

Radiation suit Silkwoods win $10.5 million

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A federal court jury Friday found Kerr-McGee Nuclear Corp. responsible through negligence for the plutonium contamination of employee Karen Silkwood and ordered the company to pay more than $10.5 million in damages to her survivors.

The verdict, on the fourth day of deliberations by the jury of three men and three women in the 11-week trial, was the first court ruling on radiation contamination occurring outside the physical property of a nuclear facility.

The jury's verdict included $10 million in punitive damages, $500,000 for personal injuries and mental suffering and $5,000 for property taken from Ms. Silkwood's apartment after it was found to be contaminated. Ms. Silkwood died in an automobile wreck in November, 1974, while driving to meet a reporter allegedly with evidence of negligence at the plant.

Silkwood attorney Gerald Spence described the $10 million punitive damage award as "pocket change" for the nuclear industry, but termed the decision "a great verdict for the American people."

"Six people can say the government's (safety) standards are adequate; they don't protect the American people," Spence said.

Farm acres falling out of production

By JAMES E. ROPER
Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — American farmland is being taken out of production at the rate of 12 square miles a day, and state officials want the federal government to do something about it.

These are the findings of a survey conducted for the White House Council on Environmental Quality and the national Conference of State Legislatures.

The survey, made public Friday, found that state officials — almost everywhere were showing more interest in preserving farmland, but agreed less on how to do it, and have taken few effective steps to solve the problem.

Many of the state officials, however, felt the federal government should "get its house in order," coordinating federal programs with each other and also with the state and local preservation efforts.

Bills introduced in the Senate and House would provide federal financing for federal-state local demonstration projects on how to keep farmland in production. These bills received support from many state officials who were surveyed.

CEQ said that its report of the withdrawal of farmland at the rate of 3 million acres a year understated the problem because a disproportionate share of the converted land was prime agricultural acreage. About one-fourth of the farmland in the nation is classed as prime, but one-third of the land being converted is prime, CEQ said.

springtime on a rainy day when a very important verdict came down for the American people," Spence said. "A jury in a democracy can still cut through all the red tape and save the people."

Kerr-McGee contended it was not negligent because it met Atomic Energy Commission standards. Kerr-McGee attorney Bill Paul said he would file a "very, vigorous appeal." He said the appeal would be based on errors of law which allowed prejudicial evidence to be introduced.

Paul said, "They won the first round. I'm disappointed, of course, and really rather shocked."

Ms. Silkwood's father, Bill Silkwood of Nederland, Texas, who filed the suit on behalf of Karen's three minor children, said, "I think everything Karen said was brought to light. Through everything that was said, she was vindicated."

U.S. District Judge Frank Thels had instructed jurors that they must decide whether the 28-year-old woman was herself responsible for plutonium being in her apartment or company container, and rule in favor of Kerr-McGee if they found she was. He said the jury must rule in favor of the Silkwood family if Kerr-McGee negligence resulted in the substance escaping from the plant.

The plant was closed in 1975.

Kerr-McGee contended Ms. Silkwood took the plutonium in an attempt to embarrass the company during union negotiations, and contaminated herself while "spiking" urine samples to make it appear she had been exposed to radiation at work.

The Silkwoods contended company officials engineered the contamination to discredit her with the union and a New York Times reporter. Witnesses testified Ms. Silkwood was taking evidence of alleged negligence to the reporter the night she died.

Autopsies and X-ray documents were found in her wrecked auto.

Ms. Silkwood's family and members of the Supporters of Silkwood, a national organization of interest groups concerned with the case, planned memorial ceremonies early Saturday at the scene of Karen Silkwood's death.

A spokesperson for SOS said the group would place a sign at the death scene alongside a highway north of Dickinson City.

Bill Silkwood said the damage settlement would go into a trust fund for Ms. Silkwood's three children who now live in Addington, Okla., with their father.

Spence refused comment on his legal fee but said he would have an announcement about it at a later date. The three other attorneys on the Silkwood legal team earlier indicated they would accept a subsistence salaries funded by donations.

None of the jurors would comment on the marathon trial.

The jury began its deliberations Tuesday, emerging only once to ask questions. They were to define "physical injury." The jury deliberated 30 minutes Friday and sent word it had reached a verdict.

Attorneys were called into the courtroom at 10:30 a.m.

Spence's request was read, Paul asked that the jurors be polled individually. The clerk asked each juror, "Is this your verdict?" Each member replied, "Yes." Thels then accepted the verdict.

Spectators briefly applauded the decision, and the courtroom emptied quickly.

Sen. High mixes hand signals and words for League of Women Voters Sen. High says 1 percent may raise taxes on homes

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The modification of Idaho's tax structure by the 1 percent initiative may in the long run lead to higher property taxes on homes, Sen. Richard High, R-Twin Falls, said Friday.

The intent behind the initiative was "to try and establish a system of uniform taxation," High said, but the initiative will likely end up lowering taxes on utilities, farms and businesses. That in turn will leave lost revenues that can only be replaced through higher taxes on homes.

"All my comments don't matter if we're prepared to get by on less," High said. "If we're prepared to have fewer firemen and policemen and so on then lost revenues won't have to be made up."

High, a 13-year veteran of the Idaho Senate and a former chairman of the Finance Committee, made his comments before the state convention of the Idaho League of Women Voters, held here Friday and today.

High said the initiative is going to cause "a massive shift" of property taxes onto homes away from businesses, farms, utilities.

The method of determining the market value on which taxes are assessed won't change for businesses, utilities and farmers, High said, but under the initiative the percentage they pay will be reduced.

But for homes, High said, property taxes may increase as most homes now are taxed at less than 1 percent of actual market value.

In 1945, High said, Idaho homeowners paid 11 percent of all property taxes. By 1965, that total had risen to 18 percent. Presently, Idaho homeowners pay "close to 40 percent of the actual property taxes," High said, "and that is likely to rise."

Citing one example, High said Idaho utilities paid $1.3 million in property taxes in 1978. When the 1 percent initiative is fully implemented those taxes will be reduced to $500,000. Homeowners will then have the choice of either doing without the services those taxes provide, or taxing some other source at a higher rate.

"What we're doing is knocking apart a tax system that was carefully put together over the last 30 years," High said. The 1 percent initiative which is making the changes was "a poorly drafted piece of legislation which was impossible to implement and which would have decimated our school systems if it hadn't been changed," he said.

