

Idaho loses federal health planning grants

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho was officially notified of the loss of federal grants because of failure of the Legislature to pass certificate of need legislation, Gov. John V. Evans said Friday.

Evans said Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano notified him of the cancellation of federal grants because the legislation was not adopted.

The immediate effect is the loss of $400,000 which would have financed the State Health Planning and Development Agency for the period beginning July 1, Evans said.

The governor said without an agency in operation, Idaho would be ineligible for federal funds for public health services, community mental health and alcoholic treatment programs.

The 1979 legislature turned down the governor's request to enact legislation requiring health care institutions to obtain certificates of need before expanding their facilities. The purpose of the legislation was to prevent unneeded construction and duplication which adds to the cost of health care.

Evans said he is exploring possible alternatives and will seek to meet with Califano during a trip to Washington, D.C., early in May.

The chief executive said Califano put Idaho's potential future loss at $6.2 million, contrasted with regional HEW officials' earlier estimates of $12 million. Evans said he is attempting to have the discrepancy clarified.

Loss of those funds would have a severe impact on district health departments throughout the state, the governor said.

"These district health departments would be greatly hampered in the delivery of local public health services because they already face cutbacks to accommodate the implementation of the percent initiative," Evans said.

"This would cripple our state immunization program at a time when Idaho is just beginning to raise immunization levels to a point where we can avoid major outbreaks of communicable diseases such as the German measles outbreak Idaho is presently experiencing."

Evans said he would seek assistance from the National Governors' Association as well as ask Idaho's congressional delegation to push legislation that would give Califano authority to "provide assistance for states in Idaho's position."

Ike OK'd nuclear test confusion

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Recently declassified records show that President Dwight D. Eisenhower told the Atomic Energy Commission to "confuse" the public about the size of a 1963 atom bomb test he authorized shortly after another blast drenched St. George, Utah, with unsafe levels of radiation.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., released the AEC records at a Salt Lake City hearing on the health effects of fallout from atmospheric nuclear testing in the Nevada desert between 1951 and 1962.

The documents, including the official diary of AEC Chairman Gordon Dean, indicated that members of the commission were concerned about going ahead with the 11th in a series of atomic bomb tests known as Upshot-Knothole.

Previous blasts in the series had sent large amounts of fallout over Utah and the 10th shot on May 19 dumped six reentgens of radioactivity on St. George, 125 miles east of the Nevada test site, forcing the AEC to warn residents to stay indoors. The basic AEC safety guide used during those years was maximum exposure to 3.9 reentgens in any consecutive 13 week period.

The commissioners debated moving the final experiment to the South Pacific, according to the documents, but decided that test was excessive and sought presidential approval for another test in Nevada.

Eisenhower gave his permission on May 27 and, according to Dean's diary, told the AEC to play down the size of the blast.

"Dean called Salisbury and stated that in a meeting this morning the president expressed some concern, not too serious, but made the suggestion that we leave 'thermonuclear' out of press releases and speeches," the diary said. "Also 'fusion' and 'hydrogen'."

"The President says 'keep them confused as to 'fission' and 'fusion'."

Fusion weapons, or hydrogen bombs, are much more powerful than fission, or atomic bombs, like those dropped on Japan.

The minutes of a May 21 meeting said "although the fallout levels reached as high as six reentgens in St. George the day of the May 19 blast, 'townspeople were advised to remain indoors from 9 a.m. until noon on that day, and as a result of these precautionary measures, it was highly probably that no one exceeded the maximum permissible thirteen-week dose of 3.9 R."

But St. George residents testified at the hearing that the only warning they got was a radio announcement.

Several other documents released by Kennedy indicated that numerous populated areas in southern Nevada and Utah received excessive doses of radiation from the 1963 test series and that some horses and cattle were killed.

They also indicated that the Nevada test site was originally conceived as a location for low-yield atomic weapons and that government scientists had concerns about the safety of large blasts, particularly what would happen if weather conditions changed rapidly.

Speed, helmet law repeal taking toll

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Failure to heed the 55-mph speed limit and by half the states of laws requiring motorcyclists to wear helmets are responsible for an "epidemic" of traffic deaths, federal officials said Friday.

"People are dying on the nation's highways in epidemic proportions," said Joan Claybrook, administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. "The number of fatalities has shown alarming increases over the last 12 consecutive months."

"The toll in 1978 reached 50,000 for the first time in five years and we already have recorded an increase of more than 10 percent in the first five months of 1979," she said.

She blamed failure to observe the speed limit for the heavy increase, along with the repeal of motorcycle safety laws in 26 states.

"We think it's mainly speed," she said. The number of traffic citations has almost tripled in the last three years, she said, but people seem to be "changing a mode of behavior."

The sharpest rise in deaths was in the western third of the nation, including Texas and Oklahoma, where fatalities were up 28 percent during 1976-1978. Officials said it appeared more people were ignoring the speed limit in those states.

By comparison in New England — where it appeared drivers obeyed the speed limit more — there was no increase.

She said an estimated 63 percent of the total increase in death nationally during the three year period was in the West and Southwest, although travel there increased only 35 percent during that time.

But she noted vans, light trucks and motorcycles — which showed the largest increase in fatalities — are used more in the West.

Nuclear 'search' proceeds

JACKASS FLATS, Nev. (UPI) — Military and civilian teams dressed in white suits and swanly black rubber breathing apparatus scoured the scattered wreckage of a downed cargo jet for a missing nuclear warhead Friday in a crucial phase of the nation's biggest simulated nuclear accident exercise.

The "crash" occurred Wednesday at Jackass Flats, part of the 1,400-square-mile Nevada Test Site 100 miles north of Las Vegas, Nev.

The crash scene was cordoned off by "yellow" ropes which marked the perimeter of radiation caused by the simulated crash of a C-141 cargo plane en route from the West Coast to the East Coast.

Five hundred persons representing all branches of the U.S. military as well as civilian-staffed agencies such as the Department of Energy converged on the exercise site.

The weather was clear and temperatures were in the mid-70s.

Laetrile use ban sought in court

NEWBOSW NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The federal government is asking the Supreme Court to rule that terminally ill cancer patients lack the right to use the controversial drug laetrile.

The government says that if the court upholds the drug's use, it will seriously erode the Food and Drug Administration's ability to "protect the public from unsafe and ineffective drugs."

Attorneys for cancer patients contend that the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act doesn't apply to the terminally ill, and that the FDA's attempt to ban the chemical is an unconstitutional invasion of the patients' privacy.

In 1971, a U.S. district court judge in Oklahoma City permitted cancer patients who had been certified as terminally ill to use the drug under a doctor's supervision.

Beverly Newkirk, executive director of the Committee for Freedom in Cancer Therapy in Los Angeles, Calif., says about 80,000 people are using Laetrile now in the United States.

Two of the original plaintiffs in the Oklahoma City suit have died. But a third, Glen Rutherford of Conway Springs, Kan., is now in "very good health," according to Ms. Newkirk.

