

Church attacks Carter's plan on oil prices

BOISE (UPI) — Spokesmen for government and industry in Idaho Friday voiced support for President Carter's plan to phase out price ceilings on American crude oil production by 1981.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, a member of the Senate Energy and Resources Committee, denounced the plan.

"In 1981 when all controls have ended, the oil companies will be earning an extra $10 billion a year to produce an additional 400,000 barrels of oil per day," Church said. "This amounts to about 70¢ or $1.65 a gallon for crude oil. Even by OPEC standards that is highway robbery."

Church said, "We could save twice as much fuel as decontrol will produce simply by requiring the oil companies to mix 10 percent alcohol into the gasoline supply...."

However, Douglas E. Bean, executive director of the Idaho Petroleum Council, said, "Carter should be applauded for his decision to phase out price controls. There are two more major steps he's got to take if we are to get the OPEC cartel off our backs."

Bean said those steps are ones to which Carter referred Thursday night — cutting red tape to expedite the construction of new oil pipelines and stepping up the exploration for and production of oil on public lands.

He said the construction of a pipeline from Port Angeles, Wash., to Clearbrook, Minn. would supply refineries at Billings, Mont. with crude oil which would benefit Idaho consumers who receive 25 percent of all their gas and heating and diesel fuel from those refineries.

The state Office of Energy Director Kirk Hall said, "My major concern is that decontrol will be phased out in a fashion that is not disastrous and allows for agriculture." He noted the President said he will establish energy conservation bills for each state.

"If the state is cut back by 5 percent, but agriculture still is allowed 100 percent, this means non-agricultural consumption will have to be cut back more," Hall said.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said Carter's energy message was a step in the right direction but that too much control was retained over the U.S. energy industry.

McClure commended Carter for moving toward decontrol of the oil industry, recognizing gasoline as an alternative energy source and for his approach toward the problems at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant.

Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, said if Carter's plan takes effect Americans will be paying more for petroleum without any assurance that domestic supplies will be increased.

Symms said, regarding Carter's plan to put new taxes on the oil companies once price controls are lifted, "to confiscate the profits, as the president has proposed, is absolutely ridiculous."

Trucking mediation crumbles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Teamsters union and trucking industry Friday broke off federal mediation efforts aimed at ending their 6-day-old nationwide strike lockout that threatens to shut down the auto industry.

No date was set for resumption of talks.

The union said it would not broaden its selective strike beyond 73 major carriers and urged the industry to end its lockout.

As he left the mediation headquarters, Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons criticized the industry bargaining team and asked that it be reorganized.

"These particular management negotiators lack an understanding of the industry they represented, as well as an appreciation of our members' needs," Fitzsimmons said.

He said chief industry negotiator J. Cyril Counts — who served as director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service during the Nixon administration — was "incompetent."

Both Fitzsimmons and Counts agreed that virtually no progress was made during two days of mediation efforts.

An industry-wide shutdown of auto assembly plants looms unless the walkout ends soon because critical parts cannot be delivered. More than 25,000 auto workers have been laid off or put on abbreviated shifts because of the strike — with 54,000 of them laid off so far.

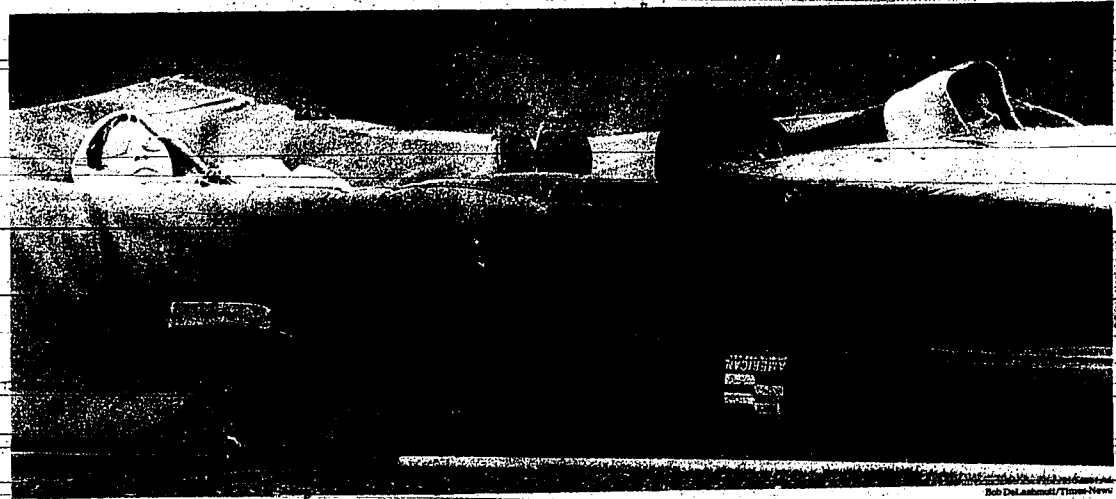

Chief federal mediator Wayne Horvitz said several issues were still in dispute — the same ones that led to the union's selective strike, which quickly escalated into an industry lockout.

"I would say at the moment we are really... no closer than we were when the strike started last Saturday night," Horvitz said.

"I will be talking to both parties... and continue to work at this problem, but at the moment I'm not very optimistic," he said, adding that resumption of mediation over the weekend was "possible, but not probable."

The problem involves the total agreement and it involves a demand for a settlement that is beyond the Carter administration wage guidelines, Counts said. "It involves a set of demands for a contract proposal that is extremely costly and impact the industry in our judgment, severely."

Despite an announcement earlier in the day by the union that "approximately 1,000" trucking firms had signed interim agreements, Counts said 97 percent of the 16,500 carriers "are down and holding fast and firm" to the industry lockout.

