

Seven Soviets finally make it to the North Pole... on skis

By JOSEPH L. GALLOWAY
 MOSCOW (UPI) — Seven Soviet adventurers who have been slogging through the swirling mists and treacherous seepack of the Arctic Circle, reached the North Pole Thursday and accomplished their goal — the first polar trip on skis.

The 77-day journey covered about 900 miles from the starting point, Henrietta Island in the frozen East Siberian Sea.

The polar explorers crossed wide stretches of open water or ruts and vaulted across crevasses in the icefield with their ski poles. But the last few miles, when they were caught in a "whiteout" without any sense of direction, were the most difficult, the Tass news agency said.

Navigation at the top of the world, where unusual magnetic patterns make conventional compasses almost useless, was the problem.

The breakthrough came Thursday, after the Soviet team had been operating "blind" for several days, unable to take a position fix on the sun, which was continually obscured by heavy clouds, mist and fog although it lies above the horizon nearly around the clock at this time of year in the northern latitudes.

When the sun broke through the cloud cover for two hours Thursday the skiers discovered they were at 89 degrees 57 minutes north latitude and 170 degrees east longitude — about 3 1/4 miles from the pole.

They set off at once on the final leg of their journey and reached the pole within hours, according to Tass and Komsomolskaya Pravda, the Young Communist League newspaper that sponsored the expedition.

All the skiers were healthy, Tass reported. They raised a Soviet flag at the pole and signed a document noting their achievement.

They planned to remain at the pole for 24 hours, exchanging messages with amateur radio operators around the world on the 20-meter (14 megahertz) international communications band.

The seven men carried their food and supplies on their backs throughout the 2 1/2-month trip, during which they faced both blizzards and sudden thaws that opened up cracks and canals in the ice pack.

The group was led by Dmitri Shparo, a physicist who teaches at a Moscow institute. His comrades were mathematician Yuri Khrmlevsky, technician Vladimir Ledenev, radio operator Anatoly Malinok, physician Vladimir Davydov, engineer Vladimir Rakhmanov and electrician Vasily Shishkarev.

They were resupplied with food and other essentials during the trek by airdrops, and they will be picked up at the North Pole by a light plane.

Enforcement of guidelines judged illegal

By DREW VON BERGEN
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge Thursday declared unconstitutional President Carter's threatened use of economic sanctions against violators of his voluntary wage-price guidelines.

Ruling in a suit against the government by the AFL-CIO and 18 of its member unions, U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker said:

"President Carter has exceeded the authority conferred on him by the

"This is an obvious blow to us," Kahn said. "It was very disappointing, but it does not strike down wage and price guidelines. They are alive and well, I guarantee it."

At the White House, press secretary Jody Powell told reporters, "The Justice Department is doing everything possible to expedite an appeal."

And he agreed with Kahn that Parker's ruling "does not invalidate the guidelines either in fact or law."

Justice Department spokesman Terrence Adamson told reporters he expects the department will "almost immediately" file an appeal in court in the District of Columbia to stay the effect of Parker's ruling and quickly consider a government appeal.

AFL-CIO chief George Meany welcomed the decision, and urged the administration "to develop an anti-inflation program that deals effectively with the real causes of inflation within the constitutional limits Judge Parker has articulated."

Meany, joined by union presidents Peter Bommarito of the United Rubber Workers and David Fitzsimmons of the Electrical Workers, hailed Parker's ruling as — if upheld on appeal — freeing unions to push for contracts above the guidelines' 7 percent yearly limit on wages and benefits.

Parker, in a 24-page opinion, struck down the administration's policy of barring government contracts of over $5 million from companies that violate the wage-price standards.

The judge acknowledged that inflation "is a vexing and festering domestic problem," but said the president's efforts, "however well-intentioned and commendable they may be, must be predicated upon executive power conferred by the Constitution or by a congressional enactment pursuant to the Constitution."

Constitution by seeking to control incomes and thereby prices through the procurement power."

The president's chief inflation fighter, Alfred Kahn, addressing the Alabama Legislature in Montgomery shortly after the ruling came down, said it will be appealed.

A victory for Symms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, was one of 23 congressmen who joined the AFL-CIO in filing the lawsuit that successfully challenged the Carter Administration's enforcement of "voluntary" wage-price guidelines.

Symms and other congressmen filed a friend of the court brief in support of nine unions seeking an injunction to halt the administration's policies forcing compliance with the "voluntary" guidelines.

Forcing workers to limit wage increases to 7 percent when inflation is averaging more than 12 percent a year is absurd, Symms said.

"The president's attempts to enforce his wage and price guidelines were an effort to blame the people in this country who work, save, produce and invest for inflation," Symms said.

"But wages don't cause inflation any more than wet streets cause rain."

"In reality, the two main sources of inflation are counterfeiters and federal printing presses," he said.

Idaho gas prices on the rise

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
 Times-News writer
 TWIN FALLS — During May, drivers didn't have to hunt for gas in Twin Falls, but they had to pay more for it.

To compensate for smaller supplies last month, local station owners bought additional supplies at higher prices, borrowed from their June allocations and passed price increases along to customers. During the month prices at Twin Falls stations jumped 2 to 5.5 cents.

Most oil companies haven't announced how much gas they will allot to their distributors in June, but the department of energy says seven major oil companies plan to allot 75 percent of last year's supply.

Twin Falls station owners say their best bet is to buy what they can. Further than they were in May, when dealers across Idaho were allotted an average of 83 percent the amount of gas they had a year earlier.

One company that distributes here, Chevron Oil Co., will increase its gasoline allocation in June to 90 percent, from May's level of 82.5 percent. Chevron's diesel fuel supplies will stay at May's 95 percent allocation.

Phillips 66 has cut its diesel allocation from 85 percent in May to 40 percent in June. By law, farmers will continue to receive 100 percent of their diesel requirements.

Discount gas is disappearing from Twin Falls streets, as most independents have brought their self-service regular prices up to the same 83.9 cent as most major oil company distributors charge. The Slinker station on Kimberly Road is selling regular at 81.9 cents.

Self-service gas is selling locally at 2-to-5 cents below full-service, with premium at 89 to 96 cents and unleaded 90 to 94.

At least one station is selling diesel at 68 cents.

Chris Smith of the Governor's Emergency Fuel Office in Boise, said Thursday the end of the planting season has helped ease a diesel crunch that hit the Magic Valley in April. Diesel fuel is still short in northern Idaho, Smith said.

Don Pieper's service station on Addison Avenue West reports trucker demand for diesel is up.

"We've had a lot of truckers who usually don't stop this far off the road," a Pieper's employee said.

Pieper's raised his gas price 5.5 cents during May, while Jerry's Conoco rose 2 cents, Buck's Texaco on Blue Lakes Boulevard North went up 3 to 4 cents and Phillips 66, also on Blue Lakes, raised prices 4 to 5 cents.

Gene Matthews of Phillips said half the increase was imposed by his supplier and the rest is for station profit.

Matthews said his net profits remained about the same as last May, due to a 30 percent cut in his supply.

Matthews and others said to avoid running out of gas last month they bought additional supplies from wholesalers. The extra gas, collected from stations having more than they need, costs 84 cents more than normal wholesale product, Matthews said.

Two station owners said they dug into June supplies to meet May demand. That could mean they'll be in trouble in June, normally a 10 percent heavier driving month than May.

Twin Falls gained two and lost one gas station in May. Louis Kucera closed his Blue Lakes Amoco station on Blue Lakes Boulevard North Saturday because he was fatiged a rest.

A new station has opened on Washington Street North and another one on Shoshone Street South.

Medical 'chiselers' revealed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government Thursday made public the names of 40 doctors and dentists convicted of defrauding the American taxpayer under Medicare and Medicaid programs and now suspended.

It was the first time the government has ever published the names of health professionals convicted of criminal offenses against the nation's two major health care programs.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano told an audience at the National Conference of State Legislatures, "and we will do everything legally within our power to find them, have them prosecuted and, if convicted, suspend them."

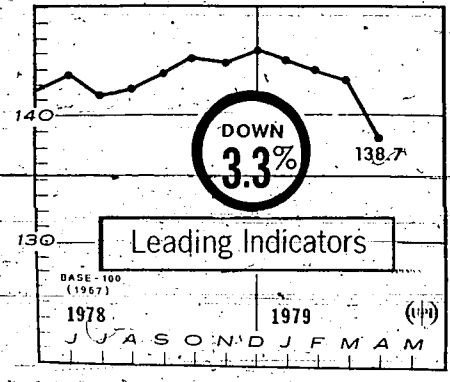

"The suspensions run from one to six years. They stem from convictions since November 1977.

In addition, the government published the names of 16 other health care providers who are "essentially" permanently excluded from Medicaid and Medicare participation. The exclusions resulted either from convictions or HEW — determinations of fraudulent or abusive practices.

The Health, Education and Welfare Secretary said more than half of the states now have government-certified Medicaid fraud control units.

It may be economic good news... or bad news

Index of leading indicators drops sharply the economy or it may be signaling something more serious," said Theodore Torda, a Commerce Department senior economist. "We really don't know yet. We'll have to see whether things snap back in May."

"It certainly would be premature to say the leading indicators are flashing a recession warning," Torda said. "It could be consistent with a slowdown in growth. It's done that before."

Though it was announced separately by the Commerce Department an hour later, the slowdown in factory orders, to an April level of $141.1 billion, was one element of the declining overall index.

Orders for durable goods dropped by $7.1 billion or 8.5 percent to $77.2 billion in April, including declines in nearly every industry group.

Other factors contributing to the decline in the overall index were stepped up layoffs of manufacturing workers, declines in orders for new plants and equipment and fewer new building permits.

Many economists have been predicting a recession. Chase Econometric Associates, a leading forecast, expects a year-long one with unemployment rising to 8 percent. The administration has been saying it expects a slowing of economic growth but not a recession, which means a shrinking of...

John Smith at last news conference

Farewell to Smith

ISABURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — United Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa Thursday succeeded Jan Smith as becoming Rhodesia's first black prime minister, ending nearly a century of white minority rule. The new majority rule constitution went into effect at midnight and Rhodesia became Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, its new official name. Jan Smith, who proclaimed Rhodesia's independence from Britain in 1965, took his last bow as prime minister at a news conference and complained that it had all happened too quickly.

One twin better

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Elisa Hansen, one of the Siamese twins whose heads were separated in 16 hours of surgery, showed slight improvement Thursday, taking food by mouth instead of intravenously. Her 19-month-old sister, Lisa, remained in stable but critical condition at the University of Utah Medical Center.

Defense bill OK'd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House overwhelmingly approved $1.3 billion for Pentagon weapons and research Thursday after turning back efforts to kill the MX missile program and to block purchase of two destroyers once ordered for the ship of Iran. The bill, which passed 314-72, is a compromise between Congress and the administration which was worried out after President Carter defeated a 1978 defense authorization last year because it contained a nuclear aircraft carrier he did not want.

Bombs in Paris

PARIS (UPI) — With split-atom precision, 22 time bombs were exploded across Paris Thursday, in a record onslaught by separatists demanding an end to France's 211-year rule of the Mediterranean island of Corsica, Napoleon's birthplace. No injuries were reported from the bombs, which were planted in banks, travel agencies and government offices, attacked as symbols of French colonialism. It was the largest number of bomb attacks in Paris since 1961.

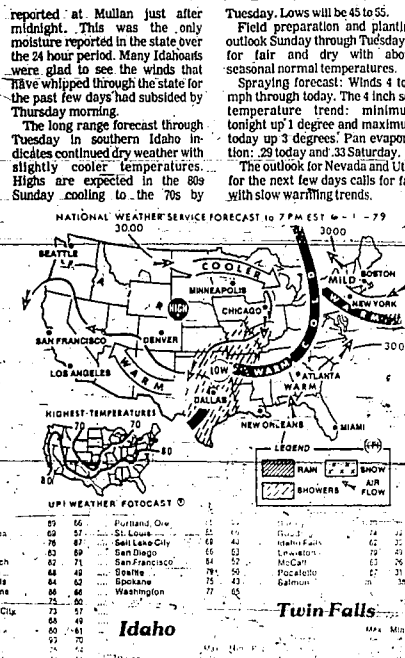

Engine failure

NEW YORK (UPI) — A National Airlines DC-10 jet-bodily jet bound for Atlanta Thursday from New York Airport Thursday evening and was forced to land at the Federal Aviation Administration said. The plane landed safely and there were no reports of injuries.

Today's weather

Warm June weather is bustin' out all over

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and Gooding-Jerome areas: The Magic Valley weather is expected to be fair and warmer today. Lows 40 to 45. Highs 70 to 80. Clear to sunny on Saturday. Highs 70 to 80. Clear to sunny on Saturday. Fair and warmer through Saturday. Lows near 30 to 35 tonight and highs near 70 today reaching the mid 70s on Saturday. Synops: Generally sunny skies covered the Gem state Thursday as a pressure continued to build at the surface and aloft over the Intermountain west. The air mass moving into Idaho is becoming much drier and more stable as the season progresses. Temperatures were rising out of the doldrums of the past few days and are now near normal for this time of year. Weekend readings were in the upper 60s and Lewiston reached 75 for the warmest spot in the state. Stanley was the coldest with an 18 degree reading Wednesday. Precipitation or radar echoes were seen in Idaho Thursday night. A light shower was reported at Mullan just after midnight. This was the only moisture reported in the state over the 24 hour period. Many Idahoans were glad to see the winds that have whipped through the state for the past few days had subsided by Thursday morning. The long range forecast through Tuesday in southern Idaho indicates continued dry weather with slightly cooler temperatures. Highs are expected in the 80s Sunday cooling to the 70s by Tuesday. Lows will be 45 to 55. Field preparation and planting outlook Sunday through Tuesday is for fair and dry with above seasonal normal temperatures. Spraying forecast: Winds 4 to 8 mph through today. The 4 inch soil temperature trend: minimum tonight up 1 degree and maximum today up 3 degrees. Pan evaporation: 29 today and .33 Saturday. The outlook for Nevada and Utah for the next few days calls for with slow warming trends.

Accident report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two models of private aircraft were involved in nearly half of all mid-air collisions of single engine, fixed wing planes, but the great majority of the collisions were caused by pilot error, a transportation safety board report said Thursday. Accident statistics from 1972 through 1976 showed the small aircraft accounted for 17,312 accidents — 2,673 of them fatal, killing 4,806 persons. It found of six leading manufacturers, Cessna aircraft had the lowest fatal accident rate. However, the study also showed the Cessna 150 and Piper PA-28 account "for almost half of the mid-air collisions involving the selected group of aircraft," the study said.

Warsaw crunch

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Tens of thousands of pilgrims — on foot and by bus and train — streamed Thursday into this capital city where harassed police already were trying to clear a path for Pope John Paul II's triumphant homecoming Saturday. Three million people, twice Warsaw's population, are expected to turn out to greet the first reigning pope ever to visit a Communist country. The 59-year-old pontiff is scheduled to be in his native land for nine days.

St. Louis shooting

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A former mental patient with violent tendencies "went berserk," shot and killed a policeman with a riot gun and wounded another officer before he was gunned down, police said. The shooting Wednesday night occurred several hours after the man was taken to a police station to wait for his family to come and help him with his car, which had broken down.