Attorneys arguing for laetrile charge that a government study found a death rate of more than 90 percent within five years for disseminated (inoperable) cancer, "inexplicably reflecting the inadequacy and inefficiency of conventional treatment."

They say that in attempting to ban laetrile, the FDA in effect is saying,

"Cancer patients should willingly and cheerfully die rather than have laetrile."

The government maintains the drug is worthless and that if the Supreme Court upholds the lower court decisions it will prevent the FDA from restricting use of ANY drug by the terminally ill.

In a friend of the court brief supporting the government's position, the American Cancer Society charges: "If the court of appeals decision is permitted to stand, it will open the floodgates and permit the public, particularly those with life-threatening illnesses who are choice prey, to be inundated by worthless and therefore unsafe and dangerous drugs."

In addition to being useless against cancer, the government contends, Laetrile is toxic if taken orally and hasn't been adequately tested.

The National Health Federation, an 80,000-member consumer group, is siding with the laetrile users and says the FDA has "overlooked" studies showing beneficial effects of the drug.

The district court stopped the FDA's ban on the drug on the grounds that the Food and Drug Act's requirement that only safe and effective drugs be marketed couldn't be applied in the case of terminally ill patients, that the ban was an unconstitutional invasion of the patients' privacy, and that since the drug was in use before amendments to the Food and Drug Act in 1962 its use was covered by a "grandfather" clause and is legal.

The court of appeals said simply that the food and drug act couldn't apply to the terminally ill in this instance.

"What can 'generally recognized as safe' and 'effective' mean," it appeals court said, "to persons who are so fatally stricken with a disease for which there is no known cure?"

Attorneys arguing for laetrile use contend that if the Supreme Court rules in favor of the government, there would be a black market in the drug without the benefit of FDA scrutiny and "an exodus of substantial numbers of cancer victims to Mexico and other countries to receive treatment."

The National Cancer Institute has agreed to undertake "testing of laetrile's effectiveness in terminally ill cancer patients, although the experiments slated to begin in January have been delayed by the FDA.

SALT talks drag

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A State Department spokesman said Friday that "further meetings" will be necessary between U.S. and Soviet negotiators before there will be full agreement on a SALT II accord.

"Progress has been made in each meeting but I believe there will be need for further meetings after today," State Department spokesman Holding Carter said shortly before Soviet Ambassador Anatoli Dobrynin arrived for more SALT talks with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

They conferred for 45 minutes and issued no statements.

Carter said he expected the next Vance-Dobrynin meeting would take place early next week.

The basic text of the complex Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty is reported to have been completed, although exact language must be drafted on key articles covering limits on new types of missiles and Russia's practice of encoding missile test information.

Necessary part of the negotiations has quickened, with Dobrynin consulting Vance twice within 24 hours, including Friday's afternoon session.

The two men — whose meetings are the chief channel of communication on SALT — have met 19 times so far in 1979.

A U.S. spokesman said Vance and Dobrynin agreed to make no public comments after Friday's session, and reporters were barred from the State Department garage through which Dobrynin enters and leaves the building.

State Department officials said Dobrynin also raised Soviet concern about a Pentagon announcement that the Strategic Air Command will be holding a world-wide readiness exercise during the course of the next year.

Dobrynin, according to the officials, repeated Soviet press allegations that the Pentagon timed its announcement to undermine the SALT negotiations.

U.S. officials said they do not expect any final approval of a SALT II treaty or SALT summit until President Carter returns Sunday from his vacation in Georgia.

It would be customary for further delay in an announcement of such magnitude until key members of Congress are informed privately.

State Department officials said Vance and Dobrynin have not formally discussed the timing and location of a prospective SALT summit.

Good morning!

First all-female crew pilots regular airline flight

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (UPI) — A former school-teacher and one-time pre-medical student have become the first all-female flight crew to pilot a scheduled U.S. commercial jet aircraft.

back Thursday, earning a round of applause from the 48 passengers.

reporters' questions about the history-making trip. Ms. Wilson, a five-year veteran of the airline, said Friday in a telephone interview from Chicago.

flight routine, and then answer all the reporters' questions."

However, the passengers seemed to enjoy the unusual nature of the flight, said Ms. Wiley, who spent 3 1/2 years as a second grade teacher after graduating from college with an education degree.

Jet crash blame laid on crew

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Poor performance by the crew of a Pacific Southwest Airlines jetliner was cited Friday as the primary cause of the nation's worst airlines crash.

The National Transportation Safety Board specifically faulted the crew for its failure to keep in sight the Cessna aircraft it collided with over San Diego Sept. 25 and for failure to advise the air-traffic controller it could not see the other plane.

The authority of air traffic controllers to authorize a pilot to use "visual flight rules" is, to "see and avoid" other planes — was cited as a contributing factor to the crash.

The board agonized over the report for 10 hours spread over two days before compromising by listing three items as being factors, but not causes, in the crash.

The authority of the controller to restrict the jetliner to 4,000 feet over Montgomery Field, a facility for smaller planes, was cited.

Problems caused by two separate air traffic facilities controlling traffic in close proximity.

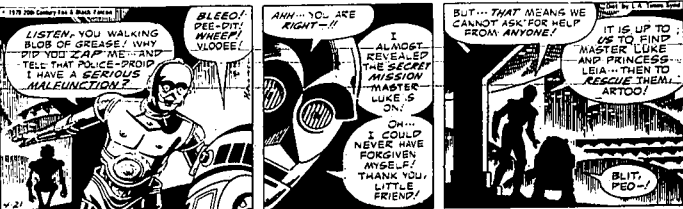

The crash was the worst in U.S. aviation history in terms of fatalities.

The right wing of the jetliner struck the Cessna and burst into flame as both planes plummeted to the ground, destroying or setting afire 16 houses. Seven persons on the ground died along with all aboard the two planes.

The board determined the "probable cause" of the accident was "failure of the flight crew of Flight 182 to comply with the provisions to maintain visual separation clearance, including the requirement to inform the controller when they no longer had the (Cessna) aircraft in sight."

The 75-page report was adopted on a 3-1 vote, with Chairman James King, and members Elwood Driver and Phillip McGinnis voting in favor and Francis McGinnis dissenting.

Man fights for way into City Hall

BECKLEY, W.Va. (UPI) — Mike Megmose Jr. is fighting City Hall so he can get into City Hall.

Megmose, 50, is confined to a wheelchair but every entrance to the Raleigh County Court House has steps.

He says the building should have at least one ramp for handicapped people to use and he asked county officials to build one.

County Administrator Paul Shives said the issue has been discussed a number of times but nothing has been done.

"We definitely know there is a problem," Shives said. But he said paying to remodel the courthouse to accommodate the handicapped "would not be an easy expense to bear."

Megmose says the county should be able to come up with the money.

