

White convicted of manslaughter

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Former San Francisco city official Dan White was convicted of voluntary manslaughter Monday for killing Mayor George Moscone and homosexual Supervisor Harvey Milk in shootings he admitted he carried out in rage.

White faces a maximum jail term of seven years and eight months for the Nov. 27 City Hall shootings that shocked the city. The minimum sentence is five years. No sentencing date was set.

The prosecution had sought the death penalty, but defense attorney Douglas Schmidt contended that White was mentally unbalanced and acted in the "heat of passion" because Moscone refused to reappoint him to the seat he resigned on the Board of Supervisors. He asked the jurors to return a verdict of voluntary manslaughter.

The jury deliberated for 36 hours over six days. They said they had reached a decision on the Moscone shooting last Friday, but needed three more days to reach a verdict on MILK.

Superior Court Judge Walter Calagano set June 19 for a presentence report by the Probation Department.

"This is a difficult decision to handle... especially for those of you who were at the scene," said Mayor Dianna Feinstein, who was nearby when Moscone and Milk were shot and was later elected by the supervisors to succeed him. "As I looked at the law, this was a murder — two murders."

Rejection by members of San Francisco's homosexual community, who considered Milk their leader, was swift and bitter. They gathered within an hour of the verdicts to march in protest in City Hall.

Five jurors cried and dabbed their eyes as the verdict was read. When the panel filed into the courtroom, Juror Grace-Jackson, 75, looked directly at White's wife and smiled. White looked at his wife with a faint smile on his face as he entered the court but sat impassively as he heard through most of the trial when the verdicts were read.

Several jurors glanced at the defendant's family who sat behind bullet-proof glass separating the court area from the spectators.

White's wife, Mary Ann, was shaking and clutched a handkerchief as the verdicts were announced. "Oh, thank God!" she sighed and cried as each verdict was read.

"I was greatly disappointed," chief prosecutor Thomas Norman said. "It was obviously an emotionally inspired verdict. It was a tragic decision swayed by emotion."

Throughout the trial the defense had sought to picture White as a man with severe mental problems who was not in control of his senses when he shot the mayor and Milk.

"I think the verdict was supported by the evidence," Schmidt said. "It was an awful thing and I don't have anything to say to the families, but I think it's a time to mend things, get together. It's a tragedy but it should be put behind us."

Schmidt said White "really had no reaction" to the verdict.

"I think he's really remorseful and filled with guilt. He can't react."

As the jury filed out of the courtroom, Schmidt shook hands with juror William Wald and said, "Thank you so much."

Milk's district encompassed the city's homosexual neighborhood at the foot of Twin Peaks.

Paul Lorch, managing editor of the Bay Area Reporter, a homosexual newspaper, charged the prosecution of White was not carried out "with vim and vigor." He said homosexuals believe "deaths" were made in prosecution of the case.

City Council hones budget ax

City manager government end proposed

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — After a four month study, the city council budget committee Monday recommended the existing form of city government in Twin Falls be abolished as a budget cut.

Citing the "extreme fiscal challenge" the 1 percent initiative poses to Twin Falls, the three-member committee called for replacement of the city manager type of government with a popularly elected mayor and a smaller city council.

The change would incorporate more people in local decision-making, committee members concluded in their 13-page report, as well as reduce government overhead.

Committee members also called for more than a dozen specific budget cuts, which would if implemented reduce the annual Twin Falls budget by $239,100.

The three members of the committee are council members Gary McClusky, chairman, Jim Smallwood and Chris Talkingdon.

Their four month budget study was "neither an easy nor a pleasant task," McClusky said, "but passage of the 1 percent initiative has required us to severely question the methods and techniques of today's municipal operation."

- According to McClusky, the fundamental aim of the study was to reduce local government costs while preserving vital services.
- Specifically, the report recommended:
 - That "vital services of police, fire, water and wastewater treatment" should be given highest funding priorities.
 - That there should be cross training of police and fire employees to make each more familiar with the other.
 - That the waste water treatment, water supply, water distribution and irrigation functions of city government should be consolidated into a single wastewater department. This would allow elimination of one employee position.
 - That city government inspection activities should be coordinated through a combined fire/marshaling inspector. This would allow the elimination of three employee positions.
 - That all parks, recreation and golf activities should be combined under a central administrator. One employee position would be eliminated.
 - That the city should move to an increased reliance on user fees.
 - That new growth within the city limits should be encouraged.
 - That a permanent budget committee should review all city budgets constantly.
 - That there be an immediate hiring freeze of city employees.

Twin Falls City Councilwoman Mary McClusky outlines proposed budget cuts

- Tri-monthly water readings, allowing the elimination of one city employee position, and savings on gas and postage; according to the report, this change will save $33,000.
- Allowing no-city vehicles to be taken home at night, except by the city manager, police and fire chiefs.
- Subcontracting water sample tests to a private business, thereby eliminating the need for a $35,000 test lab and a laboratory technician.
- Closing of Harry Barry pool, saving $3,000.
- Eliminating wages now paid city band musicians, saving $3,500.
- Discontinuing city fireworks, saving $3,000.
- Reviewing the present city system of providing complete medical coverage for city employees and their families.
- Reclassifying cost-of-living pay increases as raises to avoid predetermined budget outlays.

The report now goes to the Twin Falls City Council. The three committee members urged Twin Falls voters to get involved in implementing the plan or "come up with a better idea."

Crowd polarized by Salmon River area differences

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

SALMON — An estimated 500 environmentalists, outdoorsmen, loggers, miners and outlaws converged on Salmon Monday to stake their claims to the Salmon River country.

The resulting confrontation centered on the now-familiar issues of the wilderness struggle — employment vs. enjoyment, locals vs. outsiders and business vs. environment.

Loggers from Salmon sporting T-shirts bearing the message, "Lock it up — we'll burn it up," mingled with environmentalists from throughout eastern Idaho and around the Salmon Elks Lodge.

In the lodge, Idaho Sen. Frank Church chaired the public hearing of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources committee on how much of Idaho's vast central wilderness encompassing most of the drainage of the Salmon River, the River of No Return, should be added to the natural wilderness system.

The air crackled with intense emotion and animosity, which erupted from time to time in boos and harsh words — but no physical violence — while nearly 180 speakers took eight hours to address the crowd packed into the steamy hall.

At issue was the question of whether to set aside 2.3 million acres of the Salmon River country as wilderness, as proposed by the River of No Return Wilderness Council, or to establish a wilderness of 1.3 million acres and open the rest to mining and timber cutting as proposed by Idaho's timber companies.

Spokesmen for the environmentalist position outnumbered timber and mining spokesmen 2 to 1 Monday but another 100 speakers are scheduled for today.

The crowd seemed split by differences over what is the issue in question. Not one speaker favored compromise wilderness proposals offered by President Carter and Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus or Idaho Gov. John Evans.

Further fueling the crowd was the fact that the overwhelming majority of speakers were not from Salmon while a large group of local loggers said they were most directly affected by the wilderness issue.

Only 21 of 108 pro-environmentalist speakers were from Salmon, but surprisingly, only 19 of 53 pro-timber industry speakers were from Salmon.

Idaho Congressman Steve Symms opened testimony with a call for a wilderness as large as the existing Idaho Primitive Area and Salmon River Breaks Primitive Area, about 1.4 million acres.

An aide to Idaho Congressman George H. Brown delivered a handwritten list for multiple rather than single use, management of national forest-lands wherever possible.

Environmentalists listed a broad range of benefits from the larger proposal, including preservation of wildlife and fish habitat, water quality, and a pristine environment where man can renew his spirit.

They also noted the economic benefits to Idaho's multimillion-dollar tourist industry of the attraction of the largest wilderness in the lower 48 states.

Spokesmen for the timber industry, on the other hand, said the larger wilderness the more jobs will be lost in and around Salmon.

John M. Blayden, director of the Salmon Chamber of Commerce, said 15 men have been laid off already this year — from Champion-International Co.'s North Fork Mill and 28 more employees will be laid off from the firm's Salmon Mill June 4. He said 57 more timber industry jobs also will be lost as an indirect result of the mill layoffs.

"This community cannot tolerate this kind of economic loss and eroding tax base and survive with current economic conditions," Blayden concluded.

Salmon dentist Richard Smith, however, accused Champion International of orchestrating the layoffs to fire up its employees for the hearing.

Smith said Champion's actions were a "blatant attempt by a corporate giant to whip up its dependent employees." Smith said the firm expanded its mill capacity in the Salmon area "beyond immediately available timber supplies, added extra shifts of men, depleted its stocks rapidly, and layoffs resulted."

Smith also noted that next year the allowable cut on the Salmon National Forest will be higher than it has ever been.

Jack McFrederick, lumber sales manager for Champion Building Products in Salmon, answered Smith's charges.

He said Champion laid off some workers now to allow its current timber inventory to last through next winter. The alternative, he said, would have been massive layoffs next winter.

When asked by the Times-News why his firm expanded mill capacity in the first place, he blamed Church and other politicians.

"I guess we were misled to a certain extent," he said. It was his company's belief that no new wilderness would be created in Idaho outside existing primitive areas, he said.

As for the future, he said Champion would be able to "maintain (present) sawmill capacity" if the firm is allowed to bid on all of the 38 million board feet of timber that the Salmon National Forest plans to offer for sale next year.

He said, however, that a 2.3-million-acre wilderness would reduce the amount offered for sale by 6 million board feet.

Battle lines drawn for Panama Canal treaty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Panama critics and supporters served notice in the House Monday they will wage a battle of amendments over controversial legislation to implement the turnover of the Panama Canal.

The opening day of debate in the House, however, was confined to general statements by leading opponents and proponents regarding well-known positions.

The Democratic leadership decided last week to postpone the amending process until a future undetermined date because of weak support for the administration's position in the House.

Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., introduced the basic legislation to implement the two 1977 treaties, ratified last year by the Senate, to turn the historic waterway over to Panama by Dec. 31, 1999.

The implementing legislation is required to fill in many details sketched out by the treaties, and to provide authority for U.S. base consolidations in Panama, and payment of generous retirement benefits.

Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, ticked off provisions which the administration found objectionable in the Murphy bill, indicating he and others would offer improving amendments.

Provisions which the administration considers objectionable include a measure to require revenues from the canal to be paid directly to the U.S. Treasury instead of going directly to Panama, as well as a provision to allow the United States to take full control of the waterway in the event of war.

Then, Bauman said, the House would be forced to negotiate a final version of the legislation in a House-Senate conference because of that prospect, Bauman urged "toughening up" the Murphy bill.

Both Murphy and Zablocki warned the House the legislation must be passed by Oct. 1 when the controversial Panama canal treaties will come into effect.

Otherwise, they said canal operations might be impaired or suspended entirely, and U.S. employees would go unpaid.

Court denies execution stays

RAIFORD, Fla. (UPI) — Florida's Supreme Court Monday denied stay of execution for John Spenklink and Willie Darden, moving the condemned killers a step closer to dying in the electric chair Wednesday morning.

The Supreme Court's action followed earlier setbacks for Spenklink and Darden in state and federal courts, but defense attorneys said they would continue the appeals process.

Spenklink and Darden learned of the rulings in special isolation cells at Florida State Prison, where they were described by superintendent David Brierlton as "apprehensive, but hopeful."

Florida's high court was unanimous in rejecting Spenklink's motion for a stay, but divided 4-3 in denying Darden's stay, with the majority ruling "the appeal is without merit."

Earlier Monday, U.S. District Judge William Stafford rejected Spenklink's motion for a stay and Florida Circuit Judge John Dewell in Bartow denied a motion to grant Darden another trial based on new evidence. However, Dewell did hear arguments on additional motions to set aside the verdict and sentence and grant a stay of execution.

Spenklink's attorney, Joel Berger, said he would appeal Stafford's ruling to the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Darden's attorneys claimed to have new evidence showing Darden was getting his car repaired less than an hour before a Lakeland furniture store owner was killed. They said this showed Darden couldn't have had time to commit the murder that put him on Death Row.

But Assistant Attorney General Charles Corces Jr. said it was only a 12-minute drive from the garage to the furniture store and Darden had plenty of time to rob the store and kill its owner.