High also predicted passage of the initiative would increase state control over local government. As property tax dollars are limited, the growing supply of state dollars becomes more important in government, High said. "And it has been my opinion that the flow of money represents the flow of authority."

High said the argument that industry and utilities would simply pass onto customers a rise in taxation was not correct. He said the merchandise of companies was most often marketed and sold out of state.

"Therefore, Idahoans are subsidizing persons out of state," he said.

High said once homeowners become aware of the unfairness of the tax situation the matter would go to court, if the Legislature did not act.

Sen. Glenn to reopen investigations

By JOHN J. FIALKA
Washington Star
WASHINGTON — Sen. John Glenn will reopen his investigation into procedures for safeguarding nuclear weapons secrets because of the release of a document detailing the trigger mechanisms of hydrogen bombs.

"This breach of security concerning some of our nation's most important military secrets is shocking," said Glenn, referring to a document obtained from the public shelves of the Department of Energy's library at Los Alamos, N.M.

Noting that the Department of Energy has admitted that the document had been mistakenly declassified in 1976, the Ohio Democrat said, "If the document is truly as sensitive as the Department of Energy says it is, it means that for the past four years any nation trying to develop advanced nuclear weapons had virtually free access to vitally important information which could take years off the time needed to develop a hydrogen bomb."

Glenn, who heads a Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee, first became interested in the Energy Department's declassification project last year when a Harvard economics student, Dmitri Rotov, put together a fairly sophisticated treatise on the design of A-bombs using materials from public shelves of the Library of Congress.

Glenn asked the Energy Department to review its procedures generally and a few weeks later the Energy Department focused its declassification review specifically on the public shelves at Los Alamos after Rotov found the plans for a lightweight A-bomb on them.

In his latest exploit, working as a researcher for the American Civil Liberties Union, Rotov found a copy of a 1956 report from the U.S. Weapons Lab operated by the University of California at Livermore that detailed the results of four years of testing with various H-bomb devices.

Rotov, who mailed copies of the document to the ACLU and to The Washington Star, said Thursday that he has not been specifically asked by the Energy Department to return his copy of the document. Duane C. Sewell, assistant secretary of the Energy Department for defense programs, said Wednesday that "any release of the document could pose serious national security problems."

Rotov said he was still waiting for the Energy Department to "apologize for interfering with my research in the public section of their library."

Meanwhile, Ira Glasser, executive director of the ACLU, said that the Energy Department has contacted him, telling him the document should be kept in a safe with a special alarm.

The ACLU already has received government permission to store other classified documents as part of its legal work in defending the Progressive cause, which is fighting a government order restraining it from publishing an article on H-bombs.

"We have it and we are protecting it in the same way with all of the other classified documents we have, including the Progressive article," said Glasser.

Glasser said ACLU attorneys are considering a number of possibilities for using the document in the Progressive cause, which is coming before the U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago in July.

One option being studied would involve filing a special motion so the document could be introduced as evidence for the lawyers on both sides and the judges to consider.

Another option, Glasser said, would Debate on canal attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter warned Congress Friday the Panama Canal treaties "are the law of the land" and attempts to sabotage them could damage U.S. economic, oil and defense interests.

Calling the sudden challenge to the treaties "very disturbing," Carter reacted harshly to a House vote that temporarily shelved action on treaty implementing legislation Thursday.

He said members of Congress should know that, while blocking the implementing laws cannot invalidate the treaties, it could close the canal, cut off vital oil supplies and trade shipments and diminish U.S. ability to defend the strategic waterway.

"The fact is that the Panama Treaties have already been implemented" by Senate ratification and head of state signature, Carter said in his opening statement to a group of visiting news executives.

"They are the law of the land," he said. "They become effective the first day of April. The Panama Canal Zone will become Panama territory on the first day of October, 1979, no matter what the Congress does this year on implementing."

Handing the president a sudden new headache, anti-treaty House members — still angry they had no vote in the ratification process — came within two votes Thursday of sending the implementing legislation to a committee, first step toward putting it on ice.

The vote so stunned the bill's backers that they removed it temporarily from further floor action. In Spokane, Wash., Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Friday night that Carter "said it all" when he criticized members of the House for trying to block legislation for the treaties.

"I agree with the president — he said it all," Church said in an airport interview upon arriving here from Washington, D.C.

"The U.S. has pledged its word and it's not back on it," the veteran Idaho senator added.

Although the two treaties signed last year commit the United States to cede the canal in gradual steps by the year 2000, the implementing legislation is needed to provide both the money and the technical means for carrying out those procedures.

It covers such things as establishing a joint U.S.-Panamanian commission to operate the canal, transferring U.S. management to the Panamanians, compensating American canal workers who must leave and giving Panama shares of operating profits.

At the least, House treaty foes want Panama to pay the costs of the transfer operation while giving the United States firmer defense rights than already provided.

Panama has made clear it would rebel against such demands — a point implicit in the scenario Carter sketched out Friday.

"If the implementation legislation is not passed in a timely fashion and in compliance with the treaty, we would be faced with a very serious crisis," he said.

"The citizenship status and basic rights of Americans in the Canal Zone would be in doubt. We could not provide for the facilities and equipment to defend the canal."

"The operation of the canal itself might be very well interrupted," he said, noting that the East Coast derives "a substantial portion" of its oil supplies from Alaskan wells, by way of the canal, and the Gulf ports are heavily dependent on trade that flows through the waterway.

to move to dismiss the case.

"We think that this ends the case," said Glasser. "The government cannot enforce something that it has made public for four years."

Rotov said the report is more revealing than the Progressive Magazine article that the government is trying to suppress, and has been available to the public for almost four years.

Rotov said the Los Alamos report is "not important by a factor of 100 than the Morland article."

"This report goes far beyond just a scientific discussion of thermonuclear weapons," he said. "It goes far beyond Morland. It contains the results of actual detonations of thermonuclear devices."

Rotov, who said he is an amateur expert on nuclear devices, is a volunteer assisting in the Progressive's appeal.

Indochina talks bogged down

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — China and Vietnam failed Friday to negotiate an end to their hostilities, and Peking opened what appeared to be a third front along China's border with Laos.

