron Coleman drove in two runs with a line single. Romero scored on a wild pitch for the final run of the inning.

In the second, Zandano walked and scored on a triple by Yraguen. Romero then singled in Yraguen and scored on a double by Jim Good.

"Goody was just outstanding tonight," said Walker. "He had three doubles, and they were all hit extremely well."

In the fourth, CSI started by drawing three straight walks. Jim Fazio then cleared the bases with a double to the wall and it was 11-2.

"The kids started to get a little cocky again, and that's a good sign,"

Said Walker. "They finally started to feel they had a little backbone."

But at the same time, CSI began to get a little careless and TVCC scored twice in the fifth and once more in the sixth.

Brian Lundon started on the mound for the Eagles and limited TVCC to just three hits. However, he walked 10 in five and one-third innings and threw a total of 126 pitches.

Rich Kellogg relieved Lundon with one out in the fifth and the bases loaded and worked out of the jam.

CSI's final three runs came in the seventh when Zandano unloaded his fifth home run of the year, a tremendous blast over the left field fence.

Walker was glad to see the offensive outburst, but he could give no explanation as to why there was a lack of offense prior to Friday's onslaught.

"I was looking through last year's scorebook and we averaged nine runs a game and had a team batting average of .225," Walker said.

"We have a lot of the same guys back this year, but we can't get a base hit," he said. "Hitting is all mental, not physical."

Walker has had many good hitting teams in the past, and he said this team is no different.

"These are as good of hitters as we have ever had," he said. "I told them that we have a great pitching staff yet we shell them in practice. It takes good hitters to shell good pitchers."

Walker said he will start Lee Cline in today's first game, hoping to get a complete game from the sophomore right-hander.

CSI — 1978-79: 30-21-5 — 16114
TVCC — 1978-79: 20-21-5 — 122
Lundon — Kellogg (14) and Romero; Hester, Miller, Stevenson (4) and Fazio — Lundon; Yraguen — Good (CSI), Fazio (CSI), Yraguen (CSI), Fazio — Yraguen (CSI), Hill — Zandano (CSI).

Black Summit includes Blake Chenault preview

By RANDY FREY
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — Some 1,200 Black skiers concluded their week-long stay at Sun Valley Friday, ending a very successful Black Summit 1979.

Lester Mornay, spokesman for the National Brotherhood of Skiers, said it was a week of parties, skiing and an occasional meeting tucked neatly in between.

The purpose of the summit, he said, was to raise funds to help support minority youth participation on the U.S. Ski Team.

And one way to raise funds was to bring the top black skier in the United States to the convention and let fellow black see just how good he is, Mornay said.

The top young skier is 21-year-old Blake Chenault, a native of Littleton, Colo. who is quickly being recognized in skiing circles.

Chenault started the year with 225 points in Ski Team competition, but has since cut that number down to 69. He feels he has just a short way to go before he can reach his goal of becoming a Ski Team member.

Chenault competed in Europe this winter and while there trained with Sweden's three-time World Cup champion Ingemar Stenmark. The American said he learned just by watching Stenmark ski.

The critical point in Chenault's racing career could come this summer when he travels to Switzerland, Austria and New Zealand in an effort to keep on the snow. He said he wants to stay away from dry land training as much as possible.

"I thought that if we brought Blake up here and showed everybody what he can do they would get a better picture of where their money is going," said Mornay.

Mixed in between all the skiing and parties were some very important meetings for the National Brotherhood of Skiers.

At one meeting the goals of the NBS were read those attending the convention: to promote winter sports among minorities; to develop educational programs among minority children which are intended to stimulate and instill a greater appreciation of winter sports, focusing on competitiveness and sportsmanship; to provide scholarship funds for potential Olympic caliber skiers; to organize future national conventions for the organization.

Chenault is sponsored by the NBS, and Mornay said the organization would sponsor other skiers in the future if they demonstrate their potential and a tendency to work hard at improving.

The NBS is now 10 years old, but Mornay said minority skiing is still in its infant stages. The big reason, he said, is that it is so expensive.

