

ICC to offer 'strong' help for truckers

By United Press International
The Interstate Commerce Commission, which regulates the trucking industry, scheduled a news conference today in Washington to announce "strong" action to help independent truckers.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger criticized the ICC Thursday, saying the truckers' demands are "quite reasonable" and the ICC should allow them to raise their rates to pay for higher fuel costs.

Gasoline tank trucks escorted by state troopers and National Guardsmen defied protesting independent truckers in Alabama Thursday and began making delivery runs to dry service stations.

Sniper fire riddled some unescorted rigs. Blockades at fuel depots left parts of the South without gasoline.

Independents — seeking to choke commerce and force concessions to demands for more fuel, lower fuel prices and higher freight rates, speed and load limits — extended the shutdown to 37 states as the wildcat strike began its second week.

Some gasoline shortages were reported. Grocers and produce dealers said food shortages predicted by strike organizers could soon materialize if the strike continues.

In Alabama, more gunfire at unescorted truckers was reported by state troopers but no one was injured.

Truckers talk to Gov. Evans about problems

BOISE (UPI) — Nearly 20 truckers roared up Capitol Boulevard Thursday with horns blaring to protest high fuel prices and the 55 mph speed limit to Gov. John V. Evans.

The trucks parked three abreast in front of the Capitol and were emblazoned with signs saying "We need fuel for this mule," "Support your local trucker," and "I'll trade this rig for a peanut farm."

But the truckers' protest struck up a more serious note when they entered the governor's office.

"I just can't understand it," Bob Sterling of Boise said. "Fuel costs increase but freight rates stay about the same. If we get an increase in fuel rates, we'll just pass that on down to you, me and him."

And that will just cause another insane spiral of inflation.

Gov. John V. Evans agreed with the truckers' complaints but said as governor of Idaho, he could do little about fuel prices and the speed limit.

"One of the problems is that nobody will recognize that there is a worldwide fuel shortage," Evans said. "We are not increasing production because there is a monopoly. It's not a monopoly over here, but in the oil-producing nations of the world."

Lester L. Horn, an independent trucker from Notus, said government regulation of the industry also is causing serious financial problems for the truckers.

"Get them off our backs," Horn said. "With all this regulation, the truckers couldn't make it if they had all the gas they needed."

The convoyed gasoline was not enough to keep some stations open. Lines were common all day at service stations in the Florence-Muscle Shoals area of northwest Alabama, and by late in the day, many stations in the area ran out of fuel.

The strike effects spread to New England. From Bangor to Boston, Providence to Portsmouth, New England's independent truckers Thursday rolled toward a midnight deadline for a regional blockade of diesel pumps.

George Oberg, president of the New England chapter of the Independent Truckers Association said there were hundreds of truckers up and down the East Coast ready to join in the blockades.

The strategy was to close down service station pumps which usually cater to truckers so there will not be enough fuel to make deliveries of food and other goods.

"We plan blocking all truck stops and fuel stops in New England eventually," Oberg said. "What will happen after midnight I really can't tell you."

Blockades at Tennessee fuel distribution centers were lifted Thursday and gasoline deliveries resumed, easing long lines that formed as fuel supplies ran dry in the central and southern portions of the state.

Scattered incidents of gunfire and sabotage were reported. Bullets hit two trucks in Iowa Wednesday night but no one was injured.

A truck traveling in Interstate 90 south of Wadena, Minn., drove super early Thursday. Police said a bullet slammed through the windshield of the rig but the driver escaped injury.

The truckers' protest slowed delivery of grain to major terminals in Minnesota. Only 40 trucks unloaded grain Wednesday at a Duluth, Minn., terminal where 800 to 1,000 truckloads of grain normally are delivered each day.

Nails were spread on roadways in Alabama and Utah. Police in Eagle Creek, Iowa, were investigating an incident of vandalism at Elkhorn Freight Lines. Authorities said 40 truck tires were punctured during the night at the trucking firm.

Gas crisis may ease later in summer

Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger predicted Thursday that rising crude oil imports would ease the gasoline shortage later this summer.

Oil imports climbed to 6.6 million barrels daily last week from 5.8 million the week before, an unexpected increase. Gasoline shortages could be eliminated if this trend continues throughout the summer, Schlesinger said.

Oil companies have indicated to the government that they expect substantially higher imports this month and in July.

At the same time Schlesinger criticized the oil industry for cutting back its refinery operations despite the increased availability of crude oil. The Energy Department is expected to summon oil industry executives to Washington to explain why their refineries operated at 84.3 percent of capacity last week, down from 85.9 percent a week earlier.

"There is no evidence of collusion on the part of the industry," Schlesinger said in response to a question

Mission of peace beginning

VIENNA (UPI) — President Carter arrived "on a mission of peace" Thursday and said all nations have an "urgent stake" in the GLT II summit he will hold with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Carter told dignitaries at an arrival ceremony at Schwechat Airport that "no human being can rest secure in a world of — unrestrained — nuclear weapons."

"I have come to meet with President Brezhnev on a mission of peace — to strengthen and enlarge cooperation and understanding between the United States and the Soviet Union — to reduce the dangers of nuclear war — to move towards a more stable and secure world," Carter said.

But Carter also warned against expecting too much, saying, "We have no illusions that this agreement will rid the world of danger or end all differences between our two nations."

Brezhnev, a veteran of five previous U.S.-Soviet summits, arrives today and the actual signing ceremony doesn't take place until Monday. But the two leaders will meet for the first time at a social meeting Friday and have scheduled at least four private talks over the weekend.

The final wording of the treaty was agreed on only hours before Carter arrived in Vienna. The English and Russian translations of the treaty were to be flown to the Austrian capital today.

Although the details of the treaty have been known for some time, the final wording will not be made public until Monday's signing. It still must be ratified by the U.S. Senate and the Supreme Court.

Security was tight at the airport when Carter arrived after a eight-hour trip from Washington. Members of Austria's COBRA "command" formed after the 1975 Palestinian terrorist attack on OPEC head quarters in Vienna, stood guard behind huge searchlights on rooftops as Carter addressed the crowd.

Carter said, "This summit involves the United States and the Soviet Union, but all people have an urgent stake in these talks. No human being can rest secure in a world of unrestrained nuclear weapons."

"But we are confident that SALT II will widen the areas of cooperation, and reduce the dangers of nuclear holocaust," he added.

Europe and the peoples of many other nations have known the bitter price of war twice in this century."

Noticeable shortage of rain this spring

Those April showers haven't fallen yet

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

KIMBERLY — April didn't live up to its reputation for showers. May was disappointing and June has produced barely enough rainfall to measure.

Crops in Magic Valley are doing well this year but there has been a noticeable shortage of precipitation since the first of April, as shown on the U.S. Weather Service records.

William Galkin, in charge of the weather service in Kimberly, said normally June has about 36 inch of precipitation. As of the half-way mark for the month, only a trace fell on June 8 and 10 to 30 of an inch in various spots in Magic Valley during a thundershower late Wednesday.

May was also a dry month. Galkin said normally in this part of the state the "April showers" fall in May and June.

Normal precipitation for May at the Kimberly station is 1.06 inches and this year the month produced only .73 of an inch of moisture. April's normal is .84 of an inch, but only .32 fell this year.

Very few storms occurred in May and prior to Wednesday evening the last measurable precipitation was 26 of an inch on May 24.

Galkin said as long as the sunny weather and winds continue Magic Valley areas can look for some dry conditions. Evaporation the past few weeks has been about 4 of an inch a day which is very high for so early in the summer, he said.

Temperatures have been about normal for this time of year.

"We have had two light frosts in June and some days in which our high temperatures were only in the low 60s.

On the other hand we have had some 90-degree weather, too," Galkin said.

He said the highest reading in June was a 91. Both June 11 and 12 hit that mark at the Kimberly weather station, although unofficial reports in the city of Twin Falls were as high as 96.

On the Camas Prairie, he said, the coldest reading this month was a 25 which occurred June 8 and damaged some of the first crop of hay. Some potatoes and beans had a few curled leaves after the frost June 7 and 8, in the Kimberly, Hansen and Castleford areas, Galkin said.

Andy Payne, assistant fire management officer for the Bureau of Land Management in Shoshone, said Thursday the hot windy weather has brought the burning index on Idaho range land to a high level. He said in the Shoshone district the burning index was a very high and could go to extreme before the July 4th weekend if winds and warm temperatures continue.

The district has had 14 fires reported thus far this summer, which burned 649 acres of range land.

Payne said the district has about 60 firefighters employed for the summer and anticipates a busy fire season.

He said vegetation is unusually heavy this year although not especially tall and that he believes the dryness and potential for range fires is above normal.

the decline was attributed to a combination of planned maintenance work and unexpected repairs.

Oil imports in recent weeks have averaged about 6 million barrels a day, a level that would enable the industry to deliver a volume of gasoline equal to 95 percent or 96 percent of last year's supplies, Schlesinger said.

If imports continue to match last week's level of 6.6 million barrels daily, the production of gasoline and other products should increase significantly, perhaps reaching 100 percent of last year's output, Department of Energy officials said.

Currently, oil companies are producing 91 percent of the gasoline they delivered last year across the nation. Actual deliveries to service stations are a lower percentage, because top priority users such as police, fire departments and ambulance services get as much gasoline as they want.

Continuation of the current high volume of imports is "a big if," Schlesinger cautioned. Deliveries from Iran are uncertain, Saudi Arabia's policies can change at any time, and Nigeria is concerned about U.S. policy towards Rhodesia Zim-babwe, he said.

The United States consumes 18.4 million barrels of oil daily, with imports providing 46 percent of the supply.

Sandinista guerrillas still trying to take capital

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Sandinista guerrillas attacked Managua's southern sector Thursday in a bid to isolate the capital, encircle President Anastasio Somoza's offices and cut off the road to his private airfield.

The attack was apparently benten back, and the rebels suffered heavy casualties.

Just before the attack, aimed near the road leading to Somoza's private airport, another convoy of 60 fleeing American fled the area. They made it to Somoza's airport at Montelmar on the Pacific coast and boarded a U.S. Air Force Hercules C-130 transport for the Panama Canal Zone, where more than 300 American refugees have been taken in the past three days.

Witnesses said the attack on Managua's southern sector began when the guerrillas moved in from a highway leading to the Costa Rican border, where the Sandinistas have sanctuaries.

After firing on national guard checkpoints and setting up barricades in suburban residential sections, the guerrillas ambushed two truckloads of soldiers on the highway to Somoza's airport, witnesses said.

A national guard officer at the scene said the guerrillas were repelled, suffering 25 dead. He said national guard troops suffered only three wounded.

Sniper fire also erupted on the road to the U.S. Embassy compound, now patrolled by U.S. Marines armed with M-16 rifles.

The Sandinistas apparently plan to isolate the capital, tying up Somoza's troops before launching a final attack on his presidential compound, known as "The Bunker."

Homes burn

HESPERIA, Calif. (UPI) — A wind-whipped brush fire burned through the desert resort of Hesperia Thursday afternoon, destroying at least 20 homes on the northern edge of town. The blaze, which broke out in three locations, also burned an estimated 1,500 acres of brushland in the desert 75 miles northeast of Los Angeles. One person identified only as a female resident in her early 30s, suffered minor burns, but no other injuries were reported. Fire officials said the homes destroyed by the flames were valued at approximately $40,000 each. Authorities had evacuated the residents before the fast moving fire, which broke out two miles south of town, reached them.

Windfall delay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee Thursday put off final action until next week on the proposed windfall oil profits tax after adding $3 billion more in taxes than President Carter proposed. The committee, which late Wednesday set a 70 percent tax rate on windfall profits rather than the 50 percent Carter proposed, postponed a final committee vote until Tuesday after defeating several alternate proposals.

Skylab maneuver

NEW YORK — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is planning a maneuver next week to change Skylab's orbit in an effort to maintain some control over the doomed space station in its last days and perhaps keep its falling debris away from the most populous areas of the world. The command for the maneuver is expected to be radioed to Skylab next Tuesday morning from Mission Control at the Johnson Space Center at Houston. It may take hours or days of tracking to determine if the maneuver has succeeded.

Storm goes north

MIAMI (UPI) — A tropical depression that brought death and destruction to Jamaica with torrential rains moved into the open ocean late Thursday and sent a surge of high tides against the U.S. South Atlantic coast. "Three- to four-foot normal and rough seas are expected to cause some beach erosion from Cape Canaveral, Fla., northward to the Carolinas tonight," the National Hurricane Center reported.