Vietnamese Ambassador to Japan Nguyen Giap told a news conference that China also has deployed 500,000 troops along the Vietnamese-Chinese frontier in preparation for another attack.

The announcement of what appeared to be a third front in Indochina came in a radio broadcast from China. It said a pro-Chinese Lao Socialist Party has been created to overthrow Vietnamese control of Laos, where Hanoi has 30,000 troops. An oil and weapons storage dump already have been destroyed. Laos has claimed for weeks that Chinese troops are "missing" along their border and that Chinese units have crossed the frontier into Laotian territory on several occasions.

A major issue that has resulted in the deadlock in the peace talks is Vietnam's stationing of troops in neighboring Cambodia and Laos. China has demanded the withdrawal of the troops as a precondition to normal relations.

Hanoi Friday accused the Chinese of using the peace talks as a smokescreen and Peking promptly ordered its delegation home.

The current negotiations ended at the fifth session in Hanoi. Chinese delegation leader Han Nianlong said further negotiations between the two countries would have to be held in Peking.

The Vietnamese accused the Chinese of "deliberately and unilaterally" putting an end to the talks and did not indicate if they would go to the Chinese capital to continue negotiations.

"The Chinese side only wants to come here to speak out, impose its will and leave the negotiating table whenever it wishes," Vietnamese chief negotiator Phan Hien said. "It must bear full responsibility for the deadlock."

Israeli commandos attack guerrillas

By United Press International

Israeli commandos swept ashore in southern Lebanon Friday in their first seaborne assault in nearly a year against Palestinian guerrillas while Lebanese factions clashed in the mountains east of Beirut, killing at least 30.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin invited Jordan's King Hussein to hold peace talks in Jerusalem, Amman or a neutral country such as Switzerland. There was no immediate reply from Jordan.

The commandos waded ashore from rubber dinghies between the ports of Sidon and Tyre and destroyed a coastal base that the Israeli military command said belonged to a Syrian-backed organization — the first such commando operation since June 9, 1978, when the Israelis hit an Al Fatah base at Dahar el-Burj.

Official Lebanese and Palestinian sources said the commandos were backed by covering fire from three gunboats and helicopter gunships. But an Israeli military spokesman denied that helicopters supported the attack.

Beirut Radio quoted area residents as saying more than 40 Israeli rockets slammed into the target area. "Israel is continuing its cruel and inhuman attacks against the citizens of south Lebanon," the radio said.

Israel said none of the commandos was injured and that "an undetermined number" of guerrillas were killed and several buildings housing weapons and ammunition were destroyed — a result it described as "very good."

But the Palestine Liberation Organization news agency — Wala — said a military spokesman was saying blood was found on the scene "proving that our forces inflicted several casualties" and that there were no guerrilla casualties.

Bertrud Radio said three civilians were wounded, but it did not say whether they were Palestinian or Lebanese.

Israel said the attack was against a base of the Syrian-backed Salim guerrilla group near the town of Adoun 25 miles north of the Israeli-Lebanese frontier.

Further north in Lebanon, Christian Lebanese rightists and Syrian-backed leftists battled in strategic mountain ridges — clashes that further complicated Beirut's efforts to forge a government of national unity.

Rightist sources reported heavy overnight fighting with heavy machine guns and anti-aircraft weapons and claimed the leftists were backed in some positions by Syrian T-34 tanks.

Police sources said at least 30 people had been killed in the fighting, 14 of them leftists and the remainder Christian rightists. Heavy machine guns and 37mm anti-aircraft weapons reportedly were used, and rightists claimed Syrian tanks and rocket launchers were providing supporting fire for the leftists.

Battles continue in southern Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Militia gunmen attacked the southern Iranian oil town of Masjid-e Solaiman Friday, killing one person and wounding four others and touching off a pitched battle between the militiamen and revolutionary guards.

In the royal resort of Babol, 2nd Lt. Darloush Javid, convicted by an Islamic court on a charge of killing two men, was executed early Friday. The execution was the 29th since the overthrow of the shah in February.

Tehran radio said the execution took place in the royal palace of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi in Babol, 130 miles northeast of Tehran.

A policeman, Ahmad Aghari, also found guilty of murder, had his sentence commuted to two years imprisonment following a pardon by the family of the man he was alleged to have killed.

Disturbances continued in Masjid-e Solaiman, 621 miles southwest of Tehran, which had been beset by unrest since Sunday. Iranian radio issued a warning to the gunmen to stop shooting or face "harsh measures." The radio said, however, that the town was in the hands of government forces.

Residents contacted by telephone said the town, which is usually open on Moslem Sabbath, was completely shut. "Nobody can enter the central streets," one resident said. "There was some sporadic shooting in the afternoon. People are afraid to go out."

Mailed newspapers to get address stamp

Our circulation department received a Be Fair letter this week from a Wendell reader. The reader complained of the newspaper's practice of stamping addresses on the paper in such a way that they are unreadable.

The circulation manager said he is aware of the problem. Special equipment which will allow the Times-News to be wrapped in brown paper and stamped with white address stickers is on order. It should help us eliminate problems with newspapers delivered through the mails.

Another reader suggests we provide more information about community events before, rather than after, they happen, and adds that a daily activities column would be helpful to many people.

The Times-News will put in one article for each upcoming public event. Because of space limitations, we can only include meetings open to the public rather than scheduled club gatherings. Information on these events usually can be found in one of three places: the Magic Valley pages, the Weekender published on Fridays and the Valley Calendar published on Mondays.

Publicity chairmen can help the Times-News by letting us know at least a week in advance that a special event is coming up. Send a written article detailing the event and include the phone number of someone who can answer questions. We can then be certain the story will be in the part of the paper where most interested people will see it.

IF YOU HAVE A COMPLAINT, LET US KNOW ABOUT IT!

Fox may guard South Africa's hen house

Something is happening in South Africa these days that is downright frightening.

Anyone that has any concern for the freedom of the press has to be concerned with a bill that is now being considered by the South African government. The bill, in short, takes the freedom of investigative reporting away from the South African press by forbidding any news story about corruption and the like until it gets official approval.

Even though many don't consider South Africa a true western democracy, mainly because of the official apartheid policy, it is western enough so that other western nations should sit up and take notice at this proposed bill. If there is any danger at all that this bill could establish a trend in the world, then we could be in for some trouble.

