

Quarterly inflation highest since '75

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices rose another percent in March, producing the highest quarterly inflation rate in more than four years, and the White House said it expects "bad news for many months" more.

Press secretary Jody Powell told reporters that price figures for the first quarter of 1979 — which would mean close to 13 percent annual inflation if continued all year — show clearly there are no easy solutions to the problem.

"We can still expect bad news for many months," he said, adding that President Carter continues to believe his voluntary wage-price guidelines are the best way to control the situation.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said the new figures show without a doubt that the program is "an absolute failure." But Powell said labor and management leaders who suggest the guidelines be torpedoes so they can get higher wages or prices are just engaged in "wishful thinking."

The new consumer prices were compiled by the Labor Department. It said buying power for a family of four dropped 0.1 percent in March after adjustment for inflation.

Consumer prices alone increased 3.9 percent in March, the largest monthly increase since July 1975.

Meat was up 2.7 percent.

With public anger growing over high prices, Carter's chief inflation fighter, Alfred Kahn, echoed the White House warning that "we still have some bad months ahead," but predicted that "after a few months" inflation will begin to taper off.

Kahn offered consumers one specific piece of good news: He expects the rate of increase in food prices — including meat — to decline "very markedly" in the months ahead.

There also was good news for the nation's 35 million Social Security recipients whose benefits are tied to the inflation figures. The government said they will get a 9.9 percent benefit increase beginning in July, and the average monthly check will rise from $258 to $283.

The Labor Department announced that prices in almost every consumer category rose in March to produce an overall monthly increase of 1.1 percent, compared to 1.2 percent in February and 0.9 percent in January. If the March rate continued a full year, the annual inflation rate would be 12.7 percent.

During the first three months of this year, prices rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 13 percent, the government said — the largest quarterly increase since the third quarter of 1974.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., called the latest figures "an economic and political disaster" and introduced legislation to give the president standby authority to impose mandatory wage and price controls, something Carter has said emphatically he does not want.

A group of 13 immigrants and their families swear allegiance to the United States in a naturalization ceremony Thursday in Twin Falls.

Some new citizens in the fold

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Robert Tuan Frey was born in 1974 with bombshells exploding in the streets of a cold-weather country.

The adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Frey of Rupert, Robbie is an "airlift baby." As a 4-month-old infant, he was rescued from an invading South Vietnam as the country fell to an navy army.

Now, Robbie has a new life and, as of Thursday, a new nation. Robert Tuan Frey became an American citizen, as did 12 other foreign-born, Magic Valley residents.

An unusual chapter permeated the lobby of the Twin Falls County Judicial Building Thursday morning. The air was filled with voices speaking Italian, Spanish and heavily accented English.

They were from Austria, India, Italy, Japan, Mexico, South Vietnam and West Germany, but soon they would renounce their citizenship of those countries and become citizens of the United States. Soon, they would call themselves Americans.

Once a year the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service allows foreign-born Magic Valley residents to apply for American citizenship. To be eligible, normally one must have lived in the U.S. for at least five years and be able to show an understanding of the history, principles and form of American government.

For some of those who received their American citizenship Thursday, it was one of the most important moments of their lives. It was the moment when they legally established their right to the lives they have built here and could enter the heart of American democratic society and exercise their right to vote or seek election to public office.

For others, it meant something very different but less dramatic. They pledged allegiance to what had long been their home. The symbolic meaning of their pledge was more important than any practical changes it would stir in their daily lives.

"E Pluribus Unum" — out of many, comes one. This disembodied Latin phrase suddenly gathered new meaning Thursday in a Twin Falls courtroom. All 13 new citizens sat together to take their oath of allegiance.

Fumiko Bond, Idefonso Lopez Escudero, Robert Tuan Frey, Annalore Heerdt, Junitta Ventura Lopez, Gisela Anna Moyle, Armando de los Santos Campos, Romelina Castillon de los Santos, Romelina Castro de los Santos, Andreas Scherthanner, Suresh Parsram Shivasani, David Antonio Spaziano and Johann Hans Thum.

This group became the living image of the country as a melting pot. People born in seven different countries suddenly came together as one common people — all Americans. Each one added his history to that living anthology, America.

Suresh Parsram Shivasani, for instance, is Indian-born, but his story is peculiarly American. Shivasani, 30, came to the U.S. 15 years ago to attend college. After earning an engineering degree from Stanford University, he worked five years in San Francisco as an engineer. But he grew tired with the regimen of his job and city life.

Shivasani checked his career and retreated to Idaho. He settled eight years ago in Sun Valley, and using his engineering knowledge, he developed a new process to make posters from color photographic negatives inexpensively.

The enterprising Shivasani began photographing skiers in Sun Valley and then blowing up the photographs to poster-size portraits. Magic Photography, his business, has thrived and now has offices in Sun Valley; St. Moritz, Switzerland; and Keystone, Colo. Next year two more offices will open in Banff, Canada, and Beaver Creek, Colo.

"To me," Shivasani reflected Thursday, "I've always felt a citizen — from the first day I came to this country. I knew I would stay. I always believed in the system."

Andreas "Andy" Scherthanner, a 50-year-old Ketchum building contractor and former ski instructor, Thursday finally became a citizen after living 22 years in the U.S.

"I think it's mostly a symbolic act," Scherthanner said, "because this is my home here and so I thought I should be a citizen. I'm really looking forward to it. It just makes me more a part of the country."

There were no tears in Gisela Anna Moyle's eyes during her naturalization, but she was happy that at last she could do the many things her American husband, Phillip, has always been able to do.

"To this point it is nothing exciting," Mrs. Moyle, 29, commented from her home in old Ketchum building contractor and former ski instructor, Thursday finally became a citizen after living 22 years in the U.S.

"Citizenship won't give 17-year-old David Antonio Spaziano the vote for another year, but still he admitted excitement. David came with his parents 15 years ago from Rome, Italy, to Burley. Mr. and Mrs. Spaziano were granted American citizenship last year. Thursday, they sat proudly with their son during the naturalization ceremony.

Citizenship means something different to everyone, but as St. District Judge Douglas Kramer noted during the ceremony, these foreign-born citizens may better appreciate it than those who are American-born.

After granting citizenship to all 13 Magic Valley residents, Kramer commented to Fukima Bond, who immigrated from Okinawa, Japan: "When I was 18 years old, I fought in the liberation of Okinawa. Little did I know then that one day, years later, I would have the pleasure and honor of welcoming you as a citizen of this great country."

Substitute bill Setback for Carter in debate of canal

By GRAHAM HOVEY
O.N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration sustained a defeat on its bill to carry out the Panama Canal Treaty Thursday when the House Rules Committee adopted a substitute measure proposed by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

The Rules Committee's action meant that the legislation to be reported out for floor debate sometime after mid-May will contain provisions that administration officials say violate both the letter and the spirit of the treaty, under which the canal will be turned over to Panama on the last day of 1999.

Under the rule, adopted by a 9 to 3 vote, some provisions in the administration bill could be offered as amendments from the floor by three other House committees — Foreign Affairs, Judiciary and Post Office and Civil Service — involved in the Panama legislation.

These three committees had all urged adoption of the administration bill with some amendments. The overriding of their recommendations by the Rules Committee was only one of many recent indications that the treaty legislation faces rough treatment from congressional conservatives.

Chairman Richard Bolling, D-Mo., and other committee liberals said they supported the substitute bill because they thought the administration measure would have had no chance of approval by the House in the existing political climate.

"I basically support this rule because I think it is vitally important to implement the treaty and I think this is the only way in which the House can act favorably," Bolling said. The treaty comes into force Oct. 1,

Lebanon, Bahrain join list in cutting ties with Egypt

By United Press International — Lebanon and Bahrain joined their Arab neighbors Thursday in breaking off diplomatic relations with Egypt, further isolating Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. Syrian MIG-21s buzzed Beirut in support of the PLO and a top PLO leader put the United States high on its list of "enemies."

Israeli Phantom jets buzzed the Beirut headquarters of Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat on Wednesday in an implied warning of further Israeli retaliation against PLO raids and a Beirut analyst called the twin actions a dangerous game of cat-and-mouse.

A train ran set off a bomb apparently planted by Palestinian guerrillas Thursday on the tracks at the entrance to Beit Safata southwest of Jerusalem, damaging one coach but causing no injuries.

Despite Arab expressions of disapproval, Israel and Egypt moved to strengthen their bonds. Israel announced that negotiations would start

Sunday on the first phase of the Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai Desert under terms of their peace treaty which formally went into effect Wednesday with an exchange of documents in the Sinai.

Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman conferred with Sadat during the morning they flew to Alexandria to take a look at the Egyptian Navy — the first Israeli leader to do so as a guest of the Egyptian government. Weizman said he and Sadat did not discuss such controversial issues as the Palestinians or Jewish settlements in occupied lands.

But Weizman said they agreed that "We shall stand by all that we signed for at Camp David and in Washington." He did not mention Sadat's Wednesday proposal for reviving the Geneva peace conference — a move certain to anger Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Lebanon's severance of diplomatic relations with Israel brought to 14 the number of Arab states that have treaty and the Baghdad conference which voted sanctions against Egypt. The PLO also has severed relations. Both the Lebanese and Bahrain announcements mentioned the Baghdad agreement which has cost Sadat his close ties with Saudi Arabia and Jordan.

The other 12 were Morocco, which announced its decision earlier Thursday, Saudi Arabia, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates, Mauritania, Kuwait, Jordan, Syria, Libya, Iraq, Algeria and South Yemen.

The Moroccan decision amounted to a switch in King Hassan's policy, since he was previously a strong supporter of Sadat's sprint for peace with Israel.

The Cairo newspaper Al Ahram published a statement by an unidentified "high Egyptian official" charging the Saudis with breaking with Egypt, were "putting the hands of the clock backward" and "urging-Saudis rulers to reconsider" before they reach the point of no return.

Friday briefing

Plea bargaining

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Ethics Committee said Thursday night it is still receptive to a "plea bargaining" arrangement to head off a scandalous hearing on the resignation of Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., but that no such agreement has been reached.

Committee spokeswoman Lynne Murphy said no agreement with Talmadge had been reached and she fully expects to proceed with hearings as scheduled beginning next Monday.

CBS reported Thursday night that committee lawyers have drafted a proposed settlement that was being presented to Talmadge by a "senior Democratic senator not on the committee."

SALT meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department said Thursday Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Ambassador Anatoli Dobrynin will meet Friday, but no conclusion is expected in their negotiations about a SALT II treaty.

U.S. officials said the two sides have already settled one remaining issue — the banning of coded telemetry from missile tests — and the only remaining issue involves controls on new types of missiles and how to verify them.

Appeal for help

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States, seeking help to promote peace in the Mideast, is hopeful Germany, Japan, France, Italy and Canada will contribute substantially to the economic development of Egypt and Israel, administration spokesmen said Thursday.

Testifying in support of President Carter's proposed $4.8 billion aid package to the two peace-makers, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance told the Senate foreign operations subcommittee, "The administration has discussed with Japan, and the European community... they have indicated their willingness to give economic aid to both Egypt and Israel."

Stay for Evans

ATMORE, Ala. (UPI) — A stay of the scheduled execution today of John Louis Evans III, who narrowly escaped the electric chair three weeks ago, went into effect Thursday afternoon.

Alabama's highest court agreed to a stay last Friday on condition that it take effect at 5 p.m. Thursday, and only if Evans still wanted to pursue his appeal.

A spokesman for the state Board of Corrections, Charles P. Taylor, said Holman Prison warden Joe Oliver said Evans had agreed to stay in effect.

Corps urgings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter urged Congress Thursday to leave the Peace Corps within ACTION — but give it more autonomy — rather than transfer it to the newly created International Development Administration.

His letter to Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and other key legislators, followed a House vote to transfer the Peace Corps to the International Development Cooperation Agency.

Five killed

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — National Guardsmen killed five youths in a house-to-house search for the rebel "Big Four" fire companies yesterday, a Nicaraguan newspaper reported.

Opposition to the rule of President Anastasio Somoza mounted in Managua and Nicaragua's second largest city, Leon.

The newspaper El Centroamericano said the five youths, between 18 and 25 years of age, were killed by San Felipe section of Managua.

Rubber roadblock

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Negotiations between the United Rubber Workers union and the industry over a new contract for the "Big Four" tire companies broke off abruptly Thursday night with President Carter's wage guidelines the major roadblock.

UAW President Peter Bommarito said his bargaining team was returning immediately to Akron, Ohio, where a meeting with other union leaders would be held Monday to decide whether a strike will be called against Uniroyal, the main bargaining target.

Gambling OK

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Caesars World Inc. was granted permission Thursday to participate in Atlantic City gambling in an historic vote by the Nevada Gaming Commission.

State law requires that a Nevada casino licensee receive Nevada Gaming Commission approval before opening a casino outside state borders. It marked the first application and approval ever granted by Nevada gaming agencies.

Mafia connection

SAUN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Members of a gang awaiting trial for post office burglaries were linked by a now-dead underworld figure to a wide array of western states crimes plotted in conjunction with the Mafia, FBI records show.

The mobster's information included details of a plot by the Sam Bailey gang to murder the man in control of prostitution in northern Nevada — with the blessing of a Nevada district attorney and a state supreme court justice.

Sanction talk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legislation to lift sanctions against Rhodesia would be unconstitutional if it came before President Carter, makes his assessment on the elections there, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said Thursday.

"Legislation to provide for such steps would be an interference in the president's constitutional responsibilities in making foreign policy," Vance told the Senate foreign operations subcommittee.

Letuce boycott

SALINAS, Calif. (UPI) — United Farm Workers union leader Cesar Chavez called for a nationwide boycott of iceberg lettuce Thursday, describing consumers as "the court of last resort" in his three-month-old strike against growers.

"We need to boycott California iceberg lettuce sold throughout the country," Chavez told a news conference.

Quarterly inflation rate rises

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of Congress' Joint Economic Committee, asked Kahn at a committee hearing: "Can you give the American people any solid basis to believe that your program eventually is going to bring down the rate of inflation?"

Kahn said while the administration will have to take off its collective hat to believe that for all of 1979, there is still "genuine reason to expect or hope that after a few months we will get a tapering off."

He said there is "no alternative" but to persevere with the president's program of voluntary wage and price guidelines.

His advice to Congress: "patience." "There are no other quick fixes around," Kahn said.

The Labor Department cited these specific increases in March: Food and beverage prices up 1 percent, compared to 1.6 percent in February and 1.4 percent in January.

Housing costs up 1 percent; mortgage interest costs up 1.9 percent; household fuels 1.7 percent; gas and electricity 0.8 percent; transportation 1.2 percent; clothing 1.6 percent; entertainment 0.9 percent; medical care costs 0.6 percent.

entertainment 0.9 percent; medical care costs 0.6 percent. Republican National Chairman Bill Brock was one of the many criticizing the anti-inflation program after the new figures were announced.

"Leadership is the first step that has not delivered," he said. "I sincerely hope, before it's too late, that this administration will get off its relaxed mood, get off the campaign trail, and do something about this most distressing problem."

Americans for Democratic Action, a liberal lobby group, said Carter is "burying his head in the sand" and urged him to impose wage-price controls. And a coalition of consumer groups, Consumers Opposed to Inflation in the Necessary, said the big rise in gasoline prices should convince Carter he is wrong to lift federal price controls on crude oil.

Oil tax proposal unveiled

By HELEN THOMAS, UPI Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter sent Congress his formal proposal for a windfall oil profits tax Thursday, and scored a victory on Capitol Hill when a Senate panel approved his standby plan for gasoline rationing.