Baptist allegations

HOUSTON (UPI) — Allegations of voting irregularities were made Thursday at the 122nd annual meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention and the group's registration secretary promised an intensive investigation. Delegates adopted a resolution urging an investigation of registration and voting procedures after several members told of widespread abuse in the voting that began Tuesday with the first-ballot election of Adrian Rogers of Memphis, Tenn., as convention president.

Kennedy replies

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy responded tongue-in-cheek Thursday night to President Carter's "whip his ass" comment. "I've always felt that the White House would stand behind me and I didn't realize how close they intended to be," the Massachusetts Democrat told a gathering of 1,000 Iowa lawyers.

Torpedo freed

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — One of the world's most potent torpedoes was removed Thursday from the nuclear submarine Memphis, 47 hours after it became jammed inside the vessel, the Navy said. A spokesman said there was never a threat of the Mark 48 torpedo exploding because it was without a detonating device, but there was the "inherent danger" of working with any weapon or heavy object.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. Thursday obtained a temporary restraining order telling 500 striking California aqueduct employees to return to work along the 400-mile-long, man-made river. Gray Davis, Brown's top aide, told reporters the governor would seek to have the order expanded to include others who had joined the trade union strike Thursday morning. The injunction was issued by Sacramento Superior Court Judge Frances Newell.

Franklin was shot twice at his home early Sunday and still is in a comatose condition at Henry Ford Hospital with bullet wounds of the groin and knee.

Refugee figures

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department said Thursday at least 65,300 people — and possible twice as many — fled Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia in the three weeks since the end of the Exodus began in early 1975, shortly after the fall of Saigon. "We do not know how many refugees tried to leave Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, since many perish in the process — some observers estimate as many as 50 percent," the department's Refugee Affairs Office said. If the 65,300 figure is correct, it would be the highest monthly figure for people fleeing communist regimes in the three Indochina nations since the Exodus began in early 1975, shortly after the fall of Saigon.

Fire at Macy's

NEW YORK (UPI) — A four-alarm fire raged through the fifth floor of Macy's Department Store Thursday, killing one fireman, injuring 14 other people and forcing thousands of shoppers and employees to flee. Ten firefighters suffered smoke inhalation and second-degree burns, and two of them might have suffered heart attacks, officials said.

Billy Carter denied access to bank's records on loans

ATLANTA (UPI) — Paul L. Carter, the special counsel investigating loans to President Carter's family peanut business, has withheld from Billy Carter the bank's computerized record of how the loans were handled, the president's brother said Thursday. In an interview after two days of testimony before a federal grand jury here, Billy Carter said that his lawyer, Pierre Howard of Decatur, Ga., had sought the detailed record of the nearly $7 million in loans to help Carter in answering grand jury questions. Howard said in an interview that Carter had refused to permit the president's brother to view the records on the ground that they were bank documents and unavailable to grand jury witnesses. Other government sources, however, described the computer printout as a crucial piece of evidence in the government's inquiry. The printout, which is the bank's official record of the day-to-day handling of the loan, does not file with personal records kept by Robert D. Flynn, the National Bank of Georgia loan officer who handled the Carter account, these sources said. They also do not match Billy Carter's records on the loan transactions, the sources added.

Tomorrow Soviet plan

Among the stories in tomorrow's Times-News: • While the Carter administration is thinking only of the signing of SALT II at the summit this weekend, Leonid Brezhnev is already figuring out the following to his strategic triumph, according to New York Times columnist William Safire. That is, a different treaty called MFBR to assure the Soviet domination of Europe. • With more conventional arms and armlets. • Read it Saturday in the Times-News.

Talmadge case continues

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Herman Talmadge's lawyers asked the Senate Ethics Committee Thursday to dismiss the charges of financial misconduct against him, claiming the case rests on the word of an accuser who "no one can believe" and an embittered ex-wife with mental problems. But the committee's special counsel Carl Earley, in a reply that he believes Talmadge may be lying when he claims he didn't know he was receiving thousands of dollars in false Senate expense claims and denies knowledge of a secret money-laundering scheme. At the least, Earley said, the evidence developed so far indicates the powerful Georgia Democrat is guilty of "an obvious indifference to the Senate rules," gross negligence and a "callous" disregard for his responsibilities to the Senate and the taxpayers. The committee will meet Tuesday to hear oral arguments from Earley and Talmadge's lawyer, James Hamilton, on whether the five financial misconduct charges lodged against the senator should be dropped.

Dwindling farmland to be topic

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department and the Council on Environmental Quality said Thursday they would work together on an 18-month study of preventing an estimated four square miles of prime farmland from being lost to non-agricultural uses. If the United States is to continue to supply food to a world that will grow by another 2.2 billion people by the year 2000, environmental council Chairman Charles Warren said steps must be taken to stem the loss of farmland.

He said one million acres of prime farmland each year, or four square miles a day, and another two million acres of less than prime land are lost to shopping centers, highways, airports, urban and suburban development, regional sewer systems, artificial lakes and recreation. At a news conference, Warren said the joint study would explore the "extent and causes of agricultural land conversion" and try to find ways to increase the effectiveness of state and local efforts to preserve farmland. A recent study prepared for the council showed 48 states have adopted preservation programs, mostly preferential property tax assessments for farmland, with limited effectiveness.

"We are not taking the view and the position that we are against growth and development," Bergland said, but the nation needs to promote orderly growth. "Warren said the study will look at federal and state tax laws that encourage sale of land. Federal policies that speed loss of farmland should be reviewed, he said. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said, "If our best farmlands are used for other purposes, we may face decreasing production, increased energy needs and high prices for commodities."

Concorde bursts two tires

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two tires on an Air France Concorde airliner burst on takeoff Thursday, apparently rupturing a fuel tank and forcing the supersonic jet to make an emergency landing while "dripping fuel" at Dulles International Airport. No injuries were reported on Air France Flight 54 that started from Dulles for Paris at 3:23 p.m. EDT with 81 passengers and a crew of nine, and returned for a safe landing about 4 p.m. Fuel from the plane drenched a portion of the airport—in northern Virginia, forcing closure of both runways pending clean-up operations, spokesmen said. Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrar said the jet "blew two tires and also apparently" and 1 underscore apparently — a piece of one tire pierced a fuel tank on takeoff."

The Concorde has a total of 10 tires, two on the nose that take virtually no load and four on each landing gear located under the wings. "An Air France spokesman in New York City, Daniel Dorian, said "It's possible, it's too early to know" when asked if a fuel tank had been ruptured on takeoff. He confirmed the plane had leaked fuel and said technicians were inspecting and working on the plane.

Both sides modest about SALT II

© N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — It has taken over two years to arrange this week's summit meeting between Presidents Carter and Brezhnev at Vienna, but maybe the time wasn't wasted. For both sides now have a more modest appraisal of their modest achievements, and a more realistic appreciation of their common interests and fundamental differences. Two years ago, Carter and Brezhnev disagreed about the timing and purpose of getting together. At the beginning of the Carter administration, Brezhnev was in a hurry to bring the U.S.-Soviet problems to the Summit, but after some hesitation — and even disagreement within the new Washington government — Carter decided to wait. So two different concepts of the summit meeting existed. The first was that the leaders of the two super-powers should give first priority to U.S.-Soviet relations, meet quickly on a second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty and preside together in Geneva at a Middle East peace conference — all this before Carter had sorted out his relations with the European allies, the Middle East, China and Japan. This was the plan favored by Moscow. The second concept, of a Carter-Brezhnev meeting was that this negotiating process should be reversed: that first priority for Washington should be, not its Soviet agenda, but a global agenda. "Summitry" should begin with the NATO allies, deal with the Middle East conflict directly rather than with the Soviet Union at Geneva, and meanwhile, grapple with the Japanese economic problems and establish normal diplomatic relations with China. This was the process finally adopted by Washington.

So Carter and Brezhnev will be dealing in Vienna with a subtly different world, not only with the balance of nuclear missiles and advanced computer technology and trade, but with the clash of ideas and even of religion in the Middle East and in East Asia. In a mocking question about the pope near the end of the last World War, Josef Stalin asked: "How many divisions does he have?" Now, after Pope John Paul's rapturous reception in Poland, Brezhnev knows the answer. "Quite a few!"

In fact, the pontiff's meeting with his own people and his influence on the rest of Catholic Eastern Europe may prove to be the most important summit meeting of the decade, for it is not the penetration of Western military power Moscow has to fear, but the penetration of freedom and faith.

There is little, if anything, left to be negotiated by Carter and Brezhnev at Vienna on the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty. In fact, the Vienna communique has already been drafted, with relatively few grandiloquent claims or excessive hopes. But there are some practical political questions and some imponderables to be discussed.

Carter would like to persuade the Soviet leader and, any other potential Soviet leaders who may be in Geneva that the last two decades of the 20th century are likely to be dominated by turbulence and maybe even chaos that neither Moscow nor Washington can control or manipulate successfully to the detriment of the other. He will argue for a more sober and realistic relationship between Washington and Moscow, with full recognition of their conflicting interests and ideologies, but also in the knowledge that this is a long-range business in which exaggerated expectations and dangerous confrontations should be avoided.

Specifically, this means moving carefully through the ratification of SALT II into the more delicate and dangerous phase of a SALT III treaty; recognizing that normalization of trade on a most-favored-nation basis cannot be separated from Soviet military and emigration policies, even if Carter wished to do so, which he doesn't; and finally, to meet the special obligations of the two major nuclear powers — often proclaimed and usually ignored — to build a more stable world order.

It may be a mark of the changes of the last two years, however, that the Vienna summit seems somehow to have receded in importance, almost to be an interlude between the religious summit in Krakow and the economic summit meeting of the major free industrial nations in Tokyo later this month.

Part of this letdown is undoubtedly due to Brezhnev's declining health and Carter's declining position in the U.S. popularity polls, which make long-range planning rather awkward. Part is perhaps due as well to the feeling here that Carter has had to approve a new $30 billion MX missile program in order to get a little more support in the Senate for his arms control treaty. The paradox has not been lost on the Soviets, who will now try to match the new MX weapon, or on the Senate liberals, who think the $30 billion could be better spent on a synthetic oil program, or on Carter's new national health program.

Vienna will, however, give Carter the one thing he seems to need in order to deal confidently with other nations — a sense of the character of their leaders, and at Vienna, he will meet not only Brezhnev, but Aleksis N. Kosygin, who took a surprisingly active and outspoken role during the recent visit to Moscow of the French President, Valeriy Giscard d'Estaing, and his intelligent new Foreign Minister Francois Ponsat.

Whether Carter will meet in Vienna the other leaders of this Soviet geriatric hierarchy who can plan seriously about the last decades of the century is another thing. He does not know who will accompany Brezhnev to Vienna. Andrei Kirilenko, 72, a Brezhnev favorite; Konstantin U. Chernenko, 67, another Brezhnev crony; Mikhail Suslov, the party's ideologist, who is 76?

Carter and Pope John Paul II seem young and innovative compared to these Soviet leaders who somehow have mastered the arts of passing power from one generation to another or of growing enough grain to feed their people.

After two years of waiting, Carter and Brezhnev are still meeting in Vienna to compare how much military power the other has, but on the side — they will probably be thinking about Josef Stalin's question: How many divisions does the pope have? And the answer is: More than Stalin or any of his successors imagined and more than they had to think about when the Carter-Brezhnev summit was originally planned.

Increased sales tax last resort

Support for Idaho education is strong, and Idaho cities and counties are envious.

Of every dollar appropriated from the state's general fund this year, 70 cents went to education. Of all property taxes, 47 percent was charged on behalf of public education last year, although that provided only 35 percent of the funding.

These figures, compiled by the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, graphically show the support Idahoans have given.

And the state Legislature gives no signs of lessening that support.

State Rep. Tom Stivers of Twin Falls told the local school board this week the Legislature is committed to adequately funding public education.

"I think when the Legislature does convene next year there will be added emphasis on education," he said in response to anxiety expressed over the 1 percent initiative which takes effect in 1980.

That "added support" could leave cities and counties on their own with reduced revenues next year, if nothing is done to provide an escape valve.

Five years in a row, the cities have asked the legislators for local option taxing powers and have been turned down.

The local option movement now appears to be floundering, and many are considering a state revenue sharing program based on a penny increase in the sales tax. The new idea has advantages. It could be administered "easily and all would benefit. Small towns could not raise much money even with a local option tax.

Increasing the sales tax, however, has little or no support among Idahoans, who voted to cut taxes via the 1 percent initiative only last year.

Idaho's cities and counties must abandon this idea for now, and pursue at least an increase in local taxing ability, such as through a simple majority override levy.