Sears must pay

CHICAGO (UPI) — A federal judge Thursday ordered Sears-Roebuck & Co. to pay a Tennessee man between $44 million and $60 million in profits the firm earned from an innovative socket wrench the man invented. U.S. District Judge George N. Leighton also ordered Sears to return by June 15 all patent rights to Peter M. Roberts, 34, of Chattanooga, Tenn., who invented the wrench in 1963 while working as a clerk for Sears.

Corona discovered

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Astronomers at the University of Wisconsin reported Thursday they have found a cloud of very hot gas surrounding the Milky Way galaxy. Blair D. Savage and Klaus S. de Boer said the galactic corona is a tenuous gas-a million times thinner than the best vacuum ever produced on earth.

Rebels attacked

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The national guard said its air, land, and sea counterattack broke the back of a four-day Sandinista offensive Thursday and pinned down a large rebel column in southern Nicaragua. Sporadic sniper fire was heard in Leon, 35 miles northwest of Managua, and army patrols were chasing small rebel bands in the narrow isthmus separating the Pacific and Lake Nicaragua near the southern border with Costa Rica.

Militants subdued

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Government forces Thursday subdued militant Arabs demanding self-rule and were in full control of three cities in the oil-producing southern region shaken by armed revolt, Iranian radio said. Local reports said crack army commandos were mopping up Arab positions that opened fire around noon and continued intermittent attacks on government positions in Khorramshahr, Iran's largest port, near the Iraqi border.

U.S. oil leaders tell Carter gasoline shortages are real

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oil industry leaders answered President Carter's summons to parley Thursday and told him bluntly that gasoline shortages are no hoax and will probably run into next year. "We told the president we have a difficult situation for the balance of this year and probably into next year," said John Swearingin, board chairman of Standard Oil of Indiana. "We do not have enough crude oil to make all the gasoline and other products Americans want today," Swearingin told reporters after he and other top oil industry executives conferred privately with Carter for 90 minutes in response to a call issued Wednesday night. Asked what Carter can do to improve the fuel crunch situation, Swearingin said tersely, "He can use his good offices to try to persuade the countries who do have crude oil to produce and sell it to this country." But he said the president must also "convince the country that the shortage is real and we should use supplies sparingly." Victor Rasheed, president of the Virginia Retail Dealers Association, seconded that point, saying, "There's a general lack of credibility. The public should understand that there really is a shortage." Charles Di Bona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, said, "While we cannot be positive what future imports will be, we anticipate reasonably available supplies on the order of amounts delivered last year." "That means a tight situation, but not any crisis."

Decontrol plan starting today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter puts the first and mildest step of his oil decontrol plan into effect today, a move that officials say should cost motorists less than an additional one cent a gallon for gasoline this year. The president made decontrol the main feature of his 1979 energy policy, hoping that increasing prices would discourage motorists and persuade producers to find more oil. At the same time, he challenged Congress to pass a tax that would cap at least half of the windfall profits accruing to oil companies from decontrol. Ways and Means Committee Chairman Al-Ullman, D-Ore., expects the House will be voting on the tax bill by July 4. Carter is acting on his own, using existing law that gave him powers to start lifting price controls on June 1. Officials estimated the 1979 effects could be translated to less than one penny per gallon of gasoline.

Stockpiling blamed

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — OPEC countries, warning they will not squander their precious oil resources to keep Americans warm next winter, Thursday blamed escalating oil prices on President Carter's plan to stockpile fuel. Adnan A. Janabi, a spokesman for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, secretary-in-chief called on the industrial nations to curtail their stockpile in order to ease the situation. "We are not going to squander our very limited resources beyond our national interest and our national need unless it is absolutely necessary," he said.

- According to columnist William Safire, the politicians' constituents must therefore become instant China-watchers, and Safire gives them some pointers. Read it Saturday in the Times News.

New sex study reported

BOSTON (UPI) — Males born with external female genitals caused by an enzyme deficiency eventually become functioning males despite the fact they were brought up as females, a team of doctors reported Thursday. A study of pseudohermaphroditism — people who are genetically male but have female-like external features — indicated most of the individuals attained male-gender identities after puberty. Dr. Julianne Imperato-McGinley and doctors at the Cornell University Medical College studied 38 cases of male pseudohermaphroditism in the Dominican Republic. "The research was published Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine." At birth, people with the condition have a vaginal-like external organ and undescended testes. At puberty, they develop a muscular build and a deeper voice. A phallus develops and the testicles may descend into a scrotum formed of folds in the skin. The phenomenon, which Mrs. Imperato-McGinley says is not exceptionally rare, occurs because a defect in the unborn child causes it to appear more like a girl at birth than a boy; increased male hormone levels at puberty cause the individual to develop male organs. "In a nonintervening environment, it shows the testosterone has a greater impact than the sex of rearing," she said in an interview. "It is a factor that has to be recognized in addition to the socio-cultural factors." She said the research bears on the question of which is the stronger factor in determining a person's sex — sex-of-rearing or hormones.

Single survivor in Maine crash

By ELAINE APOSTOLA
OWLS HEAD, Maine (UPI) — "I don't think we will make it... get the clearance to Augusta."
 That last radio transmission from pilot James Meryman, 35, was part of the grim evidence examined Thursday by a team of National Transportation Safety Board experts investigating the crash of a Downeast Airlines commuter plane in which 17 persons died Wednesday night. A teen-aged boy was the only survivor.

JOHN McCAFFERTY — only survivor

"It's probably the worst crash in the history of the state," said Maine Public Safety Commissioner Arthur Silberman.
 The twin-engine DeHavilland Twin Otter was en route from Bogota to Rockland, Maine, late Wednesday carrying 16 passengers and a two man crew when it ran into dense fog while approaching the Knox County Airport on the craggy Maine coast.

The plane missed the airport runway by about a half mile, slashing off freeways and crashing several hundred yards from a sandy beach.
 The survivor, John McCafferty, 16, of Searsport, Maine, was in stable and satisfactory condition at Penobscot Bay Medical Center. He managed to pull himself free of the aircraft and crawl about 100 yards away from the wreckage.

"He was lying face down and was crying faintly for help and saying that he had a broken leg," said Owls Head Fire Chief Frank Ross.

The boy's parents were by his side Thursday while state police kept other visitors away.
 "I was praying last night. I owe a lot to that person upstairs. My son said he was praying too," said Mrs. McCafferty.

More DC-10 structural problems found

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Inspectors Thursday reported discovery of still more structural problems in the DC-10, but a federal aviation official said nearly two-thirds of the airplanes need to have been certified as safe and are back in service.
 The latest problem turned up involves cracks in a fitting called the "monoball," the main weight-bearing assembly anchoring engines to the wings, according to spokesman Fred Farnor of the Federal Aviation Administration.

 This could have been a factor in last week's DC-10 crash in Chicago, where one of the wing engines fell off on takeoff and the plane went out of control.
 Meantime, the National Transportation Safety Board's top metals expert, Michael Marx, told the board that a fractured bolt found alongside the runway following the Chicago crash was broken by the engine breakaway.

"The bolt fractured in an overstressed condition — there was no evidence of fatigue (structural weakness)," Marx said. "It broke as a result of the accident and not for any other reason."

Marx appeared before board with the bolt and a section of the engine pylon, or mount, and said his examination with an electron microscope indicated "the" whole engine assembly gave way at once.

Richland opens up to nuclear waste

By TOM TIEDE
 RICHLAND, Wash. (NEA) — When Enrico Fermi demonstrated the first nuclear chain reaction in 1942 he created a most vexing problem for public sanitation: As nature demands, the spent atom leaves waste, in this case toxic waste, and the problem is how to dispose of the radioactive garbage.

Fermi himself said the refuse could simply be buried. But where? Every time authorities have found an appropriate graveyard over the years, they've also found sociopolitical hostility. To date, 11 states have prohibited the United States from using their outbacks as final resting places.

Now, however, the decades-old dilemma may be on the verge of solution. Scientists increasingly believe the basaltic formation in south-central Washington may make an ideal rubbish pit. And, happily, many residents here not only agree but are formally offering their region for the prospect.

Mike McCormack, a Democrat who represents the locale in Congress, has introduced legislation to designate the 570-square-mile Hanford Nuclear Reservation as a national repository for nuclear wastes. The unprecedented invitation has received enthusiastic support from the area establishment.

The area establishment is the nuclear industry, as it happens. And this is the reason the region wants atomic garbage. The Hanford facility is one of the largest nuclear centers in the world, and locals want to keep it this way. Radioactive garbage, then, will insure continued prosperity.

That prosperity began here in Fermi's time. Just 19 days after the atom was split in Chicago, the government came to the Washington desert to build the first plutonium processing plant. Richland had a population of 280 then, Hanford was to turn it into a vitally important energy complex.

Today Richland's population is more than 30,000, and the number of people in the immediate vicinity has grown by a factor of 30. The Hanford plant is worth $2 billion, not counting the land, and its budget is $600 million annually. In all, nearly 12,000 people here work for the reservation.

Indeed, this is now Atomicville, U.S.A. and the nuclear influence is immense. There is an Atomic Body Shop, an Atomic Bowling Lanes, an Atomic Plumbing Co., and an Atomic TV Service. There is not yet an Atomic Garbage Co., but residents are working hard to establish one — a large one.

It will have to be very large. Since Fermi, the United States has generated more than 156 million cubic feet of radioactive refuse. That's about 75 million gallons, an amount that could double by the year 2000. At present the deadly waste is collected in temporary storage tanks around the country.

Actually, Hanford already stores a good deal of the rubbish. There is nearly a million cubic feet of it here. Hanford officers say the reservation has been accommodating the poison from the first. They say this management experience will be convenient if the base becomes a permanent repository.

Not that waste management here has been foolproof. Millions of gallons of radioactive swill have leaked into the earth. Other amounts have been poured purposely on the soil. At one time so much waste leached into the nearby Columbia river that it was the most radioactive waterway in the world.

But Hanford executives insist that much of the leaking has been caused by the temporary nature of the storage. Once a permanent solution is applied, they say, leaching will stop. The materials will be held securely and indefinitely in deep and impenetrable holes in the subterranean basalt.

This basalt forms the foundation for nearly 100,000 square miles of Eastern Washington. Test holes indicate it is at least 11,000 feet thick at Hanford, and it may be twice that. Hanford's Frank Standerter says the rock is stable, dry, and could accept America's nuclear waste for centuries.

Thus the government is presently conducting a waste test on a Hanford mountain. The plan is to bury helium in the earth to judge whether the rock will accept the high temperatures of radioactive material. If so, it's all but certain the reservation will receive repository status by 1981.

And Richland residents couldn't be happier for it. The older people here processed the plutonium for the bomb that destroyed Nagasaki. Their sons and daughters are now building plants to generate electricity. The atom has been a good neighbor, and folks show it more respect than fear.

Besides, there is the question of prudence. Momentum is building in the nation to outlaw nuclear power unless a waste disposal site is found soon. If nuclear power goes, so goes the nuclear industry, and, possibly, the Hanford reservation. No one here wants to see a population of 280 again.

State control over gas welcomed

Gasoline consumption may now be controlled by the states via their governors.

That doesn't mean it will be. Idaho Gov. John Evans says he has no plans to use the emergency powers.

But President Jimmy Carter this week delegated some of his authority and empowered all state governors to take certain steps, if they believe them necessary.

The announcement brought criticism from some governors because it seemed to sound a note of panic.

The argument here is that Carter's action only served to alarm citizens and could make matters worse by causing panic buying.

But the alarm has already been sounded. The president's move comes after the fact of shrunken fuel supplies, threats of rationing and some shortages, as in California.

Idahoans have been getting along on shorter supplies for about three months without much harm, except for higher prices.

Still Carter has dropped a hot one in the governors' laps.

Few are liable to appreciate a governor, or a president, who imposes strong gas buying and selling rules on drivers and service station owners.

The states' new authority would allow a governor to order gas stations to remain open over weekends, implement alternate day, odd-even gas sales or set up minimum or perhaps maximum customer purchase limits.

On the one hand such measures would anger station owners, who have been hit with smaller allocations, by forcing them to stay open; on the other, customer ire could be raised if told when and when not to buy gas in what amounts.

It should be remembered, however, such actions would be emergency measures.

And any governor should try voluntary programs first. Before adopting arbitrary regulations — doomed to meet some rebellion — citizens should be called on to do their best voluntarily.

While Carter has asked the governors to help allocate our gasoline supplies over the summer," the state executives should in turn ask citizens to help.

But if the time comes for emergency action, it can now be taken quickly and fittingly based on individual state needs and circumstances, thanks to Carter's new policy.

Carter on his critics

C.N.Y. Times News Service
 NEW YORK — The critical battering of President Carter goes on, but somehow it does not seem to affect his personal serenity. He is clearly disappointed in the opposition within the Congress to his energy and arms limitation policies, and hurt by the opposition to his presidency within the Democratic Party, but he avoids personal recriminations and retains his usual calm determination.

There was something vaguely rueful about his manner in his latest news conference. He looks a little more time to answer questions about his political opponents in general and Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts in particular, but he brushed the political questions aside as the normal competition of party politics.

He did make a point of reminding his questioners that he was not an announced candidate for reelection, and this gives some support to the view, often expressed by some of his closest aides, that if he felt later on in the campaign that he could not get the backing of the Congress and the people essential to the effective governance of the nation, he would withdraw.

No president, he said, could avoid opposition within his own party, but that was not his main concern. "If I should modify my positions away from what's best for this country in order to pick up support, then I would desire to be president, so I would intend to do it."

"If a few or even a large number of Democrats support somebody else, that's their business. I'll continue to try to serve the country as best I can and deal with the political question when the election comes along."

This is a somewhat idealized definition of Carter's objectivity, for he didn't capture the Democratic Party and the 1976 election without considerable political contrivance and even cunning, but it would be hard to prove that he is more political in his actions than any of his major political opponents.

His energy policy may be disastrous, but he still thinks it's right, and as he said in his news conference, nobody could accuse him of putting it forward to catch votes, since it was clearly doing nothing but costing him votes.

The truth is that the nation is in the midst of a vast transformation seemingly beyond the control of Carter or any of his opponents. The inflation is not responding to anybody's plans in the executive branch or the Congress. There are critical shortages of fuel and other essential commodities. The government itself is bloated and inefficient, despite all efforts to reorganize it, and there is little evidence that any major government in the world has been able to understand — let alone resolve — the immense political-economic and financial challenges of the post-war era.

In these circumstances, which have shaken the politics of most of the Western nations, it is scarcely surprising that Carter plays it cool and emphasizes his role as president rather than candidate. As he drops in the popularity polls, attention will tend to shift to the other candidates who will then have to answer the hard questions and take some of the criticism now being directed mainly at the president.

Carter agreed with John White, the Democratic Party chairman, who said the other day that those Democrats who were promoting Kennedy publicly were "devisive" and might turn the presidency over to the Republicans in 1980. But he would not respond to the suggestion that Kennedy should take himself out of all consideration for the party's nomination next year.

"I don't really have any comment to make about what Senator Kennedy does," he said. "He has made statements repeatedly about what he would do." This was apparently a reference to Kennedy's remarks in the past that he intended to support Carter for the presidency next year, but the president did not say so.

Nor would he be drawn into controversy over being the presidential helicopter to go fishing or deny himself the privilege of slipping away for a rest now and then without reporters. When he was asked how many times he had done this unbeknownst to the press, he replied: "Not enough."

