

Gas squeeze spreads east from California

By United Press International

Despite an executive order signed by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., an estimated 30 percent of Southern California's service stations remained closed Sunday, and the governor issued another blast at the Carter Administration.

His order, signed last week, called on larger stations to open either Saturday or Sunday, depending on their operating license numbers.

Meanwhile, there were strong signs that the shortage of fuel, most obvious in recent weeks in California, was growing more serious in other parts of the country, resulting in station closures and long waiting lines at stations.

The situation will not be quickly alleviated, according to an oil company executive.

Clifton Garvin, chairman of Exxon, the largest U.S. oil company, said Sunday motorists can expect higher prices for gasoline this summer and spot shortages as well.

Interviewed on CBS' "Face The Nation," Garvin said

Exxon will be able to produce only as much gasoline as it did last summer and the demand this year is higher.

He said the oil shortage could last 10 to 20 years. "The appetite for energy in our world has gotten to a point where today it is 75 percent dependent on oil and gas and unfortunately ... we've not been successful in finding oil and gas in quantities that we need to continue that kind of use."

States along the eastern seaboard were increasingly feeling the effects of gasoline shortages with closures or lines reported in Pennsylvania, Virginia, New York, Florida and Maine.

The head of the Pennsylvania dealers association said 90 percent of the dealers will be out of gas by the end of the month.

"It's going to be a rough summer," Rudy Molnar said. "Prices will hit $1 a gallon by August." There will be lines of 4 to 10 cars at stations by the end of May and many stations already were closing over weekends, he said.

Most of the 1,500 service stations in the Washington,

D.C., area were closed Sunday and 13 percent of the stations were limiting purchases.

Cars were lined up at stations in some areas of New York City Saturday and many stations were closed Sunday.

Operating hours of stations along the Florida Turnpike were cut back and gas pumps were telling drivers with more than half a tank to drive on to the next stop. In one area a $3 limit was imposed on motorists.

Maine reported a 10 percent reduction in the number of stations open on Sundays. Many stations were conserving for the Memorial Day weekend.

A behavioral expert Sunday said the California's gas shortage spawned a panic mentality. William Bruvold of University of California, said, "We engendered a crisis mentality. It's dog-eat-dog and the devil take the hindmost."

Brown, speaking in Fresno Saturday, said he would go back to Washington "and rattle a few cages," if the state's gasoline allocation is not quickly increased.

After he met with President Carter earlier in the week, the governor quoted the president as saying the state's gasoline allocation formula would be changed to reflect the state's rapid population growth.

But in Fresno, Brown quoted Energy Secretary James Schlesinger as later saying "only a trickle" of gasoline will reach California.

"Carter and his people better get together on this thing," Brown said. "If not, I'm prepared to go back to Washington and rattle a few cages."

"California has more votes than any other state in the nation and if Carter wants to be re-elected in 1980 he better listen to us."

Gasoline prices continued to climb in California. At one Sacramento independent station regular was priced at $1.29.9 per gallon. In Santa Cruz County, another station raised its price to $1.25 per gallon.

Only a third or less of the stations in the northern part of the state were open Sunday and a few opened only for a brief period, long enough to say they were open.

Defense not all spending

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Brookings Institution study released Sunday said President Carter has kept his promise to NATO to increase defense spending, but that alone will not necessarily improve America's military capability.

A team of defense specialists led by Brookings senior fellow Thomas Dine wrote in the institution's 10th annual analysis of presidential budgets that Carter's 1980 defense budget fails to define actual military needs in calling for Defense Department outlays of $122.7 billion.

"The effectiveness of defense spending depends on how resources are allocated in the defense budget, and at the moment that is a more important question than marginal increases or decreases," they said, adding, "The most significant problem in contemporary U.S. defense policy does not involve budget choices in the first instance, but rather clarification of the basic military purposes of U.S. forces."

The authors said national security cannot be purchased merely by spending more money.

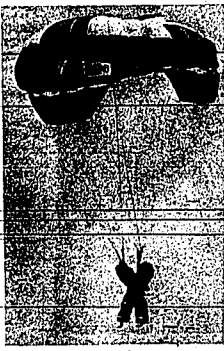

"In the principal areas of military activity, the relationship between basic objectives, major misallocations and actual force deployments has not been made clear," they said.

The study recommended "sharp and constructive debate ... to achieve greater clarity of purpose in defense policy."

The study said the administration and Congress face a number of strategic arms decisions in the next two years that will have "the most important arms control and fiscal implications," including the MX missile and its mobile base structure, the Trident II missile and the Trident submarine and the future bomber force.

"U.S. strategic force policy has proceeded on an expedient, piecemeal basis," the study said. "A number of increasingly important factors give rise to the need for a longer-term, more coherent strategy which the purpose and structure of the strategic forces are directly linked."

Congress cuts own loophole

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The executive branch of the federal government may labor under tough conflict-of-interest rules, and private companies may find mounting Social Security taxes a burden.

But the U.S. Congress takes care of itself.

The legislators have neither of those worries. In fact, they have exempted themselves from legislation in both areas as well as many more.

Perhaps the most graphic illustration is conflict-of-interest. In the last few weeks, the White House has been fretting over rules coming into effect on July 1 that would limit jobs members of the executive branch could take after leaving the government to those that do not involve matters with which they have been involved.

The administration contends that such a regulation makes it difficult to attract top-notch people to government posts — in fact, a number of people are leaving federal service now, citing the July 1 deadline as the reason — and this week, the House is expected to take up an administration proposal to relax the law. But Congress has placed no such restriction on its own members.

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, the Senate voted March 8 to delay for four years a strict ceiling on the outside income its members could earn. The current limit, $25,000, was scheduled to drop to $6,625 Jan. 1. In addition, the limitation on Senate aides' outside income was to drop, from $25,000 a year to $1,500.

According to Congressional Quarterly, 42 sitting senators earned more than $6,625 in 1977, the last year for which figures are available. Executive branch officials are allowed almost no outside income. "A double standard is not a new concept to the United States Congress," said Fred Wertheimer, senior vice president of Common Cause, the public affairs lobby. "The Senate action on outside income was a classic example of that. It was an outrage."

Two other changes affecting the personal finances of Congress are under consideration. In the House, which decided after brisk debate to keep its income limitation, a move is under way to raise the amount a representative can deduct as business-related expenses. At present, the limit is $3,000 a year; the new ceiling would be $50 for each day of session, double or triple present levels. In the Senate, Robert Morgan, D-N.C., is leading a fight to reduce the scope of the financial disclosures required of senators and their top aides.

On the first day of this year's session, the House voted to weaken its disclosure requirements on the ground that the changes would conform to the 1978 ethics legislation that applies to high level officials. But, while the penalties for executive officials range up to $5,000 fines, the penalties for legislators would be far more modest, usually only censure.

Utah earthquake could cause extensive damage

GOLDEN, Colo. (UPI) — Studies of ground motion caused by underground nuclear tests in Nevada suggest significant damage could be caused by even a moderate earthquake near Salt Lake City, Utah, a U.S. Geological Survey scientist reports.

Walter W. Hays, a USGS seismologist in Golden, said studies indicate that Salt Lake City, Ogden and Provo, Utah along the Wasatch Fault are susceptible to more severe than normal ground shaking in the event of a moderate or stronger earthquake.

Hays made the remarks in a paper prepared for presentation today to a Seismological Society of America meeting at the Colorado School of Mines in Golden.

Hays said studies show earthquakes in the Utah urban corridor area also could cause surface faulting, landslides and ground failure caused by liquefaction of the soil in some areas.

"The studies will result in maps which also will show areas of less intense ground motion and which are less susceptible to ground failure," Hays said in his paper. "The maps will be of great value in guiding sound engineering design and land-use planning."

The Wasatch Fault zone has not generated an earthquake with a Richter Scale magnitude as large as 6.0 since 1850, said Hays, but "the geologic and geomorphic records contain clear evidence that faults in this zone have been active for millions of years and may have the potential for generating earthquakes as large as magnitude 7.5."

Hays said because no strong ground-motion data exists for past earthquakes in the area, USGS scientists have set up instruments at 27 locations in Salt Lake City, 19 sites in Ogden and 11 in Provo to obtain measurements of ground motion caused by underground nuclear tests at the Nevada Test Site.

In other papers to be presented at the meeting:

• Robert Sharp, a USGS geologist at Menlo Park, Calif., said recent data on earthquake epicenters and crustal strain suggest that California's San Andreas fault bends southeastward beyond its known southern terminus near the Salton Sea. Sharp said the fault either branches into or becomes part of the Imperial and Brawley fault zones in south-central Imperial Valley. The data indicate that the bending begins north of the Salton Sea, rather than under the sea, said Sharp.

• Robert Hamilton, a USGS geophysicist at Reston, Va., said USGS studies have provided the first positive evidence of faults beneath the sediments of the Mississippi in the New Madrid seismic region of southeast Missouri, northeast Arkansas and northwest Tennessee. He said a series of strong and widely felt earthquakes occurred in the New Madrid, Mo. area in 1811-12.

Scientist says UFO landed in jungle

DAVAO, Philippines (UPI) — An American scientist said Sunday he and 600 villagers saw an unidentified flying object flash in light whizz over the Philippines' highest peak and land near their huts.

Ron Kruppa, 34, of the American-made film and research for the Indonesian television network, said Davao officials he saw a round object moving over Mount Apo, at the edge of Davao, 600 miles south of Manila.

There have been hundreds of reported UFO sightings over wide areas in the Central Philippines since April and military authorities are investigating them.

Kruppa said the UFO appeared at 8 a.m. (6 p.m. Saturday MDT) and was in view for 20 minutes as he, two Filipino assistants, and 600 residents of Upper Baracatan village watched.

The village is at the bottom of the 10,311-foot mountain where Kruppa has been living for two years observing the life of a rare monkey-eating eagle.

"As I looked into the sky to find out why the eagles were making an eerie sound, I noticed an unusually bright starlike object in the north but almost directly overhead," said Kruppa.

The object was "perfectly round like a big balloon" and gave off a strobe-like effect similar to one produced by a camera flash, he said.