Some essential city and county services — fire and police, water and sewer — may be appropriate for statewide support, and the cities could push for state funding in these areas. But most services and programs, like streets and buildings, directly benefit local communities while other parts of the state could end up paying for them.

It is far easier to consider education a statewide concern.

Gov. John Evans has expressed the deficiencies of a revenue sharing program by saying local government would have to convince citizens first.

"It would be entirely feasible to present that (to the Legislature) with grassroots support," he has said.

It is doubtful that support will come until they see proof that essential local services will be damaged otherwise.

Lowry: proud liberal

WASHINGTON — There is an assumption that the congressman can't be boring. That is the relative absence of characters in the place and the dearth of character among members.

One longtime observer recently pointed out that Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., — not a man noted for colorful remarks — could be considered a character these days, because the Senate is now such a dull place, full of men with the anonymous looks of the television anchorman. Jackson, who alternately affects the stern morality of a Scandinavian preacher or the raw aggression of a criminal prosecutor, is authentic.

In the House, one of Washington state's six congressmen, freshman Democrat Mike Lowry, is a bit of a surprise because he seems to be at odds with the conventional wisdom of the place.

Lowry is an unrecruited Kennedy Democrat at a time when it's not very fashionable," says one Washington state politician.

Shortly after the 96th Congress began, Lowry's staff held a surprise birthday party for his boss, and it attracted members of the Washington state delegation. During the merriment, which was aided by champagne, Lowry stood up and announced that he was proud to be a liberal.

Lowry has distinguished himself recently with his votes on a number of budget amendments, voting in favor of increased spending on social programs. His votes caused The Seattle Times to scorn Lowry's votes in an editorial titled, "Out of Step." The Times said Lowry wasn't marching with Washington state's other congressmen.

Though he takes care to express admiration for his Washington state colleagues, Lowry is described with some skepticism their tradition of togetherness or unanimity.

"Safely says, stick together," comments Lowry. "If all the members of the delegation take the same position on Indian fishing, on the Northwest power bill, and on down the line, you avoid the political heat as an individual."

"In Congress, it's the same way," Lowry continues. "As long as you don't get too far out on something, you're always going to get re-elected, on name familiarity if nothing else. The public's reluctant to vote for change, means that if you're not different, you're going to get re-elected. So all you do back here is make sure you stay in the mainstream."

Lowry defeated Rep. Jack Cunningham, R-Wash., by a surprising margin of 10 percent last November after having been a member of the King County Council for three years. The Seventh Congressional District, which Lowry represents, includes southern Seattle and the suburbs of Renton, Mercer Island and Kent.

During Cunningham's brief congressional career (he served the remainder of Brock Adams' term in 1974-75, and then served in Transportation), his most prominent action was to propose legislation to abrogate all U.S. treaties with Indian tribes.

"One of the motivating things that decided me to run against Jack Cunningham was to prove that I could beat him," Cunningham said. "I was the positions he had taken," says Lowry.

If Lowry and Cunningham are opposites in their politics, their personal appearances also prompt quite different responses. Cunningham was a made-for-television candidate, tall and thin with sharp facial features; Lowry is decidedly not pretty, once again at odds with the style of the times.

Where the Northwest energy bill is concerned, there has not been unanimity among the Washington delegation. Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., has expressed his reservations about the bill from the start. But Lowry, is even more outspoken than Bonker.

"I'm skeptical about the motivation of the utility industry for the Northwest power bill," says Lowry. "How you combine the discussion to Washington state, I think the motivation behind the bill is to get preferred financing for plants, both private and public. WPPSS (Washington Public Power Supply System) has got two projects that are greatly increasing in cost, and they wanted to be included in this power bill to get the preferential financing to pay for it."

"I have a very difficult political, philosophical problem with the private utilities receiving a lower rate on their bonds because of the purchase guarantee of the rate payer regionwide," says Lowry. "To me, regardless of how they play with words, that's a public guarantee to the privatizer."

"But it goes a lot further than that," Lowry adds. "The problem is the stockholders of these private utilities are still getting dividends and making a profit. So you have a private business that has a right to make profits and they're going to be in business because of public backing. I think that's wrong."

"The motivation here is more than just the protection of the energy for the residents of the state of Washington. The big boys are working this too much for that to be the only motivation."

"If we're going to have purchase guarantee, we have got to guarantee that they are not going to make the choice for building the plants before they do conservation. Because it makes building the plants too easy."

It remains to be seen whether Lowry will emerge as an effective congressman. But he shows no sign of trimming his sails.

View of Alaskan grandeur from steamship

© Universal Press Syndicate

SKAGWAY, ALASKA — Visiting Alaska for the first time is like visiting the great Southwest for the first time. The experience overwhelms. A visitor returns to the lower 48 pretty well-numbed by two impressions — of nature's fecundity, and of man's will to survive.

I pass along those impressions diffidently, out of respect for old-timers who truly know this incredible state. To spend a few hours in Ketchikan, Juneau and Skagway, and then to write grandly of "Alaska," is to spend a few hours in Key West, Miami and Daytona Beach, and then to discourse learnedly upon the whole United States.

Alaska lives by superlatives: "the smallest population, the largest area, the highest mountain, the fewest people per square mile. This state is 80 miles wide and nearly 1,500 miles long. It is almost as large as four Californias. Many states share the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers; Alaska alone embraces the mighty Yukon. The state flag carries the seven stars of the Big Dipper; Alaska seems almost as far away."

Mine is a steamship view of this vastness. The "Princess Patricia," pride of the Canadian Pacific, is not the most sophisticated cruise ship that ever set sail. She weighs in at barely 6,000 tons, carries only 300 passengers and boasts neither swimming pool nor gambling casino. She began life in 1948 as a ferry plying between Vancouver and Victoria; in 1983 she was born again as a cruise ship. Now she makes 18 sailings each summer — way of the inland passage from Vancouver to Skagway and return.

This may be the "Pat's" last summer under U.S. environmental regulations, the owners must install holding tanks for sanitary sewage by Jan. 1 or go out of business. The requirement seems ridiculous. The infinitesimal trickle of sewage, discharged over 2,000 miles of fast-moving waters, could not conceivably wreak significant damage upon marine life, but unless a requested exemption is granted, the owners' will face a $750,000 capital investment in a ship already more than 30 years old. To take the old girl out of service would constitute a disaster for the Alaskan and Canadian ports of call that rely heavily upon tourists for economic survival.

I mentioned an impression of overwhelming fecundity. When God created the forests of Alaska, God lost sight of the off switch. Mile after mile, as far as the eye can see, the forests roll over the mountains — pine, spruce, hemlock, fir — millions upon millions of trees, packed as closely together as the bristles on a bear's back. An official estimate places Alaska's forest reserves at 120 million acres, an unimaginable area. One is reminded of sea shells or desert sands. Nature does nothing by halves.

North of Skagway, a narrow-gauge railway creeps to Bennett and Whitehorse, through alpine vistas as beautiful as Switzerland might offer. This is not a gentle beauty. The mountains are as remote, as regal, as imperially untouched as Crowned heads. Eighty years ago this was Gold Rush country. The town of Skagway is a grubby little place today, but in its prime it welcomed thousands of miners, trappers, victualers, boat-builders, gamblers and ladies of the evening. It is a testimony to the art of sheer survival that the prospectors of that day managed to exist through the bitter winters. These are unforgiving mountains, indifferent to man's travails. Blange upon range, capped in clouds and snow, they raise their tattered beads in cold disdain. Conquer me if you can! Not many men have mastered the challenge.

There are softer elements also. The wildflowers of Juneau and Skagway are as numerous as those of Capetown: columbine, gay as a jester's cap; saxifrage on stems as straight as drinking straws; blue lupine, dwarf dogwood, wild geranium, marsh marigolds. The forest floor, closely examined, is a mass of ferns, lichens, mosses. We saw porcupines, beavers, a distant mountain goat.

Let me add a third impression — the impression of time suspended.

The Princess Pat has no telephones, no TV sets or radios, no newspapers brought on board. From the decks one cannot see a power line, a light at night, a billboard, a human habitation. Only a handful of other ships and boats share the narrow channels. In the vastness of Alaska our tiny vessel is the most speck, floating on dark waters through mist as fragile as a dream.

Pesticide attacked by Nader

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Citing "shocking new evidence" that a pesticide used on fruits, vegetables and golf courses is showing up in drinking water, Ralph Nader's health researchers Thursday asked the government to ban it.

The Health Research Group filed petitions with the Environmental Protection Agency and the Food and Drug Administration saying the pesticide DBCP is a potential cancer-causer.

And it said the FDA should determine whether foods have been packed in water contaminated with it.

In 1977, the EPA halted some uses of DBCP — dibromochloropropane — because of cancer concerns and because of evidence that pesticide factory workers exposed to it had reduced sperm counts. It allowed continued use, however, by trained applicators on soybeans, cotton, citrus fruits, lawns and golf courses, where the EPA felt there would be no residue problem.

Two mishaps in Maine skies

PRESQUE ISLE, Maine (UPI) — A cockpit fire forced a four-engine C-54 aircraft carrying 800 gallons of toxic insecticide to ditch Thursday into Eagle Lake in northern Maine's scenic Allagash Wilderness Waterway.

"The pilot was able to land the thing in the water—pretty easily," said Wesley Smith, special investigator for Maine's Pesticides Control Board.

About the same time, engine failure forced the pilot of a smaller Thrush Commander aircraft to dump his entire 20-gallon load of the chemical Orthene on Hardwood Mountain in western Maine's ski country to lighten his load.

There were no serious injuries to the crewmembers aboard either plane.

Both planes were carrying chemicals used in the nation's largest insecticide spraying program, Maine's controversial $1 million, 3.25 million acre spruce budworm spray project.

Anchorage tops in income

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's richest metropolitan areas in 1977 — measured by individual income — were Anchorage, Alaska; Bridgeport, Conn.; Reno, Nev.; Midland, Texas and Washington, D.C., the government said Thursday.

Rounding out the top 10 were San Francisco, San Jose, Calif.; Newark, N.J.; Nassau-Suffolk, N.Y., and Detroit.

The Commerce Department's

Bureau of Economic Analysis said the figures — latest available for metropolitan areas — showed the average per capita income in the United States for 1977 was $7,026.

The top 10 metropolitan areas were all at least 20 percent above the average — and Anchorage topped it by 63 percent.

Anchorage was No. 1 with a per capita income of $11,430.

On the other end of the scale were metropolitan areas with the lowest per capita incomes.

The lowest 10 — four of them in Texas — were Bloomington, Ind., $3,213; Alexandria, La., $3,155; Albany, Ga., $3,147; St. Cloud, Minn., $3,121; El Paso, Texas, $3,071; Lawton, Okla., $3,026; Provo-Orem, Utah, $3,024; Brownsville-Harlingen-San Benito, Texas, $2,953; Laredo, Texas, $3,008; and Miami, Fla., $3,059.

Dear Abby

A 17-year-old girl wants to cast off

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© The Chicago Tribune
New York News Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR ABBY: I'm 17-year-old girl. I quit high school to work and save enough money for college. My mom helped me get a fantastic job. I want to move into an apartment to be closer to my job. I've already made plans and even got myself a room.
I'm not running away from home or anything like that. I just want to be independent and get out from under my mom's protective wing.
Here's my problem—I'm afraid my mom won't let me move out especially when she finds out my roommate is my boyfriend.
I love my mother and don't want to hurt her, but she won't want to sit in the harbor forever. What do you think?

denche, but you're no ship. And even if you were, leaving your berth at 17 to sail the uncharted seas of a live-in arrangement could put you on the rocks in no time.
DEAR ABBY: I was engaged to be married in August. I ordered my bridal gown and four bridesmaid's dresses. It came to a sizable amount. I have lots of other bills, plus car payments to make, so I am strapped financially.
Two weeks after the dresses were ordered, my fiancé broke our engagement, saying he had had serious doubts for over a month about whether we should marry. He said he has now finally summoned the nerve to tell me that he is sure it would be a mistake and we should call it off.
Abby, since he had "serious doubts" at the time the dresses were ordered, I think he should have told me. When I placed that order I had no idea that he was having doubts.
Now I am informed that because the dresses were specially ordered they cannot be returned.

Is my ex-fiance responsible for this bill?
EX-BRIDE-TO-BE
DEAR EX: I think your ex-fiance has a MORAL obligation to pay for the gowns but, if he doesn't think so, you may have to resort to legal action. Perhaps just the mention of it might produce results. Try it.
DEAR ABBY: My husband is a good provider for his family, which consists of me (age 31) plus our four daughters, 12, 10, 8 and 6.
I lost a baby two years ago. I am enclosing a picture of me. As you can see, I am pregnant and the doctor says I'm carrying twins! My husband look that picture. It's one of the few he's ever taken of me with all my clothes on, which brings me to my problem.

