

Irrigators may avoid old acreage restrictions

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
 TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls irrigators were surprised to learn on a recent visit to Washington, D.C., they will probably be freed from acreage restrictions of the 1902 Reclamation Act.

During recent hearings before a U.S. Senate committee on the upcoming enforcement of the act, Interior Department Secretary Cecil Andrus proposed an amendment to the law which would validate exemptions contained in "pay out" contracts between the government and various irrigators.

Under the proposal, the Twin Falls Canal Co. and 55 other Idaho irrigation and canal companies would become exempt from the 160-acre restriction of the 1902 law, which Interior plans to begin enforcing in a year. The controversial acreage limitation is the subject of several other proposed amendments which seek to raise the limit.

Payout contracts, signed by over 50 Idaho irrigation districts during the 1930s, were supposed to relieve those districts from compliance with the acreage limitation on lands served by federal water projects as soon as the district finished paying construction costs on the project.

But these contracts were declared invalid by a federal court in California in 1976 in the Tule Lake case, because the contracts had not been ratified by Congress.

Irene Link of Hansen, who recently visited Washington to attend the March 23 hearings, said she was surprised to hear Andrus' proposal that Congress should now ratify the contracts.

Mrs. Link and many other Twin Falls Canal Co. water users believed their contract would not be valid and that they would not be exempted.

In written testimony, Andrus said, "There is a basic question of equity involved where people signed, in good faith, what they thought was a legally binding contract with the government. . . I believe we should honor those commitments."

The secretary's exemption would mean the Twin Falls and Northside Canal Cos., the American Falls Reservoir District, the Mindoka and Burley Irrigation districts and 52 other Idaho irrigation districts, encompassing a total of 1,258,965 acres of farm land, are no longer limited to 160 acres per family member, upon repayment.

The Twin Falls Canal Co. has completed payment on Jackson Lake formed in the 1920s. The Northside Canal Co. has 20 years to go on payments for the Palisades Reservoir. The American Falls Reservoir District never incurred any obligations.

Twin Falls and Northside Canal Cos. attorney John Rosholt of Twin Falls said he has advised Northside shareholders who are in excess of the 160-acre limitation to complete their payments.

However, Interior officials say they're uncertain whether the exemption would apply to the residency requirement of the 1902 act, which says landowners must live within 50 miles of a farm that receives federal water.

Rosholt said residency exemptions aren't mentioned in contracts of those companies, so they probably would still apply.

A bill introduced this year into the Senate by Sen. Frank Church would lift the residency requirement and would also relieve any district from the act's restrictions upon completion of payment, with or without a contract. Church's staff said S-4 will be taken up by the Senate in late May.

There are 65 districts in the country which stand recordable contracts covered by the Andrus proposal. Other districts which have paid construction costs but didn't sign contracts would not be helped by the secretary's amendment, according to Bureau of Reclamation officials.

Oil price controls to be lifted June 1

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A somber President Carter announced Thursday night he will lift oil price controls starting June 1 and demand other energy-saving sacrifices "in a great national effort . . . to give us energy security."

"I'll give it to you straight: Each one of us will have to use less oil and pay more for it," he said in a nationally broadcast, 24-minute special policy address from the Oval Office.

Trying to sweeten the program for consumers faced with more inflation and higher gasoline pump prices, Carter proposed to fight for congressional enactment of taxes on the "huge and undeserved windfall profits" the oil companies will reap from decontrol.

He said such a tax — always rejected by Congress in the past — would be used to help compensate lower-income Americans for the higher fuel prices and to develop "exciting new energy programs."

And he urged the public to clamor for what he called "a new energy security" as the sun will rise, the oil companies can be expected to fight to keep the profits which they have not earned.

He urged people to listen carefully as he outlined the mixture of mandatory conservation steps, voluntary measures and proposed new laws included in this follow-up to his 1977 "moral equivalent of war" energy address.

He pleaded for cooperation and support in an immediately controversial undertaking.

In his new plan, Carter:

- Announced he is decontrolling oil prices so that domestic prices rise to world levels by the autumn of 1981. The world price now is $14.64 per barrel, compared to an average U.S. price of $9.60.

Called on Congress to adopt a 50 percent windfall profits tax as a companion piece to decontrol so that oil companies will not reap a bonanza of more than $10 billion in higher prices by the end of 1982.

Many members of Congress have said there is no chance a windfall profits tax will be passed. But administration officials predicted chances are good, saying Carter has taken the political heat by ordering decontrol and Congress must now either pass the tax or take responsibility for letting oil profits skyrocket.

Proposed an Energy Security Fund to aid low income families, who would be hardest-hit by higher prices under decontrol. It would be financed by the windfall profits tax and by overcharge claims against oil companies, of which $80 million have been collected and more than $3 billion are pending.

Administration officials said payments from the fund would total about $100 a year for the average family with an income of $7,800 a year or less.

Asked Congress to immediately approve limiting thermostats in non-residential buildings to 65 degrees in winter and 80 degrees in summer, and said he will order the mandatory measure into effect as soon as it passed. It would be enforced by building inspectors and other local authorities.

Ordered the Environmental Protection Agency to delay for one year a planned anti-pollution reduction in the lead content of gasoline from 0.8 grams per gallon to 0.5 grams per gallon. The delay until Oct. 1, 1980, is expected to save up to 30,000 barrels of oil daily.

Directed the Office of Management and Budget to phase out some 130,000 free parking spaces for federal employees by Oct. 1, 1979, by instituting a parking fee. The change is expected to save up to 6,000 gallons of gasoline a day in Washington, D.C., alone by promoting use of mass transit.

Said he will set state-by-state targets for voluntary gasoline reduction, with the threat of weekend gasoline station closings or other mandatory measures for states that fail to comply.

Called on all drivers to cut back their auto use by 10-20 miles a week.

Geographical split in decontrol reaction

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Reaction to President Carter's plan to decontrol domestic crude oil prices was generally split Thursday along geographical lines — praised by those from oil-producing states and damned by others.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said Carter's speech was an admission his original energy program was "totally misdirected."

"Although he has taken a half step in the right direction — by ordering decontrol of domestic oil products — he is again proposing a series of complicated and costly tax credits and rebates and another multibillion-dollar crude oil tax — none of which hold much promise for alleviating domestic energy shortages any time soon," Dole said.

Rep. Clarence Brown, R-Ohio, a leading Republican on energy issues, said the tax plan "is likely to produce more tax revenue than it is additional oil."

"I would have difficulty voting on any additional tax," Brown said, "given the mood of the country."

Charles J. DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, said the speech "is a significant and necessary step toward increased domestic petroleum production, increased conservation, more rapid development of other American energy resources and eventual reduction of our dangerous dependence on imported oil."

William S. Morris, vice president of Edison Electric Institute, commended Carter "for a much stronger emphasis on the production side of the energy question."

Ellen Beriman, executive director of the Consumer Energy Council of America said:

"Oil price increases are the No. 1 contributor to inflation. At a time when inflation is rising at 14 percent and the president asks workers to limit their wage increases to 7 percent, it is the height of hypocrisy to remove price controls from the oil industry."

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said the nation is in such a "grave crisis" that he cannot oppose decontrol of oil prices. But he said there must be a windfall profits tax and mandatory conservation initiatives.

Final vote after Easter recess Senate favors overturn of school-prayer ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted tentatively Thursday to overturn Supreme Court rulings banning voluntary prayer in public schools.

Approved 47-37 was an amendment by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., which would restore the right of voluntary prayer in public schools.

Both of Idaho's senators (Democrat Frank Church and Republican James McClure) voted for the amendment.

The amendment was to a bill to split up the Health, Education and Welfare Department, the government's biggest bureaucracy, by creating a separate department of education.

A final vote on the bill is not expected until the Senate returns from an Easter recess beginning when the Senate adjourns next Tuesday.

The Helms amendment was proposed after a motion to kill offered by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., failed in a 48-43 tie vote.

When it became apparent the Helms amendment would be approved, Ribicoff switched his vote "against" as that — under the Senate rules — he could move to reconsider the vote.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia then moved to recess until Monday, when the Ribicoff vote to reconsider will become the pending business.

The motion to recess until Monday was approved 55-27.

The Helms amendment apparently came as a surprise to Ribicoff, floor manager of the bill to establish a separate education department. But Ribicoff did not speak against it.

The amendment would bar the Supreme Court from reviewing any case arising from a state law allowing voluntary prayers in public schools and public buildings.

On introducing his amendment, Helms said he had joined the Senate chaplains in prayer when the Senate begins deliberations for the day.

"I could not avoid the irony that while we in the Senate begin our daily activities by asking God's blessing, Helms said, "the Supreme Court has denied this same privilege to millions of the nation's school children."

Only about a half-dozen other senators were on the floor when Helms spoke.

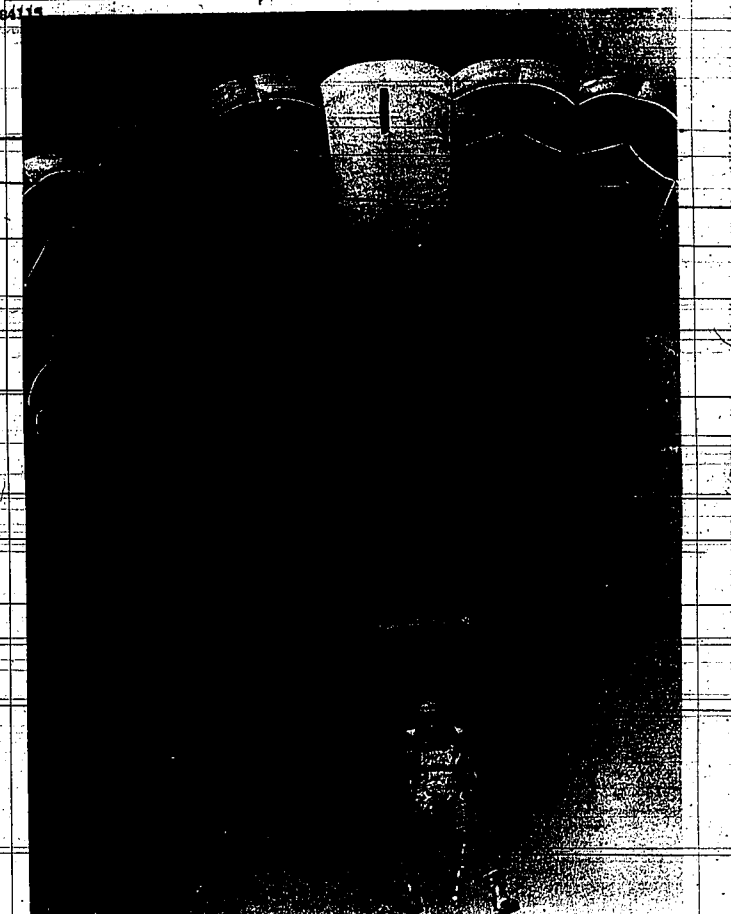

Helms said Supreme Court rulings had "distorted" the meaning of the First Amendment in holding that its provisions for separation of church and state ruled out school prayer.

"The Supreme Court, in doing so, has overturned more than 200 years of American custom," he said.

Only Sen. James Exon, D-Nebr., joined Helms in speaking for the amendment — "It is something wrong whatever with voluntary prayer in our public schools," he said.

Ribicoff, chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, said only that the constitutional question had not been considered by the panel when it sent the main bill to the Senate floor.

If not overturned, the amendment could end final passage of the measure, which appeared to have broad support in the Senate prior to approval of the amendment.

House votes to cut off Panama aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a surprise setback for President Carter, the House voted Thursday to cut off all military aid to Panama's government.

The administration is seeking about $12 million in development aid for Panama from the $8.6 billion foreign aid bill, but the House voted 246-150 to eliminate the money from the measure.

Rep. Robert Baumann, R-Md., urged the vote on grounds no aid to Panama should be approved until other measures implementing the 1978 Panama Canal treaties are passed and Congress knows precisely what the overall agreement involves.

The House action contributed to growing concern in the administration over relations with Panama.

The House last week voted overwhelmingly to cut military assistance to Panama from the foreign military aid bill.

And on Wednesday, the House Merchant Marines and Fisheries Committee reported out a bill to implement the canal treaties but included a number of provisions the administration says violate the agreement.

The treaties give Panama control of the Panama Canal and the revenues it provides. But the merchant marines committee bill would require that the revenues be sent to the U.S. treasury and also would require special legislation before any American property was turned over to Panama.

And on Wednesday, the House

Pakistani violence

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI) — Pakistanis took to the streets Thursday, calling for the blood of military president Gen. Muhammad Zia-ul-Haq, to avenge the hanging of former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. About 3,000 mourners burst into the streets from a peaceful memorial service at Iqbal Park, Rawalpindi, a political park, chanting "Zia is a dog!" and the sunny spring afternoon ended in smoke and flames from burning buses and a blazing newspaper office.

Hair dryer order

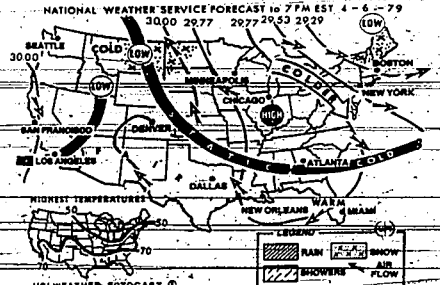

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sears, Roebuck and Co. stores have been instructed to pull all hair dryers containing asbestos heat shields off the shelves until a controversy over the asbestos link to cancer is resolved, Sears officials said Thursday. "Private consumer groups have charged that some hair dryers emit asbestos, which, especially when inhaled, have been cited as a potential cause of cancer."

Execution of Evans stayed for one week

ATMORE, Ala. (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist granted a week's stay of execution late Thursday to John Louis Evans III, only six hours before the 29-year-old Texas drifter would have been granted his death wish. "I don't believe it," Evans was reported as saying when told his execution had been stayed until April 13. "They're going to mess with me again." A priest who gave the condemned killer the news when he returned from the death row shower said Evans placed his head and hands on the wall of his cell and cried. Father Kevin Dulgann, Evans' death row confidante, insisted he thought the stay would lead Evans to begin fighting for his life. "He was waiting for a sign from God," Dulgann told reporters outside Holman Prison. "I think this is the sign." "He has mixed emotions at this point," Dulgann said. "I think he wanted to go to death tonight. I think he was prepared." Dulgann himself burst into tears. Evans had been scheduled to die in the state's bright yellow electric chair at 12:01 a.m. CST today for killing Edward A. Nasser Jr., a

Mobile pawnbroker, in a robbery that netted him only the gun with which he killed his victim. Evans had already eaten what was to have been his last meal — steak, potatoes, salad and two cans of beer. A cheer welled up on death row when the news was heard on television. Rehnquist, after deliberating all day, issued a seven-page opinion saying that had he been voting as a member of the full court on the appeal by Evans' mother, Betty, of Beaumont, Texas, "I would vote to deny the stay."

Philosophers' studies

Most young Soviets don't have religion

MOSCOW (UPI) — Most young people in the Soviet Union are now atheists and are no longer under the influence of religion and the church as a result of a Communist Party campaign, two Soviet philosophers say. In a recent article in the newspaper Pravda, philosophers V. Timofeyev and P. Kurochkin said that studies taken in the Chuvash Autonomous Republic show that 97 to 98 percent of the people under 20 are atheists and 92 to 94 percent of those from age 21 to 35 have no religion. "In other words, the portion of the population that is most active in society is no longer under the influence of religion and the church," the article said. The two writers report that the official atheism campaign of the government and Communist Party has been so successful that it is being moved from the earlier tactic of criticizing religion to stressing the advantages of atheism in modern society.

"As Soviet society advances and as religious beliefs are stamped out, both in social and in private life, research and popularization of the positive, creative nature of atheism are growing in depth and scope," the article said. It said the main concern now is to clearly demonstrate what man gains by breaking away from religion and how a scientific-materialistic world outlook benefits everyone. "The report says atheism has been steadily on the rise since the Revolution in 1917. It said two-thirds of the adult population in the towns and one-third of those in the countryside were non-believers as early as the mid-1930s. "Rapid social, scientific and moral progress of the Soviet country, industrialization and urbanization, the growing scale of creative activity by the masses, the development of the mass media and propaganda as well as the party's gigantic educational work have combined to bring about a mass-scale abandonment of religion and the church by the people of this country," it said.

Truck talks to resume

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The locked-out Teamsters union and the strikebound trucking industry moved back to serious bargaining Thursday under the eye of federal mediators but neither side appeared optimistic an end to the five-day work stoppage was at hand. Teamsters president Frank Fitzsimmons and chief industry negotiator J. Curtis Counts led their teams into the first closed-door negotiating sessions since the Teamsters called a selective strike early Sunday and the trucking industry responded with a lockout.

Sadat waves document issued by opposition deputies who oppose treaty

Sadat warns Arab detractors

By United Press International
Anwar Sadat struck back at his Arab detractors Thursday, bidding "a thousand goodbyes" to their hard-line position against peace with Israel and warning that Egypt would avenge acts of terrorism "one thousand fold." Sadat denounced the economic and political sanctions imposed against Egypt by Arabs at the Baghdad conference as "filthy shamelessness," and assured his people the oil and aid embargoes "posed no problem whatsoever."
Sadat also urged the 1.1 million Palestinians of the Jordan West Bank and Gaza Strip to renounce the "clownish" anti-treaty statements by the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization, and join the negotiations on Palestinian autonomy.