"If they can spend the money to sandblast the courthouse, why not spend money to fix it for the handicapped? It looks nice, but I can't get inside it."

Megmose said he wanted to attend a recent meeting on a zoning matter but didn't go. "I can't get in."

He said one way to get into the courthouse, which houses the county jail, would be to get arrested for driving while intoxicated. That way, he said, the police would carry him in.

Boat-borne officer checks flooded Jackson, Miss., stadium

Floods spread over midlands

Emergency crews piled sandbags on flood-strained levees from North Dakota and Minnesota to Texas and Mississippi Friday.

Thousands fled their homes for high ground as swelling rivers made lakes of towns.

In Texas, swirling waters lashed out snakes and even an alligator put into harbor to seek shelter.

The rampaging Pearl River forced new evacuations in Mississippi and northern rivers overflowed towns in portions of North Dakota and Minnesota.

Rain dimmed hopes of residents in flood-swamped southeastern Texas when more than a foot of rain has fallen in two days. Water surged waist-deep through streets in Houston and downtown Beaumont.

Thousands of cars were stalled. Boats were used to rescue stranded motorists and pick up people stuck in flood-surrounded homes, offices and a movie theater.

The rising waters also drove an alligator into the Houston Yacht Club harbor where it swam around for a few hours then departed without incident. Venomous snakes swam to high ground around Conroe and took refuge in homes.

"I killed six snakes today," said James H. Walker. "They'll just swim up to anybody."

About 1,000 people were forced from their homes in Conroe.

"We're having a wonderful time other than the fact we might not have nothing when we get back home," said A.J. Bustamante, who moved his wife and daughter into a shelter.

One drowning — in Austin — was blamed on the recent round of Texas floods.

In Mississippi, the rapidly rising Pearl River cut off a main road leading into the city of Columbia and forced 1,500 families from their homes. The Pearl and other rivers and streams swollen by last week's heavy rains have driven 25,000 persons from their homes in Mississippi, 17,000 of them in the capital city of Jackson.

The worst was over in Jackson but the worst was yet to come for communities like Columbia, which lie downstream.

Water crept into already evacuated homes in the Popeltown area. A number of vehicles stalled in floodwaters as residents from Popeltown and Morgantown worked frantically to move belongings. Homeowners and businessmen piled sandbags around houses and stores at Columbia and Monticello.

The Red River of the North flooded along a stretch of nearly 200 miles between northwestern Minnesota and North Dakota. Volunteers sandbagged dikes and buildings in many communities and some families evacuated their homes.

In North Dakota, flooding on the Souris River in the midwest threatened but leading dikes in the West Fargo area threatened homes in parts of the city of 6,000. West Fargo Mayor Clayton Loden said a 150-foot span of dike was weakening south of town.

"If that gives way," he said, "the whole east end of town is going to get a whole lot of water."

North Dakota Gov. Arthur Link toured the flood area and said he would request the Red River Valley be declared a disaster area. Minnesota Gov. Al Quie also flew to Fargo-Moorhead, East Grand Forks and Crookston to view the flooding.

"Unfortunately, Link said, "we probably haven't seen the worst."

Grand jury probes holdback reports

DETROIT (UPI) — A federal grand jury is looking into whether a manufacturer of a toxic fire retardant withheld information from investigators in Michigan's PBB crisis, it was disclosed Friday.

Federal sources said the review could lead to felony charges against Velstock Chemical Co., which last year pleaded no contest to four misdemeanor counts in the PBB case.

The company said it was informed of the investigation "a couple of months" ago and was cooperating with authorities, although it is disputing government subpoenas for certain documents.

Word of the investigation followed release of an updated study showing 84 percent of a cross-section of Michigan residents have up to 2 parts per billion of PBB — or polychlorinated biphenyls — in their bloodstreams.

Marvin headline was a lemon

No one has complained yet, but the Times-News thinks a poor headline was written on the page one story concerning the settlement of the Lee Marvin-Michelle Marvin "paternity suit."

The headline read: Marvin case ends; girl gets $104,000 for rehabilitation.

Michelle Marvin cannot accurately be called a "girl." She is 46 years old and the term "girl" has a demeaning air, our error.

Other judgments on the part of the T-N last week were detected by readers.

One complained that the T-N gave too little coverage of women's track at CSI.

Particularly, the reader complained of the picture page that ran in the April 15 paper that focused on the men's track team that finished second while the first place women's CSI team received a scant few paragraphs and a single picture.

The only defense of this coverage would be that the pictures on the page were deemed best photographically and weren't rated anatomically.

In other words, the best pictures ran and it just so happened they were mostly of the men athletes.

Another reader complained of the use of the word "strike" as a synonym for the word "shaka."

A story in an incident at Lincoln County High School in Shoshone said a teacher struck a student while the reader said the teacher shook the student.

The distinction can be made. Still, the incident involved what the school board considered abuse of a student and some reports were that the student was indeed struck not shaken.

A final Be Fair coupon for the week complained about arbitrary cutting of stories in the Times-News.

This is an annoyance and one of the editors are trying to correct by educating staff members to carefully edit stories for length before sending them to the composing room.

Those were the highlights.

Keep the coupons coming.

Potato diversion limited success

The first federal diversion of western potatoes in many years appears to have been a limited success.

Diversion had to deal with the problem of the huge amount of spuds produced in Idaho — a record crop of 97 million bushels in Idaho that pushed up the national crop to a record high of 316 million bushels.

The amount of potatoes dumped, fed to livestock or depleted by "shrinkage" while in storage set a record.

In response to the record crop and the disastrously low prices for farmers of $17 million federal program. It paid $1.75 to $2 to divert their potatoes to other uses. In Idaho, about 5 million bushels were diverted, equal to 10 percent of the state's crop and bringing $10 million into the state.

It is hard to argue with the stand that this program's goal was to bring the season's price close to last year's price.

At the end of that goal, and prices stand at about $1.50. But the diversion appears to have kept prices from falling below its own base price of $1.75 to $2.

The diversion is over but all the results are not in.

As in the latest report, There are 7 percent more Idaho potatoes waiting to be processed or sold than at this time last year.

Before tagging the diversion a success or failure, observers are waiting for action from potato processors.

The processors found themselves with excess potatoes from contract farmers because of high yields and have purchased far fewer — 12 percent less — potatoes on the open market.

If processors stop holding back and pick up buying, the price could be boosted.

This growing season, Potato Growers of Idaho predicts the plantings could produce a crop only 4 percent smaller than the 1978 record crop.

This seems to indicate little drop in dissatisfaction among potato farmers, and the diversion may have kept their attitude from falling.

Last year Idaho had ideal weather for producing a bumper potato crop. Chances are those perfect conditions of a long growing season, plenty of sunlight and generally below normal temperatures, will not be repeated.

Therefore, potato production may return to normal.

In the long run, it remains to be seen whether the diversion helped maintain a sagging commodity over one difficult year or whether it artificially supported a crop that the market cannot support.