You see, my husband is camera crazy, and for the last three years he has insisted on taking pictures of me and our daughters in various stages of undress as well as in the nude.
How can I get across to my husband that the girls are getting too big for these "family portraits" (as he calls them).
Also, I don't feel like posing in various stages of undress while pregnant, but he insists it doesn't matter.
Am I out of line for putting my foot down?
ENOUGH IS ENOUGH IN OHIO
DEAR ENOUGH: No, I think your husband has an unhealthy preoccupation with nudity. You can get your message across to him by refusing to pose unless fully clothed. And instruct the girls to do likewise.

DEAR TROUBLED: I can understand your desire for indepen-

Impersonator makes off with coupons

CHICAGO (UPI) — A man impersonating a United Airlines ticket agent made off with a "couple hundred" United half-fare coupons at O'Hare International Airport, airline spokesman Marc Michaelson said Thursday.
"Someone who appeared to be a uniformed ticket agent went into the distribution center and said he was to distribute the coupons and he got the coupons for the next couple of flights," Michaelson said.
"He got just a couple hundred tickets so it was no big deal," Michaelson said. The incident happened Wednesday.

However, runners who used to pick up the half-fare coupons for distribution to United passengers at O'Hare have been replaced by United supervisors.

What's what

Party time for world's first newspaperwoman produced lots of news

World's first newspaper woman didn't leave her apartment in Paris for 40 years and yet she gave a party almost every day. Madame Doubled de Fernon (1677-1771) was the lady. A widow. About those parties, each guest was required to tell her a bit of news. The madame then turned out a handwritten newspaper periodically. And it's a matter of record that every issue was circulated widely for months.

Correspondents reported sometime back that it only took nine months for Defense Department employees to steal 60,000 pieces of silverware from the Pentagon cafeteria.

If you can't name the sort of food that uses the most glass jars, you just don't know enough about pickles.

Only half of all women college professors ever marry.

LOVE AND WAR

Q. Can your Love and War man confirm my lifelong belief that British girls are reserved?

A. That's not true, he says, adding, but it can be difficult to book one at the last minute.

Widely known is the fact that cartoonist T. A. Dorgan popularized the word "hotdog" to identify a sausage in a roll. Actual creator of the word was Harry Stevens, a ballpark concessionaire who sent his troops through the stands yelling, "Get a dog! Get it hot! Hot dog!" Dorgan picked up the cry and put it into his cartoons. Other players of yesterday's lexicon: popularized by Dorgan were "33 skidoo," "skimmer" for that type of hat, and "waffle-pace" for flattery.

WOUNDS

An awful lot of U.S. soldiers lost their legs or the use of their legs in the Vietnam war. Specifically, this sort of casualty rate was 70 percent higher in Vietnam than in Korea. And 300 percent higher than in World War II. Each generation of military planners thinks it's getting smarter. And the wounds get worse.

That people spend more money on dogs than on any other sort of pet is common knowledge. But what pet comes in second? No, not the cat. The cat comes fourth, right after birds, which come in third right after fish.

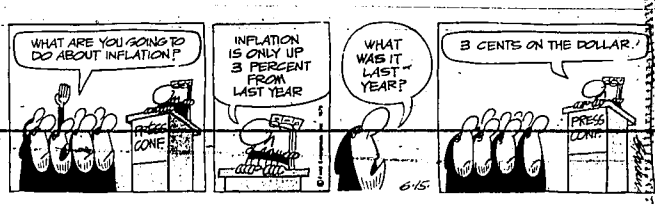

Estimators say there are five times as many whitetail deer on this continent now as there were 79 years ago.

Magic Valley hospital overstaffed

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Memorial Hospital administrator William Burns says the hospital has about twice as many employees as it needs.

"At this point and time, I don't know what I'm going to do about it," said Burns, who has told every department head to re-evaluate its staffing needs in the interest of greater efficiency.

Magic Valley Memorial currently averages 5.1 employees per occupied bed, but Burns said the national average is between two and three. He said this range is his long-term goal but added there will be no firings or layoffs to reach it.

Pointing out that 45 percent of the hospital's employees resign or retire every year, he said many of these workers will not be replaced.

"Every facet and element of this hospital will be reviewed," he said, explaining that growth in some departments may be necessary but will be more than matched by staff reduction in others.

One department head, director of housekeeping Florence Vinkenburg, has resigned, effective July 6. Burns said she quit because she did not want to be held accountable to him.

"That was part of it," said Mrs. Vinkenburg, "but not the whole thing by a longshot. There is quite a thing going on out there, and many people are dissatisfied. It should be brought to the surface."

Mrs. Vinkenburg declined further comment but said other employees have been pressured to resign, some through demotions.

Burns denied such pressure, saying all demotions or firings have been for proficiency reasons rather than to save money or speed up the attrition rate.

"I have more guts than that," said Burns. "That's the back door approach; if I want to fire somebody, I'll do it face-to-face."

He said 12 employees have left since he took over April 26. Eight were from the nursing department, and the dietary and housekeeping departments lost two each. Burns said the respective department heads have chosen not to replace the 12.

The duties of assistant administrator Ken Reid, who retired June 1, have been assumed by former public relations director Richard Boyd, whose title is now director of support services. Public relations assistant Sue Sommers will now serve as quality assurance program coordinator.

"I don't need a public relations department — that's my job," said Burns.

Burns is an employee of Hospital Affiliates International. The hospital board voted in February to hire HAI to manage the hospital, while the county retains ownership. The Nashville-based firm told the board it would save the hospital a yearly amount greater than its yearly fee of $181,000.

Burns said increasing complexity and government involvement in the health care field calls for professional managerial methods.

"A hospital is a business," he said. "For years a number of administrations throughout the country have not wished to apply business techniques to the delivery of health care, nor were they trained to do so."

Burns said most hospital department heads were used to hiring more employees each year and had no master staffing plan or efficiency.

"I inherited 14 dynamics out here," he said, referring to the 14 departments.

He said a master staffing plan for the nursing department will probably be announced next week.

Conference on health next week

SUN VALLEY — Health systems planning and its future in Idaho will be reviewed by several national and state authorities in a conference here June 21 and 22.

Ward Alexander, president of the Idaho Health Systems Agency Inc., said the conference is being held in connection with the agency's board meeting June 23.

The conference is open to the public and will be held in Elkhorn Village.

Alexander said it will present to members of the agency and other interested persons an analysis of the function and potential impact of health systems planning on Idaho's future. Reports on the current status of health planning and health legislation in the state will be given.

Gov. John Evans will take part in the conference, as will Mrs. Irish Schindler, special assistant to Dr. Henry Foley of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare in Washington, D.C.; Sally Berger, chairman of the National Council on Health Planning; Andrew Weinberg of the Washington Business group; John Rosala, health industry; and Dr. Jack Locke, director of the governor's office on Rural Health in Colorado.

Health Systems Agency volunteer staffs from Idaho and surrounding states will be in attendance, Ward said.

Ward said the conference holds special significance in view of Idaho having been notified of the eventual loss of more than $7 million in public health service funds because the state Legislature failed to pass a Certificate of Need bill in the past legislative session.

A child's piped dream

Larry Curtis, 3, of Twin Falls, found the concrete pipes waiting to be installed on Sixth Avenue North an ideal place to explore and be alone. The city is preparing to build a $120,000 storm drain system along the street from Shoshone Street North to Addison Avenue to eliminate the lake that forms at the Sixth Avenue intersection during heavy rains.

Council to decide on bids

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BUHL — City council members in Buhl will decide in a week which of seven bids for purchase of five acres of city land at the airport they will accept.

Bids were opened Tuesday night from seven bidders with the highest figure being $32,000.

Glenn Zack of Buhl offered the city $32,000 for the property with $7,000 as a down payment and the remainder to be paid over 20 years at a 9 percent interest.

He also made an offer of $23,800 cash for the property. Other bids included $28,000 from James Lynch, $25,270 from Everett Weaver, $26,752 from Al Hayes, $24,010 from Robert C. Weaver, and $23,800 from Ray E. Meyerhoff. All of the bidders are from the Buhl area.

The city has applied for water rights on the property to supply fish rearing ponds but approval of the application has not been received. City Councilman Cecil Childs said it should be forthcoming before the city decides on one of the bids. Some of the bidders apparently submitted their proposals assuming they would have water for fish ponds, council members said.

John Barker and William Roberts of the Buhl Economic Development Council asked the council for approval of curbing and low decorative chain enclosure around the Buhl Medical Center property. Barker said the corner location of the property seems to appeal to people looking for a short cut, a place to turn around and even a place to abandon a disabled vehicle. Barker said people even pull into the lot and change oil, leaving the oil drained from their cars in pools on the parking lot.

He said if a six-inch high curb were permitted on the property, posts could be constructed and the entrances closed at night or when the clinic is not open.

He told the council the Buhl Economic Development group that owns the property wants approval of the plan in order not to conflict with any plans the city may have for traffic design on the corner. City council members told delegates to go ahead with the plan.

Charles Humphreys of the Youth Conservation Corps told the councilmen there are 22 young people in Buhl this summer in the YCC program who are available for work projects in Buhl. Mayor Dale Christensen suggested the workers be utilized in building-type projects which will leave a permanent improvement to show for the summer's work.

He said the city has plenty of weed cutting and other clean-up projects, but he would like to see a speaker stand at the ball park if the city has funds to buy the lumber. Humphreys said the young people are available to other agencies including the county and nearby cities as well as the Buhl Economic Development group sponsors the program.

Gene Hopkins, the city's new building inspector, said many people in Buhl do not realize they need building permits for such things as building fences or erecting business signs.

He said any addition, remodeling or other improvements not considered maintenance need a permit and if the individual is in doubt he or she should contact city hall before proceeding with a building project.

Fees, he said, are calculated on a square foot plus standard building code formula — and many persons make applications for permits at city hall underestimating their costs. Hopkins has the authority to require blueprints to be filed with each application if he feels this is necessary to determine construction costs and to check design standards.

Today is "Job Pressures Day" Operators to picket phone company

TWIN FALLS — Americans may be talking to telephone operators today but not necessarily on the other end of the line.

The national Communications Workers of America has labeled today as "Job Pressures Day." Telephone operators will be picketing telephone companies today to call attention to existing working conditions, and other operators leading businesses and downtown shopping areas to inform the public.

The informational picket will be conducted by on-duty operators. Kenneth Mann, district director for Mountain Bell, said phone service won't be affected.

"We want to have people know we're people, too," said operator Sandee Henson of Twin Falls, "and that we don't like unreasonable demands on us."

Ms. Henson, a member of the Twin Falls Communications Workers of America local union No. 8110, said she expected broad support from local members and that three specific working conditions were most concern to telephone employees.

A major complaint is "forced overtime," Ms. Henson said. "Sometimes management will schedule us six days a week." Phone company employees like other workers, Ms. Henson said, "don't like overtime if we could be home with our families."

Two other complaints are computerized scheduling and "unreasonable demands concerning productivity."

According to Ms. Henson, computerized work scheduling locks telephone employees into too rigid a time frame. "You can't even get off work to go to the doctor," she said. The telephone company also hasn't taken into consideration the increased work loads brought about by computer improvements, she said.

Ms. Henson said the informational picketing and leafletting will last only one day and is being held primarily to make known specific objections to existing working conditions.

"We hope then we can sit down and talk (with the telephone company) about the problems," she said.

Budget OK'd in Kimberly

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly School Board Wednesday night approved a $90,500 general fund budget for the 1979-80 school year.

The approval means funding for Kimberly schools will rise by $70,845, or about 8 percent over last year's expenditure of $89,655, according to school district treasurer LaRae Crawford.

Ms. Crawford said the new budget includes a 7 percent salary increase for all school employees. Money budgeted for fuel and lubricants for school buses will rise to $8,250 next year from $5,000 this year because of rising fuel costs.

Budgeted utility expenses for next year total $43,500, up from $35,500 this year. The maintenance section of the budget which includes maintenance personnel salaries as well as anticipated new equipment, is $39,000, up from $34,500 this year.

In the valley

Three fires out

BOISE — Three of four range fires ignited by lightning Wednesday afternoon in the Boise district have been declared out. Bureau of Land Management officials said Thursday.

The remaining fire was under control and officials expected it out by this morning. The fire had posed problems to crews Wednesday night when they failed to reach the area located 30 miles south of Brunau.

Six firefighters were flown in by helicopter the following morning, and brought the fire under control by digging around the fire. The helicopter dropped water on the 100-acre sagebrush fire, which was declared under control at 6:45 p.m.