The Senate Energy Committee's 98 vote approving the rationing plan was the biggest win Carter has had so far with his new energy proposals, and it was especially welcome since a House panel rejected the idea on Wednesday.

As Carter sent Congress his proposal for tax cuts on the oil industry, Mobil-Corp., the second-largest American oil company, reported an 82 per cent rise in first quarter profits over a year ago.

Major increases in profits, a 42 percent gain by Sun Oil Co. and a 50 percent gain by Murphy Oil Co. were latest in a string of spectacular to very good first-quarter profits reports by the nation's oil firms.

The Senate panel approved the declining votes in the Senate committee with a letter from his domestic adviser, Stuart Eizenstat, promising states a substantial increase in revenue to alleviate hardships.

The president has said he would impose rationing — if Congress gave him the authority — only under emergency conditions.

Senate Energy Committee Chairman Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said, "I feel very strongly we ought to have standby rationing. I don't think I would like any rationing, but I have to stick to the facts."

While Carter is pushing hard for the rationing plan, his major effort is aimed at winning a windfall oil profits tax on the oil companies to limit the money they will get when federal price controls on crude oil are lifted beginning in June.

Tomorrow

SALT talk

Among the stories in tomorrow's Times-News: Washington columnist George F. Will calls President Carter's recent statements on SALT II are "incredible. Carter vowed that 'the treaty must, and the treaty will be verifiable from the first day it is signed,' and that '... if there is an effort to cheat on the SALT agreement, including the limits on modernizing ICBMs, we will detect it....'"

Workman boats up flooded road in Winnipeg UPI

North's Red River remains a threat

By United Press International
The rising Red River of the North hammered Thursday at dikes and sandbag levees that stood between its rushing waters and riverside towns in Minnesota and North Dakota.
In the south, floodwaters slowly retreated from homes and businesses—in Mississippi and Louisiana, giving flood-weary residents a breather.
"The Red River, blunted to a girth of 20 miles and surging at 30 times its normal flow, stepped up its assault against clay dikes, sandbags and bone-weary flood-control crews fighting to keep the river from consuming Grand Forks, N.D."
Flood workers in Grand Forks and across the river in East Grand Forks, Minn., raced to stay a half step ahead of the rising river.
"We're dealing with a couple problems... a flood control spokesman said. "For instance, we had a boil 15 people were working on during the night."
A "boil" occurs when water forces up ground on the dry side of a dike. The ground must be flattened with the weight of sandbags to keep from bursting.
Some 1,400 persons have fled their homes in Grand Forks. Downstream, in the Canadian province of Manitoba, about 10,000 persons were ordered out of their Red River Valley homes in anticipation of major flooding by the northward-flowing river.

Ominous rumblings at California beach

MALIBU, Calif. (UPI) — The rumblings inside the bluff overlooking Pacific Coast Highway are sending signals to geologists — and the signals are not good. The mountain could come tumbling down on expensive beachfront homes at any time.
Oliver Pool, geologist for the California Department of Transportation, said Thursday pressure in the slipping mountainside doubled during the night, indicating "an imminent major land movement."
"Everyone wants to know the exact time the mountain will come down, but that's impossible to say," he said.
"There is activity in the slide area and I believe the situation will be critical very shortly."
Residents were evacuated from their homes for a brief period during the night but returned about 4 a.m. The closed 5 1/2-mile portion of Pacific Coast Highway was re-opened to limited pedestrian traffic.
Caltrans had removed its equipment from the area just before midnight in anticipation of the collapse, but by early morning, Pool said, it was decided the danger was not immediate.

Universe theories supported

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The most powerful X-ray telescope ever orbited has found new evidence supporting the theories associated with the idea that the universe will expand forever, thereby escaping a catastrophic coming-together, scientists reported Thursday.
"Astronomers believe the universe has been expanding, possibly since a 'big bang' explosion 18 billion or 20 billion years ago. But whether galaxies will continue to fly apart forever is an unanswered question."
"Earlier satellite observations suggested the presence between the galaxies of hot X-ray emitting gases which might provide enough mass to generate gravitational forces sufficient to eventually slow the universe's expansion to a halt."
"The universe then, according to theory, would shrink faster and faster to a catastrophe or the ultimate 'big crunch.'"
"The big X-ray observing telescope aboard the space agency's High Energy Astronomical Observatory 2 launched last November gave astronomers their first opportunity to see if the background X-rays coming from deep in the universe were really produced by immense diffuse clouds that might be slowing the expansion."
Dr. Riccardo Giacconi of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory at Cambridge, Mass., the scientist in charge of the X-ray telescope, pointed—the instrument toward regions of the sky where no specific X-ray sources had been detected.

Nuclear power remains best short term energy source

ROBERT V. LANEY
Chicago Sun-Times

Nothing so enhances a commodity's worth as not having it. The Three Mile Island nuclear accident brings to mind this simple rule of supply and demand in relation to energy.

During the 20 years that commercial nuclear plants have been operating, they have had an unparalleled safety record. Yet these plants and the utilities that operate them have been severely criticized on grounds of safety cost and waste disposal.

Demands to shut down all nuclear plants, coming in the midst of the shock and consternation of the accident, suddenly have an increased intensity. Perhaps for the first time, the public must face the possibility that these demands might actually be carried out.

While the accident has sobered nuclear advocates everywhere and has frightened the public, it also has made it abundantly clear that, as a nation, we are committed to nuclear energy as a major source of energy.

The simplest terms we face an energy crisis because the demand for oil and natural gas continues to increase while available supplies diminish.

If a disaster like the accident may have opened our eyes to the nature of the energy crisis as has nothing else. It is, therefore, a good time to review the nation's energy predicament.

It is not a question of nuclear or no nuclear but of achieving increased utilization of nuclear, coal and solar and other forms of energy.

The members of the Times-News editorial board and the writers of Times-News editorials are William E. Howard, Chris Peck, Ray Brown and Larry Swisher.

them more clearly as we contemplate the possibility that nuclear power might be severely curtailed.

The United States must reduce its reliance on oil, especially imported oil, both for reasons of economic security and political independence. We must substitute other forms of energy, use energy more efficiently and reduce our consumption.

conservation and improvements in efficiency probably are the cornerstones of a national energy policy. Important steps already are being taken both by industry and government, but improved technology can lead to still greater efficiency.

Our abundant technological opportunities, as well as challenge. So far, the efforts to increase coal utilization have been disappointing.

Geothermal energy is similarly limited to locations where hot gases or hot water are available.

Nuclear fusion is a potentially inexhaustible source of energy, since the fuel materials exist in essentially unlimited quantities.

It is certain that the long-term trend in oil supplies in the world is downward, even though there is disagreement as to the rate at which supplies are declining.

There is no guarantee that we will have time enough, but if we are not aggressive in developing our energy options we can be certain that the results of energy poverty will be disastrous.

By BOB GREENE

You hear a lot of love stories in this business — people calling you up and asking you to put their 50th anniversary picture in the paper. I guess this was one of them.

John and Mary (names have been changed to protect my health) have been man and wife for 12 years. John is an iron worker. Mary, who stands 5-foot-2, and weighs 180 pounds, is a typist. John works days. Mary works nights.

Mary is proud of her family life. "My family has no derelicts in it," she said. "I know karate."

But love, as it will, winked at Mary. It winked in the person of Elroy, a thrice-divorced civil service file clerk. He met Mary one night after work, at an informal gathering in a tavern. He asked her to dance. She accepted. When the song ended, she said to him, "You're a jerk."

Several months passed. Then, one night at work, Mary received a telephone call from Elroy. Elroy wanted to know if Mary would like to go out on a date.

For all the years since her marriage to John, Mary had been faithful. But by this point, according to Mary, "you get aggravated and disgusted and stuff. I was super-bored and not taking part in activities or hobbies."

So when Elroy called, Mary was receptive.

"Are you still a jerk?" she inquired. "No," Elroy said.

"Okay," Mary said. "Pick me up after work."

And thus Mary, a mother of four daughters, began her tempestuous affair.

At first, she thought it would be merely a lark:

"I thought, they'll go out with this dope and spend his money."

But the fling turned into romance:

"He treated me real gentle and all that crap."

Soon they were meeting on the sly three and four times a week.

"I'd drink or eat or hit a motel," Mary said.

Love was not blind; Mary knew that Elroy had a few minor character flaws.

"I know he was a nut," she said. "He'd been married three times, and he mentioned something about being in an alcoholic drying-out ward once, and I knew that he was a hon."

But he told her he was through with all that. Still, sometimes when he was drinking, his pupils would dilate, and he would talk about crazy things, like doing more home invasions to support his habit. He never mentioned what his habit was and I never asked. I was very attracted to him physically."

For a year, Mary and Elroy met in the shadows. Then, on a recent Sunday, Mary borrowed her husband's car and she and Elroy went for a ride. Mary's husband John, who had borrowed another car, saw them cruising, and cut them off on a side street.

"John was going to punch Elroy's face in," Mary said.

But Elroy ran away.

That evening, John took his four daughters to a shopping center. While they were inside a store, Elroy came to the parking lot, stuck a rag in the gas tank of John's car, lit it, and tried to blow the car up.

Luckily the wind blew the flame out. But later that night, John and Mary looked out their front window and noticed that John's car had exploded.

After the fire department had doused the flames and the charred hulk of the car remained on the street, Mary went to Elroy's house to confront him.

"Did you go and torch my husband's car?" Mary said.

"Oh, no," said Elroy. "I have been sleeping."

"I do not want to see you again," Mary said.

Several days later, the apartment of Mary's cousin Bertha was burglarized and set on fire.

"I found Elroy," Mary said. "He had taken seven bottles of liquor, a pair of handcuffs and a gold badge that a police officer had given Bertha as a memento." Bertha works in the sheriff's department in the field of looking up prostitutes.

Mary again confronted Elroy with the evidence.

"I cannot remember," said Elroy. "I must have had an alcoholic blackout."

Mary said to Elroy, "I am giving you the brush-off."

"She said to Elroy's brother, 'Tell him if he ever comes near me again, I will blow his brains out.'"

"John was going to punch Elroy's face in," Mary said. "I decided not to, because I might get arrested for it."

"John and Mary's marriage is an odd thing."

"We never used to shop together," Mary said. "That has changed."

"There's one thing you can say about my wife," John said. "She is not the worst woman in the world."

Carter's second Idaho 'visit'

President Jimmy Carter — or at least some of his top administrators — should not shy away from the Western Governors' Conference this year.

Although he has little reason to feel politically welcome in the West, Carter still should remember this part of the domestic scene, in between his trips to Korea and Japan.

Those trips, while House aides said this week will probably keep the president too busy to meet with the governors in Sun Valley in June, when he is scheduled to go abroad.

But another possible conflict hasn't been mentioned.

If all 48 governors in the West who have been invited attend personally, it would bring Carter into close proximity to California Gov. Jerry Brown.

Brown is actively pursuing a presidential bid and the prospect of the two men trapped in the hallways of the upper-Wood River Valley will, hoards of newsmen, photographers and television crews, is uninviting from the president's standpoint.

It would only serve to draw more attention to the California governor than even singer Linda Ronstadt, Brown's girlfriend, could accomplish.

Although a second trip to Idaho by President Carter seems unlikely for these reasons, the West still has a number of bones-to-pick-with Mr. Carter and his administration.

Some of the issues are:

• Growing oil shortages, which some have charged are worse in the West than elsewhere — on purpose. Arizona and Nevada have asked for increased allocations, and Idaho is receiving more severe cutbacks than other states.

• The proposed Department of Natural Resources, which would move the U.S. Forest Service from the Agriculture Department to the Interior Department. The huge majority of federal forest lands are in the West.

• Price supports for sugar, an issue still bogged down in Congress while a new growing season gets under way. Sugar beet farmers are still waiting for a new price to help them get a fair return on their crops.

• Wilderness area recommendations, both on forest land and range land, which affect the timber and livestock industries.

Despite receiving Western antagonism on a number of these issues, not being strongly represented by a personal spokesman or spokesmen would further erode Carter's standing.

America must understand basics of SALT II

NEW YORK — The difficulty of getting SALT II ratified in the Senate is becoming clearer every day. Unfortunately, the issues involved are not. The most important debate of the Carter administration is in danger of bogging down before it officially opens in technicalities, exaggerated fears and irrelevances.

Not that any senator, on a matter of such profound importance, should shy away from the most searching inquiry — however "technical" or "irrelevant" it may seem to others. But the problem is to keep the debate focused on the real question — whether SALT II would make nuclear warfare more

But Sen. Howard Baker, the minority leader, said the other day that he was "leaning against" though not committed to oppose, the treaty.

One of the reasons he gave was that it would limit American technological advances while permitting the Soviets to improve their position by emulating existing technology. But the agreement is reliably reported to provide that during its eight-year life neither side can deploy more than one new land-based and one new submarine-based missile, both of which each side has developed already.

This provision is specifically aimed at restraining qualitative improvements of weapons within the numerical limits set on them. Baker's objection also seemed to ignore the comprehensive nature of the treaty, which the Senate is scheduled to take up after SALT II. A halt to testing would provide the strongest restriction on technological development of new or improved weapons by either side.

Again, when 12 other Republican senators recently announced serious reservations about the treaty, they insisted that in addition to equal numbers of launchers for each side SALT II "must actually provide for real equality in the essential strategic measures as throw-weight" (the total weight of nuclear bombs that either side can deliver by missiles or bombs).

because the Russians with their heavier missiles lead the United States in throw-weight by about two to one. But the American side has a somewhat better than 2 to 1 advantage in numbers of deliverable nuclear warheads — about 9,000 to 4,000. To provide the assurance demanded by the 12 Republicans would hand the strategic advantage to this country, which the Soviets obviously would not accept.

Some liberal senators have complained that the Carter administration is "appeasing" such hard-line critics in the treaty it has negotiated. Secretary of Defense Harold Brown may have when he said recently that even with SALT II "we will need and we will be permitted to expand our nuclear efforts about their present levels" — for example, deployment of both the MX missile and the Trident submarine after expiration of a three-year protocol to the treaty.

But Brown also pointed out that with SALT II ratified the nation could maintain the strategic arms balance over the next decade at a cost of about $3 billion less than probably would be required if the treaty were rejected.

HOWEVER, TO OFFSET EVERYTHING WE ARE GIVING UP, WE WOULD WANT YOU TO BUILD YOURSELF A BUNCH OF POORLY PLANNED NUCLEAR POWER STATIONS TO BE APPROVED BY OUR NRC. HERE!!

"YOUR CHECK, SIR!"

Memo shown in trial

By SHEILA ALLEE
OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Attorneys for the survivors of Karen Silkwood, trying to build their nuclear negligence case against Kerr-McGee Nuclear Corp., Thursday introduced a memo from an inspector who said he was denied access to X-rays of welds on plutonium-filled rods.

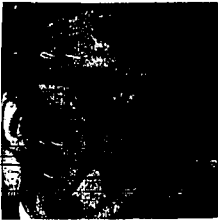

The inspector for Westinghouse-Hanford, the company for which Kerr-McGee was producing the plutonium-filled fuel rods, complained in the memo he was denied access Oct. 24, 1974, in a room where Kerr-McGee kept X-rays of fuel rod welds.

Silkwood attorney Gerald Spence introduced the memo during testimony from Kerr-McGee Nuclear Corp. President Morgan Moore. Spence also read a Westinghouse report indicating some faulty weld X-rays produced at Kerr-McGee were dated Oct. 24, 1974.

The lawyer noted the first indications Ms. Silkwood might be contaminated came between Oct. 22 and Oct. 25, 1974 — less than two weeks before Kerr-McGee confirmed she had suffered severe radioactive contamination.