Judge Dewell agreed with Corces. "I have not the technical expertise to evaluate evidence and I do not think this testimony would have changed the verdict," he ruled.

Judge Stafford rejected Berger's arguments that Spenklink did not get a fair trial because prosecutors failed to give defense attorneys advance notice of the specific arguments they would present in seeking the death penalty.

Assistant Attorney General Marky Iald Stafford the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected the same argument last year.

Rescued lad revived

Fireman Robert Staunton gives mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to Arthur Roblson, 2, after he was rescued from a second floor apartment during a fire Sunday in Boston's Roxbury section. Not breathing when found in a bathroom, the boy was reported in good condition Monday. He was treated for smoke inhalation.

Fuel holding defended

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oil companies withheld fuel from the market this year, but the move was "in the public interest" and was not a plot to get higher prices for gasoline, Deputy Energy Secretary John O'Leary said Monday.

O'Leary told the Senate Energy Committee that oil companies pulled back on their fuel allocations because imports from Iran decreased and their raw material could otherwise have gotten dangerously low.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., asked O'Leary about the suspicion that the industry was holding back to intensify the gasoline shortage in hopes of driving up prices in a tight market.

When crude oil available to refiners was declining, some slowed production to build up their inventories, O'Leary said, and that kept them from pulling themselves into the danger zone of a critically short supply.

Now, he said, federal officials are encouraging oil companies "to short gasoline in favor of building up middle distillate stocks" to produce the heating oil the nation will need next winter.

Cabinet supports Begin

By United Press International

Prime Minister Menachem Begin's flinty opposition to creation of a Palestinian state won Israeli Cabinet approval Monday, but Egypt said it wants new talks this week to produce a strong Palestinian authority in the occupied lands.

Reports from Beirut said a mechanized Israeli force crossed into south Lebanon and took positions around the border town of Chebana and Israeli-backed Christian militia shelled U.N. Norwegian troop installations in the frontier region.

Javits provided guards

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department said Monday Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., will be given protection "wherever he is" because the Iranian government has declared him and his wife criminals.

State Department spokesman Ken Brown said the Iranian announcements "singling out the couple for criticism and declaring both wanted criminals" are a matter of concern to us.

A Javits aide said two Capitol Hill police have been assigned to protect the senator, while Mrs. Javits, who lives in New York City, has been assigned special protection by police there.

Officials, Indians talk

RED LAKE, Minn. (UPI) — Bureau of Indian Affairs officials negotiated Monday with dissenting Indians who seized a police station, touching off two days of burning and gunfire in which two young Chippewa Indians were slain.

After a "general quieting" Sunday night, some 25 FBI agents remained on the perimeter of the 663,000-acre Red Lake Indian Reservation and sought Justice Department permission to enter the reservation. BIA officials met with participants in the shooting, burning and looting that started early Saturday and caused an estimated $2 million in damages.

Limit on power use seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The General Accounting Office said Monday if nuclear power is limited or stopped, America will have to "severely limit" use of electricity except in the unlikely event it could make up the difference through other energy sources.

The GAO, which acts as the investigative arm of Congress, said it based its conclusion on optimistic assumptions about the growth of known fuel supplies and conservative assumptions about the prospects for energy from new sources.

Safety enforcement lax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two members of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission admitted Monday the agency had been lax and complacent in enforcing safety standards on the nuclear power industry. A third said he favored a moratorium on new reactors.

Their testimony before the House subcommittee investigating the March 28 mishap came after the head of a congressional task force concluded that "an accident such as occurred at TMI not only could happen again, but is likely to at any time."

Blackout hits Boston

BOSTON (UPI) — An explosion and fire ripped through a power station Monday night, plunging a wide area of Boston and several of its suburbs into darkness.

A spokesman for the Boston Edison Co. said no one was injured in the blast, but said as many as 125,000 people were without electricity.

He was 60.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Venezuelan Ambassador Santiago Ochoa Monday pleaded with nine revolutionaries occupying his embassy to lay down their arms, leave the building under Red Cross protection and take political asylum in his country.

Ochoa and seven other embassy officials slipped out of the five-story embassy Sunday night, by way of the roof after acquiring arms and taking over the back half of the building.

Tito back from Moscow

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — President Josip Broz Tito returned from Moscow Monday and he had told Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev Yugoslavia's policy of nonalignment is a basis for its relations with all countries.

Tito, in a brief statement at Batajnica military airfield outside the Yugoslav capital, described his five-day visit to the Soviet Union as "successful."

Money laundering described

Tuesday, May 22, 1979 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-3

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Daniel Minchew, the key witness against Sen. Herman Talmadge, said Monday the Georgia Democrat was aware of every phase of the scheme to launder money through a secret bank account for Talmadge's personal use.

Minchew, a former Talmadge aide who made his long-awaited appearance before the Senate Ethics Committee, said he and Talmadge discussed different ways to raise additional money for the senator and ways of "sheltering" it.

A thought for today
A thought for the day, President Franklin D. Roosevelt said, "The truth is found when men are free to pursue it."

They decided to divert expense reimbursements and campaign contributions to an account from which it could be withdrawn as needed.

Minchew admitted his actions had been wrong, but said, "My wrongdoing evolved out of misplaced loyalty."

"Senator Talmadge had been for me a real hero," said Minchew, who served as Talmadge's top aide from 1971 to 1974.

Under questioning from committee special counsel Carl Bardley, Minchew described the secret account at the Riggs National Bank through which some $39,000 in money from campaign contributions and false expense claims passed in 1973 and 1974.

Minchew said the decision to set up the account stemmed from discussions, possibly as early as 1972, when Sen. Talmadge would say to me things about the difficulty of being a public official and the expenses that were involved. At one time we discussed ways of sheltering money to get additional funds for him.

Minchew said his former employer was "keenly aware" of his financial affairs and counted the change returned by staff members sent out to make purchases for him.

"He was fully aware of what was going on," Minchew said.

Talmadge has denied any knowledge of the diverted funds and accused Minchew of embezzling the money.

Suits for care barred

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday let stand a decision barring soldiers who were forced to watch a 1953 nuclear explosion from suing the government for the cost of medical care.

The justices denied a hearing to Stanley Jaffee, a former serviceman who claimed he developed inoperable breast cancer because he was forced to march toward a nuclear test blast at Camp Desert Rock, Nev., in the summer of 1953.

Jaffee, a 47-year-old River Edge, N.J., pharmacist with a wife and three children, said he ard a troop of soldiers stood only 2,000 to 3,000 yards from the site of the explosion, wearing no protective clothing.

As the bomb exploded, Jaffee said, he felt a blast of intense heat and saw a red ball on the desert floor an instant before a blinding light cut off the view.

In 1977, Jaffee said, he developed inoperable breast cancer, which has spread throughout his body, as a result of his exposure to "massive doses" of radiation.

Jaffee filed a $13 million lawsuit in federal court and sought an order requiring the government to warn former servicemen who participated in the test of the danger to them, and to finance medical care for illnesses resulting from radiation exposure.

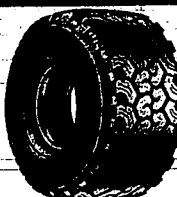

U.S. District Judge Herbert Stern dismissed the case because the government has "sovereign immunity."

Carter must mend fences before trip

By JAMES RESTON
©1979 N.Y. Times Service
WASHINGTON — Before he goes to Vienna next month for his summit meeting with the Soviet leaders on a second strategic military arms treaty, President Carter is clearly going to have to come to some sort of understanding with the Congressional leaders of both parties on the summit of Capitol Hill.

Carter and his principal foreign policy advisers are now preparing for the Vienna meeting with President Brezhnev, and they probably remember that the last U.S.-Soviet summit meeting in Vienna — between President Kennedy and Chairman Khrushchev in 1961 — was no Vienna walk, but a failure and almost a disaster because the preparations were inadequate and Kennedy and Khrushchev misjudged one another and the problem.

This coming Vienna meeting is even more complicated. In 1961, Kennedy was at the beginning of his presidency, and Khrushchev was at the height of his power in Moscow. Kennedy insisted at Vienna in 1961 that he should talk personally and privately with Khrushchev, without interference by Congressional leaders or even the presence in the critical talks of his own Secretary of State. It was not his most brilliant idea, and it certainly is not a model for the next Vienna summit.

The treaty to be signed next month will extend into the middle 1980's, beyond the presidential authority of Carter's term of office, and probably beyond the political and physical power of Brezhnev. It can be signed by two men, but it is a covenant between nations, and cannot become the law of the United States without the approval of two-thirds of the members present and voting in the Senate.

This raises for Carter, and also for the Republican Party, not later in Vienna but now, some very hard questions:

- Will Carter go it alone in Vienna or take the leaders of both parties in the Senate with him? Woodrow Wilson failed at the peace conference in Versailles after the first world war, and lost the League of Nations, by playing a lone hand and defying the reservations of the Senate. Harry Truman succeeded in San Francisco at the end of the second world war and signed the United Nations by taking the Senate leaders, and particularly Vandenberg of Michigan, with him.
- Would the Republican Leader of the Senate, Howard Baker of Tennessee, and the ranking member of the Republican Party in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Jacob Javits of New York, go to Vienna, if invited? If so, on what terms?
- Would the Democratic Leader of the Senate, Robert Byrd of West Virginia and the new Democratic Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. Frank Church of Idaho go to Vienna to give their advice, if not their consent, to the president's decisions there?

These are only a couple of the many questions the Carter planners for Vienna have to face, but they also confront the Republican Party with political decisions — it would rather avoid. In partisan terms, the easiest way for the Republicans is to let Carter go it alone in Vienna, make him take personal responsibility for the ambiguous and even dangerous terms of the treaty, and then judge him later in the presidential election campaign.

This is a tempting political scenario for the Republicans. As many of their most partisan leaders see it, Carter is already in deep political trouble on the home front with inflation, high prices, high interest rates and gas shortages. Their major theme is that he is a good man but a "loser" who cannot even command the allegiance of his own Democratic majorities in the House and Senate, and might be finished off by one more major defeat.

The more moderate Republicans however, including Baker, Javits, Bush of Texas, and John Anderson of Illinois, don't really want to play politics with the control of nuclear military arms in the world, and would probably agree that their parties should be represented at Vienna to listen and advise.

The Republicans have another very practical political problem. They have the votes in the Senate to defeat any SALT treaty Carter may sign in Vienna, and in the process weaken even further his ability to govern. But if they destroy Carter, they have to consider the alternative of running against Kennedy of Massachusetts, and for most Republican leaders this could be less attractive than running against Carter.

The chances are, therefore, that Carter will invite the Congressional leaders to join him in Vienna, and that they will accept, without commitment to agree with his decisions there. Brezhnev may not like what they say, or approve of the reservations they may have about the treaty, but better to hear them before it is signed than try to deal with the consequences later on.

All this has to be considered by those who are planning for Vienna. So far, the administration has merely been saying that the Senate must accept the terms of a treaty whose text has not yet been published, and that must not even think about reservations, which would probably kill the treaty and lead to an even more alarming arm race.

Not surprisingly, the Republicans do not regard this as a particularly happy proposition — agree with what you, haven't seen or else? Carter is probably going to have to do better than this. He cannot get any firm agreements in advance from the Senate leaders, but he will either take them along and let them understand his dilemmas at Vienna or deal with them later under more difficult circumstances. In short, he cannot make peace or even sense with the Soviet leaders in Vienna unless he first makes peace with the Senate leaders at home.

Gas shortage not stopping highway deaths

A bloody five days of highway accidents marred the summer warmth and beauty of the past weekend. Area police officers tagged the weekend one of the worst Magic Valley highway traffic periods in several years. The final tally: seven deaths, more than 10 injuries.

Most of the accidents occurred when the vehicles left the road. Some happened when drivers failed to observe stop signs. And one which resulted in the deaths of four Buhl residents, occurred at the unmarked intersection of a country road.

Meanwhile, local gas stations are gearing up for one of the busiest traffic weekends of the year — Memorial Day. Despite reduced supplies, the gas-station owners are saying they should make it through the weekend. Many say they expect fewer tourists, but several "one-tank" trips over the three-day holiday weekend.