The largest fire, involving 1,500 acres of grazing land located eight miles south of Glens Ferry, was declared under control by the BLM at 7 a.m. Thursday. Officials declared the fire out at 6:12 p.m. Thursday. Eight ground tankers and 26 firefighters fought the blaze.

Rumor in Wendell

WENDELL — A group of about 30 Wendell residents filled the city council chambers

Thursday night to protest the rumored firing of the police chief.

"We consider Police Chief Otis Lumpkin and Officer Ed Baer some of the best policemen around and I feel it would be unfortunate if we lost them under any circumstances," one resident said.

"I don't know where the rumor started," Mayor Otto Lemke said. "It's absolutely not true."

Lemke said the rumor likely began about a month ago when there were communications problems between the police chief and himself. Lemke is the city council member in charge of the police department.

Lumpkin told the council and the residents he had a good working relationship with the city. He said a part of the problem was the unavailability of one police car for use as a backup unit.

Police Officer Jim Howe now lives seven miles outside of Wendell and often takes the second police car home at night. Lumpkin said he occasionally takes that backup unit too far from town for effective use.

Baer suggested that the second police car be kept in town, and the council and the citizens readily agreed.

Sound gear stolen

TWIN FALLS — Hugh Glenn, 214 Blue Lakes Blvd., told police when he returned from a vacation he found someone had entered his apartment and removed $1,710 worth of sound equipment.

He said the apartment had been broken into sometime within the past week. He said the missing equipment included stereo players, speakers and tapes.

Two thefts

TWIN FALLS — Two thefts were reported to Twin Falls police Thursday.

Brad Brennan, said someone entered his camper trailer at 435 Madison Avenue Wednesday night or early Thursday morning and took $165 worth of items. He said his loss included a camera and a pair of hiking boots.

Danekert's, located at 588 Addison Ave. W., reported someone took a television set and radio from the store shelves. The theft occurred either June 6 or 7, store officials reported, apparently during business hours. The theft was not reported until Thursday morning.

Both incidents are under investigation.

Subcommittee split on Medicaid vote

BOISE (UPI) — A legislative joint subcommittee deadlocked on a 3-3 vote Wednesday, neutralizing its ability to say whether new, easier-to-obtain regulations on Medicaid payments to nursing homes are valid.

The vote came after representatives of the state Health and Welfare Department and the nursing home industry strictly laid the blame for the state's mounting Medicaid deficit upon each other and inflation.

Meanwhile, one committee member, Herbert G. Fitz, R-New Meadows, urged all concerned to crack down on "professional senior citizens" and welfare cheaters, whom he said are the true cause of the state's projected $4.6 million fiscal year 1979 deficit.

Nursing home operators had filed suit questioning H&W's authority to cut Medicaid payments to health care providers and Tuesday they obtained restraining order barring those cuts until a district judge decides whether they are legal.

The committee's approval or di-approval probably would have influenced the next Legislature to decide what method should be used to keep costs down and the Medicaid program in the black.

Voting against a motion that would have approved the regulations were Fitz, Sen. Norma Dobler, D-Moscow, and Rep. Louis Horvath, D-Pinehurst. Favoring approval were the committee's co-chairmen, Rep. Elaine Keating, R-Idaho Falls, and Sen. John M. Barker, R-Buhl, plus Sen. Reese Verner, R-Nampa.

H&W officials told the committee the department ran out of Medicaid money Monday and will not have more until July. They added that unless costs are sliced further the state will run out of Medicaid funds in fiscal year 1980 by March.

Ben Collins, the department's Medicaid eligibility specialist, said inflation will continue "at a rate the state can never afford." He said the proposed regulations to force nursing homes to cut administrative and operational costs is the only way to rein in the deficit.

Industry representative Hartzell Cobbs said red tape and inflexibility on the part of H&W officials forced the industry to take court action against the regulations. He said the industry was given only eight days to prepare an alternative proposal.

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age

Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Send for this model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this free model will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It is not a real hearing aid, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 5178, Beltone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria St., Chicago, Illinois 60646.

Victim search expanded

GRANGEVILLE (UPI) — Searchers expanded efforts Thursday to locate the bodies of four persons missing since Monday's crash of a Forest Service DC-3 in the turbulent Selway River in north Idaho.

A man, a 17-year-old boy and two dogs survived the crash. Another man died shortly after the crash and five bodies were pulled out of the river Wednesday, miles downstream from where the aircraft plunged into the river and broke apart.

Forest Service spokesman Steve Waterman said about 60 Sheriff's officers, Forest Service personnel, other law officers and two helicopters were combing the river and its banks along a 30-mile stretch from the crash site at Selway Falls downriver to near Koozka. He said several of the searchers were added to the operation Thursday morning.

Officials said little hope remained that the four missing Forest Service employees would be found alive.

Seven divers from the Lewiston Police Department and the Clearwater County Sheriff's Office probed the upper four-mile stretch of the river, where they came across the five bodies Wednesday.

Two helicopters flew over the lower reaches of the search area, Waterman said. The Idaho, Fish and Game Department also sent a jet-boat to assist rafters looking for more wreckage and the missing passengers.

Meantime, an investigation team from the Forest Service's Washington office arrived and began trying to determine what caused the crash.

One survivor, Bryant Stringham, 17, of Cottonwood, Idaho, said both engines quit running before one of them caught fire, exploded and fell off.

The plane, carrying 12 Forest Service employees to a wilderness awareness school at the Nezperce National Forest's Moose Creek ranger station, was near the end of its 32-minute flight from Grangeville when it went down in the river canyon.

Potato truck tips on side

BURLEY — An 18-wheel tractor-trailer carrying a load of potatoes went too far over the road's edge on Wednesday afternoon and tipped on its side, blocking the right hand east-bound lane for about two hours, Idaho State Police said.

The accident occurred at 12-10 p.m., roughly 11 miles east of the Salt Lake City interchange, Idaho state trooper Lamont Johnston said. Bel

D Herndon was heading east when his truck went too close to the road's edge and tipped over. Herndon was taken by ambulance to Cassia County Hospital where he was treated for minor injuries and released by 2:30 p.m., Johnston said.

Herndon was cited for inattentive driving. No other vehicles were involved in the mishap, Johnston said.

U. S. athletes begin climb toward Olympics

WALNUT, Calif. (UPI) — The best athletes in the United States gather Friday at Mt. San Antonio College for the start of the annual AAU Track and Field Championships, the first major steppingstone to the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

Winners at the three-day meet, scheduled to attract more than 1,300 athletes, will provide the bulk of the 1979 International squads and also a glimpse of the probable stars of the 1980 Olympic team. The top two finishers in each event will qualify for the Pan American Games to be held in Puerto Rico July 15. The winner of each event will have a berth on the U.S. World Cup squad that will compete in Montreal August 24-26.

Events expected to headline the talent-filled field include the 110-high hurdles, matching Renaldo Nchemiah and Edwin Moses; the 1,500-meters, with Steve Scott, Steve Lacy, Don Paige and Graham Williamson; the pole vault with a rejuvenated Mike Tully inking on world record holder Dave Egberts, and the sprints, with Clancy Edwards, James Sanford, Mel Lattany and Houston McFarr, Curtis Dickey, Eddie Tarr, Johnny (Lam) Jones and Steve Williams.

Also, four-time defending AAU long jump champion Arnie Robinson takes on LaMonte King while the triple jump features James Butts, Milan Tiff and Willie Banks.

Nchemiah, 20-year-old University of Maryland sophomore, is unbeaten in 1979. He opened the year with a world record time of 13.16 seconds in the hurdles; broke it two weeks later with a time of 13.00 seconds and has a hand-timed 12.8 clocking and a wind-aided 12.91 clocking

Mike Tully, 22, cleared 18-3 3/4, a world record height, last season. But IAAF officials, measuring the bar after Tully had landed and walked away, knocked the bar after he had to remeasure. It was recorded at just 18-3, short of Roberts' world mark. But it may not make much difference to Tully. Who many claim will be the first to clear the 19 foot barrier.

Rudy Chapa, 21, is the best distance runner in the U.S. since the death of Steve Prefontaine. He broke Prefontaine's 3,000-meter American record and has a 13:19.7 world mark for 5,000 meters this season. Chapa will take on American record holder Marty Liquori, Lacy, Frank Shorter and Dick Buerkle in the 5,000 meters.

Virtually all of the top women athletes in the nation will compete in the meet.

Deby LaPlante, the American record holder in the 100-meter hurdles, takes on Jane Frederick in that event. Evelyn Ashford, who has the fastest times among Americans this year in the 100, 200 and 400 meters, will battle world record holder Brenda Morhead in the 200 and 400. Joeli Andersson, who won the Woman Athlete of the Year award at last year's AAU meet for her American record long jump of 22-7 1/2, will back to defend the title.

And the 1,500-meters features a confrontation between Francie Larrieu and Jan Merrill. Larrieu holds the top mark in the U.S. in the 1,500-meters (4:09.2) and holds the American record in the mile at 4:28.2. Merrill, the defending AAU 1,500-meters champ, will also run the 3,000 meters.

The meet ends Sunday.

Cage coach at Minico leaves job

RUPERT — Minico high school and basketball will be losing a coach with the announcement that Billy Gonzalez is headed back to his home country, West Virginia.

Gonzalez, who headed the Spartans only one year and had a 2-20 season, has resigned.

"There are a number of reasons but the primary one is I have family back there and they are not in real good health and there's no one to kinda take care of them," the coach said Thursday night. "And my kids want to get back home, and that's a second reason."

Gonzalez said he probably will not be in education next year. "I'm thinking about getting into real estate," he said. "I have the opportunity a couple of years ago and passed it up. Now it's coming by again and I think I just might take it."

"Getting out of coaching will give me a chance to get in on some of the things that I've had to pass up over the years...like hunting and fishing. They have excellent bass and trout fishing back there and you can stop off your back porch and get a deer or wild turkey. In coaching I never had a chance and never really felt like I wanted to take time to do that. But now I believe it's time to slowdown and enjoy some of this stuff," he commented.

The past season and his short stay in the west wasn't a particularly enjoyable one for the coach. He became ill late in the fall and still hasn't regained his health, facing gall bladder removal this summer. "It was a tough year physically and mentally for me," he admits. "I felt there were several reasons for all of this. One was the coaching (with the team) but in the final analysis it was all my responsibility and no number of excuses, reasons or alibis will change that."

Awaiting the inevitable

Apprehensive Bob Crossland of Jerome hangs in while trying to make a tag at second base on Burley's Frank Heckendorf. Crossland obviously was making the play by brattle as he protects his eyes from flying dirt and dust kicked up by Heckendorf. The Burley baserunner was successful in his steal attempt. Barner, benefitting from some early wildness by Jerome pitchers in the first inning, piled up a big lead and went on to claim the American Legion Junior baseball decision.

Four share lead in first round of open

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — Lon Hinkle, redesigning the course as he went along, took a shortcut that saved him 10 yards Thursday, as he won a 1-under par 70 that was just enough for a share of the first-round lead with four others in the U.S. Open and resulted in a tree being planted in his honor.

"I thought to myself, 'This might be the only time something like this ever happens in the U.S. Open,'" he said. "I'm tall, chubby Texan, who was tied with Andy Bean, former Open winner Lou Graham, Tom Purtzer and Keith Fergus, appearing in his first Open.

Hinkle's ingenious shortcut, in which he drove his tee shot on the eighth hole onto the fairway of the 17th, then crossed it to the green on the eighth, caused anguished officials to scurry about for a solution to what could have become an embarrassing problem.

"The situation created a danger to the players playing the 17th and to the spectators," said Jim Hand, chairman of the championship committee. "A tree will be planted to the left of the eighth tee. Hopefully, this will prevent the condition from recurring."

Hand, who said that five other players followed Hinkle's example, added that the tree would be brought in and planted during the night.

Loss among all the hullabaloo concerning Hinkle was an incredible round by Purtzer, who fought back for a share of the lead despite a double bogey and triple bogey on the fourth and fifth holes by running up with five birdies on the last six holes.

"I tried to hang in there because I knew the scores wouldn't be too low," Purtzer said. "It helps once you get a little momentum going."

Three-time Open winner Jack Nicklaus doubled bogeyed the final hole to fall back to 74 while tournament favorite Tom Watson, troubled with his driver, suffered through six bogeys to stand at 75.

"I don't feel I'm out of the tournament yet," said Watson, who has won four times this year. "A good round will shoot me back into it."