Ms. Silkwood had claimed she was contaminated with radiation because of the firm's negligence. Her survivors have filed an $11.5 billion lawsuit.

NRC head says plant safeguards inadequate

WILLIAM WILCOX
... FDAA chief

By MICHAEL J. CONLON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Thursday the Three Mile Island accident has convinced him there are not adequate safeguards to ensure that nuclear power plant operators are properly trained.

Before the March 28 accident, chairman Joseph Hendrie said, he thought licensing procedures sufficiently guaranteed that only plants with qualified operators could go into operation.

But in light of the nation's worst nuclear power plant accident, he said, "that is clearly not the case."

He told the presidential commission investigating the accident it should demand to know why, and said the NRC itself wants to look at the situation.

The training question was raised by Ann Trunk, a commission member and mother of six who in Middletown, Pa., near the Three Mile Island plant, "is the training adequate?" she asked Hendrie. "I heard a lot of young fellows work there. When they (the plant operators) first saw the instruments weren't measuring right, they didn't know what to do."

William Wilcox, chief of the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, told the commission some sort of structure should be created to improve emergency planning and readiness.

He said the NRC lacks both the money and power to encourage state and local governments to prepare for accidents.

He said one aspect of Pennsylvania's plan for meeting nuclear accidents "is so vague as to be of little value" and coordination among county civil defense organizations has been weak and inadequate.

Douglas Coe, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, told the 11-member commission one of the most disturbing aspects of the accident was how long it took his agency to find out how serious the matter was.

He suggested one solution to that would be to have instrument readings from all nuclear plants sent by space-age telemetry to a central government computer, where immediate alerts could be issued.

Coe also suggested that a flying squad of nuclear experts be kept at the ready to be sent to trouble spots.

But Hendrie said he doubts either approach would do much.

Temple bodies moved

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (UPI) — The first truckloads of the remaining 545 bodies from the Guyana massacre rumbled out of Dover Air Force Base Thursday amid a chilly drizzle for a final trip to California.

The overcast, morning sky was similar to the gloom of last Thanksgiving Day when the first of the 913 victims of the Peoples Temple mass murder-suicide arrived at the base for identification and processing.

"Today we meet to write the final chapter — a long and difficult saga which hopefully will never be repeated," said Rep. Tom Evans, R-Del.

William glad that we have finally cut through all the bureaucratic red tape which has prevented the movement of these bodies for the past five months. But I have an overwhelming feeling of sadness — sadness for the victims, for their families, and for our country, which has had to endure this tragedy."

Relatives have claimed the bodies of 368 victims in the last five months. Three yellow-and-white trucks from Larmore Moving Systems, of Wilmington, were loaded with 150 airtight coffins of identified bodies. Another 147 bodies will be loaded on trucks and sent to California Friday. The remaining 240 bodies — all unidentified and mostly children — will be shipped next month.

William Larmore, head of the trucking firm, declined to disclose the route the six trucks will take to California.

Base Chaplain Paul Wragg and two other ministers said brief prayers for the victims.

Wragg said the shipment of the remaining 545 bodies would "bring a dignified and caring conclusion to this incident."

A forklift moved the coffins from the grey, metal airplane hangar where they were stored to the back of the waiting trucks and movers clad in blue overalls carried each individual coffin onto the trucks.

Peoples Temple funds will be used to pay the $35,440 cost of the four-day, cross country shipment. Most of the bodies will be taken to Oakland Army Base near San Francisco and the others will go to Fort MacArthur near Los Angeles.

A spokesman for the court-appointed receiver for Peoples Temple said the 248 unidentified bodies will be held 30 days in California for possible claiming by relatives, then will be interred at Evergreen Cemetery in Oakland.

Evans said he hopes the Justice Department will seek reimbursement from the cult for the nearly $4 million cost of flying the bodies from the Guyana jungle to Dover.

"They should never have been brought here in the first place," he said. "Most were from San Francisco."

"These people were misled by the word of a charismatic madman (the Rev. Jim Jones)," Evans said. "I only hope we as a nation have learned a lesson from Jonestown."

Evans said he is convinced that the bodies would have remained in Delaware indefinitely had not pressure been put on the State Department.

"Transfer of the bodies to California is the humanitarian thing to do," he said.

Mystics show their stuff

By MARGARET GORDY
LONDON (UPI) — If the stench of old incense clogs your sinuses you could fry the sea salt nose sprayers at the yoga exhibit or the lonic atmosphere energizer at the Ion booth.

If that failed, you could consult faith healers, color therapists, psychoanalysis counselors or one of a dozen gurus.

London's Third Festival of Mind-Body-Spirit, billed as "the show about you and me," is displaying more than 100 exhibitors from the murkiest reaches of the mystical spectrum.

Organizer Graham Wilson said that by closing time Sunday up to 150,000 visitors will have come "in search of something more."

Mark Smith, a 25-year-old salesman, was in search of a good laugh.

"At least I know it's one place I won't meet my parents," he said as he munched a lotusburger, contents unknown. "The joke is on me, though — I tried a soy milkshake. I may never recover."

The only shared qualities among the multicolored booths were a dislike of modern science and a penchant for aggressive advertising.

To a wife who has everything

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (UPI) — Charles Novacek says he has long thought his wife belongs on a pedestal. After more than two years of work, he finally has put her there.

Novacek, a consulting engineer for a Detroit construction firm, began work in December 1976 on a life-size limestone statue of his wife, Valentina.

Although the statue is completed, formal unveiling is not scheduled until June 15, the 29th anniversary of their meeting in Bavaria, Germany.

"Until the ceremonies, it remains hidden under heavy plastic outside the front window of the couple's suburban Detroit home."

Novacek said he decided to make the statue because he was unable to think of a gift to give his wife on her 50th birthday.

"I always wanted to be a Michelangelo," said Novacek, who has sketched and painted as a hobby most of his life. "I love Valentina very much."

"I have told her several times that I hope my woman on a pedestal. And there she will be for everyone to see."

Novacek placed a 2,600-pound slab of Indiana limestone on a concrete base in front of his home and began work on Dec. 2, 1976 — his wife's birthday.

He worked from a photograph taken of Valentina in her favorite party dress.

"Mrs. Novacek, who met her husband in a Bavarian stable where they were learning to ride, said she has never peeked under the plastic even though her husband suggested several times that she do so."

Dan Kelly gets used to the U.S.

PLAINFIELD, Ind. (UPI) — Dan Kelly, who spent 21 years convincing the Chinese he was an American citizen, has spent the past three months trying to get used to the country he calls his home.

He is looking for a job, learning to drive, thinking about a home for his family, reading voraciously and complaining — like any good American — about the commercials on television.

Kelly, 38, reached Indianapolis Jan. 23 with his mother, his wife and his three children. He spent most of the previous 21 years in Chinese forced labor camps for insisting he was American.

Kelly, the son of an American missionary — and a Chinese woman, was born in China and had never seen the United States until this year.

Last December, the Chinese finally let him go — nominally for a one-year leave, although authorities knew the whole family was leaving for good.

Kelly and his family have moved in with his sister, Elizabeth Peabody, who was sent to the United States when she was 9 years old. They share her Plainfield home, along with her husband, Rodney, and the Peabody children.

On his arrival in America, Kelly said his main goal was to find a job. "Nothing concrete has come out yet. I would like to put my knowledge to use in this country."

He has asked Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., for help and has an offer from Indiana University to "learn part-time, teach part-time."

Rudolf Hess turns 85

BERLIN (UPI) — Rudolf Hess, who served as Adolf Hitler's deputy, marked his 85th birthday alone in Spandau prison Thursday.

Outside the prison, about 60 persons from an association dedicated to winning "freedom" for Hess laid wreaths against a prison wall and sang several songs including part of the national anthem, "Deutschland Ueber Alles." They sang the third verse of the anthem, which the West German government discourages because of its nationalistic fervor which the Nazis emphasized.

Hess has been the only prisoner in Spandau since fellow Nazi Albert Speer and Baldur von Schirach completed their 20-year sentences in 1967.

Edematous oysters mean setters are getting fat

Fresh oysters in the shell aren't plump—they're lean. When alive, they expel excess water. If the oysters you buy are fat, it's because they've been swollen with water after they've been harvested. That's uncricket, isn't it? But the oyster peddlers do it, the rascals.

History records that telephone interruptions so annoyed Alexander Graham Bell that he frequently wrapped a towel around the phone in his lab so he could work in peace.

A developer of quick-built homes gives these instructions to his construction superintendent: "Never remove the scaffolding before the wallpaper is up."

Dogs, too, get hay fever.

TASTE AND FLAVOR

Q. "What's the difference between 'taste' and 'flavor'?"
A. Taste relies on the tongue. Flavor relies on the tongue and nose.

If "uncopyrightable" isn't the longest word wherein no letter is repeated, what is?

Q. "Is there a lot of lightning and thunder at the North and South Poles?"
A. Hardly any. Maybe one such electrical storm every 10 years.

It was because students at Cambridge weren't allowed to keep dogs in their rooms that Lord Byron while there kept a bear.

Q. "What do king cobra snakes eat?"
A. Litter snakes, almost exclusively.

YURI GAGARIN

In March of 1968, Soviet Cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin died in a freak plane crash. He was 33. At the Chkalov Air Force Base 30 miles from Moscow is the Gagarin Training Center with a special museum room where Gagarin's private study has been re-created. Everything in it is exactly as it was the day he died. His coat hangs on a wall peg. Books and records lay open on his desk. The clocks are stopped at the minute of his death. Gagarin is the Soviet Union's space saint. Each cosmonaut since 1968, goes to the Gagarin study before taking off on a space mission. Each writes a letter to Gagarin, promising to make the upcoming mission a success, vowing to uphold the motherland, committing loyalty to Gagarin's memory. Each meditates there, then leaves the letter on Gagarin's desk, and goes into the sky. Each letter then is kept there in a special file.

Califano warning women of rise in smoking figures

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Pointing a sharp rise in cigarette smoking by teenage girls, HEW Secretary Joseph Califano warned Thursday young women are risking their lives and the lives of their unborn children by persisting in the habit.

Califano cited evidence showing for the first time that more young women are smoking than young men.

He declared as "a tragedy" figures showing that smoking among older teen-age girls is going up and said if he could reach them, his message would be:

"Please, if you want someday to have a healthy baby, don't smoke."

He termed as "frightening evidence" a surgeon general's 1976 report showing smoking during pregnancy can do "significant harm" to the unborn or newly born.

He said the experts predict that in four years lung cancer will overtake breast cancer as the leading cancer killer among women, "largely due to smoking."

"Today, there are 17 million girls age 12 to 18 who smoke, as opposed to 1.6 million boys," he said.

Breakthrough for fibrosis researchers

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — In what it called a major breakthrough in efforts to control the usually fatal disease cystic fibrosis, a Canadian research team said Thursday it found a "slimy sac" protects the bacteria against antibiotics.

The University of Calgary microbiological team said its finding was an important discovery in the fight to conquer cystic fibrosis, a disease that often strikes children and is usually fatal.

Dr. William Costerton said his four-member research team had discovered that cystic fibrosis bacteria protects itself by generating a "slimy package or sac" that prevents penetration by antibiotics.

"It's a horrible slimy mess," said Costerton.

UMW not blamed for shooting

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Bill Lamb, shot twice while en route to Washington to fight for his seat on the United Mine Workers Union Executive Board, said from hiding Thursday that he did not think the UMW was responsible for the shooting.

Lamb has been locked in a bitter struggle with UMW President Arnold Miller for a seat on the Executive Board to which he was elected twice. Miller has accused Lamb of filing faulty expense accounts.

"I can't honestly point a finger at the union," Lamb told UPI in a telephone interview from his hiding place. "Deep down I don't think it was the union or Mr. Miller. I don't think that man is vicious. He's not too smart, but not vicious enough to get involved in something like that."

"I figured it really could be someone who wants to get the union labeled for it. Anything that happens to me means they automatically point the finger at Miller."

Spot-checks for aliens announced

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Immigration and Naturalization Service, cracking down on tourists who stay in the United States illegally, Thursday announced immediate spot-checks to see who is most likely to overstay a visit.

INS Commissioner Leonel J. Castillo announced the program, which follows a similar crackdown on foreign students who do not leave the country.

Castillo said INS each month will select 1,200 names at random from a computer list of persons due to leave the country whose departures have not been verified.

Union post for woman

CHICAGO (UPI) — Alice Peurala, a 26-year veteran of U.S. Steel Corp.'s South Works, has been elected president of United Steelworkers of America Local 65 — apparently the first woman to head a local unit in the basic steel industry.

Election results announced early Thursday showed Ms. Peurala, 51, won a three-way race, finishing 37 votes ahead of runner-up Donald Stazak. Ms. Peurala got 1,205 votes to Stazak's 1,168. Incumbent local President John Chico finished third at 1,077.

IRS plan attacked by Jews

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Proposed Internal Revenue Service rules aimed at ending racial discrimination in private and religious schools are inadequate and would distort the role of the schools in their religious communities, a group of Jewish organizations said Thursday.

While stressing their opposition to racial discrimination, the Jewish groups said in a letter to the IRS that religious schools should be able to limit their enrollment to members of their own religious faith even if it results in an all-white school.

"We support the proposition that educational institutions enjoying tax exemption should not be permitted to engage in racial discrimination," said Nathan Derbowitz of the American Jewish Congress.

"But where a racially disproportionate student body results merely from a racial imbalance among the adherents of that faith and not from any racial bias intrinsic to the religion itself, it is clear that there can be no legal impediment to the grant of tax exemption."

Firms say regulations will increase car prices

By IRAR ALLEN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The auto industry, in a chorus of complaint against federal regulations, told Congress Thursday that safety, fuel economy and clean air requirements will add $1,000 or more to the cost of new cars in the mid-1980s.

But government officials replied there will be a negligible effect on industry profits or the economy as a whole, and that costs will be more than offset by savings in lives and oil imports.

The disagreement came at a hearing of the Senate subcommittee on economic stabilization called by Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich.

Representatives of General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motors were unanimous in their separate testimony that the required fuel economy improvements, rising to 27.5 miles per gallon by 1985, are too severe in the first years, potentially costing $10 billion to the economy and resulting in 1 percent more unemployment.

They said the fleet average should increase 1.5 mpg per year rather than 2-mpg from 1980 through 1983 and 1-mpg in 1984 and 1985.

"Taken together, automotive regulations create dangers for manufacturers, consumers and the economy as a whole," testified Fred Secrest, executive vice president of Ford. He said easing the scale of compliance with fuel economy standards could save $150 on the price of a car between 1981 and 1985.

Each company offered estimates on the cost per car of various regulations and, allowing for different yardsticks, the consensus was that regulation will add at least $1,000 to the cost of a new car by the mid-1980s.

But Deputy Energy Secretary John O'Leary said in return for spending between $180 and $470 per car for better fuel economy on 1985 cars, "automobile users can expect to save over 1,100 gallons of motor fuel over the average 10 years of vehicle life" at a saving of between $30 and $70.

Texaco chastised for selling leaded gas as unleaded

By MICHAEL J. CONLON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the first case of its kind, the Environmental Protection Agency Thursday issued civil complaints against Texaco Inc., a distributor and 11 service stations for allegedly selling leaded gasoline as unleaded.