When Carter came into the White House, he said privately that he hoped to avoid tussling with the press or his political opponents or becoming excessively personal and hostile to his critics. After all, he noted, this had proved "damning to both" Presidents Nixon and Johnson.

As to resenting anyone within his own party who challenged him for the presidency, this he has always said would be silly, since he himself had had the temerity to challenge almost everybody in the 1976 presidential campaign, which he started almost as an unknown.

It is his fiercely loyal White House staff and some members of his Cabinet who regard some of the recent criticism as unfair and harmful not only to the president but to the country. Even with a united

When drifting, put on life jackets

© Los Angeles Times Syndicate
 WASHINGTON — Capt. Jimmy Carter, formerly of the U.S. nuclear submarine command, was standing on the bridge of the Ship of State staring through his binoculars. "Hard rudder right," he said.

The helmsman said, "It won't go to the right, sir."

"The captain said, 'All right, then, hard rudder left.'"

This helmsman said, "It won't go hard rudder left, either, sir. What should I do?"

The captain said, "Let's drift until I talk to the crew." The captain grabbed the speaker, "Now hear this. This is your captain speaking. We are heading into rocky waters and I want all congressional chief petty officers topside immediately."

A surly band of EPO's came topside. "Gentlemen, I need your help. I can't steer this ship alone."

"Where are we heading, Captain?" one of them wanted to know.

"I'm not sure, but I'd like to stay on course."

"If you don't know where we're going, how can we help you stay on course?"

"Well, for a start I would like assurance that we have enough fuel to stay afloat."

"How much do we have now?"

"Lt. Schiesinger, how much fuel do we have?"

"I have no idea, sir. I keep getting different reports every hour. All I know is we're going to have to conserve as much as possible."

"Then I guess we better start rationing it," the captain said.

"One of the congressional leaders replied, 'How?'"

"Lt. Schiesinger, do we have a plan?"

"Yes sir, here it is."

The chiefs looked it over. "We don't like this plan."

The captain said, "All right, we'll come up with another one. Lt. Schiesinger, do we have another plan?"

"Yes sir, here's a new plan."

The chiefs studied it. "This is worse than the other plan," one of them said.

"Then you people come up with a plan!"

"I don't know anything about conservation," one of them said.

"See here, Capt. Carter said grimly, "I'm in charge and you people must think about the good of the ship. We have to work together or we'll go on the rocks."

Ensign Hamilton Jordan came on the bridge. "Sir, we're taking on water."

The captain got on the phone. "Lt. Blumenthal, you're in charge of damage control. How much water are we taking on?"

"Well, I thought it would be seven percent, but apparently we've creved up. We'll be lucky if it doesn't go to 10."

"What happened to our plan to reduce the bilge in our tanks?"

"We thought we could keep the boilers from overheating but we were wrong."

"You're a big help, Blumenthal."

"Thank you, sir."

Capt. Carter hung up and said, "If we can't get through the Panama Canal we'll be all right."

Chief Tip O'Neill said, "I'm having trouble getting the crew to agree to go through the canal."

"Why?"

"The petty officers are being very petty."

"How can I command the Ship of State when no one wants to follow my orders?"

"Why don't you abandon ship?" Chief Kennedy suggested.

"You would like that, wouldn't you, Kennedy? It sounds like mutiny to me."

"No sir, I'll support you as long as you're captain, but any time you want me to take over the wheel just let me know."

The helmsman said, "Captain, we seem to be drifting out to sea. Do you want to set a new course?"

"That's a good idea," the captain replied. "Which way is the wind blowing?"

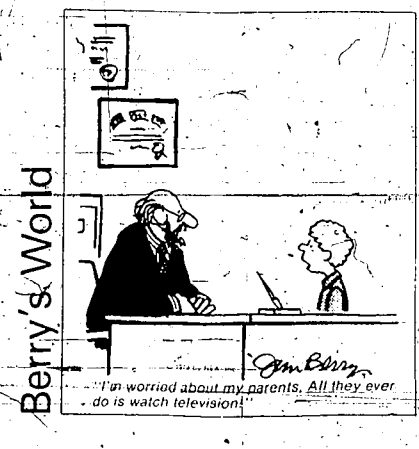

"Port, someone shouted.

"Starboard," somebody else said.

"Fore," another voice offered.

"Aft," was the last reply.

"Good," said the captain. "Stand by your stations until I come up with another plan."

Farewell to first big star

BY VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The remains of Mary Pickford were cremated Thursday in advance of a memorial service for history's first movie star who became known as America's sweetheart in the silent film era.

Miss Pickford died Tuesday at the age of 86. She had been hospitalized after a stroke.

The 3 p.m. private service was to be held at the Web Kirk O' The Heather at Forest Lawn cemetery in suburban Glendale.

The time and location of the service were withheld until a few hours before the ceremony to discourage old Pickford fans from making a carnival of it, a family spokesman said.

He said the remains were cremated and that Miss Pickford requested simple services without any fanfare.

Miss Pickford, the star of 200 movies in the teens and '20s, entered Santa Monica Hospital last Friday. Her third husband, Buddy Rogers, was at her bedside when she died.

Miss Pickford, renowned as the first movie star in a succession of hit roles as "Little Mary with the golden curls," outlived most of her contemporaries and friends.

For most of the last 20 years of her life she lived secluded from the public at Pickfair, the fabled home she and Douglas Fairbanks built during their marriage, receiving occasional visitors.

The few remaining stars of her time — Pola Negri, Lillian Gish and Gloria Swanson — lived in other parts of the country.

A legendary actress who began her film career as a 14-year-old in New York, she earned $10,000 a week in the 1920s starting as a wall in such films as "Tess of the Storm Country" and "Daddy Long Legs."

Sutherland theft victim

TORONTO (UPI) — Losing $18,000 in a robbery is a big price for actor Don Sutherland, the biggest loss was his Order of Canada medal.

Sutherland returned to his hotel room Tuesday night to find a briefcase containing more than $3,000 in cash and $15,000 in jewelry and travelers' checks missing.

What made it worse, Sutherland said in a telephone interview Wednesday, was when he awoke the next morning to find his tale of woe reported in Toronto newspapers.

Sutherland said he was "astounded" police had reported the theft to the news media.

"I couldn't believe it when I saw the newspapers this morning. My phone hasn't stopped ringing. A friend of mine called earlier and said that because of all the publicity, they (the thieves) would probably throw the stuff into the river.

"All I want to do is my keys and my Order of Canada Medal," the weary-voiced actor said. "But they've got that now."

'Shogun' movie being planned

TOKYO (UPI) — "Shogun" — James Clavell's best-selling novel about an Englishman who became the first non-Japanese Samurai in the 1600s — will become a movie and a 12-hour television program.

Clavell, who will produce the Paramount picture, told a news conference Thursday the $13.8 million project will be an introduction to your (Japanese) world for all the Western world."

He said he decided to write a book about "a modern day Asia" after he came across a passage in his daughter's textbook about a seaman-turned-Samurai. "It was a nucleus of Shogun," he added.

A boy for Lynn

LAKE CHARLES, La. (UPI) — Singer Lynn Anderson gave birth to a 7-pound, 6-ounce boy Wednesday night in St. Patrick's Hospital.

Miss Anderson, wife of Lake Charles oilman Harold Stream, and the infant both were in good condition. She also is the mother of a daughter, Lisa, 8, by a previous marriage.

Miss Anderson's biggest hit was "I Never Promised You a Rose Garden," for which she won the Country Music Association's female vocalist of the year award in 1970.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Do not make any sudden and dramatic changes now and especially where any financial involvement or business relationships are concerned. You may make a very serious mistake that will take a long time to make right.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): You want to have a good time at any cost, but this would be a special talent you have and add to your income appreciably.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Don't act on impulse but use tact and get better results. Know what is causing trouble at home and quietly get rid of it. Control temper.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't antagonize a good ally or you could later regret it badly. Much care in travel can avoid an expensive accident. Do not allow a sharp-tongued individual to annoy you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't think that money will buy anything today, but use more direct methods with others and get better results. Don't be concerned into a responsibility that you do not care about.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Refrain from using unwise methods to force others to do your bidding; Show you are charming and be more concerned with the needs and feelings of others. Sincerity is the keynote now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Instead of downgrading or criticizing good friends, be of help wherever possible. This is not a good time for much socializing. Keep busy at whatever is important to your welfare.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You feel you are not making much progress-but this is not the case, so cheer up. Analyze your position carefully and know where to apply new effort.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Try not to upset anyone in authority or you regret it later. Handle community work conscientiously and get good results. Avoid the social in the evening and rest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You are inclined to jump into new ideas haphazardly, but this would only bring you trouble. Use only good judgment since your intuition is not working accurately now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Listening to what others say and to have a suggest is wise since this can be helpful to you and them. Pay debts that have been giving you trouble.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Help partners more and get good results in the future. A situation arises that must be handled carefully and accurately now.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Don't go off on any tangents. Stick to work at hand or you get in trouble. Strive for greater accuracy instead. A co-worker could be secretly friendly but don't let it bother you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... He or she will do well in any outlets where many changes can occur testing the ability to handle them efficiently. There is musical ability here that should be trained early. Sports are a must.

What's what

Computer describes as wonder of world; so do many others on list of modern works

The computer ranks with the pyramids as a wonder of the world. So say scholars at Purdue University. They polled their experts to come up with the seven engineering wonders of the world, and besides the computer, nominated unanimously, they named mass production of cars; development of jets, rockets and space travel; nuclear power; television; the Tennessee Valley Authority; and transistors.

Sir, why not hang a floor pad on the back of your office door, and lay it down twice a day to take a couple of 10-minute naps? Such is the recommendation of a student of job problems. Most business furniture tends to make people slouch, says this savant, and that in turn causes their energy levels to sink. It's not good. It's bad. A nap on the floor is said to revitalize.

BARBECUE
Q. Why is a barbecue called that?
A. Came from the Haitian barbecue meaning "a framework of sticks set upon posts." Such is the explanation of a student of job problems. Most business furniture tends to make people slouch, says this savant, and that in turn causes their energy levels to sink. It's not good. It's bad. A nap on the floor is said to revitalize.

Q. How often should you bathe a cat?
A. How about never? A cat's fur has no oil in it, so water does it more harm than good. At least, that's what the vets contend.

Q. How many quills are on a grown porcupine?
A. Typically, about 30,000.

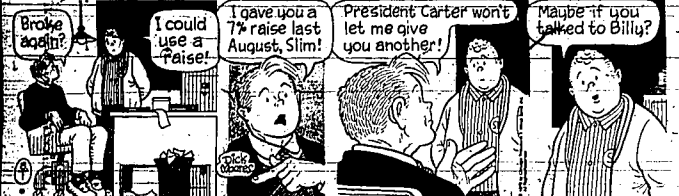

BEAVERS
Beavers built a dam. It made a big lake that put too much pressure on the dam. So they went upstream and built a smaller dam, seemingly to slow down the creek. Still too much pressure—they went upstream farther and built another minor dam. Wasn't sufficient, farther upstream, they built a third little dam. That did it. They returned to the main dam, leaving the auxiliaries to serve no purpose other than to safeguard the big headwaters. If they can't think, how do they manage to execute such remarkable pieces of engineering? Who knows?

CHICAGO — Cattle, potato and metals futures were stronger Thursday.
Commodity News Service said live cattle opened sharply higher, then sustained those gains to close from limit up to 27 points higher, with stronger dressed beef prices the principal factor. Feeder cattle followed a similar pattern, finishing 132 to 50 points higher.
Live hogs closed weaker in the two nearby months and slightly stronger in most other contracts, from 82 points lower to 10 higher. Pork bellies finished down 170 to 35 points, near the day's lows in some actively traded nearby.

Maine potatoes settled 3 to 9 cents higher with November up 4 cents at 8.79 per hundredweight and May up 4 at 8.79 cwt.
Wheat closed 4 to 4 1/2 cents higher, while selling in corn left closing prices unchanged to a cent higher. Soybeans finished unchanged to 3 cents higher, meal was 1.60 higher to unchanged and oil was up 3 points to down 3 points.

New York Comex gold rallied near the close on technical factors, settling 520 to 450 points higher on a trade of 35,000 lots including 8,168 in switches. New York Comex silver followed gold, settling 1,650 to 520 points higher on a trade placed at 25,000 lots including 5,886 in switches.

Rate hearing slated

BOISE (UPI) — The Public Utilities commission will conduct a public hearing on Troy Telephone Co.'s rates at 7 p.m. June 6 in the Troy High School auditorium.
The commission, scheduled to hear in response to a petition signed by several residents along Little Bear Ridge near Troy, the petitioners expressed concern about the cost for those living farthest away from Troy.

Banned additive may return, increase fuel supplies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government said Thursday it may temporarily allow refiners to resume using a banned anti-knock additive for unleaded gasoline in a move that could increase supplies of unleaded fuel.
A spokesman said Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Douglas Costle was considering the move, but had signed no formal order.
The additive, called MMT, could allow refiners to get more unleaded fuel out of raw petroleum. It was used until last fall when the EPA found it caused an increase in hydrocarbons in automobile exhaust.

Idahoans may be using hospitals less

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN

TWIN FALLS — A recent statistical study by Blue Cross of Idaho reveals that hospital use is declining, but not all Magic Valley hospitals are following this trend. The Idaho Blue Cross Health Service analyzed the 1978 accounts of its more than 175,000 medical insurance holders and discovered that the number of hospital admissions for both have decreased to the lowest level in 20 years.

Since Blue Cross policy holders represent a reasonably good cross-section of Idahoans, Blue Cross officials say they can use the company's case files to discern statewide trends, if the Blue Cross statistics do reflect statewide trends, then Idahoans are using hospitals less now than in the past two decades.

Hospital admissions at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital in Twin Falls and Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley, however, are on the upswing.

Two other Magic Valley hospitals — Blaine County Hospital in Halley and St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome — reported that hospital use was down.

Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Administrator Bill Burns said his hospital has seen a "moderate increase" in patient use in the first five months of 1979. Magic Valley Memorial Hospital registered 5,066 admissions in 1979, compared to 4,917 during the same five-month period in 1978. The average length of stay, though, has dropped from 4.7 days in 1978 to 4.6 in 1979.

Cassia Memorial Hospital Controller Gerald Anderson noted his hospital's use is also up for 1979. Cassia Memorial admitted 666 patients during the first four months of this year, compared to 598 patients for the same period in 1978. The average length of a patient's stay also declined from 4.2 days in 1978 to 3.9 days this year.

Blaine County Hospital Administrator Frank McNamara says admissions in the Halley facility have dropped from 340 in the first half of 1978 to 322 in 1979. The average length of stay is also down from 4.3 days last year to 3.6 this year.

In Jerome, St. Benedict's Hospital Controller Brian Emmons filed the same type of report. At St. Benedict's,

2,122 patients were admitted in 1977 and only 1,659 were admitted in 1978. Emmons also reported the average length of stay had declined about one-half day from 1977 to 1978.

Idaho Blue Cross found that for every 1,000 policy holders 132 would enter a hospital in 1977 while in 1978 this number dropped to 121 per thousand members. The average length of stay, however, increased slightly from 4.3 days in 1977 to 4.5 days in 1978.