The virtue of ambivalence

BOSTON — I've always been uneasy with people who think ambivalence is a weakness and ambivalence is a flaw. So, I was unmoved by the response to my recent column questioning the role of sperm donors in artificial insemination.

I wondered aloud about the thoughtfulness of single women who set out deliberately to conceive a fatherless child. The letters I received worried about my wondering.

They did not necessarily disagree with what I wrote, but some felt strongly that I shouldn't have written it.

"You're feeding into the arguments of all those who would deny women the right to control their bodies," wrote one concerned woman from Minnesota. Another prominent member of the Women's Health Movement suggested that I was being inconsistent in even questioning the role of single mothers. A third wrote from Cincinnati to say, "The last thing we need at this moment is anyone else questioning a woman's right to make her own decisions about reproduction."

I recognize that a woman can deliberately conceive a child in such a way that fatherhood is reduced to a set of genes. I cannot applaud it. It seemed to me then, and seems to me now, that there is something self-indulgent about a unilateral decision to "have" a baby, as if it were a Creative Plaything.

Moreover, I think it's important to raise the conflicts that many of us feel, even if that means breaking ranks with someone else's definition of consistency.

If this is true about artificial insemination, it's also true in thinking about abortion. The abortion issue was obviously in the back of the minds of my correspondents. The slightest tremor, the slightest waver, in some absolute defense of women's rights, "makes us all vulnerable to the arguments of the anti-abortionists," wrote one man. "We have to fight fire with fire, absolutes with absolutes, dogma with dogma." He ended the letter from Illinois with the admonition: "Keep your quins to yourself."

Frankly, I don't like cat and dogma fights. It seems to me that the pro-choice advocates have too often allowed the public debate about this issue to be cast by the anti-abortionists. If other anti-choice pro's feel they must support them all. If the anti's say that every abortion is immoral, many pro's feel they must defend them all as, at least, amoral.

As long as the anti's remain in irresistible force, the pro's feel they must be an immovable object, or they will lose.

This is very understandable. But by publicly suppressing ambivalence, some pro-choice people can undermine their real strength and their numbers. After all, most of us have conflicts about this question. The person who aborts every abortion, except one for a raped 12 year old, is ambivalent. The person who supports abortion for every reason, except to "choose" the sex of the baby, is also ambivalent.

So if those pro-choice people present abortion as an easy option, when most of us know it is not, they will lose credibility. If others try to overlook moral dilemmas, when most of us experience them, they may lose support.

Moreover, as a crucial private matter, we have to hang onto the right to make judgments. Those of us who argue the importance of safe legal procedures do not give up the right to disapprove of people who casually choose abortion for "birth control" or for sex selection reasons.

There is, simply, a wide range of attitudes between the behavior we applaud and the behavior we would imprison. We can support the choice of abortion without shouting "hurrah" for each and every decision. We don't want to outlaw every act we have qualms about, but we don't have to approve of everything we would legally defend.

'We're sitting on a time bomb:' Peru businessman

LIMA, Peru (AP) — "We're sitting on a time bomb," a leading businessman once the best-known figures in Peru's public life before the military dictatorship took over 11 years ago, said in a speech at the launch of an overhauled club in the lounge of his London-style club in downtown Lima.

White-gloved servants scurry to and fro, taking drink orders from the well-dressed, well-heeled members in surroundings that would have made King Edward VII feel at home.

"The country's external financial picture has greatly improved," the businessman observes, "but the social situation is catastrophic."

It is easy to understand his concern. In the traffic-jammed streets outside, the curbs are lined with peddlers — some of them Indian women from the hills, accompanied by their undernourished children — selling everything from souvenirs to silver bracelets, from tablets to toys, from minerals to medicinal herbs.

They form but a tiny part of Peru's vast army of unemployed and what are euphemistically called the "underemployed," who together account for some 45 percent of the country's entire labor force. Reduced to a marginal existence that the narrowing 70 percent inflation only makes more miserable, thousands of jobless agricultural laborers continue to pour into the adobe slums, grotesquely misnamed "young towns," that all but surround this once-regal capital city of more than four million people.

"Social services," added the businessman, "have steadily deteriorated for the poor; and all of us in Lima — both rich and poor — are likely to run out of water and power in a few years." The state, he added, is simply unable to cope with managing its 175 state-owned enterprises (three times as many as when the army first came to power in 1968); basic agricultural output has declined in spite of, or because of, the land reform; and at least a third of Peru's people, the Indians, who live in the mountains and the jungles, have never been integrated into the rest of the population and live almost entirely outside the economy.

Drawing a thoughtful puff on his cigar, this critic of the generals' regime rises to go, liveried attendants nodding to him as he slowly descends the club's grand staircase. "Social peace in Peru," he concludes, "is held together by a thread."

Under the severely restrictive economic policies imposed last year at the behest of the International Monetary Fund as the price of restructuring its huge foreign debt when Peru was literally on the verge of bankruptcy, the "new team" of financial professionals has cut the budget and sharply reduced subsidies of even the most basic foods and essential transportation. The result has been price increases of 75 percent or more (almost uncontrolled) with no comparable rise in wages (controlled), which start at $3 a month.

"Prices take the elevator," a leading politician wryly comments, "but wages take the stairs."

Peru looks like a country attempting to find its way back to democracy without knowing quite how to do it.

Hypocrisy pervades talk of black market economy

By ANTHONY SAMPOSON
N.Y. Times Service

LONDON — What is one to think about the economic and moral effects of the "black economy?"

One-by-one the European nations have been discovering, with varying degrees of delay, numbers of people who are paid in cash, avoiding all taxes, and the underground network of the travail au noir, the schvarts arbit, or moonlighting.

And now the British, who have always regarded themselves as moral law-abiding have officially woken up to the fact, the other day Sir William Pile, the British chief tax collector, told the House of Commons that tax evasion through cash payments could amount to as much as seven and a half percent of the entire economy.

Of course, the official attitude is one of total disapproval.

Tax evaders debate the national morality, and put an asterisk on the rest of the community, who have to finance the social services on which everyone depends. Obviously, if everyone followed this road, the whole basis of welfare would collapse.

But in the general indignation there is a good deal of hypocrisy, especially in Britain.

In the professional classes tend to regard working-class tax-dodging as immoral, while their own evasions are merely ingenious.

A television figure described to me how he had interviewed a distinguished Tory Peer who was inveighing against the tax-dodging workers. When the producer asked him how he would like to be paid for the interview, he replied: "Why not just a case of claret?"

But more seriously, we are reluctant to face the fact that this "black economy" is providing the country with the kind of dynamic, hard-working, entrepreneurial energy that is so desperately needed — and anyone in Britain who has tried to get a plumber or electrician through the normal channels of a nationalized industry knows what that means.

But once the magic four-letter word cash is mentioned, the whole atmosphere suddenly changes.