He also said he noticed objects moving inside the UFO, with his binoculars, as "U" pictures of the surroundings were being taken.

The UFO landed in an open space behind a cluster of trees at Upper Baracatan, and the frightened villagers ran into their huts, he said. Twenty minutes later, the object took off and disappeared in the sky, he said.

One reported UFO landing in the central province of Negros Occidental has already sparked an investigation by the military.

Service chiefs pressed to back SALT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Navy chief Elmo Zumwalt said Sunday the Joint Chiefs of Staff have "deep reservations" about SALT II but are supporting it because of administration pressure.

Zumwalt and two other opponents of the strategic arms agreement with Russia — Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, and Paul Nitze of the Committee on the Present Danger — painted a gloomy picture of what might happen if the agreement is ratified by the Senate without modifications.

In an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press" program, Zumwalt said, "I have been kept very fully informed of the positions the joint chiefs have submitted to the secretary of defense and the president throughout the process of SALT II." He said if those position papers are submitted to the Senate, "the senators will be shocked at how far their yaws have been watered down."

Asked whether he was saying the joint chiefs were being "intellectually dishonest" about their positions, Zumwalt replied:

"Members of the joint chiefs have to decide whether or not a decision made by the president, who tells them there are political factors beyond their purview that must be considered, should be supported, or whether they should leave office. I gather that these members believe that they should support it despite their deep reservations on SALT II."

Garn attacked what he called "the fear tactics the administration is using" to get the Senate to ratify SALT without any changes.

"We are being told by the Soviet Union and by our own administration that this is the end of the world — that if we defeat it, we go back to the horrible conditions of the 1950s cold war," said Garn, a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

"From the briefings I've had from administration people and top secret meetings, this treaty is not verifiable by national technical means, that's satellites or photography, by 1984 or 1985 (when SALT II expires)," said Garn.

Zumwalt added, "I fully agree that this treaty is unverifiable. My only view is that the treaty is so bad that verifiability becomes a secondary issue."

Cheyney State graduate kisses President Carter

Summer jobs promised for minority students

CHEYNEY, Pa., (UPI) — President Carter promised black college students Sunday the government will make 1 million jobs available this summer as planned, but said he has ordered a review of the troubled program for future years.

Carter, in a commencement address at Cheyney State College, said Vice President Walter Mondale will head a cabinet-level task force to review government and industry efforts in youth employment and training.

The president and Mrs. Carter flew by helicopter from Camp David to the Philadelphia International Airport and traveled another 20 miles to Cheyney by motorcade, which took them within view of about 50 anti-nuclear demonstrators on the edge of the campus.

The commencement convention for the 250 graduates of Cheyney — founded in 1837 — was held outside.

Carter returned to Washington by helicopter later Sunday.

He said that as part of the employment review program "we are taking another look at our summer jobs program which has been seriously troubled."

"The level of jobs in the future will depend on the effectiveness of this program," he said. "In the meanwhile, I am going to make sure it's my business to assure that this summer we have the 1 million summer jobs for you that have been promised."

Assistant press secretary Claudia Townsend said the Mondale task force had been in existence for some time but now would turn its attention to summer jobs. At this stage, Carter has proposed cutting $20 million from the fiscal 1980 budget for 14-year-olds from the program.

Carter said since he became president, the economy has made possible an additional 250,000 jobs for black and other minority teenagers and the federal government is spending $3.4 billion — twice what was spent previously — for youth employment training this year.

He told the students they can influence the nation by voting.

"Both political candidates and incumbents have got to know that you will both vote and act," Carter said.

"How are we going to have the leadership to fight for equal opportunity and affirmative action in jobs, schools and housing if even the act of voting is too great an effort?"

Carter said that in the 1978 congressional elections, two-thirds of the people did not vote. He asked how many in the audience had voted and when 60 percent raised their hands, he said, "That's much better than the national average."

Kennedy wants reform of immigration laws

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., called Sunday for a sweeping reform of U.S. immigration laws to bring them into line with America's "humanitarian heritage."

Kennedy made the plea for major changes in the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 in releasing a Library of Congress study of the law. "Our nation's badly flawed immigration laws need a comprehensive overhaul, in order to bring them into line with America's great immigration and humanitarian heritage, and to help us meet the critical economic and foreign policy needs in the decades ahead," Kennedy said in a foreword to the report.

Kennedy, chairman of the Senate

Judiciary Committee, said the report would be useful to the Select Commission on Immigration and Refugee Policy, which holds its first meeting Tuesday.

The 16-member commission, chaired by former Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida, was created by Congress last year to make a comprehensive review of immigration laws.

Kennedy said the 1952 law was "out of touch with the times," despite changes made in 1965.

It was enacted in 1952 over President Truman's veto, at the depth of the cold war and the restrictionist attitude of that era," he said. "It was flawed from the beginning with discriminatory and anti-alien provisions."

Kennedy noted that some of "the more blatantly racist and objectionable sections," such as the national origins quota system, were repealed in 1965.

Bargaining favored to avert bloodshed

NEW YORK (UPI) — An annual poll by the Foreign Policy Association has found wide backing for bargaining with terrorists when necessary to avert violence and bloodshed.

The 25th annual survey by the association, a private education and research organization, also found most respondents believed "painful and unpopular" measures may be needed to strengthen the dollar and that NATO forces should be bolstered while negotiating an arms reduction in Western Europe.

City Counsel of Eden, Idaho will accept applications for city clerk thru June 6th.

Donahue confronts First Lady on issues

By ROGER SIMON
©1979 Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — America's First Lady has squared off last week's America's sweetheart in a battle for the hearts and minds of the American housewife.

The wife of the president always makes those most admired lists, but you cannot underestimate the power of Phil Donahue, a man who is to the housewife what booze is to an alcoholic.

Celebrities rarely refuse invitations to the Donahue show, including politicians. Gerald Ford will be on soon, and a show with President Carter. It is in the works. Presidents may be able to reach heads of state and generals with a single phone call, but Donahue reaches someone more important. Donahue reaches voters. More than 4 million women a day in 86 percent of all homes with TV sets.

Wednesday he came out of his corner in his typical three-piece blue suit and quiet tie. Rosalynn Carter came out of her's in a white suit, green blouse and gold necklace. They both had terrific hairdos.

Rosalynn had arrived in a black Cadillac limousine and a nine-car entourage (Gasoline shortage? What gasoline shortage?) she replied, blitting off each word like a small bullet. "But there is a time for..."

"Feminists," Donahue interrupted, "would want me to remind you that Mrs. Abzug speaks very loud and forceful in behalf of your husband's candidacy during the campaign and now it appears she is being penalized."

So he knew he was not going to ask Rosalynn whether she picks out the president's ties or makes him breakfast or whether they have a double bed in the White House.

"I didn't want it to be a crucifixion," he said later. "I wanted to exercise my rights as a journalist." Rosalynn Carter had just finished explaining why the president was right to fire Bella Abzug as head of his women's advisory committee, when Donahue unloaded on her.

"I like Bella very much, but we needed someone who was quieter," Mrs. Carter said. "The time had come to work in a quieter way." But, Mrs. Carter, that's what they said to Martin Luther King when he was demanding that blacks be able to sit anywhere on the bus they want," Donahue said. "And he marched down the street and folks said: Be quieter. It seems you're very close to saying that men can be loud and forceful but women can't."

Rosalynn's jawline tightened. Her eyes narrowed. If Donahue had been Amy, he would have been over her knee by now. "I am not saying anything about being loud... and forceful," she replied, blitting off each word like a small bullet. "But there is a time for..."

"I disagree," the First Lady said, frosty under the hot lights. "I disagree." No one elects the First Lady. She isn't nominated; we can't impeach her. Yet, she gets to advise the president, gets to ride on Air Force One, gets to be his direct representative in foreign countries; and she can not only set policy, but also, as in the case of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, can actually run the country for brief periods of time.

Presidents like to use their wives as campaigners. This is because they make attractive spokesmen. Besides, a president can also be reasonably sure that no matter how popular she gets, he will never have to run against her.

Time Magazine has called Rosalynn Carter the second most powerful person in the United States, and while that is stretching it, she does exert a powerful influence on the president. She is good on the issues — not great by any means, but sound — and manages to sound good and decent even when taking embarrassing positions.

Take Bert Lance. Please. "Bert Lance is one of the best men in America," she told Donahue. "He is a go. J. Christian man. If he ever did something wrong — and out of all his things, they might find some little thing, I don't know — he did it to help other people." Well, now, the record has shown so far that Bert helped himself along the way quite a bit, too. This included charging a $9,000 liquor bill to the account of his company's plane so he could take it off his taxes and then using the plane on "business" trips to the Mardi Gras, football games and the Carter inaugural. He hired a limousine for that inaugural, of course. And took that off his taxes, too.

If that's a good, Christian thing to do, Sunday School must have changed over the years. But Rosalynn scored her points. She spoke intelligently on health care and energy and assured us that no matter what we hear, "Jimmy is a wonderful president and no one could do the job as well as he does."

But, as she was soon to see, the public is a lot more suspicious these days. During one of the commercial breaks a woman stood up. "Is it pronounced Rozz-a-lynn or Rose-a-lynn?" she asked.

"It's pronounced Rose, as in the flower," Mrs. Carter replied. The woman shook her head. "I heard on the radio that it was Rozz-a-lynn and they said they had asked you about it," the woman insisted. "Well, they didn't get it from me," Mrs. Carter said, a little flustered. "Well," the woman said, deep disbelief in her voice. "It seems that everytime I hear it, it's something different. I guess nobody is willing to trust anybody these days."

Tito requests Soviet respect

Daily Telegraph, London
MOSCOW — Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito has bluntly told Soviet Premier Leonid Brezhnev that to attain understanding and respect between the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia the Kremlin "must respect certain distinctions in our views and policy."

Speaking at a Kremlin dinner to Brezhnev and members of the Politburo after the first day of his talks in Moscow, Tito said that it was possible for trust and friendship to grow provided these differences were respected.

which he helped to found. Brezhnev, in his speech, referred to "speculations on the past and absurd fantasies about the future" by "forces whom our friendship does not suit." He was clearly referring to suggestions that the Soviet Union may be planning to reassert its authority over Yugoslavia following Tito's retirement or death.