Blue Cross Public Relations Manager Ardyth Schuster attributed the apparent decrease in hospital use to several different things.

"I think doctors are becoming much more conscious of their role in hospital costs and are asking, 'Do we really need to admit the patient? Can we do this on an outpatient basis?'" observed Ms. Schuster.

She also noted that as people feel the pinch of inflation they are going to doctors less and less and are taking better care of themselves at home.

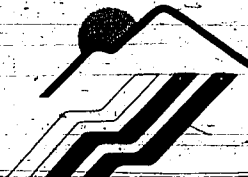

Emmons, who has watched St. Benedict's use decline, cheerfully agreed with these observations.

"We're lower," he said, "but it's due to some very positive things... People are getting possibly more health conscious and the (public) exposure of high costs in hospitals keeps people away. In a way, it's healthy for the hospital. They are not coming in for the running noses, although sometimes they may be staying away when they should come in."

Emmons also noted the average stay at St. Benedict's has been cut by at least a half-day because of a Home Health Agency operated from the hospital. HHA registered nurses visit patients at their homes and consequently many people leave the hospital two or three days earlier than they normally would.

Magic Valley Memorial's Burns, however, was not impressed with the Blue Cross projections, which run in the opposite direction from his hospital's actual use trends.

"I think they (Blue Cross) give very misleading data by making a generalized statement like this," he stated. "When you start to tear into it, it may relate to me and it may not."

Hospital conversion discussed

By JIM SHULL

HAILEY — The possibility of converting the Blaine County Hospital at Halley to a nursing home is scheduled for discussion today.

Tuesday, the Blaine County Commissioners received a recommendation from the county hospital board of directors that the commissioners pursue a general obligation bond to finance a 25-bed nursing home wing and improvements to the Halley facility at an estimated cost of $50,000. No action on the recommendation was taken.

The commissioners tentatively scheduled a meeting Friday with Sun Valley city officials to discuss further the feasibility of designating Moritz Community Hospital in Sun Valley as the county hospital and converting the present county hospital in Halley to a nursing home.

At an earlier joint meeting of the commissioners and hospital board, a financial feasibility study was presented showing that both hospitals are operating at less than 50 percent average capacity.

The study shows that a $36,000 annual debt service to the county would result over a period of 20 years, with property taxes being raised about 3½ cents per $100 valuation. A two-thirds majority vote would be necessary for a 1.8 mill levy increase.

The Sun Valley City Council also acts as the board of directors for Moritz Community Hospital, under an agreement with Sun Valley Co. At a meeting last week between the commissioners and the council, several of the Sun Valley councilmen expressed interest in pursuing the idea of combining the two hospitals. If pursued, the two bodies probably would have to work out an agreement whereby Moritz would not change hands if designated as the county hospital.

Commission Chairman Ray Sweet of Carey said if a decision is made to close the present hospital in Halley, the issue would be put to a county-wide vote.

Twin Falls man takes life after two-hour trial

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man shot and killed himself in a field near here Thursday night after county officers failed in a two-hour attempt to talk him out of a suicide try.

Twin Falls County Sheriff James Munn said the identity of the man, about 30 years of age, was being withheld pending notification of family members.

Munn said his office received a call at 2:10 p.m. from a woman who told them her husband had taken along a quantity of sleeping pills and was in a field near their home. She said she was concerned he would take his life.

When officers arrived, they found the man was armed with a .22-caliber revolver and had already shot himself in the upper left chest and shoulder area. Munn said the man had gone into the field carrying a loaded gun.

The sheriff and Deputy Ron Roberson spent approximately the next two hours talking with the man, attempting to get the gun away and offering him help.

"He talked with us but would not give up the gun and several times said he would shoot us if we attempted to take him or the gun," Munn said.

At one point, the man asked for a priest. A Catholic priest, the Rev. Perry Dodds, was brought to the scene and talked with the man.

Munn said shortly after that, the man walked down the field along a ditchbank away from officers and the priest. He sat down on the ditchbank and suddenly put the gun to his head and fired it.

Munn said the man was taken unconscious from the field about 4 p.m. and rushed to the hospital by Magic Valley Ambulance personnel. He was placed in Magic Valley Memorial Hospital's intensive care unit, suffering from a bullet wound in the right side of the head as well as the one in the left upper chest. A hospital official said he died at 6:30 p.m.

The incident occurred about two miles southwest of Twin Falls. County, state and city officers were at the scene and assisted in getting the injured man from the field to the ambulance.

Workshops held for executives, secretaries

TWIN FALLS — Communications and energy will be among the topics of discussion by Chamber of Commerce executives and their secretaries today and Saturday in Twin Falls.

Jerry Hoyer, manager of the Twin Falls chamber, said between 40 and 45 people are expected to attend the annual spring workshop session opening at 7 p.m. in the Holiday Inn.

This evening the group will hear John Alexander of Twin Falls, a former executive with Texaco Inc., speak on the gasoline outlook for the current tourist season and the future.

Two national chamber of commerce officials will participate in workshop sessions Saturday.

Hoyer said David Michener of Portland, who represents the National Alliance of Business, and Dave Walsh of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce will address the chamber executives and secretaries.

Michener will speak at 1 p.m. Saturday and Walsh will speak on small business operations during afternoon workshop sessions for executives. Secretaries will be discussing telephone techniques and the "Dos and Don'ts" for office procedure.

Lee Spence of the First Security Bank of Boise will conduct the workshop on communications. Hoyer said during Saturday afternoon sessions secretaries and executives will break into two workshop groups. Ms. Spence will address secretaries and Walsh will be in charge of the program for chamber managers and executives.

Hoyer said the Twin Falls Chamber will be the host group but Helen McKinney of Caldwell is program chairman.

Business sessions will end about 5 p.m. Saturday.

New postal rules Small stationary to be outlawed

TWIN FALLS — Postal patrons who have a supply of dainty note pads and equally dainty envelopes will have to mail a lot of notes before June 15.

Ilmsy cards, in the future all cards must be at least seven-thousandths of an inch thick. This compares to the standard postcard which is nine-thousandths of an inch thick.

Postmaster Lloyd Libert of Twin Falls reminded residents Thursday new size standards will become effective as of June 15. These prohibit the use of envelopes smaller than 3.5 inches by 5 inches.

Libert said the undersized pieces of mail and ilmsy cards are being banned because they become trapped in other mail or tear or jam mail processing machinery. As a result they can cause damage to other mail as well.

Many small thank-you notes, invitations or announcements are printed on small note sheets and fitted with tiny envelopes. Libert said any such mailings mailed after the deadline will be returned to the sender.

The new standards affect oversized and odd-shaped pieces of mail, too, Libert said. For first-class mail weighing one ounce or less, there will be a 7 cent surcharge if the mail item is more than 6 1/8 inches high or 1 1/2 inches long. Libert said the items will be accepted but they will cost more.

He said printing companies, envelope and greeting card companies were advised of the new standards more than three years ago and the small envelopes are no longer being made. Few retailers should still be selling the undersized items. However, he said, many consumers are likely to have a supply of the small envelopes or cards.

The standard business envelope measures 4 by 9 inches, while the standard letter size envelope is 3.5 by 6 inches.

"They should plan to use them up prior to June 15," Libert said.

Libert said clerks at the postal windows can provide additional information or will assist patrons in deciding if the mail pieces meet the standards.

Woman convicted

HAILEY — A Ketchum woman, 23-year-old Sydney Moffett, has been found guilty of delivery of a controlled substance, cocaine.

A 12-member jury turned in the verdict Wednesday morning in 5th District Court, ending a three-day trial. A presentence investigation was ordered by Judge Douglas Kramer. Ms. Moffett remains in the custody of the Blaine County Sheriff in lieu of payment of $5,000 bond.

Ms. Moffett was found guilty of the felony crime of delivering about an ounce of cocaine in Ketchum on the evening of July 27, 1978. She was arraigned Aug. 11 of last year and pleaded innocent.

Murder trial ordered

TWIN FALLS — Charles Patrick Tisdale, 31, of Twin Falls, has been bound to 5th District Court to stand trial on charges of murdering a

Boise man last January. Tisdale was bound over to district court on first degree murder charges in an order signed by Magistrate Mel Edwards. Edwards conducted a preliminary hearing earlier this month and took testimony and evidence under advisement May 17.

Tisdale is charged with murdering David Nylander, 27, of Boise, on the night of Jan. 18 after Nylander gave Kathy Tisdale, wife of the defendant, a ride to her home. Nylander was shot through the neck and was pronounced dead at the Tisdale home shortly after the shooting.

Having originally charged Tisdale with second degree murder, Prosecuting Attorney Jeff Stoker filed an amended complaint charging first degree and a separate felony of committing a crime with a fire arm. Magistrate Edwards bound Tisdale over on both counts.

During the preliminary hearing the prosecution introduced taped interviews between officers and the defendant and officers and Mrs. Tisdale. The tapes were of interviews at the Tisdale home shortly after the fatal shooting of Nylander. Tisdale is represented by James May, Twin Falls attorney.

Drivers injured

TWIN FALLS — Two drivers were treated for injuries following an accident at a Twin Falls intersection Wednesday afternoon.

City police reported Warrick Eugene Bennett, 31, and Ludwig Andrew Drexler, 79, both of Twin Falls, were treated for injuries after their vehicles collided at the intersection of Fifth Street North and Second Avenue North about 3 p.m. Wednesday.

Officers said Bennett was driving a van northwest on Second Avenue and Drexler was traveling southwest on Fifth Street. Drexler was cited for failure to yield right of way.

Boise mayor warns against pushing highway districts

BOISE (UPI) — Boise Mayor Dick Eardley told a legislative interim committee Thursday it should not advise the Legislature to "force" county-wide highway districts on the counties.

His comments came as the committee began researching highway funding laws and considering ways of funding construction and maintenance of city streets and county roads other than with property tax money.

The committee ordered the Legislative Council to advise possible tax alternatives, including an increase in the state gasoline and special fuels tax, with the total increase to go to the cities and counties. Other ideas to be reviewed were an increase in state motor vehicle fees and implementation of a state use fee on registered vehicles.

Eardley informed the committee on what he and the Boise City Council felt were the pros and cons of a county-wide-highway district rather than the more common, localized system of road management. Ada County is the only county in Idaho that has 100,000 residents and therefore was allowed to form a county highway district.

The committee was considering possible recommendations to the Legislature to amend the law to allow other counties to form highway districts.

"There are good and bad points about it in a single-county-wide highway district as we know it in Ada County," the mayor said. "When measured against each other, the city council and I still feel the bad points outweigh the good points and would not recommend that the Legislature force this concept on other cities and counties in the state without their concurrence."

The committee is scheduled at its August meeting to consider recommendations to the Legislature on the items discussed Thursday.

Evans names Robert Lenaghan state energy policy coordinator

BOISE (UPI) — Farmer Public Utilities Commissioner Robert Lenaghan has been named state energy policy coordinator, Gov. John V. Evans said Wednesday.

In his new post, Evans said, Lenaghan will coordinate the state's energy policy on such issues as reorganization of the Bonneville Power Administration. The position was approved Wednesday by the Pacific Northwest Regional Commission along with allocation of $36.25 in federal funds for salary and operating budget.

Evans said the state needs an energy coordinator because of the Office of Energy, has been diverted from policy issues by the fuel shortage.

Lenaghan served five years on the PUC. When Evans reappointed him last winter the state Senate refused to confirm him and he stepped down in April. Since then he has served as special assistant to the governor on energy matters and has taken part in the Northwest governors proposed for negotiations on a set of amendments to the BPA reorganization bill.

Safety board official claims two helicopter pieces stolen

SPOKANE (UPI) — A National Transportation Safety Board investigator says someone stole two pieces of the wrecked helicopter that crashed in Glades, Idaho, last week, claiming three lives.

Dan Dally said the pieces appeared to be stolen as souvenirs.

But the official said the items, a complete rotor blade and a three-to-four-foot section from another rotor blade, are vital to the investigation.

The helicopter had four forward rotor blades. The complete blade, which would be about 12 feet long, is straight.

"It's probably sitting across somebody's mantle," Dally speculated.

He said he put the blade beside the helicopter's fuselage last Thursday during an on-site investigation.

Dally said in the meantime, the rest of the wreckage was being studied thoroughly at a Feltz Field hangar where the wreckage was taken earlier this week.

"We'll put all the pieces we've got back together, then go into the fuselage and take everything apart."

The crash occurred May 21 and was found two days later.

Motta blasts refs entering tonight's 5th game

Chicago Sun-Times
SEATTLE — "I would like to begin with a statement. I would like it to be taken as a statement and not an editorial. In our last San Antonio game, the referees were accused of favoring the champions. We Muhammad All privileges had been extended to the Washington Bullets."
Dick Motta was mad.
Motta as hell and he wasn't gonna take it any more.
When his Washington Bullets beat the San Antonio Spurs in the seventh game of their Eastern Conference championship series, losing Doug Moe's foul.
"Foul!" Not to mention "Foul!" He said the referees had bent-over backwards to help the NBA defending champions. He said all the important calls went Washington's way in the final minutes.
Motta kept his mouth shut.

But when his Bullets lost to the Seattle SuperSonics 114-112 in overtime Tuesday night to trail 3-1 in the best-of-seven championship series, Motta went gaga.
"I believe that tonight we were the victim of Doug Moe's outburst. Seattle played the last 14 minutes without committing a foul. I honestly believe in an NBA game that an opponent cannot play 14 minutes without committing a foul, in all my years, I've never felt like this after any game."
Motta hopes he feels better following tonight's fifth game in the Seattle Coliseum.
Tuesday was a classic basketball game, and it cannot be tarnished by crying coaches. Seattle won because guards Gus Williams (36) and Dennis Johnson (32) scored almost all will Seattle won because center Jack Sikma added 20 points and engulfed Kevin Grevey's airball on the last shot of the game for one of his 17 rebounds.

It is true that Washington's entire front line — Elvin Hayes, Wes Unseld and Bobby Dandridge — fouled out.
Yet this was a game in which everybody and his mother was in foul trouble. Three of Seattle's front liners — Sikma, Paul Silas and Leonie Shelton — entered the fourth period with four fouls apiece, and Shelton fouled out.
Officials Darrell Garretson, Bob Rakek and Lee Jones called 59 fouls in the 2-hour, 36-minute game, which didn't end on the East Coast until after 2 a.m. and almost had Brent Musburger battling for TV ratings against Sunrise Semester.
"What's the difference?" Shelton wondered.
"Sometimes they let us play. Sometimes they get picky and call everything. But how many times do Unseld and Hayes and Dandridge get away with things that I don't get away with because they're the vets?"

"Awwwwww," Seattle's John Johnson said. "You're watchin' the two best teams in the world. All that matters is who wins and who loses, not who's getting help from the refs."
"In the NBA, nothin' comes easy."
Except the weeping.
PLAYOFF NOTES — Game Five, Friday night in Landover, Md. will be televised live all across the country, and not only in Seattle and Washington as it was in Game Two. CBS-TV took a lot of flak over airing the last D.C. game on a tape-delayed basis, forcing devoted fans to hide in closets as they wouldn't find out the final score before watching the game.

All-Star football kicks off

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer
MAGIC VALLEY — "We're going to throw it."
"If they can't stop us on the ground, we'll never throw it."
Those statements by Coach Gregg Smith, top, and Coach Gordon Hogan, lineout the game plan for tonight's second-annual Magic Valley Shrine football all-star game. The game begins at 8 p.m. at Twin Falls Bruins Stadium.