You are whisked back into the world of Adam Smith's "invisible hand," in which supply and demand are swiftly matched. Efficient and willing men appear, who actually seem to enjoy working hard; they have friends who can do other jobs, all in return for crisp pound notes. Fair from appearing as shuffling bureaucrats, they seem to embody the lost spirit of proud British workmanship.

In the face of this kind of evidence, even Labor's economic experts cannot be so confident that high tax rates do not reduce incentive.

Theories about taxation, as one senior economist admitted to me, look very different when you actually want to get something done in your own house.

Not is this merely the experience of bourgeois house owners.

Members of Parliament for depressed areas are often baffled to observe that their constituents are neither as miserable nor as idle as the unemployment statistics suggest; and "chain stores" have been surprised by the high turnover in districts that show no average earnings.

Clearly a lot of people who draw the dole are working also for cash — or merely working for each other. If I paint my neighbor's house, and he builds my garden wall, in this wicked tax-dodging or communal enterprise?

As unemployment rises, while essential services remain unperformed, it is even possible to imagine the British government coming round to a program of providing tax benefits to encourage those self-employed people and poor businessmen who can do crucial jobs. But by that time, the Government will not need to; for those people will already have devised their own incentive systems.

Of course, the problem of paying for the welfare state is still critical; but the majority of the population will remain, whether they like it or not, on the payroll of large organizations where they cannot evade taxes. It may be monstrously unfair that they should have to pay for the hospitals that tax dodgers then make use of.

On the other hand (dare I say it?), many of those employees are so underemployed, so secure in their jobs and so lacking in initiative that it may not be wholly unreasonable that they should pay more regular taxes to help finance their own security.

Of course the indignation of the government must continue, and the more flagrant tax evaders will be rounded up — including, one hopes, dentists and surgeons as well as plumbers and carpenters.

But it looks as if the "black economy" has come to stay, whether in Britain or West Germany or even in the Soviet Union — if only because the nation couldn't survive without the incentives it offers.

And while we may be shocked to discover how un-law-abiding we have become, we may also be relieved to discover that we are also rather more hard-working than we thought we were. And we might just even hear Adam Smith chuckling in his grave.

What's what

If you eliminated all of the Latin derivatives from the English dictionary, there wouldn't be much left

"Avoid Latin derivatives; use brief, terse, Anglo-Saxon monosyllables..." So wrote that language expert, Dr. Marlo Fel, humorously. He was addressing those purists who want to strip the Latin out of English and replace it with Anglo-Saxon root words. The sentence, please note, has only one non-Latin word in it—the hyphenated "Anglo-Saxon."

The apple has long been accepted in the Western World as the forbidden fruit in the Garden of Eden. Among eastern peoples, though, that distinction is given to the pomegranate. Scientists say it was probably some sort of sprout, actually.

No young lady in search of job security should overlook the fact that there aren't any healthy skilled welders who are out of work. Or so an employment counselor reports.

COINS

Was in the year A. D. 10 that a Chinese emperor called in all the currency of the realm and issued new coins. They were designed in denominations that translate as follows: 1. Wee. 2. Small. 3. Young. 4. Next. 5. Almost. 6. Middle. 7. Mature. 8. Appropriate. 9. Second-best. and 10. Largest.

Q: "How many new words does the average person learn every year?"

A: About 26, if nothing is done on purpose to boost the number.

Although Mother's Day was first officially recognized by a joint congressional resolution in 1914, Father's Day didn't get such a nod until 1956. And that gives you some idea of the relative importance of mothers and fathers.

Q: "Which is bigger, a newborn blue whale or a full grown elephant?"

A: The whale. By a whole lot.

TOUGH LIFE

Pollsters asked an equal number of men and women this query: "Which have the more difficult life, men or women?" The men were divided fifty-fifty on the matter. But three times as many women as men thought women had the harder row to hoe.

Don't you think rain gutters on houses ought to be mounted on hinges so they could be tipped down and hosed out every so often? I do.

'The Witness' gets encore performance

TWIN FALLS — "The Witness," a musical production by the Christian Center, will be presented again Sunday evening at 7 p.m. in the center's building on Morrison Street. The production features a dramatic and musical story of the life of Christ, from birth to resurrection. Tracy Hansen, as Peter, narrates the show. About 25 members of the Christian Center choir participate in the production which covers an hour and 15 minutes. Director is Jo Gerrish. Jean Hovey, member of the cast, said a capacity crowd of some 700 attended the presentation Easter Sunday. Many asked that it be repeated so they could see it again and also to bring friends or relatives who missed the first program. She said many persons called to express their enjoyment of the show and all described it as the most moving program they had ever seen. Mrs. Hovey said Sheldon Klugel, pastor of the Christian Center, said in his 32 years as minister it is the best thing he has ever seen. There is no charge and the public is invited to attend.

Tyler Street Baptists host missions conference

TWIN FALLS — The Tyler Street Baptist Church will hold a four-day Missions Conference April 26-29. Guest speakers will be Dick Lindemann, Northwest Representative of the Conservative Baptist Foreign Missionary Society; John and Nancy McKeith, missionaries to Panama under Central American Missions; and Dale Huffaker, an eight-year veteran missionary to Pakistan. Lindemann will present a three-hour seminar entitled "Biblical Missions in the Local Church" at 7 p.m. The church will host a pot-luck dinner for the guests Friday at 6:30 p.m. A slide show on missionary work will be presented and a faith-promise challenge will also be given. Special sessions will be held Friday morning for women, Saturday morning for men, and Saturday afternoon for the youth. The conference will conclude Sunday with messages during the Sunday School hour and both morning and evening services. The public is invited to attend these services. Nursery care is provided.

Gospel Business Men's meeting set

TWIN FALLS — The April monthly meeting of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International will be addressed by Don Johnson, a builder of homes in Magic Valley, according to Wayne Barney, president of the local business men's chapter. Don and his wife, Virginia, dedicated ten years of their life together on an Indian reservation in Arizona as missionaries to the Navaho Indian Nation. Don's testimony is one of heartbreak, healing, blessings, and the rewards of answering God's call. The meeting will be held at the Golden Griddle Saturday, April 21, at 7 p.m. Anyone interested is welcome to attend.

Missionaries to Iran open Valley series

HAZELTON — Valley Presbyterian Church, Eden-Hazelton, will host a visit April 22 by two United Presbyterian Church missionaries to Iran, the Rev. Kenneth J. Thomas, Ph.D., and the Rev. Margaret O. Thomas. They will address the adult Bible Study Class at 9:45 a.m. At the 11 a.m. Worship, Dr. Thomas will preach on the topic, "World Waiting For What We Have Seen." Immediately following worship, there will be a pot-luck dinner featuring Iranian dishes. Afterward, the Thomases will speak informally on the work of the churches in Iran, as well as discuss the current political situation there. In Iran, the Thomases work with the Evangelical Church of Iran, an independent church which is part of the worldwide Presbyterian family of churches. The 3,000 members of the Evangelical Church are of Assyrian or Armenian heritage; some are converts from Islam, Judaism, and Zoroastrianism. Their visit to Hazelton is the first of a series of Mission Interpretation events sponsored by the Interpretation and Support Committee of Valley Presbyterian Church. Carl Montgomery of Eden is chairman. The public is cordially invited to all events.