Tito's visit is in part to seek fresh affirmation from the Kremlin of a series of promises made in the '50s by the Khrushchev regime to respect Yugoslavia's independence.

Three Creek residents need dial tone too

It's hard to imagine the telephone-less life of Three Creek area residents. No Mother's Day, Father's Day, Christmas or birthday calls. No way to check on the exact time and temperature.

No ringing interruptions in the middle of dinner. No giggling youngsters playing dial roulette. No "you've been specially selected" telephone survey sale pitches.

But the 20 families who call Three Creek home are ready to stop imagining the joys and sorrows of constant telephone service and face reality. They want to trade in their single Rogerson grocery store telephone for one in every kitchen.

So today the Three Creek ranchers go before the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to support a California engineer who wants to form a company and install the area's first phone system.

It's their third attempt in 10 years to get approval or money for a telephone system. Both of the two earlier attempts were shot down by government agencies.

The first time, the PUC judged the proposed telephone company to be unreliable as a public utility. The second time, the Rural Electrification Administration turned down Three Creek's loan bid because there were too few customers.

Hopefully, the third time will activate the charm which has allowed Three Creek residents to deal successfully when fighting for other government services.

The only reason telephone service comes under strict government control is because it is a so-called natural monopoly — competition increases, rather than decreases, the costs to the consumer. Government involvement is necessary to protect the rights of the captive customers while insuring a fair return on investment.

But Three Creek area residents are more concerned about another right — the right to enjoy a technological luxury and necessity. They are willing to put up their own money and risk using second-hand equipment to gain this right. Maybe this time the PUC won't hang up on them.

Amtrak's Pioneer: This train is bound for glory

One hundred and ten years ago this month, and a scant 25 miles south of the Idaho border, America celebrated the completion of the first transcontinental railroad with the driving of the golden spike.

This year that celebration is being marked by attempts to scrap all rail passenger service through south Idaho.

Despite statistics showing the Amtrak Pioneer line as one of the most successful rail passenger routes in the nation, the service is on the chopping block. Unless the senate specifically objects to Department of Transportation recommendations by tomorrow, the route which now connects Seattle with Portland, Boise, Pocatello, Ogden and Salt Lake City seems destined to be discontinued Oct. 1.

If that occurs, Sandpoint will be the only town in Idaho with rail passenger service.

This comes at a time of increasing fuel shortages, which energy experts tell us are not temporary but the beginning of a permanent condition of scarcity, is incongruous at best. One wonders what to make of an administration that on the one hand tells us to conserve gasoline, join car pools and avoid waste, and then moves to destroy one of the more promising forms of mass transportation, a means of travel which might provide at least one way to ride out the energy crisis.

Here are the facts on the Pioneer, which according to statistics is at least one train that should be bound for glory.

Established on a two-year trial basis, Amtrak officials said their best estimates were that it would average 120 passengers per trip. The first full year of operation it averaged 201 passengers per trip.

Amtrak officials said the line would carry 87,000 passengers its first full year of operation. It carried 141,907 passengers.

In February of this year, the most recent month for which figures are compiled, ridership was up 29.6 percent over the previous year. Also during this month, the Pioneer had one of the best "on-time" arrival records of any long distance passenger train in the nation.

During the last fiscal year, the Pioneer was one of the four least expensive passenger trains in the Amtrak service, in terms of federal support.

All of this occurred, mind you, even with an almost total lack of advertising for Amtrak in Idaho. (has there ever been an Amtrak advertisement on Idaho television?) strange arrival hours at some stops, and a lack of sleeper cars during most of the trial period.

But the Carter Administration seems to have one ear listening just to the cries of critics saying Amtrak is subsidized by taxpayers.

That's you and me. But somehow this subsidization only becomes a sin with it goes to the railroads.

A few facts for doubters: Between 1957 and 1976, all levels of government — federal, state and local — provided $457 billion to build and maintain the nation's streets and highways. Slightly more than $300 billion of that came from highway user fees and tolls, while the rest came from general fund revenues.

Since 1925, government assistance in the development of airports and landing fields has totalled more than $41 billion.

These direct subsidies. They don't include what we also pay in taxes to subsidize police patrol of our roads, snow removal from the highways and other indirect subsidies.

It is also surprising that among the strongest cities of Amtrak passenger service are the bus lines, which joined in an unholy alliance with the Teamsters Union a few years back for that biggest subsidy of all to their industry — the interstate system.

Never mind that those highways ended up costing ten and sometimes twenty times what they were originally predicated to cost, and took years longer than expected to complete. The bus empire will tell you with a straight face the interstate system was a justified expenditure for "national defense" (who could vote against defense?), and never intended just to help them make a profit.

Of course not. The Department of Transportation says it can save $1.4 billion by eliminating the Pioneer and several other Amtrak lines. But again, an examination of the facts raises questions whether monetary efficiency is their real goal.

With what seems a strong penchant for half-truths — the DOT failed to inform the American public that at the same time it is proposing to slash

Amtrak passenger service it has also approved funds for construction of a four-mile highway in New York City.

The cost of the four-mile Westway for half-truths — coincidentally, just $1.4 billion.

There is still time to divert the Carter Administration from its rail-ripping rampage. But taxpayers are going to have to insist on having input on where their taxes are spent.

Now is the time to sound off, not months later in the line to the gas pumps.

Changing family patterns no longer solid influence

CHICAGO (UPI) — The American Medical Association says society can no longer be confident of the "wholesome influence" of family life and that it no longer is always best for children.

Family patterns are changing in ways that spell trouble for children, the AMA said in its new guidebook for doctors. "The Physician and the Mental Health of the Child."

"Today's middle-income family increasingly resembles the low-income family of the early 1960s in most indices of social disorder, such as school dropouts, drug abuse and juvenile delinquency," the AMA said.

Physicians dealing with children's mental health are cautioned that no longer can we assume a kind of homogeneity even among families of midstream America. Cultural variations within any modern urbanized society, such as the United States, are much greater than the general differences between societies.

The place of the child in society has changed markedly for the better in modern times, the AMA said.

However, as a group, children are still victims of discrimination, the AMA said.

"Childism" has been expressed through the ages by infanticide in antiquity, by abandonment in the Renaissance years, and by socialization in modern times.

"Only recently have adults seriously entertained the possibility of entering into fuller and freer associations with children," the AMA said.

The book counsels doctors on assessing the capacities of the child and the family, assessing development levels and problems, assessing the capabilities of the family to help with treatment, cultural characteristics affecting cultural care and common problems affecting mental health of children in non-mainstream families.

President gets help on energy

NORTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (UPI) — Four graders at Wickford Elementary School not only want President Carter to ease fuel costs, but they are mailing him advice for fighting inflation and surging gas prices.

"Lower the cost of fuel, and I don't mean I cent either, a lot more. Fuel is so expensive, I can't believe it. Will you please?" Carrie-Jean Carello wrote the president.

Classmates Brian Thomas and Peter King suggested where the president might look for help with the nation's gasoline supply.

Peter, mindful of recent foreign policy achievements in the Middle East, suggested he call on Israeli Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat of Egypt.

"Brian said a Carter letter to the oil-rich Saudis might get them to lower prices at least $100."

A batch of letters from Mrs. Anne McCarthy's fourth graders is on its way to the White House this week.

Writing to the president about gasoline and its effect on the American economy was the favorite topic in a class exercise in writing business letters.

"I think he should know how people feel, because people feel so bad when their kids are going to grow up without cars to drive and go on honeymoon," said Dawn Wrightman, a blonde and freckled 9-year-old.

Brian Conn, 10, started out sympathetically, mentioning "it must be hard being president with the gas shortage."

Brian then said he feared he might have to buy a Honda moped when he grows up because everything else will cost too much.

"Get on the ball," he wrote.

Pope John Paul II receives portrait from troops

Love strongest force in Poland, Pope says

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II said Sunday that in his native Poland "the force of love is stronger than the forces of death."

The pontiff celebrated Mass in St. Peter's Basilica with 10 Polish bishops, Polish Primate Cardinal Stefan Wyszyński and 15,000 of his countrymen.

Also attending the Mass in the giant basilica were about 5,000 members of the Italian army alpine corps in town for their annual reunion. An estimated 400,000 Alpine troops—and veterans are in Rome for the occasion.

The pope dedicated the Mass to St. Stanislaw, patron saint of his native Poland who was beheaded 900 years ago by then King Boleslaw the Bold.

Among those assisting him were the 79-year-old Wyszyński, appearing pale-following reports he was suffering from the flu, Krakow Bishop Franciszek Macharski, Bishop Stefan Barala of Czestochowa and Bishop Ladislaw Rubin of the Vatican.

"The death of Stanislaw and that of Christ are similar in some respects," the pope said in his Polish language sermon.

Owner crows over barnyard bantam

RIO GRANDE, Ohio (UPI) — The record flight of Lola B., a 15-ounce barnyard bantam, had its owner crowing, while some contestants left the "International Chicken Flying Meet" with egg on their faces.

Lola B. set a record of 303 feet eight inches Saturday when she flew out of the contest field, over a fence and landed on the roof of a tobacco barn.

The bird was one of 152 entries in the eighth annual meet sponsored by sausage company owner Bob Evans and held for about 1,500 spectators at his southeastern Ohio farm.

Sherwood Costen, 66, of Point Pleasant, W.Va., owns Lola, a burnt-orange hen, which surpassed the record of 297 feet two inches, set by King Flew, on May 21, 1977.

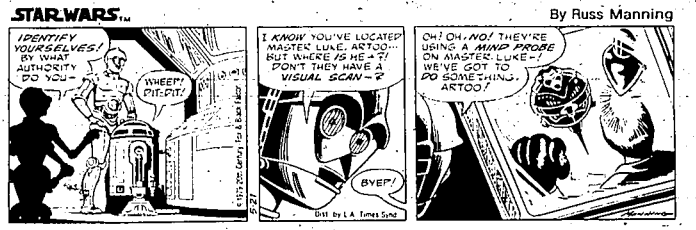

"I wanted to keep my birds as wild as possible. I thought it would work, and it did. I won a lot of bird shows, but I've never won anything like this," Costen said. A retired public housing administrator, Costen raises more than 200 varieties of chickens, pheasants and other birds.