True, the bill will stop governmental rumors from being published, but it could also stop stories of bonafide corruption from being published, and thus hasten the spread of that corruption.

The supporters of the South African bill declare that this won't be the case, however. According to the bill, governmental wrongdoing would still be uncovered, but it would have to be cleared by an official known as the advocate general, a post that would be created by the bill. The advocate general would investigate for Parliament allegations of corruption, but nothing would be allowed to be published without permission until a report by the advocate general could be tabled in the House of Assembly.

As a South Africa-based American journalist says, that's like letting a fox guard the hen house.

The bill is seen as a direct result of newspaper disclosures of the "Muldergate" scandal — the massive misappropriation of public funds by the former department of information which has caused the National Party its greatest embarrassment in more than 30 years of power.

It is unlikely that any of the corruption surrounding Dr. Connie Mulder, the former Information and Black Affairs minister, would have been uncovered if the press would have been muzzled by the proposed bill.

Pleter Botha, the man who became South Africa's prime minister in October in the wake of Dr. Mulder's humiliation, has pledged to give the country a clean government and administration, but the backing of the proposed "gag" bill doesn't seem to be consistent with that pledge.

The thinking behind the bill is of the sort that inspired Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew to search for ways to muzzle the press during their stay in Washington, so one cannot casually write off the South African bill as an isolated bit of tomfoolery in a foolish land. There must be dozens of U.S. officials in Washington right now who would like to see a similar law written into the American books.

Heaven forbid! If such a law had been in force during the Nixon administration, there is no way that any of the Watergate stories would have materialized. All the Washington Post could have done after uncovering the facts would have been to present them to the government-appointed Mr. Clean and await his decision, and what kind of just decision could one expect in such a situation?

Creating an "advocate general" position to clear stories about the government would bring the same result as creating a government-run newspaper and forbidding any others to exist.

It would be a sad day indeed if South Africa adopts such a system, but it would be even sadder if the thinking behind the system spreads to other lands that have long honored the value of free and open expression.

Coed living may turn men, women into friends

© Boston Globe Newspaper Co.
BOSTON — Trying to pick out the zaniest aspect of the "Mork and Mindy" show is a bit like trying to find the most serious sentence in a Ralph Nader speech. The competition is incredible. Between the pet center platters and the orks, you're talking Major Zany.

But if I had to choose one aspect of the show which makes it unique in the annals of American television, it would be the fact that Mork and Mindy are pals. With none of the sickening double entendres that clog their way through the maddening "Three's Company," they are a male and a female, living together without reference to the furniture upon which people can usually be found at 4 o'clock in the morning.

I suppose this singular feat in the annals of American culture history can be attributed to the fact that Mork doesn't sleep in beds. But the show makes me wonder whether this sort of friendship is only credible to us in the context of "sister" other-worldly incredibility.

Or to put it differently: Do we believe that men and women can only be friends if they come from different planets?

When I was a kid the only boys who were automatically friends — or platonic friends, as we called them — were, if not from Ork, at least shorter than us or younger, or totally unappealing. But this DMZ or de-reference to the furniture upon which people can usually be found at 4 o'clock in the morning.

As the world becomes increasingly coed, we seem to assume that the edis-sex ed and not friendship.

People who criticize coed dorms, for instance, often believe that the students who take serial showers will have serial affairs. Others are equally sure that the Munk for the coed office is "Night and Day."

Every-time-some-work-place-gets-integrated, whether it is a patrol car, a fire station, an executive board or a truck, you can "count on" a spouse protest. I once interviewed a fire fighter's wife whose fear of marauding females was a rather flattering delusion (considering the condition of her husband), but it was based on the popular notion that the man and woman who work together, play together. And they are not playing gin rummy.

We seem sure that proximity breeds promiscuity instead of friendship. The only animal behavior that we have found truly unnatural is that of the hopelessly "platonic" pandas at the National Zoo.

I don't want to entirely pooch-pooch one of our fondest beliefs: "There is, after all, some truth to it. People don't fall in love with those they've never met unless they are kinky for the classifieds and conduct their affairs in post office boxes. The illegitimate club, office, college increase the meeting places.

But we don't, for heaven's sakes, mate with everyone we meet. The biggest difference in male-female relationships today may not be the kind that Kinsey would report.

It is too bad there are no statistics on the numbers of nonaffairs. A couple of years ago, a study was done on college campuses which showed that something akin to an incest taboo sprang up among the students in coed dorms.

For the sake of "household stability" for the sake of a peaceful community, people seem to pick their lovers from somewhere farther down the lane. This seems to be equally true among the very small number of coed roommates or post-graduate apartment mates who are not "living together" in the ordinary sense of the word.

I suspect that this sort of very human caution operates much more often than we credit it in the office, the firehouse, the patrol car.

There is often a sexual aura between people who genuinely like each other. But there may be a thousand reasons not to turn it into a romance. And reasons make the difference between the urge and the act.

I find it sometimes amusing and sometimes rather sad that we attribute so much more power to the sexual urge than to our own restraint, or to our wider choices. If caution is just as predictable as attraction, friendship may be as valuable an alternative as love.

We surely have wider options than this vast conventional experience will increase the chances of men and women knowing each other and liking each other.

But wouldn't it be nice if we really believe it, believed that men and women don't have to be spacy aliens in order to be friends?

We can't blame OPEC for gasoline shortage

© Washington Star Syndicate
WASHINGTON — Hisses, chicken pox, whooping cough, mumps — take your pick of contagious diseases. None of them spreads as swiftly as the contagion of panic. This week the gasoline panic promises to reach epidemic levels, and it makes no sense at all.

Why are we in this fix? What accounts for the mile-long lines at service stations? Are the oil companies engaged in some vile conspiracy to withhold gasoline in order to drive the price up? From various sources in industry and government, clear and convincing answers can be found.

There is no evidence of conspiracy.

The petroleum industry is monitored more strictly than any other industry in America. The oil companies live under the thumb of the Department of Energy, the Interior Department, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and a dozen other agencies.

It is beyond belief that the companies collectively could conceal millions of gallons of gasoline, and it would be profitless and pointless for them to do so.

The current unhappiness results from three immediate causes and one historic cause.