Some like it warm

It was just too chilly at a triangular high school truck meet in Twin Falls Friday to do too much standing around between events, even when wearing the regulation sweatshirts and wind breakers. These participants looked for the best shelter they could find, and found it between the layers of material in the high jump pit. Capital High School picked up 96 points to win the boys' half of the meet while Borah High School won the girls' division. Story on page B1.

Governor vetoes seven bills

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans completed action Friday on legislation by the 1979 Idaho Legislature, vetoing seven bills — including one that would have provided $4.8 million in property tax relief.

The Democratic governor said that he couldn't justify signing the bill which would have cut off 2 mills in property tax relief. He said he didn't agree with the budget figures finalized by the Republican-controlled Legislature and would not have the state in the "red."

Evans said this was a good possibility because of inaction by the Legislature in not taking care of some of the problems he outlined.

In normal times, he might be able to live with this sort of uncertain fiscal commitment. However, this year it is particularly irresponsible to jeopardize the state's fiscal position when the fiscal dilemmas facing the state may result in tremendous revenue demands on the general fund.

Evans' veto of the 2 mill bill prompted an immediate response from Senate President Pro-Tem Reed Budge, R-Sofia Springs.

Budge charged that the Legislature and the governor "had an understanding with regard to the budget and the 2 mill property tax relief."

"He wanted and received an additional appropriation for state employees and it is obvious with his veto on HB 327 that the governor didn't keep his commitment to allow some badly needed tax relief to the people of Idaho."

In addition to the tax relief measure, Evans also put his red stamp of disapproval on bills that would:

- Establish legal wiretap guidelines.
- Provide for product liability.
- Allow the sale of Senate and House journals to be accomplished through the speaker's office instead of the secretary of state's office.
- Exempt nonprofit organizations operating hospitals from ad valorem taxes.
- Provide licensure inspection of hospitals.
- Give authority for a city council to create a local improvement district by resolution of the council.

Evans said that the board may consider declaring a financial emergency, which would enable Lewis-Clark State College to eliminate a handful of tenured faculty members.

Because the Legislature dedicated a large portion of the budget to property tax relief it did not have enough new money from next year's revenues to finance the entire higher education budget. It directed the Board of Education to pick up more than a $1 million by increasing miscellaneous receipts $568,000 and cutting this year's spending by $500,000 so the money can be used next year.

Decisions made by the board Thursday and Friday increased — at least on paper — miscellaneous receipts by $743,000. However, there was serious questions about whether the schools could top a half million dollars between now and July 1 for use next year and whether the fee increases would produce the estimated $743,000.

One of the major increases in student fees, approved Thursday, calls for a $150 per semester increase in non-resident tuition. This would produce an estimated $522,000 in revenue next year.

Other increases approved Friday called for hikes in graduate and professional school fees and fees charged for foreign students.

Board members boosted graduate student fees except for those in the medical and veterinarian medicine programs $25 per semester, hiked the law school registration fee $25 per semester and boosted foreign student fees by $50 per semester.

In addition they agreed to charge general fund fees to spouses of university and college employees and to charge athletic budgets 10 percent for non-resident walvers now permitted athletes.

College fee rise proposed

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Board of Education tentatively split a $69.2 million higher education budget among the colleges and universities Friday and raised student fees $150,750 to help finance it.

The board directed the university and college presidents to review the proposal and report back to a special April 17 meeting in Boise on whether they can live with their budgets.

Funding for Bruneau Plateau Project approved

BOISE — Gov. John Evans tossed aside last minute doubts Friday and signed a measure to fund studies of the Bruneau Plateau Project and three other state water projects.

But in doing so, Evans said he will not agree next year to the method used by the Legislature to fund the studies.

Wednesday, Evans threatened to veto the bill, which provides $455,000 for feasibility studies over the next year — projects for the Bruneau Plateau, the Bear River, the Weiser River and Upper Snake River Aquifer Recharge projects.

The bill finances the studies through an appropriation from the Water Pollution Control Fund. Further funding will have to be appropriated again in 1980.

In signing the bill Friday, Evans said, "I am accepting the Legislature's decision to fund the first year from the Water Pollution Control Fund, but I will not agree next year to raising that fund."

Evans said the need for the four projects outweighed "what I consider to be the shortsighted approach taken by the Legislature in the way the projects were funded."

Vetoing the bill and waiting another year to fund the projects would increase construction costs by as much as 10 percent, a fact the governor said "weighed heavily" in his decision.

Earlier this year the governor recommended the Legislature fund the projects out of a new Water Conservation and Development trust fund, which would be built up from a tax on electrical bills.

Instead, the Senate Resource and Conservation Committee provided for funding out of $9 million in surplus funds contained in the Water Pollution Control Fund, a dedicated fund which is financed through the inheritance tax.

Criticizing this, Evans said the water pollution control fund was set up for the purpose of providing the state's share of constructing sewage treatment plants for cities.

The pollution control fund was also appropriated for school district relief by the Legislature this year.

Radiation leakage slowed Nuclear plant may not be reopened

This Goldaboro, Pa., boy survived

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Engineers activated equipment to slow radiation leakage from the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant Friday and Gov. Dick Thornburgh said he has "serious doubts" about reopening the facility.

In an address to the people of Pennsylvania, the governor said he soon hoped to be able to tell pregnant women and children they could return home.

With the overall situation steadily improving, engineers at the site cut back on their intense round-the-clock control room monitoring.

The governor said he had "deep and serious doubts about opening the plant on Three Mile Island again, about expanding nuclear power in Pennsylvania and about assuming that we can't go back to safer things."

The initial startup of the gas removal system released "a slight amount of radiation to the environment," but Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials expected the overall effect to significantly reduce radiation hazards for the first time in nine days.

Thornburgh continued to advise pregnant women and pre-school children to remain out of a five-mile area around the plant because of the slight radiation still being emitted.

"Very soon now, I hope to have the pleasure of telling a brave and tired group of women and children that they can, indeed, go home again," he said.