Don't leave kids to learn about love from books. Let them learn it from you.

Children watch what you do. So watch what you do. By showing them how to be good, and loving, you might end up being better yourself. If you need help, the best place to find it is at your house of worship. This week, worship with them...and then live your religion every day.

Bring the God you worship into your life...practice what you pray.

Miller, Carson muddle market

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market finished mixed Friday in the wake of confusing statements by Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller that diverted investors' attention from the latest chapter in Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show."

Miller told a business group he thought a first-half economic growth rate of 2.5 to 3 percent was "on target." But he later told reporters he had not changed his position, that the Fed would have to consider tightening credit if the economy grew more than 2.5 percent rate in the second quarter.

The stock market sagged Thursday when Miller made his credit-tightening statement. Wall Streeters were amazed the chairman had used actual figures on which to pin his moves. "He's sorry he made those remarks," a source said.

Whatever Miller meant, the Dow Jones industrial average, down 3 points at midday, rallied after his Friday comments to gain 1.7 points to 856.98. The closely watched average fell 13.52 points overall this week, however, including 5.02 Thursday.

The New York Stock Exchange index finished unchanged at 37.09 and there was no change in the price of a share. Declines topped advances, 748 to 614, among the 1,668 issues traded at 4 p.m. EST.

Reports that entertainer Johnny Carson wants off NBC's financially successful "Tonight Show" after 17 years put RCA stock in the spotlight. Network officials indicated they will fight to keep him. The stock lost 1/4 to 27 in active trading.

Otherwise, analysts said trading in stocks underlying options that expired Friday caused fluctuations in the market. There was little else in the news background to sway the market.

Big Board volume totaled 28,830,000 shares, compared with 31,150,000 traded Thursday.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 30,760,000 shares, compared with 33,129,088 Thursday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 0.38 to 180.82 and the price of a share added 3 cents. The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ index of OTC stocks gained 0.49 to 133.67.

General Public Utilities was the most active NYSE-listed issue, off 1/4 to 14 1/2. The Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission has suspended a $9 million rate increase it granted GPU because of the nuclear accident at its Three Mile Island plant. The holding company postponed its board meeting until April 26.

Overseas Ship Building was the second most active issue, up 1 1/2 to 25 1/2 following a block of 353,800 shares at 24 1/4.

American Express was the third most active issue, off 1/4 to 31 1/2 trading that included a block of 270,000 shares at 30 1/4.

Hecla recovers from copper venture

WALLACE (UPI) — The financially troubled Hecla Mining Co. appears to be making a steady recovery from its disastrous Arizona copper venture.

The company's statement for the first quarter of 1979 reports net income of $5,450,358, or 78 cents per share, citing continued good silver production from its Lucky Friday Mine.

Hecla's earnings have been climbing steadily since the company reported a net operating loss of $2,189,793 for the second quarter of 1978. The company reported a net loss of almost as much for the previous quarter.

The dismal financial statement coincided with losses incurred by Hecla through its 50 percent participation in the $200 million Lakeshore mine in Arizona.

The mine closed after only a year of operation because of depressed copper prices and after unsuccessful attempts to sell its share of the mine, decided last fall to write the whole venture off as a $36 million business loss. Both Hecla and its partner, El Paso Natural Gas, terminated their mining leases with the Papago Indian Tribe.

Hecla reported net operating income of only $57,528 for the third quarter of 1978, but finished the year strong with fourth quarter income of more than $2.2 million.

In its latest financial report, Hecla said it reduced a $51 million corporate loan stemming from the Lakeshore venture by more than $9.9 million during the past two quarters.

Hecla said it closed down the last of its operations at the Lakeshore Mine April 1 and no longer has personnel at the site.

Lost' Illinois couple nabbed as first 'tourist of week'

TWIN FALLS — Some unsuspecting tourists are in for a pleasant surprise this summer as they drive to Twin Falls and are pulled over by police officers.

One such traveler will be welcomed each week this summer and throughout the rest of the year as "tourist of the week."

Friday, the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce program got its initiation as a young couple, Robert and Judy Lucas of Mundelein, Ill., was pulled over by a city patrolman and escorted to the Apollo Motor Inn.

Their stay was greeted by Twin Falls Mayor Leon Smith, who handed them the key to the city. The Lucases also learned of a list of gifts they will receive for being chosen "tourists of the week."

"As such, they and the future travelers selected will receive a free night's lodging in one of several participating motels, a free dinner at one of 16 restaurants, breakfast the next morning, flowers, a basket of fruit and champagne. If they wish, the travelers may attend any movie or go to the Turf club for dancing, all at no cost."

If they stay over another day, there will be a free beer and pizza at the Grizzly Bear Pizza, and there will be a free 10 gallons of gasoline at the visitor's departure. The tourist of the week will also be able to play golf at no charge at the Twin Falls municipal course or Canyon Springs.

Ewil Garrett, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce-sponsored event, said it is designed to acquaint the traveling public with the Twin Falls area and to encourage them to return and possibly stay over in the local area.

Garrett said there are seven florists and four service stations, one beverage company and one grocery store also participating in the program.

The Tourist of the Day has been selected in past summer seasons, but Garrett said plans this year are to select a special guest only on a weekly basis, but to carry the program out on a year-around basis.

This week's tourists happened to be "lost" in the area. They were searching for Shoshone Falls and had planned to head for the Craters of the Moon National Monument later Friday.

Cadets hold rocket session

TWIN FALLS — Civil Air Patrol cadets from several southern Idaho squadrons will gather in Twin Falls today and Sunday for a rocket school covering assembling and launching of small rockets.

Paul Will, information officer for the Twin Falls CAP squadron, said 60 to 75 cadets will probably attend the two-day program which will be held at the CAP headquarters building at the Twin Falls airport.

He said the cadets will be attending class sessions most of today and will move to McMaisters Flats Sunday, about five miles south of Twin Falls, to launch test rockets.

Will said officials of the Idaho Wing, CAP, will conduct the program and the local Army National Guard units will provide food service for the cadets in the field during the school and launching sessions.

Will said there will be cadets coming from Boise, Mountain Home and Canyon County squadrons with some 15 to 20 local members participating.

My job requires me to travel extensively by commercial airline. I have often wondered what settlement my wife would receive if something happened to me?

Only one phase of a settlement resulting from an aircraft fatality would involve a mortuary. If the fatality occurred while you were traveling as a part of your job, responsibility you would be covered by a Workmen's Compensation Funeral Allowance and a lump sum Social Security Funeral Benefit. Application for these benefits in your wife's name would be our responsibility.