The agency asked for $159,000 in civil penalties from the parties involved. In what it called the "most serious instance of fuel switching ever prosecuted by EPA."
Named in the complaints are Texaco Inc., Houston; Galleria Oil Co., San Leandro, Calif.; and 11 Texaco stations in Alameda County, Calif. Leaded gasoline, when used in cars that require unleaded fuel, damages and ultimately ruins the catalytic converter, a pollution control device used to break down exhaust elements harmful to human health. The agency has estimated that as many as 10 percent of the cars that should be using unleaded gas are actually running on leaded fuel, in part because of the higher prices of unleaded.

"However, today's action is the first major case where motorists who were willing to pay the higher price of unleaded were actually being sold leaded," it said. "EPA is continuing its investigation into the matter to determine the scope of the activity as well as the motivation."

An EPA spokesman said profit, not shortage, was the apparent motive for the alleged fraud, since leaded gasoline is cheaper and more money can be made if it is sold for unleaded prices.

He said $98,000 of the civil penalties were against Texaco, $33,000 against the distributor and from $1,000 to $3,000 each against the individual stations.

Key Airlines resumes Twin Falls service

By BONNIE BAIRD-JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Key Airlines will be back in service at the Twin Falls City-County airport Monday but under new ownership.

Jim Burr, president of Rocky Mountain Helicopters, announced purchase of the commuter airline from Johns-Mansville Sales Corp. earlier this month. The corporation had previously announced Key Airlines would discontinue its passenger plane business.

Burr said the new service between Twin Falls, Boise, Salt Lake City and Sun Valley is contingent on the Civil Aeronautics Board registration and Federal Aviation Agency certification.

Last year Key Airlines discontinued stops in Twin Falls, initiating non-stop flights between Salt Lake City and Boise in December.

Beginning Monday, Key returns to Twin Falls with two arrivals and two departures daily Monday through Friday.

John Barlow of Key's Salt Lake City office said there will be round-trip flights between Twin Falls and Boise and between Salt Lake City and Twin Falls, giving area flight customers connections from those two cities with major airlines to the east, west and southwest.

A flight will arrive in Twin Falls at 8:10 a.m. from Boise each week day and depart for Salt Lake City at 8:20 a.m. Barlow said this will give residents of Magic Valley an opportunity to spend a day doing business in Salt Lake City and return to Twin Falls on the evening flight arriving here at 7:30 p.m.

In the evening, passengers in Twin Falls may board Key Airlines' 45-passenger Convair at 6:15 p.m. arriving in Boise at 6:55 p.m. Barlow said this flight will also make good connections with major airlines flying out of Boise.

Sun Valley service includes flights from Boise at 12:30 p.m. week days, 5:45 p.m. Saturdays and 8 p.m. on Fridays. Flights from Salt Lake City will arrive in Sun Valley at 7:45 p.m. daily. Departures include flights to Boise at 3:15 p.m. daily and to Salt Lake City at 1 p.m. week days and 9 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Prices will be about the same as those charged by Hughes Airwest for the same distances, Barlow said.

Burr said the inauguration of scheduled service to Jackson, Wyo., is planned for June 15 and daily round-trip flights to Jackson will originate in Boise, Salt Lake City and Sun Valley.

Burr said Key has been the primary carrier into Sun Valley from Boise and Salt Lake City for the past 15 years. He said he sees the airline as a vital link in the air transportation system serving this region. With recent passage of the Airline Deregulation Act, commuter airlines are becoming increasingly essential to provide needed air services to communities outside of major transportation centers, he said.

The 45-passenger Convair equipment flying the Key schedules replaces previous 19-passenger planes Key used to serve the southern Idaho area. The planes are pressurized, air conditioned, aircraft, carrying a complement of three crew members, pilot, co-pilot and flight attendant and offering in-flight services such as food and beverages except on flights such as Twin Falls to Boise which takes about 40 minutes.

Burr said Rocky Mountain Helicopters is headquartered in Provo, Utah, where it began operations in 1969. It is now the world's largest helicopter operation with branches in Alaska, North and South America.

Unlike the previous owners of Key, Barlow said, Rocky Mountain Helicopters is an aviation-oriented business. Key will continue to remain active in the charter market with air operations service to five Salt Lake City hospitals.

Burr said his firm hopes to continue Key services into the future and to expand as traffic demands in the Intermountain region dictate.

Buhl High School Principal Dale Thornsberry with leaky window of new building

Buhl trustees hold payment on school

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer

BUHL — The Buhl School Board Tuesday night voiced its displeasure with Neilson & Co., the Twin Falls contracting firm that built Buhl Senior High School.

Robert Beer, Neilson's site superintendent for the high school, asked the board to approve an application for final payment for the job, but the board voted not to sign the document until it can be sure faulty construction will be repaired by Neilson and its subcontractors.

High school principal Dale Thornsberry listed necessary drainage improvements, cracked floor tile, leaking windows, cracked sidewalks and 20 hinge doors which have split at the hinge screws as "warranty items" that must be repaired or replaced by Aug. 1, according to the school district's contract with Neilson & Co.

Beer promised the repairs would be made, adding he would remove several of the doors later this week and send them to the manufacturer, Weyerhaeuser Co., to determine whether the splits are due to faulty construction or an installation error.

"I don't care whose warranty it is, Neilson & Co. is responsible for it," said Beer.

"But if the job's not complete, why pay out money?" said board member George Atkins. "I'll hire a guy to thresh 20 acres, I don't want one acre left; I want 20 acres threshed."

"The building is complete," Beer replied. "You just have some faulty material that needs to be corrected."

"But it's not completed" to our satisfaction," said board member Richard Morris. "I'm like George; I'm a old farmer, I guess I just don't like to pay for something until I'm satisfied."

Board chairman Howard Hopkins said he favored withholding payment until the school district receives a firm commitment from Neilson & Co. to fix all warranty items by a definite date.

Beer then told Hopkins the contract required the board to pay for the building now instead of holding out for the repairs.

"I think what the board has decided to do," Hopkins responded. "Legal or not, that's what the board decided to do, is that what you're telling me?" Beer asked.

Hopkins said he interpreted the contract differently.

Other action included a discussion of plans to sell the city block of land where the old F.H. Buhl Junior High stood. The school was dismantled last fall and most of the materials were auctioned off. Robert Pratt, Buhl superintendent of schools, told the board the last of the rubble will be removed by May 15.

Brent Martens, attorney for the district, told the board Idaho law requires the district to advertise the land and sell it by either calling for sealed bids or scheduling a public auction. And the selling price must be no lower than the appraised value, which was $80,000 last fall. However, the requirements are waived if the land is sold to certain governmental bodies, Martens added.

Everett Martin, chairman of the Buhl Housing Authority, then rose to tell the board his non-profit corporation would like the land. The BHA would use it for a senior citizen housing project, he said.

Martens said he thought the board would have to treat the BHA like a private developer, even though it has ties with the city government and the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"I still can't help but feel like we are an agency you could deal with without a bid," said Martin.

Martens said he would doublecheck the matter with the state Attorney General's office.

City clarifies stop sign law

By BONNIE BAIRD-JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — City Attorney Charles Brumbach has prepared a new ordinance for Twin Falls and it covers the simple procedure of stopping at a stop sign.

Brumbach said when the state Legislature adopted a statute in 1977 covering stop sign procedure, there was apparently a little two-letter word omitted.

"When this happens about all we can do is anticipate what the intent of the law is and adopt an ordinance clarifying it," Brumbach said.

The new Twin Falls ordinance includes the word "or," which the state law does not include.

The law as passed in 1977 made no major change in the previous law, Brumbach said, except for the apparent error. The state law specified a motorist, on approaching a stop sign, must come to a stop "and yield right of way to a vehicle in the intersection approaching from either direction."

Brumbach said when you think about this, it could mean yielding only to a vehicle already in the intersection.

"By the time you yield to a car in the intersection it's already out of the way, but the car approaching the intersection wipes you out," Brumbach said.

By adopting an ordinance that states the motorist must stop at the stop sign and yield to vehicles in the intersection "or" approaching from either direction, the city attorney believes the intent of the law is carried out at least in Twin Falls.

Power line pathway sought on county rancher's land

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Power Co. has filed a condemnation suit in 5th District Court here in an attempt to gain right of way through a Twin Falls County ranch.

Idaho Power wants the right of way to construct a power line from the Hunt substation to the Idaho-Nevada state line near Jackpot.

Named as defendants in the suit are W. T. Williams Inc., the State of Idaho, through the Department of Public Lands, and John Hamilton Life Insurance Co.

The complaint states the power company needs a strip of land 70 feet wide from the substation near Eden to Nevada for a transmission line.

The new Idaho-Nevada Power-proposed line, Idaho Power proposes joining the Sierra Pacific Power Co. to continue construction through Reno. The line will be available for wheeling and interchange of power to and from Sierra-Pacific and Idaho Power.

Idaho Power and Sierra Pacific are jointly constructing a coal-fired power plant in Nevada.

In the 5th District Court complaint, Idaho Power attorneys, Tom Neilson of Twin Falls and Michael White of Boise, point out their client has attempted to purchase the land necessary for the line and support towers, but offers have been rejected.

They also ask the court to condemn the property including areas of the Williams ranch and state land so the line, already approved by the Public Utilities Commission, can be built. The plaintiffs ask the court to order that to be paid by the power company for the right of way.

The complaint explains the line will be supported by aluminum towers about 1,200 feet apart and ranging from 50 to 120 feet high.

Sheriffs oppose jail study

JEROME — Some 15 Magic Valley sheriffs and county commissioners Thursday rejected another year's study of state jail standards at a cost of $25,000.

Jerome County Sheriff Eliza Hall said a majority of the officials, meeting in the Jerome County Courthouse, opposed a proposal by Idaho Sheriff's Association officials to have standards evaluated for a second year.

He said they turned down the idea, which is being presented at four similar gatherings across the state, because the project was originally accepted on the basis that it would take only a year to complete, at a cost of $49,700.

Whether the extension will be granted will be decided by ISA members at their annual meeting in Pocatello this June, Hall said.

Presenting the proposal in Jerome were ISA President Stan Jensen and board member Jim Neddleton.

Woman arrested for three accidents

TWIN FALLS — City police have charged a Twin Falls woman with driving while intoxicated and leaving the scene of an accident after her vehicle was involved in three separate accidents Wednesday night.

Dorothy Mae Presnell, 54, was arrested by city police after they had investigated accidents on Kimberly Road, Locust Street and Addison Avenue East.

The first call involved a parked vehicle in the 1500 block of Kimberly Road. Witnesses told police a vehicle collided with the rear of a parked truck and trailer and then the driver left the scene.

The next report involved an accident in the 500 block of Locust Street, and officers said again a parked vehicle was damaged. The truck trailer in the first accident was leased by Roy Stone Transfer Co. and the second, a 1969 pickup truck, was owned by the driver of the Twin Falls. In the third accident, police said, the vehicle rounded the corner of Locust Street and Addison Avenue and collided with a metal sign post. The driver swung wide while turning right and caught the sign, then backed up and left the Mrs.

Officers said Mrs. Presnell suffered minor injuries when the car she was driving struck the parked truck and trailer. She was not hospitalized.

Idaho Supreme Court upholds Lopez verdict

RUBERT — The Supreme Court has upheld a 5th Judicial District Court jury verdict and denied the appeal of Erasmo Valencia Lopez who was convicted of assault with intent to murder.

The appeal was in a case heard by Judge Sherman Bellwood. Lopez appealed his conviction alleging the trial court had erred in four respects including failing to separate witnesses who had testified and those who had not; failing to instruct jurors as to lesser included offenses, refusing to grant a mistrial and giving erroneous jury instructions.

In the opinion written by Justice Charles R. Donaldson, the Supreme Court said the trial court, at best, only had a discretionary duty to separate witnesses and that Lopez had shown no abuse of discretion in the steps taken by the trial court.

The high court also ruled Lopez had objected to none of the jury instructions and expressly waived an instruction as to a lesser included offense, and said the assignments of error relating to these areas would not be considered on appeal.

The court also held there was substantial evidence indicative of Lopez' guilt.

Helmet aid save motorcyclist injured in head-on collision

TWIN FALLS — Robert Leroy Helms, 28, of Twin Falls, was in surgery Thursday night after surviving a car and motorcycle accident.

City police said he survived because of a safety helmet and emergency medical care by Twin Falls Police Officer Lee Brown.

Helms was injured about 5:15 p.m. near the intersection of Washington Street South and 5th Avenue West. Officer Brown, who investigated, said the cycle was traveling north on Washington Street and a car driven by Barbara Taylor Bostwick was traveling south on the same street.

The officer said M. Bostwick turned left onto 5th Avenue West into the path of the approaching cycle and they collided head-on.

Brown said the impact threw Helms into the windshield of the vehicle and had he not been wearing a helmet, he probably would have suffered fatal head injuries. Helms was then thrown over the top of the car and came to rest beside the left rear fender of the car.

Whose Officer Brown arrived at the scene, he said, the man had a hole in his chest and compound fractures of the upper and lower right leg and left wrist.

Sgt. James Mildon, of the traffic division, said other officers assisting at the scene told him Brown placed his hand over Bostwick's eyes to keep her from being pulled in through the wound and then closed the wound with tape bandaging before Helms was taken to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital by ambulance.

Mrs. Bostwick was treated for minor injuries and was cited for driving while intoxicated and failure to maintain insurance.

Andrus opposed on USFS transfer

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus found himself Thursday up against friendly but firm opposition to his proposal to place the U.S. Forest Service under his control.

The Forest Service currently falls under the jurisdiction of the Agricultural Department, but Andrus, with President Carter's blessing, is trying to switch that control to Interior where they feel it belongs.

Andrus assured the skeptics as best he could that the plan is designed to produce more timber, not less. He said in order to achieve that end, there needs to be a consensus on a general policy for management.

His conclusion came at a general call for a nationwide land-use plan for all public lands under one roof. He said this would result in a more efficient and effective use of those public resources.

However, industry spokesmen, supported by Sen. Henry Jackson and Rep. Tom Foley, both D-Wash., and other "Forest Northwest" congressional delegates, are opposed to the Carter-Andrus plan.

To them it is a switch in power from a known quantity to an unknown one and therefore suspect.

It would also involve a transfer in power which congressmen, like Foley, who is House Agriculture chairman, feel would diminish their role in the decision-making process.

Phil Batt doubts he will run again

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Phil Batt says he will not run for lieutenant governor again, although he is not precluding it.

Batt said, "I really wouldn't close the door, but I'm not planning it."

Batt, a Republican serving across the hall from Democratic Gov. John V. Evans, has expressed dissatisfaction with his job because he does not have enough to say in the operation of state government.

Housing loan eligibility extended

MAGIC VALLEY — The Idaho Housing Agency has made it easier to qualify for a lower home mortgage under its loan subsidy program.

A single person who wants to buy a home may be eligible for a special IEA-subsidized home loan at an interest rate 1/2 to 2 percent lower than current bank rates.

Filer negotiator chosen

FILER — Trustee Everett Andrews was elected to serve as negotiator with the teachers this year for School District 413 at a special meeting at the school.

Applicants were interviewed for the positions for music teacher at the Filer Elementary School and Jean Davis was offered a contract to teach English at the elementary school. Maria Andreason was offered a contract to teach at the Hollister Elementary School.

Another special meeting has been set for 8:30 p.m. April 30 to interview more applicants for positions in the district, according to Ray Baker, superintendent.

Twin Falls dealer holds open house to demonstrate solar heat system

TWIN FALLS — Bob Ralphs of Twin Falls, a solar heating franchise dealer, will open his own solar home to the public Saturday and Sunday afternoon.

Ralphs, who owns the Magic Valley franchise for Solar Systems of Boise, has completed installation of a solar space heat and hot water system in his home.