Gary Wright of Dubuque, Iowa, who trained the former record holder, sat alone on a hillside after his 1979 entry, Hen O'War, spluttered only five feet nine inches.

"I'd go home, but like my chicken, I ran out of gas," Wright said dejectedly.

Another chicken, Aggie the Phantom Phenale Pilyer, co-trained by Joe Minnow, of Minster, plumbed after just 16 feet.

"She was flying 200 feet or more in premises flight trials. I hope we brought the right chicken," he said.

Saccharin may appear on market

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Henry Waxman, chairman of a subcommittee working on a bill to regulate saccharin, says he supports a plan to keep the artificial sweetener on the market for as much as three more years, it was reported Sunday.

A congressional moratorium on the Food and Drug Administration's ban on saccharin expires Wednesday.

"I support the subcommittee extending the present law for some period of time, perhaps three years," Waxman, chairman of the House Commerce health subcommittee, said in an interview with the Washington Star.

"This course is not being taken because there is no danger from saccharin, but because we believe there is no alternative to saccharin at the present time," he said.

The California Democrat said a moratorium on the saccharin ban must be extended to allow the industry to develop safer artificial sweeteners.

"We want to hold the industry with their feet to the fire for coming up with an alternative," Waxman said.

The subcommittee is expected to introduce legislation this week to keep saccharin on the market for a limited time. The bill would join several other proposals to extend the moratorium.

"I don't think we have to pass it very soon since the FDA won't act immediately once the law expires," Waxman said.

In an accompanying interview in the Star, FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said diet soft drinks will not disappear immediately with the end of the moratorium. He said it will take at least 18 months for the FDA to implement the ban.

"The reason is that FDA has rather elaborate rule-making procedures and these require a great deal of time," Kennedy said.

The original FDA proposal makes saccharin available as a tabletop sweetener and a single-ingredient sweetener, but not as a bulk ingredient in soft drinks or other foods.

A recent National Academy of Sciences study found that one out of every three children under the age of 19 drink diet soda containing saccharin.

Printed warnings on the labels of food containing saccharin would not be affected even if the moratorium expires. The warnings, which tell consumers the sweetener has been found to cause cancer in laboratory animals, were established under separate regulations.

Inmate sues maker of candy bars

CINCINNATI (UPI) — An inmate serving 16 to 100 years at the Lucasville state prison has filed an $8 million suit against the Baby Ruth Candy Co. of New York.

The inmate, Larry Eugene Cash, says in his suit he bought some candy bars in the prison commissary March 1. He alleges he broke a tooth and split his gum on a piece of wood when he bit into one of them.

"Ingredients of said candy bars did not list a piece of wood," the suit says.

"Plaintiff did not necessarily take a look at the ingredients of the candy bar because from childhood, Baby Ruth candy bars have never caused plaintiff any such injury before."

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Cincinnati, asks for $5,300 in compensatory damages and $8 million in punitive damages.

CASH is serving a minimum 10-year sentence for the attempt at aggravated murder of a suburban St. Bernard policeman in October 1977. Cash pleaded guilty to the charge, and to four counts of aggravated robbery.

Planetary aspects favor achievement during week; ethical actions advised for Libras eyeing gains

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Get a good start this week because the planetary aspects are favorable and you have a good chance to achieve much of importance. Engage in social activities of a desirable nature.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make right plans for personal advancement and then carry through in a positive fashion. Exchange ideas with friends.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Engage in private talks with persons who can be of great help to you. Planning is the keynote to success in the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can easily get together with allies now and accomplish a great deal. Go after personal aims with more enthusiasm.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take steps to improve your credit and become more successful in the future. Sidestep an opponent.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be more alert to opportunities around you and seize them quickly before it's too late. Make new acquaintances who can be of help to you.

VIROGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study your finest aims and make plans to achieve them. Showing more affection for your mate brings greater happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) Find a better way to handle your financial responsibilities. Advancement comes quickly if you act in a most ethical manner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can accomplish a great deal today in an activity that requires precision and neatness. Be more optimistic about the future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan how to get your creative skills working more efficiently. Take no risks in handling money at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take steps to have more harmony at home and be happier there. Make sure to handle business matters wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you use a new system, you can have greater productivity and profits. Gain the cooperation of fellow workers.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan time to study your monetary status and then make plans that can bring added abundance in the days ahead.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... He or she will be filled with new ideas and will want to pioneer in various directions; be aware to teach to finish whatever has been started and then there can be much success. Teach fine religious tenets and principles.

Closing eyes makes other senses more alert while smooching, expert claims

Question arose as to why people close their eyes when they kiss. Our Love and War man reported the findings of experts on this matter. Namely, that the closing down of the sight sense tends to heighten the other senses. Dr. Hugo D'Esquif of the Paris Institute of Behavioral Sciences says that's wrong. They close their eyes, he says, because "kissing mouth-to-mouth with the eyes open necessitates the crowing of the eyes." That's not only momentarily uncomfortable, but it looks funny.

It's not just the caffeine in tea that gives you a kick. It also contains something called theophylline. Couple that with the caffeine, and you get a stimulant said to be stronger than a like amount of coffee.

EDITORIAL POLICY

Making editorial policy for a newspaper can be a pretty tricky business. Take The New York Times, for instance. It objected editorially to the Supreme Court decision which sustained the ban on the so-called "seven dirty words." An understandable position. And it refused to print those "seven dirty words." Likewise understandable.

Am asked what sort of wood makes the best baseball bats. Ash, it is. From trees 40 to 50 years old. Preferably grown in upstate New York or Pennsylvania. When the batsmakers find a good tree—one shielded from strong winds—they can get as many as 60 bats out of it.

SHOSHONE—Kay Saras, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. D. Saras of Shoshone and Dr. Robert Wuerth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wuerth, Centralia, Wash., were recently married in Gig Harbor, Wash.

The wedding took place at St. Nicholas Catholic Church in Gig Harbor with Father Michael Angelovic officiating.

Matron of Honor was Patricia Saras, sister of the bride, and Carol Saras, also a sister, served as bridesmaids.

Owen Barbeau of Centralia, Wash., served as best man, and Mike Wuerth, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsmen.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the church reception center. Linda Saras of Shoshone, sister-in-law of the bride, and Sally Saras, Sunnyside, Wash., aunt of the bride, served the cake.

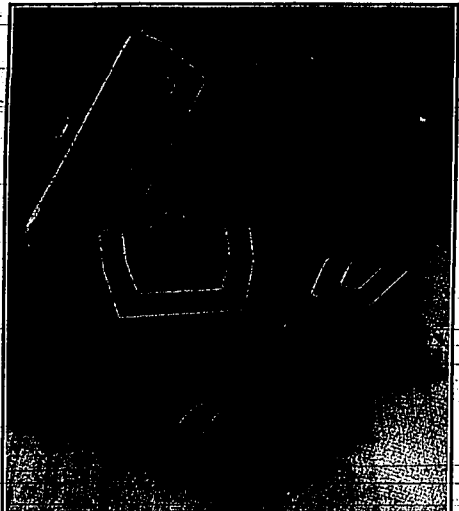

The bride is a 1972 graduate of Shoshone High School. She graduated from the University of Idaho in 1978 with a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering and is employed at Pacific Northwest Bell in Tacoma, Wash. The groom graduated from Centralia High School in 1970 and received his doctor of veterinary medicine degree from Washington State University Veterinary School in 1978. He is employed at Gig Harbor Veterinary Hospital.

The couple resides in Gig Harbor, Wash.

Washington, D.C. is easily accessible

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI)—As befits the national capital, Washington, D.C., is easily accessible by air, rail and road.

It has three airfields, National, Dulles and Baltimore-Washington International. There also are regular Amtrak train and Greyhound and Trailways bus services.

Don't drive around town if you can help it. Traffic can be heavy and one-way streets confusing for strangers. There is excellent transportation within the city, including the new subway (50 cents minimum), buses (40 cents during off rush-hours, 75 cents otherwise, and token or exact change necessary) and unnumbered taxis with fares charged according to zones and which can pick up other passengers.

For sightseers there is the Tourmobile ($4 adult, $2 children, for all-day tickets) with unlimited stops, and narrated tours of the city and nearby attractions by Gray Lines, among others.

There are numerous hotels and motels in and around Washington but space is always tight, especially during the summer months. Advance reservations are a must.

At Wit's End Getting lost easy in shopping center

BY ERMA BOMBECK
© Field Enterprises Inc.

It's not the first time it's happened and it won't be the last. An elderly woman went shopping with her sister in one of those city-sized shopping centers. They became separated from one another and she was lost for three days before finding her way out.

Lucky she was a strong woman. A weaker one would have panicked and they would have found her unconscious body thrown over a waist-high glass map that looks like a pigeon relief station with her fingers pointing to "YOU ARE HERE!"

It's going to get worse before it gets better. Every day shopping centers get larger and larger, with each one vying for the "biggest in the world" status. After awhile, when someone is missing the standard procedure will be to "check all the hospitals, morgues and the shopping centers."

There's a shopping center near me that has reached three-exit proportions and is in the process of applying for statehood. There are glass elevators, sub-lower-upper-and-mid-upper levels, skating rinks, malls, special corridors and parking for several thousand cars. (Unfortunately, the cars were parked the day the building was completed and haven't moved since.)

I went there once with Mother, who jumped out of the car and said, "Meet you in the shoe store." I never saw her again.

I have to admit, I have always found my way out of shopping centers but never at the same door in which I entered . . . or the same age. I am never fully prepared for the next Shopping Center Game, which is "FIND YOUR CAR!"