Sadat's declarations came in a three-hour speech to the 386-member National Assembly, in which he presented the Israeli peace pact for ratification. But the speech was directed to the Palestinian people and was devoted largely to "exposing" the Arab hardliners.
In his speech, Sadat also announced that restrictions on the establishment of political parties were being lifted and promised "full democracy" soon.

Sadat promised further liberalization measures following ratification of the peace pact with Israel.
"But as of now I tell you there are no restrictions on the establishment of parties," he said.
Meanwhile, in Yamit in the Israeli-occupied Sinai, Israel Prime Minister Menachem Begin told angry Sinai settlers they must give up their homes to achieve peace with Egypt and maintained "there's no turning back now."

Brown defends SALT II

NEW YORK (UPI) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown said Thursday a strategic arms limitation treaty with Russia will be concluded in "weeks" and warned that Senate attempts to amend it could kill the pact and turn it into a tragedy for the world.

Brown said in a speech to the Foreign Policy Association Association that a failure to approve the SALT II treaty would cause an arms race requiring $30 billion in extra weapons and fueling inflation.

He said in answer to a question after the speech that the pact, six years in the making, would be concluded in "I would say weeks." But Brown refused to pin down beyond that, noting that earlier predictions by other officials had not panned out.

Brown said that agreement on the pact to limit offensive strategic weapons — bombers and missiles — is "very close," with "two or three remaining minor issues" still being negotiated. But he said prospects of settling them are "good."

The defense secretary, in an indirect warning to the Senate, which must approve the treaty, warned that attempts to amend the pact would mean the whole document would have to be renegotiated.

"Any attempts to amend the pact would have the same effect as a rejection," Brown said in the question-and-answer period. "It would have a very, very negative effect — and I think it would be a tragedy for the U.S. and the rest of the world."

Coming elections put Britain at crossroads

By R.W. APPLEBY, Jr.
N.Y. Times Service

LONDON — On May 3, British voters go to the polls in a general election that may prove the most significant since the sweeping Labor victory at the end of World War II.

Not since the 1945 election have the two major parties offered such a distinctly different vision of Britain's future. The middle-of-the-road consensus known as "butskellism" — after R.A. Butler of the Conservatives and the late Hugh Gaitskell of Labor — has been replaced by sharp ideological conflict, with Mrs. Margaret Thatcher of the Tories promising rewards for individual enterprise and turning her back on collectivism.

As the campaign begins, the Conservatives, who have been in opposition since February 1974, are overwhelming favorites.

Almost every by-election during the last four years has shown a swing to the Tories of at least five per cent and sometimes much more. Although by-elections usually overstate shifts in electoral allegiance, because they tend to bring out heavy voters, the latest public-opinion polls confirm the general picture.

A survey by Opinion Research Center, in which 1,050 people were interviewed last Tuesday and Wednesday, gave the conservatives 53 per cent and labor 33 per cent — an 18-point Tory lead. Similar polls by Gallup, Market Opinion Research International and others have shown Conservative margins ranging from seven points upward.

British polls are less volatile than those in the United States, in large part because they measure the popular vote rather than the actual electoral contests: the races for the 635 seats in the House of Commons, the outcome of which decides which party forms the government.

Even so, party professionals will be astonished if Labor wins a clear majority on May 3. They expect one of four results: a Conservative victory without a majority over all other parties combined; a Conservative victory with a small majority; a Conservative victory with a margin of 30 seats or more, which would protect the party against by-election slippage; or a Labor victory giving the party the largest parliamentary contingent but not a majority — in other words, a continuation of the status quo.

The increasing strength of minor parties in recent years, together with a feeling on the part of some swing voters that no party should be given a sweeping mandate, has made it difficult for either Labor or the Conservatives to gain large majorities. In the nine elections since 1950, only four have produced a majority of 30 seats or more. In 1974, the February election produced no majority at all and the October election gave Labor a majority of only 5 seats, which was quickly wiped out in by-elections.

"The incidence of narrow majorities is one of the things that gives me pause while looking at a generally pleasant picture," says one of the senior Tory members of Parliament, who will serve in Mrs. Thatcher's Cabinet if the party wins. "The other is the tendency of our voters to stay home, vote far ahead. The hard-core Tory vote is a fear vote — fear of socialism — and it doesn't materialize when the Socialists seem unlikely to win."

In most elections since the war, the party that trailed as the campaign began has gained ground as it unfolded. Labor strategists hope that the same thing will happen this year, and they plan to help the process along by contrasting Prime Minister James Callaghan's experience with Mrs. Thatcher's lack of it. In the course of three weeks of campaigning, they believe, there is a real chance that the Conservative leader will make a major error.

"We must hammer away at her," an advisor to the prime minister commented, "and force her to say what she intends to do. She says she will cut taxes. All right, then. Where will she find the money? What social welfare programs does she propose to reduce?"

In an effort to show up what he considers Mrs. Thatcher's inadequacies, Callaghan last week accepted an invitation for a series of television debates with the Conservative leader. It would have been an innovation in British politics. But Mrs. Thatcher, unwilling to risk her lead, has refused to take part.

The Tories, for their part, will try to make the voters concentrate not only on Labor's recent difficulties — unemployment, strikes and a lack of economic growth — but also on the long-term Labor record. If he had his way, a Conservative strategist said Tuesday, every Conservative candidate would be required to include these four sentences in his stump speeches:

"Every Conservative government since the war has cut income tax. Every Labor government has increased it. Every Conservative government since the war has cut unemployment. Every Labor government has increased it."

Chicagoans kiss the mayor just like they always have

By MIKE ROYKO

CHICAGO — Some interesting questions concerning political etiquette have been created by the impending election of Jane Byrne as mayor of Chicago. They concern kissing.

Because she is of the female persuasion, Mr. Byrne has found herself being kissed during many of her campaign appearances.

Just the other night, she attended the annual ward dinner and booze bash of Ald. Vito Marzullo, the boss of the 25th Ward. Little Vito greeted her by standing on his toes and planting a kiss on her cheek.

Not long ago, at a meeting of ward bosses, Eddie Quigley, the vote-snatchingly ruler of the city's sewer workers, seized her and smooched her on the lips.

And at a joint campaign appearance, LeRoy Johnson, Johnson duck planted a kiss on her mouth.

All of this kissing prompted a reporter to ask Mrs. Byrne which of these politicians was the superior kisser. She did not answer, but the look on her face indicated that none of their kisses would cause a girl to breathe heavily or feel the need for a cold shower.

These are the many other kisses that have been aimed at Mrs. Byrne's lips, cheeks, chin, forehead, elbow, Adam's apple and nose have caused concern in some quarters.

A feminist complained to me: "I guess she realizes that it's sexist to let these men kiss her the way they do? One of the marks of the male chauvinist is that he thinks he has the right to greet women by giving them an unsolicited and unwanted kiss. She should make them stop before they begin pinching or grabbing."

That may be true. On the other hand, there are members of both sexes who are compulsive — social snobs. When they arrive at parties or other social functions, they kiss half the other guests. When they leave, they kiss them again. I know a hostess whose man comes to her parties. She once found open her door, gushed "I'm so glad you could make it" and kissed the guy who was delivering the liquor.

Rather than being an act of sexism, I think much social-kissing results from the way a person is reared. Most social kissers came from families that went in for a lot of kissing and hugging. You show me a man who is a social kisser and I'll bet that when he was a young fellow he was turned around some aunt was slobbering over him. These habits tend to be passed down from generation to generation. For example, my father used to kiss me every time I came out and to this day when I attend a party, I usually give somebody a pinch.

It's traditional for people in politics to try and get their pictures taken shaking hands with mayors and Presidents, or even standing next to them. Then they put the pictures on their office walls to impress the gullible.

"So you can bet that all these politicians kissing Jane are making sure — that somebody snips their picture so they can put them on their walls in City Hall.

In itself, there's probably no harm in that. But the Chicago law of averages says that a certain percentage of them will eventually be indicted and convicted of something.

"So how is that going to look? From time to time during the next four years, we'll be picking up the newspapers and reading that some alderman has been convicted. And you can bet that the papers will dig out an old picture of him kissing Jane and the caption will say: 'Alderman convicted of sinning and kissing Jane while in office.'"

That's a valid concern, but I don't think it will cause her any political damage. Many people will probably assume that she is merely kissing a fellow city official — good-bye — as he leaves for prison, and will think she has a kind heart. Another complaint I've heard went this way: "I don't think it dignified for someone who is certain to be mayor of this city to be going around being kissed by all these politicians. That is a very high office, and the holder of it has the responsibility of showing dignity, so I hope it ends after the election."

Actually, there is nothing really new about a Chicago mayor being kissed by loyal party members, favor seekers and those who don't care which side of their bread is buttered on just as long as they get a nip of the crust.

The late Mayor Daley, in his famous kiss-my-mistake speech directed at some of his critics, noted that his mistletoe was planted to the seat of his trousers.

This was not news to members of the Daley Machine, because for years they had been sucking off the milk of the royal mistletoe.

The kissing of mayors is, in fact, a Chicago tradition. All that has changed is the target area. Jane Byrne will not be the first Chicago mayor to have been kissed by her followers — she will merely be the first who has been kissed above the belt.

If all of this kissing displeases Mrs. Byrne, I'm sure that all she has to do is send word to the ward bosses and other political creatures that she would prefer that they show their affection some other way — maybe by bowing, curtsying or prostrating themselves on the floor or sidewalks. Some of them are already acting that way.

Or she might just get the message across by giving one of the kisses — a slap in the face. Of course, if she does that, hundreds of them will get in line and plead to be slapped too.

Whatever course she takes, I think she should make a special point of dodging further kisses from sewer boss Eddie Quigley. If Quigley kisses her again, somebody in City Hall might ask her to refrain from using the office water cooler.

All in Jerome should share darkness

Peggy Davis and a couple of other young mothers think the streets of Jerome aren't safe for their kids.

At least they have the fear of crossing a neighborhood street in the dark.

Even police chief Howard DuBois acknowledges the darkened street by the Davis residence has been plagued with an occasional prowler and petty thief.

With a population of less than 10,000 people and no real slums, Jerome seems an unlikely turf for street gangs and lurking criminal types.

But Mrs. Davis told the Jerome School Board the other night that "people are afraid to cross the street" in her neighborhood because the street is inadequately lighted at night.

The young mother petitioned the council to put a street light on the corner of Eighth St. E. and Adams.

The city council didn't see the light. The city refused to put a new street lamp on 8th Street after Jerome Mayor Marshall Everheart noted a recent federal study showed lighted streets can reduce fear of crime but don't reduce street crime itself.

The mayor could have added that this same Law Enforcement Assistance Administration study completed early this year went as far as to suggest well-lit streets actually promote some street crime because burglars, car thieves and purse snatchers can better see what they are doing.

Mayor Everheart also correctly told the young mothers they had better become accustomed to darkened avenues because street lighting will rapidly become an expendable item in an energy-short age.

Clearly in Idaho, where cities are now looking at ways to drastically cut expenditures in light of the 1 percent tax limiting initiative, dark streets may well become a way of life.

The Jerome City Council, then, has no reason to regret the decision to deny Mrs. Davis a street light.

No reason unless the council is guilty of selectively cutting the illumination on Jerome's streets.

Mrs. Davis claims streets in front of the city councilmen's houses and in the mayor's neighborhood are well-lit — often with two street lights per block.

That wouldn't seem just.

Jerome housewives can fairly argue if they must tremble in darkened streets, everyone in Jerome should know the fear of shadows in the night.

Perhaps the councilmen will see the light and draft a plan to insure uniform reduction in Jerome street lighting.

OPEC's oil like U.S. grain

By GEORGE F. WILL

WASHINGTON — America is not famous for selling its commodities at prices below those the market will bear. But Americans resort Arab nations that treat oil — their sole resource, and a non-renewable one — the way America treats grain: restricting production to support the price.

Actually OPEC's behavior has been economically rational. And OPEC's worst effect — on America — is not OPEC's fault: It has become an alibi for politicians eager to export the blame for the inflation mania to Washington.

The October War may have been the catalyst of OPEC's price revolution of 1973, but there were sufficient economic reasons for the revolution: "It was coming in any case — it was coming because of soaring production in the Persian Gulf states. Production there supplied 92 percent of the world's — non-meat — production between 1969 and 1973. To sustain the rate of growth of world demand for energy, Persian Gulf production would have had to double between 1973 and 1978.

By necessary production facilities in the Gulf (pipelines, loading facilities, etc.) could not be provided without unjustifiable exertions. So demand probably would have soon pulled prices up to near OPEC's January 1974 levels. OPEC's political (as distinct from economic) action has been to deal with the United States deals with grain — limiting production to support prices at the chosen level. And even this decision has an economic rationale:

Even before OPEC's 1973 revolution, it was apparent that monetary policies in the West, and especially in the United States, were inflationary. So OPEC could reasonably wonder: Should it increase output, exchanging oil for currency that is a wasting asset? Or should it restrict production, allowing oil to appreciate in the process?

More than five years after the 1973 earthquake, the U.S. anti-inflation program is a shambles, strengthening OPEC's incentive to limit production. Furthermore, many OPEC members fear a Iranian syndromes — the stabilizing effects of a dollar deluge.

OPEC's price revolution has done the West two favors. It has dampened demand. And as Rep. David Stockman (R-Mich.) says, "OPEC's price surge has reversed the collapse of the world coal industry, rejuvenated the old oil and gas provinces, paved the way for a major worldwide — natural-gas, liquefied natural-gas industry, and rendered economic numerous new petroleum provinces." OPEC eventually may do as much for the oil, tar sands and coal industries.

Sheik Yamani, Saudi Arabia's oil minister, is right: "Unless oil prices are permitted to grow gradually in real terms throughout the rest of the century, another sharp increase is inevitable by the end of the 1980s by reason of the supply shortfall that is likely to occur by that time."

But since January 1974, the basic price of a barrel of oil has risen just 33 percent, less than the value of the dollar has lost. The price of oil — the price — increased — December 1978 — OPEC's revenues, adjusted for inflation and exchange rate change, was 22 percent below the level of five years earlier.

Some say OPEC should not complain about inflation. It can't. But as Stockman says, the primary cause of the post-1973 inflation was the monetary policy government chose in response to OPEC:

"A change in the relative price of oil — one that cannot cause the general price level to increase. . . . Such relative price changes only induce a reallocation of money demand away from other goods and services. The sharp rise in oil prices thus necessitated that demand for non-oil goods and services give way, and that total output fall. . . . (But) the industrial world, led by the United States, maintained relatively high rates of money supply growth."

This policy expressed what Stockman calls "the essentially crank economic notion that the growth-inhibiting price paid for radical change in the supply cost of energy can be overcome with exuberant monetary expansionism." To avoid sharp deflation, government used the money supply to pump up demand.

But the price paid for attempts to insulate people from life's costs.

The Carter administration, like previous administrations, but with even less excuse, has used controls to prevent domestic oil and gas prices from equating to world prices. Its energy policy has been the moral equivalent of a war movie: an illusory battle, noisy but bloodless. There has been strict adherence to the convention that the controls will spare Americans from paying the real world price of energy.

Today, that irrational hope, like so many others, is collapsing under the relentless pressure of reality. And that is the price we must pay. (C) The Washington Post Company

Engineers on their way to reactor shutdown

By AL ROSSITER Jr.
UPI Science Editor
HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Engineers took the first steps Thursday leading to the final, cold shutdown of the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor and move to reduce the seepage of radioactive gases into the environment.

With the situation improving and people who had left the area steadily returning home, legislators and lawyers seek for a way to pay the millions last week's accident will cost. Rep. Eugene Atkinson, D-Pa., said consumers should not be burdened with the cost of the accident, but Washington attorney General Charles F. Smith, representing the utilities, said the costs should not be borne by company stockholders.

President Carter announced in an address on energy Thursday night that he is appointing an independent commission of experts to investigate the accident.

Noting that the crisis aroused nationwide alarm, he urged Americans to respond to it "with care and reason" — underscoring his own view that America's nuclear power industry has a generally excellent safety record and that atomic power is an indispensable alternative energy source.

Harold Denton, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's operations chief at the Susquehanna River site, said the 10-day cool-down process began with the gradual removal of gases from the water around the uranium fuel core. This action was to avoid the re-formation of a dangerous gas bubble when pressure is lowered.

The high pressure in the reactor kept gases dissolved in the water, like the gas in a bottle of champagne before it is uncorked.

Denton said approval was given to a plan to pump radioactive gases from an auxiliary building into the radiation-filled dome around the reactor. This, he said, should reduce by at least 50 percent the slight level of radiation escaping from the island plant.

Health authorities emphasized the radiation emitted during the past eight days was not expected to produce health effects. But pregnant women and young children were still advised to stay out of a 5-mile radius of the plant until radiation leakage has stopped. Schools remained closed in the immediate area.

The cooling plan now being followed will use in a few days the same natural circulation process Henry Ford used to cool the Model T engine half a century ago.

Hot water from the reactor will flow into a steam generator filled with cold water. The hot water will become cooler and thus sink and push already cooled water ahead of it back into the reactor to take away more heat from the core. The process will continue without the need for pumps, which might fail.