A one-tank trip won't take motorists very far. Many may opt to head for Magic Valley's picturesque lakes and recreation areas. Others may choose to simply visit friends or shop in hometown stores. Whatever the option, people probably will be out on the roads despite gas shortages. They'll still be cruising the roads in a holiday spirit, paying more attention to scenery or a good conversation than to the highway ahead.

Traffic safety experts tell us that most highway accidents occur within a few miles of the victim's home. So, if you're driving area roads this Memorial Day weekend, don't let down your guard simply because you're not on a long trip.

Observe stop signs by stopping, rather than slowing down. If you're traveling country roads, be wary of intersections — even those with which you are familiar. And don't forget the No. 1 rule of defensive driving — watch out for the other driver.

We've already had one bloody weekend on Magic Valley highways. Less gas will probably mean more local drivers on area roads. Let's make sure they're still driving those roads in June.

Ellen Goodman Replacement for Abzug

WASHINGTON — There are many things which Lynda Johnson Robb knows about firsthand and intimately. She knows, for example, how it feels never to quite have an identity of your own. "I've been Lady Bird's daughter, Chuck's wife and Cindy, Cathy and Jennifer's mother."

She knows too about the problems of being a homemaker in an era that often devalues that role. "I was a party and a doctor said to me, what else do you do aside from being a mother? I said to him, what else do you do besides being a doctor?"

Now, she also knows what it is like to be a working mother. There are the pros: "We are all coming to have a desire to do something on our own." And the cons: "Pressure."

Moreover, this 35-year-old woman who has grown from awkwardness to assurance has a sense of what she represents in her new job as chair of the President's Advisory Committee on Women. "Women like me, who care about women's issues but have not been active. There are a lot of people out there who feel they have not been represented in the women's movement."

"This is the constituency which Lynda Johnson Robb will appeal to in her new job. She has been thrust from a relatively personal life as wife of the lieutenant-governor of Virginia to a very public role, and from the periphery of the women's movement to a big scene in the chief from which Bella Abzug was so crudely rejected.

Yet, sitting in the ballroom-sized green and white living room of her plush McLean, Va., home, as she got her children off to school and organized her day, I couldn't help thinking about what she didn't know: the issues. As she put it herself, "I feel like the exam is tomorrow and I've been cutting class."

Lynda Robb is a good student and she's cramming hard. As head of a committee with little power — it is not even technically allowed to lobby — but with high visibility, her exam will be graded by women and by Carter, whose popularity among women's rights activists at the moment isn't very high.

Both of these women's predecessors, Middle Costanza and Bella Abzug — whatever their flaws — were part of an ideology trying to build a movement that would cut across class lines. Their definition of success depended on building an alliance with all women, but especially perhaps with the working women, the working-class woman and the poor.

We now see a shift to the idea that success depends on building an alliance with more traditional middle-class values and with women who are homemakers.

Abzug was fired because she contradicted the president and because she took sides against him on economic issues, especially the issues of working-class women and the poor. Robb was appointed, quite consciously, because she could, as the administration said, reach out to the other married, mothering, middle-class homemakers.

The women's movement has, like almost every other social movement, worked better for the middle class than for the lower class. Abortion is now a right reserved, for all practical purposes, for the non-poor. The acceptance of day care has provided more in the way of moral support for middle-class mothers than in services for poorer mothers. Even sex discrimination cases, like the one at the telephone company, have ended up helping educated women more often than working-class women.

The country works on the squeaky theory, and the middle class often squeaks loudest.

But the women's rights organizations — especially those who quit the Advisory Committee in the wake of the Abzug Affair — have kept their sense of commitment to the poor, the working woman, the displaced homemaker, the single parent.

Sarah Weddington has stressed in several speeches lately her fear that the movement divided emotional support, and homemakers. Lynda Robb's appointment is meant to heal this gap. Robb is a quick student and it would be a shame if in the attempt to heal one breach we ended up emphasizing another — the gap between the classes.

Mother's Day sellers rounded up Police take carnation peddlers for a ride

By MIKE ROYKO
© Chicago Sun-Times
Chicago — It's been a long time since Louie Webster had a regular job. Almost 10 years. That was when a couple of street punks wanted his money. So they covered his head and face with a pipe and almost took out an eye. They pinned the hearing in one ear and left him with a fragile sense of balance.

Since then, Louie gets by with odd jobs. Mostly he washes dishes, although he can't stay on his feet all day. And when the weather is good, he sells flowers on the street.

That's what he was doing last Mother's Day. He was peddling carnations for $2 a small bunch to motorists who were about to visit their mothers or their mothers graves.

Mother's day is a big day for flowers. But a lot of people forget to go to the florist, so they reach out of the car window and buy a bouquet from a curbside peddler.

If a peddler stakes out a busy corner, he can make $200 on a Mother's Day. For somebody like Louie, that's room and board and walking-around money for two or three weeks.

Louie figured to have a good day. The sun was shining, traffic was heavy, and his corner led to a couple of cemeteries.

But before he could sell even one carnation, he pulled the paddy wagon. "Get in," the policeman said.

"What for?" asked Louie.

"It's illegal to sell flowers on Sunday," said the policeman.

"Who am I hurting?" asked Louie.

"It's illegal," said the policeman.

"Get in."

"But what about my flowers?" said Louie.

"I already paid for 'em," said the policeman.

"Give 'em to your mother," said the policeman.

Louie climbed into the wagon and they tossed his flowers in behind. Then they went a few blocks and stopped where Bob Gavrick was selling his carnations.

Bob is 20 and is a College student. Right now, with part-time jobs at a premium, selling flowers is his only income.

"Get in," the policeman said.

"I didn't do anything," said Bob.

"You're selling flowers," the policeman said.

"You want to buy some for your mother?" said Bob.

"Come on, kid, I got to book you."

Bob and his carnations joined Louie and his carnations in the paddy wagon.

A few more blocks and they found Johnny Zeak, who is 62, has a bum leg and draws a disability check. It was the first time he had sold flowers. A friend had told him it was a good way to make a few bucks while getting fresh air.

"Get in," said the policeman.

"You got to be kidding," said John.

"I'm not kidding, in."

So John and his carnations joined Louie and Bob and their carnations in the paddy wagon.

"I'll tell you something," said Louie a little later. "Now I know what it must smell like in a funeral flower car. We had all those flowers in there, no paddy wagon ever smelled good."

By the time the sweep was over, three more flower peddlers were in the wagon and everybody went to the police station, where they were given tickets for peddling on Sunday, which is illegal.

Then they were released, and their flowers returned.

"So what do I do with my flowers?" asked Louie Webster.

"Plant 'em," said a policeman.

Later, Louie said: "A guy's just trying to make a honest living, trying to stay off welfare. Who was I hurting? Is there something bad about selling some flowers on Mother's Day?"

"I think what happened was that one of the sergeants has got it in for one of the guys who sells regular. So he took it out on all of us. What should I do now? Go knock someone on the head and rob him?"

The police said they simply were enforcing the law and preventing traffic delays caused by people slowing down to buy flowers.

"We picked Mother's Day," one policeman said, "because we knew they would be on their way."

Another policeman said it was "the largest mass arrest of flower vendors in my 28 years on the force."

My goodness, that is something to brag about — the largest roundup of carnation pushers in a quarter of a century. Imagine that.

But I'm not surprised. I've seen this kind of police diligence get results before.

There was a time when the street corners of Chicago used to be studded with hot-dog pushers, most of them operated by little old men in baggy pants who had Greek or Italian accents.

Now, thanks to the police department protecting us from illegal mustard, onion, relish and a dash of celery salt — not to mention hot tamales — the hot-dog pushers are almost extinct.

A few years ago, Eddie Wigkins used to sell balloons. He also sold yo-yos.

But the police cracked down on Eddie and his balloons finally blew town.

Because of this devotion to the letter of the law, we are also safe from those who might want to push hot chestnuts, Italian ice, lemonade or a waffle with powdered sugar on it.

And now, we are no longer threatened by the illegal sale of flowers on Mother's Day.

We're lucky to live in the safety of Chicago. In Rome, somebody might try to sell you a slice of melon on the street, or a glass of lemonade. In Paris, you might be accosted by people pushing flowers or crepes grand marlier. In Scandinavian lands, you might be consoled by someone pushing raw or grilled herring. And in New York the police don't even try to protect you from the hot-dog and chestnut pushers.

But Chicago is one of the few great cities of the world where the police have managed to eliminate all the street vendors.

Well, almost all of them. They've taken care of the hot dogs, balloons, chestnuts, waffles and flowers.

However, if you try, you won't have trouble finding street vendors who will sell you the world where the police will cross your eyes and cook your brains.

So if your teen-aged kid comes home tonight talking funny and trying to walk on the ceiling, you can be sure of one thing: Thanks to the Chicago police, your kid has not been smoking carnations.

Committee heeds film stars, votes medal for John Wayne

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Saying John Wayne is more than an actor, "John Wayne is America," fellow film stars Monday urged Congress to create a special gold medal for the ailing Hollywood veteran.

"Please, Mr. Chairman," Elizabeth Taylor appealed to a Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs subcommittee, "let us show him our appreciation and love."

"He is a hero and we have so few left." "John Wayne is not just an actor," said Maureen O'Hara, Wayne's co-star in several films. "John Wayne is America."

Photographers jockeyed for position around the stars as they testified at a hearing to review legislation authorizing President Carter to order a special gold medal for Wayne.

As soon as the testimony ended, the subcommittee approved the medal, and following a suggestion by Ms. O'Hara, voted to inscribe it, "John Wayne, America."

Carter has given the bill his backing. Committee chairman Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., told the session he supports the idea. "John Wayne has already received an Oscar from his supporters in Hollywood," he said. "Now it is time for his supporters in Congress to give him a congressional Oscar."

Wayne, who was 72 last week, has been hospitalized recently with cancer.

Film Actors Guild President Kathleen Nolan praised Wayne for helping Americans "know our history and culture."

"He has helped to shape our national mythology." Other testimonials, read by bill sponsor Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Calif., came from such stars as: Katherine Hepburn: "It's about time." "Frank Sinatra: "John Wayne is in truth a star-spangled man whom so proudly we hail..."

Robert Mitchum: Wayne "represents the rock-solid faith of our founders in the American dream."

Carter, who visited Wayne during a recent trip to California, said in a statement the actor's "true grit helped to win the West, World War II and thousands of our hearts."

Wayne was born in Winterset, Iowa. He made his first film, "The Big Trail," in 1930 — and 40 years and more than 150 films later, he received the Oscar for his role in "True Grit."

Only 13 congressional gold medals have been issued this century — to such Americans as Jonas Salk, Charles Lindbergh, Walt Disney, Bob Hope, Robert Frost, the Wright brothers and Robert Kennedy.

Treatment helping duchess

PARIS (UPI) — The 82-year-old Duchess of Windsor, the American divorcee for whom King Edward VIII gave up his throne, is responding to treatment for a kidney infection at the American Hospital of Paris, a close friend said Monday.

Hospital officials declined to update their report late Sunday that the American-born duchess was responding well to treatment.

But a friend said the duchess was taken to the hospital Thursday because of a kidney infection that followed her operation two months ago for an intestinal obstruction and said she is doing well.

The informant said the duchess will remain in the hospital at least through the coming weekend because so few doctors are available at such times to make house calls.

It was the second time this year that the duchess, the former Wallis Warfield Simpson, was hospitalized. She spent most of February in the American hospital after her intestinal operation.

Expert links teeth marks with Bundy

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — A dental expert who claims Theodore Bundy is the only person who could have made the bite marks on the body of a Florida State University coed testified Monday there was enough evidence to justify taking impressions of Bundy's teeth.

The state called Dr. Richard Sorvorn of Coral Gables to try to dispute Bundy's claim the search warrant used to take the dental impressions was unlawful because there was no evidence linking him to the murder of Lisa Levy.

Bundy is scheduled to go on trial June 11 on charges of strangling Miss Levy, 20, and her Chi Omega sorority sister, Margaret Bowman, 21, on Jan. 15, 1976.