Hinkle, still battling about a round off golf with Ben Hogan last week ("I beat him by a shot"), shook up the establishment on the long eighth hole when he hit a 1-iron onto the fairway of the adjoining 17th hole, then used a 2-iron to cross back to the green of the eighth. He proceeded to 2-putt from 70 feet for a birdie, whereas by two practice rounds Hinkle had bogeyed the hole.

"I felt like I got my hand caught in a cookie jar," Hinkle said. "I don't know if I did a good thing or a bad thing. I was real tempted not to tell anybody about it. The guy, who redesigned that hole isn't going to be too happy with me."

Amateur champion happy with 71

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — John Cook was thrilled — not by his score, not because he played with Jack Nicklaus, but by the way he stayed in there and battled.

Cook, the reigning U.S. Amateur champion, fired an even-par 71 Thursday in the first of the 79th U.S. Open Championship, leaving him right in the thick of the battle for the top spot. And, he birdied three of the last four holes to do it.

"What really thrilled me was the way I kept grinding it out," said the 22-year-old Ohio State junior. "To be within a shot or two of the lead is really something."

Cook, who birdied the only three holes in which he drove into the fairway, said he came into the amateur with the goal of finishing in the top 10, which would earn him an automatic entry in the 1980 Open.

"I'm not the top 10," he said, "then the top 25, I put the top 25, then to make the cut. But my game is good enough right now that I don't have to worry about making the cut."

That's what he thought coming into the championship. Things have changed.

"Now, I'd like to win it," he said. "I played good for one round and I'm right in it. All I have to do is play good for three more rounds."

Thursday was the first time Cook, who also won the Ohio Amateur title last summer, has played with Nicklaus in a competitive round.

changed.

"I felt like I got my hand caught in a cookie jar," Hinkle said. "I don't know if I did a good thing or a bad thing. I was real tempted not to tell anybody about it. The guy, who redesigned that hole isn't going to be too happy with me."

Hinkle said that one of his playing partners, Chi Chi Rodriguez, also received an award from an official and that Dave Eichelberger, in the following group, did likewise.

The eighth hole, at 528 yards, is the longest on the Inverness Club course and is one of only two par 5s.

Grant's 4-year coaching experiences still ahead

HAILEY — For Boyd Grant, who coached College of Southern Idaho to its only national basketball championship, the last two years have been learning experiences and the next two are bound to be.

Because in his first two seasons, things at Fresno State have been very similar to what he had experienced at CSI — with the exception of the media.

Grant, in Hailey to help Fred Trenkle conduct the first annual Wood River basketball camp, said so far he was unable to find a lot of difference between the two head coaching positions.

"When I went there the team was practically all seniors and left the following spring. Last year we were basically a freshman club so we were dealing with a two-year cycle just as you do in junior college," Grant said.

"But I'm sure," he added with a smile, "that when you get the player with great talent and attitude it seems like you only have him for two years although he's there for four and with the player that gives you trouble, I suppose his four years seem more like six."

The other thing Grant noticed is that CSI is the elite basketball program in this area. I mean you generally are playing better talent than the teams around here. Down there you're in more of a 50-50 situation and in a conference with five or six programs that are pretty equal."

Grant currently has a summer of relaxation, since that heavy recruitment of a year ago filled up the roster and NCAA-restricted 15 scholarships. "This year we only went after two players real hard. We got an excellent guard out of Chicago and we thought we had another great player out of Los Angeles until right at the last when he decided to go to Arizona," Grant said. "But that was about all we needed, that guard, and that was the end of our recruiting."

The coach said he expected things to pick up in Fresno basketball now that his young troops are getting a little experience.

"He had an excellent opening season at Fresno, but losing at home, and the Fresno faithful immediately held signs, that proclaimed the civic center 'Grant's Tomb' as a warning to incoming opponents."

"This year I really thought we'd have a good season. We had some great players among the freshmen and Art (Williams), ex-CSI player and Fresno's leading scorer, I told everyone we'd be running and that we'd have a good team," the coach said. "Then we lost six of our first nine including three at home. Boy, it didn't take long for those

'Grant's Tomb' signs to come down."

"We struggled through the first half of the season because we didn't have a guard who could get us into our offense. We'd get two timeouts in a row to try to get things started and the team would go back out and look like we'd never called time."

Other things came down on him, too. "Hard," he said, "was one fan sitting behind me who really gave me the devil and called me about everything in the book. After a couple of games, one of my players said 'Coach, I'll never say anything no matter how hard you chew me out. If you can keep your cool with that guy on your back all these games, I can take anything you say to me.'" Coach Grant laughed.

The other part for the coach was the media. "We have three television stations, five radio stations and two newspapers," he said. "It seems like before we can do anything we have to pose for pictures, give taped interviews and try to have something new to say almost every day. It gets to a point you feel you need one man to do nothing but satisfy the media. I really was used to that."

"And I got myself in some trouble before last season when I told them all that I felt we had good talent and would probably do some running. Well, I overestimated that, I guess, and you know me, when the fourth game after about the third home loss, one of the papers called out and said 'Grant promised a running game before the season but it's still the same slow game.'"

Fortunately, after things went to 2-6 Fresno went to the road and the team started to come together. The Bulldogs won 11 of their last 13 games and made it to the second rounds of the conference playoffs. It took a lot of pressure on the coach's shoulders.

"But I don't want it to sound like they haven't been good to me," the coach continued. "They've indicated losing in many ways that they'd like me to stick around. The good part outweighs the bad and as for any of that early season stuff, it was just an example of interested fans being disappointed. It was something that I had to learn to adjust to."

Grant says he has no desire to move on to any other four-year school.

"I'll put in another few years at Fresno — if they'll have me — and when I leave there I'll be out of coaching forever."

And when he's out of coaching?

"I'll probably be in Idaho," he says with a smile.

Player contracts cut trading chances

ATLANTA (UPI) — The days of those free-wheeling multi-player baseball trades seem to have become pretty much a thing of the past.

But this isn't because struggling clubs are any less willing to make one of those six-for-five deals in a desperate effort to change directions, said Sather, because player contracts have become so complicated it's often hard to work out all the necessary details.

"When I first came into professional baseball more than 30 years ago, the only thing a club had to concern itself with when making a trade was not coming out on the short end," said Atlanta Braves General Manager John Mullen. "Now, with all those no-trade, no-cut contracts and other provisions, it takes a roomful of lawyers to figure it all out."

And sometimes, says Braves attorney Trench Cox, even that doesn't help.

"Most contracts are the regular one-page forms that players have been signing for years," said Cox. "But, more and more, the players and their agents, especially their agents, are having all sorts of clauses added.

"The longest player contract I've seen is the one Gary Matthews got when the Braves signed him as a free agent," said Cox. "It runs 12 full pages. I'm kind of thankful I wasn't involved in that one."

Contract complications, says Mullen, is one of the key reasons there have been so few deals made have been made of late, even with this year's trade deadline (Friday) so near at hand.

"It used to be," said Mullen, "if there was a player you were interested in, all you had to do is come up with an offer the other club would accept. Now, with the players themselves often in position to veto a trade, it has become a lot more complicated."

Also, points out Mullen, with so many players negotiating long-term contracts, a club has to be careful that it doesn't commit itself for a lot more expense than the trade might be worth. "No one likes to look at a deal from strictly a dollar-and-cents view," said Mullen. "But, you've got to have second thoughts about taking on a high-dollar contract that extends beyond the probable value of the player involved."

Braves owner Ted Turner is a multi-millionaire who has shown a willingness to shell out big bucks in his effort to raise the Braves out of the basement. But Turner's generosity has backfired on several occasions.

Turner opened up the door for veteran free agents when he signed Andy Messersmith to a $1 million-for-three-years contract and got only 16 wins in two years in return. He gave Bob Horner, last year's National League rookie of the year, a fat bonus and wound up in a bitter arbitration dispute when Horner capitalized on that bonus to force the Braves to pay him more this season than they had planned on.

"You've got to be careful that you don't give up too much for a player who is in the last year of a contract and may declare his free agency at the end of the season," said Mullen. "When that happens, you can wind up with nothing."

The late Bill Lucas, the man Mullen succeeded when he took over as Braves GM last month, once pointed out that trading mistakes were the chief reason Atlanta baseball had fallen upon lean days.

"Look it up," said Lucas. "Not one of our present players can be traced through the trades we made in the intervening 10 years to any of those who were with us in 1969 when we won the division title."

One of the worst deals Lucas could recall was Joe Torre for Orlando Cepeda. Torre continued to star at St. Louis while Cepeda had only one good year in four for Atlanta before being traded for Denny McClellan who was 3-5 during his brief stint with the Braves, then handed his unconditional release.

Felix Millan, one of the better second basemen, was traded to the New York Mets for pitchers Gary Gentry and Danny Frisell who had a combined mark of 8-12 during two injury-plagued seasons with the Braves. Then, there was Rico Carty, one of the best hitters in baseball, who was traded for a pitcher named Jim Panther who posted a 2-3 mark before being sent down to Richmond, never to return to the majors.

"If we were a contending club it might make sense to gamble on someone who might not be with us very long but who could help us be an immediate winner," said Mullen. "Unfortunately, we've got to take the long-range view, to try to build for the future. With that in mind, we can't afford to gamble."

"I guess," said Braves Vice President Bob Hope who is leaving baseball at the end of this month to go to work for a soft drink firm, "we're just snafu-ing so far as trades go. Even if it hadn't become so difficult to work out multi-player deals, you can see why we might be overly cautious."

NHL draft leaves Canadiens on top

MONTREAL (UPI) — Glen Sather looked back at Wednesday's National Hockey League expansion draft and wondered if the four former-WHA teams had taken the right path.

"If I could hold a little tougher, we could have got more," said Sather, the coach of the Edmonton Oilers.

Sather was wondering aloud about the possibility of what amounted to an organized resistance against the domination of the draft by the Montreal Canadiens, who owned the rights to enough former WHA players to have a hand in virtually every round.

But Sather acknowledged the problems of trying to break the stranglehold of the Canadiens.

"How do you go to Quebec and tell them that it might cost them Marc Tardif, who's only been their best player for the last couple of years?"

"Or how do you go to Edmonton or any of the other teams and tell them it might cost them one of their cornerstone players?"

The Oilers thus elected to go along with what the Canadiens had to offer. They made some deals that allowed them to keep certain players and receive certain players. The hitch was what they had to give the Canadiens in return, either leaving a Canadian player untouched in the draft or granting some sort of future consideration.

"I think I got six players for one concession," Sather said. "For instance, Cam Connor will be playing for us and he's going to be a better player for me than he would have been for Montreal."

Bill Torrey, general manager of the New York Islanders (indirectly reflected on the fact that the Canadiens had dominated the draft.

"I don't know why it took so long," Torrey said, referring to the nearly three hours of draft. "Everything was arranged in advance."

One player Sather retains is forward Wayne Gretzky, the 18-year-old wonder who will be playing in the NHL next year after a productive rookie season in the WHA.

"You know," said Sather, "in every league that Wayne has played in, they always said he wouldn't make it. He was always going to be either too small or too slow. But in the last five leagues that he's played in, he's been the rookie of the year."

Designated hitter says he's ready to pitch

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wayne Northen still isn't thrilled about the prospect that the Chicago White Sox catcher-outfielder-designated-hitter says he will still be available to pitch for the team should he be needed.

The White Sox pitching staff has been troubled with injuries for the major league pitching debut, but down to seven healthy pitchers. The player-manager Don Kessinger called on Northen to finish games in which the White Sox were decidedly behind.

Northen gave up two runs against the California Angels in his major league pitching debut, but pitched the Milwaukee Brewers without yielding a run. It was after his stint against the Brewers he announced he would not do any more pitching unless some changes in his contract were made.

"I'm still not happy with the situation but I have told Don that if the occasion arises and I can help out, I'll go in there and give it my best," Northen said.

Northen was concerned about a possible injury to his arm that could affect his status as a player. He said he has no guarantees in his contract with Chicago should he injure himself pitching, but he would still be paid.

"Besides, I didn't want to risk injury pitching that would end my major league career," Northen said. "Pitching is totally different on your arm that just throwing in the outfield."

Northen had no pitching experience in the minor leagues or in college.

"I think the last time was in a high school game, I can't really remember," Northen said.

Kessinger said he was pleased Northen had volunteered to help out, adding he was somewhat surprised with Northen's success

NL all-star balloting has three new leaders

NEW YORK (UPI) — Three new names, Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, Los Angeles' Dave Lopes and the late George Foster, appear among the National League All-Star team leading vote-getters, as the second weekly balloting results were announced by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn Thursday.

Lopes, who has 18 home runs for a career high already, is bidding to break a seven-year reign by Cincinnati's Joe Morgan in earning starting honors at second base. Lopes has built up a 21,146 margin over Morgan, while Philadelphia's Manny Trillo, last week's leader, fell to third.