(1) At a time of insatiably rising demand, the supply of crude is trending down. March imports of 8.3 million barrels per day were less than

1 percent above March of last year. The frantic crunch is being felt. Refineries are uncertain about supplies. Inventories of total oil stocks are uncomfortably low and must be replenished.

(2) In order to build up inventories of heating oil for next winter, refineries have been producing less gasoline. The government has asked the companies to provide a reserve of 240 million barrels by October 1. This is a prudent step, but it results in less gasoline for the time being.

(3) Motorists as a breed have surrendered to panic. Roughly 145 million trucks, buses and passenger cars are registered in the United States. If we surmise that their gas tanks normally average half full, we can get a quick picture of what happens when owners struggle to get their tanks all the way full. There is no way under moon or sun that a billion gallons of gasoline suddenly can be supplied to meet this extraordinary demand.

The long-range cause is known to all of us. When it comes to energy consumption, we are the most prodigal, wasteful, extravagant people on earth. We have yet to take conservation seriously. Other Western nations long ago looked facts in the face and accommodated to them. You don't see these mile-long lines in France or Germany or Japan. You see small cars; you see people walking or riding bicycles; you see gasoline at $2 to $3 a gallon.

What will it take to make Americans comprehend the truth? The era of cheap energy has passed. Barring some wholly unexpected stroke of technological genius, that era will not come again.

Industry and government spokesmen are not threatening us with a return to the Stone Age. The situation can be handled without serious hardship if each of us will make this much of an effort: Cut consumption by 5 percent.

Want an example? Look at the parking lots of suburban high schools. They stretch out for acres and acres. It is seriously contended that every one of those student vehicles is necessary? Every one? Or what of the 180,000 privately owned airplanes that serve the convenience of corporate executives, sportsmen and others? Is it too much to ask them to cut their flying hours by 5 percent?

If we will stop blathering about non-existent conspiracies, and begin conscientiously to conserve, we can recover from the current epidemic. The first step is to call a halt to petulant blame-fixing. The fault is not in the companies or the Congress or the Arab nations. The fault, dear fellow guzzlers, is in ourselves.

Dima goes to London for exhibit

MOSCOW (UPI) — Dima the 40,000-year-old baby mammoth left Leningrad Friday on a flight to London for his first foreign exhibition.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Dima was traveling in a hermetically-sealed steel cargo container aboard an Aeroflot airliner.

The baby mammoth will be exhibited at a Soviet-national exhibition in London.

The perfectly preserved animal was discovered in Siberian permafrost by Soviet gold prospectors in the summer of 1977.

Soviet scientists flocked to study the tiny mammoth for new information on the long extinct animals.

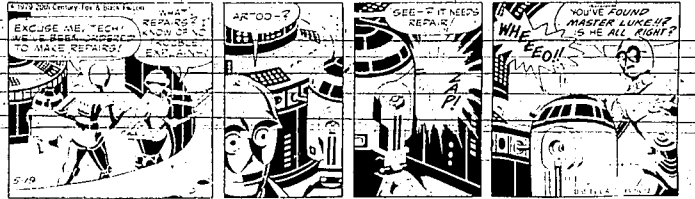

"This produced fundamentally new and important data on the origin-life-conditions and evolution of the prehistoric giants," Tass said.

Pope honors fallen Poles during his 55th birthday

By CHRISTOPHER P. WINNER-MONTE CASSINO, Italy (UPI) — Pope John Paul II, celebrating his 55th birthday, said mass Friday at Monte Cassino beside the graves of 1,000 Polish soldiers who cracked Nazi lines 36 years ago and gave the Allies an open road to Rome.

The former Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Krakow, Poland, flew by helicopter to the imposing Benedictine abbey atop the mountain, where on May 18, 1944, Polish troops under the command of American Gen. Mark Clark overcame German resistance in one

Racial gap keeps dwindling in life expectancy figures

By DEAN REYNOLDS WASHINGTON (UPI) — Life expectancy for white Americans is nearing 74 years compared to 69 years for minorities, but the gap is narrowing, a government report said Friday.

Figures published by the National Center for Health Statistics also showed the death rate has slowed to an unprecedented level — but the two leading killers are still heart disease and cancer, and, among teens and young adults, suicide is now the second-ranking cause of death.

The life span in 1977 for Americans of all races was a record high 73.2 years, up from 67.2 a generation earlier in 1948, the report said.

Infant mortality declined to a new low of 14.1 deaths per 1,000 live births. Broken down by race, the white rate was 12.3 per 1,000 and the minority ratio was 21.7.

The report showed that women can expect to live almost eight years longer than men — 77.1 years compared to 69.3.

In 1977, more males died than females in every four-year age bracket from under 1 year to 80. The report dealt solely with statistics and offered no theories or explanations for the results.

It said that, between 1968 and 1977, the life expectancy at birth of the white population increased by 2.7 years to 73.3 years. For all other races, with blacks numerically predominant, the life expectancy was 68.8 years, up 4.7 years over the same period between 1968 and 1977.

The figures showed that a seven-year difference in life spans between whites and minorities in 1968, narrowed to five years by the end of 1977. Heart disease was responsible for almost four of every 10 deaths in 1977.

Injured woman led by policeman away from fire

Los Angeles hotel fire kills at least two women

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A pre-dawn fire possibly set by arsonists ripped through a downtown hotel Friday, killing at least two women and injuring 26 other persons, many of whom jumped from second and third floor windows to escape the flames.

The injured also included three of the 150 firemen who fought the flames which gutted the top floor of the three-story, 65-room Oxford Hotel.

In the smoking rubble after the fire was extinguished. They were not immediately identified.

Fire Capt. William Dickson said the cause of the blaze, which started at the bottom of a lightwell on the first floor, had not been determined.

"It could be arson," he said, "but there's no evidence yet that it was." "We can't rule out some accidental causes but we can't definitely say it's arson, either."

Ex-model testifies at trial

LONDON (UPI) — Former model Norman Scott took the stand Friday for the first time at the Jeremy Thorpe murder conspiracy trial and tearfully described the night he says the former Liberal Party leader first forced him to have homosexual relations.

Scott, dressed smartly in a blue shirt and brown blazer, appeared shifty as he stood in the oak witness box in Old Bailey's famed No. 1 courtroom. He frequently stammered and dropped his voice so low the judge repeatedly had to order him to speak up.