QUESTION . . .

My job requires me to travel extensively by commercial airline. I have often wondered what settlement my wife would receive if something happened to me?

ANSWER . . .

Only one phase of a settlement resulting from an aircraft fatality would involve a mortuary. If the fatality occurred while you were traveling as a part of your job, responsibility you would be covered by a Workmen's Compensation Funeral Allowance and a lump sum Social Security Funeral Benefit. Application for these benefits in your wife's name would be our responsibility.

The Warsaw Convention fixes the liability limitation on international flights. By terms of this treaty the limit is set at $75,000 on most flights in and out of the country. There is no liability limit on domestic flights. Your wife is proven to be at fault the amount she may recover is set by the trial court.

Tom Watson expands T of C margin

LA COSTA, Calif. (UPI) — Tom Watson, demonstrating once again he has rebounded from last week's disappointing sudden-death defeat in the Masters, shot a 6-under-par Friday to lengthen his lead to three shots after two rounds of the $300,000 Tournament of Champions.

The 29-year-old former Stanford University psychology student started the day with a one-shot lead over Ron Streck and finished the second round with a 9-under-par 65 and a 3-shot buffer over Bruce Lietzke, who also had a second-round 65.

Watson carded six birdies for his 31-35 round over the 6,911-yard La Costa Country Club course, giving him 11 birdies in 140 holes in the two days.

The PGA Player of the Year in 1977 and 1978, Watson came into the T of C as the tour's leading money winner this year with $175,966, one victory and four second-place finishes. At Augusta, Ga. Sunday, he lost a sudden-death playoff with Fuzzy Zoeller and Ed Sneed to Zoeller.

Lietzke carded an eagle and five birdies and had a single bogey for a 94-32. Tied for third place at the halfway point of the 72-hole tournament were defending champion Gary Player, with a 69 Friday, and Lee Trevino, with a 68. They had 36-hole totals of 140; 4-under par and five shots back.

There was a three-way tie at 143, 1-under, among Larry Nelson, 69; Jerry Pate, 71, and Dr. Gil Morgan, 72.

Jack Nicklaus, who was paired with Lietzke Friday, continued to have his post-Masters letdown and finished with a 72 for a 144 total. Zoeller, who injured his back in a practice round Wednesday, came in at 72 following an opening-round 77 for a 149 score.

Watson hit every green in regulation and attributed his five birdies on the front nine to greens made softer by overnight watering.

But he added, "I'd like to see them let the greens be a little harder, I really would. But it does make scoring a lot easier if the greens are soft."

Watson's birdies included a 20-foot putt on the par-364-yard fourth hole. That was his longest birdie putt of the day.

"I'm still pretty pumped up from the Masters," Watson said. "I'm still on a Masters high and I'm hitting a lot of good golf shots. I was disappointed that I lost at the Masters because I had a good chance to win, but I told myself Sunday night I had to go on after that."

Lietzke told reporters it is easy for him to play after the four major golf tournaments — the Masters, U.S. Open, British Open and the PGA — because, unlike Nicklaus, he doesn't put a premium on winning them.

"Jack puts an awful lot of emphasis on the Masters," Lietzke said, "but I don't live or die with the Masters or the other majors. I treat every tournament the same and I came here feeling fine. I'm not saying my attitude should be every golfer's attitude — but I consider my attitude best for myself."

Stalley hopes to make splash at Olympics

By RANDY FREY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Six years ago Sherry Stalley was afraid to put her head underneath the water, so her mother made her take swimming lessons.

Now, at the age of 13, she feels she can earn a spot on the U.S. Olympic team.

Stalley, a seventh grader at Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School, left Friday for Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. where she will compete in the YMCA National Swim Meet. She is joined at the meet by Twin Falls YFCA teammate Brian Marron.

Come October she plans to return to Ft. Lauderdale for the Long Course Nationals, the meet from which the Olympic team is chosen.

"My main goal right now is to make it to the Olympics," said the blonde-haired swimmer. "I know it will be tough, but I plan to work hard."

Stalley's event is the butterfly, considered the most grueling of all swimming strokes.

She said swimmers traditionally peak in their mid-teens, so even if she does not make the Moscow Olympics, she thinks she can make the 1984 games. She will then be 18.

Coch Peter Blumenthal of the YFCA Swim Club agrees that Stalley could make it to the Olympics if she works hard.

"If she ever lives up to her potential she might do it," Blumenthal said. "She definitely has Olympic potential."

Blumenthal has her swimming 6,000 yards a day, six days a week. She, along with other YFCA swimmers, arrives at the Y at 7 a.m. for a morning workout and returns at 4:45 p.m. for another session.

"She has the ability and the talent to do it," he said. "All she has to do is put her mind to it and it will happen."

Stalley will get a good idea of just how good she is compared to other swimmers in the country at this week's meet. So far, her best time in the 100-meter fly is 1:04, and she thinks the winning time in Ft. Lauderdale will be around one minute flat.

But Stalley has been swimming in inferior pools, a move to an Olympic-sized pool could mean several seconds off her time, Blumenthal said.

"Two weeks ago she set a regional record in the 50 fly at the YMCA Regionals in Seattle," Blumenthal said. "And that was good competition."

Stalley took four firsts and one second at the regional meet, and

Sherry Stalley has her sights set on competing in the Olympics her coach said she is just now tapering down to her best times.

The secret now is to keep chopping seconds off her times, and Stalley said she will spend more time than ever in the pool. She said she would like to attend a swimming camp this summer, preferably at the Santa Clara Swim Club in California.

"The competition in Idaho is not as good as it should be," Stalley said. "Not many people around here know what swimming is all about — and hardly anyone is interested in the sport."

Consequently, Blumenthal must look out of state to find stiff competition for his prize swimmer.

"We go to meets in Oregon, Washington, Utah or wherever the competition is," he said. "She is at a point now where she needs harder workouts and a higher caliber of meets."

The effort was to swim in better pools, something she will be doing in Florida.

"We really need a wider pool at the Y," said Blumenthal. "The narrower the pool the more turbulence, and the more turbulence the slower the times."

The pool in Ft. Lauderdale is outdoors, and Stalley said that will be a help as well.

"It really gets hot and muggy in an indoors pool — and the chlorine can get to you after a while," Stalley said. "An outdoors pool is better, especially if it is a nice day."

Kings even Suns' series

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Otis Birdsong scored all 23 of his points in the first half Friday night to propel the Kansas City Kings to a 111-91 victory over the Phoenix Suns, evening their Western Conference semifinal series at one game apiece.

Point guards Phil Ford and Billy McKinney combined for 18 more points and the Kansas City backcourt outscored its Phoenix counterparts 43-32 in a total reversal from the first game — when Suns' guards scored 42 points as the Suns edged the Kings.