The east, which won the inaugural last year, appears slightly favored this time around because it has a weight advantage in the line and a couple of big backs. But all that could be nullified if the west can get its air game going on the arm of Buhl senior Jim Smulny.

"I'd like to go to Twin Falls stadium just once and come out with a win," Smith says of the park where the Buhl Indians lost a playoff game three years ago and the west all-stars were beaten last year.

"Told that everything is shaping up pretty close to last year, Coach Hogan, who handles the reins at Kimberly, says "well, that means we win then, doesn't it?"

Neither coach is exactly sure what to expect. "Jim has been throwing the ball real well this past week and we've got a couple of kids who can catch it. I think Alan Lancaster (Wendell) and Larry Allen (Buhl) have been the most consistent but everyone has caught the ball pretty well. The thing we worry about is whether Jim will have enough time. They have a little bigger line and pass blocking is hard to pick up in a couple of weeks of practice. The kids have been improving (in pass blocking) so we just have to hope," says Smith.

Hogan says "you can look for 195-pound Tracy (Valley) and 210-pound (Kevin) Baker (Oakley) to do a lot of ball carrying. We'll go with

Robin Jucker has led Buhl to state titles in football and basketball, and will wind up his high school career tonight

Dave Hanchey (Kimberly) at quarterback to start, because he knows what we want done. In obvious passing situations we'll go with (Mincio senior) Dan Darnen because he's our best drop back passer. But our aim is to control the ball and keep it on the ground."

The matchup appears to be in the line where Buhl's Robin Jucker, 6-5, 210, will square off against Oakley's Curtis Gorrige, 6-2, 250. "Everyone tells me that Robin is a great football player but he'd better be an animal because Gorrige has really impressed us the past two weeks," Hogar says. Coach Smith says he doesn't worry about Jucker getting along, expects him to go both ways quite a bit and has added the kick snapping chores to Robin's all-star duties.

The coaches are agreed on one thing, that each side has excellent linebacking. Both like to talk about the hitting their backing corps will do. In the defensive secondary, the west seems to have more confidence in its pass defense than the east staff. If that's true, then the east line's ability to pressure the passer will be pivotal.

The game is sponsored by the Magic Valley Shrine Club with all proceeds going to that group's Cripple Children's Hospital in Salt Lake City.

Jucker to end brilliant prep career

BUHL — A rush of success and warm memories should accompany Robin Jucker when he takes a Magic Valley football field for the last time tonight.
Jucker, considered the state A-2 football player of the year by the Idaho Statesman last fall in helping the Buhl Indians win the state crown, can look back over an athletic career that started more with determination than ability and wound up as one of the state's most highly-rated players.

He's seen football and basketball from two sides — one of the smallest and one of the biggest — and he says that bigger is better. But underlying it all is success.
One of the top academicians in his class, he has started on football and basketball championships and does his share of rodding. And after Friday night, when he'll probably go both ways for the West all-stars at tackle, he'll take his considerable talents to Boise State.

Right now the 6-5, 210-pound youngster is keying up for the game. He accompanied the players from both teams in a visit to Salt Lake City and the Shrine Crippled Children's Hospital, which will receive the proceeds from the play of Jucker and his 37 counterparts from nearly all Magic Valley high schools.

"I fell in love with those kids," says the sandy-haired Jucker. "They were in such good spirits we couldn't believe it. This visit meant everything to them. They had the autograph books out and waiting when we came in. By the time we had to leave I kinda wished I lived there so I could sorta be a foster parent to a few of them."
And he said the effect was still with him when he got home. "Me and Dave Butler drove around a little after we got back and talked about the kids and the game. We are getting pretty jacked," he confides.

"It's an easy game to get up for," Jucker continued. "In the regular season it was hard to get up for some teams because they were down. But now it's best against best and I'm looking forward to it."
He said he enjoyed the "relaxed atmosphere" at the all-star camp. "The practices were work but a lot of fun."
Jucker said he was not acquainted with Oakley's 6-5, 255-pound Curtis Gorrige who East Coach Gordon Hogan will put across from Robin for openers. "If it happens that Curtis can't do it, then we'll put Nos. 51, 52 and 53 across from him, too," Hogan said.

"That's all right with me," Jucker said of the possible double teaming. "If they double on me they have to leave something open. I'll take it and we'll take something else." Of course, Jucker is used to being double teamed.

In looking back on his Buhl athletic career, Jucker picked out his highlights.
"The biggest part was playing with my teammates at Buhl and the coaches. We had a great feeling and a great time together. If that's not there, there's nothing," he said.

Similarly, Jucker doubts he and his teammates had much to do with the "competitive and enthusiastic drive for athletics at Buhl. "Until I was in the seventh or eighth grade I certainly wasn't any athletic standout. I played in junior high but I didn't go to varsity games. As a freshman I didn't know what it was all about. I think it (town esprit de corps) was always there."
Jucker started his playing in the seventh grade. "I was one of the shortest in the seventh grade — 5 feet, 2 1/2 inches," he recalls. "I played guard on the basketball team. But between my eighth grade and freshman year I really started growing. I really got big," he smiles. "I was about 6 feet then and just keep growing" to his present 6-5.

"But even then I wasn't very big, just tall. Even as a junior I considered myself smaller. We played against Orofino that year and there, I was at 173 pounds and Diehl was across from me at 278. I didn't feel very big," he laughs.
But he found an advantage in seeing both ends of that size spectrum. "I guess playing as one of the littles helps you learn the size of your heart," he says in a quite profound statement.

Jucker finds that A-2 state player nomination by the Boise paper as personally satisfying moment but the team feeling and going on to win state meant more to him. In basketball, he remembers the night against Mountain Home when he scored 27 with a smile but says "winning that game was more important than the 27 points."
And the highlight of basketball?
"Beating Rigby for the state championship this year. Last year we beat them twice in the season and then lost to them in the championship game — the game we should have won. Beating them this year wasn't so much a revenge feeling for me as justification that we should have won it the year before."

For most of his high school career, the word around the coaching corners was that Jucker was University of Oregon bound. Then suddenly he signed with Boise State.
"Oregon started recruiting me before my junior year," he explains. "A lot of other schools contacted me with letters or occasional phone calls but Oregon was in contact with me every week for two years. I fell strong for Oregon because I felt they really wanted me."

So what brought about the change?
"Well, first, Boise State is closer to home. And then when I visited there I felt everyone showed the players more respect than they did other places. I mean in some places you were on the football team and everyone else was over there. At Boise State . . . on the campus and on the field . . . everyone was part of everything. The Oregon coaches, I love them, but they (Oregon) change coaches a lot and (BSU) Coach (Jim) Criner told me Boise was where he wanted to raise his kids. He promised me he would be there the four years I was there. That was important to me. When Stanford was recruiting me they told me the same thing but Coach (Bill) Walsh went to the 49ers the next fall."

At Boise State Robin is torn between a pre-vet major or going into construction management.
The pre-vet idea is no surprise. He comes from a family of rodeo and horse-racing folks, father George Jucker and uncle Bob Jucker. They also were into high school athletics as Buhl Indians in the late 40s and early 50s.

The rodeo caught on with Robin, not so much because of father or uncle pressure but because "my cousin Joe got into rodeoing and I was real close to him. Rodeo is part of the family," he said with both his father and uncle on the Idaho RCA circuit. "His dad (Bob) had the rope horses and stock and so I'd go over there and that's how I got into it."

"I enjoy rodeo. I've been in seven of them this year. It's real neat. Being in his events was bareback, bulldogging, calf roping and team roping.
How about the bulls?
"None of that for me," laughs the 6-5, 210 all-star football performer.

District five Blacks dazzle crowd in team roping event

By GARY ELLASSEN
Times-News sports editor
JEROME — Lowell and Tim Black of Hammett turned in a sparkling performance in the team roping competition Thursday night to highlight second night action in the Fifth District high school rodeo.

The Black brothers teamed up for a 7:34 second showing to earn themselves a trip to the state competition June 26-30 at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds at Filer.
Thursday night marked the end of the first go-rounds, and the winners automatically earned berths in the state meet. The top four averages after the second rounds also will go to state.

There were two double winners, including Connie Stevens of Gooding and Mike Smith of Carey.
Stevens won the goat tying with a 10.831 cloaking. Her first day ride in the barrel racing of 18.031 also withstood Thursday night rides to give her that victory, too.

Stevens, a senior at Gooding High School, has a good shot at her first all-around title, and already has assured herself of a return trip to state later this month.
Smith, who dazzled the crowd with two good rides in the bareback and saddle bronc, also is a strong candidate for all-around honors.

Smith came back later to turn in a 47 in the bull riding to place third in that event after the first go-round.
Another all-around candidate is Rusty Ruby of Jerome, who is well-known for his ability in the roping events.
Ruby, 17, is more than two seconds ahead of his nearest competitor in the calf roping after the first go-round. He registered a 16.765 to Halley's Mike Seal's 18.074.

Other first go-round winners included bareback, Mike-Smit of Carey 53; breakaway roping, Becky Seal of Halley; 4:02.8; goat tying, Connie Stevens of Gooding, 10.831; calf roping, Rusty Ruby of Jerome, 16.765; barrel racing, Connie Stevens of Gooding, 18.032; saddle bronc riding, Mike Smit of Carey, 53; steer wrestling, Jon Gill of Gooding, 16.204; pole bending, Bobette Kawamura of Halley, 21.748; and bull riding, Doug James of Gooding, 60.

One cowboy, Otnar Hofstetter, was taken to St. Benedict's Hospital for treatment of a broken hip after being bucked off on his bareback ride.

Action continues tonight at 8 at the Jerome County Fairgrounds.
The following are the standings of the first go-round:
Calf roping — Rusty Ruby, Jerome, 16:765; Mike Seal, Halley, 18:074; Jimmy Pfeiffer, Carey, 18:274; and Lowell Black, Filer, 18:724.
Steer wrestling — Connie Stevens, Gooding, 16:204; and Pat Patterson, Gooding, 19:211; James Pruitt, Gooding, 19:549; and Lee Turner, Gooding, 19:571.
Barrel racing — Mike Smit, Carey, 53; and Doug Black, Gooding, 47.
Breakaway roping — Becky Seal, Halley, 4:02.8.
Goat tying — Connie Stevens, Gooding, 10:831; and Mike Smit, Carey, 53; J. Z. Brown, Filer, 50; and Dennis Pruitt, Green River, 46.
Saddle bronc riding — Mike Smit, Carey, 53; J. Z. Brown, Filer, 50; and Dennis Pruitt, Green River, 46.
Pole bending — Bobette Kawamura, Halley, 21:748; and Connie Stevens, Gooding, 22:541.
Team roping — Mike Smit, Carey, 53; and Julie Gilzer, Gooding, 50.
Bull riding — Doug James, Gooding, 60; J. Z. Brown, Filer, 50; and Mike Seal, Carey, 53.
Team roping — Lowell and Tim Black of Hammett, 7:34; Joe Hoe of Wendell and Bill Johnson of Gooding, 11:42; and Tom Cooney of Wendell and Curt Huf of Halley, 13:377.

Expos take Phils again

By United Press International

Once again, everything's coming up zeros for the Montreal Expos. And they wouldn't have it any other way.

Warren Cromartie's first-inning sacrifice fly drove in Andre Dawson and Scott Sanderson made it stand up with a six-hitter Thursday, enabling the Montreal Expos to blank the Phillies for the third straight game, 1-0.

The victory boosted the Expos' lead in the National League East to three games over the Phillies, who have lost four straight and seven of their last eight. The Expos have shut out the Phillies the last three games and have not yielded a run in their last 31 innings — against Philadelphia.

Montreal's home advantage doesn't hurt either. The Expos have won 11 of 14 home games and 10 of 14 away games.

In other NL games, St. Louis beat New York 9-6, San Diego defeated Atlanta 3-1 and Los Angeles outslugged San Francisco 4-3 in 10 innings and finished shut out Cincinnati 3-0.

St. Louis' home advantage in the series with a homer and a triple and George Hendrick added a homer and three singles to pace the Cardinals' win.

Dave Winfield hit his 11th home run and raised his league-leading RBI total to 41 and Eric Hummer and Rolo Fingers combined on a five-hitter as the Padres swept their four-game series.

Davey Lopes smacked his third double of the game in the fourth inning with the bases loaded to key a seven-run rally and Steve Garvey drove in four runs to carry the Dodgers.

Brewers bop Yanks

By United Press International

The Milwaukee Brewers had seen enough of New York's bullpen, so Thursday night they did something about it.

The Brewers, who had watched Ron Davis gain his first two major-league victories at their expense in the four-game series, rallied with three ninth-inning runs — with Paul Molitor's bases-loaded single the winner — to beat the Yankees 5-4.

The Yankees had built a 4-0 lead with the help of Reggie Jackson's 35th career home run, a solo shot in the second. The homer left Jackson 27th on the all-time home run list, one behind Dick Allen, and represented the outfielder's 1,000th career run.

In other early A.L. games, Detroit edged Toronto 1-0, Minnesota clubbed Oakland 13-2 and Boston shaded Texas 3-2 in 12 innings.

Pat Underwood, becoming the first pitcher in major-league history to debut against his brother, combined with two relievers on a three-hitter and Jerry Morales hit his fourth homer to give Detroit its sixth straight.

Ron Jackson had three hits and drove in four runs — two with his eighth home — and Jose Morales added three hits, including his second homer to pace Minnesota.

Jerry Remy singled home pinch-runner Jim Dwyer from second base with two out in the 12th, allowing Boston to snap its nine-game losing streak against Texas.

California was at Seattle in a late game.

Southern schools dominate 1978-79 Big Sky season

BOISE (UPI) — The Big Sky Conference pendulum swung sharply south during the 1978-79 season as Weber State and Northern Arizona scooped up most of the plunder in what basically was a two-school contest.

And in the latest turn to the south—a development that 115 years ago would have excited even the most pessimistic Confederate general—the league's new member, Nevada-Reno, next fall brings a well-billed program that further should concern the northern forces.

The Weber Wildcats and the Lumberjacks from Northern Arizona entered the recent spring season in delight for the conference title. Then, although the Arizona school scorched the Bronco Stadium track at Boise to easily win the Big Sky track and field trophy, Weber State's tennis and golf teams gouged their way into the winners' circle to lead their school to the All-Sports title.

The Wildcats went home for the summer with 89 points on the basis of four championships—golf, tennis, indoor track and basketball. Second was Northern Arizona, with 75 points and championships in outdoor track, football and cross country.

Boise State — the only other school to win a sport (wrestling) — finished third with 57½. Following were Idaho State, 47; Idaho, 45½; Montana, 45; Montana State, 38; and Gonzaga, in its last year in the Big Sky, 14.

The All-Sports crown was the second in succession for Weber State, which perennially has been a power in basketball and golf and recently has come up the ladder in tennis, track and wrestling. The Wildcats now have won five all-around conference honors.

Likewise for Northern Arizona, things have been looking up the past few years. Once a patsy in basketball, for instance, the Lumberjacks have been mixing things up and knocking off such traditional frontrunners as Weber, Idaho State and Montana.