Thorpe, 50, a member of parliament for two decades, is charged with conspiracy and incitement to murder Scott.

Scott, 39, a former horse groom and male model, claims he was Thorpe's lover for five years.

Three associates of Thorpe's also are charged with conspiracy. All four defendants have pleaded not guilty to the charges.

The twice-married Thorpe, who was voted out of office in the May 3 election, has denied he had a homosexual relationship with Scott, whom he described as a young man "desperately in need of help."

As Thorpe sat taking notes with a gold ballpoint pen in the prisoner's dock, Scott described the night he said Thorpe first had sexual relations with him shortly after their meeting in 1961.

Almost whispering as he answered prosecutor Peter Taylor's questions, Scott said he went with Thorpe to Thorpe's mother's house in Surrey.

He said that night before going to bed Thorpe gave him a book about homosexuality — "Giovanni's Room" by James Baldwin — saying "I thought you'd like it."

He said about 45 minutes later Thorpe came into the room, sat on his bed and "said I looked like a frightened rabbit. I thought he was being so kind. I broke down and cried. He hugged me and called me 'pooor bunny.'"

Then, sniffling and wiping his eyes, Scott said "He got into bed with me... he put a towel underneath and made love to me... I just bit the pillow and tried not to scream because I was frightened of upsetting Mrs. Thorpe." He said Thorpe left, but returned several hours later and "did the same thing again."

What's what

Immoral adventures beckon, but approach differs for men, women

Consider those men and women who only a few times in their lives commit themselves to some positively immoral adventure. They differ, the men from the women, in how they deal with the whole thing. The men tend to go into whatever action without much hesitation, then feel sorry later, and their guilt drags on, giving them a rough time for awhile. The women, though, are inclined to think about it all in advance, wait, postpone, then move into deliberate action, and they end the matter without remorse, having resolved it all ahead of time, assured in the end of their innocence.

The computer boys have come up with another odd fact: The average woman, they say, uses three times her weight in cosmetics over the course of her life.

"Paradise" was originally a Perin word that identified the amusement parks of kings.

CAMP FOLLOWERS

The largest contingent of camp followers in U.S. history were not those who trekked after my morning army, but the bunch who stayed in close touch with the construction crewmen who built the Union Pacific railroad. More than 1,000 of those westbound night ladies tented nightly in the nearby.

Only the Seasoned Citizen will remember that Glen Miller's theme song was "Moonlight Serenade." But not even the Seasoned Citizen may recall that the original title of that ditty was "Now I Lay Me Down To Weep."

Observed Erich Fromm: "The very first thing we notice about anybody is whether that person is male or female. And it's the one thing we never forget. Name, telephone number, profession, politics, all of these details may slip from our memory, but never the individual's sex."

VICE PRESIDENCY

The Vice President of the United States is like a man in a cataplectic state: He cannot speak; he cannot move; he suffers no pain; and yet he is perfectly conscious of everything that is going on about him." So said Vice President Thomas R. Marshall. You'll recall he's the fellow who also said, "What this country needs is a good five-cent cigar."

A scholar says computer studies indicate that people whose last names begin with the letters A through R seem to live longer generally than those whose names begin with the letters S through Z. Why is a mystery.

Immanuel Lutheran fetes 70th anniversary

TWIN FALLS — A special festival service of celebration will be held Sunday to observe the 70th anniversary of Immanuel Lutheran Church, 2055 Filer Ave. E. Guest speaker will be the Rev. Harold A. Iben, former pastor, who now serves as chaplain in several retirement and rest homes in Portland. The junior and senior choir will sing and the celebration of the Holy Eucharist will culminate the service.

Following the Christian education hour a cooperative fellowship dinner will be served at noon at Immanuel Lutheran School, Shoup Avenue and Blake Street.

Immanuel Church traces its beginning to the spring of 1905. Pastor Herman H. Koppelman, then serving a small group of people at Payette, was commissioned by the Oregon-Washington district of the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod—to explore possibilities of bringing the Gospel of Jesus Christ to settlers living on the newly-opened irrigation tracts of southern Idaho.

Four years later a small group of people organized a Lutheran congregation under a constitution signed by nine charter members on May 18, 1909. Years ago a safe containing complete church records was stolen. When it was later found miles away in the desert, its contents were mostly missing, including the names of the nine charter members. However, the know names of the founding members are F. Eggersgluss, William Hoops, a Mr. Lorentzen, E.C. Meyer, Edward Meyer, Rudolph Nickodemus, C. Rehman and a Mr. Wenzel.

A small frame church building was erected by volunteer labor on a lot on Third Avenue West offered free by the Twin Falls Townsite Company. A small organ was obtained after the congregation's women secured 100 subscriptions to a local newspaper in a new-subscription campaign. Dedication of the building was on August 8, 1909.

Two years later a small Christian Day School was begun, with the pastor serving as teacher. A parish school was continued until 1919. It reopened in 1945 and has been in continuous operation at the present site ever since. Currently the staff comprises eight full-time instructors and a part-time pre-kindergarten teacher.

facilities on 4th Avenue North with the 2nd and 10th wards.

Geothermal rights explained

BOISE (UPI) — The attorney general's office said Friday all ground waters are owned by the state subject to appropriation under the doctrine "first in time, first in right."

In an opinion for Senate President Pro-Tem Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, deputy attorney general W. Hugh O'Riordan said Idaho law distinguishes between ground water and energy extracted from geothermal sources which would not unreasonably decrease ground waters available for prior water rights.

O'Riordan said the Idaho Legislature, in adopting laws regulating geothermal development, balanced important public policies including protection of appropriated waters and promotion of geothermal development both as an additional energy source and to stabilize income from state owned land.

He said Idaho claims ownership of geothermal resources whenever mineral rights are reserved by the state.

In answer to other questions by Budge, O'Riordan also wrote:

A geothermal developer is not bound by the provisions of Idaho code requiring consent of land owners before being eligible to appropriate subsurface water for geothermal uses since the state regulates only private surface water rights and not energy resources.

Obtaining consent of the surface owner is not necessarily a prerequisite to securing a geothermal well permit. Protection for the surface owner's estate is provided by bonding requirements.

The state claims ownership of mineral rights and geothermal resources only in lands presently privately owned by the state. The Geothermal Resources Act empowers the state to regulate and require permits for geothermal development upon all lands within the state.