The comparison of the bite marks taken from Miss Levy's breast and buttock with Bundy's teeth is considered the strongest physical evidence the state has connecting Bundy to the murders. The state said the search warrant knocked out all of the evidence obtained under it must be excluded.

Key witness contemplated two deaths

LONDON (UPI) — Former male model Norman Scott told a court Monday he contemplated slitting and also considered killing Jeremy Thorpe, the former leader of the Liberal party who is on trial for conspiring to kill Scott.

"I said I'd shoot him," Scott said in a letter read in court. In direct testimony Scott said: "I had it in mind to kill Thorpe."

Scott spent all day on the witness stand in London's famous Old Bailey courtroom, beginning the third week of a trial in which Thorpe and three other men are charged with conspiracy to murder him. Thorpe also is accused of inciting another man to carry out the murder. All four defendants have denied the charges.

Thorpe is the most prominent British politician ever tried on such charges, which led to his defeat in the May 3 general election and cost him the seat in the House of Commons he held for 20 years.

Scott testified in a dull, hesitant voice in 4½ hours of direct examination. The court adjourned just when he reached the "Incident on the moor," in which the prosecution alleges that a "hit man" hired to kill Scott muffed the job and killed Scott's Great Dane, Finta, instead.

Thorpe listened impassively as Scott spoke of repeated suicide attempts, frequent stays in mental hospitals, of constant moves, being in an out of work and continually broke.

She knows too about the problems of being a homemaker in an era that often rewards that who are not at a party and a doctor said to me, what else do you do aside from being a mother? I said to him, what else do you do besides being a doctor?

Now, she also knows what it is like to be a working mother. There are the pros: "We are all coming to have a desire to do something on our own." And the cons: "Pressure."

Moreover, this 35-year-old woman who has grown from awkwardness to assurance has a sense of what she represents in her new job as chair of the President's Advisory Committee on Women. "Women like me, who care about women's issues but have not been active. There are a lot of people out there who feel they have not been represented in the women's movement."

"This is the constituency which Lynda Johnson Robb will appeal to in her new job. She has been thrust into a relatively personal life as the lieutenant-governor of Virginia to a very public role, and from the periphery of the women's movement to a hot seat — the chair from which Betty Abzug was so crudely rejected. Yet, sitting in the ballroom-sized green and white living room of her plush McLean, Va., home, as she got her children off to school and organized her day, I couldn't help thinking about what she didn't know: the issues. As she put it herself, "I feel like the exam is tomorrow and I've been cutting class."

Lynda Robb is a good student and she's cramming hard. As head of a committee with little power — it is not even technically allowed to lobby — but with high visibility, her exam will be graded by women and by Carter, whose popularity among women's rights activists at the moment isn't worth a bag of pennies.

Yet for all of her goodwill, intelligence and openness, it is difficult not to see the choice of Robb, like the choice of Sarah Weddington, the president's advisor, as a changing of the guard.

Both of these women's predecessors, Midge Costanza and Bella Abzug — whatever their flaws — were part of an ideology trying to build a movement that would cut across class lines. Their definition of success depended on building an alliance with all women, but especially perhaps with the working-class women and the poor.

We now see a shift to the idea that success depends on building an alliance with more traditional middle-class values and with women who are homemakers.

Abzug was fired because she confronted the president and because she took sides against him on economic issues, especially the issues of working-class women and the poor. Robb was appointed, quite consciously, because she could, as the administration said, reach out to the other married, mothering, middle-class homemakers.

The women's movement has, like almost every other social movement, worked better for the middle class than for the lower class. Abortion is now a right reserved, for all practical purposes, to the non-poor. The acceptance of day care has provided more in the way of moral support for middle-class mothers than in services for poorer mothers. Even sex discrimination cases, like "the one at the telephone company, have ended up helping educated women more often than working-class women.

The country works on the squeaky theory, and the middle class often squeaks loudest.

But the women's rights organizations — especially those who quit the Advisory Committee in the wake of the Abzug Affair — have kept their sense of commitment to the poor, the working woman, the displaced homemaker, the single parent.

Sarah Weddington has stressed in several speeches lately her fear that the movement divided employed women and homemakers. Lynda Robb's appointment is meant to heal this gap. Robb is a quick student and a caring, forthright woman and it would be a shame if in the attempt to heal one breach we ended up emphasizing another — the gap between the classes.

Gas shortage not stopping highway deaths

A bloody five days of highway accidents marred the summer warmth and beauty of the past weekend. Area police officers tagged the weekend one of the worst Magic Valley highway traffic periods in several years. The final tally: seven deaths, more than 10 injuries.

Most of the accidents occurred when the vehicles left the road. Some happened when drivers failed to observe stop signs. And one, which resulted in the deaths of four Buell residents, occurred at the unmarked intersection of a country road.

Meanwhile, local gas stations are gearing up for one of the busiest traffic weekends of the year. Memorial Day. Despite reduced supplies, the gas station owners are saying they should make it through the weekend. Many say they expect fewer tourists, but several "one-tank" trips over the three-day holiday weekend.

A one-tank trip won't take motorists very far. Many may opt to head for Magic Valley's picturesque lakes and recreation areas. Others may choose to simply visit friends or shop in hometown stores. Whatever the option, people probably will be out on the roads despite gas shortages. They'll still be cruising the roads in a holiday spirit, paying more attention to scenery or a good conversation than to the highway ahead.

Traffic safety experts tell us that most highway accidents occur within a few miles of the victim's home. So, if you're driving area roads this Memorial Day weekend, don't let down your guard simply because you're not on a long trip.

Observe stop signs by stopping, rather than slowing down. If you're traveling country roads, be wary of intersections — even those with which you are familiar. And don't forget the No. 1 rule of defensive driving — watch out for the other driver.

We've already had one bloody weekend on Magic Valley highways. Less gas will probably mean more local drivers on area roads. Let's make sure they're still driving those roads in June.

Mother's Day sellers rounded up Police take carnation peddlers for a ride

By MIKE ROYKO
© Chicago Sun-Times
Chicago — It's been a long time since Louie Webster had a regular job. Almost 10 years. That was when a couple of street punks wanted his money. So they shoved in his skull and face with a pipe and almost took out an eye. They ruined the hearing in one ear and left him with a fragile sense of balance.

Since then, Louie gets by with odd jobs. Mostly, he washes dishes, although he can't stay on his feet all day. And when the weather is good, he sells flowers on the street.

That's what he was doing last Mother's Day. He was peddling carnations at $2 a small bunch to motorists who were going to visit their mothers or their mothers graves.

Mother's day is a big day for flowers. But a lot of people forget to go to the florist, so they reach out of the car window and buy a bouquet from a curbside peddler.

If a peddler stakes out a busy corner, he can make $200 on a Mother's Day. For somebody like Louie, that's home and board and walking-around money for two or three weeks.

Louie figured to have a good day. The sun was shining, traffic was heavy, and his corner led to a couple of cemeteries.

But before he could sell even one carnation, he pulled the paddy wagon.

"Get in," the policeman said.

"What for?" asked Louie.

"It's illegal to sell flowers on Sunday," said the policeman.

"Who am I hurting?" asked Louie.

"It's illegal," said the policeman.

"Get in."

"But what about my flowers?" said Louie.

"I already paid for 'em,"

"Give 'em to your mother," said the policeman.

Louie climbed into the wagon and they tossed his flowers in behind. Then they went a few blocks and stopped where Bob Gavrick was selling his carnations.

Bob is 29 and is a College student. Right now, with part-time jobs at a premium, selling flowers is his only income.

"Get in," the policeman said.

"I didn't do anything," said Bob.

"You're selling flowers," the policeman said.

"You want to buy some for your mother?" said Bob.

"Come on, kid, I got to book you."

Bob and his carnations joined Louie and his carnations in the paddy wagon.

"I've got more blocks that you found Johnny Zesk, who is 62, has a bum leg and draws a disability check. It was the first time he had sold flowers. A friend had told him it was a good way to make a few bucks while getting fresh air."

"Get in," said the policeman.

"You got to be kidding," said John.

"I'm not kidding. In."

So John and his carnations joined Louie and Bob and their carnations in the paddy wagon.

"I'll tell you something," said Louie a little later. "Now I know what it must smell like in a funeral flower car. We had all those flowers in there, no naddy wagon ever smelled so nice."

By the time the sweep was over, three more flower peddlers were in the wagon and everybody went to the police station, where they were given tickets for peddling on Sunday, which is illegal.

Then they were released, and their flowers returned.

"So what do I do with my flowers?" asked Louie Webster.

"Plant 'em," said a policeman.

Later, Louie said: "A guy's just trying to make an honest living trying to stay off welfare. Who was I hurting? Is there something bad about selling some flowers on Mother's Day?"

"I think what happened was that one of the sergeants has got it in for one of the guys who sells regular. So he took it out on all of us. What should I do now? Go knock someone on the head and rob him?"

The police said they simply were enforcing the law and preventing traffic delays caused by people slowing down to buy flowers.

"We picked Mother's Day," one policeman said, "because we knew the cops would be out there."

Another policeman said it was "the largest mass arrest of flower vendors in my 26 years on the force."

My goodness, that is something to brag about — the largest roundup of curbside peddlers in a quarter of a century. Imagine that.

But I'm not surprised. I've seen this kind of police diligence get results before.

There was a time when the street corners of Chicago used to be studied with hot-dog pushers, most of them operated by little old men in baggy pants who had Greek or Italian accents.

Now, thanks to the police department protecting us from illegal mustard, onion, relish and a dash of celery salt — not to mention hot tamales — the hot-dog pushers are almost extinct.

A few years ago, Eddie Wiggins used to sell balloons. He also sold toys.

But the police cracked down and Eddie and his balloons finally blew town.

Because of this devotion to the letter of the law, we are also safe from those who might want to push hot chestnuts, Italian ice, lemonade or a waffle with powdered sugar on it.

— And now, we are no longer threatened by the illegal sale of flowers on Mother's Day.

We're lucky to live in the safety of Chicago. In Rome, somebody might try to sell you a slice of melon on the street, or a glass of lemonade. In Paris, you might be accosted by people pushing flowers or crepes grand manner. In Scandinavian cities, you might be confronted by someone pushing raw or grilled herring. And in New York the police don't even try to protect you from the hot-dog and chestnut pushers.

But Chicago is one of the few great cities of the world where the police have managed to eliminate all the street vendors.

Well, almost all of them. They've taken care of the hot dogs, balloons, chestnuts, waffles and flowers.

However, if you try, you won't have trouble finding street vendors who will sell you anything from angel dust and other herbs and spices that will cross your eyes and cook your brains.

So if your teen-aged kid comes home tonight talking funny and trying to walk on the ceiling, you can be sure of one thing: Thanks to the Chicago police, your kid has not been smoking carnations.

Committee heeds film stars, votes medal for John Wayne

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Saying John Wayne is more than an actor, "John Wayne is America," fellow film stars Monday urged Congress to create a special gold medal for the all-time Hollywood veteran.

"Please, Mr. Chairman," Elizabeth Taylor appealed to a Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs subcommittee, "let us show him our appreciation and love."

"He is a hero and we have so few left."

"John Wayne is not just an actor," said Maureen O'Hara, Wayne's costar in several films. "John Wayne is America."

Photographers jockeyed for position around the stars as they testified at a hearing to review legislation authorizing President Carter to order a special gold medal for Wayne.

As soon as the testimony ended, the subcommittee approved the medal, and following a suggestion by Ms. O'Hara, voted to inscribe it, "John Wayne, America."

Carter has given the bill his backing. Committee chairman Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., told the session he supports the idea.

"John Wayne has already received an Oscar from his supporters in Hollywood," he said. "Now it is time for his supporters in Congress to give him a congressional Oscar."

Wayne, who died last week, has been hospitalized recently with cancer.

Film Actors Guild President Kathleen Nolan praised Wayne for helping Americans "know our history and culture."

"He has helped to shape our national mythology."

Other testimonials, read by bill sponsor Rep. Barry Goldwater-Jr., R-Calif., came from such stars as "Katherine Hepburn: 'It's about time.'"

"Frank Sinatra: 'John Wayne is in truth a star-spangled man whom so proudly we hail.'"