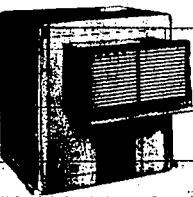

I have a theory about cars parked in a shopping center parking lot. Unknown to the shoppers, the shopping center revolves slowly . . . perhaps an inch an hour . . . so slowly that you cannot see the difference with the naked eye. However, when you come out after five or six hours your car is never in the same place in which you parked it.

All I know is shopping centers can't get too big for my mother. She loves 'em. The bigger, the better. Recently, she saw a maze of shops and lights and trees and concrete and yelled, "Stop the car! What do they call this shopping center?"

"Los Angeles, Mother."

Precautions necessary in travel abroad

UPI Travel Editor
An ounce of prevention could be worth more than a pound of cure for Americans traveling abroad, medically speaking.

Vaccinations against smallpox may no longer be required since the World Health Organization has reported the eradication of the once-dreaded disease. (China still requires inoculation, however.)

But even so, precautions may still be necessary to protect the American traveler in foreign lands against other potential health hazards, such as cholera, yellow fever, typhoid and malaria. Check public health officials, airlines and travel agents on conditions about 10 days before departure to allow time for any inoculations.

As of mid-February, cholera was reported in Bangladesh, Benin, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Congo, Ghana, India, Indonesia, Kenya, Liberia, Macao, Malawi, Malaysia, Nauru, Nepal, Nigeri, Philippines, Rwanda, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sri Lanka, Tanzania, Thailand, Uganda, Vietnam, Zaire and Zambia.

Angola, Brazil, Colombia, Ghana, Nigeria, Peru and Trinidad reported yellow fever outbreaks.

Americans planning to visit or pass through infected areas should obtain necessary immunizations before leaving home.

These rules prevent lightning deaths

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© The Chicago Tribune
New York News Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR READERS: No problems today. Instead, I am devoting my entire column to tips that could save your life.

Let's pretend you're a contestant on "Hollywood Squares," and you are asked the following question:

"More people are killed every year by (a) tornadoes, (b) cyclones, (c) lightning.

If you said, "(e) lightning," you would be right.

Michael Magill of the National Weather Service says that most deaths caused by lightning could have been avoided if only common sense is not as common as most people think it is.

Lightning occurs during thunder storms, so the logical time to start protecting yourself is when you see the storm clouds gathering.

As a general rule, avoid high places, metal and water!

If you are outdoors, seek shelter in a house or other large building. (Steer clear of sheds or small buildings in isolated areas.)

If you are on the golf course, and can't reach a building, first drop your golf club, then head for your car — assuming the car is not a convertible, it will act as a "cage" to protect you. (The metal picks up the lightning, conducts it around you and into the ground.) Stay in the car. Keep windows and doors (and sun roof) shut.

Never stand under a tall tree. If lightning strikes the tree, electricity can run down the trunk, through the roots, into the ground and into your body.

If you are riding a motorcycle, bicycle or tractor — get off. The rubber tires will NOT protect you.

If you are caught in a flat, open field, bend down and put your hands on your knees. Do not lie down on the ground. Maintain MINIMUM contact with the ground.

If you are inside, close windows and doors. Lightning can strike through an open window.

Don't take a bath during a thunder storm. If electricity strikes the plumbing system, it can be conducted into the tub.

Don't use the telephone unless it is absolutely necessary. Electricity can travel through the telephone wires.

If you are logging, stop and get out of the wide-open spaces or you can run into trouble. You are far safer indoors as long as the doors and windows are closed. Most deaths and injuries from lightning occur outdoors; almost half of all people killed by lightning are engaged in outdoor recreation.

Don't rely on rubber-soled shoes to protect you. Lightning can carry a jolt of up to 100 million volts. Rubber soles are insignificant as an insulator.

It's also not true that lightning never strikes twice in the same place. The conditions that attract the lightning bolt in the first place can attract it again.

Thank-you notes joint obligation

NEW YORK — Writing thank-you notes for wedding gifts, once the duty solely of a bride, has become a joint obligation of both the bride and her husband, according to Phyllis Nolan, etiquette and etiquette expert for Hallmark Cards.

"Old-fashioned notions were that the bride, once settled in her apartment or home, had plenty of time to write thank-you notes," said Ms. Nolan. "Today a bride usually returns to the office after her honeymoon and as a working woman, has as many demands on her time as her husband."

No matter how busy the newlyweds may be, thank-you notes for wedding gifts should be written and mailed within three weeks following the wedding, Ms. Nolan noted. If a couple receives gifts prior to their wedding day, they can begin writing their "thank-yous" earlier and have the envelopes addressed and stamped so a friend or relative can mail them while the two are on their wedding trip.

Ms. Nolan made two suggestions for writing thank-you notes: "Use good-quality note paper or correspondence cards and make each note personal and enthusiastic."

"Classic note papers are best," Ms. Nolan said. Many card shops and stationery departments can personalize such notes with the couple's names, but he notes can also be left blank.

"Thank-you notes shouldn't be written in rote form," she said. "The people who chose the gifts took extra pains to make sure they were something special, and therefore the thank-you notes they receive should be special, too."

Ms. Nolan said it's always best to mention the gift in the note, telling where it will be put or how it will be used. If the gift was money, the sum should not be mentioned in the note, but one should tell how it will be spent or saved.

"People enjoy knowing they helped a young couple pay for their living room couch or added to their wedding trip fund," she said. "It gives more meaning to their gift."

P.E.O. officers
TWIN FALLS — Three Magic Valley Women were elected to state offices at the Idaho State P.E.O. Convention held recently in Moscow.

Mrs. D. M. Jacobson of Jerome was elected first vice president; Mrs. G. R. Newman of Rupert, second vice president; and Mrs. J. R. Bonnett of Twin Falls was elected recording secretary. Mrs. K. D. (Ruth) Turner of Twin Falls, immediate past president and board member for seven years, presided at the meeting.

Busy Bees elect
KING HILL — The Busy Bee 4-H Club, a sewing and cooking club, elected officers for the coming year.

Sharon Gregory was elected president, Katie Anderson is vice president, Susan Anderson secretary, Teresa Collins, Glenn Perry, treasurer. Claudie Williams reporter, Carol Williams refreshment leader, both of Glenns Ferry, and Jane Anderson song leader. Mrs. Anderson and her mother, Mrs. Harold Anderson, are leaders of the group.

Blood quota missed for Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — Blood donors in Twin Falls missed the quota at last week's drawing of the Bloodmobile. The Bloodmobile unit was in Twin Falls Monday and Tuesday seeking 200 pints of blood. This is the second time the quota has been missed in recent drawings. On the visit in March the quota was off by 24 units.

A number of donors received pins for their faithful donations over the past few years.

Vernon Smith of Twin Falls received his 15-gallon pin. That represents 120 blood drawings he has participated in during past years.

Other winners included Richard Wheeler, 9 gallons; Walter Ross, 8 gallons; Frank Bramon, William Rose, Gene Shaft, Harold Shoup, Carol Stephens and Ivan Stone, all 3 gallons; Terry Adams, Bert DeWitt, Edith Gilbert, Emery Petersen and Ron Whitten, 2 gallons; and Gary Bondella, Arthur Brown, Ben Swadlow, Tracy Hattala, George Nye, Jr., Thomas Powell III, Gerald Praegitzer, Sharon Ragland, Steven Ross, Warren Shillington, Donald Thueson and Gary Woodland, all 1 gallon.

Counseling now offered about debts

Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — The City of Chicago has begun an exciting new budget-counseling service that offers help for people in debt.

It's the federally funded Counseling Service, Debt Control, operated by the city's Department of Consumer Services. It has 12 neighborhood locations in public libraries, community centers, etc.

It's a place where people can turn for help when they don't know where else to turn.

Completely free of charge, the counseling service teaches people better money management, calls their creditors for them when needed and arranges reduced and affordable payment plans. Different from most other credit counseling services, it doesn't handle people's money for them. It teaches them how to handle it themselves.

Consumer education workshops, seminars and lectures are sponsored by the Counseling Service in various parts of the city in a continually expanding program of teaching consumers how to cope and helping them when they can't.

For example, one client, Joe D., was temporarily off work due to an injury. Before his injury, he had been able to keep up with his bills only by paying a lot of overtime. But now, his compensation checks weren't enough and he fell behind with ever-ying. Creditor calls were making him a nervous wreck.

Somebody told him about the city's debt counseling service and he had an appointment. His counselor contacted his creditors and was able to set up a three-month reduced payment plan — and the calls stopped.

Storage was problem even for Pompeii

Chicago Sun-Times
King-Tut's palace and Pompeii villas have something in common with 20th Century homes — storage problems.

In B.C. times — Before Closet, that is — man's most-valuable piece of furniture was the chest. Archaeologists discovered more than 30 sophisticated chests in Tutankhamon's tomb. Judging from ancient paintings, the bowloirs of Greco-Roman women were filled with caskets for linens-and-clothes during the Middle Ages, when belongings were few, everything a lord owned could be packed for traveling in a portable chest.

"Only in the last four centuries have we witnessed a growth in the creation of new and different types of furniture," says designer Dera Richie. "Most of the items that developed first came from the need for storage."

Around the time of the Renaissance the chest began to evolve into more stable cupboards, armoires, desks and breakfronts. Virtually every type of furniture that had doors, drawers, shelves or other storage spaces evolved from the chest, Richie says.

To help consumers understand the "roots" and original uses of their storage furniture, Richie has traced the history of some of today's major storage pieces:

Armoires. The earliest armoire, a tall cupboard with doors, stored arms and armor. It soon dominated French country homes for storing clothes and food.

"Some believe the armoire is an old version of the hope chest," Richie says. "Today, it functions in a large entryway or living room as well as the bedroom."

Soviets menacing U.S. strategic metal supplies

By LAROY POPE
UPI Business Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — A strategic arms limitation treaty is nice to have but the real Soviet threat to the United States is not military. It is their campaign to cut off U.S. supplies of strategic metals, says a New Jersey industrialist.

By shutting the United States off from sources of chromium, cobalt, manganese and tin, or even by running up the global prices of these metals, the Communists can hurt the U.S. economy so badly that unemployment will rise rapidly and Americans will lose faith in their capacity to resist communist aggression, said Dr. C.P.