"And it's getting worse," he said. "It looks as though $20 a day for a lift ticket is just around the corner."

Mornay said the rich will still be able to afford to ski, but the minorities will be the ones who will be left behind.

Coach Watson:

Bruins need to play defense

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Defense has become the key word for the Twin Falls Bruins baseball team.

"We've got to start eliminating those defensive errors," said Coach Ron Watson Friday after a 4-0 loss to Elko, Nev., where the Bruins split a doubleheader.

In those two games, Watson said some mental mistakes cost the team a sweep of the two games. Elko won the first game by coming back from a 9-5 deficit in the fifth inning and scoring a 10-9 win. Twin Falls took the second by holding on to a 6-5 victory.

"We're going to approach our next two ball games from the standpoint that if we can go out there and play good, solid defense and eliminate mistakes, we can win 'em," he said. "We've played too many games already to use 'early season' as an excuse."

The Bruins will take a 5-2 record into its first Southeastern Idaho Conference clash Tuesday with the Boise Braves at 2 p.m. at Joyce Park. Then on Thursday, they will play host at 2:15 to Capital.

"We've scored a total of 20 runs in the two games we've lost," said Watson. "that's got to tell us something."

Watson expects a tough game with Boise, as "they were pretty strong last year" and have most of their club back. He's not sure what to expect from Capital.

Heading into conference play, the Bruins are sporting a team hitting percentage of more than .400. Craig Buehler, Kerry Brown, Gary Krumm, Curtis Grant, and Logan Easley all are batting at the .450 mark.

The team has been averaging about eight runs a game, something Watson hopes will continue to be a Bruins strong point.

"Our pitching still needs some improvement," he said referring to the runs the other teams are scoring. "We're still giving up too many bases on balls."

Weather was a factor for both teams at Elko Thursday. Along with it being cold, Watson said it rained, snowed, and hailed.

But the weather didn't seem to slow down the Bruins who jumped on an Elko pitcher for six runs in the second (including a three-run blast by Easley) for a 6-0 lead after two innings of the first game.

But Elko came storming back and picked up three runs in third and two more in the fourth. Twin Falls also pushed across a run in the fourth to make it 7-5 Bruins.

Sophomore Krumm singled home two more Bruins runners in the sixth to extend the lead to 9-5, but then the roof caved in and Elko wrapped it up with five runs (on three hits and two Bruins errors) in the sixth inning. Twin Falls couldn't score in the top of the seventh.

Leading pitcher was Jim Crandall (0-1) who came in following pitching performances by starter Richie Lowe and Easley.

In the second game, Twin Falls again roared away to a big lead, getting four runs in the second inning on two hits and two walks. Elko responded with two in the third and one in the fourth to close the margin to 4-3.

The Bruins added the winning runs in the fourth, and held on for the 6-5 victory.

Greg Habel picked up the win on the mound, with relief help from Brown and Grant. Leading hitters during the two-game trip were Easley, Grant and Bill Burton with four each.

Celebrities live it up at Sun Valley fund raiser

SUN VALLEY — Those competing in the fourth annual U.S. Ski Team Celebrity Invitational spent a lot of money for the right to ski on Dollar Mountain, so it is only right that they do all they can to have a good time.

And it was evident that Hal Linden, Tom Kennedy, Tanya Tucker, Lloyd Haines and all the rest of the celebrities were doing just that Friday.

They hit the slopes at 9 a.m. and were still going strong late in the afternoon, and it was all to benefit the U.S. Ski Team and its bid to make a strong showing in the 1980 Winter Olympics.

"This is the fourth year in a row I have been here," said game show host Tom Kennedy. "I wouldn't miss it for the world."

Kennedy, like the rest of the celebrities, had to pay $50 per couple as a donation to the U.S. Ski Team. And that's not including all the money he lost in grudge races.

"I won my giant slalom race, though, but my teammates let me down and we lost as a team," said Linden, who happily spent a great deal of his time signing autographs and posing for pictures.