Nevada-Reno is expected to be a potent force next season in the major sports of football and basketball and the Wolf Pack also boasts quality in other sports.

For next season, the northern squads will have a chance to make up for lost time, but they will have to do it against some tough southerners.

The Wildcats' basketball team has traveled to NCAA regional competition the past two years.

McGee grabs Kemper lead

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Jerry McGee, playing with a newly found catcher's attitude, fired a course record 11-under-par 61 Thursday to take a one-stroke lead over Craig Stadler in the first round of the Kemper Open golf tournament.

"I've been down on Jerry McGee lately, but my wife gave me a pep talk last night from Ohio," McGee said after firing the low round on the PGA tour this year. "She told me to just go out and play and not worry about what happens and that's what I tried to do."

McGee, a 13-year veteran whose last victory came in 1977, dropped in a 45-foot putt on the final hole of the Quail Hollow Country Club course to break the course record by three shots.

Lee Trevino and Tom Kite each had a 64 during the 1974

Kemper, but the lowest round since the 7,160-yard layout was reconstructed five years ago was a 65.

Overcast skies plagued the tournament throughout the day. Play was halted twice for a total of two hours in the afternoon because of thunderstorms, keeping the last golfers out on the course until about 8:30 p.m. EDT.

After the first round was complete, Joe Hager, Gary McCord and Bobby Wadkins were tied for third at 5-under-par 67, six strokes behind McGee.

McGee began play about 45 minutes after Stadler and, despite his soggy round, found himself playing catch-up until he birdied the 15th hole to move even at 10-under. He took the lead for the first time at 18.

"I shot 11-under and it took me 18 holes to get the lead," he said with amusement.

Chinook closed to Indians

BOISE (UPI) — The U.S. Interior and state Fish and Game departments have ordered the closure of Indian treaty fishing for spring chinook salmon in Idaho, Gov. John V. Evans said Thursday.

Evans said the action, effective next Tuesday, is necessary because some tribes have not responded to earlier requests to join the state in closing its waters to salmon fishing this year.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission did not establish a 1979 chinook season after it received reports that the upstream run was at a record low and a large harvest would endanger the survival of the fish.

Evans said he hoped the tribes would act under their own tribal law so that the state and federal agencies can rescind their closure orders.

The governor said Fish and Game has authority to order the tribes to close fishing "whenever it finds it necessary for the preservation, protection or management of any wildlife in the state."

The Interior Department acted in its capacity as trustee for treaty Indian tribes, he said.

"I believe it (the closure) will help safeguard tribal fishing rights in the future by conserving a resource of such historic value to all our citizens," Evans said. "I will be the first to defend those tribal rights should they be placed in undue jeopardy."

Briefly in sports

Wendell basketball

WENDELL — There will be a definite UCLA flavor in the Wendell high school gymnasium next week.

The Northwest Basketball Clinic will open a five-day instructional stay for Magic Valley youngsters ranging from 10 through 18 years of age.

Yogi Behrens, Wendell athletic director who along with Gooding Coach Jay Durfee will provide local instruction and supervision, said a clinic will remain open.

The clinic will feature former UCLA all-American Larry Farmer, now a Bruin assistant coach; David Greenwood, three-year all-American for the Bruins who graduated this spring; Slick Watts, a guard for Houston in the NBA, and Jim Herrick, former UCLA assistant and coach. Each will provide instruction one day.

Behrens said the sessions, which cost $67.50, will run from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. each day.

Area youngsters interested in enrolling may do so by contacting Behrens or Durfee or by registering prior to 9 a.m. Monday.

Jr. golf tourney

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley youngsters will get a chance to show off their golfing talent Tuesday during the annual Junior World of Golf Tournament at the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

Sponsored by the Twin Falls Optimist Club, the tournament is open to youngsters 10-17. Action will begin at 9 a.m.

Competition will be scratch in each age bracket: 10 and under, 11-12, 13-14 and 15-17. Trophies will be awarded to winners in each division.

The 15-17 year old golfers will also be playing for berths in the state golf tournament, set for later in the month at the Twig Falls course. One out of every six golfers will qualify for the state event.

The top three golfers in the state will then compete in the National Junior World of Golf Tournament to be held in San Diego.

Registration is currently being taken at the golf course, and cost to enter the tournament is $6. All entries should be in by June 4.

Dome for Minnesota

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — The Metropolitan Sports-Facilities Commission Thursday gave formal approval to a plan to build a $600 million stadium in downtown Minneapolis for use by the Minnesota Twins and the Minnesota Vikings.

The commission voted 5-0 to reaffirm its original plans to build the $55 million facility, which will be supported by backup liquor and hotel-motel taxes in the city of Minneapolis.

Parent to retire

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Goalie Bernie Parent, who played for the Philadelphia Flyers to Stanley Cup championships in 1974 and 1975, announced his retirement Thursday, the result of a serious eye injury he suffered 3 1/2 months ago.

A very subdued Parent, 34, emphasized at a news conference he was leaving hockey after a 14-year professional career on the advice of his doctors. He said he felt he still had several good years ahead of him with the Flyers had the injury not occurred.

Weekend bicycle races set

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's parking lot will be turned into a bicycle race track Saturday during the Magic Valley Bicycle Club's annual races.

The United States Cycle Federation sanctioned event begins at 10 a.m. Registration is at 9 a.m.

On Sunday, the club also will sponsor an 89-mile road race taking the competitors down in the Snake River Canyon. This race begins at 10 a.m. from CSI.

Cindy Houser of Valley Schwinn, who is membership chairman of the local club, said more than 50 riders from throughout the Intermountain region are expected to compete. This includes bike clubs from Boise, Sun Valley, Pocatello, and the states of Wyoming, Oregon and Utah.

The Saturday track races at CSI will be divided into two, possibly three divisions. These include 18-35, 35-over, and if enough riders under 18 show up, a junior division.

"Anybody who competes must have a national federation card, but these can be purchased before the race," she said.

Competitors in the 18-35 class will travel 50 laps around the make-shift track in the parking lot, while 35-over riders will go 25 laps. She said 50 laps is equal to about 35 to 40 miles.

Defending champion Rick Montgomery of Salt Lake City, who rolled to an easy victory last year, will be back to defend his title.

Twin Falls will have three of its own club members in the races including Dave Nelson (who is club president), Gary Graham and Dennis Bolin.

"It's an exciting sport to watch," said Houser. "We estimate the bikes will be traveling at speeds in excess of 30 miles per hour."

Last year, she noted, there were several accidents among the packs of riders. No one was seriously injured, she said.

On Sunday, most of the same riders will be back at CSI to begin a grueling 89-mile road race. Last year's champion went over the course in three hours and five seconds.

The speeds of these racers sometimes exceed 40 miles per hour. One policeman last year clocked one biker in Bull at 45 miles per hour.

"Both races are a proving grounds for the Olympics," Houser said. "We'll be sending in the times to the federation, and the top racers have a chance to compete in the nationals."

While the bike club is sponsoring the event, Donnelly's Sporting Goods, Schwinn Bicycle Club, Valley Schwinn, Sav-A-Mor Drug and local restaurants will be providing $500 in merchandise to the winners.

This is the second such event put on by the one-year-old bicycle club.

Houser said the club has about 30 members. Its activities include Sunday 7 a.m. breakfast rides beginning at the city park (open to anybody), qualification rides of 25, 50 and 75 miles, and short group tours (one is planned Aug. 4-5 for Alturas Lake).

Houser also is asking anybody who would be interested in joining during the races to call her at 733-0671.

Indian falls to Connors

PARIS (UPI) — American Ace Jimmy Connors, the No. 2 seed, strengthened his chances to win the $25,000 French Open Tennis Championships Thursday when he pounded India's Ramesh Krishnan 6-1, 6-1, 6-4 in the second round beneath rain-filled skies.

On a day shortened by showers, Connors glittered with an 88-minute display of power-packed tennis that contrasted with the indifferent exhibition of Sweden's Bjorn Borg, the No. 1 seed, so far in the tournament.

The 13,500 French crowd cheered every point earned by Krishnan, who is only 17, but as he remarked afterwards, "Jimmy was just too difficult for me today."

Tarwater swings over to sing Lord's praises

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN

Times-News writer
MOUNTAIN HOME — Who's ever heard of a born again country band playing mandolin and fiddle-jacks for the Lord?

It may sound improbable, but it's happened to one of Idaho's most popular country swing bands.

Tarwater has been born again. Both musically and spiritually, the group has changed its tune. Once a hard-driving country band that played honky-tonks throughout the state, the group's sound is now gospel and its message is of the Messiah.

Tarwater was no ordinary honky-tonk country band. They sold more beer in the bars and sent more bodies swinging on the dance floor than almost any other group that's played Idaho for the past five years.

But three weeks ago in Lava Hot Springs, Tarwater played its last bar gig. The group has given up its redneck ways to give testimony for God.

"We're just going to change it from hard country music to hard country praise," says Lyle Evans, co-leader of the group and its bass and mandolin player. "It's the same kind of format, only the message is different. Instead of honky-tonk 'cheatin' songs, it's going to be songs of praise."

No longer will Tarwater fans hear old favorites like "Your Cheatin' Heart," "Lord-I-Need Somebody Bad Tonight" or "Up Against The Wall You Redneck Mother." The group will now perform almost all original gospel music with titles like "Under the Influence of the Holy Spirit," "The Lord's Guitar" and "Praise."

In the eyes of Tarwater fans, the group's transformation has been as powerful and swift as the hand of the Lord. One day the band was packing bars and playing hard-driving, foot-stomping country swing. The next day the group is playing gospel music at churches and benefit concerts.

But in reality, the group's leaders say, the change has been in the air for months. The first seeds of the band's rebirth were sown in the born-again religious experiences of Evans and the group's other leader, Teddy Jones.

"The Lord reached right down into the bars to touch me," says the 27-year-old Evans.

Dianne Hagaman/Times-News

Filled with a new spirit popular Idaho country swing band, Tarwater, leaves honky-tonks to sing gospel music

Once a hard-driving, hard-nosed musician who spent much of his time on the road, Evans is now a devout Christian who says he has sworn off all booze and drugs.

"There is a spiritual void in people that you inherit," Evans says. "I filled that void with drugs and booze. When Jesus comes into your life, he fills that void for you."

The Tarwater bass player filled that void with Jesus about two years ago. He was the first band member to give himself up to Christianity, and he did so one evening after his deeply religious wife, Carrie, brought a minister to their home to talk with her husband.

Evans says he realized then that Christ was indeed the earthly manifestation of God, who sent his only son to redeem mankind. For the next two years, he says he stayed with the band and fought the temptations that were constantly thrust upon him in the bars that Tarwater played.

Jones was the next to become a "warrior" for the Lord. His born again experience came last fall on a road trip in Wyoming.

"I was born again on the banks of the Hoback River in Wyoming," recalls the 29-year-old Jones. "I'd been having a lot of trouble with this religion-thing. My wife had been trying to get me to read the Bible, and so I finally said I'm going to do it. I went out onto the banks of the Hoback River where we had been camping out, and I knelt down and prayed up to the sky. I just prayed to God and to Jesus to come into my life and to help me, and I can say right at that moment I actually changed, on the banks of the Hoback River."

Both Evans and Jones say they tried giving testimony through their music in the bars and beer joints where they played. But they say the feeling wasn't right, and in truth, the old Tarwater and Christian testimony were very nearly a contradiction in terms.

"It's hep to be a dope smoker, and it's hep to be a beer drinker; that's the cool thing," Jones observes. "But those are really temporary things in your life. They don't get you anything or anywhere. The crowds actually expected us to drink a lot of beer on the bandstand there, and the bar owners got to know Tarwater as a good beer selling band. We just found ourselves working for the man and not for ourselves."

Evans, who stuck with the band almost two years after he became a devout Christian, did so because he believed it was God's wish.

"This may sound a little strange," he says, "but I had prayed and said, 'Lord, if you want me to quit the band, I will get on the phone right now.' I got an 'NO-11' came in a typeset right on the back of my eyelids, and I knew then it was God's will that I stay in Tarwater."

For both Evans and Jones and the band's rhythm guitar player, Rod Dyer, finding the Lord has filled an essential emptiness that was carved deep inside them all during the life they had long led playing on the road.

"I found the Lord in a quiet, simple way," Jones says. "I felt that void, and I needed something. I have been working in the bars and playing honky-tonks for 13 years. I was getting stale. My music had no meaning to it. All my life I worshipped music and the fortunes music can bring. I had my eyes set on the stardom of becoming a big country music star. That never came about, and I just felt I needed something more to grasp onto."

That void and nearly every other part of Jones' life is filled now with the spirit of the Lord. Even the inspiration to compose music, he says, comes to him now through the holy spirit.

"I started praying before I would write a song," Jones says. "I prayed. He would fill me with a spirit so I could pin this song on the spirit. If I'm inspired, then I pray to God. It's coming from Him. I have totally given myself to Jesus."

In addition to his music, Jones claims his family life has been permeated by this holy spirit. He says God has worked "a little miracle" for him and his wife.

"Me and my wife have tried to have a child for over five years, and we could never conceive," Jones says. "Then after we became born again, we prayed to the Lord about it, and now my wife is six months pregnant."

The new Tarwater that plays hard country praise, the band's form of gospel music, will begin appearing throughout southern Idaho in June. The group is scheduled to perform at the Filer Fairgrounds June 23 at 7:30 p.m.

For the new band, there will be no more medicines of beer and banjos, margaritas and mandolins, gin and guitars.

The band is playing a strict solo act now. It is doing something like "Praise the Lord and play that country fiddle."

Connie Jones leads a YFCA workshop in belly dancing, which seems to attract many women as fun exercise

Eastern art of belly dancing gains in popularity

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

Times-News Writer
TWIN FALLS — Mature women as opposed to teenagers seem to be more interested in belly dancing.

Connie Jones of Twin Falls, one of several instructors who presented a belly dancing workshop at the YFCA Saturday, said about 20 women participated. Most were already accomplished dancers, wanting some pointers on more advanced techniques, Ms. Jones said. Only about two beginners attended. Belly dancing, she said, is one of the oldest known forms of cultural expression and has been popular for 3,000 years. The art began in the countries of Turkey, Egypt and other countries of the East.

"Belly dancing tells a story. Most of the dances tell of the woman's life, and various movements tell of her carefree childhood, her falling in love, of maturity and childbirth. Ms. Jones said each belly dance is preceded by an explanation to the audience so spectators may better understand the various movements. Belly dancing came to the United States at the turn of the century but only in recent years has it come into its own.

"At one time I guess you could say it was frowned on by our more sedate men and women because too many it revealed suggestive movements. Now it is becoming more and more understood and it is a popular form of entertainment," Ms. Jones said. Twin Falls belly dancers are now presenting programs for service and civic organizations several times each week.

The HeteP-Ta troupe presented the workshop Saturday and an evening two-hour show featured local dancers as well as several from Boise.

"Ms. Jones said the appeal of belly dancing to many is the exercise. "It is much more interesting than logging or jumping" rope, yet it compares with those activities in the amount of body exercise."

The Twin Falls and Boise dancers began their dancing at 9 a.m. at the workshops and after only a brief rest presented the two-hour evening program.

"It is especially good exercise when you dance from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m.," she said.

Kindergarten testing planned

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls School District 411 will conduct pre-kindergarten screening program June 4 through June 8 for children eligible to attend kindergarten this fall.