Ralphs says the system will provide 80 percent of his heating needs and will heat water to 90 degrees. For the other 20 percent of heat, and for washing clothes and dishes, Ralphs uses a back-up system run on traditional fuel.

The system has a 10-day storage capacity and heats hot water the year around, Ralphs said. In the summer the heat system converts to a cooling system by drawing in outside air at night.

Ralphs said installing solar systems now costs about $5 for every square foot of floor space. But the cost varies depending on insulation and how much storage is desired.

Installation consists of putting in solar panels and modifying the heating ducts. Storage facilities can be added later.

Although no operating expense estimates are available, Ralphs said a large home in Boise was spending about $3 a month to run a solar system.

Ralphs' own home has 1,460 square feet of floor space, plus a full basement. The temperature in the house is 80 degrees.

The operating cost consists of back-up heat and electricity to run fans which distribute the heat through the house.

Soon he hopes to start selling and installing solar systems in the Magic Valley. He said home systems will cost about $4,000 to $4,500 without storage, and smaller, freestanding units for barns, greenhouses and swimming pools cost $2,300 without and $4,000 to 5,000 with storage.

Installation of solar heat makes homeowners eligible for up to $2,200 in tax exemption, and $400 state exemptions over four years.

A real estate agent for 12 years, Ralphs also owns the Western Motel on Kimberly Road. He bought the solar franchise a year ago after seeing a solar display in Twin Falls.

He has spent the year getting his own home converted to solar, and is now ready to start outfitting other homes. He plans to install separate heat and water systems in the motel this summer.

Hawks, 76ers hold on in NBA playoffs

By United Press International
Philadelphia and Atlanta both carried over from their respective NBA conference semifinals Thursday night.

The crippled Hawks, all but dead four days ago when they fell behind 3-1 in their series with Washington, routed the Bullets 104-86 to force a seventh and deciding game Sunday.

And the 76ers, crippled by a reputation for not winning the big ones, thrashed San Antonio 120-97 to return the series to Philadelphia for Game 6.

In other NBA playoff series, Seattle has defeated Los Angeles four games to one and Phoenix leads Kansas City

3-1 with the next game scheduled for Phoenix Friday.

The Hawks, led by John Drew, who was playing on an inflamed foot, and Eddie Johnson, who had an injured knee, moved into the lead in the opening minutes and never trailed again. The Bullets tied the game a couple of times before the Hawks went to front to stay midway through the second period.

With Drew and Johnson both scoring 22 points and Dan Roundfield, playing with a bruised shoulder, contributing 16, the Hawks led by 12 points at the end of the third period. The Bullets never came within 10 points again.

points and Elvin Hayes, their leading scorer with 24 points, was unable to carry the Bullets alone.

The victory was the first for the Hawks on their homecourt in the series. The Bullets won two earlier games. But the Hawks held a 2-1 edge over the Bullets at Louisville.

Julius Erving struck for 16 points in the third quarter to help sink the cold-shooting Spurs.

The Spurs, who made 50 percent of their shots in the first four games, hit only 21 percent in the first quarter and could not make a basket during the opening 4:41.

Philadelphia scored the first 12 points and San Antonio could seldom come closer than that as George Gervin, the NBA's leading scorer the past two seasons, missed all seven shots he took in the first half and finished with only 13 points.

Erving, who had scored 39 points in Philadelphia's only other win of the series, finished with 32. Maurice Cheeks added 18, Steve Mix 21 and Bobby Jones 16. James Silas led the Spurs with 19 points and Larry Kenon had 16.

The San Antonio crowd, which had come to the HemisFair Arena hoping for a playoff-clinching win, began booing late in the third quarter and had virtually emptied the arena midway through the final period.

Green Bay trades Buchanan

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — The Green Bay Packers Thursday traded veteran cornerback Willie Buchanan to the San Diego Chargers for two draft choices — a seventh round pick in next week's draft and a first round pick in 1980.

Buchanan, a starter with Green Bay since his rookie season in 1972, became a free agent after the 1977 season. But he failed to sign with any club by April 1 and became Green Bay property again.

Networks bid on Olympics

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The three major networks and two smaller groups have made $500,000 deposits to reserve the right to bid for the U.S. television rights to the 1984 summer Olympics, producer David Wolper announced Thursday.

He said the ABC, CBS and NBC networks have been joined in the preliminary bidding by Norman Lear's Tandem Productions and by the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network, a Connecticut-based subsidiary of the Getty Oil Co.

"Six other parties are considering posting good faith money to enter into negotiations before the May 1 deadline," he added.

Wolper, chairman of the television advisory committee of the local Olympic Organizing Committee, said each network or group will be asked to place another $250,000 on deposit when formal negotiations are opened, probably at the end of the bidding.

The deposit of the successful bidder will be applied to the purchase price, he said, while the other deposits will be returned without interest.

ABC televised the 1976 summer Olympics in Montreal and also has the rights to next year's winter Olympics in Lake Placid, N.Y., but NBC will televise the 1980 summer Olympics in Moscow.

Germans top U.S. in hockey

MOSCOW (UPI) — West Germany, riding high on four goals by sharp-shooter Marcus Kuhl, snapped a 2-2 tie with three goals in the third period Thursday night to beat a defeated United States team 5-2 and take sixth place in the World Ice Hockey Championships.

Finland defeated Poland 4-2 on goals by Reijo Ruotsalainen, Juhani Tamminen, Jukka Porvari and Antero Lehtonen, clinching the Fins fifth place in the same group as the Soviet Union and Canada at next February's Olympics in Lake Placid, N.Y.

With the score 4-2 in their favor, the West German's territorial advantage, the Germans went ahead for good when Kuhl scored 22 seconds into the third period. Kuhl scored again at 17:07 on a rebound to put the game beyond the United States' reach with the West Germans scoring their fifth goal of the game into an empty net in the final seconds.

The defeat left the United States in seventh place while West Germany made it into sixth place.

Villanova Penn Relays favorite

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Villanova, loaded again in an attempt to successfully defend titles in five events, goes for its 14th consecutive championship in the distance medley relay Friday in the first day of the 80th annual Penn Relays.

The Wildcats, the 1979 NCAA indoor champions, won the 6,000-meter, 3,200-meter, 1,600-meter and sprint medley relays in addition to the distance medley last year, the fourth time in the history of the carnival they had won all five races in which they were entered.

Although Mark Belger is gone from last year's title teams, Villanova will look to junior Don Paige to lead them in three of the races.

Paige, an NCAA champion and the world recordholder in the 1,000-yard run indoors, will run the 1,200-meter leg in Friday's distance medley. He will compete in two races Saturday, probably the 6,000-meter and 3,200-meter relays.

U.S. women in volleyball win

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The United States women's volleyball team swept past the Bahamas in straight sets Thursday in the fourth round of the Sixth North, Central American and Caribbean Volleyball Championships in Havana, the Cuban news service Prensa Latina reported.

In their fourth consecutive victory, the U.S. women won by scores of 15-0, 15-3 and 15-0 in just 27 minutes.

The victory tied the U.S. women's team with Cuba for first place with eight points.

The defeat of the women's and men's categories will qualify for the Moscow Olympics. Should Cuba's women's squad win the tournament, the second-place team would enter the Moscow Olympics. The Cuban women have already qualified as a result of winning the recent world championships.

The U.S. women are still to meet Cuba and Haiti. Their previous victories in the tournament have come against Mexico, Guatemala and the Dominican Republic.

Canadiens, Rangers post NHL wins

By United Press International
One familiar pattern and one surprise emerged Thursday night when both Stanley Cup playoff semifinal series began.

In Montreal, the Canadiens worked their ancient trick of using new lines when Pierre Larouche scored to key a 4-2 demolition over the Boston Bruins.

Meanwhile, in Ontario, N.Y., the Rangers stunned the Islanders 4-1 to gain the home-ice advantage in New York's metropolitan series.

Larouche broke a 2-2 tie at 12:17 of the third period, Montreal take the opening game. It was the 12th straight loss in Montreal for the Bruins, who haven't won in the Forum since Oct. 30, 1976.

Larouche, who scored only nine goals during the regular season, took a pass from Doug Risebrough and beat Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers with a hard shot.

Baseball roundup

Brewers sweep, snap skid

By United Press International
The Milwaukee Brewers had lost five in a row and Manager George Bamberger was looking to shake the habit.

But Bamberger got more than he anticipated Thursday when the Brewers swept a double-header from the Detroit Tigers 5-1 and 7-5.

Gorman Thomas blasted solo homers in each game and hot-hitting Cecil Cooper and Ben Oglivie added homers in the first game to move Milwaukee over the .500 mark.

In the first game, Charlie Moore's two-run seventh-inning single gave the Brewers a 3-1 lead and Cooper and Oglivie blasted solo homers in the eighth to preserve the victory for Jim Stalon, 1-1, who scattered seven hits.

Robin Yount knocked in four runs in the ninth to help Reggie Cleveland, 1-2, pick up the decision. Cleveland pitched the final 3-1/3 innings in relief of starter Jerry Augustine.

Thomas staked the Brewers to a 1-0 lead in the third inning with his third homer of the season. After the Tigers took a 3-1 lead in the sixth inning, Milwaukee chased loser Steve Baker, 1-2, in the bottom half of the inning. Oglivie's single, Sal Bando walked and with two outs pinch hitter Larry Hise reached first on an infield single to load the bases. Yount then drove in all three runners with a double to the right-centerfield wall, putting the Brewers in front 4-3.

Yount doubled home another run and Thomas singled in a pair in the eighth inning. Lynn Jones and John Wockenutt belted solo homers for Detroit.

In other American League games, Kansas City beat Cleveland 5-4 and the New York-Oakland game was rained out.

Will Wilson booted home from third base on a wild pitch by Sid Monge with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to give the Kansas City their fourth straight triumph.

Guy Lafleur, who also had two assists, scored a fluke goal at 3:44 to tie the score 2-2. Lafleur, in the corner of the rink, passed the puck in front of the net. It hit Boston defender Mike Milbury and deflected through Cheevers' pads.

Jacques Lemaire opened the scoring at 13:52 of the first period with a shot from in front of the net. Boston's Jean Ratelle tied the score 1-1 at 3:37 of the middle session with a power-play goal with Risebrough in the penalty box.

Boston went ahead 2-1 at 5:34 of the same period when Don Marcotte slapped a shot past Montreal goalie Ken Dryden.

American Hockey League refugee Bobby Sheehan scored one second-period goal and set up another in leading the Rangers.

The Rangers, who dominated every aspect of the game, fell behind 1-0 at 10:41 of the first period on a goal by regular-season scoring champion Bryan Trottler.

Goals by Don Murdoch and Ed Johnstone — the fifth of the playoffs for each — within a 2:56 span later in the period put the Rangers ahead to stay.

With each team playing one man short, Sheehan, a 30-year-old veteran recalled from New Haven of the AHL, during the quarterfinals, started a 3-on-2 rush with a fine pass to Pat Hickey. Hickey then fed Ron Duguay, who sent a rising slapshot past Resch at 9:43 of the second period.

Less than seven minutes later, Pierre Plante stripped Mike Bosny of the puck in the left corner and threw it to Sheehan in front. The swift center placed an eight-footer between Resch's pads at 16:35.

All-Star tickets now being sold

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Seattle Mariners have announced they will begin accepting mail orders May 1 for tickets to the 50th All-Star League baseball game to be played in the Kingdomdome July 17.

The established procedure provides for a limit of two tickets for each order, one order per person, and all orders for the 910 reserved seats will be filled on a "first-come, first-served" basis. Also, orders postmarked before May 1 will be rejected. Only orders postmarked May 1 and after will be filled, a club spokesman said.

After the supply of 910 seats is exhausted, orders will be filled with reserved general admission tickets at $7 per seat and the $3 per seat difference will be refunded.

A $2 handling fee will be charged for each order and the order must include a business-sized, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Personal checks won't be accepted. Each order must be paid for with a bank money order.

The mail order address: Seattle Mariners Baseball LLCUB, P.O. Box 4004, Seattle, Washington 98104.

Al Ralph trophy Scholes honored by CSI boosters

By LARRY HOYER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Dr. Tim Scholes, team physician, past booster president and annually one of the top season ticket salesman, was honored with the Al Ralph trophy at the CSI awards banquet Thursday night.

Dr. Scholes, who has been the team doctor for the Eagles in all but two years of the athletic program at CSI, was singled out for his many years of dedication to CSI sports.

The award, presented by President Jim Beal, had full impact on Dr. Scholes who told the crowd of about 275 "the Eagle boosters have always been one of the bigger parts of my life. I love the Eagles. I appreciate this — and you can't know how much."

The other highlights of the night came when the teams' and individual players from CSI were honored.

Coach Jan Mittleider introduced her women's volleyball team and presented special awards to three. Outstanding fresh went to Colleen Smith, outstanding sophomore to Tammy Gardner and inspirational to Tammy Krumm.

Women's basketball Coach Lloyd Hardesty awarded that team's inspirational award to Sherry Ward and the MVP to Polly Smith.

Track Coach Dick Kleinok and baseball mentor Jim Walker introduced their teams but noted the individual awards would be withheld pending completion of their seasons.

Baseball Coach Mike Mitchell said his 28-4 Eagles were "as fine a team as I have coached." He presented a "hardcore" award to Curtis Rayford, sophomore guard who was injured in the first game of the season and shelved for the year. Kipp Bedard won the defensive player award and Orlando Bryant was named most Improved. Leading scorer David Thirill was named the outstanding freshman and Jerry Williams won the team MVP for the second straight year.

The Vern Riddle trophy, presented to the most inspirational player, went to sophomore point guard Richard Prospero.

Jan Beal introduced the cheerleaders and presented cash with an individual gift.

The school boosters and players expressed their thanks to Dick and Sue Burwell, owners of Coors of Magie Valley, for underwriting the banquet.

Bill Blair, University of Colorado basketball coach, reminded the players that 98.5 percent of all college players never play professional basketball and preparation for life after athletics should be their major concern.

"Attitude," he said, "among college and professional players seems to become more important than ability." Blair noted that, drop in attitude, is recognizable in professional sports as competitiveness wanes while salaries increase. He reminded the players, they have a "great responsibility" to their fans, great and small. He noted "one word from you" can make a lot of difference and he suggested "thank you" and other courteous remarks as the important ones.

"A little gratitude goes a long way," he told the athletes. "We could use more of that in pro and college sports and as we grow older. No matter your ability, your athletic career has to end sometime and you must be in a position to progress."

Crucial Ricks series begins with Rexburg double-header

By RANDY FREY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Ricks College has some hitters and some pretty good pitchers, but that's not what is worrying College of Southern Idaho baseball coach Jim Walker as his team heads to Rexburg for an important four games.

Track Coach Jim Walker and baseball mentor Jim Walker introduced their teams but noted the individual awards would be withheld pending completion of their seasons.

"You can't be sure they are all fired up," said Walker.

"You can't be sure they are all fired up," said Walker.

"You can't be sure they are all fired up," said Walker.

with double-headers May 11 and 12.

"These are important games," said Walker, whose team has already assured itself a berth in the regional playoffs by winning a series with Treasure Valley Community College.

The Ricks series is important in determining who will host the tournament, something Walker wants very much to do.

The Golden Eagles have been hitting the ball well in recent weeks, and Walker said CSI will have to score plenty of runs to be successful in Rexburg.

"We are really hurting in the pitching department," he said.

"(Darryl) Banks is still sick although he will pitch. He has dropped 15 pounds in the last two weeks, and (Kevin) Danner is sick too."

Walker will go with Lee Cline and Rich Kologig in today's twin bill, he said.

He said he will wait as long as he can before bringing in relief help.