When asked if he was going to give the cross country ski competition a whirl, Linden quickly replied, "Why not? This is a lot of fun."

It was a lot of fun for country and western singer Tanya Tucker as well, the 19-year-old recording artist not losing in two grudge races.

She said she had never skied before, and if that is indeed true she is definitely a fast learner.

But it wasn't only the celebrities who were having fun, the Ski Team members were also enjoying themselves. They would obligingly stop the celebrities about six gates in a grudge race then roar down Dollar Mountain to win by a gate.

Several Ski Team members are on hand for the Invitational, including Steve Mahre, Vikki Fleckenstein, Sun Valley's own Christine Cooper, Pete Patterson, Susie Patterson and Kevin Swigert, and America's top woman downhill racer Cindy Nelson.

Nelson, who won a bronze medal in the 1968 Olympics in Innsbruck, Austria, said she was having a great time but she was looking forward to a chance to do some more serious skiing this afternoon atop Bald Mountain.

Following today's celebrity events, skiers will have the afternoon to themselves, and Nelson said she will use the time to the best of her advantage.

Today's events will get underway at 10 a.m., with the finals of the giant slalom competition followed by another set of grudge races. The invitational will conclude with an awards banquet tonight.

Some additional celebrities will make an appearance today, Bruce and Christie Jenner and Clint Eastwood finally arriving in Sun Valley. But Scott McCrea, director of marketing at Elkhorn, was said to announce that Donny and Marie Osmond had canceled their appearance at the event.

But that shouldn't put a damper on what has already been a successful fund-raiser. With donations from the celebrities combined with those from corporate sponsors, especially main sponsor Paul Masson Vineyards, it is expected that well over $50,000 will be raised.

Alpine director Hank Taubert said the U.S. has the ability to win in international competition and all that is needed is a lot of hard work.

But to train properly is an expensive procedure, and the U.S. Ski Team receives no governmental funding. It survives strictly on donations, and the Celebrity Invitational is the main fund raiser each year.

In essence, the celebrities who see clowning and falling around the Sun Valley slopes are in reality members of the U.S. Ski Team.

Mitchell's trip to the national basketball finals

TWIN FALLS — Last week was a particularly long one for Coach Mike Mitchell.

He spent it watching the national junior college tournament and the way things turned out, it was agony. If you'll try hard, you'll probably recall that CSI lost to Dixie college in overtime of an inter-region to miss on the trip to Hutchinson. When it got back to Kansas, Dixie came within an eyelash of winning it.

"After I had a chance to watch Dixie play four times, I was really impressed with the way they shot the ball," the coach said. "They shot over 60 per cent from the field in the three games they won and shot 50 per cent in the game they lost."

"I'd say they came within a couple of jump shots of winning it all the way it turned out," he continued. "In that Friday night loss to Mercer, Dixie had a six-point lead and took that out to 10 or 12 in the second half. Mercer wasn't guarding them much but in the last ten minutes Dixie would miss a 10-foot here and an eight-footer there. Dixie wasn't guarding Mercer either and Mercer didn't miss."

"But it turned out to be just like we said," he added about the tournament. "Our bi-regional winner had a cakewalk into the semi-finals. The other bracket was a lot tougher. Three Rivers comes out sky high and beats Coffeyville by 20 in the first round and the next night they play two overtimes to beat another team. Then they go two overtimes to beat West Texas — they score one with three seconds left to get it into overtime and West Texas scores with two seconds left to get it into the second overtime. Then Three Rivers wins it."

"When they (Three Rivers) even out Saturday night, they didn't even have a pulse. They'd used up all their emotion. When I was at West Texas and we played CSI for the national championship, I thought it was a dull game. But this one made ours look like a thrill-a-minute barnburner."

"I thought that the best college team there was West Texas. They had a lot of talent. They played 10 guys and came after you with a full court press for 40 minutes. They were about the only physical team that was there. Three Rivers was very much like Dixie except they were all black. A bunch of kids about 6-5 and all of them could handle the ball and shoot it."