"I shall treasure that moment for as long as I live. For I believe it will mark the end of the most dangerous days of decision any governor has had to face in this country."

Reactor specialists continued the slow process aimed at bringing the steel-shelled shutdown of the reactor was expected late next week.

Although reactor conditions were reported stable, a mid-day blast of steam from the second, non-operating unit at the plant startled observers. The NRC assured area residents that the steam came from an oil-fired burner and was not radioactive.

NRC's chief on the scene, Harold Denton, announced at a late afternoon news conference that emergency crews were phasing back on their coverage in the control room. Between midnight and 8 a.m., only a skeleton crew would watch the instruments monitoring the crippled reactor.

With the approval of state and federal authorities, the plant resumed dumping mildly radioactive waste water into the Susquehanna River.

In addition to the slight release of radiation, there was another problem: Friday, one of two pumps circulating water in the reactor pressure vessel failed. Operators quickly turned on one of three backup pumps. This caused no additional harm to the uranium fuel core.

Latest holdup really wasn't

WASHINGTON (UPI) — This is a slinkup, said the kid. "No, it's not," said the congressman. But it was, said Stewart McKinney, R-Conn., figures the shot that followed must have been a blank. "I didn't hear 'air' and I don't have a hole in my head," says McKinney, 48, former Al. Exor-dill instructor who knows the sound real bullets make in the air.

McKinney said he was accosted on a Capitol Hill street about 1:30 a.m. Friday by two teenagers, who ran away after firing one point-blank shot. He said he was unhurt and surrendered nothing.

He was the latest in a string of legislators mugged over the past decade on Washington streets. Most recently, Rep.—Robert Michel, R-Ill., was badly beaten by muggers outside his Capitol Hill home several months ago. Other congressional victims have included Sen Robert Morgan, D-N.C., accosted at knife-point on Pennsylvania Avenue last year, and Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., mugged while jogging.

But the most shocking case involved Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who was shot and seriously wounded a few years ago. "I've always felt if I were held up, I would suddenly give over my money," McKinney said Friday, according to an aide who took his statement on the incident and relayed it verbatim to reporters.

"I don't know what came over me," he reacted "just the opposite. When he said it was a robbery, I said, 'No it's not!' I started yelling, 'Go away! Get out of my life! Don't bother me!'"

TWA jet survives mid-air roll and plunge

DETROIT (UPI) — When the huge jet suddenly did a barrel roll and plunged thousands of feet in the dark skies over southern Michigan, Chell Roberts first feared a mid-air collision.

"I thought the pilot was trying to avoid another plane," said Roberts, 22, of Salt Lake City, who was returning home Wednesday with his pregnant wife from a trip to Spain. "Then the plane just kept going faster. People began to scream, looked around me and there was a stewardess sitting right behind me, crying."

"I thought about my family and about my wife and my little baby I thought I'd never get to see." What the Roberts and 85 other occupants experienced — and survived — was a complete 360-degree mid-air roll and a terrifying five-mile plunge toward earth.

An Federal Aviation Administration official said it was "an absolute miracle" the Boeing 727, on a flight from New York to Minneapolis, landed safely at Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Barbara Merrill of Edina, Minn., returning home from Cairo, Egypt, was pinned to the lavatory floor and unable to return to her seat to be with her 14-year-old daughter.

She blacked out but later was revived and helped back to her seat by another passenger. Mrs. Merrill said she thought she and her daughter would die. "Why did I bring you?" she said she sobbed to her daughter.

Execution of Evans probable

ATMORE, Ala. (UPI) — Chances of a man's soul Evans III escaping the electric chair appeared slim Friday, despite a last-minute stay that could delay the execution until July.

Evans, 29, ate what was to be his last supper Thursday night, but then immediately ate again because he did not want to take sole responsibility for rejecting it, and then argued that Evans should be executed.

He was to have been put to death at 12:01 a.m. Friday in Alabama's electric chair, and the stay came just six hours before the switch was to be thrown.

"I don't believe it," Evans said when told of his reprieve. "They're going to mess with me again."

The convicted killer then leaned against the wall of his cell and cried, the Rev. Kevin Dugan, Evans' death row confidante, told reporters.

Rehnquist said he granted the last-minute stay because he did not want to take sole responsibility for rejecting it, and then argued that Evans should be executed.

He said that if he had been voting on the appeal as a member of the full court, instead of its sole representative, "I would vote to deny the stay." If the rest of the court agrees with Rehnquist, Evans could again find himself facing the electric chair.

Father Dugan, who was at Evans' side throughout much of the ordeal, said he dreaded the thought of the whole process starting over again.

"We will have to go back to the same thing with him and his mother," said Dugan. "It's something I just don't want to contemplate."

"I don't think we could go through it again," it "would be a tremendous trauma."

New ripper kills again in England

LONDON (UPI) — A Jack the Ripper-style killer who mutilates prostitutes and has killed up to 14 young women — up to twice as many as his namesake — has struck again, police said Friday.

Details of the latest killing — the body of a pretty 18-year-old was found on a town green near her home in Hants early Thursday morning — has convinced detectives the so-called "Yorkshire Ripper" was responsible.

He is believed to have killed at least 10 and possibly 14 women, most of them prostitutes, during the past 3 1/2 years in Yorkshire and Lancashire.

Though the latest victim was described by police as an "innocent and respectable" woman, detectives believe her death was the handiwork of the same maniac.

"I have reason to believe one man is responsible for these horrific crimes and he will continue to kill until he is caught," said Assistant Chief Constable George Oldfield.

"He is obviously mentally ill and someone somewhere must know who he is. The killer himself would be well advised to come forward before increasing his terrible catalogue of crime."

The 150 police working on the case would not yet reveal the clues that have linked all the murders together.

The Yorkshire Ripper leaves a recognizable signature on his victims — head injuries and extensive mutilation, police said, but they refused to be more specific.