Blame for the severity of the crisis centered on the discovery by NRC investigators that two valves in an auxiliary cooling system were mistakenly left closed after maintenance, disabling the system, two weeks before pump failure triggered the emergency March 28.

There was a published report that maintenance crews at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant worked 10-hour shifts for almost six weeks without a day off. The Los Angeles Times quoted workers at the plant as saying the heavy work load was needed to cope with the need to keep up regular maintenance on unit 2 — where the accident occurred — while conducting the annual refueling operation on reactor No. 1.

CIA asks for more privacy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — CIA Deputy Director Frank Carlucci said Thursday he is asking Congress to allow citizens and aliens to obtain confidential information from the agency have had a "chilling effect" on the CIA's contacts with intelligence sources.

Testifying before a House intelligence subcommittee, Carlucci said requests under the Freedom of Information Act Privacy Acts have made the collection of intelligence more difficult, besides being time consuming and costly.

The acts have had a "chilling effect" on the CIA's contacts with friendly foreign intelligence agencies, Carlucci said, and on intelligence sources who fear exposure of their identities will result in loss of jobs, imprisonment "or even execution."

"Our current backlog is over 2,700 unanswered requests," Carlucci said, with new applications coming in at the rate of 10 per day. The average processing cost is $200 per request.

Thomas Bresson, acting chief of the FBI's Freedom of Information-Privacy Branch, testified that 393 of the bureau's employees are occupied fulltime with processing requests at a cost of $9 million a year. An average of 60 to 70 requests are received daily.

"Many persons in the areas of organized crime and foreign counterintelligence have refused to provide information for fear their identity might be disclosed, Bresson said. Additionally, he said, "the adversary many times is as interested in learning what we know as we are in discovering what we do know."

General Counsel Daniel Silver of the National Security Agency said his agency last year processed 704 FOIA requests at a cost of $24,000 and 318 Privacy Act requests at a cost of $125,000.

"The evolution of FOIA requests and litigation to date... are likely to produce a slow but steady leaking of information, which ultimately, consequences are extremely hazardous," Silver said.

Lawyer asks Felt charges be dropped

By ALLAN FRANK

WASHINGTON — The attorney for W. Mark Felt, former acting associate director of the FBI, has asked U.S. District Chief Judge William B. Bryant to consider dropping the espionage charges against Felt because prosecutors continue to withhold evidence needed by the defense.

Felt, a native of Twin Falls, served 31 years with the FBI before retiring from the agency.

In a letter to Bryant on Monday, Brian P. Gettings, attorney for Felt, said he would file a motion today asking that the case be dropped.

Gettings said Justice Department prosecutors have ignored the March 30 deadline set by the judge for completion of discovery — the phase of a trial during which the prosecutors turn over evidence to the defense.

Justice Department trial attorney Francis J. Martin had no comment about Gettings' letter.

Felt and Edward S. Miller, former FBI assistant director for counterintelligence, are charged with conspiracy in having authorized FBI agents to commit surreptitious entries at the homes of friends and relatives of the radical Weather Underground in 1972 and 1973, thereby violating their privacy laws.

Felt, a native of Twin Falls, was FBI director, faces the same charge but will be tried separately.

Felt and Miller have claimed that Gray approved the break-ins, which are called "bug jobs," but Gray has denied any knowledge of the surreptitious entries.

Gettings said that prosecutors have failed to turn over nearly 600 documents that would establish contacts with the Weather Underground members have had with foreign governments. The defense could conceivably use those documents to support a claim that warrant searches were justified for "national security" reasons.

'Nuclear' babies doing OK

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Most men who are soon-to-be fathers pace up and down hospital-waiting rooms, but Stephen Updegraff had one of the best reasons ever to be jittery: a nuclear disaster threat.

Carol Updegraff and her new-born baby Sarah Beth.

"It was a pretty tense situation," said Updegraff, 23, when his wife, Carol, gave birth to their first child in Bedford, Pa., following a 100-mile voluntarily evacuation flight from their home near the Three Mile Island power plant.

"We plan to take a lot of pictures, save news stories and record all the newscasts we can to show her later on how important she is," he said. The proud father's 8-pound, 5-ounce daughter was named Sarah Beth.

Mrs. Updegraff was among scores of pregnant women who fled the area after Gov. Dick Thornburgh warned them about the potential radiation harm to their unborn babies. Little children also are more vulnerable. Cynthia Simpson, 24, of Harrisburg, who had been evacuated to the special care center in nearby Hershey, gave birth to a 6-pound-10-ounce daughter named Romelle Slavonia, at Holy Spirit Hospital in nearby Camp Hill.

Both babies were brought into the world Monday, five days after America's worst nuclear power plant accident occurred near their homes.

Doctors said the babies were normal and the babies were healthy.

"Barring anything unforeseen, everything's fine," said a spokesman at the Bedford Hospital. Doctors at the Camp Hill hospital said Mrs. Simpson's daughter was a "healthy baby."

Other local expectant mothers remained in Hershey or with relatives. At least two at the shelter were about to give birth.

"We weren't sure when the baby was going to come, especially when we moved out," said Updegraff.

STAR WARS™

'Son of Woodstock' concert scheduled for Aug. 15-17

NEW YORK (UPI) — In 1969, hundreds of thousands of kids gathered on a farm in upstate New York for a rock concert called Woodstock. P67 was smoked, acid was dropped, babies were born and the air was filled with spontaneity.

Crazy Carl campaigning

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Carl Hickerson-Bull, better known to his friends as Crazy Carl, is opposing incumbent city councilwoman Betty Himmelblau in Saturday's municipal election, but the farthest thing from his mind is winning.

The street-corner flower-vendor's platform includes plans to sell the city's interest in the South Texas Nuclear Project, sell the police department to a private management firm and dispense contraband marijuana in glaucoma and cancer victims.

The campaign leader bristles this message: "This could be the year we realize some things shouldn't be for sale. Please don't vote for persons with interests that conflict with your own. A vote for me will be heard even if I don't win."

And for his detractors, Carl adds: "Don't worry, I won't win — my aim is a close loss."

On Thursday, plans were announced for the son of Woodstock, to mark the 10th anniversary of the festival. Plaudits were dropped, few specifics were revealed and the air was filled with money.

"We hope to do very well," John Roberts, an organizer of the first concert, told a news conference. "That's the American way, isn't it?"

The original Woodstock was held for three days at Max Yasgur's farm in Bethel, N.Y., during the height of the Vietnam protests.

There was little publicity, but more than 400,000 kids converged on the farm to hear such performers as the Jefferson Airplane, The Who, Joni Mitchell and Jimi Hendrix. A film and a record album were made.

Now, Vietnam is a memory and Jimi Hendrix and Max Yasgur are dead. There is no site for Woodstock II and no acts have been booked.

The event, scheduled for Aug. 15, 16, and 17, is being organized by John Morris, the stage manager at the first concert, and Michael Wadeigh, who directed the film.

They have purchased the rights to the name, Woodstock, from Roberts for a six-figure fee. They also have the backing of Portrait Records, which will produce an album, and Orion Films, which will make a film.

The event, which is expected to be distributed, they will cost $37.50 a person, but will only be sold in groups of four. At the original concert, tickets cost $10 and were sold individually.

Other than that, little else is definite.

Highest price for a stamp

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Wilkes-Barre, Pa., stamp collector paid $130,000 Wednesday for a 1918, 94-cent air mail stamp at an auction at the Robert Siegel Auction Gallery.

The gallery said the $130,000 bid was the highest price ever paid for a single stamp at an auction.

A gallery spokesman said Irvin Weinberg, a private collector, wanted to buy the stamp, bearing a picture of an airplane flying upside down, which was one of a sheet of 100 made 61 years ago.

Capricorns must not make radical changes in tending to duties

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Don't try to make some dramatic or dramatic change today. Be still for a little while and allow yourself to tune in on conditions about you. Thus you can make contact with operating forces and accept conditions as they actually are.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study every aspect of your existence and plan how best to improve it in the future. Do not get into arguments with others of power over some existing condition that you do not like.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't make radical changes at home, but improve conditions there instead. Be more practical and all turns out well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Important that you drive with care. Be careful of what you say and avoid trouble. Support those who can further your ambitions.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good time for you provided you avoid heavy expenditures. Analyze your position in life and know where you are headed.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Avoid making any radical changes in your lifestyle and this becomes a good period for you. Contact those whom you like and have a good time. Avoid newcomers for now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You feel restricted in some way but can do nothing about it now. Talk over important affairs with others, but take no action as yet. Enjoy social activities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get together with friends, but don't try to change them to your liking. Being social is fine but stick to whatever is conservative. Avoid taking any reprisals back home with you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be tactful in stating your ideas to bigwigs. Back bigwigs and gain their favor. Take it easy and relax.

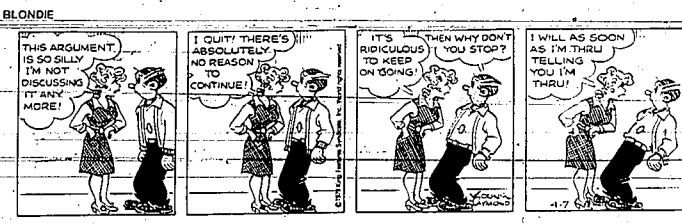

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get into a promising new outfit and forget a problem you can do little about as yet. Making new contacts is wise. They can be most helpful in your advancement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Carry through with a responsibility you have assumed without making any radical changes. Do nothing that could harm the tranquility you now enjoy at home. Show you are loyal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Leave partnership affairs as is instead of making radical changes you have in mind. Partnership is a civic master so you and others can be helped.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have work to do so postpone any trip you want to take and keep out of trouble, get much done. Forget any new temptations that could lead you in a wrong direction.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will benefit very much if taught early to complete whatever has once been started without deviating, especially at the wrong moment when success is about to happen. Teach to be conservative.

What's what

A little bit of thiamin added by the distillers could help in dealing with alcoholic problems

Imaginative medicos have suggested that vitamin B1—thiamin—be added to liquor in all the distilleries. They say this would wipe out a widespread disease known as Wernicke-Korsakoff syndrome. It's what makes alcoholics confused, forgetful and uncoordinated. Fortifying liquor with the essential B1 would not just cut down the prevalence but actually eradicate the disease they claim.

A New Mexico scientist contends he has developed a sort of chicken that lays two eggs a day. Now he's trying to figure out how to mass breed those hard-working hens.

There's a nudist colony in Yugoslavia that permits its paying guests to take care of the tab with any of the major American charge cards.

Most heart attacks occur between midnight and 6 a.m.

DOG
In the Philippines, dog meat costs about 82 cents a pound, nearly twice as much as pork. The live dog sold for slaughter brings between $7 and $14. Filipinos, Chinese, Vietnamese—almost all dog meat is sold at a cheaper price because it tastes better to them than pork, chicken, goat or beef.

The government is into absolutely everything, I tell you. Even music. It takes one second for a tuning fork pitched to A above middle C to vibrate 40 times. Why? Because the National Bureau of Standards set it so.

Least crowded of the National parks in the lower 48 last year was Yellowstone.

ONLY CHILD
What you and I call "an only child" is referred to simply as "an only" by the experts—and those experts wanted to find out what sort of couple was most likely to produce an only. So they computerized a lot of facts. Parents of onlys, they learned, frequently are over 30 before the baby is born. They've been married far longer than the average couple at the time of the first baby. And from 10 to 20 percent of them were themselves onlys.

Consider what a supermarket loses because of dishonesty. Employee's tickets account for 65 percent of it. Bad checks make up 20 percent. And 15 percent can be blamed on shoplifters.

If you exhibit a passion for buying unnecessary things, my dear, what you've got is "omnomania."

'Nuclear' babies doing OK

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Most men who are soon-to-be fathers pace up-and-down hospital waiting rooms but Stephen Updegraff had one of the best reasons ever to be jittery: a nuclear disaster threat.

"It was a pretty tense situation," said Updegraff, 22, when his wife, Carol, gave birth to their first child in Bedford, Pa., following a 10-mile voluntarily evacuation flight from their home near the Three Mile Island power plant.

"We plan to take a lot of pictures, save news stories and record all the newscasts we can to show her later on how important she is," he said. The proud father's 8-pound, 5-ounce daughter was named Sarah Beth.

Mrs. Updegraff was among scores of pregnant women who fled the area after Gov. Dick Thornburgh warned them about the potential radiation harm to their unborn babies. Little children also are more vulnerable.

Cynthia Simpson, 24, of Harrisburg, who had been evacuated to the special care center in nearby Hershey, gave birth to a 5-pound 11-ounce daughter named Ronielle Shavonna, at Holy Spirit Hospital in nearby Camp Hill.

Both babies were brought into the world Monday, five days after America's worst nuclear power plant accident occurred near their homes.

Doctors said the births were normal and the babies were healthy.

"Barring anything unforeseen, everything's fine," said a spokesman at the Bedford Hospital. Doctors at the Camp Hill hospital said Mrs. Simpson's daughter was a "healthy baby."

Other local expectant mothers remained in Hershey or with relatives. At least two at the shelter were about to give birth.

"We weren't sure when the baby was going to come, especially when we moved out," said Updegraff.

'Son of Woodstock' concert scheduled for Aug. 15-17

NEW YORK (UPI) — In 1969, hundreds of thousands of kids gathered on a farm in upstate New York for a rock concert called Woodstock. Now, Vietnam is being bombed, acid was dropped, babies were born and the air was filled with spontaneity.

Crazy Carl campaigning

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Carl Hickerson-Bull, better known to his friends as "Crazy Carl," is opposing incumbent city council member Betty Himmelsblau in Saturday's municipal election, but the farthest thing from his mind is winning. The street-corner flower vendor's platform includes plans to sell the city's interest in the South Texas Nuclear Project, sell the police department to a private management firm and dispense contraband marijuana to glaucoma and cancer victims.

His campaign leaflet includes this message: "This could be the year we realize some things shouldn't be for sale. Please don't vote for persons with interests that conflict with your own. A vote for me will be heard even if I don't win."

And for his detractors, Carl adds: "Don't worry, I won't win — my aim is a close loss."

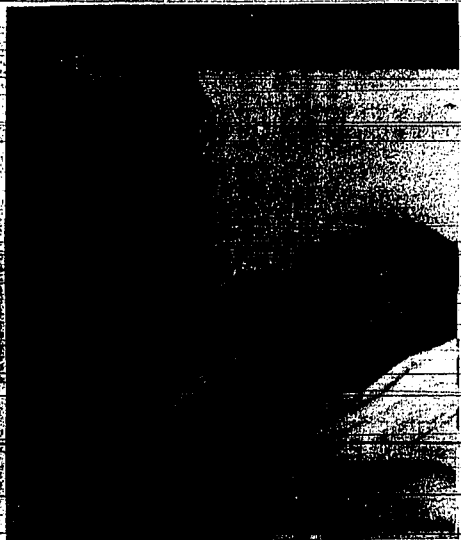

Now, Vietnam is a memory and Jimi Hendrix and Max Yasgur are dead. There is no site for Woodstock II and no acts have been booked.

The event, scheduled for Aug. 15, 16, and 17, is being organized by John Morris, the stage manager at the first concert, and Michael Wadleigh, who directed the film.

"We have purchased the rights to the name, Woodstock, from Roberts for a six-figure fee. They also have the backing of Portrait Records, which will produce an album, and Orion Films, which will make a film.

Three hundred thousand tickets will be distributed. They will cost $7.50 a person, but will only be sold in groups of four. At the original concert, tickets cost $18 and were sold individually.

Other than that, little else is definite.

Highest price for a stamp

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Wilkes-Barre, Pa., stamp collector paid $130,000 Wednesday for a 1918, 24-cent air-mail stamp at an auction at the Robert Siegel Auction Gallery.

The gallery said the $130,000 bid was the highest price ever paid for a single stamp at an auction.

A gallery spokesman said Irwin Wabersberg, a private collector, was top bidder for the stamp, bearing a picture of an airplane flying upside down, which was one of a sheet of 100 made 51 years ago.

King of yogurts comes west to Idaho

Dannon officials link product with good health

KETCHUM — What do cross-country skiing and Dannon yogurt have in common? They're both good for your health. Or at least that's the association Dannon publicity officials like people to make.

Dannon, the nation's largest yogurt producer, has begun distributing its yogurt in Idaho, and in fact, the people know it's been the company's last weekend sponsored a cross-country ski tour into the Smoky Mountains north of Ketchum.

Dannon spent a handsome sum of money during the weekend just to provide a small group of cross-country skiers with an afternoon lunch and to make sure the celebrity ski racers weren't hungry between races.

But Dannon officials say it was worth it.

"Our product appeals to those people who lead healthy active lifestyles," says Bill Camacho, Dannon's advertising director in New York.

Gourmet feast awaited these cross country skiers

New products

In our advertising rich society, new consumer products are constantly being introduced into our stores. Times-News reporter Christopher Bogan looks at two of the newer products to enter the Magic Valley market and discusses the novel advertising techniques used by the promoters.

But this was not just any Sunday cross-country tour. Waiting at the end of it was a gourmet feast.

The 30 or 40 skiers on the tour made their way back into an old mountain cabin that was stocked with Dannon yogurt, freshly-cooked trout, potatoes, buffalo meat, Sugar-Snap peas, wine and other foods that are usually grown or produced in Idaho. The food feast was helicoptered into the cabin early that morning.