"It was really frustrating sitting there watching the tournament because it was just like I felt two weeks ago. If we could have gotten there, we could very easily have played for it. I have to feel that we would have had a good chance against Mercer because they wouldn't make us do anything we didn't want to and then Three Rivers was so drained from those overtime games the last night. I found myself sitting in the stands shaking my head and about ready to cry or yell or something. I really wish our kids had had the chance to play there this year. Win or lose, they worked so hard for two years they deserved the chance."

Looking at recruiting the coach said — "we're getting a line on some good ones. Of course, they're all thinking they're really going to hit the books this last nine weeks — get straight A's and go to Notre Dame. But that happens every year, too."

As for rumors of the end of CSI parting ways, Coach Mitchell said "Well, I found out when I was back there that I'm not unplayable but right now I'll be here next year."

his ability. Can he do it again? His arm and his head may say 'yes,' but the law of averages says emphatically 'no.' Some of the greatest pitchers in baseball history — among them Bob Gibson, Tom Seaver, Warren Spahn, Robin Roberts and Bob Lemon — never dominated their profession two years in a row.

That's not to say Guidry won't be as good a pitcher or better than he was last year. It's just that his record is unlikely to be as spectacular.

"I think I might be a better pitcher than last year but never ever again have as good a season," says Guidry. "Any pitcher won't win if his team doesn't score. I can pitch better or as well as I did last year, and if the club doesn't score runs because the other pitcher is doing as good a job as I'm doing then my record may not be as good."

Most observers of Guidry, however, feel he may have only scratched the surface of his talent.

"I think Ron improved as a pitcher as last season went along," says Bob Lemon, the Yankees' manager. "He started out being a thrower and toward the end of the season he was more of a pitcher. He didn't rely just on hard stuff all the time. You have to remember that Ron was always a reliever until two years ago."

course and rebuild it," he replied. Watson caught Wadkins at the 15th hole when he put a sand wedge two feet from the cup for a birdie that enabled him to go nine under. On the very next hole, he made his eagle with a nine iron.

"The eagle was surprising but welcome at that time," said Watson. "I felt very confident. The ball took one hop and trickled in. They are always luck when they go like that."

Wadkins, trying for his third victory in his last four tournament appearances, appeared to have the second-round lead safely tucked away when "the hole-in-one."

"When it rains, it pours," said Wadkins, who also has won the Los Angeles Open and is currently the only two-time victor on this year's PGA Tour.

"It (the ace) was a well-hit shot. I was trying to hit a six iron firm. It started right, turned left, hit a little slope to the left of the hole and then kicked in."

"I knew it was close, but when the ball disappeared I said 'Damn, the ball went in.'"

Watson was asked if he felt he could duplicate his feat in the final two rounds.

"If I were to shoot a 260, Pete Dye (the architect who designed Harbour Town) would tear up this that left him four strokes ahead of the next closest contenders — Bill Rogers, Mike Morley and Tom Kite, who all had 65 Friday.

"It happened very quickly there at the end," said Watson. "I picked up four shots in four holes and I don't know when I've played a better stretch of golf."

Although he has not yet won this year, Watson has had three second-place finishes, including being runner-up to Wadkins in the Tournament Players Championship last week.

"I'm playing about the same now as I did just before I won the Masters two years ago," Watson said. "My swing is good, and I'm not forcing it. The last couple of rounds I felt like I'm at the top part of my game."

course and rebuild it," he replied. Watson caught Wadkins at the 15th hole when he put a sand wedge two feet from the cup for a birdie that enabled him to go nine under. On the very next hole, he made his eagle with a nine iron.

"The eagle was surprising but welcome at that time," said Watson. "I felt very confident. The ball took one hop and trickled in. They are always luck when they go like that."

Wadkins, trying for his third victory in his last four tournament appearances, appeared to have the second-round lead safely tucked away when "the hole-in-one."

"When it rains, it pours," said Wadkins, who also has won the Los Angeles Open and is currently the only two-time victor on this year's PGA Tour.