Opinion

A-4 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho Saturday, April 7, 1979

Be fair response.

Reader says don't use 'Twin'

The pens of provoked sent a dozen Be Fair coupons to the editor's desk this week and the top of the heap complaint suggested the Times-News reveal abbreviations of the name of Twin Falls to just 'Twin.'

This complaint seems to be nothing but a pet peeve of a reader.

Nearly everyone in Twin Falls has, at one time or another, referred to the town as Twin.

The Times-News reference to Twin Falls as Twin (used in a recent headline) accurately conveys a bit of information in a short space. A headline requires this kind of communication.

In stories, the newspaper does not abbreviate Twin Falls. In headlines, the abbreviation is used.

Those who complained about "double printing" in recent editions of the paper.

The problem has cropped up on some pages and is due to a hind printing process in the press room.

The president is working to correct the situation.

One reader complained, "you seem to have an extremely high ratio of advertising to news. Isn't there some law which limits that percentage?"

The answer is yes and yes. The Times-News does run more ads than news, a ratio of about 60 percent advertising to 40 percent news.

The paper is required by law to run no more than 75 percent ads. 25 percent news to retain its mailing privileges.

Some pages do seem too full of ads but remember that each section front is completely open and free from ads. That brings the percentage down and also gives the paper a cleaner, easier to read format.

And many people read papers strictly for advertising. Ads are major revenue generator of a newspaper, too.

But editors have complained about the lack of space to the publisher.

Chris Peck's recent column about George Hansen being the most conservative man in Congress drew an angry Be Fair coupon.

"You couldn't defeat him in the election, so now you discredit him as much as you can," the reader wrote.

"Get rid of Chris Peck!"

Interestingly, Peck's column of last week was generally complimentary of Rep. Hansen. Peck hasn't always had kind words for the congressman but this column wasn't a zinger.

Don't be paranoid, Hansen supporters.

Those are the highlights of this week's Be Fair. Keep the coupons coming.

Carter has learned his energy lesson

President Carter has come a long way since he gave Congress his first energy program two years ago.

Back then it was almost as if he expected the aura surrounding the White House to guarantee approval. But the political reality of Washington hit him like a slap in the face.

He announced his new energy proposals Thursday night, and although congressional reaction appears to be on the negative side, many of Carter's plans have a good chance of passing, simply because the major element of the new proposals — decontrol of domestic crude oil prices — now will be accomplished without congressional action.

By taking the political heat for raising domestic oil prices to world market levels himself, however, Carter has placed Congress and its individual members, in a position of deciding if most of the estimated $16 billion to $18 billion in oil company profits resulting from the action over the next three years will go to stockholders or back to the taxpayers.

In this way, Carter has made it much more difficult politically for Congress to turn down a tax on crude oil that it refused to even consider in 1977 when he called for a similar tax as part of his 1977 energy bill.

Under the plan outlined by Carter, about 70 percent of the increase in oil company revenue resulting from decontrol will be returned to the government in taxes of one form or another, including a 50 percent "windfall profits" tax.

Revenue from the windfall tax would go to an "energy security fund" to be used to provide tax credits of about $100 a year for low income families, increase federal assistance for mass transit programs in cities, and establish or increase funding for new energy technology programs such as solar research, coal gasification and development of synthetic fuels.

There even is a proposal to provide tax credits for wood-burning stoves.

Two months from now, the law regulating domestic crude oil prices expires and Carter will single-handedly have the authority to set the price of oil produced in the United States.

Some of the measures in addition to the windfall profit tax will require congressional approval. Among them are a law requiring thermostats in all non-residential buildings to be set at 65 in the winter and 80 in the summer and mandatory state plans for reduction of gasoline consumption.

Others, such as one year delay in reducing lead content in gasoline, can be accomplished by executive action.

Still others, like the call for drivers to obey the 55 mph speed limit, would be purely voluntary.

The main difference this time over two years ago when Carter sought an energy plan is that he depended on support in Congress to get the program passed. This year he is taking the major action himself and in using both political pressure and political incentives to gain the remainder of what he wants.

For instance, any liberals in Congress who might be inclined to oppose the windfall profits tax because they think it is too low will have to consider such factors as the proposed $100 tax credit to poor families before voting against it.

Members of Congress, no matter what their political party or philosophy, also will have to consider the reaction of their constituents if they vote against a measure that would allow oil companies to make an additional $5 billion to $6 billion profit in each of the next three years when the price of gasoline will be approaching $1 a gallon at most filling stations.

Chris Peck's column on Gooding newspapers rebutted

Editor, Times-News:

Since Chris Peck's "Ted Dyer Memorial Column" was written for me (one of those who cheered the demise) and was read by your Sunday readers, perhaps they would be interested in the other side of the "sad" story.

Dyer was not "ambushed" by any "orchestrated" phone campaign — on behalf of the Enterprise. Dyer was, probably, assisted by editors of the Gooding Leader, who allowed his would-be clever columns to be printed.

My reference to his labeling opponents to the women's prison in Gooding as "hysterical fat women" — you did not read far enough, Mr. Peck! — were supposed to be accepted because we disagreed with his version of what was good for our community? Our high school students against the prison were labeled "misguided adolescents." There were approximately 100 signatures on petitions against the prison; that's a lot of "mental midgets." Little jewels such as these have been printed periodically by the Gooding County Leader.

The latest, and probably the one that finalized his "popularity" with the majority of the Gooding County populace, was printed January 25, 1979, entitled, "Society news puzzling" and small town listless. "May I quote? Who could possibly be interested in accounts of peach pits decorously gobbled at potlucks; or narrations of social club initiations that bestow mystical titles on young lovers?"

Was that not a very cynical remark snark of Ted Dyer. Let's face facts. Competition should make both papers better; those involved strive harder to make their paper the better one. Legal ads are paid for with money. Should taxpayers pay a paper the community.