"Robert Mitchum: Wayne 'represents the rock-solid faith of our founders in the American dream.'"

Treatment helping duchess

PARIS (UPI) — The 82-year-old Duchess of Windsor, the American divorcee for whom King Edward VIII gave up his throne, is responding to treatment for a kidney infection at the American Hospital of Paris, a close friend said Monday.

Hospital officials declined to update their report late Sunday that the American-born duchess was responding well to treatment.

But a friend said the duchess was taken to the hospital Thursday because of a kidney infection that followed her operation two months ago for an intestinal obstruction and said she is doing well.

The informant said the duchess will remain in the hospital at least through the coming weekend because so few doctors are available at such times to make house calls.

It was the second time this year that the duchess, the former Wallis Warfield Simpson, was hospitalized.

She spent most of February in the American hospital after her intestinal operation.

Expert links teeth marks with Bundy

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — A dental expert who claims Theodore Bundy is the only person who could have made the bite marks on the body of a Florida State University coed testified Monday there was enough evidence to justify taking impressions of Bundy's teeth.

The state called Dr. Richard Souvroun of Coral Gables to try to dispute Bundy's claim the search warrant used to take the dental impressions was unlawful because there was no evidence linking him to the murder of Lisa Levy.

Bundy is scheduled to go on trial June 11 on charges of strangling Miss Levy, 20, and her Chi Omega sorority sister, Margaret Bowman, 21, on Jan. 15, 1978.

"The comparison of the bite marks taken from Miss Levy's breast and buttock with Bundy's teeth is considered the strongest physical evidence—the state has connecting Bundy to the murder," the search warrant knocked out, all of the evidence obtained under it must be excluded.

Key witness contemplated two deaths

LONDON (UPI) — Former male model Norman Scott told a court Monday he contemplated suicide and also considered killing Jeremy Thorpe, the former leader of the Liberal party who is on trial for conspiring to kill Scott.

"I said I'd shoot him," Scott said in a letter read in court. In direct testimony Scott said: "I had it in mind to kill Thorpe."

Scott spent all day on the witness stand in London's famous Old Bailey courtroom, beginning the third week of a trial in which Thorpe and three other men are charged with conspiracy to murder him. Thorpe also is accused of inciting another man to carry out the murder. All four defendants have denied the charges.

Thorpe is the most prominent British politician ever tried on such charges, which led to his defeat in the May 3 general election and cost him the seat in the House of Commons he held for 20 years.

Scott testified in a dull, hesitant voice in his hours of direct examination. The court adjourned just when he reached the "incident on the moor," in which the prosecution alleges that a "hit man" hired to kill Scott muffed the job and killed Scott's Great Dane, Rinka, instead.

Thorpe listened impassively as Scott spoke of repeated suicide attempts, frequent stays in mental hospitals, of constant moves, being in an out of work and continually broke. Scott repeated his allegations that he and Thorpe had been homosexual lovers for five years.

What's what

In Pakistan, kin may pick course of justice against convicted murderers; some tomatoes southpaws

Islamic law in Pakistan views murder as a crime against the relatives of the victim. So they're allowed to choose whether the sentence should be carried out, or whether the murderer should be pardoned, or whether the killer be forced to pay blood money to them.

Said that prizefighter of renown Rocky Graden: "I quit school in the sixth grade because of pneumonia. Not because I had it—but because I couldn't spell it."

VAMPIRE

Q. What, besides a cross, will scare a vampire?
A. Garlic, say the fantasy folk. There are a lot of those, incidentally. Dracula has been filmed more than 200 times.

Q. What sort of wild beast kills the most humans being?
A. Crocodiles, probably. Or maybe cobras. One or the other. Nobody's certain.

Q. How many speech writers does President Carter have?
A. Five.

Q. How fast does a V-shaped formation of geese fly?
A. About 50 mph.

TOMATO PLANTS

Maybe you didn't know that tomato plants are either right or left-handed. That is, their leaves and either counter clockwise or clockwise around the stems. It's about half and half—half right-handed, half left-handed. Curiously, the right-handed tomato plants produce at least a fourth more tomatoes than do the left-handed tomato plants.

Dear Abby

How to repel summer guests

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© The Chicago Tribune
New York News Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR ABBY: Now that the summer season will soon be upon us, how about some help for us poor suckers who have summer cottages?

We've had our cottage for eight years, and each summer we grow more popular than the summer before. Friends and relatives come in droves to enjoy themselves in the sun and partake of our food and drink. They stay anywhere from a weekend to a full week. They always come empty-handed, of course.

We have even written notes in advance saying, "We are sorry, but we can't have you this year," — but they come, anyway. Why are some folks so thick? We bought this place to get away from these people.

We don't want to seem cranky, but we'd like to entertain the guests we really WANT, without all these others "surprising" us. We're tired of running a free hotel, and are thinking of selling. Can you help us?

HAD IT IN MINNESOTA
DEAR ABBY: If you've actually written to say you can't accommodate them, but they come anyway — your only salvation is to develop a thicker hide. Greet the unwelcome ones at the door with, "You may stay for a few hours, but when the sun disappears, please do likewise."

DEAR ABBY: You are so right when you say, "Live your life one day at a time."
After 13 years of a happy marriage, beautiful children, a successful husband (due to my help), a beautiful home and all the trimmings, my husband informs me that he is just not "happy" anymore!

At the same time, my brother's wife has decided the same thing. Strange? Not really. She is divorcing my brother (they also have a lovely home and two beautiful children) so she can marry my husband.

Need I tell you how much hurt and unhappiness these two selfish people have caused everyone involved? So, here I sit, still in shock, very hurt and bitter, thinking of how wise your philosophy is. "Live your life one day at a time."

That's all any of us really has. Sign me.
ALONE WITH TWO CHILDREN TO RAISE
DEAR ALONE: You asked for no advice, but may I give you some? Don't dwell on your bitterness, hurt and resentment. Turn your attention to putting your life together by pursuing your interests. Work on being a positive, attractive, likable person. You still have a lot of living to do. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: My husband is convinced that shampooing his hair will cause it to fall out.
Arnold is 25 and good-looking, but he's got this thing about losing his hair because his father was bald at 40. He never brushes his hair because if he sees a few hairs in his hairbrush he practically freaks out! And if he wakes up and finds a few hairs on his pillow, it spooks his day.

He's a wonderful guy, but you don't know how hard it is to sleep with a man who hasn't washed his hair since last July. Help! Maybe he'll believe you. I've given up.

HIS WIFE
DEAR WIFE: Tell Arnold that I said cleanliness and massage promotes the growth of human hair. He stands to lose more hair (and friends) if he allows rancid oil to collect on his scalp.

Are you the lonely face in the crowd? Friends make you a winner, and Abby tells you how to win them in her booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (25 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Demand is growing for 'low-calorie' houses

By ELAINES POVICH
SPRINGFIELD, Va. (UPI) — "Low-calorie" homes — ones that sizzle less fuel in a year than similar homes do in a month — are selling faster than diet cola in this affluent Washington suburb.

Builder Harry Hart, who constructed the first "lo-cal" homes as an experiment and wondered if they would sell, can't believe it.
"We're so overwhelmed with demand," he said. "You can't drop your hand to your side but the phone will ring. We have 300 people on the list for catbackes."

At first glance, the "lo-cal" houses — which sell for a base price of $90,000, typical for the region — look like other suburban homes. They come in one- or two-story versions, with or without garages, and have angular lines, sun decks, dark wood floors and sloping roofs.

From the outside, the striking thing about the homes is the lack of windows. There are none on the east and west sides, with a few very small ones on the north end. The southern exposure, however, has large windows.

Hart said the homes are built so that each room has a window, despite the fact it doesn't look like there are enough to go around.

A closer examination of the roof shows there is an overhang of 20 to 30 inches, depending on the latitude at which the home is built. The overhang shields the windows from direct sun in the summer and allows maximum sunlight to pass through in the winter.

The real energy-saving devices in the homes are not readily visible — all walls are double insulated. "There's more insulation in these walls than most houses have in the ceiling," Hart said.

Wayne Shick, the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign architecture professor who designed the homes, said they are insulated "to the level we call super-insulation."

The extra-insulation adds about $1,500 to the cost of the home, Hart said, but that money is offset by the fact that smaller furnaces are installed in the houses.

All windows are double or even triple-glazed, meaning there is a regular window, a storm window, and another in between.
The real test of an energy-efficient house is how much fuel oil it uses — and Hart said his homes use about 150 gallons a year.

In contrast, a spokesman for the Mid-Atlantic regional office of the Department of Energy said, "The typical house in the Mid-Atlantic area might use on the order of 1,200 gallons."

Daniel Henneberg, of the Shreve Fuel Co. in nearby Arlington, Va., said the typical yearly fuel use in the area is "close to 1,000" gallons of oil.

No matter how you slice it, that's a considerable saving.
"If you had a car with the same efficiency, it would get 95 miles to the gallon," Hart said as he drove his cantankerous pickup truck to the building site.

Shick said the homes are designed to keep the air warmed by people, appliances and lights inside, even when there is no sunshine.

"This house seldom requires heat when the outdoor temperature is warmer than 50 degrees, due to internal heat gain," he said. "The super-insulation can carry you through the rainy days."

On a crisp, sunny spring day, when outdoor activity required a jacket, open windows were observed in several of the homes. "They sometimes just get too hot inside," Hart said.

In the summer, when it's hot and sticky in Virginia, Hart said the homes held cooled air inside as well.

Education project improves nutrition

By MARIAN BURROS
© The Washington Post
Those who think nutrition education should be taught to preschool children, especially boys, may have an ulterior motive. As one mother of a 5-year-old boy explained: "When he's 21, if he knows these things, he won't just find a woman who cooks and marries her!"

Beyond that compelling, but ordinarily unspoken, motive is the more practical desire to improve the food habits of very young children. And one California project has made encouraging, if limited, progress.
Fifty children who took part in the Two-year Children's Nutrition Education Project at California State University in Los Angeles reportedly increased their consumption of fruits and vegetables by 25 percent, and of milk by 21 percent. They correspondingly decreased their intake of bread by 18 percent, and dessert 11 percent, while the consumption of meat stayed the same.

Like most attempts to change the diet of children, the experiment in Cal State's on-campus day-care center began against terrific odds. Whatever nutrition education children learn faces constant undermining by peers who are not exposed to the same information, television commercials for sugary foods, displays in the supermarket and even parents who follow the dictum, "Do what I say, not what I do," as they snack on candy and soft drinks while watching television.

According to Jackie Bigly, one of the nutrition education specialists, what the project found in the kids' lunch bags in the beginning was "kinda bad: Fritos, pop, bologna sandwiches — generally on white bread — cookies, cakes, cupcakes, Twinkies. Very few had vegetables. The kids didn't necessarily eat their lunches. They'd trade off."

"Parents," Bigly explained, "have a hard time trying to figure out what to make for lunch. A lot of parents are working and they just throw together the quickest thing."

The parents weren't the only problem. The nursery-school's own snacks for the children consisted of Hi-C, a fruit flavored drink which is high on sugar and low on fruit juice and crackers.

So the project coordinators began by serving hot lunches. One of the first meals, according to director, Dr. Jane Lewis, was macaroni and cheese, a usual childhood favorite.

"It didn't go over very well the first time," said Lewis, a professor of nutrition at Cal State. "But it improved over time."

Phone cost based on usage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — No matter where you live, the day may be coming when you pay for your local telephone call by the same method as you're charged for long-distance — by how long and how often you talk.

The industry contends the approach is only fair. People who use the telephone the most should pay more, and those who hardly ever lift the receiver should pay less.

Opponents of the approach say it's deceptive because it is touted as a voluntary option to current flat rate billing. In reality, they say, flat rate billing will eventually get so expensive that it will disappear and everyone will be left with the pay-by-the-call system.

The local measured approach is not new. New York City, for example, has had a message unit system for years based on the amount of time the user is on the telephone. Chicago has had a variation of the same system. Most of the country, however, has been on a flat rate system for local calls.