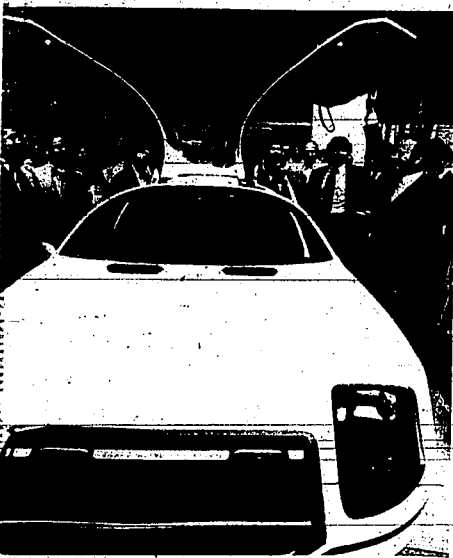

Covino, head of General Magnaplate Corp. of Linden, N.J.
Covino has spoken on this subject for several years. The company is doing something about it.
"Magnaplate coats baser metals with layers of high-chrome or high-cobalt steel to help stretch the dwindling supplies of these strategic metals.

But Covino says Americans should not comfort themselves that either conservation-minded or stockpiling the strategic metals will suffice.
Covino sees no indication that either the federal government nor the responsible heads of industry in the United States are willing to face up to the seriousness of the critical strategic metals situation.

On the contrary, he said Washington has aggravated the shortage of chromium by putting the racial and human rights issue in Rhodesia ahead of the legitimate national interests of the United States.
"People just refuse to face up to the fact that we live in a world where even a big power like the United States can be brought to its knees without chromium," Covino said. "It is a mistake to think that chrome is needed only to decorate automobiles and furniture or to make stainless steel. Every fine alloy steel known requires some chromium."
The main sources of chromium are Rhodesia and Russia. In recent years, the price of chromium has shot up from $50 to $60 a ton to more than $300.
Cobalt, he said, is the next most important strategic metal. It comes from Zaire in Africa, Russia and Turkey and a little comes from Canada.

The main sources of supply are in those parts of Africa which the Communists are busily endeavoring to take over. The price of cobalt has gone from $6 to $45 a pound in two years, Covino added.
Tin, produced in Malaysia, Bolivia and Cornwall in England, and manganese, mainly from Russia, are other vital strategic metals.
"We sell the Russians our greatest strategic commodities — grain and foodstuffs — in enormous quantities, and don't exact guarantees on supplies of strategic metals in return," Covino complained to United Press International.
He said he expects the raw materials shortage in strategic metals to spread to "shortages in everything," and that he said could create such vast unemployment in the United States that living standards will suffer and faith in free enterprise economics and government fade.

Question marks on Moodymobile

By RICHARD WITKIN
© New York Times Service
NEW YORK — Will the Moodymobile, a much-modified Mercury Capri using diesel power, produce the 57 to almost 80 miles a gallon that its designers claim when subjected to day-in-day-out use?
Will the startling product of two veterans of the Ford racing team hold up under the demands of volume production and long-term maintainability?
Undeterred by skepticism in the trade, the designers appear to be moving toward volume production. Mike Shedey said in an interview that he and his partner, Ralph Moody, who gained renown as chief mechanic of the Ford racing team, had just made a verbal commitment to buy a plant in Titusville, Fla. He predicted the company would be turning out the gallon-stretching vehicles by early summer. The price will be about $8,000.

First, however, government rules require that a prototype be broken in on a 4,000-mile run next week at the Daytona Beach, Fla., speedway. After that, it will be shipped to Ann Arbor, Mich., for runs on an Environmental Protection Administration dynamometer, or test stand, to see if it can meet emission standards.
The Moodymobile first came to public attention when its builders said they had made an 800-mile trip from Oak Hill, Fla., to Washington, D.C., on only 12 gallons of diesel fuel. They insisted, in data provided to Congress, that the converted 1979 Capri would get more than 57.2 miles a gallon in stop-and-go city driving and almost 80 miles on the open road.
Rep. William V. Chappell, D-Fla., who has driven the car, said he had wired President Carter saying: "I've seen it, I've driven it, and it works."
What the builders have done is to take a standard 1979 Capri, swap the engine for a Perkins diesel, and incorporate a turbocharger to reroute exhaust gases and help control emissions. They have also made extensive changes to the drive train, rear axle, and transmission.
Experts in Detroit cautioned that, even if the claims for the prototype were accurate, the real issue was whether Moodymobiles turned out in volume would have the durability.

Butterfly style

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams accepts an experimental car built by Caispen of Buffalo, N.Y., featuring improved safety, good fuel economy and low exhaust emissions. Foam-filled doors open from the bottom and are hinged at the top. Adams said the car is "several steps ahead of anything Detroit is building."

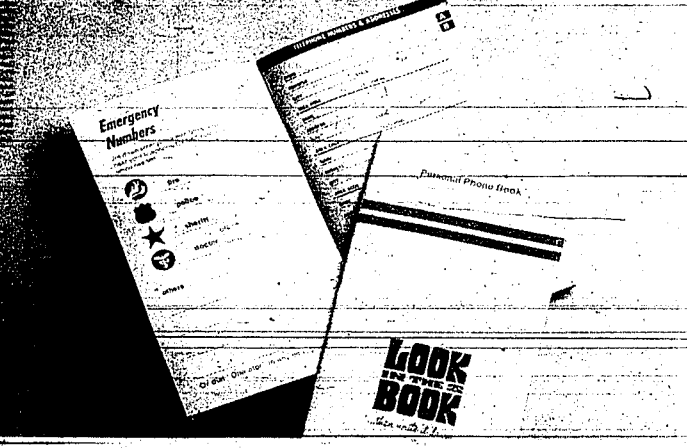

Oil price boosted

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (UPI) — The Gulf emirate of Abu Dhabi officially announced Friday it has increased the price of the 1.5 million barrels of oil it produces daily by 80 cents a barrel.
The state-run United Arab Emirates news agency UAN said the increase "was in accordance with new developments in the petroleum market and with the increases made by other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries."

Proposals made for youth volunteers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Millions of Americans every day are doing something, volunteering work for some cause they believe in. But there are some ominous signs that volunteerism in the United States is on the wane.

This has a number of people worried because a number of activities that Americans take for granted — Red Cross disaster aid, for one — could not continue without a ready supply of volunteers.

Because the problem of volunteer work for civilian causes happens to dovetail with shortages in recruiting for the all-volunteer armed forces of the United States, it is being given attention in Washington.

Two proposals have surfaced this year which would nudge the nation's youth to dedicate themselves to a year or two of service in either civilian or military capacity.

The proposals have received praise from people who would not be affected. The criticism has come from those who would.

Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., introduced legislation to replace the Selective Service System with a National Service System.

The bill would require every American, male and female, to register at age 17. At age 18, each would have three choices: volunteer work in a civilian activity for one year; active service in the military for two years; or active military duty for six months followed by five and a half years reserve obligation.

The young persons who turned down these options would be subject to military draft until age 24.

A study conducted by the Potomac Institute proposed similar programs by which America's youth would be engaged in some sort of voluntary service for a year.

The Committee for the Study of National Service last February announced a plan whereby at least 1 million young people would be employed on a volunteer basis either in a civilian or military capacity.

The committee, co-chaired by Harris Wofford, former president of Bryn Mawr College, and Jacqueline Greenman Wofford, president of the same college, said such existing programs as the Peace Corps would become part of national service.

McCloskey's proposal would give youths who chose two years of military service, four years of educational and training benefits. If the idea caught on, he says "there might be no need to have a draft."

"Congress doesn't have the power to force people to do anything except accept the draft," McCloskey said. "But the bill makes it possible to avoid military service."

McCloskey's office was the scene of a noisy demonstration in April by young people protesting the legislation. McCloskey, one of the first Republicans to publicly oppose the Vietnam war, heard echoes of the chants of a decade earlier — "Hell, no, we won't go."

The bill to revise is not new. Almost two decades ago President John F. Kennedy began the Peace Corps and in 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson proposed that the nation "search for new ways" through which "every young American will have the opportunity — and feel the obligation — to give at least a few years of his or her life to the service of others in the nation and in the world."

Defense Secretary Robert McNamara suggested in 1966 that young Americans serve for two years in either a military or civilian capacity. Those not entering the military, he said, could serve in the Peace Corps or in "some other volunteer development work at home or abroad."

But times changed between Kennedy's Peace Corps and the Johnson-McNamara call to youth to serve their country as volunteers.

Kennedy was assassinated and opposition to the war in Vietnam was growing. The situation did not improve with the assassinations of Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy followed by Watergate.

"The seventies began with a split far removed from 'Ask not what your country can do for you — ask what you can do for your country,'" the national service report said.

But the report expressed optimism that the time may have come for another attempt at national volunteerism.

There presently are millions of people of all ages doing volunteer work. Depending on whom you ask, the number ranges from 20 million to 55 million.

ACTION, the parent organization of the Peace Corps, lists 290,639 American volunteers serving in the Peace Corps and other organizations such as VISTA (Volunteers-in-Service to America).

But the American Association of Fund Raising Councils said in its 1978 report that "America may be heading for the day not enough volunteers volunteer."

The AAFRC study said psychologists attribute the worry that volunteerism may be declining to "a variety of factors" including the "women's movement, an increased political militancy among the disadvantaged and a tendency to so-called self-absorption, which one behaviorist characterized as 'enlightened selfishness.'"

The AAFRC said the National Organization for Women (NOW) has passed a resolution stating that all unpaid volunteer work is "an unconscionable exploitation."

ACTION Director Sam Brown, who more than a decade ago organized demonstrators against the Vietnam War, said in talks to student groups he finds "there are a lot of young people looking for a way to serve."

"I'm always being told, 'Look back on the good old days of the war protests,'" Brown said in an interview. But "we considered it a victory for volunteer service, if 40 or 50 people show up. The good old days were not really that good."

Volunteers estimated in millions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — How many Americans participate in volunteer work? Depending on who is counting, the answer ranges from 20 million to 55 million.