His parting shot in the article was: "Do people indulge in ritual for its own sake because of the lack of culture and diversity in rural areas?"

"People in small towns seem to be interested in each others affairs, no matter how trivial. And if there is nothing happening, they will create it with a few 'mystical' trappings and some fancy titles."

If the editors of the Gooding Leader and Ted Dyer expected their readers to appreciate all this cultural writing, they missed the boat. This kind of culture we can do without.

If Ted was using the residents of Gooding County in his study of anthropology, he probably got some surprises.

Another part of your memorial column would take issue with is "the commissioners didn't know what they were talking about." Did it ever occur to you that Chris Peck didn't know all he was talking about either? To quote: "The Enterprise is a Karen Ann Quinlan of journalism. Why it lives defies all natural laws of newspapering." In medical terms, from what I'm told, you are wrong. The Enterprise is alert, feeling, active, knows what is going on, and cares! That is clinically dead!

"Natural laws of newspapering" — I know nothing about and care less — only hope the Enterprise lives and grows.

Another quote from you: "To my mind, the switch of legal notices was a rotten, small-minded thing to do." I care very little about your mind. Competition should make both papers better; those involved strive harder to make their paper the better one. Legal ads are paid for with money. Should taxpayers pay a paper that prints legals on one page and takes sinister delight in belittling and insulting those same taxpayers on another. The Gooding Leader has printed legals for 73 years. They should have put down roots deep enough in that time to hold them without county support.

While I have trod on Dyer with both feet, let me retract a little. He did write some fine articles — he just got carried away with his caustic, poorly veiled criticism in the majority of his articles. The latter are the ones of which he says he is most proud.

Crompton once said "sensationalism sells papers." Maybe, but it didn't sell subscriptions. Crompton should quit crying — let him take his lumps and say Dyer had had fun dishing them out for the past year.

At a meeting in Twin Falls a lady asked, "Gooding is quite a controversial place, isn't it?" My answer: "No, it's not. It's the people of Gooding don't like something, they don't sit back and cry — they band together and try to do something about it."

From what I read in the papers, some of our neighboring communities have found that's a pretty good idea.

This is quite long, so it probably won't make the paper, but Ted Dyer's bias sometimes took a fourth of a page.

Panama Canal can still be saved

Editor, Times-News:

According to a recent letter from Rep. George Hansen, there is still time — and a way — to keep our Panama Canal in American hands!

The House of Representatives has yet to vote on appropriation of the funds necessary to implement the new Canal treaty. Legislation for this purpose is already being considered by the House and will be brought to the floor for a vote very soon. Now — today — not tomorrow or next week or next month — is the time to assert your Constitutional rights as a citizen — by writing your own representative cast his vote against giving your property away!

The Panama Canal is United States property — built, paid for, and operated since its opening in 1914 with United States taxpayers' money. Don't let Congress now appropriate more of your money to finance its transfer to the Marxist Republic of Panama!

In his letter, Mr. Hansen tells us that "the big international banks and their influence-peddling friends in Washington are about to saddle you with consumer tax of some $100 a gallon on all fuel oil and gasoline you consume — just for the privilege of giving away the Panama Canal."

"These same big-power brokers are also saddling you and me with a direct taxpayer expense of some $300 for every American family of five — just for the privilege of giving away the Panama Canal."

Mr. Hansen is asking the American people to flood Washington with letters to help prevent this sellout! I hope everyone will support him in this effort.

Idaho will suffer if BSU treatment program dropped

Editor, Times-News:

I am writing this letter as the Idaho Regional Director of the Northwest Pollution Control Association (NPNCA). I am extremely disappointed and in opposition to the recent action taken by Boise State University President Kaiser when he decided to eliminate the wastewater training program from the BSU Vocational Technical School curriculum. This program was the only one in the state to provide Idaho with technically qualified wastewater operators.

The millions of dollars of public funds spent for Idaho municipal wastewater treatment come to nothing without the certified operators this program trains. The Idaho State Department of Health and Welfare is allocating approximately $2 million each year for new construction and improvements to wastewater treatment facilities. Without a source of formal training available, there is no assurance that these facilities will be properly operated or maintained. Serious public health problems can develop when wastewater is improperly handled.

Although the BSU Vocational

Technical School program was an infant, it held the best promise for continued training throughout the state.

To a limited extent the State Health and Welfare Department could alleviate this problem by contracts with other schools such as Linn-Benton Community College in Oregon, or private engineering consultants to provide training and short-course schools. The costs for outside consultants to provide these services are typically five times those for which a BSU training program would be able to provide them. The end result of out-of-state schooling will be Idaho pays more for less training.

The action taken by President Kaiser will set the Idaho Wastewater Treatment Plant operator training back five years. The work of setting up the program was finished, the money is available, the cities need certified, well-trained personnel, sincerely hope President Kaiser will reconsider and reverse his decision — that he will continue the BSU wastewater training program.

Action Line praised

Editor, Times-News:

My husband and I just wanted to let you know how much we owe Action Line and Ben McKelway for all his help in helping us get our pictures back from Larry Burton. Without his help I don't know where we would have gotten them, unless he hired a lawyer and fought him in a court of law. We, of course, would have had to put up a lot of money which we don't have.

God bless this wonderful man, we're deeply grateful.

Editor, Times-News:

We started to call but have been told one letter is worth a thousand phone calls.

Today through Ben McKelway's "Action Line" we got back the pictures of our granddaughter who was five months old when she passed away. She had spent most of her short life in hospitals so these pictures were the only ones there was.

The pictures are worth so much more to us than a thank you; but for lack of better words. Thank you, Action Line and most of all Ben McKelway and his great work.

Gov. Brown, Linda Ronstadt leave on African vacation

By CHRIS KELLER
NEW YORK (UPI) — Sitting side-by-side in the economy section of a Boeing 707, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. rock singer Linda Ronstadt flew to Africa Friday night.