"It (the ace) was a well-hit shot. I was trying to hit a six iron firm. It started right, turned left, hit a little slope to the left of the hole and then kicked in."

"I knew it was close, but when the ball disappeared I said 'Damn, the ball went in.'"

Watson was asked if he felt he could duplicate his feat in the final two rounds.

"If I were to shoot a 260, Pete Dye (the architect who designed Harbour Town) would tear up this that left him four strokes ahead of the next closest contenders — Bill Rogers, Mike Morley and Tom Kite, who all had 65 Friday.

"It happened very quickly there at the end," said Watson. "I picked up four shots in four holes and I don't know when I've played a better stretch of golf."

Although he has not yet won this year, Watson has had three second-place finishes, including being runner-up to Wadkins in the Tournament Players Championship last week.

"I'm playing about the same now as I did just before I won the Masters two years ago," Watson said. "My swing is good, and I'm not forcing it. The last couple of rounds I felt like I'm at the top part of my game."

This year Guidry may come back to reality

NEW YORK (UPI) — The dream is over for Ron Guidry, and he may find "Cloud Nine" filled with a little bit of rain this season.

In four days it's back to reality for the spindly-legged left-hander of the world champion New York Yankees and a chance to prove that his name does belong up there next to the great pitchers in baseball history.

The challenge is awesome. In the last 35 years only Sandy Koufax and Denny McLain ever put together two outstanding seasons in a row similar to the kind Guidry enjoyed with the Yankees last year.

To refresh the memory, Guidry posted a 25-3 record last year to set a major league record for pitchers winning 20 or more games in a season (28). He also had the second lowest ERA for a left-hander in American League history (1.74) and the most strikeouts by a Yankee pitcher (248).

"It was a season a lot of guys dream about having but never have," Guidry says. "Even some of the greatest pitchers never had a season like I did. People really haven't said too much about mine because they haven't found the right words to describe it yet. I had a good time thinking about it and the position it holds as one of the best ever recorded."

"Ah, but now comes the true test of his ability. Can he do it again? His arm and his head may say 'yes,' but the law of averages says emphatically 'no.' Some of the greatest pitchers in baseball history — among them Bob Gibson, Tom Seaver, Warren Spahn, Robin Roberts and Bob Lemon — never dominated their profession two years in a row.

That's not to say Guidry won't be as good a pitcher or better than he was last year. It's just that his record is unlikely to be as spectacular.

"I think I might be a better pitcher than last year but never ever again have as good a season," says Guidry. "Any pitcher won't win if his team doesn't score. I can pitch better or as well as I did last year, and if the club doesn't score runs because the other pitcher is doing as good a job as I'm doing then my record may not be as good."

Most observers of Guidry, however, feel he may have only scratched the surface of his talent.

"I think Ron improved as a pitcher as last season went along," says Bob Lemon, the Yankees' manager. "He started out being a thrower and toward the end of the season he was more of a pitcher. He didn't rely just on hard stuff all the time. You have to remember that Ron was always a reliever until two years ago."

TON GUIDRY . . . Is the dream over?

Record performance Watson eagles past Wadkins

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — Tom Watson, back in the form that made him the world's top golfer in the past two years, offset a hole-in-one by Lanny Wadkins with an eagle of his own Friday to shoot his second-straight 65 and surge into the lead midway through the Heritage Golf Classic.

Watson, a late starter, was two strokes off the pace when Wadkins sank a 179-yard ace at the 17th hole at Harbour Town Golf Links. But he caught up with a pair of back nine birdies, moved two strokes ahead when he put his 144-yard approach shot in the cup at the 16th hole and then built a three-stroke lead by sinking a 25-foot birdie putt on the final hole.

That gave Watson, who won 10 tournaments in 1977-78, including the Masters and British Open and was the leading money winner both years, a sixteenth two-day total of 12-under-par 130 in his bid for his first victory of the year.