Cindy Williams, district speech therapist, said unlike the more limited screening programs at the YFCA, the school program will check the children in the following eight areas of abilities and development: Speech, hearing, language, vision, perceptual-motor skills, emotional-social skills, intellectual skills and pre-educational skills.

"We feel the program will make both the parents and the school more aware of the individual child's development. It should provide an improved learning opportunity for all children in the elementary classes," Mrs. Williams said.

Testers will be Mrs. Williams and Nancy Harris, speech therapists; Dennis Robinson, hearing specialist; Steve Toth and Betty Robertson, kindergarten teachers; and Larry Watson and Mike Hutchings, psychologists. Five high school seniors will assist.

The results of the screening will be given directly to the parents. A follow-up session for parents will be held June 11, at Sawtooth Elementary School auditorium at 9:30 a.m. Specialists will give practical ideas and suggestions on how to further stimulate the child's development.

Parents are encouraged to bring their child to the school he will be attending. Following is the screening schedule:

- Bickel, Monday, June 4
 - Harrison, Tuesday, June 5
 - Lincoln, Wednesday, June 6
 - Mornhugstide, Thursday, June 7
 - Sawtooth, Friday, June 8
- Children with last names beginning with A through F will be screened from 9 to 10:15 a.m.; G through M, 10:15 to 11:30 a.m.; N through S, 1 to 2:15 p.m.; and T through Z, 2:15 to 3:30 p.m.
- For more information, call the school psychological services department at 733-8456 or speech and hearing services at 733-6900, extension 24.

BRIDGE

Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Lucky is what lucky does

NORTH 6-1, WEST 7-5, EAST 6-3, SOUTH 4-10

Vulnerable: Neither Dealer: North

West North East South Pass Pass Pass Pass

Opening Lead: ♠ 2

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

East took his ace of clubs and continued with the queen.

West ruffed and led a heart. There was no way for South to avoid the loss of a heart and another club.

Down one!

"Nice lead," said South. "I guess I am the unluckiest player in the world. Every card is wrong for me and my opponents play perfectly."

It was a killing lead. The cards did lie wrong for poor South. Nevertheless, South could have made his contract. He should play a low club at trick two!

East would continue clubs. West would ruff out South's king for what would now be the third and last defensive trick. West would shift to a heart, but South would rise with dummy's ace and lead a club from dummy.

East would have to cover with his last club. South would ruff and draw trumps. Then he would lead a club and discard his losing jack of hearts on the last club.

Ask the Experts

You hold: ♠ 8-4, ♥ x, ♦ x x x, ♣ x x x

No one is vulnerable and you are in fourth seat. The bidding this game: Oneheart, one spade, four hearts. A Montana reader asks what.

We bid four spades or pass. It depends on our partner's characteristics.

Joe Cannon cracks them up with delight during a recent Turk Club appearance

People's choice

Long live the King of Sun Valley!

By IRENE LINK

Times-News writer
When Joe Cannon, the "King of Sun Valley," performs, he offers something for everyone, but especially for people who enjoy a rollicking good time.

If you live in southern Idaho, you have either seen Cannon's show or heard about it. And what you expect is a rousing combination of traditional country, country-rock, Elvis favorites, nostalgic 50s songs, Rod Stewart's "If You Want My Body," great impersonations, and a generous sprinkling of Cannon's own compositions like "Oh Great State of Idaho" and "Maybe I'll Return to You My Love."

Cannon's reputation precedes his performances. The audience often joins the singing and footstomping and screams for more.

What is it that gives a few special entertainers the skill to create that atmosphere in a room?

"I don't know," claims Cannon. "I just give them a good time. I guess the songs, the jokes, the way I put it all over it. Maybe it's charisma on stage. People seem to identify with me. They feel like I'm one of them. I like people and allow them to be themselves when they come in my shows, and they sense that. Maybe that's why they respond the way they do."

Cannon projects a strong image — powerful, handsome, aggressive. He is not only a ladies' man but a man's man, too. However, there is a sensitive side to him that comes through, particularly when he sings some of his own songs.

Because Cannon can sing any kind of song and imitate almost any singer, he says his own style has eluded him.

"I'm trying to become more mellow. I don't think screaming out Rod Stewart songs is really my style. In fact, I don't know exactly what my style is. I'm trying to find it. I think when I do, it will be easy country."

His special warmth comes through every time he mentions his family, which is often. He has four sons and says, "I love 'em like crazy! I just bought the 4-year-old twins their first bikes last week. I wish I were at home to teach them how to ride. Those are some of the things you miss when you're an entertainer and on the road. But I make up for it when I am at home."

For the past five years,

Cannon has considered home to be Idaho, even though he entertains all over the West. He grew up in Rhode Island and like many Idaho transplants, spent a number of years in California. A sometimes actor, Cannon performed in 14 episodes of "The Virginian" before moving on to develop his singing career.

His father, who owned a construction business, wanted Cannon to become part of it.

"My father didn't think there was any financial future in singing. So I worked in construction for a long time. That was good training ground for me. That's where I picked up a lot of the humor I use in my shows."

Cannon's unique style — a combination of vocal skill, body language, instrumental know-how and instinctive humor — is difficult to define. But it is supremely apparent, on-stage as well as off. You will seldom see a Las Vegas headliner provoking the response Cannon gets with almost every performance.

During the ski season in Sun Valley, when Cannon performs each afternoon in the Saloon in Elkhorn, you had better be prepared to give-up those last few runs and head straight for the showroom if you want to see the show. People will leave one of the world's best ski mountains at 3 p.m. just to stand in line for a show that doesn't even start until 5. Even then, they have to scramble for a place to sit.

Part of the reason for this is that Cannon has a faithful following. To a lot of fans he really is the "King of Sun Valley." There are some who have seen his show so many times they not only know the words to all his songs, but they never seem to tire of his jokes and humor.

Cannon's recently played at the Twin Falls Turf Club. Turf Club co-owner Tim Soran says, "Joe was a great success here. The local people loved him! In fact, he is the best one-man show we have ever had. He just seems to bring a crowd with him. That's why we're going to have him back again July 19 and 20."

Is Cannon's sometimes irreverent and risqué Sun Valley show the same as the one he puts on in Twin Falls?

"Basically it is," he says. "But like any pro, he says he plays it by ear each time he performs. "I start out by telling a few familiar jokes. If everyone laughs a lot then I know not many of them have seen the show before. Then I can get away with almost anything. I like to do what each individual audience seems to enjoy most, and I can tell after just a few minutes."

Cannon has had no formal training.

He recalls: "I learned to sing as a kid off records. I'd put on my favorite record and sing with it until I had learned the words. When I got my first guitar at 15, I did the same thing until I could sing and play the song by heart. Now, he has composed the words and music for several hundred songs. He has produced five albums and three singles. He says he now is looking for a recording deal with a good label. But he'll keep on doing live performances.

"I like performing because I get a chance to sing. Singing is so much in me that it's hard for me not to sing. Mentally, it feels good — all my problems and worries seem to dissolve when I perform. And if people enjoy it, I get high on it. Besides, I love the attention I get. Everybody needs it and wants it. I'm just lucky enough to get it."

Mariel Hemingway: Woody Allen can pick 'em

By JANET MASLIN

©New York Times Service
NEW YORK — The wrong girl, as Mariel Hemingway's co-star Michael Murphy points out, could have turned "Manhattan" into the wrong mood.

Had the actress who played Tracy, a 17-year-old girl with an uncomplicated love for the 42-year-old man played by Woody Allen, had the least-bit-of-Lolita-in-her, the film might have taken a sleazy turn. But in casting his teenage leading lady, who was 16 when he first decided to use her and is, if anything, less worldly than the character she plays, Allen found the perfect combination of innocence and naivete.

In a quiet Greenwich Village restaurant, Mariel Hemingway demonstrates the kind of inadvertent magnetism that works so well for her on the screen. With a bashful demeanor, no makeup and a very self-effacing outfit — she wears the same kind of oversized man's shirt that sets her off from Diane Keaton's woman-of-the-world in "Manhattan" — she still can't help attracting attention.

The waiter works much too hard catering to her every whim — not easy, because all she wants for lunch is grapefruit juice, spinach and a lemon — the latter not to drink over the greens but to eat. What the waiter really wants is a good look at her, and once he's had one he simply won't go away. Mariel Hemingway has a face equally capable of riveting and rewarding the eye.

Woody Allen, first noticed her when she made her screen debut, at 14, in "Lipstick," playing the younger sister of her own real sister, Margaret, and getting the better reviews.

Then, he says, "I saw some photos of her" in "Interview" magazine and I thought — and still do think — that she's probably the most beautiful woman that the world has yet seen. I really think that about her, that's not hyperbole: it's absolutely a miracle to me.

"But when I met her, I wasn't immediately sure that I wanted to use her in the movie, because I thought 'Oh, she's kind of tall and she's very kiddie.' She wasn't anything like what I thought she'd be. I mean she's still one of those kids who says 'yuck' and 'gross.' When we first went over the script together, she was very, very shy. She could hardly open her mouth. She was so shy, and she blushed every three lines. But I relaxed into it. I felt there was a good chance she'd be wonderful, because she herself is such a striking character."

Mariel spent her days on the set, according to Allen, "doing her homework, jumping rope and drinking her smoothies, her health food concoctions." But once she went to work, she gave the director exactly what he wanted in scenes that required her to look hurt or vulnerable. She had a little more trouble with the script's lighter moments. "She was always just perfect when I had to say something like 'Don't go to England' or 'I can't see you' any more," Allen says. "But when I'd say 'C'mon, now we have to lay in bed and eat Chinese food,' that stuff she found much tougher to do."

And what kind of toll will a New York lifestyle take on Mariel Hemingway? She grew up in Sun Valley, Idaho, the youngest of three sisters, all of them Ernest Hemingway's granddaughters.

Aside from two professional forays — one to Los Angeles to make "Lipstick," the second to Denver to make a TV movie about a 15-year-old mother — she has stayed relatively close to home. She is used to living a quiet, athletic life. "She's described it to me in very, very great detail," says Allen. "I know everything about it, because I was always saying to her, 'What do you guys do out there, after dinner?'" She explains, uncomfortably, that she interrupted her high school education to move here: "I left, but I'm still studying. I hate the thought that I just could've quit school." Now she takes piano and dance and voice lessons, hoping, in the last case, both to learn how to sing and to lower the high-pitched whisper that she's often teased about. She's also studying acting, albeit very informally, learning audition pieces taken from all kinds of material.

Well, would she? "I don't know if she could handle that kind of language," Allen says. "She may just be an American movie star." Nor does he know whether Miss Hemingway has the discipline to become a bona fide professional. "She hasn't had to work hard yet, she's gotten by completely on her naturalness," he says. "I mean, she's never had to play a part where she had to take the thing and go home and work out details and motivations and reasons. She just shows up, they turn on the camera and she scores."

Indian art show drums up interest

TWIN FALLS—The first annual Snake River Indian Arts and Crafts Show will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. in Twin Falls.

The combination arts show and arts sale will bring together Indian artists from Idaho's Bannock and Shoshoni tribes as well as Apache, Chippewa, Hopi and Navajo artists.

The art show is scheduled to be held at the National Guard Armory at the College of Southern Idaho, but the show's organizer, Russ Howell, says it may be moved outdoors to the Twin Falls City Park, depending on the weather, and the number of artists displaying their work.

Among those artists exhibiting work in the show will be three Twin Falls Indian artists.

Chatty Drown, a half-blood Apache Indian, will display her oil and pastel paintings.

Richard Joshua, a Hopi Indian, will show paintings and some wood carvings. Juanita Campbell, a Chippewa

Indian, will display her pen and ink drawings.

In addition to the arts and crafts show, Howell says he's hopeful an Indian dance group will perform tribal dances.

Howell noted the public response to this first Indian arts and crafts show has been very positive so far, but he admitted response from the artists has been very poor.

He says originally he hoped to have as many as 100 Indian artists from throughout the Northwest in the show. But this week he said only six artists had actually reserved space to display their work and several others had expressed interest in exhibiting.

A $6 admission fee will be charged all visitors to the show.

Trance music a trip to exotic sensibilities

By GEORGE KANZLER JR.

Newhouse News Service
NEW YORK—The wedding of Western electronic technology with Eastern musical sensibilities, plus an interest in non-Western indigenous musics, has resulted in some fertile new hybrids. Sometimes called Space Music or Trance Music, the resulting recordings have emerged from the rock (Brian Eno and David Bowie), modern classical (Steve Reich) and jazz wings of the contemporary music spectrum.

The music is often characterized by a soft center, layers of electronic sound, complicated yet hypnotic multi-rhythms, and solos that float in and out of the total fabric of sound like intricate silk threads of embroidery.

The intent of some of this seems at times to be to stupefy the listener or lull him into a trance, hence the term. In some cases, at its worst, it can resemble the musty blatz music heard in elevators. But at its best it is challenging and provocative stuff, full of rich textures and unexpected moments of clarity and gem-like sharpness.

Three new albums nominally out of the jazz genre provide some intriguing trips into this music:

- "Earthquake Island" — Jon Hassell (Tomato Records).
- "Three Day Moon" — Barre Phillips (ECM).
- "The Touchstone" — Azimuth (ECM).

Hassell and Azimuth both use the brooding qualities of the trumpet to help focus the music, although Jon Hassell's trumpet style is quirkily personal while Kenny Wheeler plays with almost a classical sonority and cleanliness. Barre Phillips provides focus through the long ethereal electric sounds he riffs his album with the bass, strongly mixed but played acoustically for most part.

Hassell and Phillips both make extensive use of various electronic synthesizers and arps, but Azimuth is an acoustic group, except when keyboardist John Taylor plays organ. And Azimuth doesn't use percussion, while the other two use a variety of rhythm instruments. This makes Azimuth's sound extrinsically very different from the other albums. They are included here because their musical motives and intentions, their establishments of moods, links them conceptually.

Jon Hassell's album is the most rewarding and diverse of the three. He has assembled a group of musicians from startlingly different backgrounds—Spanish guitarists, a European bassist, percussionists from South America (Afro-Latin and Andean) and a vocalist from jazz.

Hassell's trumpet is very warm, breathy and idiosyncratically personal in sound. He squeezes, coaxes and cajoles notes out of the horn in burrs and slithers, occasionally capping it with a crisp blurt.

The combination of the often-arresting trumpet solos and the finely-meshed tapestry of divergent musical traditions is hard to resist.

Barre Phillips creates musical textures that often make you feel as though you are traveling through ether or some other heavy, colorful gas. Cymbals crash with crystalline precision, dense synthesizer and electric guitar patterns multiply like funhouse mirror images, and the pieces sometimes feel so thick that they are in danger of clogging.

Azimuth is John Taylor, keyboards; Norma Winstone, voice, and Kenny Wheeler, trumpet and flugelhorn. Taylor wrote all the compositions—often sonata-like affairs with voice always singing wordless, soft-edged vowels and trumpet waiting for over-plano figures or organ pedal points.

Everything is done with clean sonorities, an almost Gregorian chant quality, and a clarity that remains, echoing after the last note is over.

Azimuth proves you don't need electronics to induce trance. Jon Hassell and Barre Phillips show how trance-like settings can enhance and provide new contexts for soloists of individual stature.