Pan American Flight 188 took off from Kennedy Airport at 7:10 p.m. after being delayed on the ground by mechanical problems for more than two hours. It was scheduled to arrive at Roberts Field outside Monrovia, Liberia, about 8:15 a.m. today.

Mrs. Ronstadt, 32, and the governor, who will be 41 Saturday, had reserved two adjacent seats in the Pan Am plane's economy section in their own names. They were sitting in the section with 80 other passengers.

A report that a birthday cake had been put aboard the plane could not be confirmed.

Reporters in New York and California had spent the day trying to determine whether Brown would take Ronstadt to Africa.

Officially, all his California-office would say is that Brown left Los Angeles International aboard a Trans World Airlines flight that arrived in New York before dawn Friday. Brown was to fly to Liberia, visit Nairobi, Kenya, on Monday and return to California Easter Sunday.

There was no official mention of Mrs. Ronstadt, but she was spotted getting off the TWA flight from Los Angeles.

Pan Am claimed it had no reservations for the two.

Maurice Abravanel will soon retire as conductor of the Utah Symphony

Abravanel retires this month

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Maurice Abravanel, music director and conductor of the Utah Symphony since 1947, will retire at the end of the current season on the recommendation of his doctor, the symphony announced Friday.

"On the advice of my doctor I am compelled to step down at the end of this season which I infinitely regret," the 76-year-old conductor said in a letter to symphony President Wendell J. Ashton.

Abravanel said he will be leaving to conduct two concerts this Friday and Saturday in Ogden and Salt Lake City, but he plans to conduct the orchestra's season finale, the Verdi Requiem, on Saturday April 21 at the Salt Lake Tabernacle.

It is not expected that Abravanel will accompany the orchestra on a later tour, which includes an April 30 concert at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls.

The conductor never missed a concert or rehearsal during his first 30 years as head of the symphony. Then on Nov. 29, 1976 open heart surgery interrupted his conducting for a short period.

He returned to the podium in mid-February 1977 to conduct an all-Mahler program. That same year he went on to conduct 10 recording sessions and lead the symphony on a European tour.

Dr. Robert K. Maddock, Jr., the conductor's surgeon, said Abravanel had made an "almost superhuman effort" to carry out his numerous daily tasks since the coronary bypass surgery.

"As time as gone on, the continued work-load is beginning to take its toll and retirement is now recommended," said the doctor.

Spotting English ladies

LONDON (UPI) — How can you spot an English lady? Well, for one thing she has hand-washed underwear. She probably also has a small, waxy "dog" — saves "string, always takes tea in the drawing room and likes her gamekeeper. A lot.

She is married to an English gentleman who probably calls her "dear old thing" — the same affectionate expression he uses for his favorite dog or horse — and they live in a manor that always has dry rot in the west wing.

Or so says Major Douglas Sutherland, author of "The English Gentleman's Wife," just published by Debretts peerage, which also provides guides to the nobility and social etiquette.

Sutherland, who also wrote "The English Gentleman," offers a concise, if tongue-in-cheek guide, to spotting the upper crust lady in her natural habitat.

What are the tell-tale signs?

Underwear is a dead giveaway. "All ladies mend their own underwear," says Sutherland. They do not send it out to be cleaned but have it hand-washed at home, preferably by a trusted maid. The only exception appears to be Queen Elizabeth who, he avows, "has her smalls sent to a very smart establishment not a stone's throw from Buckingham Palace."

A lady is also thrifty. She doesn't cut the string on a package, but unites the knot instead and throws the little ball into a drawer with countless other little balls. She also saves the brown parcel paper, ultimately building up a potential avalanche in the cupboard.

The care and feeding of her children she usually delegates to a nanny on the theory that "rearing them is best left to professionals." However, the dress is accompanied by a very small dog which will "generally yap and snap at the slightest provocation."

Does U.S. support African apartheid?

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer
The Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility, a National Council of Churches-related agency, is about to undertake the largest campaign ever aimed at influencing U.S. firms' investments in southern Africa.

The ICCR has assembled a coalition of 52 religious and educational agencies — the largest ever — which hold stock in U.S. firms and banks doing business in southern Africa for the purpose of filing stockholder resolutions aimed at the companies' African policies.

"These church-sponsored resolutions are being announced at a crucial time in the history of southern Africa," said Timothy Smith, ICCR director. "Zimbabwe (Rhodesia) and Namibia (Southwest Africa) are about to become free nations under black majority rule," he said, and "national resistance to apartheid is growing in South Africa itself."

The crucial role of U.S. banks and corporations in strengthening white minority rule needs to be challenged as never before," he added. Smith said stockholder resolutions have been or will be filed with some 30 companies, including 10 banks or financial institutions.

The resolutions filed with the banks deal with loans to the South African government. Other resolutions call on four companies to withdraw from South Africa and still others ask corporations not to expand operations or make further investments in southern Africa.

Churches and church agencies involved in the stockholder movement contend that U.S. business investments "provide significant economic support, international credibility and moral legitimacy" to the Southern African government.

U.S. churches have long been divided on whether American corporations should completely withdraw from southern Africa, particularly South Africa, or whether investments could be used as leverage from improving the social and economic condition of blacks.

The increased number of religious agencies involved in the stockholder resolution movement seems to indicate a growing consensus among both Roman Catholic orders and Protestant church agencies that corporations should either withdraw or hold the line on their investments.

To date, none of the ICCR-sponsored resolutions have carried the day at corporate annual meetings, but in a growing number of instances the resolutions have gathered enough support to be automatically placed on the agenda the following year.

The resolutions have also opened up avenues of dialogue and negotiation between the religious community and some corporations aimed at more fully disclosing to stockholders corporate involvement in southern Africa.

Among the resolutions filed, 3M Co., Phelps Dodge, Phillips Petroleum and Union Carbide, have been asked to withdraw their investments. Exxon, U.S. Steel, American Cyanamid, Fluor Corp. and Borg Warner are being asked not to expand or invest in South Africa.