The Kings took command of Game 2 behind a Ford-inspired spurt of 11 straight points to pull Kansas City from a two-point deficit into a 17-9 lead with 6:48 to go in the first quarter. Ford scored two baskets and also collected three assists during that two-minute span.

Birdsong scored 13 points in that first quarter to help the Kings race off to a 25-21 lead.

Phoenix outscored Kansas City 6-1 early in the second quarter to cut the deficit to 38-27 — but then McKinney took over. The free agent guard from Northwestern scored two straight baskets and assisted on three others as the Kings scored 14 straight points to blow the game open at 50-27.

midway through the fourth quarter when Erving's dunk and Dawkins' layup gave them a 105-94 advantage with 6:25 left. But San Antonio's James Silas, who scored 32 points, led an 11-2 spurt with seven points, including two free throws with 3:52 remaining to cut Philadelphia's lead to 107-105.

Dawkins then took command, scoring 10 points to the Spurs' four, and his two free throws with 1:28 to play put Philadelphia ahead 117-109. Dawkins scored 14 of his 18 points in the final quarter and pulled down seven rebounds.

76ers 123, Spurs 115

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Julius Erving scored 39 points and Darryl Dawkins tallied 10 straight points down the stretch Friday night to lift Philadelphia to a 123-115 victory over the San Antonio Spurs that cut the 76ers' deficit to 2-1 in their best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series.

The 76ers will attempt to even the series Sunday in Philadelphia.

The Sixers took an 11-point lead

Bullets 89, Hawks 77

ATLANTA (UPI) — Ervin Hayes scored 19 points and the Washington Bullets used a clanging defense Friday night en route to a 89-77 victory over Atlanta, ending the Hawks' 17-game home unbeaten streak and taking a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven quarterfinal series.

Kevin Grevey, who had only six points in the first three quarters of the low-scoring battle, pumped in four long-range baskets in the final period as the Bullets broke a 51-51 third-quarter tie and pulled away.

The Hawks turned cold from the field in the final period to lose the home court edge they had gained with a victory in Landover, Md., Tuesday night. The teams met in the fourth game of the series Sunday in Atlanta.

Hayes, shut out in the final quarter, led the Bullets in scoring and forward Bobby Dandridge had 15. Grevey added 14.

The Bullets held the Hawks scoreless for 7:15 after Atlanta's Charles Criss drove the lane to give the Hawks the lead at 69-67 with 9:14 to play.

Borah Lions sweep two from Twin Falls

BOISE — The Borah Lions started hitting in the fourth inning of the opener and didn't quit Friday when they swept a doubleheader from Twin Falls.

The Lions fell behind 5-0 in the first game but came back to win 11-7 and then thumped the Bruins 17-12 in the nightcap.

Kerry Brown walked and scored on Logan Easley's single in the first inning and Larry Hovey's RBI single advanced to the regional playoffs next month. "We want Donnet to throw in see if his arm is still coming along," he continued concerning the Minico product who has been hampered by tendinitis this year. "He threw four innings for us in the Utah Tech tournament and they were clocking him at 88, 89, 90 miles per hour. His first time out, 90 miles an hour."

There wasn't much to say about Friday night's game after CSI bulled into the lead in the second inning. But the coach said "we expect them to be back after us tomorrow. I know they'll go with Scott Lang. We've only beaten him once in two years. He's not an overpowering pitcher but he's very smart and when he's in the game he's all heart."

Treasure Valley jumped on Kellogg at the outset by getting two runs.

But the Chukars gave those runs right back in the nightcap, Twin Falls moved ahead 2-0 in the first inning when Brown and Easley scored.

CSI regained the victory by scoring six times before Twin Falls could get an out in the bottom of the frame — two triples and three singles — plus two walks — doomed the Bruins.

CSI went on to collect a 17-5 lead before Twin Falls started showing some offense. Brown's triple highlighted a four-run sixth inning and he had two more RBIs with a single in the fifth.

The double defeat sent Twin Falls to a 3-5 division record and 12-7 overall. The Bruins will travel to Nampa Tuesday afternoon and return home Friday to entertain the Minico Spartans.

Declo, Glens Ferry capture track victories

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

DECLO — Homesteading Declo pulled out a top place in the final points that allowed them to earn the championship of the annual Declo track invitational.

Declo spent the day building up some pretty commanding leads but the Pilots rallied back in the late events and going into the mile relay Glens Ferry needed to finish two places ahead of Declo to earn a tie.

With 10 teams to meet, the mile relay was run in two divisions and the luck of the draw put the competing teams in opposite heats. Declo had a slight advantage in running against Valley, which opened up the lead on the first leg and kept it handily throughout. But the Vikings pulled

Two more today Eagles crush Treasure Valley

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho Coach Jim Walker gives a lot of lip service to bunts, stealing, hit and run and other ways of pecking out runs in a baseball game.

But after watching his Golden Eagles rip 13 shots around Jaycee Park — including two that left the park — he could only smile "hey, that's my kind of ball game."

The effort was worth a 13-2 decision for CSI against Treasure Valley and the two rematch in a doubleheader starting at 11 a.m. today.

CSI pitcher Rich Kellogg survived a rocky first inning and went on to claim the victory. He allowed four hits and only two runs at the outset but put the Chukars away with just two more safeties, both in the fifth.

Coach Walker nominated Lee Cline and Brian Lunden to start for his Eagles in today's twin bill and hoped to get Darrell Banks and Kevin Douglas in for some mound action.

"We have to start getting ready for Ricks," the coach said of next week's four-game matchup at Rexburg which will help decide which Idaho teams advance to the regional playoffs next month. "We want Donnet to throw in see if his arm is still coming along."

He continued concerning the Minico product who has been hampered by tendinitis this year. "He threw four innings for us in the Utah Tech tournament and they were clocking him at 88, 89, 90 miles per hour. His first time out, 90 miles an hour."

There wasn't much to say about Friday night's game after CSI bulled into the lead in the second inning. But the coach said "we expect them to be back after us tomorrow. I know they'll go with Scott Lang. We've only beaten him once in two years. He's not an overpowering pitcher but he's very smart and when he's in the game he's all heart."

Treasure Valley jumped on Kellogg at the outset by getting two runs.

But the Chukars gave those runs right back committing errors that let Rocco Zendano and Andrew Barbee live and set up two RBIs for Jim Good.

CSI started moving away in the second when Jim Fazio singled, Dave Dudenake doubled and both rode in on Zendano's two-bagger. Zendano followed them home when Barbee's grounder was error.

Al Romero started the third with a towering homer and Fazio doubled in the walking Tony Wilson later in the inning. Four more runs crossed the fourth, again started by a lead-off homer, this time by Dudenake. Zendano, Good and Ron Kollman singled with Fazio picking up two RBIs with a base hit. Dudenake scored in the fifth on a single, wild pitch and two ground outs and Wilson's sixth inning single followed by three walks forced in the final Golden Eagle tally.