Wadkins, who trailed Watson by one stroke after shooting a 66 in the opening round, posted a 67-133 that left him four strokes ahead of the next closest contenders — Bill Rogers, Mike Morley and Tom Kite, who all had 65 Friday.

"It happened very quickly there at the end," said Watson. "I picked up four shots in four holes and I don't know when I've played a better stretch of golf."

Golf kickoff on Sunday

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Men's Golf Association will kick off its 1979 season with a breakfast and a scramble tournament. The breakfast will be served from 8 to 10 a.m., but those who want to play in the tournament must sign up by 9:30 a.m. The tournament will follow the breakfast. All of those interested in joining the club are invited to attend.

Gymkhana on April 8

BUHL — The Blue Racers Jamboree Team of Buhl will hold a jackpot gymkhana April 8 at the Alma Morrison Arena. The gym-khana will feature several games on horses including barrel racing, pole bending, goat tying, seven barrels and flag races. The event will begin at 1:30 p.m., but those who want to participate must sign up by 12:30. There will be divisions for every age group.

Cleveland wants fight

CLEVELAND (UPI) — New Jersey's Meadowlands and Honolulu are mentioned most prominently as sites for September's World Boxing Council heavyweight championship fight between Larry Holmes and Earnie Shavers. But if Cleveland Browns owner Art Modell, who also operates Municipal Stadium, can swing a deal, the fight could be held at the 80,000-seat facility along the south shore of Lake Erie. Modell likes to have it in Cleveland, Modell said Friday in an interview from Palm Beach, Fla., with The Plain Dealer. "But I'm concerned about the television policy. I wouldn't want the fight unless the Cleveland area was blacked out for 200 miles. We'd need to that to draw the out-of-towners," said Modell, who plans to return to Cleveland next week. Modell said he would contact promoter Don King.

Tennis pairings set

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — Australian's John Alexander upset top seed and defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 Friday to join New Yorkers Vitas Gerulaitis and John McEnroe in the semifinals of the Ramazzotti Cup world championship tennis tournament. Gerulaitis defeated Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-2, while McEnroe wrapped up his semi berth with a 6-1, 6-3 victory over Rhodesia's Andrew Pattison.

Soviet swims to record

MOSCOW (UPI) — Fourteen-year-old Svetlana Varganova of the Soviet Union Friday set a world record in the 200 meter women's breaststroke event at Minsk in competition between the Soviet Union and East German junior teams, the official Tass news agency said. She clocked 2:31.09, breaking the record of 2:31.42 set by Lina Kachoushite of the Soviet Union in August, 1978.

Connors to be in WCT

DALLAS (UPI) — Jimmy Connors, who has already clinched a spot in the field for the World Championship Tennis finals, notified officials of the WCT tournament Friday he will participate in the event. Connors, who won the WCT championship in 1977, skipped the tourney last year even though he had qualified for the competition. The WCT finals will be held April 30-May 6 in Dallas with eight competitors qualifying. Connors has compiled 350 points through four tournaments in the eight-year tour. The rest of the top eight positions are currently held by John McEnroe, Arthur Ashe, Brian Gottfried, Roscoe Tanner, Guillermo Vilas, Vitas Gerulaitis and Bjorn Borg.

Bowlers to enter 'fame'

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Dave Soutar, Kansas City, and Nelson Burton Jr., St. Louis, two pro bowling greats with 20 Professional Bowlers Association titles between them, were elected Friday to the PBA Hall of Fame. The two legklers will formally be inducted into the Hall at ceremonies April 16 prior to a $150,000 Tournament of Champions in Akron. Soutar, 39, has won 15 PBA titles, including the 1961 PBA National Championship at age 21, the youngest bowler ever to win that major title. He began 1979 in ninth place in career earnings with $391,695 and has won $15,565 this year. Burton, 36, is a 13-time PBA winner, his most recent victory coming in the BPAA U.S. Open last year in Greensboro, N.C. Burton has lifetime earnings of $431,739, fifth on the all-time list.