Hours lessened

Gas problems plague Moscow

MOSCOW (UPI) — Students at the University of Idaho and those traveling to Moscow to witness commencement ceremonies this weekend may have trouble finding gasoline.

For the past few weeks, most service stations in Moscow have closed early Saturday and shut down completely on Sunday, while others have been limiting the amount of gasoline sold per car.

Station operators said Friday it will be worse: this weekend as students finish their finals and leave town and parents and alumni hit town for graduation ceremonies.

Some stations also are limiting the amount of gas they sell each day. "I just can't make an exception (this weekend) or I'll run out of gas before the end of the month," said Vernon Pelton, owner of a Moscow Chevron station.

Commencement at Boise State University and Idaho State University apparently will not create as many problems because although demand will increase, the Idaho State Automobile Association said gasoline would be available all day Sunday at some stations in Boise and Pocatello.

Warning to World War I veterans

Strings attached to pension bonus

SEATTLE — The Veterans Administration has reminded World War I veterans that the $300 pension bonus Congress approved for them last year isn't automatic and, in fact, has some important strings attached.

Many of the nearly 300,000 World

War I veterans currently receiving VA pension payments apparently aren't automatically qualified for the additional $300 payment included under a revised pension plan passed by the 95th Congress.

But receipt of the bonus payment depends on the veteran's acceptance of the improved pension plan which, in some instances, would mean less income for the veteran, VA pointed out.

Many World War I veterans are receiving pension payments under a plan which doesn't count certain other income, such as railroad retirement payments or a wife's income for computing the veteran's total income.

Others receive VA pension under a plan which guarantees they will continue to receive payments at the rate in effect on December 31, 1978.

This plan also includes an extra 25 percent payment to many veterans because they are over 78 years of age.

Under the improved pension plan (attached), all of a veteran's outside income is counted and the VA pension will be reduced dollar for dollar accordingly.

VA officials pointed out that the new, improved pension plan offers substantial increases in pension rates for many World War I veterans. But many others, they said, "should carefully weigh the choices available before deciding to switch pension plans."

Penalty withdrawn for fatality

BOISE (UPI) — The federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration has withdrawn a $700 penalty and reduced a citation against Bannock Paving Co. of Pocatello regarding the death of a worker last month.

Leonard Limlaco, acting director of OSHA's Idaho office, said Thursday the citation was changed from a serious to a non-serious classification because the company did not know of the hazard.

Limlaco and Bannock Paving officials met May 10 in Boise for an informal hearing to discuss whether the citation was justified.

Darwin Lords, 34, Pocatello, died of carbon monoxide poisoning while working on a coke-drying machine operated by Bannock Paving about two miles west of Pocatello.

Nine other men were treated at Bannock Memorial Hospital for carbon monoxide poisoning after they entered the coke-drying pit when Lords' body was discovered. It was the only such accident at the coke dryer during four years of operation, an OSHA report said.

Veterans have until October 1 of this year to make the choice if they wish to receive payments under the revised program retroactive to January 1, 1979.

QUESTION...

I lost contact with my father when I was a small child, and I was raised by my mother's family. My father and I are now living in the same town. If he should pass away, am I responsible for his funeral expenses?

ANSWER...

Although circumstances may alter this specific situation, there is, in general, no way a mortician can force a child to defray the cost of a parent's burial, unless the child voluntarily assumes the responsibility. If your father should have an estate, you are the only heir, the proceeds of the estate will go to you after the funeral expenses have been deducted. Funeral costs are among the first to be paid from estate assets.

Today, there are so many funeral and burial benefits available to almost everyone, that funeral costs rarely are paid from private funds. These benefits are constantly changing. A very important aspect of our service to every family is determining that they are receiving their total entitlements to death benefits.

VERNON F. RAVENSCROFT

Vern Ravenscroft OK after operation

BOISE (UPI) — Former Republican gubernatorial contender Vernon F. Ravenscroft probably will remain in intensive care at St. Luke's Hospital for another day or so but is doing well after coronary bypass surgery.

A business associate of the lobbyist, farmer and businessman, Helen Chenoweth, said Ravenscroft's doctor was "very pleased with his progress" after the four-hour operation Thursday evening.

Ravenscroft was admitted to St. Luke's Hospital Thursday morning and physicians said they expected him to make a routine recovery. His associate said he had a very good night and that his condition was reported as satisfactory and stable Friday afternoon.

Ravenscroft, a one-time Democrat who lost a bid for the Republican gubernatorial nomination last summer, learned three weeks ago he needed surgery to remove a blood clot in an artery leading to his heart.

"He noticed some symptoms and went in for a checkup and they found the problem and scheduled him for surgery," said Ms. Chenoweth, a partner with Ravenscroft in the Consulting Associates firm and manager of Rep. Steve Symms' successful re-election campaign last year.

"It's definitely not an emergency," she said during the operation, which lasted from 4 to 8 p.m.

Ms. Chenoweth said Dr. Rodney Herr performed "preventive coronary bypass surgery" on Ravenscroft.

She said Ravenscroft, who is also a Tuttle farmer, would be in the hospital's intensive care unit for two or three days and probably would be released in seven to 10 days.

Gooding open house
GOODING — Gooding city officials will host an open house at the new city municipal building and library today from noon to 5 p.m.

Gooding residents will have a chance to see what a $320,000 Economic Development Administration grant allowed the city to build, according to Mayor Don Morrow. The new municipal building is the remodeled Sateway building on California St. in Gooding.

Invitations were sent out for an open house scheduled in February but cold weather and icy roads forced that open house to be canceled.

Events up in the air at Jerome show today

JEROME — The second annual Jerome Air Show will be held today from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Jerome County Airport east of Jerome.

Airport spokeswoman Marva Walters said the Jerome Optimists will start the day with a pancake breakfast at 8 a.m. At 9 a.m., a motorized hang gliding demonstration is scheduled by area hang gliders.

Three Air National Guard F-4 Phantom jet fighters are scheduled to fly over the air show about 10 a.m.

A group of area parachuters will give a demonstration on parachute jumping at 10:30 and at 11 a.m., pilot Bill Waugh will demonstrate a series of air stunts in a small Ellis S-1 bi-wing airplane.