Earlier during the same weekend movie stars and the country's best alpine ski racers could be seen spooning down Dannon yogurt during the Fourth Annual U.S. Ski Team Celebrity Invitational at Elkhorn in Sun Valley.

For people to see U.S. ski team members, Hollywood stars and healthy cross-country skiers eating Dannon yogurt is probably the best publicity the company could ever get, Camacho says.

"The people who attend these things," he added, "can be viewed as trend setters and the celebrity status certainly sets a trend for the rest of the people."

The trend Dannon wants to set is for people throughout the West to eat its yogurt.

Dannon's chief offices are in New York, and until this past year the company distributed its product only in the East and Midwest.

But Camacho says Dannon is aiming to become the country's first nationally distributed yogurt. To attain this goal, the company opened in January what Dannon officials claim is the world's largest yogurt plant in Fort Worth, Tex.

This Fort Worth plant is the source of the Dannon yogurt which has begun to trickle into supermarkets throughout southern Idaho.

Dannon officials claim to produce the king of yogurts and that, by the way, they say, it is a few cents more expensive than other brands.

A quick supermarket check in Twin Falls and Ketchum revealed that an eight-ounce container of Dannon-fruit yogurt ranges in price from about 45 cents to 49 cents, while its competitors are usually 5 cents to 10 cents cheaper per container.

Camacho says you're paying for quality. A Smith's Food King manager notes his customers who pay the extra nickel for Dannon say it tastes better than other yogurts.

It's still too early to say how Idahoans will like Dannon, but Camacho says the reaction so far has been good.

Ski tours are not the only events Dannon sponsors to help associate its product with healthy living. Camacho said the company sponsors a series of marathons and jogathons throughout the summer.

Although the schedule has not yet been set, Dannon officials say one of these amateur running meets might be held in the Magic Valley this summer.

It's difficult to imagine, however, how the company will top the banquet thrown in the Smoky Mountains last weekend.

Stanley Stankiewicz, Polish kid makes good

Usquaebach: Rolls-Royce of Scotch whiskies?

TWIN FALLS — Usquaebach is the Rolls-Royce of Scotch whiskies. Or so this spirit's owner claims.

But what's a Polish kid from Pittsburgh, Pa., doing in the corporate driver's seat of a company that produces this 170-year-old royal whisky?

It doesn't make sense.

But Stanley Stankiewicz doesn't care. All he asks is that you try his Usquaebach, (pronounced "use-kay-baw"). That will be enough, he says, to convince you it's the finest blended Scotch money can buy.

You've never heard of it?

That's not surprising. Until just a few years ago, Stankiewicz claims his Scotch whisky was available only to royalty, presidents, chiefs of state and other dignitaries.

How then did Stankiewicz purchase the trademark and secret blend of this Scotch whisky? That's a story as interesting as Usquaebach is history.

Stankiewicz says he was simply in the right place at the right time, and now he tells a Cinderella story of success: he has rubbed shoulders with royalty, sat at presidential inaugurations and traveled widely throughout the world — all because of this whisky.

The Scottish poet Robert Burns was one of the first to sing praises of this Scotch whisky. Nearly two centuries ago, Burns referred to Usquaebach in his poem Tam O'Shanter, a folkloric tale of Scottish whisky.

Inspiring bold John Barley corn!
What dangers thou canst make us scorn!
Wi' Usquaebach we'll face the devil!

The name Usquaebach is derived from the Gaelic phrase "uisge beatha" meaning "water of life," and from this phrase evolved the word "whisky."

A 100% proof Scotch whisky blended in Glasgow, Usquaebach has a predominantly malt content. This, Stankiewicz says, gives Usquaebach its superior flavor.

Curiously, Usquaebach's age is not known anywhere on the handsome stone flagons in which it is bottled.

"The age is in the tasting," Stankiewicz boasts before he reveals the malt whiskies in Usquaebach range in age from 18 to 27 years. If this is true, Usquaebach is older than most other fine whiskies. Scotch drinkers say a 12-year-old blended Scotch is generally near the top of the line.

Usquaebach is so good, Stankiewicz claims, one should always drink it "neat" — without ice, water or anything else. Sipped this way from a brandy snifter, Usquaebach's smooth taste distinguishes itself. So too does its price. Usquaebach is one of the most expensive Scotch whiskies on the market.

"One pays $32.50," Stankiewicz says, "and they have themselves — the Rolls-Royce of the Scotch whisky industry."

Usquaebach came on the Idaho liquor market on March 5. In Twin Falls, a whisky drinker can pick up a flagon at the state liquor store at 1146 Flier Avenue East. It is distributed by the Intermountain Wine and Spirits Brokerage.

Priced so high, Stankiewicz says Usquaebach will appeal to upper-class Scotch drinkers and to people shopping for a special gift. If the price seems steep, Idahoans should count themselves lucky, Stankiewicz says in some cities Usquaebach is sold for $55 to $60 a flagon.

If you do splurge and buy a flagon, are you truly getting the world's finest blended Scotch whisky or just an elegant legend?

Stankiewicz claims you get both.

"I think what we're marketing is the Scotch whisky," he begins. "None of this could be possible if it wasn't in the bottle. The second thing we're marketing is the history, the mystique, the prestige, the 'snob appeal.' This is like all of a sudden discovering a Rolls-Royce in the 1970s."

"We're re-telling the Horatio Alger story in the 1970s. When people read about this, the Scotch whisky becomes almost secondary. It's hard to believe some little Polish kid from Pittsburgh can go against 200 years of history.

Stankiewicz is only the third owner of the Usquaebach trademark since 1800, and he virtually stumbled into the ownership.

A wealthy Scotch drinker and an amateur whisky collector, Stankiewicz happened to read in 1969 about a fine Scotch whisky that had been ordered by the White House for the inaugural ball.

A district representative then for the Bureau of National Affairs in Pittsburgh, he wrote to the distillers in Scotland asking where he could obtain a supply. Three months later, he received a reply from the Paris distributor in London politely informing him that Usquaebach's distribution was limited to heads of state, royalty and private clubs.

Stankiewicz struck out on all counts. But background information revealed with the letter only increased his thirst to taste this rare Scotch whisky. Nearly a year later and with the cooperation of the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board, he received his first case of Usquaebach.

He later bought sole rights to the Usquaebach trademark and blend in 1973, when troubles plagued the Scotch family that owned it since 1846. Ever since he's been democratizing this royal spirit.

Stankiewicz has introduced Usquaebach into 38 states and registered it in 22 countries.

Today any Magic Valley mechanic, trucker or dirt farmer who wants to pay the price can sip the spirit that once touched only the lips of kings and queens.

Hearing dog aids deaf

CONSTANTINE, Mich. (UPI) — Roger and Marcia Hutton's dog, Friend, wakes them in the morning, lets them know when someone is at the door or alerts them to strange sounds around their southwest Michigan farmhouse.

But Friend's talents have special meaning, because the Huttons are deaf.

"The black and white, 1½-year-old mongrel is the only specially trained 'hearing ear' dog in the state and one of just a few dozen in the nation.

When she hears the alarm go off in the morning, Friend rushes from her doghouse in the master bedroom, leaps onto Hutton's chest and ticks in face with a paw.

When there's a knock at the door, Friend runs and jumps either at Mrs. Hutton or her husband, then runs to the door. The dog also is learning to react to other sounds and attract the Huttons' attention.

"She's not quite used to our baby cry and is learning it," said Mrs. Hutton.

Engagements

Gerontology seminar April 12

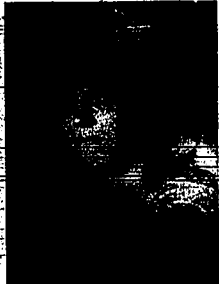

POCATELLO (ISU) — A gerontology seminar on health assessment of the aged will be presented in Twin Falls April 12 in the Mini-Auditorium of the Vo-Tech Building at the College of Southern Idaho from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., according to John Maxfield, executive director of the Southeastern Idaho Center for Health Resources, Inc. (SICHR).

Featured speaker will be Virginia Stone, R.N., Ph.D., FAAN, who is a professor emerita at Duke University. The seminars aim to: 1. — Identify some areas of knowledge needed to understand the aged; 2. — Describe and evaluate the process of aging in selected areas; 3. — Differentiate acute care model versus long-term care model; 4. — Identify reliable instruments that can be used in health assessment; and 5. — Further skills in health assessment as related to the process of aging. Sponsoring the seminar are Boise State University, Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, the College of Southern Idaho, Idaho Falls Consolidated Hospitals and SICHR.

JEROME — Mr. and Mrs. G. Pervis Starr of Caldwell announce the engagement of their daughter, Dawn, to Leonard Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse E. Wilson of Jerome. Mr. Starr graduated from Vallivue High School in Caldwell in 1977 and has attended Boise State University. She is employed at the Bon Marche in Nampa. Wilson is a 1976 graduate of Jerome High School and has served a two year LDS mission in the Roanoke, Va., area. He is engaged in farming in Riverside. The couple plans an April 14 wedding at the bride's home with a reception that evening in the Marsing LDS Ward Cultural Hall. An open house will be held April 21 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Powell, southeast of Jerome.

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Wayne L. Anderson of Twin Falls announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Karen, to Brian Crider, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman W. Crider of Eden. Miss Anderson is a 1974 graduate of Borah High School and has attended school at Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa. Presently she is attending the College of Southern Idaho. Crider graduated from Valle High School and attended school at Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa. He is currently employed at Music West in Nampa. The couple plans a May 12 wedding in the Church of the Nazarene in Twin Falls.

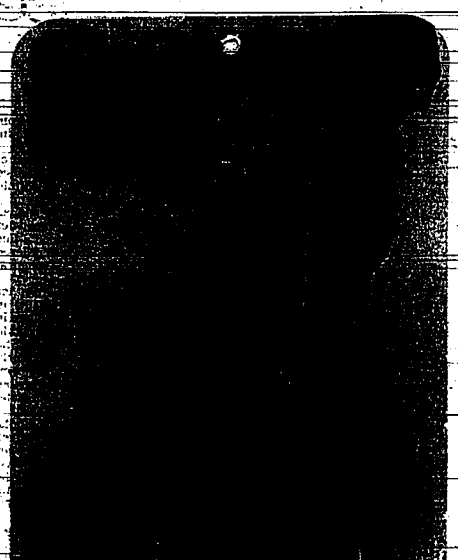

TWIN FALLS — Col. and Mrs. William E. Kevan of Twin Falls announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Mary Melissa, to Rick Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dorance Allen of Aurelia, Iowa. Ms. Kevan graduated from California State University in Long Beach with a BA in political science and French and a secondary education teaching credential. She taught in the Twin Falls public school system one year and is presently enrolled in the College of Southern Idaho nursing program. Allen graduated from Iowa State University and received his Masters in agricultural engineering from the University of Idaho. He is presently employed as a research associate by the Water Resources Research Institute of the University of Idaho in Kimberly. The couple plans a July 21 wedding at the First Baptist Church in Twin Falls.

It was tempting, but...

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (UPI) — School custodian Mines Anderson didn't expect a $9,200 tax refund from the Internal Revenue Service. But that's what he received instead of the $92 that was supposed to be coming to him. And he spent a few days agonizing before deciding to send the check back Tuesday. "It was a little bit stunned," he said. "I didn't think there was that amount coming to me." Anderson, 60, received the tax refund a week ago but didn't notice the number of zeros until he endorsed it and was on his way to the bank. Instead of cashing it, Anderson went back home and looked at the check for a couple of days. Then he decided to be honest and he called the IRS district office in Houston.

The IRS confirmed a mistake had been made, asked him to write "void" across the check and send it back. Anderson said he was told he would be getting his $92 refund in three to four weeks. Crosses channel DEARBORN, Mich. (UPI) — Crossing the English Channel is often difficult, but Louis Bleriot did it in 1909 without getting his tail feathers wet. The pioneer French aviator flew from Calais to Dover in 27 minutes in a monoplane of his own design, becoming the first person to visit Britain by air. A Bleriot XI, sister ship to the monoplane, survives here in the Henry Ford Museum.

Hospital volunteers honored

TWIN FALLS — Mabel Barron received her 4,000 plus 600 hour gold bar award for her hours of service with the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Auxiliary at its Annual Awards Luncheon April 2 at the Turf Club.

The Auxiliary provides very necessary services at the hospital for the patients as well as the hospital staff. They operate and staff the gift cart and the gift shop, provide the handicrafts that are sold by the gift shop, distribute and collect the menu from the patients, act as surgical and lobby receptionist and are responsible for the TV rental service. Any profits accrued from the above services are returned in the form of new equipment for the hospital.

Other awards given included a 3,000 plus 600 hour gold bar to Thelma Slanger; 3,000 plus 400 hour gold bar to Ruth Stephens and Alice Bowman; 3,000 plus 200 hour gold pin to Maude Honsteln and Kay Porter; 3,000 hour gold pin to Helen Wolfe; 2,000 plus 700 hour gold bar to Alexa Axen and Ruth Wright; 2,000 plus 600 hour gold bar to Lura Sloman; 2,000 plus 300 hour gold bar to Willie Ruth Hanson; a 2,000 hour gold pin to Nona Dilts; a 1,000 plus 800 hour gold bar to Hermine Freecut and Clarice Glascock; a 1,000 plus 700 hour gold bar to Viola Hicks and Gladwin Theener; a 1,000 plus 500 hour gold bar to Lena Bohrn; a 1,000 plus 400 hour gold bar to Dorothy Ehlers and Lois Mathoney; a 1,000 plus 300 hour gold bar to Shirley Gould and Ina Mae McCandless and a 1,000 plus 100 hour gold bar to Uta Cutler and Betty Jackson.

Mrs. Doris Jensen, a local auxiliary member and former chairman of the Idaho Council of Hospital Auxiliary, received a special certificate for her many years of service. She is leaving Twin Falls to join her husband in Washington, D.C.

Fran Tanner's CSI Headers Theatre group presented the entertainment for the afternoon entitled "When Apples Grow Upon A Lilac Tree" — the absurdities of love.

Door prizes were furnished by JB's Big Boy, Morgan's-Rogerson, Restaurant, Rogers, Paris, Club 93, Sav Mor Drug of Buhl, Vans, ID Department Store, Theresias, Sav Mor Drug of Twin Falls, Kelly Fox Floral, Prime Cut and the Stylist Beauty Salon.

No middle-of-roaders about liking cats

By VERA CHATZ
Chicago Sun-Times

If there's one thing people have strong opinions about, it's cats. People either love them or hate them. Unlike politics, there are no middle-of-the-roaders when it comes to felines.

Occasionally raised to the status of gods (the ancient Egyptians worshipped them), cats also have been called agents-of-the-devil. Witness the trials in 17th-Century Massachusetts.

Lately, cats haven't been bothered much.

They have their protectors and they have their detractors—of course, but I don't know of any recent organized efforts to either exterminate or worship them.

Now, though, that may change. Did you hear about the results of a reader's survey of Fortune Magazine's top 100 corporate presidents and their feelings about cats? Detailed in a recent issue of Town and Country magazine, the president says that not one of those 100 top U.S. movers and shakers had a cat.

I've been brooding about those statistics ever since I read them. What do they mean? Can it be you can't possibly make it into the Fortune 100 if you have a cat?

Could it be that the following conversations take place daily in board rooms across the country? "G.M., I was allowed to pet them as much as they would tolerate and was permitted to watch their balancing acts on the porch railing."

When I grew up and got married, it was to a man who had never known the life of back porches, having spent his childhood riding up and down in catless elevators. Because of this deprivation, he hated cats. Never one to let small things stand in my way, I got the Town-Country article says creative people like cats — "people who are individualistic, contemplative and not adverse to walking by themselves from Lima to Lima."

Our cat was named Kitty (how's that for creative and individualistic?), and her relationship with my husband progressed over the years from being locked up in the mud room the instant his car appeared in the driveway to sitting on the kitchen table each morning and sharing breakfast with him.

Kitty spent 73 years with us, the last several of which were dimmed by the arrival of our dog. Little did I know that getting a dog meant we were on the road to upward mobility.

Dogs — "For the highly organized person, trained always to be in command of facts, a cat is an anathema. You cannot control a cat," Town and Country tells us.

But you can control a dog.

So now, I've moved from thinking about my own special category to society's over-all conception of cats. Look at the kind of words that start with cat — cataclysm, catastrophe, catatonic. Not good.

Now let's look at words and sayings with dog in them — dog-eared, doggie, dog days. All warm and friendly. There's even dog star. Is man's best friend his cat? Do teenagers fall into kitty-love? Conversely, have you ever heard that there's more than one way to skin a dog?

Let me make my cat credentials purrfectly clear. I spent much of my childhood being a foster mother to stray cats who found their way up to my family's back porch. I gave these foundlings generous helpings of milk and anything else I could sneak out of my kitchen and wept when they "disappeared." While they were in residence, I was allowed to pet them as much as they would tolerate and was permitted to watch their balancing acts on the porch railing.

his childhood riding up and down in catless elevators. Because of this deprivation, he hated cats. High protein diets weaken bones in rats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Agriculture Department scientists who explored protein concentration in diets said they linked extremely high protein intake with a weakening of bones in young adult rats.