Bench, who has started every game since 1970, holds a 10,923 margin over St. Louis' Ted Simmons. Philadelphia's Bob Boone, last week's top vote-getter, fell to fourth in the balloting.

Foster, who has been a starter in the outfield for the last three All-Star games, moved into third position behind Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski and Pittsburgh's Dave Parker.

Canadiens fight Lemaire move

MONTREAL (UPI) — Veteran Montreal center Jacques Lemaire has reportedly decided to accept an offer of player-coach in Switzerland, but the Canadiens don't want to release him.

General manager Irving Grundman reportedly wants Lemaire to play out his option, a delay that would stop Lemaire from going to Europe for a year.

Grundman said the National Hockey League has an agreement with the International Ice Federation to abide by NHL contracts and it would be unfair to the other teams to let Lemaire go before playing out his option.

If the Canadiens released Lemaire, or if he went to Europe only as a coach and not as a player, there would be no problem, club spokesmen said.

Draft picks compensate Denver

NEW YORK (UPI) — National Basketball Commissioner Larry O'Brien Wednesday awarded the Denver Nuggets two second-round selections from San Diego in the 1979 draft as compensation for the Clippers' signing of free agent Brian Taylor.

Denver, which did not have a choice in the draft until the fifth round, will now have the 30th and 33rd choices in the June 25 selection process. The 30th choice was previously awarded to the Clippers from Golden State as compensation for Tom Abernethy.

Taylor played in 39 games for the Nuggets at the start of the 1977-78 season before leaving the club over a contract dispute. An impartial arbitrator subsequently determined Taylor had breached his contract with the club.

Von Breda Kolff joins pro women

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Butch von Breda Kolff, the fiery coach of the New Orleans Jazz and present head coach and athletic director of the University of New Orleans, today was named head coach of the New Orleans entry in the Women's Pro Basketball League.

Von Breda Kolff, who spent 10 years coaching in the NBA, made the announcement Thursday at a news conference in which the expansion team's top draft choices were named. Von Breda Kolff, who will leave his college post, will do promotional work as well as coach the first-year team, which has yet to be named.

Slow play penalized in open

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — USGA officials, toughening up their stand on slow play, assessed two-stroke penalties Thursday on two players early in the opening round of the U.S. Open Golf Championship.

Tom Inskip, an amateur from Fort Wayne, Ind., was the first player to have two shots added to his score, and only minutes later Brad Sherry of Los Angeles was similarly penalized.

A year ago at Denver, the USGA announced its intention to impose a two-stroke penalty for slow play, and Bob Impaglia gained instant notoriety then when he became the first player to be tagged.

Guidry's back healing

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York Yankee pitching ace Ron Guidry returned to New York Thursday, still experiencing "tenderness and some pain" but on the road to recovery from the back injury he sustained Tuesday night.

After examining the 1978 Cy Young Award winner, Yankee club physician Dr. John J. Bonomo said Guidry still has pain in his strained upper back muscles but has shown good improvement. Guidry spent two days in a Minnesota hospital after being carried off the field on a stretcher during New York's 4-1 victory over the Twins.

Dr. Bonomo said he did not feel this was a long-term injury and added he did not expect any recurrence of the injury after a sufficient healing period.

Inter-American club grounded

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (UPI) — The Santo Domingo Sugarman, the second place team in the fledgling and financially troubled Inter-American Baseball League, were prohibited from leaving the country Thursday because of a $13,000 debt with a travel agency for airline tickets.

Dominican Attorney General Caonabo Fernandez Naranjo told immigration authorities to detain foreign and Dominican players on the club if they attempt to leave for away games on the team's schedule.

Fernandez Naranjo said the team "has things pending with our system of justice" but wouldn't go into details.

It was learned, however, that the measure had been requested by the Stephen y Stephen, S. A. travel agency, which said it hasn't been paid for $13,000 worth of airline tickets that were obtained on credit by former team owner Francisco Acevedo Gaultier.

Borg tops net rankings

LONDON (UPI) — Bjorn Borg's victory in the French Open Tennis Championships Sunday lifted him into first place above losing semifinalist Jimmy Connors in the current Grand Prix rankings.

The top six are:
1. Bjorn Borg, Sweden, 1,257 points; 2. Jimmy Connors, U.S., 1,167; 3. Vilas Gerulaitis, U.S., 967; 4. Roscoe Tanner, U.S., 902; 5. John McEnroe, U.S., 787; and 6. Guillermo Vilas, Argentina, 593.

Houston narrows choices

HOUSTON (UPI) — Athletic Directors Lavon McDonald of New Mexico, Lou McCullough, of Iowa State and Doug Weaver of Georgia Tech are being considered for the AD job at the University of Houston.

McDonald, a native Texan, said he met with Houston school officials at midweek and expected to remain in town through Thursday. McCullough and Weaver, two other candidates asked to interview, were not available for comment.

School officials are trying to replace Athletic Director Harry Fouke, who will officially retire Aug. 31.

McDonald has been athletic director at the University of New Mexico since 1974. He was asked to interview for the Houston job by law professor Michael Johnson, chairman of a seven-person committee handling the interviews.

Affirmed, Alydar meet again

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Affirmed, the 1978 Triple Crown winner, and runner-up Alydar head a list of 30 nominees for the $500,000 Hollywood Gold Cup June 24 at Hollywood Park. It was announced Thursday.

This will be the 4th running of the 1 1/4-mile Gold Cup, which has become history's richest thoroughbred race.

If Affirmed should grab the winner's purse of $275,000, he would become thoroughbred racing's all-time money-winning champion with a total of $2,044,218 in career earnings. The runner-up gets $100,000.

The Harbor View Farm champion has never lost in three career starts at Hollywood Park. This season he won the Californian Handicap by five lengths.

If Alydar comes west for the Gold Cup this will be the first time the silks of Calumet Farm have been seen in California since 1955.

Little, Blalock share LPGA lead

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Sally Little and Jane Blalock finished at 4-under-par 69 Thursday for a share of the first-round lead in a $125,000 LPGA golf tournament at the Locust Hill Country Club.

Sue Roberts was one stroke back at 7 while Barbara Monness, Connie Gullemi, Sharon Miller and Dot Germain were within two shots of the leaders at 71.

Little, the early leader in the clubhouse, shot a 2-under-par 34 on the front nine before falling back to par through 13 holes. She bounced back, however, with birdies at 14 and 15.

On 17, Little powered a three-wood to within 15 feet of the cup and holed out for an eagle 3.

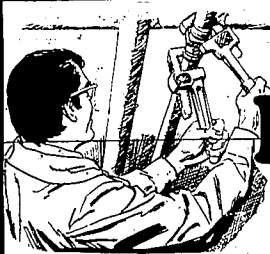

"I felt like (Nancy) Lopez for a while," she said of her long hitting. "She usually hits the ball so far that it flies to the hole."

Blalock bogeyed the second hole before gaining birdies at 3 and 4 to finish the front nine at one-under 35.

Birdies at 11, 12 and 13 tied her with Little.

"I had chances for birdies at 17 and 18 but missed," Blalock said. "I should have birdied them."

Blalock, who missed a putt on 12 last year to lose a tournament to Lopez, said the memory didn't bother her.

Team will remain 'Jazz' in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — It will remain Utah instead of New Orleans, but the name will still be "The Jazz," said Battistone and Larry H. Hatfield, who moved their NBA franchise to Salt Lake City after five frustrating years in New Orleans, said Thursday. "We have several reasons," said Hatfield, the club's managing partner. "It's an established NBA team with recognition and a heritage. Team owners are required to give the league one-year notice before a name change." Hatfield also said the club would name a new head coach "in a week or two weeks." He said Tom Nissalke, a former head coach at Houston and the old Utah Stars in the defunct ABA, "is one of 10 to 12 people under consideration" for the coaching job.

Battistone and Hatfield fired Jazz coach Elgin Baylor last month after the team stumbled to the worst 1978-79 record in the NBA, 26-56. Baylor had been the team's third coach in just five years. The NBA board of governors June 9 finally approved the move after the two majority owners said they had lost $2.8 million last season in New Orleans, and conflicts with scheduling dates in the Louisiana Superdome forced the team to remain on the road for most of the month of February. They also claimed Dome scheduling problems would worsen in 1979-80 and in future seasons. Following the governors' vote, Battistone and Hatfield signed a 20-year contract with the 12,500-seat Salt Lake City Salt Palace, once the home of the Utah Stars.

The two owners, who control 65 percent of the stock in the Jazz and are trying to buy up the remaining shares, said they will begin moving into their new offices in the Salt Palace Friday. Battistone said he and Hatfield "are dedicated" to rebuilding the club in its new city. "We're very happy to be here," Battistone added. "Since we first decided on the move, we've seen nothing but a positive attitude and atmosphere in Salt Lake City."

Kupchak's injury diagnosed

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — The Washington Bullets announced Thursday that center-forward Mitch Kupchak's back injury has been diagnosed as a herniated disk. A team spokesman said no decision had been made about what treatment Kupchak will receive.

Kupchak, who at one point last season was the highest scoring reserve in the NBA, played only sporadically after injuring his back in March. He saw only limited action in the playoffs against Atlanta and San Antonio, and none in the final.

Seafood publication circles globe

Trade letter published in Bliss desert

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News Staff

BLISS The phone at Bob and Barney Erkins' home 10 miles north of Bliss rings constantly with calls — from places like Peru, England, Japan and other foreign countries throughout the world.

From their home on the sagebrush covered desert, the Erkins write and publish an international seafood trade letter that gives people in the fish industry insight into current and future market trends.

A highly specialized research service, Erkins says his seafood letter circulates to large restaurant chains, major corporations and governments in the United States and more than 40 other countries.

One edition of the Erkins Seafood Letter is prepared for U.S. circulation and another edition is written for the European trade market.

Among the subscribers to this monthly trade letter, notes Erkins matter-of-factly, are the governments of Australia, New Guinea, Canada and the European community of nations; leading corporations like General Mills, Mitsubishi, Warshawer, and Neslees; food distributors like Safeway, Kroger's and A & P, and restaurant chains like Red Lobster, Arthur Treacher's, Long John Silver's and Slausers.

To some it may seem strange that a seafood market analysis is produced in the midst of the southern Idaho desert, but Bob Erkins is no ordinary business man.

Erkins has been involved with the trout industry for more than a quarter century. The former owner of Thousand Springs Trout Farms north of Buhl, Erkins says he made many invaluable world contacts during his years in the fish industry. These contacts form the resource base which enables him to put together an in-depth market analysis of the seafood industry.

Erkins originally "purchased" an interest in the seafood letter in 1975 from a business associate and friend who founded it in 1967. He took complete control of it in 1977 when his partner retired.

The Erkins Seafood Letter begins with a consensus view of what's happening in the industry and then offers detailed market news. The letter provides anyone buying or selling seafood with comments, opinions, graphs and statistical charts about catches, markets, imports, supplies and other market information.

Bob Erkins relaxes in his home north of Bliss

At the start of the third week in each month, Erkins rises early and holes-up in his office — a small building set, ironically, on a tiny island in a hot water pond outside his home.

After reading market information for the previous month and year, he begins a day of marathon telephoning. Using a WATS line, he calls seafood experts throughout the country to try to measure the current pulse of the industry.

"I start (about 6 a.m.) calling the eastern United States and Canada," Erkins says. "As the sun comes across the country, I will work across the country. I will call the Midwest next, and then the West Coast. I will do this for a couple of days."

From the interviews he conducts with high-level industry experts, Erkins puts together a composite picture of what's happening in the seafood industry. The simple reason the Erkins Seafood Letter has succeeded while others have failed, he says, is because his market projections have consistently proven to be on the mark.

"We are right-most of the time," he says, "and we are ahead of the markets and that is why our news letter steadily grows."

Each week Erkins says there are usually five to 10 inquiries about the market letter, which costs $200 for a year's subscription in the U.S. The European edition costs $240 for six issues.

Along with the many inquiries about the seafood letter, Erkins says he receives dozens of questions about trends in the general food market. As a result, the Erkins Food Service Letter was born in 1977. Similar to the seafood letter, this publication presents a general market analysis of the dairy, meat, poultry, and seafood industries.

Sometimes, too, the questions asked of Erkins have very little to do with food or fish. A recent call, for instance, came from an insurance company official who wanted to talk about the seafood financial market. The company was debating whether to loan money on some fishing boats and the official wanted information to help weigh the risk on the loans.

Another inquiry came from a seafood plant executive in the Philippines. He was looking for a plant general manager and wondered if Erkins could recommend anyone.