ANNA KASHFI
...boudoir bore

Q: I loved Susan St. James when she was playing Rock Hudson's wife on "McMillan and Wife" on TV. What's she up to these days?
—D.R., Dallas.

A: Right now, Susan is starring in a remake of the sinking of the Titanic — "SOS Titanic." She can currently be seen in "Love at First Sight." This summer she will marry Stephen Sills of the Crosby, Sills and Nash band. Sills will be her third husband.

Q: I thought Olivia Newton-John was going to marry her manager, Lee Kramer, last month. But I didn't see anything about the wedding. Was it that secret?
—M.T., Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

A: The Easter Sunday ceremony was canceled because Olivia was still suffering from the after-effects of hepatitis. They'll marry as soon as she is well enough.

CROSBY BANNED: Bing's widow Kathy Crosby was invited by a British producer to appear in a London production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." However, British Equity has turned thumbs down, insisting that an English actress be cast in the part. Kathy is bitterly disappointed and is hoping the producer will be able to change Equity's mind.

BY ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN
ANOTHER KISS AND TELLER: Marion Brand's ex-wife Anna Kashfi joins the ever-growing ranks of ladies tating on their husbands and lovers in print. Anna, in her book "Brand for Breakfast," which Crown will publish this fall, claims that Brand was a selfish, inconsiderate lover. She blames his poor showing in the bedroom on his parents. Kashfi says Brand is the product of a weak, passive father and a domineering aggressive mother. In addition to marriage contracts I'd say celebrities are going to have to demand that their ladies sign a no-book agreement, too — otherwise nothing will ever be sacred again.

Q: Do you know anything about what movie singer Art Garfunkel is doing in Europe? And how long has it been since he did a picture?
—D.O., Columbus, Ohio.

A: Garfunkel is doing a love story called "Illusions" directed by Nicholas Roeg. This will be Art's first movie since "Carnal Knowledge" eight years ago. He's been concentrating on his music and also his love life.

Q: Did the Michelle Triola trial really have much of an effect on Lee Marvin's career?
—A.R., Newark, N.J.

A: Not all that much, despite those reports that the much-publicity would give Lee's fortunes a boost. Fact is, they don't need much boosting. Lee has two films ready for fall release — "Avalanche Express" and "The Big Red One" — and has offers for four more movies. Add, to top it all off, he'll probably wind up co-starring with Steve McQueen in the very-expensive, two-part project, "Tall Man."

GEORGE HAMILTON
...alimony over

Q: Where are the great big dazzling movie premieres with all the bling lights that Hollywood used to give?
—F.F., Denver.

A: They're still around but it's a case of different styles. For example, next month Paramount will be kicking off its picture "Players" co-starring All MacGraw and Dean-Paul Martin with a lavish New York five-mile follow-up by a glittery Studio 54 party. On the other hand, Sidney Sheldon's "Bloodline" starring Audrey Hepburn, will slip quietly into a Manhattan booking without Audrey in attendance and no hoopla.

Q: Now that Rolling Stone guitarist Ron Wood has an album out of his own and is touring with his group, The New Barbarians, does that mean he has split with Mick Jagger?
—L.H., Lansing, Mich.

Q: Is it really true that George Hamilton was heartbroken when his ex-wife Alana married rock star Rod Stewart? Is he still desperately in love with her?

A: I doubt it. George was probably delighted since Alana's marriage spelled the end of his alimony and now all he has is child support payments. In fact, one friend said that the only reason he went to Rod and Alana's wedding was to make sure the pair actually went through with it.

Q: Has Twiggy given up her movie career since she had her baby?
—D.P., Atlanta.

A: No chance. Twiggy, 29, is making a movie in Miami titled "Here Goes the Bride," with her husband Michael Whiteley. It's a story about a hardworking advertising exec who dreams about a beautiful young girl. And guess who that is?

A: No. Wood will only be out on his own until Jagger decides to go on tour again and then he'll be back with the Stones. Not to say that the guitarist isn't delighted to have a chance to be in the spotlight on his own rather than backing up such superstars as Mick Jagger and Rod Stewart as he has in the past.

Q: What's this about the fine character actor Aldo Ray making an X-rated pornographic movie?
—Y.N., Boston.

A: Because he says he needed the cash. 53-year-old Aldo, recently completed a pornographic Western co-starring with an actress with the name of Carol Connors — best known for her appearance in "Deep Throat." Aldo says he is no pornologist for his X-rated stint in the movie, titled "Sweet Savage." But it certainly is a long way from his previous films, such as John Wayne's 1968 Vietnam epic, "The Green Berets."

Gossip

Q: Is it true actor James Caan's first movie out as a director is in serious trouble and that Pamela Coppola has been brought in to salvage the project?
—O.M., Chicago.

A: It seems that way. Caan showed a rough cut of "Hide in Plain Sight" — the MGM movie in which he starred as well as directed — to Coppola for some suggestions. We're told that Coppola liked what he saw but also suggested some changes. So Caan got permission from MGM to postpone the release date until the fall to allow Coppola to supervise further postproduction work. Caan is taking no chances as a first-time director, and besides — he's offered Coppola a screen credit. It's called getting a little help from friends.

Q: It was gratifying to read that Betsy Drake, one of my all-time favorite actresses, will come out of retirement and return to films in "Players." Exactly what has Betsy been up to lately, and while you're at it, what kind of role is she playing in her new movie?

—K.B., Fort Worth, Texas.

A: Betsy was signed for the part of Pamela, a sympathetic pal of All MacGraw (co-starring with Dean-Paul Martin) in "Players," a love story set against an international tennis background. Unfortunately, because of a last minute plot change Betsy's role wound up on the proverbial cutting room floor: Miss Drake, who was once Mrs. Cary Grant, quit acting in 1965 after Laurence the Cross-Eyed Lion, to embark on a new career as a psychiatric therapist and teacher.

Is decadence down and out?

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT
 G.N.Y. Times Service
DECADENCE: The Strange Life of an Epithet. By Richard Gilman. 179 pages. Farrar, Straus & Giroux, $9.95.

You might think defining the word "decadence" was worth all the fuss. After all, you can look it up in the dictionary and discover that it means the state of decaying and comes from the Latin decedere, "to fall away." But Richard Gilman — the critic, intellectual historian, and once and future professor of drama at Yale — makes a solid case for the word's allegoricalness in his challenging new book, "Decadence: The Strange Life of an Epithet."

Just free associate, as Gilman tried doing, and see "the elegant opium dens, with suave, slinking hostesses;... Mariene Dietrich in The Blue Angel with Emil Jannings crowing like a rooster;... Tangiers; Pompeii; a Black Mass;... Les Fleurs du Mal; a drag-queen costume ball;... Oscar Wilde and the green carnation;... a Roman orgy, with fan-waving Nubian slaves and crimson wine trickling out of the corners of heavy sensual mouths. . ."

Clearly, decadence means something more than the state of decaying.

Why is Gilman so put out by our having turned the word into a portmanteau stuffed with emptiness? Well, he doesn't much care for such labels in the first place — those terms "whose origins are obscure but which (have) been currency and status in the academy, where most such nomenclature — Expressionism, Post-Christian, and so on — generally flourishes." And does so, moreover, at the expense of individual works of art, which get made all unaware of the labels that will get stuck to them.

Furthermore, the sort of mind that makes up labels is also inclined to posit ideal norms for art, "in the light of which decadence (is seen) as a kind of denial or betrayal. And Gilman doesn't care for that kind of thinking at all. "Serious writers don't fall down or away from standards," for the standards themselves are constantly changing and new writing is precisely what changes them. Only a lofty, categorizing anthropomorphizing impulse, one whose effect, if not intention, is to turn art into the material for dissertations, would find decadence in what is really fluctuation, the long rhythms of human expression. In cultural matters at least, "decadence" explains nothing and reveals nothing but our apparently unappealing hunger for neat, fateful explanations of the essentially mysterious processes of creation."

But worst of all, when a label like decadence becomes corrupted and trivialized, our understanding of its serious usage — of, say, what the French meant by it during the latter half of the 19th century — becomes obscured. And here lies the crux and beauty of Gilman's meditation on the word. Because by delicately stripping away the misconceptions surrounding decadence, he uncovers the high moral purpose of the so-called decadent like Charles Baudelaire, whose real purpose it was "to deal with the problem of the soul in the face of its seeming to have been wiped out by Progress."

He reveals why the 'decadents' preoccupation with what Paul Valery "called the nauseating in human affairs — crime, perversion, the corrupt and tainted" was not an end in itself, but a way of affording "a sense of the self such as the merely polite and conventionally moral cannot afford. . . . One way of testifying the way darkness does to light, to the possibility, even immanence of" the opposite of nausea. He separates the "genius of Oscar Wilde from the swarm of clichés that still surround him. He even discloses that Germany in the 1920s, far from being the 'locus classicus of a culture decomposing through indulgence and excess'" that its commercial appropriation of the trappings of French "decadence" made it superficially seem, was actually "the richest source of new art and thought in the world."

Still, for all of Gilman's protests, words do have a habit of evolving and decaying. One need only browse in the Oxford English Dictionary for ample demonstration of that fact. Although it may well be a symptom of our cultural confusion at the present moment that the word decadence has been emptied of meaning, the fact remains that it is difficult to "conserve" the word without its pejorative implications. Perhaps, as Gilman argues, decay is not inevitable in a world or a culture or a civilization. But one comes away from his study feeling that of this word should be driven from our language. Who knows? Perhaps that's precisely what we're doing.

Mitford's scrawls mean death by pen

By ANATOLE BROYARD
 G.N.Y. Times Service
"POISON PENMANSHIP: The Gentle Art of Muckraking. By Jessica Mitford. 277 pages. Knopf, $10.

"Nobody ever went broke by underestimating the public's taste," said H.L. Menckler, to whom Jessica Mitford has been compared. Miss Mitford, however, occasionally goes for broke in her enthusiasm for exposing organizations that "take advantage" of individuals. At such times, it seems, she does overestimate the public's taste. It is possible that some of these victims ask for these organizations and invite their abuses.

Miss Mitford is to be congratulated for the light she throws in "Poison Penmanship." It's just that she tends to shine the light in one direction. Wouldn't there be, less moral shoddiness, for example, if the consumer were not eager to consume it?

In "Don't Call It Syphilis," she draws up a brilliant indictment of NBC-TV for being too timid, in 1964, to include fictional treatments of syphilis on the "Mr. Novak" and "Dr. Kildare" programs. But there is her piece projecting the image that worried NBC executives. One gets the feeling that, though they are not saying it, the station-directors know something about their viewers that Miss Mitford doesn't. And if they were to say, "The idiots will get angry if we give them a therapeutic shock," Miss Mitford would probably print that.

Although it was certainly not "ethical" for the late Bennett Cerf and other members of the guiding faculty of the Famous Writers School to try to take refuge in the fact that advertising was in a sense the art of misrepresentation, one also knows what Cerf meant when he said, in effect, "We didn't think" or "It's an old American custom" or "If you don't shout, nobody will hear you."

The consumer is always the innocent and the corporation the villain, but just try to imagine a corporation or a television station using selected consumers for making its work meaningless.

When Miss Mitford — is not exaggerating the virtues of her own product — the consumer — she is very good indeed. As a transplanted English woman, she has a stranger's flair for perspective by incongruity, for the odd rhythms and cadences of American life. She has an appealing way of turning small outcroppings into broadsides on the progress of our souls. She can reproduce regional speech to perfection.

She mocks an elderly woman for prating the grounds, the flowers, the rooms and the food in a mental institution where someone's aunt is an inmate — yet she would be the first to attack that institution if they assumed that mentally disturbed elderly women did not need these amenities.

The Only Child: Smarter, Well Adjusted...And Not So Lonely

This week we examine the many myths and attitudes that surround the only child. Are they more nervous, less intelligent, socially immature? Recent psychological research shows these characteristics should not be attached to onlies. In fact, evidence is growing that it's acceptable, realistic and perhaps even preferable to have only one child. Read all about the stigmas that surround the only child in this week's FAMILY WEEKLY.

TV Schedules June 1 through June 6

PBS a refreshing tonic

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR
N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — The major offering on commercial television will be broadcast live from Broadway's Shubert Theater this Sunday at 9:30 p.m. "The 33d Annual Tony Awards" are being carried on CBS. The hosts are Jane Alexander, Henry Fonda and Liv Ullmann. On the agenda is a musical salute to Richard Rodgers, who will be given a special lifetime-achievement award. Also on the networks this Sunday, on NBC at 10 p.m., is a news documentary. This one, with Tom Snyder as host, is called "The Incredible Shrinking Gasoline Pump."

Elsewhere, as reruns begin once again, it clutter the schedule, public-television can grab some attention, if only by default. Four "Nancy Drew" films, made in 1938 and 1939, are being rerun over the next week. A local station official insists that the movies, with Sheila Granville in the title role, have gained a cult following.

Perhaps they call themselves the Imperial Lodge of Nincompoops.

"Nancy Drew" — "Detective," which can be seen Saturday night at 11:15, makes the old Henry Aldrich flicks look cinematically profound. When a would-be donor to Nancy's school — the Briaewood School for Young Ladies — disappears, the party student suspects the old woman is a victim of foul play. Despite the protestations of her worried father (John Littel), Nancy enlists the aid of her clumsy boyfriend, Ted (Frankie Thomas), for an adventure that involves a car with a rumble seat, a homing pigeon, a small airplane and some radio equipment.

There are several elements of vintage camp. As a proper young lady, Nancy is rarely seen without hat, gloves and purse. And she often babbles on about her woman's intuition. Otherwise, she is just somewhat stupidly spirited: "I'll find Miss Eldridge if it takes me a hundred million years!" or "I'll bet you $23.80 that that woman was Miss Eldridge!"

An age of charming innocence, perhaps. Today the find description would be "gross." In Nancy's time, the word was "gruesome."

Sunday at 8 p.m., the local station is showing "A Place to Be," an hour-long documentary about the construction of the much-acclaimed East Building of the National Gallery of Art in Washington. The building was opened last year. I.M. Pei, the architect, began planning its design in 1968. The cost of about $65 million was borne by the Mellon Family and Foundation.

The program follows the project from initial plans on paper to the completed structure, teeming with curious visitors. The story is told on two levels. There are the artisans and construction workers involved with the actual physical construction. And there are several major artists — Henry Moore, Jean Dubuffet, Robert Motherwell, Anthony Caro and the late Alexander Calder — planning and discussing specially commissioned works.

The key link, shifting constantly between the two sides, is Pei, an elegant combination of enthusiasm and "bravery." In some, this program is one long commercial for the building. At one point, when some workers, mostly black, are herded into the National Gallery, the narrator, David Wayne, notes that they "are not the usual gal-goers — they had come here on serious business." The implied attitude toward art is curious, but the building itself does indeed deserve attention and even celebration.

Immediately following this documentary, at 9 o'clock, Masterpiece Theater's "Lillie" comes to the end of a 13-week run. In dramatic terms, it is not an easy chore. Lillie Langtry's final years were hardly as colorful or scandalous as her decades of being the wife of some and mistress of many, including Edward VII.

But, by skipping nimbly through the years following the death of Edward in 1910 — John Garris's script manages to keep Lillie fairly active. While her husband goes off philandering with pretty young things, she manages to have her own entourage, with special attention given to Louis D'Albani (Paul Herzberg).