American Telephone and Telegraph says the system — called local measured service — is being offered in one form or another in most states. About 50 percent of the Bell system's business customers have it and about 13 percent of the firm's residential customers, a spokesman said.

"It's a matter of fairness," he added. "At the present time low and moderate users of telephone service are in effect subsidizing higher users because they all pay under flat rate service the same amount."

"Optional measured service gives the customer a chance to select the kind of service that appears to be most useful and best for him or her," he added. "In a time of rising prices, it enables them to select a service where, by the way they use their phones, they can control the amount they pay."

He added that a random survey earlier this year showed 20 percent of Bell's local customers make 50 percent of all local calls, while another 20 percent make only 5 percent of all the calls.

One person who has been raising questions about the trend is Lee Richardson, an assistant to Esther Peterson, President Carter's consumer adviser.

"It's not really voluntary," he said in an interview. "It's being promoted in a voluntary way and I feel that's deceptive."

"People who benefit, people who use the telephone less, will switch in an effort to try to cut the bills. And they can cut the bills to varying degrees," Richardson said.

Zoysia not right grass in Idaho lawns

I recently ordered 2,000 plugs of zoysia grass for my yard. I paid about 7. I saw the ad in Family Weekly magazine. Does this grass really do what the company says it will? — Mr. Cowdin, Twin Falls.

Yes and no. Sorry you have to learn now, but Zoysia does not do well in the Magic Valley. We're just too far north. Al Radzko, agronomist for the S. Golf Association, helped the department of Agriculture develop the species back in the 1950s. He says fever 2-3 Zoysia doesn't turn green until the nighttime low rises to 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

Charles Bryant at Kimberly Industries says Zoysia probably won't ever turn green here because cold weather stays long enough to kill the shallow root system.

The ad was correct in stating that zoysia doesn't need much mowing, watering, or fertilizer. When it grows, the grass holds up well in heat and adapts to almost any soil. It chokes out most weeds and withstands short spells of very cold weather. It is tough for kids to play on, but only when it is green. And one more thing: even in warmer climates it takes years for those plugs to grow together.

So there you have it. Try writing the company for a refund.

aluminum recycling plant — 1-800-223-0830 (Aluminum Association of America).

A Twin Falls company called Seamless Rain Gutter Systems installed their gutters around my house. There are numerous seams, and every one of them leaks water when it rains, although most of the water runs off between the house and the gutters. Moisture is going back under the shingles — and is causing untold damage. I have written many letters and phoned over and over again, but the owner will not return my calls. Once he did send a worker down, and he told me that the crew who put up the gutters did not do it right. — R. Senften, Buhl.

The owner, Richard Lingnauf, sees things differently. He said what you need is a new roof. According to him, the water is leaking down between your shingles. He said his men even tried to help out by putting some extra sheet metal underneath some shingles, but the roof is just too far gone. The leaking is not the fault of the gutters, says Lingnauf, who points out that your 1-year warranty has run out anyway. He swears there are no seams in the gutter, and he said he is puzzled by your account of a visit from his worker.

BACK TO HEALTH

By Michael Haneline, D.C.

It's not unusual to notice people who are suffering from a spinal "subluxation" — an abnormal misalignment of one or more vertebrae. These people seem to be moving very carefully so as to avoid the pain of a "catch in the back" or perhaps they are favoring a sore shoulder.

Many of these people are simply waiting for the "perfect" condition to "wear itself out" or to somehow correct itself. This is wishful thinking. It's like expecting a smashed fender on your car to straighten itself.

You may learn to ignore the pains caused by spinal misalignment but correction requires professional treatment. Phone us for an appointment.

Producers seek wider use of coal in nation

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Coal producers frustrated by a lack of a national policy Monday called on leaders in government and industry to use coal to reduce American dependence on foreign oil.

N.T. Camelia, chairman of the American Mining Congress, told the group's convention that three administrations have to date in the nation that coal was the way to reduce oil imports, but the use of coal has grown only 2 percent a year in the last five years.

"We have tried through just about every avenue we know to tell our leaders in Washington that the coal industry can do the job," said Camelia, who is chief executive officer of The Pittston Co. of Greenwich, Conn.

He said that the group will urge:

- Conversion of existing power plants capable of burning coal including incentives to make such conversions.
- Transfers of power from coal-fired plants to areas now dependent on

Chrysler captures another from Ford

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. in its latest raid on the executive ranks of cross-town rival Ford Motor Co., Monday announced the hiring of a high-ranking Ford sales official to a top marketing post.

Chrysler President Lee A. Iacocca, who was Ford's president until his ouster last summer, announced the appointment of Jerry H. Pyle as executive director of marketing.

Pyle, 42, joins Chrysler after 15 years in a variety of sales positions at Ford. His most recent assignment was sales manager of Ford's Northeastern sales region.

Iacocca said Pyle will be responsible for all marketing, sales research, advertising and merchandising.

UN oil aid for poor nations Mexico goal

CANCUN, Mexico (UPI) — Mexico will ask the United Nations to consider adopting measures to help countries that are poor and without petroleum, President Jose Lopez Portillo said Sunday.

The president reiterated the promise, made last April, in remarks after a luncheon with Costa Rican President Rodrigo Carazo, who came to Cancun, a Caribbean resort, on a seven-hour official state visit.

Lopez Portillo said he had been deeply impressed by "the risk of social problems" in Costa Rica, which spends 27 percent of its budget on oil imports.

Law guards brokers against fraud

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 8-0 Monday that a Depression-era federal securities law prohibits stock fraud against brokers as well as investors.

The justices ruled in a case involving a $1 million loss to several brokerage houses in 1968 which resulted from a "short selling" scheme by Neil Natfalin, head of a Minneapolis brokerage firm.

Delivering the court's opinion,

Justice William Brennan said Congress intended the 1933 Securities Act to apply to brokers, not just investors.

Otherwise, he noted, "frauds perpetrated on either business or investors are reduced to the detriment of the other and to the economy as a whole."

Allowing brokers to operate outside the act, which stemmed from the 1929 stock market crash, would permit a Minneapolis brokerage firm to loophole that Congress "simply did not intend to create," Brennan wrote.

Natfalin was convicted of selling stock he did not own. Telling brokers he owned the stock, he arranged to sell shares which he thought were at their top prices and would soon decline.

An appeals court set aside Natfalin's conviction on eight counts of securities fraud, holding the 1933 act was designed to cover investors only.

Twin Falls area gasoline supplies appear adequate

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls gas stations will have gas to pump this Memorial Day weekend, and motorists are advised to fill up early and keep their gas gauges on full.

With gas allocations throughout the Magic Valley cut to 30 percent of last year's May sales, many stations are now closing Sundays and most are staying open fewer hours.

Gas station owners throughout Twin Falls said the Times-News they are not in danger of running out of gas this holiday weekend, but most said they won't be pumping late into the nights.

An official for Kendrick's Oil Co. noted all its stations have learned to cope with gas supply reductions by closing Sundays. And Kendrick's Oil Co., a Phillips petroleum distributor, is not alone.

Lew Stikes, owner of Lew's Texaco, now spends his Sundays at home and Vern Vergensen, owner of the Lynwood Standard station, said he closes down his pumps Sundays and then shuts them off two to three hours earlier each weekday night.

In a small survey of six Twin Falls gas stations and oil distributors, the Times-News found only Don Pieper's Gas and Tire Center optimistic about its overall fuel supply.

"We're going to sell everything we get our hands on this month as far as supply," said Lew Larsen, manager of Pieper's station. "We will still be able to run the station seven days a week and 24 hours a day."

Larsen, however, said the station's monthly sales are down almost 25 percent this month because of road construction in front of the station.

Gas continues to flow in Magic Valley pumps but there is clearly less of it. And it costs more than ever before. The price for regular gas has crept over 80 cents a gallon and is still climbing.

"I can guarantee me gas but I can't guarantee the price," Larsen said.

tourists now at all — not like you used to. If you go out on that freeway Sunday, you won't see nearly as many cars."

The gas shortage is deterring Magic Valley residents from traveling out of state and hindering people from coming in. The station owners said.

"I think they will be making shorter trips," Vergensen remarked. "I've had several customers that planned to go to Disneyland and now they just don't think they'll go."

Instead of trips to California and other distant places, station owners say this looks to be the summer of the one-tank vacation.

"I think everybody will take short trips this summer within a 200 or 300 mile radius of their homes, rather than taking the big jump," observed Larsen.

Vergensen agreed, predicting people will "plan their trips to someplace where they can get there and back in one tank."

The station owners offer motorists a few simple tips if they are traveling this holiday:

- Don't let your gas gauge drop below half tank when traveling.
- Stay near the freeways and major highways where gas stations are easily found.

- Fill up your tank before evening and don't wait until Sunday to fill up for your trip home.

Despite the high prices and reduced supplies, most people seem not to be letting the gas shortage spook them out of traveling. Larsen and Joe Clements, owner of Joe Clements Oil Co., both admitted to taking trips last week to Salt Lake City and Idaho Falls.

Stikes also was undaunted by the gas crunch.

"I'm going to Boise to trap shoot for four days this weekend," he said. "I'm going to drive that big gas guzzler of mine that gets six miles a gallon, and I'm going to have a good time."

One way to keep cool

When the sun gets warm on a May afternoon, there are various ways of keeping cool. Christina Treadwell, 7, tries one — sitting down in the spray of water from a hose watering the lawn of her home on Seventh Avenue East in Twin Falls. Such antics may become more common in the next few days if temperatures continue warm.

Seven die on roads

TWIN FALLS — Seven persons have died on Magic Valley highways over the past five days, making it one of the worst traffic periods in several years, according to area officials.

Fatal accidents in the accident Sunday near Buhl. A motorcycle accident claimed the life of Lester LeRoy Bledsoe, 41, of Filer, Wednesday night west of Filer, and 16-year old Kenneth Russell Dean of Minidoka was killed Saturday morning in a pickup truck accident.

Friday night Brad Craig, 18, who was injured May 10 in a Twin Falls auto accident, died in a Boise hospital.

Sheriff James Mann of Twin Falls county said investigation was still under way Monday in the accident that claimed four lives Sunday on the Deep Creek road near Buhl. He said when further investigation is completed his office will confer with County Prosecutor Jeff Stoker to determine if any charges are to be filed.

The Buhl family including a mother, her two children and her sister were killed Sunday afternoon when their vehicle collided with a 10-wheeled milk tank truck. Mann said the accident occurred at an unmarked rural intersection.

Mrs. Paul (Judy) Leppert, 21, of Buhl, driver of the vehicle, and her sister, Barbara Romero, 9, were killed outright in the crash. Mrs. Leppert's two small children, Cheyenne, 16 months, and Michael, 2, were pronounced dead at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital. County Coroner Cloyce Edwards said all four died of head and internal injuries.

Driver of the milk truck, Bill Giltner, 29, of Jerome, was treated for slight injuries and released from the hospital.

Two trucks, David Jasper Martin and James Toney, both of Georbia, injured in another accident Sunday on I-80 in Jerome County were listed in fair condition Monday at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Sludge relief sought

TWIN FALLS — While Twin Falls city officials are attempting to appease some rural residents by discontinuing dumping of sludge on the airport property, they have alienated others by using private farm property further to the south.

More than a dozen residents met with the city council Monday night to appeal for a second time this month for some relief from odor and possible health hazards in the area where sludge from the malfunctioning city sewage plant is being deposited.

Several residing in the area of a private farm where the owner asked the city to dump the sludge, for fertilizer purposes about a week ago, said the odor and health hazards are now in their area.

Residents near the original dump site, the former Roy Smith farm, which was purchased by PUC Commissioner Perry Swisher, said they have not had any relief in their problems expressed two weeks ago. They said assurance the sludge would be covered or a new site found has fallen through and the open sludge remains.

Mayor Leon Smith urged the group to attend a public meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. in which all technical aspects of sludge will be discussed. A number of city employees and environmentalists, familiar with the operation, will be present to answer questions.

Mayor Leon Smith told the delegates, "We don't have any answers for you tonight that we didn't have two weeks ago, but we are making every effort to find a solution."

He said applications have been made for use of federal BLM land in more remote areas and chemical deodorizing material is also being investigated for possible use on the sludge deposits.