Banks being asked not to lend money to the South African government include Bank of America, the First National Bank of Boston, Merrill Lynch and Insurance Company of North America.

Religion in public schools

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

The study of religion in the public schools is a growing phenomenon, but it still is surrounded by confusion, suspicion and questions of constitutionality.

"Lively activity is going on in local school districts, universities and colleges, religion studies centers and national professional associations," according to Dr. Robert M. Healey, professor of church history at the University of Dubuque Theological Seminary, Dubuque, Iowa.

Writing what he called an "interim report" on the study of religion in public schools in the current issue of Baylor University's Journal of Church and State, Healey said, however, that the movement for the objective study of religion "has yet to become well-known."

"Ignorance about what the Supreme Court justices actually have said about the place of religion in public education is surprisingly widespread," Healey said. "Studying religion as the pursuit of secular learning is a strange and novel concept to large numbers of people."

Many Americans still believe that the Supreme Court, in its prohibitions on prayer and Bible reading in the public schools, outlawed all mention or discussion of religion.

Instead, what the Court did was to seek to draw a distinction between the teaching of religion and the teaching about religion.

As early as 1948, in one of the first of the Supreme Court school and religion cases, Justice Tom G. Clark said that "nothing we have said here indicates that such study of the Bible or of religion, when presented objectively as part of a secular program of education, may not be effected consistently with the First Amendment."

The justices continued to underline that point in other cases going into the 1960s even as they banned the more devotional aspects of religion such as prayer.

But while giving the green light to the objective study of religion in the public schools, Healey said, the court provided "little guidance" in showing what would be acceptable.

Questions were raised as to whether pupils at that level had the maturity needed to deal with free discussion of even the religious dimension of secular subjects as well as the fear of many teachers that "their communities would never let them teach or try to teach about religion fairly."

In tracing the progress of the growing popularity of the secular study of religion, Healey said the increase in the number of students studying religion in the Pennsylvania public schools has increased from 700 in 1967 to 12,000 in 1974.

He said such figures probably typify a national trend.

But Healey said religion studies in public education "will have to prove themselves many times before achieving popularity," and called for the raising of public awareness.

Teacher competency is also a critical factor, he said, adding that for the foreseeable future, religion studies will have to depend on already-hired teachers whose qualifications will have to be developed through special programs.

"In other words," he concluded, "the proposal that religion be studied factually in public education has received considerable implementation in the past decade, but it faces some serious practical hurdles quite apart from the usual objections."

"Nevertheless, the movement is spreading," he said. "Quite possibly with the passing of another decade a critical and appraisive study of religion will become the norm for the American public school."

'Grass roots' Christians are reaching out to Jews

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Leaders of Christian churches aren't as receptive to Jewish concerns as the Christian lity, a report from a B'nai B'rith director suggests.

In a background paper on inter-religious relationships in the United States, Theodor Freedman, director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said "grass roots" Christians seem to understand Jewish concerns better than the church hierarchies.

IN THE BEGINNING HE GUARANTEED THE END.

God has a plan and each and every one of us are a part of it. Sometimes we do not go according to His plan, but it is available to us nonetheless. God's plan is that we have fellowship and communion with Him; and that we share His glory and His life. And He sent His Son as a guarantee that our beginning would be without end. Your start could be at a Community Christian tomorrow. You have His invitation.

What's what

Mothers tend to cradle babies on the left side, but the real reason isn't as obvious as it seems

Why is it that most mothers cradle their babies in the left arm? Simple enough, I thought. That leaves the right hand free to do other things, and most mothers are right handed. But researchers now report that most left-handed mothers likewise cradle their babies in the left arm. And they theorize, seriously, that mothers tend naturally to hold their babies as close as possible to their left sides so that the sound of the mother's heartbeats will serve to calm the offspring. Maybe so, don't know.

INITIALS

Another thing you can do to while away the time at airports is count the number of celebrities who've chosen to identify themselves by their first and second initials with their surnames instead of by their spelled-out names. Such as: W. C. Fields, H. L. Hunt, S. I. Hayakawa, J. D. Salinger, B. J. Thomas, W. C. Handy, S. S. Kresge, J. B. Priestly, E. G. Marshall, H. G. Wells. Any others?

Note it claimed in print that the temperature of the left side of our bodies is slightly higher than the temperature of the right side of our bodies while we sleep. Interesting, if true.

YOU KNOW?

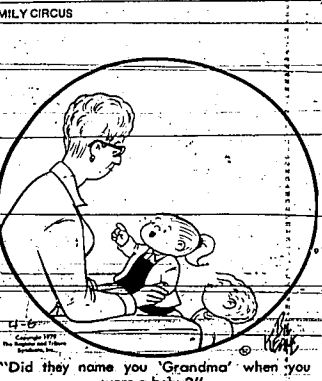

The speech experts are none too fond of opening and ending remarks with the words "you know." That's pretty common, too. A Cincinnati broadcaster wanted to shake the habit. So he dubbed the word "realize" for "know" every time he could remember to do so. Pretty soon, he'd whipped the thing.

Burley father, son die in potato truck accident

BUHL — A 25-year-old man and a 4-year-old boy, both of Burley, were killed late Friday afternoon when a loaded potato truck was involved in a diving off its brakes on the Magic Water Road north of Buhl, went out of control and crashed down an embankment into a ditch.

Herman S. Saldana and Herman Saldana Jr., apparently his son, were pronounced dead at the scene of the accident from head injuries, Twin Falls County Coroner Cloyce Edwards said. Edwards said it appeared the truck was descending into the Snake River Canyon on the Magic Water Road toward Highway 30 about 1 mile north of the Banbury Grade and lost its brakes due to mechanical failure.

He said the truck apparently barreled across Highway 30, and down a 20-foot embankment and came to rest in a six-foot ditch.