"Our hitters have been keeping us in the games lately," Walker said. "They will score four runs and we will come back with six. We have got to get a little better pitching."

But Walker will not deny he likes that offense, and he said he really hopes his Eagles can put on a display this weekend.

"I don't want to squeak by, I want to win big," he said Thursday while watching his team pound the ball in practice. "I would like to get a five-inning, 10-run job in the opener and take a little wind out of their sail. Then they will come back for the second game saying, 'hey, this is just like last year.'"

Walker explained that if a team is behind by 10 or more runs after five innings, the game is over at that point.

Conner early PGA leader

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Frank Conner, who turned in a terrific racquet for a set of golf clubs in college, shot a 67 to take a one-shot lead over three players Thursday in the first round of the $250,000 Greater New Orleans Open.

Veteran Jim Colbert and longshots Doug Tewell and Curtis Strange finished at 68 on the 7,000-yard course at the Lakeview Country Club.

Conner, who missed 118 cut in his last four tournaments, birdied five of his first six holes en route to an eight-birdie, one-bogey round.

The three players tied for second were followed by Phil Hancock and Allen Miller at 69, two shots off the pace. Lee Trevino, who holds the tournament record of 21 under par for 72 holes, led a bunch of six players at 68.

Defending champion Lon Hinkle and 15 others were tied at 69. Tournament favorite Tom Watson posted a mediocre 71 on the sunny, but windy day.

Conner lost his chance to tie the course record 64 when he hit his drive into the water on the 16th hole for his only bogey.

"Someone told me I should have been 13 under after 12 holes," Conner said. "Today was one of those days where everything goes perfect. I've shot lower, but it's the best round of golf I've ever played."

Conner's previous best round of the year was an opening 68 at the Tucson Open in February. His best finish was a tie for 13th in the Hawaiian Open.

Conner played in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships at Forest Hills as a student at Trinity University.

McEnroe, Connors in semis

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Jimmy Connors survived a scare from Roscoe Tanner and top-seed Bjorn Borg blazed past Tim Gullikson in quarterfinal action Thursday in the Alan King-Caessars Palace $250,000 Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Connors, the No. 2 seed in the tournament, shook off the effects of a first-set tie-breaker loss, before moving to a 6-7, 6-3, 6-4 win over Tanner, the tournament's fifth-seeded player. Borg started out strong for the first time in the tournament and knocked off Gullikson, 6-2, 6-3.

In the first quarter-final match, No. 3 seed John McEnroe had little trouble disposing of South Africa's John Kriek, 6-3, 6-3.

In the final match Thursday, Italy's Adriano Panatta played Gene Mayer.

Connors faces McEnroe in a semi-final match Friday with the winner of the Panatta-Mayer match playing Borg in the other semi-final.

The finals will be Saturday.

Connors broke Tanner to go ahead 4-3 in the first set but Tanner, using a powerful fast serve, held the rest of the set.

Connors broke Connors in the 10th game. With the set score tied 6-6, Tanner easily won the 12-point tiebreaker, 7-1, taking the final point on a service winner.

Red Sox will benefit from Gossage injury

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — The thumb injury suffered by reliever Rich Gossage could put the Boston Red Sox on an equal basis with the New York Yankees, says an ex-teammate of Gossage.

Former Red Sox second baseman Mike Andrews, who played with Gossage on the Chicago White Sox in 1971, favors the Yankees to win the East Division title but thinks Boston's chances improve with Gossage out.

"It's the number one blessing you can get to equalize the Yankees and Red Sox," he said. "The Yankees Gossage thrives on work. He has to pitch every day or every other day to be effective."

Gossage injured his right thumb in a clubhouse fight with Yankee teammate Chili Johnson and is expected to be out of action at least six weeks.

"It could be at least six more weeks after that before he gets it all back and is effective again," Andrews said. "Who knows?"

Spectacular Bid cruises to easy win

ALEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Spectacular Bid, continuing in his role as the favorite for the May 5 Kentucky Derby, cruised to a seven-length victory over three rivals Thursday to take the $112,500 Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland.

It was the 10th straight victory for the dark grey colt, who was ridden by regular jockey Ronnie Franklin in this year's race. Spectacular Bid got off as the prohibitive favorite by the crowd of 12,235. Spectacular Bid broke last year's Pensive to take the early lead in the 1 1/4 mile race. However, under-linging from the 10th hole kept Pensive from taking the lead around three furlongs, to take the lead midway through the backstretch before drawing off to the easy victory (1:50) well on Pensive's track.

Other winners of the $100,000 Blue Grass Stakes were O'Gold, under Darrel McFarlane, was second, followed by Blue Chip, under number 10 1/2 lengths, Pensive and Pensive last.

McFarlane, who was one of the favorites in the state's 55-year history, there was winning only and Spectacular Bid returned $2.10.

ARE COMING TO THE MAGIC VALLEY!

AFTER THE SCRIMMAGE AT 5:30 P.M., JOIN THE BRONCO PLAYERS AND COACHING STAFF AT A BENEFIT CRAB FEED DINNER FOR THE BUHL INDIAN ATHLETIC FUND AT THE BUHL ELEMENTARY SCHOOL.

BSU to test quarterbacks in Buhl scrimmage

BUHL — The opening shots to answer the question of who will start at quarterback for Boise State's football Broncos will be fired in an intra-squad scrimmage Saturday afternoon at Buhl's Bowers field.

The Broncos will bring 63 players to the game-worn scrimmage and Coach Jim Cramer said all of them would be in the action. The scrimmage starts at 3 p.m. Saturday followed by a dinner with coaches and players and fans at 5:30 p.m. at Buhl elementary school. The scrimmage is free but a nominal fee will be charged for the dinner which will feature crab and chicken.

The Broncos have completed two weeks of spring season workouts and it appears now that junior college transfer Joe Adams and Idaho Falls Kevin McDonald, who started some games last fall, have moved ahead in the quarterback battle. A sleeper could be 6-5 Dave Demers of Sandpoint, who redshirted last year but has been impressive at times in spring drills.

The other big battle of the spring training session is at tight end where three strong candidates are competing. These include junior college transfer Kevin Raulerson, senior Jim Baizer and senior D'Alene sophomore Duane Doherty.

Coach Cramer noted the scrimmage will be the first competitive situation for several newcomers who have been working very hard to earn a starting spot.

"We think the two hours of football will be entertaining and the fans will see how much progress we have made already this spring," he said.

The only two players who will miss the scrimmage are junior college transfers Runningback Cedric Minter, the Big Sky Conference's leading rusher, and fullback David Hughes have sustained minor leg injuries during the contact drills but both are scheduled to play.

Double standard in viewing executives

PATRICIA MCCORMACK, female vice president and a "resident claimer."

Male and female executives are pretty much the same kind of human beings — goal-oriented, tough and competitive, and, when necessary, good at putting people at ease, or, when necessary, making them uneasy.

And, emotionally, neither is vulnerable.

But, they insist, there's a double standard in viewing executives in the top offices of corporations, hospitals, schools, government.

For example:

When the female gets to the top, behind her back jealous types, male and female, snicker and say:

female executives, as reported by whereIn women are perceived as being there to nurture — right down to the nurse who has the job, among other things, of sustaining the patient through his or her fears and pain.

"The job of manager, on the other hand, is not to nurture; it is to decide, to manage. Managers do not try to make all people feel good all the time."

"For women, switching from the role of nurse or right hand to the role of manager can be extremely difficult."

"It can also be difficult for the

• "He follows through; she doesn't know when to quit."

• "He isn't afraid to say what he thinks; she's opinionated."

• "He exercises authority; she's tyrannical."

• "He's a stern taskmaster; she's doctor to perceive them in this different role.

"The difficulty that many doctors have in taking seriously the role of the administrator, is well-known and compounds the difficulty women have in top-level administrative hospital jobs."

"Doctors tend to think that only doctors can doctor, but that anyone can administer — including themselves."

She suggested women seeking an executive job in health care get an MBA degree, "the union card" for managers. She said this is better than a masters in hospital administration because of the "attitude of many doctors."

"Doctors tend to be suspicious of credentials which look like watered down versions of a medical degree," Wardell said.

"An MBA is a professional degree from a field other than medicine and may help the administrator establish a rapport with the doctor who is a professional."

Wardell said only a few women can do it all alone.

"For women as a group to achieve success and advancement the institutions must assist."

Both King and Wardell noted that sexism in business "is a symptom of a larger problem — the distinctions that grow out of a heritage that labels superior and inferior with gender."

"Many women believe it is overt discrimination by male executives that is holding us back," King said. "I will not argue that it does not exist but attacking that constraint won't alter your position."

management committee, if no one knows you are there. Make sure people know who you are and what you do and don't be shy about it. Shyness can have a negative effect.

• Learn to make decisions. Decision-making can be learned. It is a matter of confidence and practice. And above all, you have to master your job and your subject, whatever it is. Then practice it, showing competence and know-how.

• You must be flexible. Match yourself against other people in situations you know more about. Pick up knowledge, new outlooks and greater expectations. Meet people who can help you.

• Put yourself first. Just remember no one else will. Keep your own interests and goals firmly in mind and work to achieve them.

• Q. Does it help if a man marries the boss's daughter? And can a woman get to the top by marrying the boss's son?

• "Forget about marrying the boss's son. That's a no way for a woman to succeed in business. You'll have to wait for your father-in-law to die and then for your husband to die or become incapacitated before you can show what you can do. That is too long to hang around wasting your time and your good looks."

• "The young man who marries the girl next door reaches the top in business in an average of 20 years; the young man who marries the boss's daughter takes 25 years and 10 months. But we all are aware of exceptions."

You'll have to wait for your father-in-law to die and then for your husband to die or become incapacitated before you can show what you can do. That's too long to hang around wasting your time and your good mind."

But when a man slashes his way through the corporate jungle to the executive suite, observers say:

"He climbed the ladder of success."

That's what hospital bosses and hospital women aiming to be bosses heard at annual meeting of the New England Hospital Assembly when they took in a session titled "Onward and Upward With Women."

They heard lots more from the two speakers — Dr. Nancy N. Wardell, founder and president of the Institute for Corporate and Government Strategy Inc. in Boston, and Christine B. King, vice president, Continental Air Transportation Co. Inc. of Chicago, an airport transportation and charter bus firm.

King said of the alleged double standard of opinion about male and hard to work for."

"There's a lot in these statements I can relate to, as I think we all can," King said, describing herself as a woman who has won the upward mobility sweepstakes, a competition "more women should be a part of."

"It is a fabulous time for women to advance even though in terms of quality, we still have a way to go on the executive level as a group."

But she said equal opportunity won't arrive until a prediction made by Ewald Nyquist, former New York Commissioner of Education, comes true.

Nyquist observed:

"When a female Einstein is promoted to assistant professor, that isn't equality."

"The entire environment is one

Christine King, airline official, sees double standard

Natural substance may control brain's anxiety

By HAROLD M. SCHECK Jr.
© N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — Simple substances that may be the brain's natural means of controlling anxiety have been discovered recently in the course of research that is opening a whole new realm of understanding of the chemistry of emotion.

Whether the brain's natural tranquilizers have indeed been discovered is still a matter of debate among scientists, but there is widespread agreement that such internally produced anxiety controls exist and will be found.

They are part of a complex internal system for orchestrating emotion, the existence of which was hardly guessed at two years ago.

The research is leading toward new drugs that may calm anxiety without producing such undesirable effects as drowsiness or disturbances of muscle control and gait.

Many scientists are also mapping the reaction sites of the anxiety control system in the brain and learning the chemical and structural details of what these sites are and how they work.

And there are new clues to the evolution of anxiety as an aid to survival of higher animal species and to the way a common stimulant such as caffeine may work.

The newly discovered action-sites, or nerve cells, where tranquilizer drugs hook up, have been found in all manner of species from man to bony fish.

Caffeine, far from being just a general stimulant, as had been thought, now appears to act directly on the anxiety control system. It attaches itself to the action sites where tranquilizer drugs also act.

This raises two possibilities, each of which has adherents among scientists. One is that the caffeine acts somehow as a tranquilizer. The other is that it stimulates by promoting a moderate degree of anxiety, which in moderation, anxiety is not only useful but also necessary.

Too much tranquility in a human or animal can be fatal. But too much anxiety can smother its victim under a pall of uneasiness and vague fears that cripple action and can produce disturbing physical symptoms. These include sweating, rapid heart rate, digestive upsets and difficulty in sleeping; effects that can feed back on the system, making anxiety worse.

The key discovery that has transformed the chemistry of anxiety into an exciting new field of research was made two years ago by Dr. Richard F. Squires and Dr. Claus Braestrup in Denmark. In the course of other studies, and almost by accident, they discovered that many brain cells have special chemical structures on their surfaces to which important anti-anxiety drugs fit in the way that a key fits its lock. Such structures, serving as sites for chemical action are called receptors.

The class of drugs for which these receptors and brain nerve cells seem made to order are the benzodiazepines. Among drugs of this class are Valium and Librium, the world's most widely prescribed drugs, and Dalmane, which is the most widely used prescription sleeping pill. All three are manufactured by Hoffmann-LaRoche, Inc., one of the world's largest drug concerns.

The discovery of the benzodiazepine receptors came only a few years after the discovery that brain cells have "gates" or receptors. These led scientists to find the brain's naturally occurring pain killers, the endorphins and enkephalins. It was widely considered one of the most important scientific discoveries of recent years.

The discovery of the benzodiazepine receptors is viewed as at least equal in importance. These binding sites for the anti-anxiety drugs were first found in rats' brains and soon thereafter in cows, monkeys, humans and many other species all the way down to the teleosts — the bony fishes such as cod and flounder.

But the evolutionary lines seem to have been drawn there. Sharks, for instance, do not have the receptors, suggesting that they are without anxiety — a view supported by some recent behavioral research.

Although it is still too early to estimate all the functions of the benzodiazepine receptors, scientists are convinced they are important.

"They weren't created for Hoffmann-LaRoche's purposes," said one scientist. "There must be some grander plan." The obvious implication was that the receptors were there as locks controlling important brain functions and that there must be internal-anxiety control substances that serve as keys for those locks.

In recent months there has been a furious search for the brain's own natural equivalent of the anti-anxiety drugs.

Scientists at the National Institute of Mental Health, including Paul J. Marangos, Steven M. Paul, Philip Skolnick and Frederick K. Goodwin, believe they may have identified the first such internal anxiety controllers. The experiments suggest that two relatively simple compounds, inosine and hypoxanthine, may be the substances.

Dr. Sydney Spector of Hoffmann-LaRoche and Tomiko Asano, a former colleague who has now returned to Japan, also found evidence favoring inosine and hypoxanthine. They are called purines that are constituents of nucleic acids, the chemicals of heredity.

There is a substantial amount of evidence, both chemical and behavioral, favoring purines as the brain's natural tranquilizers, but the subject is still a matter of scientific debate.

Squires, the co-discoverer of the receptors and now a scientist at Lederle Laboratories in Pearl River, N.Y., does not consider this evidence convincing and believes the search must continue.

His own recent research has demonstrated that the receptors he and Braestrup discovered in 1977 are far more complex than was originally thought. There appear to be at least two types. Both are constellations of closely linked chemical binding sites, Squires and his colleagues have found, each site having somewhat different chemical affinities.

This is a discovery with great potential significance in understanding the brain and the practical business of drug design.

Tranquilizers such as Valium act by binding to the entire constellation of sites that constitute the receptor. Squires says, and consequently have several simultaneous effects. The damping of anxiety is one. Sedation, effects on muscle coordination and the other "side effects" of the tranquilizers are the others.