The American Association of Fund Raising Councils says volunteer activity in the United States increased from 19.7 million in 1976 to more than 20 million in 1977. But the association noted that the National Center for Voluntary Action reported that 45 million to 55 million Americans over the age of 15 volunteer in one way or another in a typical year.

A Census Bureau study conducted in April 1974, indicated that there were approximately 37 million volunteers over the age of 15 in the country during the year ending April 1974. And the Center for a Voluntary Society estimated in 1973 that 70 million Americans "made some significant non-monetary contribution" to volunteer-type organizations.

Current volunteer strength of 20 national agencies as compiled by the AAFRC's 1978 annual report:

- United States Committee for UNICEF, 3.5 million; American Cancer Society, Inc., 2.5 million; American Heart Association, 2 million; Muscular Dystrophy Association, Inc., 1.8 million; United Cerebral Palsy Association, Inc., 1.6 million; The American National Red Cross, 1.4 million; National Council-Buy Volunteers of America, 1.2 million; American Lung Association, 1 million; National Multiple Sclerosis Society, 900,000; The National Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Handicapped Citizens, 850,000; National Council of YMCA, 688,870; Girl Scouts of America, 577,000; The Salvation Army, 375,500; Boys' Clubs of America, 375,000; The Arthritis Foundation, 334,600; National Association for Retarded Citizens, 285,000; The National Foundation, 250,000; National Board, YWCA of the USA, 159,000; Camp Fire Girls, Inc., 144,000; United Services Organizations, Inc., 40,000.

Sunday car crashes kill 4, injure 7

BUHL — A mother, her two children and sister were killed Sunday in a collision with a 10-wheel milk truck at an unmarked intersection near Buhl.

The Buhl accident was one of six Magic Valley vehicle accidents Sunday which racked up a bloody count of four deaths and seven injuries.

State Police Sergeant Richard Skinner said he could not explain the unusually high accident rate, but warned Idaho drivers to "pay more attention" to their driving.

Judy Leppert, 21, her 16-month-old son Cheyenne and 2-year-old son Michael, all of Buhl and Mrs. Leppert's sister, 3-year-old Barbara Romero of Filer, were on their way to visit Judy's husband, Paul, at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital when the noon accident occurred.

Mrs. Leppert and Miss Romero were killed instantly and the two boys were pronounced dead on arrival at Magic Valley Memorial. Twin Falls County Sheriff James Munn said the four died of head and internal injuries caused by the impact of the crash.

The Lepperts were riding in a Chevrolet pickup when they hit the huge Giltner Brothers Co. diesel milk truck.

The driver of the truck, 35-year-old Bill Giltner, of Jerome, was treated and released at Magic Valley Memorial for multiple contusions, a slight concussion and possible fractures.

The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department has not determined the cause of the accident, which happened three miles west and one mile south of Buhl on the Deep Creek Road. Munn said no citations have been issued and an investigation is continuing.

Paul Leppert has been in the hospital for a week while undergoing treatment of a back ailment.

Earlier in the day state police reported two men were injured in another truck accident near Jerome.

Georgia truck driver David Jasper Martin lay pinned in his cab for almost an hour while police tried to extricate him from his tractor trailer, which went off Interstate 80 two miles east of the U.S. Highway 83 junction.

Martin, of Jonesboro, Ga., was listed in stable condition at Magic Valley Memorial late Sunday after suffering a collapsed lung, a broken shoulder, multiple bruises and lacerations. Passenger James Tony, also of Georgia, was thrown through the truck's windshield and was listed in stable condition.

Police say Martin appeared to have dozed off while heading east on the interstate. His truck left the road and traveled for 600 feet along the median before striking a rock pile.

Two Twin Falls motorcyclists escaped serious injury when a car allegedly ran a stop sign at the intersection of Falls Ave. East and the Shoshone Falls Road and hit them. The accident occurred shortly before 3 p.m.

Motorcycle driver Rolando Galvan, 22, suffered a broken leg. His passenger, Joe Martinez, 20, sustained cuts and bruises. Both men, neither wearing helmets at the time of the crash, were treated and released at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

The driver of the car, James E. Craig of Owensboro, Ky., was not injured. The sheriff's office estimated damage to Craig's station wagon at $900. In the car with Craig were his wife, Bill and Jane Austin of Twin Falls and their children, whom the Craigs are visiting.

Craig was charged with failure to stop at a stop sign.

A 25-year-old Twin Falls man riding in a wheelchair down a dark gravel road early Sunday morning was struck by a pickup truck near Kimberly.

James O'Neil, a paraplegic, was treated and released at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital after the accident, which happened four miles south and one mile west of Kimberly shortly after midnight Sunday.

O'Neil was heading home at the time.

Finally, a man received back injuries in a truck rollover near Bell Rapids at 5:20 p.m. The unidentified man was taken to St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome after his pickup rolled over.

The hospital would not release information about the victim.

Hearing attracts hundreds

SALMON — Over 240 people are expected to journey to Salmon today to deliver testimony on three separate proposals to designate over 1.3 million acres of roadless—Idaho land—as federal wilderness.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, sponsor of the hearing on the proposed River of No Return Wilderness, was forced to turn down further requests to testify and to extend the hearings through half of Tuesday because of the unexpected volume of requests.

Conservationists, motorcyclists, and representatives of logging, grazing, sporting equipment and resort industries will take their allotted three minutes to give their views on the three wilderness bills, all introduced in Congress by Church in January.

The bills, S95, S96 and S97, would designate as permanent wilderness amounts of Idaho forest land ranging from 1.3 million acres to 2.3 million acres. The proposed designations are within the largest roadless area in the lower 48 states.

As federal wilderness, the land would be closed to road construction and other development, motorized vehicles and logging. Grazing and restricted mining are permitted.

The maximum wilderness area, 2.3 million acres, is proposed in R-695, which was drawn up by the River of No Return Wilderness Council, a coalition of 16 Idaho conservation groups. The Idaho forest industry has announced support of S96, which would establish a 1.3 million acre wilderness. President Carter and Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus support S97, a 1.9 million acre wilderness area.

The vast area in question begins at the headwaters of the Middle Fork of the Salmon River, roughly 40 miles northwest of Stanley, continues past the main Salmon and stops near the Montana border.

Two major wilderness areas, the Salmon River Breaks Primitive Area and the Idaho Primitive Area, already are within the boundaries of the proposed wilderness.

Opponents of the council bill have said the land's vast timber and mining resources should not be locked into wilderness.

Gordon Crupper, president of the Champion Building Products Co. in Salmon, says additional wilderness would close off land that can produce 6 million board feet a year, production that could prevent 28 Champion mill employees from losing their jobs this summer.

Conservationists argue logging will cause soil erosion, a threat to anadromous fish spawning sites in the region's streams, and will disturb elk, moose and bighorn sheep. The Idaho Conservation League has accused Champion of exploiting the threatened mill layoffs as a publicity tactic.

Conservationists say the smaller proposals exclude 14 crucial drainage areas of the Salmon River system.

Residents of Salmon, the closest town to the borders of the existing primitive area, say the issue has caused great controversy in the small central Idaho city. Logging and tourism, along with ranching, are the basis of Salmon's economy.

The Salmon River system, which crosses the proposed area, is the largest remaining undammed river system in the United States. The Middle Fork alone contributes more than 25 million cubic feet of water a day to the main stem. The river's stream and its tributaries, of smaller streams to the region.

Over 190 species of wildlife, including Idaho's largest concentration of bighorn sheep, are found within the area.

Hard-working kin of Tony, Kathy Wells joined in raising this barn near Dietrich Sunday, then celebrated with a dance in it.

Crew builds barn at Dietrich in single day

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

DIETRICH — The hammering started at 9 a.m. and by the time it finished at 6 p.m., Tony and Kathy Wells and a group of their friends and neighbors had put up a new barn.

Those who joined in the Wells' barn-raising Sunday were repeating one of the oldest farm traditions in America. Most of the fixings of that tradition were present, including grandmothers and babies, field mice and mooling cattle, and plenty of homemade food.

Twenty of the Wells' friends and relatives hammered and sawed all day under the hot sun to build the storage building on the Wells ranch in Dietrich. When the 20-by-30 foot building was completed and the sun had dropped, they held a barn dance in the new structure.

Only the fiddle was missing, replaced by a stereo system.

Barn raisings, the traditional day-long event when friends and neighbors pitch in to put up a new barn, don't happen too often any more.

As Clell McDowell, on hand for the Wells raising, explained, "Most people don't have time to help others out. And people have the money to hire a contractor."

But the Wells seemed to have no trouble rounding up a work crew, promising workers barbecued hamburgers and a refrigerator full of beer. The Callen clan, of which Tony is a member, claims to have 200 members, which they say is the largest family in the Magic Valley.

Four generations of Callens, from 79-year-old Bert Callen of Jerome, to Tony, who is 19, helped build the barn Sunday.

The new barn will serve as a storage area for horse tack and medicine.

The atmosphere during building was one of bustle and slight confusion, as there was no assigned leader. The crew had only one professional carpenter, and a lot of eager amateurs.

They began with a simple frame of three rows with four log poles in each. Then they divided the jobs of sawing fir boards to length, measuring with string and checking angles with a level and finally fastening the 1-by-10 inch boards along the walls.

The barn was topped by a sloping roof of corrugated metal.

Surprisingly, few mistakes were made.

Occasionally a board was cut to the wrong size, but other was the natural wood barn took shape with ease.

While the younger group worked on the barn, Tony's grandmother, Gail Ann Lans, supervised a cooking crew which grilled hamburgers and served beans and potato salad. The cooks passed the afternoon chatting under a tent, secluded from the sun's heat.

When the building was finished, the workers covered it with clear Insead oil for protection. Then Tony brought his stereo outside, and the new barn was converted into a dance hall.

Tony, 19 and Kathy, 17 live in a trailer on the Dietrich ranch, where Tony and his grandfather, Tom Callen, raise polled Hereford cattle in a corporate partnership.

Tom remembers barn raisings when he was growing up in Jerome. But he admits such neighborly cooperation is rare today.