Munn said it appeared the victims were killed when the impact of the loaded truck coming to an abrupt halt in the ditch caused a "buckling effect" and "completely demolished and smashed the cab."

He said the truck was a 10-wheeler. Munn said Twin Falls County Sheriff's officers, Idaho State Police and Buhl City Police responded to the accident.

HUGH U. PHILLIPS

QUESTION

My wife and I are retired. Thanks to Medicare we have eliminated one major concern in our lives, but we still have to plan for that one which involves your services. What are your suggestions?

ANSWER...

Perhaps without realizing it you are better prepared than you think. Your bank account, real estate, automobile and securities are probably in joint tenancy, and contingently covered by a will. Any insurance in either of your names is payable to a named beneficiary. You may be covered by a Social Security annuity, Civil Service Pension, or other retirement plans, and if you are, certain benefits in these plans will accrue to your survivors.

Talking things over with us in advance of need neither brings death closer nor delays it, but it most certainly does make everything easier for those left behind. There is no obligation in discussing the aspects of a funeral service with us. We have been doing this for 55 years! Our suggestion is quite simple... we can talk with you without being commercial or morbid.

Prosecutor drops Starr rape case

TWIN FALLS — The state will not ask for a second trial of Rodney Starr of Twin Falls on charges of rape, chief Twin Falls County deputy prosecutor Michael Walz said Thursday.

Starr's first trial ended Monday with seven out of 12 jurors voting for acquittal.

Walz said he decided not to ask for a second trial after weighing the chances for obtaining a conviction against the expense of a second trial, which he said would probably have to be held outside of Twin Falls County, requiring expensive transportation of attorneys and witnesses.

Walz said the feelings of Roberta Starr, the rape victim and Starr's former wife, were a factor in his decision. He said she indicated she did not want to undergo the ordeal of a second trial.

Walz said, however, he will argue against a motion for acquittal filed this week by Rodney Starr's attorneys. Walz said agreeing with such a motion would imply that the prosecutor's office had decided there is not sufficient evidence to retry the case.

Foyt knocks ruling body

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (UPI) — Championship Auto Racing Team — A. J. Foyt jumped back into the auto race "meat Friday" by criticizing a splinter governing body on the eve of qualifying for Sunday's 200 race for Indy-type championship cars.

Foyt, the winningest driver in auto race history, is entered in the United States Auto Club event. But many of the top drivers affiliated with the rival

Kenner takes one-stroke lead

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Slender Jack Kenner overcame winds gusting to near 50 mph to shoot a 71 Friday and take a one-stroke lead midway through the Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

Kenner, with a two-day total of 5-under-par 138, was in a five-way tie for the lead at the start of the round. He had three birdies and two bogeys to finish one stroke ahead of Barney Thompson, whose best finish this year has been a tie for 65th in the Tournament Players Championship.

"I'm very happy to survive with a 71," said Kenner, a three-year pro whose best finish was a tie for second in last year's GGO. "I started out pretty solid. The greens dried out extremely fast from the sun and wind. I didn't feel like I putted well at all today."

Kenner said he was challenged by the windy conditions. Blowing 25 to 35 mph and gusting to 46 mph, the wind took its toll on the field of 150 golfers. Thompson, who had a 71 to go with an opening round 63, played Friday morning under less windy conditions.

Gary Player and Tom Purtzer were two strokes off the pace with 71s Friday and 141 totals.

Tim Sike, Bobby Walzer, and Jim Thorpe, who started play tied for the lead with Kenner and Keith Fergus, had 75s Friday to lead a group at 1-under-143. Fergus slipped to a 79 for a 36-hole total of 3-over-par.

Kenner finished third in the Tournament Players Championship over the windy Sawgrass course last month.

"I'm beginning to feel very confident about wind conditions," he said, adding that the wind affects his putting more than his longer shots.

"It's hard to make a constant, steady stroke when the wind is gusting," said Kenner.

His first birdie came on the seventh hole when he chipped in a 50-foot shot and his other birdies came on putts of 26-feet at the 18th hole and 12-feet at the 17th hole. He suffered his first bogey of the tournament when he three-putted from 30 feet on the par-3 12th hole.

He closed out his round with a bogey on the 18th hole when he missed a six-foot putt.

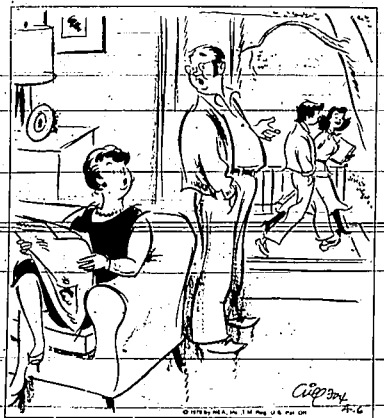

"We're halfway through," Renner said. "Certainly, it's a nice place to be (leading). I'm having fun."

Thompson, who has won only $836 this year in seven tournaments, had four birdies and three bogeys Friday and said he was satisfied in view of the "tricky wind."

Purtzer, whose only victory came in the 1977 Los Angeles Open, had an erratic round with five birdies and four bogeys.

Advantages of using ARCH day later and a trick short. South won the heart lead in dummy, so that if East held exactly one heart, he would be ruffing the heart and not a heart honor.

At trick two, South led dummy's queen of spades; but he went up with his ace. South wanted to play two rounds of trumps, not just one. So South led the second spade and led the jack of hearts. East could use his last trump to ruff a heart, loser, not a heart winner, and the ace of diamonds became the third and last trick for the defense.

Ask the Experts

You hold:
 ♠ K 2
 ♥ 4 5 6
 ♦ A 9 3
 ♣ A 9 3

The dealer bids four spades opening. You pass. The calling reader asks what opening he recommended. We would lead the queen of diamonds. We guarantee it will be a winner. Pre-emptia make leading problems very difficult. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