They did not dispute that protein is necessary, especially for growing animals, but they studied levels at which too much protein could harm the rats.

Experiments found that the high-protein diet had no negative effect on young growing rats.

But the diet was linked to a bone disorder in mature young adults whose bodies may have been unable to use heavy doses of protein.

The disorder was similar to osteoporosis, a widespread disease among Americans characterized by weak, deteriorated bones.

Research chemist Gary Beecher and biologist Juliette Coupain reported results at an annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, which is meeting in Dallas.

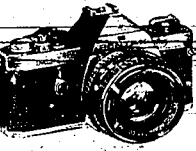

Their remarks were released by the Agriculture Department in Washington.

They said their experimental diet with 45 percent casein, a high-quality protein obtained from milk, provided almost twice as much protein as the amount needed to provide maximum growth.

Dear Abby

How to get rid of Alice?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
 (C) 1979 by The Chicago Tribune—New York News Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR ABBY: How does a 52-year-old man get rid of a 30-year-old woman who refuses to take no for an answer?
 I took Alice (made up name) to America a weekend of doing because the girl I had planned to take got the flu and couldn't go. The hotel reservations were paid for in advance and I didn't feel like going alone.
 Well, Alice took the weekend far too seriously, and now the inmate she's "in love" with me even though I never told her I loved her. In fact, I told her up front I didn't want any serious commitments.
 As soon as we returned, Alice started calling and writing me love letters. In order to discourage her, I told her I was engaged to a girl in California. (Not true.) She kept after me, so I told her I was gay and went both ways, but she said she didn't care.
 Abby, I have absolutely no interest in this woman. I only went to bed with her in Aspen because she expected me to. I didn't want to disappoint her. Any suggestions? She's making me crazy.
STUPID IN DENVER
DEAR STUPID: If Alice reads the

Rocky Mountain News, you could be off the hook by nightfall. If not, be a man and tell her that what happened in Aspen did not mean to YOU what it meant to HER, that the chemistry is not right for a lasting love affair, and to cool it. Be gentle—but firm.
DEAR ABBY: I'm an eighth-grade teacher who taught your column, "Rules for Baby-sitters" was so valuable that I had copies made for all my students. We discussed your rules in class, and one boy suggested this additional rule:
 "Write down the address of the house where you're sitting and keep it next to the telephone in case you have to call the police or fire department."
 Sometimes sitters know how to get to a house but don't know the address. This is very important when calling the police or fire department.
INDIANA TEACHER
DEAR TEACHER: Thanks for an excellent addition. Here's another from Portland, Or.:
 "The parent (or guardian) should leave written permission with the sitter giving the doctor or emergency hospital the right to treat a child in case of illness or accident. Without written permission, a minor cannot be treated."
DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are planning to take our first vacation away from our children. We have a 17-year-old son and two daughters, 8 and 11.

 We're leaving the girls with relatives, and our problem is what to do about our son, but I tend to be on the nervous side and don't know if I could handle it if anything were to happen to him while we were away. He's a good kid who does what his father says. I'm afraid to check on him. His father has always left the discipline and raising of the kids to me, but Dad has a short fuse and, if anything goes wrong, it's my fault.
 In your opinion, should we leave our son alone in the house for 10 days?
UNDECIDED
DEAR UNDECIDED: Your letter suggests that you lack sufficient confidence in your son to insure a worry-free vacation—otherwise why would you have written to me? A good rule to follow: When in doubt—DON'T.
 The ten years are the questioning years. Abby has the answers to all your questions in her booklet, "What Teenagers Want to Know." Write Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (28-cent), self-addressed envelope.

SHAMSU DIN... speaker

Protector of animals to speak at Burley

TWIN FALLS — Shamsu Din, Africa's most fervent and active protector of wild animals, will be the speaker at the Burley/Rupert Knife and Fork club April 14 at 7 p.m. at the Ponderosa Inn.
 Designated guest night for prospective new members, the evening will feature Din, an East Indian who is Africa's game protector. For 25 years he has been observing the activities of wild animals in Africa and India. During those years he built the now-renowned Secret Valley Lodge, an observation post located 8,400 feet high in the bamboo jungles of Mount Kenya.
 Col. John Craig, America's famous undersea explorer and a traveler who has been almost everywhere and seen

"everything, describes Din as a man of great substance, "well educated, speaks with a slight British accent, well versed on jungle lore, and able to tell about Africa—and its animal heritage in a most interesting and fascinating way."
 Secret Valley, according to Craig, is the place where the leopards come to feed every night and tourists, those lucky enough to get there, can watch from a balcony hotel in the treetops overlooking a lovely water hole and the leopards "feeding platforms."
 Thanks to the unceasing efforts of Din, the Kenya government is making great strides to preserve the animals which not too long ago were the prey of hunters who almost extinguished some species.

Contest Saturday

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Optimist Club will sponsor a zone Optimist Oratorical contest April 7 at 10:30 a.m. in the College of Southern Idaho Mini-Auditorium Vo-Tech Building.
 Students from local contests in Gooding, Jerome, Mountain Home and Twin Falls will speak on the subject "In My Youth, I See." Each club will send a winner in both girls and boys division, for a total of eight contestants.
 The public is invited to attend.

Wholesale prices zoom again as energy, food costs soar

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale prices shot upward again in March as inflation continued surging at its fastest pace in more than four years, the government reported Thursday.

Led by a 4.3 percent jump in beef costs, food prices rose sharply for the seventh straight month. Gasoline and heating oil also soared.

Wholesale prices for products ready for sale to retailers climbed by 1.1 percent last month, the same as in February, and now are 10.4 percent above a year ago.

To make the situation even more dismal, the Labor Department said prices leaped during 1978's first quarter at a 14.1 percent annual rate — the fastest inflationary spur since the October-December quarter of 1974.

Food prices jumped 1.2 percent, a slight easing from February's 1.6 percent but still high by historical standards.

The only good news in the wholesale report was that crude prices — those products just starting to work their way through the supply pipeline — rose by only 1 percent last month, the smallest increase this year.

Prices for food at the crude level increased by only 0.2 percent, the best performance since last August, and a vast improvement over the 3.8 percent and 2.8 percent gains registered in February and January, respectively.

The Labor Department said its index measuring wholesale prices stood at 208.8 last month, meaning goods and services that cost $100 in March.

Republican national chairman Bill Brock issued a harsh appraisal of Carter and his anti-inflation efforts.

"President Carter has doomed his presidency to one term and this country to the continued economic ravages of inflation through his total inability to curb runaway prices," Brock said in a statement.

"The president must move immediately to present plans the Congress will accept to address this issue. The good of this country requires that Carter take action immediately."

The administration's voluntary anti-inflation program, which was launched with much fanfare Oct. 24, has failed so far to make a dent.

Government inflation monitors have tightened the wage-price guidelines in recent weeks and plan soon to get consumers more actively involved in the effort with a "price-watch" program.

Pump prices for gasoline keep rising

By United Press International — The cheapest gasoline in the nation is 23.9 cents a gallon for regular unleaded at one full-service station in New Orleans, a UPI survey showed Thursday.

Motorists in Chicago have the dubious distinction of paying the highest pump prices anywhere at 95.9 cents a gallon for premium unleaded.

Both full-service and self-service outlets have raised prices in the last week by as much as 6 cents a gallon in San Francisco, 4 cents in parts of Louisiana, 3.9 cents in Utah, and 2 cents in Florida, according to the nationwide sample.

Maine reported some grades had climbed more than a penny a gallon in the last seven days. Pump prices in Colorado, on the other hand, remained stable.

At full-service stations regular loaded gasoline ranges from the best buy in the nation of 82.9 cents in New Orleans to 88.9 cents a gallon in Chicago's Cook County.

The lowest full-service price for regular unleaded gasoline can be found in Omaha, Neb., where some dealers are pumping this grade for 71.9 cents a gallon. Chicago again has the steepest price for regular unleaded of 93.9 cents a gallon at full-service stations.

At self-service stations, motorists can buy regular unleaded for as little as 66 cents a gallon in Dallas or as much as 85.8 cents a gallon in Honolulu.

In most parts of the country, there was a slight increase over the past week in the number of stations forced to shorten hours and close on Sundays to conserve light supplies.

A few rural stations in Vermont are imposing $5 limits on sales per customer.

Meat futures advance

(Courtesy Sinclair & Co.) CHICAGO — Gains in meats, most grains and potatoes marked Thursday's commodity futures trading.

Cowley New Service said live cattle advanced early, came under pressure from selling but ended 69 to 6 points higher on a trade of 36,063 contracts. Much of the buying was attributed to short covering. Feeder cattle settled at the low end of the day's range but were up 40 to 100 points on a trade of 4,701 contracts.

Live hogs closed 70 to 2 points higher but on the low side of the day's range after trading 7,831 contracts. Spot April was up 57 points. Pork bellies advanced 150 to 105 points with May touching the 200 point advance limit late in the day on a trade of 5,304 contracts.

Maine potatoes settled 14 to 7 cents higher on volume of 81 cars. November led, closing at 6.28 hundredweight.

Wheat scored moderate gains. May up 1 1/2 cents and July through March 1/4 to 3/4 cent up, in a fluctuating mixed trade which ultimately shifted to the buy side. Corn gained 1 1/2 to 2 cent as speculative interest linked to possible new export business grew.

Soybeans lost 3 cents to 1/4 cent, falling heavily in late liquidation. Oil was off 23 to 10 points and meal was mixed, up 50 cents to down 70.

New York Sugar 11 ended 1 to 8 points higher on a trade of 3,875 lots. Spot May was a point up at 8.38 cents.

New York Comex gold settled 1.90 to 1.92 — 20.00 — let trade while silver settled 30 points higher to unchanged on a thin 13,000 lots.

Most snow courses show 94% of normal water content

TWIN FALLS — The nine snow courses serving Salmon Falls and Roscoe Reservoirs averaged 114 percent of normal water content for April 1, the Soil Conservation District survey crews reported Wednesday.

Included in the average is the low elevation Shoshone Basin course which is 284.2 percent of normal, something of a record for the course.

The Shoshone Basin course was under water at this time last year and no snow measurements could be taken. The 20 year average for that course is 3.8 inches of water on April 1. This year the measurement shows 30 inches of snow containing 10.8 inches of water.

Conservation officials say without the unusual Shoshone Basin condition, other snow courses average 94 percent of normal, which is probably a more reasonable figure. This indicates a relatively good outlook for the coming irrigation season.

A review of the entire season's snow and water reports and the outlook for storage during spring run-off will be presented in the annual water forecast meeting Tuesday. The meeting will be held in the Hollister Grange Hall at 8 p.m. and is open to the public.

Snow and water content as of March 30 on the various courses, compared with last year at this time, percent of average and average water content in that order include:

Magpie Mountain — 54.2 inches of snow and 19.4 inches of water this year, 45.9 inches of snow and 19.4

inches of water last year, and 100 percent of the 30 year average of 19.4 inches of water.

Deadline Ridge — 62 inches snow and 21.6 inches of water this year, 44.6 inches snow and 20.1 inches of water last year, 95.8 percent of the 22.8 inch water average.

Shoshone Basin — 30.6 inches snow and 10.8 inches of water this year, no measurement last year, 234.2 percent of the 3.8 inch water average.

Hummelbird Springs — 64.8 inches of snow and 17.5 inches water, 66.3

inches of snow and 25.9 inches of water last year, 75.4 percent of the 23.2 inch water average.

Pole Creek — 50.6 inches snow and 14.4 inches water last year, 60.9 percent of the 20.8 inch water average.

Goat Creek, 52.8 inches snow, 14.1 inches water, 48.6 inches snow, 19.5 inches of water last year and 76.2 percent of the 18.5 inch average.

Bear Creek Meadows — 62.8 inches of snow and 19.2 inches of water, 54 inches of snow and 23.4 inches of water last year, 92.3 percent of the average 20.6 inches of water.

Fox Creek — 37.2 inches of snow and 10.9 inches of water, 21.6 inches of snow and 7.7 inches of water last year, 109 percent of the 10 inch water average.

76 Creek — 39.5 inches snow and 12.3 inches water, 27.2 inches snow and 11.2 inches water last year, 125 percent of the 9.8 inch water average.

Snow survey committee members were Lyle Fuller and Marvin Taylor.

Twin Falls thaws out frozen funds

By JEFF SHER

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council is on the verge of thawing out most of the funds it froze last December and spending $10,000 to set aside for outside legal assistance.

The council Monday gave raises to four city administrators whose salaries were frozen last October, and councilman Chris Talkington said Wednesday raises may be forthcoming shortly for the other 12 administrators whose salaries were frozen.

On Monday, the council also instructed City Manager Leon Millar to investigate the feasibility of allocating $91,000 in "frozen" revenue funds for replacement of the pipes which drain the intersection of Shoshone Street and Sixth Avenue.

And also on Monday, Mayor Leon Smith proposed to his fellow council members that the city hire outside legal assistance to speed up the city's suit against the designers and equipment suppliers for the city's malfunctioning sewage treatment plant.

Talkington said the raises given the four city administrators "certainly is not going to be the end of it."

The city manager, Harry Merrick, city clerk Edythe Koonits and the police and fire chiefs and other city administrators should also be considered for raises.

Talkington, who has been the most outspoken supporter of city belt-tightening since the passage of the 1 percent initiative, said he voted for the pay raises because "if I had opposed a pay increase now it would have constituted as a lack of endorsement on my part for those people that were reviewed rather than trying to hold the budget line."

"The way I feel is if we're not going to endorse the work, then let's get rid of the people. But if you're satisfied, then pay increases at periodic intervals are not out of line. Philosophically I feel more comfortable with a work force that may be a leaner and smaller one but a force that is more professional, with better morale, and provides better public service. You have to pay for what you're getting," he said.

Talkington said that is why he still supports the freeze imposed by the council in December on hiring new employees, but he said that, too, may come to an end before the end of April because of a management shortage plaguing the city police department.

Since the freeze went into effect the police department has lost four employees through resignation or retirement and has not been able to replace them, Talkington said.

Millar told the council Monday that he unilaterally broke the hiring freeze recently when he replaced a vital employee in the beleaguered city clerk's office. The council did not question Millar's decision as it has cited understaffing in the clerk's office as one of the prime reasons it is investigating the purchase of a computer for the city.

The council also appeared ready to thaw out a large portion of the $196,000 in revenue sharing funds it froze in December.

The council Monday voted 5-1, Smith dissenting, to build a 36-inch diameter pipe and make other necessary repairs to the city drainage system at a projected cost of $121,000, despite the fact that it has budgeted only $30,000 for the project this year.

The repairs are needed to eliminate the lake that forms at Shoshone Street and Sixth Avenue following heavy rains.

The council approved the $121,000 project contingent on Millar's ability to find the remaining $91,000 needed for the project in frozen revenue funds and other sources.

Smith said he opposed the expenditure because "I can't see this as a priority in an area which gets eight inches of rain per year."

But Smith does support finding an attorney who will take the city's case against its sewage plant designer and manufacturers off the hands of the city attorney.

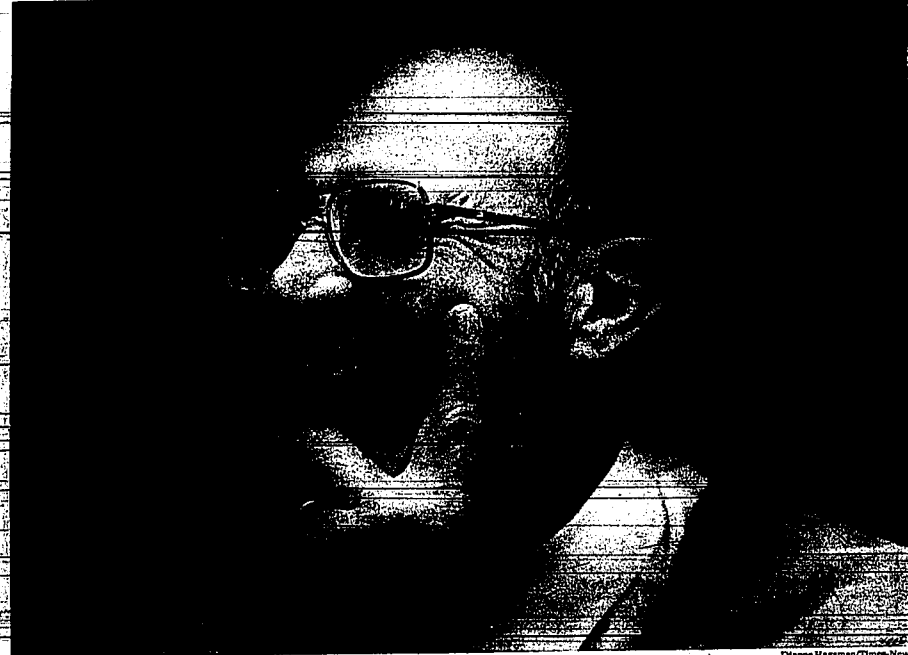

Smith will hire the staff to handle a case of this complexity," Smith, an attorney, explained. "To do the discovery and to keep this case moving will take one attorney full time and certainly at least two attorneys when you get into trial preparation and the latter stages of this litigation."

Smith said it would be to the city's advantage to speed up the progress of the suit because "it's a good case."