The barn raising seemed to most just an "excuse for a family get-together" and a chance to help a young couple. But Tom Hays of Twin Falls, Tony's friend, had a more practical reason for aiding his friend.

"I figure if I need a barn built someday, he'll come out and help me," Hays said.

Panama treaty opponents target

President's criticism proper, Church says

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Friday night that President Carter "did it all" when he criticized members of the House for trying to block implementing legislation for the Panama Canal treaties.

Carter warned Congress earlier Friday that the treaties "are the life of the land" and attempts to sabotage them could damage U.S. economic, oil, and defense interests.

"I agree with the president — he said it all," Church said in an airport interview upon arriving here from Washington, D.C.

"The U.S. has pledged its word and it should not go back on it," the veteran Idaho senator added.

"Anti-treaty House members still angry over not having a vote in the treaty ratification process came within two votes Thursday of sending the implementing legislation back to committee, the first step toward putting it on ice.

The vote so stunned the bill's backers that they removed it temporarily from further floor action.

"We will have to stop criticizing others for not honoring their treaties if we stop honoring ours," Church said.

On another matter, Church was particularly amused by Cuban President Fidel Castro's remark Friday that relations between his country and the U.S. are still "perfectly bad" despite some improvement.

"Not until Castro decides that the game he plays in Africa is not worth the candle and withdraws his troops from Angola and Ethiopia, only then will relations begin to improve between our two countries," Church said.

But the Idaho senator said he couldn't predict when Castro might make a move in that direction.

"He will finally find out as we did in Vietnam that the Cuban presence, being a foreign presence, will come to be resented by the Africans," Church said.

Church was passing through Spokane Friday en route to southern Idaho to participate in a pair of hearings on proposals to designate more federal wilderness in the Salmon River area.

Church said he hopes the hearing process will "take the heat and hysteria out of the wilderness issue once and for all" and free up the working forests in central Idaho.

He said he is waiting for the end of the hearing process before committing himself to any one of the three proposals — under consideration — The three call for designating between 1.4 million and 3.2 million acres as wilderness.

On a political vein, Church declined to speculate on the possibility of facing Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, in next year's Senate race in Idaho, a subject being discussed more and more in recent weeks.

"I never try to speculate on the opposition," Church said. "I leave that up to the Republicans."

Geiberger edges Colonial field Bonnett overtakes field

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — Three old pros with a combined 66 years of experience battled for the Colonial National Invitation crown Sunday and the younger of the group — Al Geiberger — was the one who hit the shot when it mattered most.

Geiberger, after losing a four-shot advantage on a warm-up Friday, most holed his tee shot at the par-3 18th hole to fight off fellow veterans Don January and Gene Littler.

"I guess that was the turning point," said Geiberger. "I've never hit the ball close on that hole before. It was nice to see after what I had been through all day. I wasn't swinging very freely out there today."

Geiberger had struggled around the Colonial Country Club course all afternoon and his 3-over-par 73 left some of the more familiar names in golf — including leading money winner Tom Watson — in a race at his.

When Geiberger stepped to the 16th tee he was tied with Littler and only a shot in front of January.

He responded to the pressure by putting his tee shot an inch away from the hole, almost duplicating an ace made earlier in the day by Orville Moody.

The resulting birdie put Geiberger in front for good. Littler took himself out of the chase with a double bogey at the 17th and Geiberger went par-bogey over the final two holes to win his 12th PGA tour event in his 19-year career.

Geiberger, 41, who had not won a tournament since he shot a PGA record 59 in capturing the 1977 Memphis Open, wound up at number 274 for the tournament with January and Littler finishing a shot behind at 275.

January, 49, fired a final round 65 and Littler, 48, birdied the final hole to shoot a 68.

Watson, who started the game eight shots behind Geiberger, got to within two shots of the leader before making a double bogey at the 12th hole. Watson, who had birdied four holes in a row, could not get rolling again and finished at 4-under 276, tied for fourth with Jim Colbert.

Geiberger won $54,000 after having won only $5,000 through the first five months of the year. Littler and January won $26,400 each and with his check, January became both the 20th $1 million winner.

Watson, meanwhile, took home $13,200 which leaves him only $126 short of becoming the first man to win $300,000 in three separate years.

Littler, a veteran of a quarter of a century on the tour, moved ahead of Geiberger at the 14th hole when Geiberger put his second shot in a bunker and missed a 15-foot par putt.

But on a long, treacherous par-4 15th, Littler missed the green and failed to get down a 6-foot par putt that left him tied with Geiberger.

It was on the next hole that Geiberger almost made his ace and when Littler took a 6 on the par-4 17th, Geiberger had the luxury of being able to make a bogey on the final hole and still win the tournament.

That's what he did, missing the fairway to the right, leaving his second shot short of the green behind the bunker, pitching to within 12 feet of the hole and then 2-putting for his bogey.

January moved to within a shot of the lead when the front-runners began to falter, but he missed the green at No. 16, where Geiberger flirted with a hole-in-one, and with Geiberger there eventually cost him a shot at a playoff.

DOVER, Del. (UPI) — Neil Bonnett took advantage of a late caution flag to change all four tires and sprinted away from Cale Yarborough on the restart Sunday to win the $149,025 Mason-Dixon 500 NASCAR Grand National race at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Yarborough had his Chevrolet in a 10-second lead over Bonnett with 10 laps to go when J. D. McDuffie hit the wall with his Chevrolet, forcing a caution flag. Bonnett, taking advantage of NASCAR rules, pitted for a new set of tires and was able to catch up to Yarborough's bumper before the restart.

When the green flag came out at the 496-mile mark, Bonnett shot ahead on the first turn and won by 1.3 seconds.

It was the first victory for Bonnett, of Hueytown, Ala., in the Wood Brothers-prepared Mercury, driven until this year by David Pearson. Bonnett averaged 111.28 mph over the one-mile, high-banked track.

Buddy Baker of Charlotte, N.C., was third in his Chevrolet, two laps back, followed by Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala., in his Ford. Rookie Dale Earnhardt of Charlotte, N.C., was fifth in his Chevrolet, one lap farther back.

The race started with pole-position winner Darrell Waltrip, who later had to change an engine, in front until some early trouble on lap four. Jimmy Means "caused" a first-turn pileup that knocked both Richard Childress and crowd-favorite Richard Petty out of the race.

Nancy Lopez wins title in overtime

CLIFTON, N.J. (UPI) — In a classic confrontation of the past and present, Nancy Lopez sank a 10-foot birdie putt on the second extra hole to beat out Hall of Famer Mickey Wright and win a five-way playoff Sunday in a $100,000 LPGA tournament.

Lopez, who had blown her chance for outright victory on the 18th hole when she missed a five-foot birdie attempt, and Wright both birdied the first extra hole, the 165-yard, par-3 15th, eliminating Jo Ann Washam, Hollis Stacy, and Bonnie Bryant.

On the par-4, 376-yard 16th, Lopez dutifully put in a 10-footer from the right of the hole and claimed her fourth victory of the year when Wright missed from 10 feet.

Wright, a part-time player at 44 but considered by many the greatest woman golfer ever, is the all-time LPGA champion with 82 career victories. She also came within an inch of winning for the first time since 1973 on the final hole of regulation when a 25-foot birdie attempt curled around the cup before rolling by.

It was the second time in seven weeks that an LPGA tournament went down to a five-way playoff, and Lopez was invited in as one, too, when JoAnne Carner won the women's Kemper at Costa Mesa, Calif. Lopez now has finished first or second in her last seven tournaments and the $15,000 prize here lifted her into first place on the earnings list.

Stacy, in the next-to-last group of the day, had earned her place in the playoff when she sank a 12-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole while the other contenders all parred.

Clippers always on Walton list

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Jack Scott, one-time agent of basketball superstar Bill Walton, says Walton had the San Diego Clippers in mind all the time when he asked to be traded from the Portland Trail Blazers last August.

Walton last week signed a seven-year contract with San Diego and the Clippers said he would become the highest paid National Basketball Association player ever.

When Walton asked to be traded, Scott rejected a position as his agent, but later his friendship with Walton became strained. Now, however, they talk with each other almost once a week, Scott said.

"When Bill had made the announcement that he wanted to leave here (Portland), there already had been extensive contracts with San Diego," said Scott. "It was all set that he was to go with San Diego. He wasn't even considering any other place. There were pretty extensive contract talks with Bill and San Diego long before the Trail Blazers gave him permission to find out if they would be interested. I thought the State was objectively the best place for Bill."

Higuera upsets Harold Solomon

HAMBURG, West Germany (UPI) — Jose Higuera of Spain defeated favorite Harold Solomon of the United States 3-6, 6-1, 6-4 Sunday to capture the West German Open Tennis Championship.

Solomon, ranked No. 7 in international tennis, had been favored to beat the 16th-ranked Higuera. But Solomon appeared tired following his somewhat ceremonial match Saturday against West German champion Uli Pinner. Pinner unexpectedly extended Solomon in a match that lasted three hours and 10 minutes. Solomon finally won 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

Higuera was the first Spaniard to win the German Open since Manuel Orantes in 1975.

"My great goal now is Wimbledon," Higuera said.

Seven thousand fans saw the center court match at Hamburg's Rothenbaum Club Sunday, raising the week's attendance to 60,000.

Loch Lomond banks are crumbling

Daily Telegraph, London
Edinburgh — The bonnie, bonnie banks of Loch Lomond have a wee problem: They are falling apart.

Tourists taking the high road and low road to one of Scotland's premier beauty spots may be forced to keep away from the crumbling shoreline.

Heavy rainfall in recent years and the constant tramp of tourists has led to a drastic erosion of the Loch's banks.

Thomas Huxley, deputy director of the Countryside Commission, for Scotland, said Friday: "We have been worrying about this problem for many years. The shoreline has been constantly narrowing, soil is being lost and a lot of trees are falling down. "If the public want the loch to remain as beautiful as it is now, then I am afraid they will have to pay the price for their recreational enjoyment and park further away."

Environmental groups, landowners and local authority officials, attended a seminar in the village of Drymen, near the loch Friday.