171 voters register

HAZELTON — A total of 171 city residents is registered to vote in today's $285,000 water bond election, according to Hazelton City Clerk Joanne Wolf.

On the last day of registration, Friday, 32 people signed up.

The Times-News had incorrectly reported in a story Sunday that only 39 people were registered to vote as of Thursday. The total should have read 139.

A majority of voters approves the bonds for the water improvement project, water pressure will triple and increase the town's firefighting capabilities, city officials say.

Total cost of the project is $42,000, with the remaining funds coming through a Federal Housing Administration grant.

CSI board approves '80 budget

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho will operate next year on $3,700 less than last year, according to the CSI Board of Trustees Monday approved a budget for the college's fiscal year 1980, which begins June 30. The new budget is exactly what CSI President Dr. James Taylor proposed to the board. The biggest cut was in expenditures for supplies and maintenance.

"With all of these cuts, I think we can still run a first class institution," said Taylor. "but I think next year a big reckoning is coming. It depends on the full implementation of the 1 percent initiative next year."

Cutbacks by the 1979 Idaho Legislature mean CSI will receive an estimated $187,300 less this year for vocational education and $100,000 less for the Division of Vocational Education. The Legislature also froze property assessments at 1978 levels, so CSI's revenue from taxes will stay the same in the face of the rising cost of living.

For the purchase and replacement of furniture and equipment, the CSI vocational school will have $29,200 less next year than it had this year. Academic departments will have $14,000 less to spend in this category, and the administrative division will cut back by $7,000.

Dr. Taylor explained the college has traditionally replaced some equipment each year in order to stagger breakdowns and spare the college the large expense of replacing all machines all at once. That practice will be curtailed next year.

College maintenance workers will also have $42,000 less next year for minor construction, remodeling and $3,000 less for supplies.

The library will have $4,000 less for books next year. Academic teachers will have $22,000 less for teaching supplies. And the vocational school will spend $12,993 less for teaching supplies.

Three Creek gains sympathy

THOMAS IRWIN would manage firm

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three Creek ranchers brought their sad tale of life-without-phones before the Idaho Public Utilities Commission Monday, and got a measure of sympathy from the regulatory body. But the commission staff asked for time to study the financial details of the proposal to organize new phone service in the southern Idaho community.

Three Creek residents have been trying for more than 10 years to get phone service at their homes and the community school. California engineer Thomas W. Irwin went before the PUC at a public hearing Monday in Twin Falls to ask for permission to set up a buried cable and microwave relay system that would initially serve most of the 20 ranches, the school and Murphy's Hot Springs resort.

Irwin's system would be financed by the subscribers, who would loan money to the company and guarantee a bank loan made to Irwin.

PUC Commissioner Perry Swisher listened to 4½ hours of supportive testimony from residents and county and federal officials and then declined to say what he will recommend to the full commission. He indicated the commission will closely study terms of customer and bank loans that will finance the new service, to make sure phone customers "don't walk into financial trouble" if they sign up for the new service.

Ranchers told the commission phone service would not only save them money, but would save time in emergencies and put their school back in favor with the state Board of Education.

No one spoke in opposition to Irwin's bid.

The commission must issue Irwin a certificate of convenience and necessity before he can install phones. Swisher promised the commission will issue a decision soon enough to meet Irwin's proposed construction schedule, which begins June 15. Irwin said phones could start ringing at Three Creek by Jan. 15.

The commission staff questioned Irwin at length about the financing of the $119,000 phone system. The engineer said he plans to pay construction costs with partially interest-free loans of $500-pace from the service subscribers and a $55,000-$60,000 loan from the Twin Falls Bank and Trust.

According to Three Creek resident Randall Brewer, the bank has indicated it will make the loan, and 10 ranchers have agreed to personally guarantee the bank loan.

The initial system can accommodate 85 customers, according to Irwin. Further hookups would require a larger switchboard, which would cost $55,000, he estimated.

Irwin said he plans to try to extend service to Jarbridge and Pole Creek, Nev.

He said he will try to hire a local retired telephone repairman to maintain the system.

Rim home proposal rejected

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — County commissioners in Twin Falls Monday denied a request for construction of a home within 20 feet of Snake River canyon's rim, a decision which will affect future canyon rim building in the county.

Gene Huggins had asked for a zoning variance on his building site north of Filer in order to build a new home about 20 feet back from the canyon wall.

The Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission denied the request and the commissioners upheld the planning and zoning position following an appeal hearing.

In announcing the county commission's action, Chairman Merl E. Leonard said the county's present ordinance requires a minimum setback of 50 feet.

"After reviewing the testimony in hearings about the Huggins case and talking to geologists, we are going to ask the planning and zoning commission to revise the present ordinance to a 100-foot setback," Leonard said.

He said the county brought an expert geologist to Twin Falls Saturday to look at the Huggins property and other canyon rim areas. Terry Howard of the geological firm of Howard and Donnelly of Boise inspected the property and will send a written report to the commission later this week.

Leonard said the geologist said soil covering rocks at the canyon rim should be removed to allow a better determination in future requests for canyon rim construction. He also advised the county officials a problem could develop if septic tank effluent were allowed to drain toward the canyon rim and weaken the rock structure through long periods of saturation. He said this potential problem might not be a problem or might not exist at the time of the construction.

Leonard said the commissioners will also recommend the zoning commission members require a full study of any future building site where the owner might apply for a variance to move closer to the canyon rim. This study should take into consideration problems that might result from septic tank drainage, erosion, and should be made by a qualified geologist with concurrence from health department officials as to septic tank drainage.

In the case of the Huggins property, Leonard said if the home were built close to the rim, it would be necessary to install a pump to the septic tank to pump contents back to a proper drain field. Most of the land slopes to the canyon rim, and similar requirements could face future builders, the commissioner said.

Huggins had submitted a civil engineer's report stating the proposed location of his home within 20 feet of the canyon rim would be safe at his present site. Leonard said an earlier study by the Geological Survey agency indicated the entire canyon should carry a minimum setback of 100 feet.

Leonard said the county is concerned not just for the safety of prospective home owners, but because of possible county liability should a fault develop, which would allow a building to suffer damage or sink into the 200-foot deep canyon. He said the county's legal attitude has been that building regulations imposed by the county could place the county at fault in the eyes of some judges.

Suit based on accident

TWIN FALLS — A million dollar damage suit has been filed in 8th District Court in Twin Falls as the result of a car and motorcycle accident April 26.

Robert and Marian Helms are seeking damages from Barbara Louise Bostwick Holland, driver of the automobile. Leonard Bauer, owner of the automobile, and Ver Cox, owner of a bar in which the automobile driver had stopped just prior to the accident.

The Helms charge Ms. Holland ran into the motorcycle. Robert Helms was operating and that she was driving in a reckless manner and had been in the bar owned by Cox just prior to the accident.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Washington Street and Fifth Avenue West.

The plaintiffs ask the court to award them $1 million for injuries suffered by Helms, and medical expenses, damages to the cycle and $50,000 for Mrs. Helms for loss of consortium.

Solid waste seminar Thursday University takes programs

TWIN FALLS — How counties can cope with solid waste problems and disposal of other waste products will be discussed here Thursday in a day-long seminar sponsored by Region 4 Development Association.

Tom Fleming, administrator for the association, said a number of counties in the region have asked for assistance and new information on how other areas are meeting the problem.

In response to the request, the one-day session will bring a number of specialists in that field to Twin Falls for talks and question-and-answer sessions.

Fleming said the conference type meeting will open at 9:30 a.m. and possibly conclude by 2:30 p.m. A representative of the Environmental Protection Agency will attend, as will Bill Allred of the South Central Idaho Health District, representatives of the Bureau of Lands Management and of heavy equipment firms which have new machinery for handling solid waste disposal operations.

Durrell Heider, solid waste superintendent from Twin Falls county, and a representative of the University of Idaho Extension Service will also participate in panel discussions during the day. The University Extension service has completed a study on the solid waste facilities and needs in the south central Idaho area and will present statistics.

Fleming said county and city officials throughout the region and officials interested in solid waste problems are urged to attend the meeting.

Montreal wins another Stanley Cup

MONTREAL (UPI) — Jacques Lemaire, the current patriarch of the Montreal family, scored twice and Rejean Houle set up three goals Monday night when the Canadiens, finishing off a devastating four-game display of hockey, captured their fourth straight Stanley Cup with a 4-1 victory over the New York Rangers.

The triumph, which allowed the Canadiens to carry the Cup around the world for the first time since 1960, marked the 22nd time Montreal has won the NHL crown. Montreal took the series four games to one, including four straight following a 4-1 win by New York in the opener.

Lemaire, playing on his eighth Stanley Cup team — more than any member on the Montreal roster — broke a 1-1 tie early in the second period with a power-play goal. From then on, it became increasingly obvious that New York's Cinderella story had reached its pumpkin stage.

Montreal's Rick Chartraw and New York's Carol Vadnais traded first-period goals before Lemaire sandwiched the pair and first goals of his playoff career around a score by playoff MVP Bob Gainey.

The three-goal assault eliminated any hope the Rangers entertained of extending the series to a sixth game and winning their first Cup in 39 years. Chartraw's goal, scored at 10:36 of the opening period, was originally credited to Yvon Lambert, who appeared to have deflected it past Ranger goalie John Davidson. Chartraw took a backhand pass from Houle and his shot toward the net hit the skate of Ranger defenseman Mike McEwen. It was Chartraw's second goal of the playoffs.

The Rangers got a break 6:16 later when Vadnais moved away from Steve Shutt and, with Ron Duguay screening Ken Dryden, flipped a shot past Dryden for his second playoff goal.

New York's Dave Maloney was sent off for cross-checking with one second remaining in the first period and Lemaire, starting the play from behind his own net, stroked over the redline and blasted a 65-footer between Davidson's pads at 11:02 of the second period.

The Canadiens, who outshot the Rangers 14-3 in the second period, maintained the pressure and scored at 11:01 when Gainey shoveled home a pass from Doug Jarvis, playing on his fourth Cup winner in as many years in the league. Gainey set off Anders Hedberg and sent his sixth goal of the playoffs past Davidson. Houle started the rush with a pass to Jarvis.

Lemaire finished the second-period assault when Lemaire accepted Houle's breakaway pass, moved within 20 feet of Davidson, drew the big goalie out and flipped in a backhand for his 11th goal of this year's playoffs.

The Canadiens left the ice after the second period to a standing ovation from the capacity crowd of 18,076, which included Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, who puts his 11-year administration on the line in Tuesday's Parliamentary election. Trudeau, who was welcomed by a standing ovation upon his arrival just prior to game time, caught a solvent puck late in the third period and proudly flipped it up in the air before catching it to the delight of the crowd.

The Canadiens maintained their control in the third period as the home crowd began to taste the impending celebration.

Acting Captain Serge Savard, who won Game 4 with an overtime goal, carried the Cup around the Forum ice following the game. Savard, one of two Canadiens on the 1988 Cup winner, has been the acting captain for most of the season since Yvan Cournoyer went out with back surgery.

Jean Beliveau was the last Montreal captain to haul Lord Stanley's silver when the Canadiens defeated the expansion St. Louis Blues, coached at that time by current Montreal head man, Scotty Bowman. The victory gave Bowman his fifth title with the Canadiens.

Briefly in sports

Rathbone top in silhouette

JEROME — Gary Rathbone hit 39 of 40 animals to record the highest score of the day in the Jerome handgun silhouette shooting competition Sunday.

Joe Hohlfield and Benton Wetzel both hit 38 and Larry Morre hit 37 in the top scores for the first time since 1969. The high scores came in the unlimited division, where shooters can use handguns of any type and any shooting posture.

John Tripp won the production competition with a score of 31 while Jack Parker won the standing competition with a score of 16. Scores are based on 40 shots at the silhouette animals.

Next competition will be June 17 in a turkey and ham shoot for local club members only. Last weekend's competition drew participants from all over the state.

Foursome wins in Buhl golf

BUHL — The team of Coleen Kerbs, Frieda Richmond, Betty Gaines and Rosemary Carpenter won the Buhl Invitational Ladies golf tournament last week played at the Clear Lakes Country Club in Buhl.