If we follow the typical municipal path, we'll let our witnesses scatter to the four winds and die on the vine," he added.

Smith said the city could not afford to hire an attorney to take the case on an hourly basis, but it could afford it if an attorney charged the $20 million contract litigation now being handled by the city.

Then he continued, the city only will have to pay costs in the case, which he predicted "could be between $20,000 and $50,000."

Twin Falls County Assessor Bill Clark is certain court action will force up farm taxes

Farm taxes forecast to soar after '80

By JEFF SHER

TWIN FALLS — Taxes on farm property will ultimately go up as a result of the 1 percent initiative, Twin Falls County Assessor Bill Clark said Thursday.

Clark told the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club that urban residential property owners will "see very little reduction" in property taxes when the legislation implementing the initiative takes effect in 1980, but owners of farm property will be the beneficiaries of a 60 percent cut in property taxes.

Clark explained the inequity will occur because residential property will be taxed at full 1978 market value and farm property will continue to be taxed on an income approach.

But when "the city folks, who are sitting right across the road from the farmer, receive a one percent reduction, and they see their neighbor across the road get a 60 percent cut," they'll take their complaint straight to court, Clark predicted.

"When the impact of the legislation is felt, the Legislature will pass laws requiring farm property to be taxed on a market value approach. Then $3,000 (an acre) land will go on the rolls at $3,000," he said.

"Believe me, I feel the end result of this will be an increase in farm taxes," he concluded.

"Another effect of the legislation will be to shift a greater share of the property tax burden onto residential property owners, he said.

He said residential property owners now pay about 35 percent of the property taxes collected, and their share will increase to 60 to 70 percent, even though there will be a reduction in the total amount of taxes collected.

The legislation will also create inequities in the rates at which different residential property owners will be taxed.

Clark said this will occur because assessors will be required to reappraise all residential property up to full 1978 market value by May, 1980.

"It can't be done," Clark flatly stated. "The enormity of that task is something that they (the legislature) really didn't consider. It must be done by indexing."

"The legislation allows assessors to index property up to 1978 values, but Clark called indexing the "poorest method" of valuing property. The method "bolts inequities" in taxes, he said, because it relies on average values for entire categories of property.

Clark said a study his office performed in January of 1978 properties in Twin Falls County indicated that using the indexing approach would cause 83 percent of the homes in the county to be valued at market value or less, and 7 percent of the homes to be valued at market value or more.

In other words, roughly 7 percent of the home owners will be paying more than their fair share of taxes.

Clark said there is no way to arrive at an exact market value for a property anyway.

"I can't tell you what market value is. It's what somebody's going to give for something. I can't tell you what the market value of my home is. Hell, it's not for sale," he said.

Clark said that as soon as the indexing process is completed it will be "absolutely essential to do a complete physical reappraisal" of all property in the county to remove the inequities created by the indexing process.

And he said that will be impossible if his office's budget is cut by 33 percent, the amount he predicts county government revenues will be reduced by the legislation.

Clark was asked if the property tax will eventually be replaced by a local sales tax, and he said that approach has been mentioned.

And, he added, "I would support that. The property tax is regressive. The sales tax is progressive, and I like that."

CSI grants part of women's group request

By BEN MCKELWAY

TWIN FALLS — A local group of women who proposed an ongoing student study program at the College of Southern Idaho will probably get part of what they asked, according to CSI President James Taylor.

Four members of the loosely knit group of women who are proposing the new program met with Taylor last month. They proposed vocational and academic curriculum courses such as "self-protection for women," "everyday business affairs," "women in society" and "women and the arts," to be placed in gradually over the next five years. They also proposed an assortment of short courses and seminars.

CSI Dean of Women Adele Thompson endorsed the plan.

But Thompson was told at a Tuesday meeting with six other administrators, including CSI President James Taylor, that the college could only afford the short courses and seminars.

"CSI does not have the finances to run a full-blown women's studies program," said Taylor. Instead, he will supervise the writing and distribution of a brochure which will describe various present and future courses and events the college will offer women through its Continuing Adult and Community Education branch.

Lack of funds is not the only reason for Taylor's decision, however. He does not favor, special classes for women in the regular curriculum.

"And we do not intend to provide Black Studies, just because we have black students, we do not intend to provide Indian Studies, just because we have Indian students, and we do not intend to provide Chinese Studies, just because we have Chinese students," he said.

Rue Bondurant of Twin Falls, spokeswoman for the women who presented the plan, said, "We have not had official notification, so there is very little to say at this time."

group expects to meet with Taylor again this week.

Bondurant said local "women's groups could come up with half the money CSI would need for new courses for women."

Discussing last month's meeting, Bondurant said Taylor "seemed very pleased" with their proposals. "He also seemed a little overwhelmed, because this seemed to be a new concept to Dr. Taylor."

She said Taylor spoke of their proposals "as a whole" and told the women he would meet with them this month after he met with his administrators.

"Mrs. Bondurant may have misunderstood what I said," Taylor said Thursday. "I did not commit my institution to anything separate and apart from what we can financially provide."

Questioned about a course entitled "Introduction to Women's Studies," which the women wanted this fall, Taylor said, "If Dr. Thompson wants to teach it, it will be provided."

Dr. Roy Strawser, academic dean, said the women's plan had never been seriously considered and, even if approved, would take two or three years of study before it could begin.

David Perkins, director of student affairs, said curriculum changes must first be distributed to department heads and then approved by a faculty-administration curriculum committee.

"But I don't think we can restrict classes to either sex," he said. The proposed curriculum, by creating a new major, would have eventually offered students an academic degree in women's studies.

Civil suit against Terris transferred to Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — A civil case against Kevin Terris, 35, of Filer, alleging the sale of stolen automobiles, has been transferred to the Judicial District Court in Twin Falls from Ada County.

The plaintiff, Inano Auto Auction Inc., charges Terris sold the firm two vehicles last year but could not furnish valid titles and bills of sale.

One vehicle was a 1978 Chevrolet pickup truck and the other a 1976 GMC pickup.

The plaintiff said the defendant was paid $12,410 for the two and agreed to provide properties and bills of sale.

According to the complaint the proper papers were not furnished and the vehicles were found to have been stolen.

The complaint says they were claimed later by their rightful owners, and the auto auction company was unable to recover the $12,410 paid the defendant.

The complaint was originally filed Jan. 8 in Ada County but transferred to Twin Falls this week.

In filing the action, Idaho Auto Auction Inc. is seeking $12,410 in payment of the vehicles, $10,000 in damages and loss of profit and costs of the court action.

Terris also faces civil charges of receiving stolen property in Twin Falls County in connection with a motor home, and has been charged with murder in the alleged arson fire of a restaurant he owned.

A young man was found dead in the restaurant of smoke inhalation early Nov. 11, 1978.

State board struggles with college cutbacks

POCATELLO (UPI) — State school trustees called Thursday for a $50,000 cutback in current spending and a whopping increase in non-resident tuition to help balance next year's higher education budget.

But when the board halted its deliberations for the day it still was $24 million short of the $234 million budget appropriated but not completely funded by the legislature for fiscal year 1980.

Board President Leno Sopp, Lava Hot Springs, called it quits late Thursday afternoon and said the board would consider additional alternatives to raising miscellaneous receipts when it resumes its discussion Friday.

Board members did, however, direct the presidents of the state college and three universities on how to give pay raises to exempt employees next year that are comparable to those classified under the personnel system.

The board authorized the institutions and other agencies under them to set aside a sum from next year's appropriation that is equivalent to 7 percent of the base of this year's salaries for exempt employees and allow them to give pay increases with that their discretion.

Trustee John Swartley, Boise, said the board's decision makes it possible that some exempt employees at the institutions and other agencies may not get "one-cent or two-cent" next year while others might receive pay boosts larger than the 7 percent payline authorized by the legislature for classified employees.

In appropriating the $68.2 million budget, including $5.6 million from the general fund, the legislature fell more than $1 million short of financing that level of spending.

To make up the difference, the lawmakers told the Board of Education to "hoist back $300,000 from this year's authorized spending and use it next year. In addition, it directed the board to come up with $386,000 in "miscellaneous receipts" raised at the local level and left to the board's discretion how it might accomplish the task.

The board directed the University of Idaho to hold back $200,000 in current spending, Idaho State University and Boise State University $140,000 each and Lewis-Clark State College $20,000. If it appears before July 1 that some may not be able to do more, then the board expects to reallocate the cuts to accomplish the task.

The board is considering a number of options to raise the money needed to match the appropriation made for miscellaneous receipts. Before stopping its discussion Thursday, it picked up $22,400 by agreeing to increase non-resident tuition — $160 per semester.

Among other possible increases are boosts in institutional, graduate or professional school fees and credit hour charges for part-time students. Other alternatives include limitation of the employee-spouse waiver policy on fees or a limitation of the waiver to part of the fees.

Board members also discussed but did not appear enthusiastic about requiring athletic programs to pick up the cost of non-resident tuition waivers for athletes. However, the board did direct the three presidents to discuss with the Big Sky Conference ways to cut back on the cost of intercollegiate athletic competition without destroying the programs.

Should the board distribute next year's budget among the four institutions of higher education as now being considered, the college and university presidents said it will cost them 124 positions next year in addition to 42 graduate assistants. Some of this can be accomplished by not filling vacancies in existing positions, but some will require layoffs at the various institutions.

But one president, Dr. Lee Vickers of Lewis-Clark State College in Lewiston, said that he will have to lay off tenured faculty members. In order for him to do this, the board will have to declare a financial exigency exists at Lewis-Clark State, something Vickers said he will have to ask.

Vickers said under the budget proposal now being considered he will lose 17 full-time equivalent positions, including nine FTE faculty members. This means, he said, three programs will be phased out, two programs will be reduced to one half-time position and faculty teaching general support courses will be reduced.

President Richard Gibb said the budget proposal for the University of Idaho will require 64 FTE cuts including 11 faculty. But, he said, "We're going to do everything we can to keep the academic area intact."

"We will get by, but there are real problems with this budget," Gibb said. "If we do this very long, you won't see the institution remain the same."

Dr. John Kelsner, president of Boise State, said the budget proposal for his university will require a reduction of 18 positions, including four faculty members and elimination of 15 graduate assistants.

President Myron Coulter said the proposed budget for Idaho State would require elimination of 35 FTE positions, including seven faculty. In addition, he said, it would require a 67 percent reduction in part-time lecturer budgets, elimination of one graduate teaching assistant and elimination of one of the four-week summer school terms.

Republicans warn Evans about veto

BOISE (UPI) — Republican legislative leaders warned Gov. John V. Evans Thursday not to veto a $4.8 million tax relief bill, saying the chief executive would break faith with the legislature if he did so.

Senate President Pro Tem Reed Sledge, R-Boise Springs, said, "It was my understanding that if it (the bill) passed the Legislature, the governor would have no problems with it."

Sledge said the bill would "put the red if it takes effect."

Budge called the bill "the most important piece of tax relief legislation this year" because he said it provides "dollar-for-dollar funding outside the state's school distribution formula."

Rep. Doyle Miner, R-S. Albany, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said, "If the governor vetoes the bill he has absolutely broken faith with the Legislature. There certainly will be no more compromises, not even on a few dollars. If he breaks faith with us."

But Senate Minority Leader C. Charles DSSI, Boise, said, "There is nothing wrong with the governor vetoing it. There was no agreement at all. The governor never agreed to sign it that I know of. I sat in on every meeting and I don't remember it."

Budge and Miner agreed with House Speaker Ralph Omsstead, R-Twin Falls, who said Wednesday that budget projections at the end of the session indicated there would be a surplus of state funds even after the $4.3 million appropriation in the bill in question.

Chase and Finance Committee member C.E. "Chick" Bilyeu, D-Pocatello, however, said they left Boise at the end of the session with the belief that the Legislature had approved a deficit budget.

Idaho

Legislation lack costly

BOISE (UPI) — An Idaho Department of Health and Welfare official says the state has lost $360,000 and could lose up to $12 million because the Legislature didn't pass certificate-of-need legislation.

Hollis Putnam, supervisor of the agency's Health Facilities Development section, said the federal government turned down a $360,000 grant because of the legislature's inaction.

The federal government has mandated that states adopt legislation providing that health facilities show a need for additional expansion or improvement.

Idahoans press for dam repayment costs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Idaho's congressional delegation appeared before the House Appropriations Committee Thursday to call for funds to repay water users their costs of rebuilding the American Falls Dam.

Last week, Idaho Republican Congressmen George Hansen and Steve Symms formally asked the House committee to appropriate the funds. Thursday, testimony was heard from Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

McClure told the committee the federal government should fulfill an obligation for repayment costs of rebuilding the American Falls Dam.

"Congress never intended that the waterusers pay to reconstruct a federal dam that was literally falling apart," McClure said.

He said Congress passed legislation authorizing the government to repair other federal dams — "It is only simple justice that they also pay the cost of rebuilding the American Falls Dam."

McClure urged that $19.2 million be appropriated to pay the waterusers' share of the American Falls Dam construction costs. The other portion of the costs is being paid by Idaho Power Co. for rights to produce hydroelectric power.

Utah claim appeal slated

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — U.S. Solicitor General Wade McCree plans to appeal a federal court ruling that supports Utah's claim to 157,000 acres of federally-owned oil shale land, says Michael Deamer, the state's deputy attorney general.

McCree informed state officials by phone, Deamer said Wednesday, that the Justice Department would ask the U.S. Supreme Court to review the 1978 decision by the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals, Denver. The deadline for filing an appeal is today.

The lower court ruling helped clear the way for Utah to get the valuable oil shale tracts in lieu of state land taken by the federal government when Utah was granted statehood.

Deamer said Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus advised against the appeal, and was apparently ready to drop his objections to granting Utah title to the land. But McCree decided to go ahead with the court fight.

Boise pilot dies in Bear Lake area crash

PARIS (UPI) — A light plane crashed in a mountainous area about eight miles west of Paris Wednesday after apparently icing up, killing the Boise pilot.

The Bear Lake County sheriff's office said a ground crew reached the wreckage several hours after two members of the Franklin County Search and Rescue unit spotted the plane Thursday.

Alone in the Cessna-175 was Clarence D. Glenn, 36, Boise, who was flying from Rock Springs, Wyo., to Burley on Wednesday.

The Federal Aviation Administration reported that the Salt Lake City tower had picked up a message from Glenn Wednesday afternoon that he was in clouds and that his aircraft was icing up.

A search of the area in southeastern Idaho was called off at darkness Wednesday, but early Thursday morning wreckage was spotted by two members of the Franklin County search unit.

One of the search pilots which found the wreckage, Craig Biggs, said it looked like the pilot had gone into a dive. This later was the same report ground searchers gave the Bear Lake County Sheriff's office after reaching the wreckage.

Symms seeks flights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Steve Symms asked the Civil Aeronautics Board Wednesday to grant Hughes Airwest authority to send additional flights into Boise to relieve a shortage caused by the United Airlines strike.

In a letter to CAB Chairman Marvin S. Cohen, the Idaho Republican also urged the agency to step up the process to allow more major airline flights into Boise.

Frontier, Western, Continental, Midwest, and Texas International airlines have applied to the CAB to expand or extend service to Boise. The CAB said it expects to announce on April 27 which airlines will be granted the new Idaho routes.

Judge out of case

WEISER (UPI) — Third District Judge Gilbert Norris has disqualified himself from hearing a stay of order motion in the case of an epileptic mother seeking custody of her two minor children.

Norris said he felt that he felt it would be unethical of him to proceed further in the case because of his prejudice.

Guidry shelled as Yanks fall

NEW YORK (UPI) — Held without a baserunner by baseball's best pitcher, Ron Guidry, for 5-1 innings, the Milwaukee Brewers taboored the American League's Cy Young Award winner for four runs in the sixth inning Thursday and coasted behind left-hander Mike Caldwell's seven-hitter to a season opening 5-1 victory over the world champion New York Yankees.

Guidry, who was 25-3 last season in one of the most magnificent performances in history, flashed his Cy Young Award winning form by retiring the first 15 batters in succession. But he lost his stuff in the sixth when Gorman Thomas singled with one out and Charlie Moore and Paul Molitor walked to load the bases.

Don Money, starting at second base over Molitor because Manager George Bamberger wanted to reward him for his many contributions to the team last season, then singled to drive in two runs and Cecil Cooper followed with another run-scoring single.

Adge Lary, hitting out of the sixth, Lezcano drilled another run-scoring single to finish Guidry and hand him his worst beating in an inning since Sept. 18, 1977 against the Detroit Tigers.

Caldwell, runnerup to Guidry in last year's Cy Young voting when he had a 22-9 record, was in serious trouble in only two innings. The Yankees loaded the bases with nobody out in the run-an inning by Mickey Rivers, Willie Randolph and Thurman Munson but the only run they scored came when Cliff Johnson hit a sacrifice fly to left.

Pads 3, Dodgers 2

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Reliever Lance Rautzhan uncorked a wild pitch with two out in the ninth inning Thursday, scoring Kurt Bevacqua from third base with the winning run in a 3-2 victory by the San Diego Padres over the defending National League champion Los Angeles Dodgers.

With the Padres trailing 3-2, Barry Evans led off the ninth with a double for San Diego and Gene Tenace walked off starter Burt Hooton. One out later, Rautzhan replaced Hooton, and walked Bevacqua. Gene Richards singled in the tying run and on the throw to the plate, both runners advanced. Rautzhan, facing Ozzie Smith, then threw a pitch over catcher Steve Yeager's head to score Bevacqua with the winning run.