If drugs could be designed to fit only one of those linked sites, the anti-anxiety effect might be divorced from all the others. Such a drug might reduce anxiety without making the patient drowsy and without having additive effects that make them dangerous when combined with other drugs and alcohol.

Research by a large team of scientists at Lederle has shown that several synthetic chemicals do indeed have this kind of specificity. They are part of a group called triazolopyridazines, known as T2P's.

Dear Abby

It takes guts to admit you have none

DEAR ABBY: STAN, who complained a lot in restaurants, may have gone overboard but he had the right idea. He had a habit of sending back food that was either undercooked, overcooked, cold, smelled "funny" or wasn't what he ordered. And if the service was poor he left no tip and complained to the management.

Stan also carried a little battery operated fan to blow smoke back into the faces of people who smoked while he was eating.
With the prices one has to pay in restaurants today, we should demand top quality food and first-class service. It is our willingness to accept mediocrity that makes for sloppy service, bad food and shoddy merchandise in general.
As for Stan's little fan, he should be congratulated for having the courage to give those inconsiderate boors a taste of their own pollution.
You probably think I'm just another cheap, demanding, hard-to-please klutz like Stan, but I'm not. I'm one of the millions of weak, gutless wonders of the world who gets ignored, pushed around and walked over while continuing to overtip for second-rate service because I never had the guts to do it.

RUPERT IN TORONTO
DEAR RUPERT: Not necessarily. I'm more inclined to believe that only the YOUNG die GOOD!

DEAR ABBY: A friend recently invited us to her home for a salad dinner.

Every guest was asked to bring a salad as well as a going-away gift for a mutual friend who was moving.

When we arrived, there were no less than 75 people standing around. There was no place to sit. The guests were trying to juggle their plates in one hand and coffee cups in the other.

I am of the opinion that when you invite people to dinner you should provide them with a comfortable place to eat.

This was a building contractor's home. Maybe they just wanted to show it off to as many people as possible. Or perhaps they wanted to sound up as many girls as they could.

I've had it. The next time they invite us, I'll say, "Thanks, but no thanks."

The Japanese boys and girls are able to speak some English and are 14 to 16 years of age. The delegates will be arriving in July to stay for approximately one month. Families interested in hosting a delegate may contact the Elmore County Extension office at 587-4826.

He's got to be caught

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — A young woman left waiting at the altar wants her bridegroom back — behind bars.

"I found out he's done this to five other girls," the erstwhile bride, who asked that her family not be identified, said Wednesday.

The woman, who has asked police to help her find her former fiance, said he took a $1,500 diamond ring and a motorcycle he bought with $1,100 her mother gave him to help pay for the wedding.

The couple planned to be married last Saturday following a courtship that lasted six weeks, but three hours before the wedding, the bridegroom said he had some errands and would be right back.

"That was the last anyone's seen of him," the young woman said.

She said while trying to track down the man, she called his mother in Indiana.

"She told me, 'He's done this to five other girls. He's got to be caught. I'm his mother, and I say he's got to be put in jail,'" the bride said.

Dr. Lamb

Man awakens at night choking

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb: Every so often I wake up during the night choking. I betch while I am sound asleep on my back. This blocks my windpipe and I cannot get my air. My wife will slap my back but it seems to take forever before I can get air. It's terrible. It seems like the end of me. When I finally get air, it takes awhile before I'm breathing normally and I am afraid to go back to bed until I can.

I do not eat or snack before going to bed so this does not cause it. Can you help me? What causes this? What can I do to prevent this in the future? Believe me, it's quite scary. I've heard of people choking to death on food and I'm very concerned.

Dear Reader,
 You can't choke unless you have something to choke on. I suspect you are regurgitating food from your stomach into the back of your mouth. We call this an esophageal reflux.

It's a good thing you don't have a snack before you go to bed, but that doesn't necessarily mean your stomach is empty. The stomach is a food reservoir, storing the food you've eaten. It doesn't pass it into the small intestines for the major digestive process until after it's been churned and essentially liquified. This process doesn't happen instantaneously.

If you've eaten a good fatty meal, it may be 12 hours or more before the stomach is empty. Carbohydrates are emptied the fastest and proteins in between.

Of course, how the food you've eaten is packaged makes a difference. If your carbohydrates are in the form of raw fruits or vegetables, they'll be solids and the stomach will have to work on them to liquify them. On the other hand, if your carbohydrate is a sweet drink, it may be only a matter of minutes until it starts emptying into the small intestine. The classic example here is drinking sugar water for a glucose tolerance test.

You probably have a faulty closure mechanism at the top of your stomach where it joins the esophagus (food tube). In a normal person the top of the stomach is closed and when one lies down, there is no way that the acid digestive materials and food can leak up into the esophagus.

Faulty closure may be the only abnormal function, but many people who have a hernia of the small portion of the stomach through the diaphragm (hiatal hernia) will have an associated esophageal reflux. To give you more detailed information, I am sending you The Health Letter number 48, Hiatal Hernia, Esophageal Reflux. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

 You should make sure you have a very light evening meal with as little fat as you can manage. Be sure to eat early enough so your stomach can completely digest what you eat.

The Health Letter I am sending you will give you other tips to follow. You might find it very helpful to have the head of your bed elevated so you are not lying flat on your back. That helps prevent the food from leaking into the lower esophagus.

Make an appointment with your doctor and have an examination to see if you have a hiatal hernia. If you do, a good sound program with attention to your daily habits along the lines I've suggested here and in The Health Letter should pretty well eliminate your problem and prevent future attacks.

Esquire magazine up for sale

NEW YORK (UPI) — Esquire magazine is up for sale. In a letter to staff employees distributed Wednesday, Clay Felker, the magazine's editor, said the British conglomerate that owns a controlling interest in the publication has been negotiating with several firms. Felker assured the employees that the magazine would continue publication if it is sold. The controlling interest is owned by Associated Newspapers of London, which publishes the London Daily Mail and London Evening News. The firm, which also owns a majority interest in New York City's Sobo Weekly News, also has considerable holdings in North Sea oil. It was not immediately known why Associated wants to sell Esquire. Felker took over Esquire in August 1977 with the financial help of Lord Rothmere, Associated's head. The name mentioned most as a possible buyer is Bonnier Magazine Group, a Sweden-based conglomerate. The 40-year-old Esquire publishes twice a month and claims a circulation of 650,000.

Scientists use artificial chemistry to improve vaccines

By HAROLD M. SCHMECK Jr.
 N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK — To make the vaccines of tomorrow more effective and more "universally" protective, scientists are turning to artificial chemistry in a field dominated for centuries by natural products.
 Among the first goals of the research are vaccines against malaria and other parasite diseases that kill or destroy the health of hundreds of millions of persons throughout the world.

 Another objective is to bring under the protective umbrella of immunization groups of people poorly served by existing vaccines. Examples are the very young and the growing number of patients of all ages whose own immune defenses are depressed by drugs for cancer or for the maintenance of transplanted organs.

 A third long-range objective is to immunize individuals against certain specific substances of their own bodies for purposes of controlling fertility or disease states such as cancer and perhaps even high blood pressure.

The research is believed to hold real promise, although none of it is likely to come to fruition for human use in the very near future.
 A group of experts from many countries met to gauge the state of this rapidly moving field a few days ago at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

 The central topic of the meeting was how to simplify and augment a patient's response to vaccines by using substances called adjuvants. Much of the attention was focused on recently developed synthetic adjuvants described by Dr. Robert Edelman, one of the conference organizers, as "absolutely fascinating in their potential for modulating the immune response."

'The China Syndrome' has impact

By SHELLY KINZEL

Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — I remember the first time I learned about the dark side of nuclear energy. I was only 8, and as I sat glued to the TV set, an eerie cartoon gruesomely depicted the effects of radioactive fallout.

I never forgot that film, and for many months afterwards, I had continual nightmares. My child's sense of security was permanently shaken.

Years later, as a young adult, I saw another film about nuclear hazards. Entitled "On The Beach" this highly acclaimed feature portrayed the final days of our world after a nuclear holocaust. Once again, I was profoundly disturbed.

And now, there is a new movie, which I guarantee will unsettle even the most placid filmpicker. "The China Syndrome," starring Jane Fonda, Jack Lemmon and Michael Douglas, is about the potential danger of an accident at a nuclear power plant. Regardless of your political convictions, this taut, well-written suspense-drama is bound to cause unrest and considerable controversy.

Fonda plays Kimberly Wells, an up-and-coming TV news commentator assigned to do a special on nuclear energy. While she had her cameraman friend, Richard (Michael Douglas), are on location, at the Ventana Nuclear Power Plant, they inadvertently witness an accident, brought under control only moments before a possible catastrophe.

Confronting the studio head with their "hot" news item, they are informed that Richard's secret filming of the incident could be considered a felony. The producer refuses to broadcast the event and encourages Richard's coverage. Enraged, Richard storms out of the studio, determined to recover his footage and explore the true nature of the accident.

Meanwhile, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, after a cursory investigation, has given the power plant a clean bill of health. Everyone is delighted except for Jack Godell (Jack Lemmon), the plant supervisor responsible for averting the disaster. He begins his own investigation, which eventually reveals a frightening truth — there is a defect in the pump support system which could result in a nuclear explosion, annihilating half of southern California.

His attempts to close the plant meet with total opposition from the workers of the company. A shut-down would mean the loss of millions of dollars, and the scandal would surely prevent the licensing of a new power plant. Out of desperation, Godell contacts Kimberly Wells who is now working with Richard to expose what appears to be a cover-up. The tension builds to a shocking climax in which Godell seizes control of the power plant, determined to make a public statement on nation-wide television.

This tightly constructed film succeeds on many levels. The subject could not be more timely, nor the message more provocative. The pacing of director James Bridges is flawless, and the performances of Fonda, Lemmon and Douglas are among their most powerful. Lemmon, in particular, is deeply moving as a man driven almost to insanity. It is his disbelief, his frustration and final horror with which we most identify.

"The China Syndrome" realistically depicts an awesome possibility — one which cannot be denied in the light of recent happenings. In the best tradition of filmmaking, this gripping thriller creates an experience one is not likely to forget.

Boomtown Rats' "A Real Gone With The Troops," Columbia, 4 Stars Their debut disk got lost in the hubbub of punk's invasion of the U.S. consciousness, but Britain's Boomtown Rats have returned with album No. 2, a dazzling display of vitality and talent.

Source of the group's brilliant explosions is King Rat. Bob Geldorf, lead vocalist and author of scintillating and imaginative tunes. Perverse and cocky, Geldorf sings fire and ice vocals to the five other Rats' snarl-and-burn musickmaking. There are no plainclothes for the band's remarkably diverse sounds. "Rat Trap," a big hit in England, is a Springsteen-esque slice of working-class hopelessness and pain.

St. Giuliani in the City of Angels

By DONALD HENAHAN

ONLY 7 TIMES HERE!
NEW YORK — At first glance it looks all wrong. Carlo Maria Giuliani as music director in Los Angeles? An improbable match: Giuliani, the famously civilized and unpretentious conductor, used to direct the city of celluloid and aluminum, the plastic land where even the lies have to be made up out of whole polyester. And yet, at Carnegie Hall this Thursday night, when Giuliani visits New York, he will be at the head of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, which he took over this season when Zubin Mehta moved to the New York Philharmonic.

On second glance, the Giuliani-Los Angeles matchup looks even more implausible. For one thing, he is on record as deploring the heavy "work" load that most American orchestras demand of their music directors. The Los Angeles Philharmonic's canny executive director, Ernest Fleischman, was able to seduce him with a "limited" schedule. This season, Giuliani took on just eight programs spread out over about 15 weeks, for a total of 56 concerts, including short ruxnet trips and touring. But consider the schedule he has agreed to conduct next season: 25 weeks and a total of 90 concerts. That matches the most concerts that Zubin Mehta conducted in the years when he was the Los Angeles music director before coming to head the New York Philharmonic.

On a recent stopover in New York, Giuliani explained in his soft-spoken, undogmatic way just why a modest schedule has been so important to him in the past. "As you know, I don't like to conduct very much, although his winter was very full. In Europe I conducted eight orchestras. Next season I will not conduct at all in Europe. I have never been in a hurry. I have time. I do not push."

Now, however, his attitude toward musical directorship,

American-style, seems to have undergone a distinct change. Other places, other moods. According to Fleischman, Giuliani simply has discovered that "he likes it here." The conductor and his wife recently have found a house in Hollywood not far from the Hollywood Bowl and says Fleischman, they are "thriving in the sun, with their pool."

This season, the new music director's first task was to establish rapport with the Los Angeles musicians and put his individual stamp on an orchestra that was stamped and polished by Mehta and reflected the Indian conductor's considerably brasher musical style. Giuliani says he did not find that an overwhelming challenge: "A conductor, if he is really a conductor, needs only one week to put his sign on an orchestra. Maybe less than a week. Everywhere, orchestras play as I will, even in such a short time. Musicians are one body, we are all together. I do not like to feel myself a conductor. I came up as a string player, a violist, in quartets and in orchestras, and the good feeling I get in when I have the intimate feeling that I am a musician among musicians. If I could I would like to sit in the orchestra to conduct, but this is not possible. In Los Angeles I had the feeling, so strong a feeling that we were making music together from the very first days."

It is this idealistic collegial attitude as well as his talent that seems to captivate orchestra musicians wherever Giuliani goes. Even hardened players, the stories have it, come to regard him as a sort of musical saint, as San Carlo of the Symphony. Some have been reported to weep when he left them for another post. Romantic eyewitness? Perhaps. But it is beyond dispute that the New York Philharmonic once stood en masse to applaud him after he conducted Mahler's Ninth Symphony as a guest. It also cannot be denied that he remained on uncommonly fond terms with the Chicago Symphony throughout the 23-year period he spent as its guest conductor, and that he was regarded almost reverently by audiences and critics in a city not famous for treating conductors gently.

The story of how Giuliani first went to Chicago seems bizarre, even to him. "It was very mysterious," says Fritz Heber, who chose me. I met him once, just after the war, when he came to Rome to conduct the Augusteo Orchestra in which I was a viola player. It was the only time I saw Fritz Reiner before I was invited to Chicago to guest-conduct his orchestra. Maybe he had heard a recording or something on the radio I don't know. But he wrote and said, 'I invite you to come for three weeks. If you are happy, come back.' In all the time I was going to Chicago there never were any problems. He left the choice of programs up to me."

For much of his career, in fact, Giuliani was regarded preeminently as an opera man. He was made music director of La Scala in 1951 and ran Italy's greatest house for five years, going from there to Covent Garden and other leading European houses. In the mid-60s, however, he almost died of peritonitis and thereafter "cut back severely on opera work, concentrating instead on orchestral work and recording. Would he ever go back to the opera house — to the Metropolitan, for example? "It could happen if conditions were right but I would not go against the ordinary rhythm of the opera house. I was spotted at La Scala. I come from this tradition, you see, where the conductor has responsibility for the shoes of the last chorister, the costumes, the movements of the hands. The real director of an opera, the regisseur, the one who really shapes the character, the interpretation, the movements — it is the composer. The director must serve the composer. Once, in 'Don Giovanni' there is a tenor, doing some director's business behind the back of the Donna Anna while she sings. I stop and say to him, 'Isn't Mozart enough?' He says, 'but nothing is happening there. No I say, 'only the music of Mozart is happening there.'"

When Giuliani flexes you with his pale blue eyes, it is easy to understand his persuasive powers. But it is not simply the blue eyes, the cultivated voice or the Roman-nosed handsomeness that enchants musicians. Here is a man who is able to coax great performances out of an orchestra without fuss or histrionics, but with a kind of gentle persuasiveness that acolytes and publicity people will elevate Giuliani to sainthood prematurely. Canonization in a hero's lifetime can be perilous, certainly.