Members of the Magic Valley Aero-Modelers will put on a radio-controlled model airplane flying demonstration at 11:30. Mrs. Walters said. At noon, an Air Force F-111 fighter-bomber from Mountain Home Air Force Base will fly over the air show.

A crop dusting agriculture spraying demonstration is scheduled at 1 p.m. and the parachute jumpers will perform again at 1:30 p.m.

Mrs. Walters said activities will continue throughout the afternoon but added that the wind may be a factor on what events take place later in the day.

"We've been watching the wind very closely and it's supposed to drop," she said.

She said if the wind is strong, some of the events may have to be canceled but that decision will be made during the show.

She said a hot-air balloon will also be at the air show and there will also be helicopter rides available.

Three Mexican nationals arrested east of Hansen

TWIN FALLS — Three Mexican nationals were arrested by Magic Valley police Thursday and one of them faces grand larceny charges in Texas.

The Twin Falls County sheriff's department reported an officer made a routine check Thursday night on a car traveling on State Highway 30 three miles east of Hansen. The officer made a license plate check, learned the license plates were stolen, then learned the car was stolen in Texas.

Arrested were Jaime Catillo Corona, 19, and Jose Mendez Ponce, 22, for being in the country illegally. Mario Martinez, 31, of Twin Falls, was also arrested and later released pending charges.

Mililooka sheriff's officers later arrested Thomas Chavez, 18, who allegedly sold the stolen car to the other Mexican nationals. Chavez, who was also in the country illegally, was wanted in Texas on grand larceny charges, officers said.

The three Mexican nationals were being held in the custody of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

United Oil Co. under fire

BUHL — A large Twin Falls-based gas and oil distributor is being blamed for compounding an apparent gasoline shortage in the Buhl area.

Several independent gas dealers are critical of United Oil Co. of Twin Falls for purchasing a Union 76 station with a 30,000-gallon gas allotment and then closing the station when the dealer resigned.

The 30,000-gallon gas allotment, company officials say, will be distributed evenly among United Oil's Magic Valley customers but most of those customers live outside Buhl.

Now several Buhl gas dealers are worried they will run out of gas before this month is over because their stations are serving Union 76 customers who have had to find new fuel supplies.

Buhl Mayor Dale Christensen said although the city of Buhl has received adequate gasoline to operate city vehicles, he is concerned to see another service station close and the allotment leave the area.

Most of Buhl's gas stations are being allotted only 70 or 80 percent of last year's summer gas supplies, and they worry the loss of 30,000 gallons will aggravate even more severely the gasoline shortage in the area.

United Oil general manager and part owner Gary Wignall firmly denied his company bought the Union station in April to pirate the gas to other areas:

"We did not buy the station with the intent of taking any gallons out of Buhl," he said. "We were forced to close the station because we didn't have a dealer or a way to operate the station. There is no way to distribute the gas if the station is closed. We certainly didn't buy the station to steal the gallons, and in fact the gallons are being sold (in the Magic Valley)."

Wignall said the way he interprets Department of Energy guidelines, he has to distribute the 30,000 gallons evenly among all of United Oil's local customers.

But Marv Bartlett, owner of Marv's Union 76, another Buhl station which gets its gas from United Oil, believes he should have first dibs on the gas. Bartlett said he spoke with DOE officials in Seattle and they said the gas had to be allotted first to United Oil customers in the Buhl area.

Bartlett said he foresees no strain on his gas supplies this month but expects a severe shortage in June. Consequently, he says he is requesting Wignall to allocate to his station a generous offering of gas from the other Union station.

Station owners like Frank Zambic, of Frank's Amoco, are worried about their supplies this month. Zambic said he's picked up 50 to 75 new customers since the Union station stopped pumping gas about three weeks ago and he's doubtful his supply will last through May 25.

Jack Fields, owner of Fields' 66, also said he may run out of gas but it probably would not occur until the last two or three days of the month.

Wignall called upon the public to recognize the shortage is genuine, adding "as soon as the public stops looking for somewhere to place the blame and begins working to solve the problem, the sooner that problem will be solved."

Federally funded program

Recreational inventory has begun

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If you've ever wondered what there is to do in Idaho, a federally funded study of state recreational facilities soon will tell you.

An urban/outdoor recreation study, which will inventory recreational areas and facilities throughout Idaho, was recently begun by the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation.

The one-year study will focus on Burley, Jerome, Rupert, Twin Falls and 13 other communities. The aim of the program is threefold, according to Anne Peterson, a parks and recreation publicity officer. It will inventory outdoor recreation facilities and programs, determine the future needs of each study area and assess the accessibility of facilities to elderly, handicapped and low income community members.

The study, Ms. Peterson said, should serve as a planning tool for federal, state and local governments. The federal government is providing the $34,000 allocated to fund the study, she said.

"Here is a way to see what recreation exists in Idaho, how it is functioning and how it should be functioning," Ms. Peterson said.

The study is required of all states receiving federal recreation funding through the Department of Interior. Ms. Peterson said the state studies provide a way for the federal government to see how its money is being spent and where recreation facilities exist in each state.

The Interior Department, through a Lands and Water Conservation fund, funneled into Idaho $3.1 million for recreation in 1979 alone. Ms. Peterson said. The state has received more than $17.5 million from this source since 1965.

In addition to inventorying recreation facilities in cities like Twin Falls and Jerome, Ms. Peterson said the study will also examine recreation uses on several Idaho rivers, at Forest Service campgrounds, trails and boating lakes.

The parks and recreation department has contracted two planning firms to conduct the survey, and once the study is completed, Ms. Peterson said it will be made available to each community involved so local planning officials can incorporate it into their comprehensive plans.

A key source of information for the study, Ms. Peterson said, will be local citizens, public officials, city planners and recreation directors.

If all goes well, Ms. Peterson said, the study should be completed by the end of this year.

with five spades to the jack, a duck will hold the defense to four tricks. If he started with four to the jack, the low spade spades. West had led from king-queen play of the queen will let South make 11 tricks. The play of a low spade leads to loss of game and rubber.

Percentage favors rising with the queen, but let's go back to the story about the horse.

South thinks like East. If East had not been dealt the club, he just had to be a wild sure he had led back a spade when he got in with the king of diamonds. High play of the club just had to be an effort to get his partner on lead. So thinker South's ducks the spade and makes his contract.