The Dodgers had snuffed a 3-0 lead in the eighth inning when Burt Hooton doubled and Bill Russell singled him home. Ggalyard Perry received credit for the win, pitching eight innings before yielding to Rolfe Fingwall in the ninth.

Ron Cey's two-run homer in the seventh tied the score 2-2 for the Dodgers after Perry had appeared en route to a shutout. Reggie Smith singled to left with one out for only the second hit off Perry and one out later, Cey belted a 3-2 pitch into the left field stands. Perry retired the first 12 batters he faced, but Steve Garvey led off the fifth inning with a single. The Padres, meanwhile, hit Hooton heavily in every inning and opened a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Dave Winfield doubled and scored on Jerry Turner's single.

BoSox 7, Indians 1

BOSTON (UPI) — Jim Rice, last year's American League MVP, belted a three-run homer and Fred Lynn and Dwight Evans added solo shots Thursday to power the Boston Red Sox to a 7-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians in the season-opener for both teams.

Dennis Eckersley scattered two hits through seven innings to gain the victory. The right-hander, 20-8 last season, threw 105 pitches and yielded to Dick Drago after firing Rick Wise, who beat Boston three times last year, was tagged for six runs and seven hits in five innings to absorb the loss.

Rice, who led the major leagues with 46 homers in 1978, gave Boston a 3-0 lead in the third inning with a towering homer into the screen in left-center after Jerry Remy had singled and Lynn walked.

Mets 10, Cubs 6

CHICAGO (UPI) — Newly acquired Richie Hebner, making his debut in a New York uniform, hit a two-run homer and drove in four runs Thursday to lead the Mets to a 10-6 victory of the Chicago Cubs in the season opener for both teams.

Hebner, acquired last week from Philadelphia in a trade for pitcher Nino Espinosa, homered leading off the fourth to tie the score at 2-2 and got his second double of the game in the seventh to trigger a five-run outburst. Steve Henderson also had a single, driving in two runs, in the inning.

Craig Swan, the National League's ERA-leader last year, went the first eight innings for the victory. Rick Mancusi was the starter and loser for the Cubs.

Royals 11, Jays 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — John Wathan's bases-loaded triple highlighted a record-tying nine-run second inning for Kansas City and lifted the Royals to an 11-2 season-opening victory Thursday night over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Dennis Leonard, a 20-game winner in each of the last two seasons, benefited from the outburst to collect his first Opening Day victory of his career by allowing six hits in six innings. Reliever Steve Mingers pitched three innings of one-hit ball to pick up the save.

The Royals scored the nine second-inning runs on nine hits.

Bird selects agent, arrives in Boston

BOSTON (UPI) — Attorney Bob Woolf, who made Ken Hartzel one of baseball's first $100,000-per-year players and later worked out a contract making hockey's Derek Sanderson the highest-paid athlete in pro sports, has been selected to represent Bird in negotiations with the Boston Celtics.

Woolf said Thursday he did not solicit the job but was invited by a screening committee to Bird's Indiana State Cincinatti attorney Reuben Katz, who represents Pete Rose, also was in the final running for Bird's bidding.

UP's College Player of the Year is scheduled to arrive in Boston tonight for a weekend of seeing the Celtics and the city. Woolf said negotiations would probably begin early next week.

"We're going in with an open mind and see what is in the best interests of Larry," Woolf said. "He's a throwback to the old athletes, unselfish, he keeps commitments. He's a breath of fresh air."

Woolf, one of the first attorneys to specialize in representing professional athletes, first came to professional attention when he helped Harrison sign a $100,000-per-year contract with the Boston Red Sox in the late 1960s.

Briefly in sports

YFCA volleyball champs

TWIN FALLS — The Hot Shots completed an unbeaten season in the co-ed league and Century-Yamaha went undefeated in the women's circuit to capture YFCA volleyball titles.

Nine teams competed in the co-ed league, with the Hot Shots winning all eight games. The Optimist Club, the No Names and Olmstead Farms all tied for second place with 5-3 records.

Century Yamaha won 10 games without a loss, with Coors-Beer taking second with only one loss. Pepsi Cola finished with an 8-2 record while Calligan Soft Wear went 7-3.

A co-ed tournament will wind up the 1979 winter volleyball program at the YFCA. Leagues will be formed again this fall.

Recruits join ISU volleyball

POCATELLO — With the addition of two more California recruits, Idaho State University has now signed four top athletes to women's volleyball scholarships.

The latest women to sign AIAW letters of intent are Carol Ginochio, a 5-9½ sophomore from Yuba City and Shelley Stewart, a 6-1 sophomore out of Carrizo College in Fullerton.

Coach, Jo Ann Garavaglia said Ginochio has the ability to play center front and is a good blocker. Stewart boasts a 21-inch vertical jump and is good at handling a quick attack in the middle.

Previously signed to letters of intent at ISU were Vicki Simmons of Merced, Ca. and Sue Holloway of Poway, Ca.

Gowdy hired by CBS

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Columbia Broadcasting System announced Thursday it has signed veteran sportscaster Curt Gowdy to a three-year contract, beginning July 1.

CBS said Gowdy will be assigned to cover football and hockey shows for its Sports Spectacular program. His first assignment will be coverage of this July's Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico.

Rankin grabs Dinah Shore lead

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Nancy Lopez finished the opening round of the 72-hole Dinah Shore Women's Open Championship golf tournament at Mission Hills Country Club Thursday with a 68, one stroke behind leader Judy Rankin.

Lopez shot two bogeys and six birdies; three of them in a row, on the demanding 6,302-yard desert course.

Rankin, playing in the first threesome of the day with JoAnne Carner and Pat Bradley, registered six birdies and a single bogey.

Five-way tie in Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Tom Kite, a two-time winner since joining the PGA Tour in 1972, and a group of four non-winners shot 4-under-par 68s Thursday to share the first-round lead in the Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

With Kite at the head of the field after 18 holes were Bobby Wadell, Jack Reamer, Jim Thorpe and Keith Fergus, who barely made the top 60 on the money list last year.

Erhardt new Patriots boss

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The New England Patriots scheduled a news conference Friday and are expected to name Ron Erhardt, the team's offensive coordinator, as the new head coach and successor to Chuck Fairbanks.

At the noon news conference, the Patriots also are expected to name Frank "Bucko" Kilroy as their new general manager. Kilroy has been the team's player personnel director since 1971.

Minico tops Burley golfers

BURLEY — Minico swept both the varsity and junior varsity matches Thursday in a dual meet with Burley at Burley Municipal Golf Course.

Senior Greg Toolson was the top varsity golfer with a 77, but surprisingly it was junior varsity team member Mark Maybey who came in with the lowest score of the day. Maybey took medalist honors with a 75.

Minico won the varsity match 324-350 and took the JV match 342-394.

Freshman David Parker of Burley led the Bobcat golfers with a 79.

Minico will play today in the eastern SIC schools meet in Rupert with its junior varsity joining the Burley varsity in the Jerome tournament.

Olympics — Taiwan or China

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (UPI) — China Thursday made a broad concession towards Taiwan in a bid to solve the problem surrounding Chinese participation in the next Olympics, but all indications were that Taiwan remained in no mood to compromise.

Song Zhong (Song Chung), secretary general of the All China Sports Federation, told reporters Peking would be willing for Taiwan to take part in the Olympics under the name of the National Olympic Committee of Taiwan (China) provided it did not use the Taiwanese flag.

"We really want a solution to this problem and I think this is a considerable concession," said Song, who will put forward Peking's case Friday at the full meeting of the International Olympic Committee.

Mohammed Mizal of Tunisia, the IOC's senior vice-president, said the Chinese plan would be put to the 76-man session — but doubted it would bring a solution.

"From what they have told us, the Taiwan delegation could not accept this," Mizal said. "I do not know what will happen. We will have to see what the temperature of the meeting is tomorrow. It is possible that no vote will be taken and that the problem will be put to a postal vote later in the year."

With a solution to the Chinese problem appearing as elusive as ever, some IOC members were discussing the possibility of just accepting Peking's membership and retaining Taiwan's as well.

The Magic Valley Arts Council will hold its spring general meeting at the College of Southern Idaho Shields Building, Room 1117, on Thursday, April 18, at 7:30 p.m. A projected arts calendar, whereby various artists and artistic communities can plan and coordinate their events to avoid conflicts, will be discussed. Also on the agenda is a proposed summer arts festival. The public is invited.

At its organizational meeting held last March, the council decided annual dues for an individual will be $8 and will entitle the individual to one vote at the general meetings. An organization will pay $10 dues and be entitled to two votes. Associate members will pay annual dues of $25 and have all the privileges of the council but will have no voting power.

The Northwest Opera Guild is holding a dinner meeting tonight at the Turf Club. A no-host cocktail hour begins at 6 p.m. and the Carole bleu dinner will be served at 7 p.m. The program begins at 8 p.m. and will include some 11 from Doug Moore's contemporary opera, "The Ballad of Baby Doe," sung by Mary and Gary Kirkley; Tanhauser's "Evening Star," sung by Isaac Jay Fowles of Jerome, and a scene from Gino-Carlo Menotti's "The Telephone," sung by Martha Mead and Roger Vincent. Pianists will be Susan Dumphy and Margaret Vincent.

Tickets are $7.50 per pair and the public is welcome. For reservations call Mrs. Don-Youtz, 733-7905.

"Friday Night Live" features Althea Simonds, physical therapist trained in Swedish massage, yoga and aerobic dance. She will discuss and demonstrate the benefits of the "Book Magic," 121-2nd Ave. E. Randall Morgan, filmmaker, is scheduled for April 15, not April 8. The program is sponsored by Book Magic and Open Space. Admission is $1 and reservations are advised as seating is limited. For more information and reservations call 734-8039.

Madeleine Hsu, associate professor of piano at Boise State University, will give a piano recital at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium April 10 at 8 p.m. The program will include piano works by Bartok, Liszt, Beethoven, Tchaikovsky and Brahms. The recital, sponsored by the CSI music department, is free and open to the public.

The Twin Falls Music Club presents an Irish program - at the Community Christian Church, Grandview Drive South, April 9 at 1 p.m. Deborah Jones and Barbara Brown of the Burley Music Club will sing Irish, Irish ballads and other forms of Irish music. The program is free and the public is invited.

The Single-ites Club will hold a dance at the Disabled American Veterans Hall April 7 from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Music will be provided by Unyielding's Band and admission is $2. Only those unpaired are invited to attend.

Carrie Biggs plays title role

Emerging womanhood celebrated in musical

TWIN FALLS—"Debbie: Diary of a Mormon Girl" will be presented at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium Monday, April 23, at 7:30 p.m.

The musical deals with a teenage girl's passage into womanhood. Debbie (Carrie Biggs) relates her innermost conflicts to her journal, personified by Solomon (Greg Greenwood).

The book and lyrics were written by actress Heather Young, who starred in the television series, "Land of the Giants," the pilot film of "Judd for the Defense," and many television commercials. Lex de Azevedo, member of the King Family, composed the contemporary-sounding score. He was music director for many television shows, including, the

"The Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour" and "The King Family." His screen credits include the scores for "Saturday's Warrior," "Against a Crooked Sky" and "Where the Red Fern Grows."

The company has presented "Debbie" throughout California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon and Utah, and will travel to Idaho Falls after its Twin Falls appearance.

Tickets are available at the LDS Institute, 526 Falls Ave., April 16 through April 23 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. General admission is $5 (main floor) and $4.50 (balcony). For groups of 10 or more, there is a 50¢ discount per ticket. Any remaining tickets will be available at the door from 6 p.m. until curtain time.

Palm Sunday concert a milestone

Chorale enriches community spirit

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—When the Magic Valley Chorale presents Faure's "Requiem" at the annual Palm Sunday concert Sunday at 3 p.m. in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium, Twin Falls' cultural history will be repeated. It was six years ago this past February that the "Requiem" was presented by a group of community singers in conjunction with the Magic Valley Symphony, then directed by Del Slaughtor.

Mrs. Albert (Helen) Allen of Twin Falls, who organized the 1973 chorale by inviting members of all area churches, choirs—and who directed rehearsals, will again be the soprano soloist.

Richard Humphries, also of Twin Falls, will be the baritone soloist in Sunday's presentation. The Magic Valley Symphony will again accompany the singers.

The Chorale concert will be directed by Gerry Kirkby, director of vocal music at CSI.

The second half of the program will feature chamber selections with the "Misses," accompanied by Phyllis Van Nest, pianist.

They include the "Twenty-Third Psalm" by the American composer Randall Thompson; two numbers by the English composer, Ralph Vaughan-Williams, "O Clap Your Hands" and "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men," and two spirituals, "I'm Going to Sing" and "Two Wings."

"The Chorale gave its first concert April 15, 1973, sponsored by the Twin Falls Music Club, according to Roger Vincent of Filer, first president and director of the group, who is again president this year.

"While there is no official connection between the Chorale and the 1973 "Requiem" performance, that presentation, as well as the chorale organized for the local production of the opera "Germania" in November 1973, helped point up the need for a community choral group which would present serious music, Mrs. Allen said.

During the past six years the Chorale's two annual performances, a candlelight Yule concert which traditionally opens the Christmas season for local concerts, and the Palm Sunday event, often featuring a religious oratorio, have become a centerpiece in the cultural life of Magic Valley.

Between 50 to 80 singers from all walks of life join the Chorale each year in performance. Some commute to weekly practice sessions from as far as Burley and Bliss, Vincent said.

Since 1973, both the Chorale and the Symphony have become part of the Music Department at CSI, providing additional leadership in directing—in addition, college credit is given for students participating in either group.

The last three men to head the CSI vocal department have been interested in directing the community-based Chorale. The group performed Haydn's "The Creation" in April, 1976, under the direction of Harold Smith. His successor, Patrick Woliver, directed both concerts last season, which included Poulenc's "Gloria" at Christmas, 1977, with Mary Walker as soloist.

Kirkby, who came to CSI last fall from Moorhead, Minn., has continued the tradition. He has given numerous European concerts and studied in London. He says he thinks it is important for community people to have an opportunity to sing serious music.

The Chorale has deviated somewhat from its original intention to present major oratorios by including secular and popular numbers in its repertoire. But its main focus has been religious choral work, including both the Christmas and Easter portions of Handel's "Messiah" and "Jephtha."

Their biggest challenge will come later this month when they join with the Boise Master Chorale and the Boise Philharmonic Orchestra in Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony."

This ambitious undertaking, which needs a large choir as well as orchestra and soloists, will be presented both in Twin Falls and Boise, Kirkby said.

The Chorale was invited a year ago to join the Boise groups in the presentation, according to John Watland, Chorale treasurer.

Magic Valley members will travel to Boise for performances there the nights of April 23 and 24, with the Boise groups coming to Twin Falls for the final presentation at 8:15 p.m. April 28 in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium.

"This is an event," Kirkby said, "It is not often that people do the Ninth Symphony because of the number of musicians who are needed."

Four soloists have been hired from New York for the performance, he said. Tickets for the April 28 performance will be $5 for adults and $2.50 for children under 12.

Doug McClure, son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard McClure of Jerome, is a cellist with the Boise Philharmonic and will be participating in the performance, Watland said.

The Magic Valley Chorale, incorporated as a non-profit organization, is headed by a board of directors.

In addition to Vincent and Watland, officers include Richard Humphries, vice president; Phyllis Van Nest, secretary; Camille Cox, treasurer; and Mary Esner, librarian. Directors include Maureen Hopkins, Gerry Brown, Arlene Kyle and Fr. Albert Allen.

Although the Chorale's purpose is promotion of the appreciation of choral music in Magic Valley and not to make money, free will offerings received at concerts at times have exceeded expenses. The group has been able to offer modest scholarships.

There is no admission charge for the Palm Sunday concert.

"It is our traditional gift to Magic Valley in honor of the Easter season," Vincent said.

'The Champ' lost in translation

By SHELLY KINZEL
Times-News Writer

At this point in time, I would hate to be a writer with an original film idea. I can just hear the typical Hollywood producer's response: "Sorry, kid, we don't want fresh material. We want something old and reliable — give us a spin-off, a sequel or a remake and you're in business!"

Judging from this obnoxious trend, one might imagine that creativity and talent are dead. I doubt it. More likely, it is the frenzied pursuit of huge profits that — motivated by the current mania. Whatever the cause, it has produced a sorry state of affairs for both the film industry and the ardent film enthusiast. In almost every case, the spirit of the original remake is not as vital, interesting or satisfying as the original.