Soccer season to open

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Soccer League opens its 46th season tonight with the newly formed Las Vegas Seagulls playing in Los Angeles. On Sunday, the California Sunshine host the Sacramento Gold in an afternoon contest.

Cunningham new assistant

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Gary Cunningham, who resigned last week as UCLA head basketball coach, will be assistant vice chancellor of alumni at the university, it was announced Friday.

Oregon vetoes chinook plan

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission voted 3 to 2 Thursday not to extend the spring chinook angling season on lower Columbia River beaches past the Saturday closure. Forrest Meuret, of Madras, a member of the board of the Oregon Wildlife Federation, said the board will meet Sunday to discuss filing an initiative petition to designate Columbia spring and summer chinook as game fish only. The designation would ban commercial fishing for the species. Both the federation and the Izak Walton League have approved resolutions supporting such an initiative.

NHL adds four WHA teams

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National Hockey League added the Edmonton Oilers, Winnipeg Jets, Quebec Nordiques and New England Whalers Friday when the NHL's expansion plan was approved by the potential applicants. John Ziegler, the president of the NHL, revealed, "We are expanding the NHL by taking in four teams for the 1979-80 season. We are not taking in four World Hockey Association teams. We are conducting an expansion draft which will give the new teams some NHL players." Each of the four former WHA franchises will pay $6 million to the NHL, with a down payment of $4.6 million required by June 1. Two of the teams in the six-team WHA did not apply for admission to the NHL. However, the Birmingham Bulls will receive $2.8 million in repatriation and the Cincinnati Stingers $2.3 million.

youngsters can be shown how much fun it is to play the great game of hockey." Howard Baldwin, president of the WHA, who also has the same title with the New England Whalers, said, "The important thing is that it's over. We have been at war for seven years and all during that time I maintained that hockey could only be successful with the one league concept. "I believe we got the better of the deal in the expansion" draft and in the apportionment of players."

The expansion for a realignment in the NHL's four divisions in order to accommodate the new league of 21 teams. Next season the NHL will be aligned as follows: Norris Division — Detroit, Los Angeles,

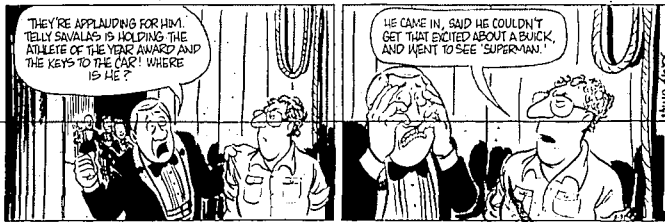

The NHL will play an 80-game schedule in 1979-80, with each team playing two home and two away games with all other member clubs. The number of teams making the playoffs will increase to 16, including the four divisional winners and 12 wild card teams. There will be no byes and the preliminary round will be a best three-of-five. "I don't look at this as the end of the WHA, rather the rejuvenation of hockey," Ziegler noted. "Now the tremendous effort that was expended when we (the NHL and WHA) were at war can be used for the betterment of hockey. Hopefully, 6-year-old

Under the expansion plan, NHL teams will be able to reclaim WHA players whose rights they own. The new teams, however, then will make a priority selection of two skaters and two goaltenders from the list of reclaimed players. In June an expansion draft will stock the new teams. Each of the present 17 NHL clubs will protect 15 skaters and two goaltenders. The order of the draft among the former WHA teams will be determined by lot. No NHL team can lose more than four players or one goalie without its consent."

Pats' aide endorsed

NEWTON, Mass. (UPI) — John Hannah, the New England Patriots' All-Pro guard, endorsed a Pats' assistant coach Friday to replace Chuck Fairbanks, saying it was too late for an outside man to enter the scene. "I think the new coach should come from within and we have some of the best assistant coaches in the league," said Hannah, who received an award from a liquor company as the NFL's premier offensive lineman. "We've got a good system and we know it. A new man would cause doubts. Every one would be wondering what he would do. It's too late for that now," Hannah said.