Among musicians, Giuliani has long been one of the more ungrudgingly admired of conductors, so the Los Angeles management was widely credited with having made a master stroke in luring away the ascetically slender Italian from his comparatively carefree life as an idolized international guest. Inevitably, perhaps, he was hardly settled in his new home than rumors began to seep around the music world that he was unhappy and might soon decide to decamp. Responsible parties in Los Angeles say they find this not at all credible. For the most part, Giuliani's concerts have been ecstatically received by the public and the critics, though a few murmurs of protest have been raised about the possibility that acolytes and publicity people will elevate Giuliani to sainthood prematurely. Canonization in a hero's lifetime can be perilous, certainly.

CLINT EASTWOOD
a touch too much

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN
Q: Saw a really interesting and offbeat Clint Eastwood flick titled "Play Misty for Me" on TV, but somehow, although the plot grabbed me, the motivation seemed murky. Was anything crucial left out? — S.A., Miami.
A: A magazine writer invited by Clint to catch a home preview of this movie (which has evolved into a cult favorite) describes this key scene: Eastwood, cast as a radio disc jockey, spends the night with Jessica Walter, a devoted, yet dangerously psychopathic listener. The actor gets out of bed and, as the camera catches deep red welts, clearly visible across his back. This raw bit of sadomasochistic behavior offered a strong dramatic insight into the couple's odd relationship. Unfortunately, the touch was considered too explicit and was therefore scissored from the final print. The film was made in 1971 and marked Eastwood's debut as a director.

FEAR OF FLYING: Italian actress Monica Vitti was all set to visit New York on the first leg of a Paramount publicity tour plugging "An Almost Perfect Affair," co-starring Keith Carradine. But because Monica refuses to fly, the studio worked out an elaborate itinerary, taking her to America via ship, then transporting her cross-country by train. Now, after all this planning, Monica seems queasy about the projected voyage. All plans for her big publicity jaunt have been grounded.

Q: Saw "Laura," the 1944 movie mystery, on TV for the umpteenth time because, as a clock collector, I'm fascinated by the handsome grandfather clock in which Clifton Webb hides the murder weapon. I'd love to trace this clock and wonder, did Otto Preminger, the film's director, wind up taking it for himself? — T.B., Mimesopolis.

A: We checked with Preminger, who happens to be an antique clock collector, but he has absolutely no idea where the specimen in question may be ticking today. According to Otto, the clock situation wasn't in the original script. It was a sudden, on-the-set inspiration.

Q: Even though she's not the greatest actress, I'll bet Farrah Fawcett-Majors is making a fortune from her movie roles. Is she? — C.H., Chicago.

A: Although Farrah isn't in the top money bracket by current Hollywood standards, she's doing quite well. She received $750,000 for starring in "Sunburn," which Paramount will release (appropriately enough) this summer. She just finished "Saturn 3" with Kirk Douglas.

Q: How did model-actress Margaux Hemingway wind up with her strange first name? Shouldn't her name be Margot? — U.V., Albany, N.Y.

A: There are lots of stories going around but the real one is that Margaux picked it out herself. She, as you rightly suspect, used to go by the name Margot. But when she found out she was conceived by her parents — her father is Jack Hemingway, son of Ernest — after they consumed an expensive bottle of French wine, she changed the spelling. The wine was from the Chateau Margaux, the Bordeaux estate which produces one of the finest wines in the world. At any rate, the name sounds the same but the new spelling is fancier and more romantic.

NO POLITICS: Actor Timothy Dalton, who was Heathcliff in the 1971 version of "Weathering Heights," is back romancing his old flame Vanessa Redgrave again. When friends asked whether Vanessa's rabid left-wing politics got in the way of the relationship Dalton replied, "One word out of that beautiful mouth about Trotsky and I'm out the door."

Alison Lurie's age-old lessons of childhood

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-
HAUPT
N.Y. Times Service
ONLY CHILDREN. By Alison Lurie. 237 pages. Random House. $9.95.

Stripped of its artistry, the story told by Alison Lurie tells in her latest novel, "Only Children," seems ordinary enough. During the middle 1930s, two families, the Hubbards and the Zimmerns, drive out to a farm in the Catskills owned by the "headmistress" of the progressive private school their respective 8-year-old daughters, Mary Ann and Lolly, attend. Of pronouncedly contrasting characters, the two couples collide and strike sparks as they frolic over a long July Fourth weekend. Dan, Zimmern's "a gratingly amusing" and "flirt with Howard" (Howe) Hubbard, an unreconstructed Southern belle, which sets flames of jealousy raging in Cella Zimmern and Bill Hubbard, both more quiet and insecure souls than their respective mates. Even Ann King, the "headmistress" — normally a dampener of excessive passions — is singled by the fires. But by over and a new equilibrium has been established. The couples return to their homes much better friends and somewhat happier as husbands and wives.

It is a fairly ordinary story that might have remained so had Miss Lurie chosen to tell it from an ordinary point of view. But instead, she narrates nearly half of it from the children's view. Here, for example, is Mary Ann inventing the objects on her father's office desk at the welfare agency he directs:

"The green things on Bill's desk are different kinds of very very sharp pencils. And a cup for pencils, with pencils in it, including a special magic one that writes red on one end and blue on the other. A blotter that goes back and forth like a rocking horse. A sort of can for paper clips, with a magnet in the top that makes the paper clips jump up and try to get out. A little flat round box full of aspirins. A case for scissors, with a long pair of very heavy silver decorated scissors in it. Another case for a heavy silver letter opener in it shaped like a fancy sword from the Metropolitan Museum. A clock without numbers, just 12 square white pages for each day. . . .

"Anybody who saw this desk would know right away that Bill is an important person who every important thing to do that give him headaches. Pencils and paper clips jump up to help him and blotters rock giddyup for him and when he opens a letter, or cuts things out he uses decorated weapons like the knights of old. Also he is so smart he can tell time without any numbers on the clock."

The story doesn't take this approach to be coy or clever, although a certain cuteness about it does pop out alighly at first. Miss Lurie does it for the purpose of irony — because Mary Ann's father is of course hot at all "an important person"; indeed he will soon become an object of ridicule slave to his job and a near-cuckold.

And because we see the world through both the adults' and the children's eyes, we get a ringed view of the novel's major irony, which is that as the adults on this weekend romp behave more and more childishly, the children are forced to become more and more adult.

Children's books on parade

By DEBORAH ABBOT
Chicago Sun-Times

As the first crosses peek up through the sails, the spring crop of juvenile books begins arriving. Young children will delight in the simple yarn "The Riverboat Crew," by Andrew and Janet McLean (Oxford University Press, $2.95). The Alice is a paddle steamer efficiently run by Captain Bill, Gus the stoker and Sam the cook — until they begin to argue about who has the most important job, Bill and Gus change tasks and find them arduous. And Sam sleeps in instead of preparing breakfast. Then nobody questions who ranks first. Novel cross-hatch color drawings add zing to the sunny winter tale.

For spring, Rumer Godden spins a feline's tale in "A Kettle of Kittens," illustrated by Lynne Scrace (Viking, $2.95). The kitten, Bubbles, arriving from the local byrnie. After Cat meets He-Cat and has kittens, she carefully divides her litter, matching each baby with a master who will not only care for but also enjoy his new pet. The colorful illustrations aptly reflect the mood of a small English village 200 years ago. The detailed buildings provide an authentic quality, too. For many-grade children may need some help with the British vocabulary.

"Cris-Cross Applesauce" is a rare hybrid. The first juvenile title to be published by Addison-Wesley (1974), it's a sewn soft-cover combining the short stories of

Books for youngsters about death are not new on the market, but fresh approaches are always welcome. "Good-bye, Chicken Pie," by Betty Byars (Harper & Row, $4.95), explores young Jimmie's powerful yet undeserved guilt feelings when Uncle Pete dies and dies in the attempt. What Jimmie feels — anger, fear, frustration, isolation and grief — are poignantly captured.

Finally it is his family, several generations of strikingly likable realists, who make him realize what a special, comforting support system he has in their midst.

Every child knows that the Easter Bunny hides the eggs, but does he know which bunny does the job? Imported from Germany just in time for the season is a new $2.95 hardcover that provides all the answers: "Everything About Easter Rabbits," by Wiltrud Roser, translated by Eva L. Mayer (Crowell, $7.95).

With an air of authority the categories of bunnies are carefully laid out. Whimsical color pictures deftly depict this engrossing animal society.

Country Music Awards go prime time

Country sounds move west — to Hollywood — on Wednesday, May 2, when NBC broadcasts the 14th Annual Academy of Country Music Awards live from the Hollywood Palladium.

Hosts Weaver, Barbara Mandrell and Roy Clark will host the festivities. Freddy Fender, Tammy Wynette, Conway Twitty and Charo will present the awards during the two-hour special.

Winners in nine of the 18 categories will step before the cameras to accept their "hat" awards.

In addition, three special awards voted by the Academy's Board of Directors also will be included in the "on air" portion. They are the Pioneer Award, for the person or persons whose pioneering efforts helped bring country music to its current status; the Jim Reeves Memorial Award, for the person who in the past year (1978) has done the most to benefit country music; and the Humanitarian Award, for the country music personality who has done the most to benefit mankind.

The remaining performing awards will be presented during ceremonies prior to the telecast. In addition, the Academy, at that time, will present awards to the Radio Station of the Year. These awards were selected via a poll of music industry trade publications and record companies.

The final nominees in the categories to be featured on air include:

Top Male Vocalist: Kenny Rogers, Larry Gatlin, Merle Haggard, Eddie Rabbit and Don Williams.

Top Female Vocalist: Dolly Parton, Crystal Gayle, Loretta Lynn, Barbara Mandrell and Anne Murray.

Vocal Group of the Year: Oak Ridge Boys, Statler Brothers, Dave and Sugar, Kenny Rogers & Donnie West, Conway Twitty, & Loretta Lynn.

Top New Male Vocalist: John Conlee, Kenny O'Dell, Ronnie McDowell, Con Hunley, Lee Dresser.

Top New Female Vocalist: Susie Allison, Christy Lane, Zella Lehr, Bonnie Tyler, Charly McClain.

Entertainer of the year: Dolly Parton, Kenny Rogers, Roy Clark, Willie Nelson and Loretta Lynn.

Song of the Year: "Mamas Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys" (Jennings/Nelson), "The Gambler" (Kenny Rogers), "Burgers and Fries" (Charlie Pride), "Your Best Bet" (Anne Murray), "I'm Always on a Mountain When I Fall" (Merle Haggard).

Top Single of the Year: "Mamas Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys" (Jennings/Nelson), "Georgia on My Mind" (Willie Nelson), "Talking in Your Sleep" (Crystal Gayle), "Tulsa Time" (Don Williams), "Out of My Head and Back in My Bed" (Loretta Lynn).

Album of the Year: "Star Dust" (Willie Nelson), "I'll Come Back Satisfied" (Oak Ridge Boys), "Almost Like a Song" (Ronnie Milsap), "Every Time Two Fools Collide" (Rogers/West), "Let's Keep It That Way" (Anne Murray).

This year's colorcast of the ACM awards marks the first time the ceremonies have been presented live and in prime time. In previous years, the event was taped and then telecast in a late-night period on ABC-TV (1974-78).

BBC ambitiously chronicles 'Life on Earth'

By GREGORY JENSEN LONDON (UPI) — Even in these days of television blockbusters like "Roots" and "Holocaust," it seems senseless to tackle for the week-end a subject like "Life on Earth." All life, everywhere on earth, through two billion years.

That is just what David Attenborough has done. His "Life on Earth" is the talk of the country. Britons watch the BBC-TV series on Tuesday, gossip about it all week, then watch repeats on Sunday to make sure they miss nothing.

Some of its scenes "have never been seen before by man, let alone filmed," Attenborough says. Each of its 13 parts has a sequence of breathtaking beauty, like shots of the scales on a butterfly's wing or a kaleidoscope of brilliantly colored South American frogs.

Warner Bros. helped finance the multi-million-dollar series. An American showing is certain. Turner Morris productions, the third backer, is selling the series in Europe and the rest of the world.

The subject it tackles could hardly be more sweeping — how life began and how it evolved. On the shores of Lake Superior Attenborough filmed — traces of primitive life two billion years old. In the Grand Canyon in Arizona he found fossil tracks left by worms 550 million years ago.

From those faint beginnings, the "Life on Earth" team found and photographed existing creatures which illustrate every step of the evolutionary process from single-cell creatures to man.

Attenborough, brother of actor-director Sir Richard, was once program director for BBC-TV but returned to his old job of roaming the globe as a television naturalist.

To relate this "history of nature" he used the BBC's Natural History unit, a unique team noted for the most advanced film and television technology.

"The ideas for the series took over five years to jell," said "Life on Earth" organizer Peter Anderson in an interview. "And then we all worked on it full time for three years."

Two million dollars and 1.25 million feet of film later, Anderson's team had photographed as many as possible of the four million species of animals, birds, plants and fish which share this crowded globe with man.

"Four million different solutions," Attenborough says, "to the problem of staying alive."

"The cameramen are the real heroes," Anderson said. "The main ones were BBC staff cameramen, but a world-wide network of freelancers was used. "There were amazing difficulties filming some of these things."

Producer John Sparks recalled one instance when cameraman Martin Saunders was photographing a dozen giant African gorillas in the wild.

"He felt a hand on his arm," Sparks said. "He thought it was Martin's big hairy hand — he appeared over his shoulder."

"It was one of the gorillas who'd caught sight of his own reflection and figured it was another gorilla. He was trying to get his hand around to the front of the camera to pluck out the intruder."

Once the Attenborough team got out of one country just before a revolution broke out, in the Cimbora Islands they gave up on a rare coelacanth, the famous "fossil fish" which until the 1920s was thought to have become extinct millions of years ago — and pulled out, leaving only one cameraman to pack up the gear.

By accident he heard a coelacanth had just been caught alive. He filmed it swimming in the sea, something never seen before.

Chance and incredible patience also caught pictures of a rare frog, a male giving birth by spitting a fully-formed froglet out of its mouth. This species matures from egg to froglet inside the male's vocal pouch but his unique method of birth was considered legendary until Attenborough's men filmed it. "We spent virtually the whole first year researching," Anderson said. "We contacted well over 600 universities throughout the world for the ranking authority on each individual subject. We visited more than 200 of them."

Attenborough and his men traveled 1.3 million miles, filmed at more than 100 locations in 30 countries on every continent. "Life on Earth" is the BBC's biggest ever documentary project.

The result could be dull, pedagogic stuff — part biology, part the history of evolution. But it is compulsive viewing which contains some of the rarest and most beautiful film ever screened.

Seasoned television critics have fallen all over themselves to praise it. One, Clive James, called the series "miraculous" and said he was "slack-jawed with wonder and respect." Another, Herbert Goldhamer, said it "will inevitably be numbered among the indispensable documents of our age."

'Closed-captioning' for the hearing impaired

ABC, NBC and PBS have reached an agreement, in cooperation with HEW, to transmit captioned programs and pay a newly created National Captioning Institute for its services in encoding the programs with captioned material. The closed-captioning programming on the three networks is expected to be about 20 hours a week, most of it in prime time.

The term, "closed-captioning," refers to a method by which captions can be seen only by viewers watching television sets equipped with a specially designed decoder. Thus, the system assures no annoyances and no picture interference to viewers watching sets without this newly-developed "black box."