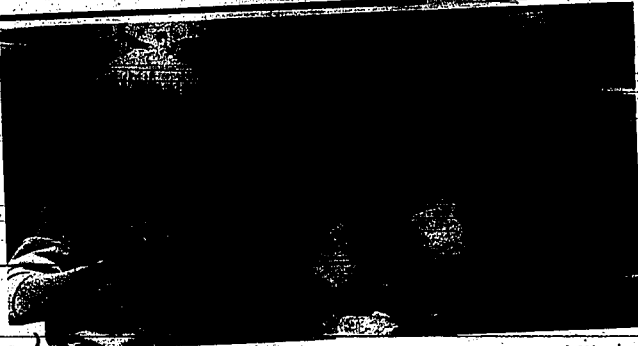

This is particularly true of "The Champ," a remake of the 1931 classic starring Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper. The new version features Jon Voight in the title role of the ex-heavyweight champ with Ricky Schroder as his adoring son. The plot is simple and embarrassingly sentimental: Billy Flynn (Jon Voight), now fallen into heavy drinking and gambling, is suddenly challenged by the reappearance of his ex-wife Annie (Faye Dunaway), who abandoned both husband and son years before. Remarried and wealthy, she wishes to make amends. Her influence forces Billy to re-evaluate his situation. The only way to keep his son's respect and provide a decent existence for him is to attempt a comeback.

Viewed in a 1930s setting and context, this story is mushy but moving. Updated to the 1970s, the film loses much of its credibility. It is difficult to believe, for instance, that Billy Flynn, a basically good-natured but uneducated mug, ever had a serious relationship with the super-sophisticated, cultured Annie. Nor can we believe that a child would be permitted such a haphazard relationship without some government interference.

There are even more poignant problems. The psychological awareness of the 70s, the splendor of technical wizardry on the big screen, are not readily superimposed onto a 1930s "black-and-white" plot without destroying its basic simplicity and naivete. The only scenes that still work are the ones in which we have tight close-ups of father and son. Voight and Schroder are wonderful together — their screen chemistry will bring tears to even the most jaundiced eye. The film I admit, does tug at your heartstrings, but you may also feel annoyed at being so obviously manipulated.

I do regret "The Champ" is such a disappointment. I generally enjoy the lush, romantic style of director Franco Zeffirelli, and I always eagerly await each new performance of Jon Voight, one of today's most powerful actors. I suppose every artist dreams of interpreting a classic in his own way. Not every work, however, is as malleable as "Hamlet" — some things are better left undisturbed!

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Academy Awards Monday night will combine an assessment of stars from yesteryear and promising youngsters of the future as Oscar begins his second half-century with a three-hour show.

Johnny Carson, making his debut as master of ceremonies in the 51st annual awards show, will introduce George Burns, 83, one of the oldest major stars in movies, and Ricky Schroder, 8, the youngest presenter in Oscar annals.

Young Schroder costars with Jon Voight — a nominee for best actor who will also participate in the show — in "The Cowboys."

The presentations, nationally televised from the Los Angeles Music Center, also will reunite Jack Haley and Ray Bolger, who starred respectively as the Tin Woodman and the Scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz" in 1939.

Ginger Rogers, an early Oscar winner for best actress — "Kitty Foyle" in 1940 — will also be a presenter.

Such other established oldtimers as Yul Brynner, Audrey Hepburn, Kim Novak and Ruby Keeler, who made her screen debut in 1935, also will make presentations.

Jane Fonda and Jon Voight in "Coming Home"

Among the newcomers appearing on the show will be comedians Robin Williams and Steve Martin, Nick Nolte, Brooke Shields, Steve (Superman) Reeve and Robby

Benson. A group of current stars and former winners who don't fit in the oldtimer or newcomer categories will be on hand too: Richard Dreyfuss, Natalie Wood, Robert Wagner, Mia Farrow, Diana Ross, Ali MacGraw, Shirley MacLaine, Raquel Welch and Dyan Cannon.

Laurence Olivier, one of the most revered actors of his generation, will be presented an honorary award for "unique achievements of his career and his lifetime of contribution to the art of film."

Another old timer, Gary Grant, will make the presentation. Olivier, who, with Katharine Hepburn, leads all performers with a lifetime high of 11 Oscar nominations, is a nominee for best actor for "Boys From Brazil." He won the award in 1949 for "Hamlet."

Vying with the 71-year-old Olivier for best actor this year are Warren Beatty in "Heaven Can Wait," Gary Busey in "The Buddy Holly Story," Robert De Niro in "The Deer Hunter" and Jon Voight in "Coming Home."

Nominated for best actress are Ingrid Bergman in "Autumn Sonata," Ellen Burstyn in "Same Time, Next Year," Jill Clayburgh in "An Unmarried Woman," Jane Fonda in "Coming Home" and Geraldine Page in "Interiors." A spokesman for the academy said only Ingrid Bergman of the five nominated best actresses will not attend the presentations.

All five nominees for best supporting actress will be in the audience. Dyan Cannon (Heaven Can Wait), Faye Dunaway (Coming Home), Maggie Smith (California Suite), Maureen Stapleton (Interiors) and Meryl Streep (The Deer Hunter).

The five nominees for best actor will be in the audience save Robert De Niro, who is seen in public about as often as Judge Crater. An academy representative said the shy star will be in the wings to make an acceptance speech in the event he wins the Oscar for best actor.

Jack Warden (Heaven Can Wait) will be the sole nominee for best supporting actor not present. The academy has acceptances by Bruce Dern (Coming Home), Richard Farnsworth (Comes A Horseman), John Hurt (Midnight Express) and Christopher Walken (The Deer Hunter).

The films nominated for best picture of the year are "Coming Home," "The Deer Hunter," "Heaven Can Wait," "Midnight Express" and "An Unmarried Woman."

Olivier and 'Oscar': Many happy returns

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The 51st annual Academy Awards, no matter who wins the Oscars, belongs to Laurence Olivier who, though an Englishman, is more closely associated with the academy than any Hollywood actor — past or present.

The 71-year-old Shakespearean actor will be honored with a special award for his career contributions to the screen over the years. It will be presented by Gary Grant.

Olivier is also a nominee for best actor for his performance as a post-World War II Jewish intellectual Nazi hunter in "The Boys From Brazil."

The legendary Olivier has been nominated for Oscars on 11 different occasions, more than any actor in academy history. Ten of his nominations were for best actor, one for best supporting actor, "Marathon Man" in 1976.

He won the Oscar in 1949 for his memorable performance of "Hamlet." In 1946 he received an honorary award for "Henry VI."

As if his own personal ties with Hollywood's Academy Awards were not enough, Olivier's association with Oscar goes back to 1939 and "Come With the Wind" when Vivien Leigh, with whom he was living before their marriage, won the best actress award playing Scarlett O'Hara.

After Miss Leigh became Mrs. Olivier she won again for "A Streetcar Named Desire" in 1951, giving the Oliviers a grand total of four Oscars.

Twenty years ago Olivier made enormous impact on moviegoers with his Hollywood film debut as Heathcliff in "Wuthering Heights" with Merle Oberon.

The mental, brooding, black-haired Englishman attained instant stardom in America although he already was an established Shakespearean in Britain. Despite the star he inspired, Olivier was not nominated for his impressive performance.

The year was 1939 and the Academy Awards' finest hour.

Ten brilliant films were nominated: "Dark Victory," "Come With the Wind," "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "Myra Morning," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Ninotchka," "O Mice and Men," "Stagecoach," "The Wizard of Oz" and "Wuthering Heights."

Such great movies as "Gunga Din," "Juarez," "Beau Geste," "Drums Along the Mohawk," "Babes in Arms" and "The Light That Failed" did not even win nominations.

It is enough to make one wonder if any of this year's nominees — "The Deer Hunter," "Coming Home," "An Unmarried Woman,"

"Midnight Express" and "Heaven Can Wait" — would have fared even minor Oscar consideration.

It was the year "Come With the Wind" swept the awards with eight Oscars — Best Picture, Best Actor, Robert Donat, won best actor for "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," John Wayne became a major star in "Stagecoach," Greta Garbo's last nomination for "Ninotchka" and the first year Bob Hope was the Oscar emcee.

Olivier won his first Oscar nomination in 1936 for "Rebecca," losing out in the balloting to James Stewart who won for "The Philadelphia Story."

Gossip

Q: I understand Nanette Fabray has had a serious hearing defect all her life, and yet she's so good in movies and on TV. How does she overcome her disability? — T.L., Providence, R.I.

A: Nanette has managed beautifully, thanks to hard work, surgery in 1967 (which restored her hearing in one ear) and mastery of lip reading. All her routines, especially musical numbers, are meticulously prepared beforehand by Nanette so she can't hear. Hard work has paid off, of course, since her career continues to perk: she was in the "Harper Valley PTA" movie with Barbara Eden and has logged TV guest spots as Bonnie Franklin's mother on "One Day at a Time."

UNLIKELY COUPLE: One of Hollywood's most macho and happy married actors got the shock of his life at a Hollywood party recently. Another star whose marriage is constantly being publicized as one of the best in showland made a pass at him. At the bash, Mr. Macho was cornered by the other star who said to him, "I've always had a terrible crush on you."

Q: Is actress Susannah York married? — R.J., Baltimore.

A: Susannah, 37, was married for 15 years to writer Michael Wells but now, after a separation of three years, they're divorcing. She and Wells have two children, Sasha, 6, and Orlando, 5. After the separation the actress lived with Australian film director Tim Burstall but that love affair broke up and now she's planning to marry Nick Humphrey, a British college professor.

BUSINESS PLANS: They only got married last fall, but Kate Jackson and Andrew Stevens have some big ideas. They're planning to form their own independent production company to make theatrical and TV movies.

Q: I thought Jane Fonda was marvelous as the crusading TV reporter in "The China Syndrome." Was the part written especially for her? — A.R., Sarasota, Fla.

A: No: It started out as a man's role and was offered to Richard Dreyfuss. But he couldn't come to terms on money. When Jane showed interest, the script was rewritten to suit her (with her help). Jane is terrific as the TV newswoman who graduates from reporting frothy "women's" features into a crack newshound who uncovers an attempted cover-up of a safety failure at a nuclear power plant. In any case, Richard's loss was quite a gain for Jane.

SIDNEY SHELDON

...no talking needed

Q: Why don't we see Sidney Sheldon on the TV talk shows anymore? He wrote "The Other Side of Midnight," and "Bloodline." His books are certainly successful. — R.J., Sacramento, Calif.

A: Sidney isn't doing any promotion for the paperback edition of the book for the simple reason that none is needed. Due to the great success of the hardcover edition, the book in paperback took off like a rocket. Even before the publication date, almost three million copies of the book were ordered by bookstores around the country. Since Sidney is hard at work doing research for his next book, he is relieved that his absence on the strenuous talk show circuit wasn't needed this time around. He'd rather devote the time to his other projects. But he's usually very cooperative as far as publicity is concerned. He spent a lot of time promoting "The Other Side of Midnight."

Q: When is Cheryl Ladd going to play more ambitious roles as a role in movies and on TV? — E.H., Cleveland.

A: It won't be long now. Cheryl is anxious to branch out from her regular "Charlie's Angels" chores, and she's doing something about it. Look for her on April 9 in "The Cheryl Ladd Special." Also, Cheryl wants to star in a three-hour TV movie for ABC on child abuse. Cheryl is active in anti-child abuse causes and thinks "the subject deserves broad treatment. And don't forget Cheryl's new record album, "Dance Forever," which we hear is sensational.

Q: I know Jackie Onassis' daughter, Caroline Kennedy, is at Harvard but what about John? Where is he at school and how's he doing? — G.E., Tampa, Fla.

A: John goes to Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass., where he's an average student. This winter he has been involved in a student work study program in Boston.

John was assigned to a probation officer to get a feeling of what probation work is like. The program is full time so John has been living in Boston and commuting to New York most weekends.

Dancing at zero-gee: The next step?

"Stardance," by Spider and Joanne Robinson
(Quantum Science Fiction, $9.95)

"Stardance" is a four-part novel. The first "stage" has already appeared as a novella, and very deservedly, has won two science fiction awards, the Hugo and the Nebula. "Stardance," as a whole should get the authors another.

Part One is the story of Shara Primm, a dancer who uses zero gravity in which to create a new dimension of dance. Adaptation to zero-gee will leave Shara forever an exile from Earth, but she continues. Then aliens appear. The reader is caught up in the emotion-charged writing that describes Shara's communication by dance. With Shara, you dip and soar and are left breathless with awe as she disappears.

And then? Can the rest of the book maintain this excellence? Well, like a symphony one is given next a quieter movement, but Shara is always felt in the background. The Robinsons create a completely different mood. Others pursue zero-gee dancing. And again the aliens appear.

The strings are drawn together to another climax—not as emotional as at the end of Part One, but beautiful in its way.

Reading "Stardance" is like hearing a symphony through your eyes, one that leaves you with hope and gratitude for writers like the Robinsons.

FBI fritters away years in tailing Bertolt Brecht

By MEL GUSSOW
ON TV Times Service

The Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted a surveillance of Bertolt Brecht over a period of years, tapping his telephone, getting reports from informants and obtaining private letters and telegrams, while amassing hardly any politically useful information about the playwright's alleged Communist activities. The FBI's pursuit of Brecht was, according to James K. Lyon, chairman of the literature department of the University of California at San Diego, "both comic and ominous" and was not without its "Keystone Kops" comedy aspect.

Information about the FBI's file on Brecht was revealed by Lyon in a paper delivered March 22 at the International Brecht Symposium, a three-day congress at the University of Maryland. Scholars, authors, critics, theatrical directors and film makers are attending the symposium, sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities, the International Brecht Society and the University of Maryland.

Lyon is one of a number of scholars who in the last five years have gained access to selected documents in the voluminous 1,000-page FBI file on the playwright, covering the period from 1943 until his death in 1956.

On the basis of the information drawn from 428 pages of the file, Lyon concluded, "In his associations with American leftists Brecht must have frustrated the FBI, for in their file they are unable to connect him to a single identifiable member of the American Communist Party—all are either suspected Communists or fellow travelers." At least three times the FBI closed its case on Brecht, for what Lyon called "a lack of evidence."

"Because the file does contain data that can be corroborated, as well as documents which qualify as sound primary sources," Lyon said, "it possesses a moderately high usefulness quotient in regard to Brecht's political and literary activities in American exile." He entitled his paper, "The F.B.I. as Literary Historian: The 'File of Bertolt Brecht."

"In its zeal to establish guilt by association," Lyon said, the FBI tapped the playwright's telephone, a fact that J. Edgar Hoover "ordered" the Los Angeles field office to conceal. Apparently Brecht knew about the bugging and, according to Lyon, took evasive measures. "In order to confuse the FBI," Brecht's wife, Helene Weigel, "or at least one occasion read tapes from her to another friend who knew no Polish." That incident was not in the FBI report. On Nov. 5, 1945, the FBI discontinued the telephone surveillance because it was "no longer productive."

The "rarest documents" in the file, Lyon said, are transcripts of two letters and a telegram to Brecht from Ruth Berlau, his mistress and collaborator. They had corresponded frequently, but her responses were thought to have been lost. There is also a note that Brecht sent to Miss Berlau when she was in the hospital during the seventh month of her pregnancy by Brecht.

"Such intimate expressions of tenderness are not part of the image of Bertolt Brecht which has cultivated and publishers have literary historian: 'The File of

The Bard's black-humored recipe for power

One of William Shakespeare's less frequently seen plays, the extraordinary dark comedy, "Measure for Measure," will be the fifth presentation in "The Shakespeare-Plays," airing Wednesday, April 11, over the Public Broadcasting Service.

Set in a corrupt and brawling Vienna, "Measure for Measure" tells the story of a peculiar attempt at moral reform undertaken by Duke Vincentio (Kenneth Colley), Vienna's ruler. Pretending to leave Vienna on a journey, the Duke assumes a friar's habit and secretly remains in the city, first appointing a deputy to rule in his place (Tim Pigott-Smith), a supposedly upright man "whose blood is very snow-broth."

Once in power, one of Angelo's first acts is to enforce the ancient law prohibiting pre-marital sex by condemning Claudio (Christopher Straull) to death—Hearing of Claudio's death sentence, his chaste sister, Isabella (Kate Nelligan), about to enter the convent, returns to Vienna to plead for her brother's life.

Angelo falls in love with the beautiful Isabella, and tries to strike an unholy bargain with her: if she will sleep with him, he will strike an unholy bargain with her: if she will sleep with him, he will solve the conflicts through an involved, secret plot, tricking and finally exposing Angelo for what he truly is.

Leading lady Kate Nelligan claims, "If you can act on television, you can act on water."

Her performance as the religious novice who saves her brother's life virginally to refuse to sacrifice her is already causing comment, both here and in England.

"The difficulty with television is that technical considerations come first," Miss Nelligan says. "It's no good the actor being excellent if the camera or lights are wrong. And you've really got only once or twice to get it right; if you do badly, you can't go back and do it again as you do in film. For me, it's the most difficult medium of all."

Kate Nelligan's career is leading her from medium to medium. This year, she won the coveted London Critics Award as Best Actress for her stunning performance in "Fleety," a new play at the National Theatre in London's West End, and she's currently starring opposite Frank Langella and Sir Laurence Olivier in the new motion picture version of "Dagul." There are those in Hollywood film circles who predict a future as a major movie star for the Canadian-born actress.

One thing that didn't worry Miss Nelligan was finding the key to Isabella's character, even though there's a great deal of controversy over the role: "The school of thought that considers Isabella a sexual hysterical is absolute nonsense to me. Shakespeare is not interested in the sexual hysteria; he is absolutely possessed to me; Shakespeare is not interested in the sexual psychology of one woman; 'Measure for Measure' is a much bigger play than that. It seems to me to be a play about authority and the corruption of power and the relationship of the individual to the state, not about some woman's sexual problems."