TANK McNAMARA

Offensive coordinator Ron Erhardt, thought by many to be Fairbanks' heir apparent, said he also felt the new man should come from within. And he projected himself as a worthy candidate. "I think it's important for continuity's sake if nothing else. We have a good staff and a winning system. The players understand it. I think it would be a great opportunity for me. That's what every assistant coach dreams of. And I'd have some things to offer," he said.

Umpires still discussing ultimatum laid down by major league owners

CHICAGO (UPI) — Major league baseball umpires met with their lawyer Friday in an attempt to make a joint response to both leagues' ultimatum that they sign contracts for the coming season by the end of the day. Fifty of the 52 umpires began meeting around 11 a.m. CST in closed session to discuss the leagues' demand that they end their strike and agree to the terms dictated to them in the leagues' last contract offer. Two umpires, Paul Pryor of the National League and Ted Hendry of the American League, Thursday signed contracts for this season. The Umpires' Association conducts collective bargaining with the leagues on behalf of its members, though each umpire must sign an individual contract.

Chicago's legal counsel for the umpires, has not met with league representatives since March 18. He said a Pennsylvania federal judge's ruling earlier this week that refused to order the umpires back to work was a major victory in the umpires' battle to win higher salaries. The current salary range for major league umpires is between $17,500 and slightly more than $40,000. Phillips said 12 of the umpires earn less than $25,000 and are paid less than their counterparts in other major league sports. During the exhibition season, both the American and National Leagues have relied on umpires from the minor league, high school and college ranks. Both leagues have indicated they would begin to hire the stand-ins for the regular season — which begins next Wednesday in Seattle and Cincinnati — if the regular umpires did not come to terms Friday. "Technically, I guess we're all fired right now," American League umpire Larry Barnett said. The umpires staged a one-day work stoppage last season to back demands for higher salaries. They indicated upon their return that the would state a "work-action" before the start of the 1979 season unless their demands were met.

Baker wins pole position

BRISTOL, Tenn. (UPI) — Buddy Baker, driving a Chevrolet, shattered the track qualifying record Friday to win the pole position for Sunday's Southeastern 500. Baker, of Charlotte, N.C., topped the high-banked speedway at 111,668 mph to break the old mark of 110,958 mph set last August by Lennie Pond of Petersburg, Va. Darrell Waltrip of Franklin, Tenn., also driving a Chevrolet, took the outside pole with a speed of 111,999 mph in defense of his 1978 Southeastern championship. The first ten positions in the 30-car field were filled Friday, the remaining 20 will be decided Saturday. NASCAR's Baby Grand Division drivers will compete in a 100 lap race Saturday.

WINTHROP

I WON THIS GREAT PRIZE AT TERRY'S PARTY...

AND I DIDN'T HAVE TO DO ANYTHING!

TERRY'S NOW SAID YOU CAN HAVE THIS WONDERFUL PRIZE, WINTHROP...

IF YOU GO HOME RIGHT NOW...

HEY WINTHROP! DID YOU TELL ROBBIE THAT I'M SIMPLE-MINDED?!

KNOW WHAT I'M GOING TO DO? I'M GOING TO... OH, I ALMOST FORGOT...

"YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO REMAIN SILENT UNTIL YOU CAN CONSULT WITH YOUR ATTORNEY..."

AW COME ON, WINTHROP! LEND ME A DIME, WILL YA?

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE DIME I LENT YOU LAST WEEK?

I TOOK SUZANNE SOMEWHERE ON A WHIRLWIND TOUR OF DISNEYLAND.

I HEAR THEY'RE GOING TO PUT ME IN THE FANCY KENNEL FOR THE WEEKEND.

WELL I DON'T CARE HOW SWANKY THEY ARE...

I DON'T INTEND TO LOSE MORE THAN 15 PERCENT.

MAN, YOU'RE HOPELESS, FRED! YOU HAVEN'T GIVEN ME MY BLUFFER...

YOU FORGOT TO TURN THE TV ON FOR ME...

I'LL SAY THIS FOR HIM... HE TIES A GOOD STRONG KNOT.