The four ladies combined for a score of 278, five strokes better than the team of Carol Kasel, Betty Saz, Terri Simpson and Kathy Erb.

Finishing third at 287 were Georgia Cantrell, Anna Deen Coulam, Mabel Bernasola and Arlene Koch.

Lori Vegwert of Burley won the trophy for the longest drive of the day while Wilma Driscoll of Blue Lakes Country Club in Twin Falls hit the shortest drive. Norma Lowe of Jerome won the closest-to-the-hole competition.

Boise sets softball tourney

BOISE — The annual F&F Softball Classic will once again be held in Boise, with interested teams encouraged to sign up as soon as possible.

The Class A tournament will be played at Ann Morrison Park, with four fields used for play. The tournament will run July 12-15.

Two fields really is the defending champion of the 32-team event, and many Twin Falls teams are expected to participate. Deadline for entry is June 16.

Awards will be given to the top seven teams, with additional awards for sportsmanship, most valuable player, golden glove pitcher, golden glove outfielder and individual trophies for members of the first place team.

Interested coaches can contact tournament director Bill Fritze by calling 342-0355.

Cavs only coach resigns

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Bill Fitch, the only coach in the nine-year history of the Cleveland Cavaliers, resigned Monday.

Fitch, in an emotional joint news conference with Cavaliers owner Nick Mileti, announced that the two had mutually agreed Fitch would resign his post as coach and general manager.

Wearing sunglasses to hide his tears, Fitch said, "It's going to be tough to leave this city." "The Cavaliers' record last season wasn't very good," Fitch said. "I think there comes a time when an organization needs a change."

Will Bruins rehire Cherry?

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston Bruins coach Don Cherry met Monday for two hours with his bosses to discuss renewing his contract. But no agreement was reached and the two sides agreed to continue talking at a later date.

"We defined our problems and Don defined his," said General Manager Harry Sinden, who met with Cherry for the first time in 1 1/2 months to talk about the contract. Also attending the meeting was Bruins president Paul Mooney.

"I'm not going to say much about it," said Cherry, whose $60,000 a year pact expires July 31. "We're still talking and the meeting was friendly. It's just as soon as I can leave it at that."

Following Boston's elimination by the Montreal Canadiens in the Stanley Cup playoffs, Cherry and Sinden, who do not see eye to eye, agreed to a week's cooling off period before negotiations started.

Boy can't play girls sports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday turned down a bid by Biele Island boy to play the last two volleyball games of the season on a girls' high school team.

Donald Gomes, a 6-foot senior, had asked the justices to let him participate in the games, scheduled May 22 and 24, for his school in Newport.

But the court, without explanation, declined Gomes' request to set aside a lower court decision barring him from playing on the Rogers High School Interscholastic team.

The lower court will give Gomes' "reverse sex discrimination" case full-scale review next month — too late for him to participate in the games.

Italian tennis underway

ROME (UPI) — Top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and No. 2 seed Vitas Gerulaitis of New York advanced to the second round of the $200,000 Italian Open Tennis Tournament Monday by routing little known first round opponents.

Vilas handily beat fellow Argentine Carlos Gattiker, 6-2, 6-1, while Gerulaitis stopped another Argentine, Fernando del Puerto, 6-1, 6-2.

In the top matches, American Eddie Dibbs, seeded fourth, beat Peter McNamara of Australia, 6-4, 7-5, and Australian Phil Dent handed John Lloyd of Britain his 15th straight tournament loss, 2-6, 6-3, 6-0.

The 25-year-old Vilas, playing a steady baseline game with occasional charges to the net, allowed Gattiker to win only three games and ran off the drug in the second set to advance to a second round match against Dent.

Sonics' Wilkens still upset with official's call

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — After sleeping on it, although somewhat fitfully, Seattle SuperSonics Coach Lenny Wilkens still hasn't changed his opinion of the hotly-disputed call which ended Sunday's opening game of the NBA Championship Series.

"I still don't like it," Wilkens said Monday when asked his thoughts on the foul call which gave Washington Bullet guard Larry Wright three chances to make a free throw and win the game. Wright, fouled by Dennis Johnson, missed the first chance but made the next two giving the Bullets a 99-97 win.

"You can look at the call from numerous angles on television or newspaper photos and they all give you different views," said Wilkens. "It's just a matter of who interprets the call."

"I'm not saying the call lost the game for us. We did a lot of things poorly, even though we came from 18 points down in the fourth quarter. But it wasn't a typical call. There was a lot of contact all day, a lot more than on that call, and yet the foul was called."

Wilkens had other thoughts on the game officials — Darrell Garretson, Ed Rush and Ed Middleton — but not on the way they called the game.

"Why aren't the top officials assigned to work the Championship Series?" asked Wilkens. "I have nothing against Middleton, but he isn't one of the top officials in the league. (Wally) Rooney shouldn't be the alternate, either."

Garretson and Rush (who made Sunday's final call) are two of the top officials and so is Jake O'Donnell. So is Joe Gushue. Where were they Sunday? Why aren't the best officials assigned to the most important games of the season?"

As the alternate, Rooney is assigned as a "watchdog" on the official timer. When Wilkens disputed the amount of time remaining with two seconds left in the game, Rooney upheld the timer. The Bullets had the ball out of bounds with five seconds to play. Wright took the inbounds pass, missed the shot and the rebound bounced out of bounds off Seattle's Jack Sikma. The clock showed :02.

"I was surprised to see two seconds left," said Wilkens. "Rooney said the clock was right, but I'll wager that any camera on him would show he was watching the play, not the clock."

Accentuating the positive aspects, if any, in the loss, Wilkens said the disputed ending probably will serve to excite his team.

"The fact that we came from that far back to tie the score shows what kind of people we have," he said. "In every way, it has to help us. We know we are capable of beating Washington here. The emotion will help us."

"Some guys may say they'd rather lose by 20 than lose by two, but no, I want you thinking about the next time we play. I know the Bullets will have something to think about in the future games. If they get ahead, I'm sure they won't be too comfortable, knowing what we did Sunday."

The series resumes Thursday night at Capital Centre before going to Seattle Sunday and next Tuesday. The final three games, if needed, are scheduled June 1 in Capital Centre, June 3 at Seattle and June 6 at Capital Centre.

Game 3 will be played in the Kingdomo but all other games in Seattle are to be played at the Seattle Coliseum because the Seattle Mariners will be playing baseball in the Kingdomo on those dates.

Last ditch effort to keep Jazz in New Orleans

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — A minority owner of the New Orleans Jazz said he made an admittedly futile attempt to keep the team in the Louisiana Superdome Monday by offering to buy the club.

Sheldon Beychock, who owns 5 percent of the Jazz, said he sent a cable with the offer to majority owner Sam Battistone in care of Battistone's California firm, Invesco West.

Battistone has said he lost $11 million by keeping the Jazz in New Orleans and said he intends to move the team to Salt Lake City next season unless he can recoup those losses.

"I won't reveal the terms of my offer, but I'd like to keep the team in New Orleans," Beychock said. "I was one of the two or three people who worked very hard to bring the team here to begin with."

But Beychock, a former aide to Gov. Edwin Edwards, said he had little hope Battistone would accept the offer.

"I think he is intent on leaving New Orleans, although I can't speak for him," Beychock said of Battistone. "But it's been a loss situation for him and he's been trying to (make an offer that will) make up all of his losses."

"I have made what I believe to be a reasonable offer, but he may not look at it that way," Beychock is a familiar sight at the Jazz games, perched in a chair at midcourt.

"That's the best seat I've ever had for anything," he said. "I don't want to lose it."

Surgery for Walton; Bird to reveal plans

By United Press International

Bill Walton, who signed a seven-year contract with the San Diego Clippers for a reported $11 million a season to become the highest paid player in NBA history, underwent ankle surgery Monday, the club announced.

A team spokesman said "the procedure was scheduled as part of Walton's rehabilitation program." The spokesman added, "The surgery consists of removal of bone spurs on front of both ankles."

The operation was performed by Dr. Tony Daley at Daniel Freeman Hospital in Inglewood, Calif.

Walton, who signed with San Diego May 13, missed the entire 1978-79 season while recovering from a fractured bone in his left ankle. He will be ready to play next season, according to the Clippers' spokesman.

The matter of compensation for Walton between the Portland Trail Blazers and the Clippers has yet to be worked out and may have to be settled by NBA commissioner Lawrence O'Brien.

The former UCLA All-American, a 6-foot-11, 225-pounder who led Portland to the NBA title in 1977-78, wore a cast for seven months while recovering from his left ankle injury.

In other NBA news, Larry Bird's attorney has called a news conference Tuesday at his downtown Boston office, but the announcement does not concern the signing of the Indiana State star to an NBA contract.

"They didn't notify us about the news conference so we have to wait along with everyone else to see what happens," said Jan Volk, the Celtics legal counsel. "Larry Bird has not signed with the team, and if he had, we'd be the ones announcing it."

Bob Woolf, Bird's attorney, has been unable to reach an agreement with the Celtics. Woolf said the news conference would deal with an update on the Bird negotiations, and that he still is trying to sign the College Player of the Year with the Celtics.

The Celtics have offered Bird a contract at $500,000 a year, or about $100,000 less than the contract agreed to recently by Michigan State star Earvin "Magic" Johnson. The team has publicly stated it will go no higher.

Sources close to negotiations say the Celtics offer might be acceptable, but not the way the team is offering it. The team, according to sources, wants to offer the payments down the years without offering it.

Woolf said the session would be "to clear the air" about reports he is seeking $1 million a year for Bird.

More problems in Indy-500

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Chief steward Thomas Binford late Monday denied every protest filed in connection with disputed Indianapolis 500 qualifications, apparently setting the stage for legal action.

Seven teams filed protests at the conclusions of Sunday's qualifications for the May 27 race and some of them said they would go to court unless they received satisfactory treatment from race officials.

The protests were filed by drivers Larry Cannon, Jerry Karl and Spike Gehlhausen along with owners Wayne Woodward, Fred Ruth, Bob Fletcher and Roger Penke.

Most of the teams charged their machines were "bumped" from the 33-car lineup because the U.S. Auto Club posted different sets of rules applying to exhaust systems.

One of the cars involved, driven by Steve Krisloff, regained a spot in the starting lineup with a second qualifying attempt.

The car of rookie Bill Alsup was thrown out of the field because it used the same engine as the car driven by Bobby Unser, a two-time race winner.

Jim McGee, chief mechanic for Penske, said his team was protesting on grounds the penalty was "too severe."

"It was an honest mistake — we really had no intention to qualify the car," McGee said.

Woodward, owner of the car qualified by rookie Dick Ferguson, announced he has hired an attorney and would go to federal court Tuesday to seek an injunction.

"We seek reinstatement of our car into the race because it was qualified at a speed fast enough to make the field," Woodward said.

Attorney John Frasco, representing Fletcher and Penske, said his clients would follow an appeal procedure.

Local drag racers win in Pocatello

POCATELLO — Over 1,800 fans were on hand and over 100 racers competed for the $2,000 in prize money at the grand opening of the 1979 Drag Racing Season at International Raceway in Pocatello.

The winner in the dragster bracket was Allen Bloom of Idaho Falls with his teal engine Chevy powered dragster. Bloom's final run of 8.75 seconds in 154 miles per hour defeated Bernal Smith of Logan, Utah.

In the combined modified and super stock bracket, Dan Brown of Salt Lake City emerged the winner, driving a 1967 Camaro in a time of 11.47 seconds to defeat Butch Walsh of Idaho Falls.

A Magic Valley racer took the stock honors. John Larsen of Paul drove his 1970 Olds Cutlass to a win of 12.66 seconds, defeating Pocatello standout Kathy Steinhilber.

A Twin Falls resident, Bruce Hopple, won the Pro E.T. honors in a 1957 Chevy with a time of 13.39 seconds.

Bill Mraz of Twin Falls qualified in the No. 1 spot in modified eliminator in his 1968 Camaro, running 120 mph in the low 11-second range. He was defeated in the quarterfinals when he had problems at the starting line.