When he first began producing the market letters from his home north of Bliss, Erkins recalls another query from the United States Post Office. The market letters had increased postage sales so dramatically in the tiny Bliss post office that regional postal officials from Boise made a trip to the town's post office to double check the bookkeeping.

Still, Erkins says he receives some puzzled looks when he meets market letter subscribers and they ask where in the world is Bliss, Idaho.

"Mostly they say, 'Ah, Bliss, Idaho! What a delightful place that must be to live,'" Erkins says. "I smile quietly and I tell them I live 10 miles north of Bliss. Then they ask how big is Bliss and I say 130 people."

Women in Crisis

Women's movement brings new problems

By JUDY KLEMESRUD
©N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — The big black and white banner proclaimed "Women in Crisis Conference." It prompted a few quips from the men across the hall at a legal seminar, but it was anything but a joke to the 1,500 women (and a few men) from 47 states who gathered in New York City for three days last week to tackle women's problems.

Alcoholism. Drug abuse. Prostitution. The battered woman. The problems of lesbians. The single mother. The displaced homemaker. Older women. Rape. Incest. Abortion. Depression. Stress.

These and other problems of women, which have been focused upon sporadically since the birth of the women's liberation movement in 1966, were all discussed, debated and dissected at the conference at the Sheraton Centre. It ended Saturday afternoon, after the group passed a resolution condemning "the recent federal budget cuts, which will affect human services programs."

Jane Velez, the conference administrator, said its purpose was to establish "a national referral network, so that professional people across the country will know what services are available to help women, and where they are."

"Women in Crisis," billed as the first national gathering of its kind, was sponsored by the Project Return Foundation Inc. and the School of Social Welfare at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. It drew psychiatrists, social workers, psychologists and experts in the fields of drug abuse, alcoholism, mental health and the justice system, who work directly with troubled women.

Many of them said the problems of American women were being intensified by the changes wrought by the women's liberation movement.

"Woman is in a period of crisis today because of the unusual changes she is undergoing," Eleanor Holmes Norton, commissioner of the U.S. Equal Opportunity Commission, said in a rousing keynote address.

"In a single generation, there has been dizzying change," she added. "Woman has been converted from housewife to worker. The housewife role has virtually disappeared."

She said that such rapid changes contributed directly to the escalating use of drugs and medication among women; the increase in smoking among teen-age females when other population groups are cutting down; the increasing crime rates for women and the mounting divorce rate.

"We are in a period of role re-definition where stress is inevitable,"

Mrs. Norton said.

The conference featured 116 different workshops, including the popular "Learned Helplessness: How Society Creates the Dependent Woman." It dealt with women who protect themselves and get what they want through a facade of learned helplessness, like Blanche Dubois of Tennessee Williams' "A Streetcar Named Desire," with her famous line, "I've always depended on the kindness of strangers."

Dr. Penelope Russlanoff, a Manhattan clinical psychologist who played Jill Clayburgh's therapist in the film "An Unmarried Woman," said learned helplessness led to such things as depression, anorexia, bulimic, alcoholism, drugs and sexual problems.

At almost every panel, statistics were mentioned that caused some women in the audience to gasp.

Among these: Two-thirds of patients who seek psychological help are women, yet 90 percent of all psychiatrists and 67 percent of all psychologists who treat them are men. One out of every three women sees a professional, about mental health problems, while only one out of seven men does. One out of four women lives on an income of less than $4,000 a year, but one out of 18 men. Four out of every 10 teen-age girls will become pregnant, and one out of four will keep the child. Female doctors have the highest suicide rate among women, one in every 15 deaths. Women now make up half of this country's estimated 10 or 12 million alcoholics. Women take 50 percent more tranquilizers than men.

As a panel on "Women and Stress," Lois Sigman, a social worker at the Wheeler Clinic in Plainville, Conn., told the audience that stress was "a political problem rather than a medical problem."

"The caring and nurturing roles of women are exploited, and not given support services," she said. "Institutions, not women, should have to care for retarded children, disabled husbands and elderly parents."

She added that industries do not take into account the dual roles that women play, which often cause them stress. "We need more flexible jobs, where women can go to work after their children go to school," she said. "As it is now, the fear of stress-related diseases often deters women from achievement."

There was much discussion at the conference on how to motivate the alcoholic woman to seek help. Nancy G., a recovered alcoholic, said at one workshop that she thought children could be a significant factor in persuading their mothers to stop drinking. She added that her own daughter had brought her into a treatment program.

"Children could bring literature home from schools," Nancy G. suggested. "They can really get to you, maybe faster than the agencies. They already bring home antismoking literature and say, 'Don't smoke! Why can't they also say, 'Please don't drink so much?'"

One of the workshops dealt with a once taboo topic, incest. Social workers from around the country recounted an increasing number of case histories of girls who report being sexually abused by male members of their families.

"If we don't move fast, this kind of illness is going to get out of hand," said Florence Koniak, a nurse and therapist for an incest group at Odyssey House in New York. "In California, they have a pedophile society, with 2,000 members who want to lower the age of sexual consent to 12."

In a panel on "Strategies to Project Women Into Leadership Roles," one woman rose in the audience and said in an emotionally distraught voice that it was not good strategy for a woman to tell a male job interviewer that she was not going to marry and have children. "I started doing this because I thought it would help me get a job," she said. "But then they think you're a lesbian, and the discrimination against you is just as powerful as if you were going to leave the corporation to have a child."

At the same panel, Maj Fant, of Sweden's Ministry of Social Affairs, told the audience, "You must stress the father's responsibility if you want to get ahead in your career. In Sweden, a woman gets six months off from her job after she has a baby. When she gets pregnant, she says to the man, 'Are you willing to take half the time off?' If he says no, she has an abortion, because she doesn't want to stay away from her job that long."

As a result, she said, Sweden's birthrate is dropping, "and men are complaining how victimized they are in their careers."

The final speaker, Judge Lisa A. Richeite of the Court of Common Pleas in Philadelphia, drew a standing ovation after she told the audience how she had opposed her family's macho Italian tradition to go to law school and have a career. She said that as a result, she had suffered a midlife depression and had to be hospitalized.

"It was caused by guilt — the guilt women in this society are made to feel because of their achievements," she said. "This is something we have to face."

Losing an airline ticket expensive

By MICHAEL J. CONLON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many consumers apparently don't realize the risks involved in losing an airline ticket, or how long it can take to get their money back.

If you do misplace a ticket, here's what happens:

- Although it varies from airline to airline, you may have to buy a replacement on the spot to continue your trip.

- If you do have to buy a replacement, you must file a form with the airline to get a refund for the lost ticket. A processing fee is usually charged, perhaps $5. The actual return of your money can take weeks.

- If someone finds and cashes in your lost ticket or uses it to take a flight, you are liable for the money involved. Since many tickets are good for up to one year, you could wind up owing the airline money months after you either got your refund or a replacement ticket.

- Charging your ticket on a credit card eliminates the chance that someone can turn it in for cash. In such cases, the airline will simply credit your account if anyone attempts to cash in the ticket.

- The airlines do try to flag lost tickets in their computer systems to prevent them from being used by unauthorized persons; but traffic is so heavy many do not get caught. In addition tickets are interchangeable among airlines, opening the further possibility that someone using a lost ticket can escape detection.

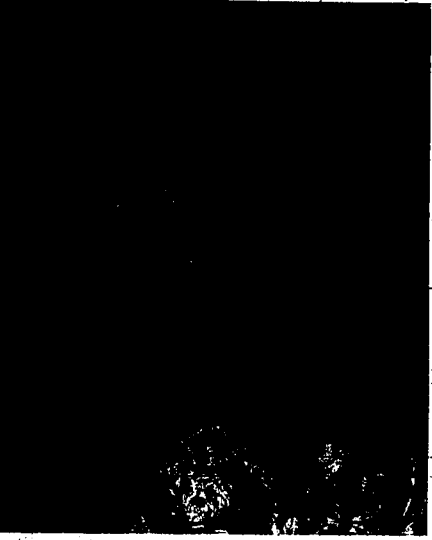

- "A ticket is like money," said a spokesman for United Airlines. "It doesn't matter whose name is on it."

- There are differences among airlines on how lost tickets are treated.

- U.S. Airlines, formerly Allegheny Airlines, says it will issue a replacement ticket free if the passenger bought the original ticket from that airline and is holding a confirmed reservation.

Working residencies offered in graphics and photography

KETCHUM — Many visiting artists in graphics and photography are scheduled to take part in working residencies during the Sun Valley Center's summer programs, June 25-August 24. Rather than traditional classroom teaching, the artists will complete a body of their own new work while in residence at the Center. Students will assist the artists, learning by interaction and observation in an informal atmosphere. Some demonstrations and slide lectures will be scheduled and the Center has again planned for Monday evening seminars at the Community School — preceded by barbecues and volleyball on campus — to supplement studio work.

Several interdisciplinary workshops have been arranged. Graphic artists Charles Gill of the California College of Arts and Crafts; Irwin Hollander from Wayne State University and Michael Bravo of Humboldt State University will be in residence during July 1-6. A photo/printmaking workshop with photographers Robert Fichter, who teaches at Florida State University, and Evon Streetman, from the University of Florida in Gainesville. Students will work with photographers, printmakers or combine the media. As the artists work, their assistants will observe methods of professionals as well as learn new techniques which they can use during the second month of the program for their own work. The Sun Valley Center Gallery plans to exhibit art from this "Alternate Spaces" workshop, July 21-31. The work will then become part of the Center's collection.

In August, Connor Everts, chairman of the Graphics Department at the Cranbrook Academy of Art, will conduct a workshop in which ceramic printing plates will be made for use in relief printing. Everts' residency is supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Other visiting artists in the graphics program include Nancy Stonington, who is conducting two watercolor workshops, and Trude Stretton, chairperson of the fashion illustration department at the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York, who plans a two-week fashion illustration workshop, June 18-29. Janet Alling, who has exhibited extensively in the East and taught at the Brooklyn Museum School, will give two drawing and painting workshops, July 9-20 and July 23-August 3.

The Photography Department will also host several visiting artists in addition to those listed for the "Alternate Spaces" workshop. Peter Vincent, a photography teacher at Idaho State University, who has given many workshops at the Center, will teach a one-week black and white course on the zonic system and fine printing, July 9-13. Chris Cardozo, who received a law degree from the University of Minnesota and is a collector, dealer and photographic consultant, will teach a three-day slide and the laser workshop, July 29-31. During the week of July 3-August 3, John Divola will give a color photography workshop. Carl Toth, on the staff of the Cranbrook Academy of Art, has been scheduled to present an advanced workshop August 6-10.

Summer fun finds in valley

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Whether it's bluegrass or horseflesh, Magic Valley promises a host of 1979 summer activities aimed at pleasing just about every interest.

A string of parades, rodeos, pioneer celebrations and arts and crafts exhibits are but a few of the events scheduled for the summer, months.

Among the highlights are the Rupert July 4th celebration, the Filer Gem and Mineral Powwow, the Twin Falls Arts and Crafts Fair, the Old Time Fiddlers concert in Shoshone and the Southern Idaho Regional Appaloosa Show and Sale in Jerome.

Independence Day has been a major event in Rupert for five decades, and plans indicate the city's 53rd annual July 4 celebration will be no exception. Among the events scheduled are a rodeo, July 2, 3 and 4, beginning at 8:30 p.m. at the fairgrounds, and a July 4th parade beginning at 11 a.m. Rodeo tickets are $3.75 for adults and $2.75 for children.

Other related events include partumint horse races, starting at 1 p.m. on July 1, at the fairgrounds. Tickets are $2 for adults. Children under 16 are admitted free.

The Filer Gem and Mineral Powwow features gem stones from all over the United States including stones from Hawaii and Indian artifacts. The show was originated by the Richard Anthis family of Twin Falls three years ago. They were inspired by visits to gem exhibits in other states.

"We've just been rockhounds for years and have gone to many rock shows, and we decided to put a show on in Idaho," Linda Anthis said.

The gem show will be held July 13, 14 and 15, from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. at the Filer Fairgrounds. There is no charge for admission. Although most exhibits will be for display only, Anthis said dealers from the United States and Canada will be conducting some business on an informal basis.

Anthis said the show will feature some 40-50 displays, as well as a gold panning demonstration by the Gold Prospectors Association of America, and entertainment by the Old Time Fiddlers at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

The annual Old Time Fiddlers Jamboree, scheduled for July 8, 9 and 10 at the Shoshone City Park, is now in its 12th year. Admission is free. The show begins at 10 a.m. each day and runs "until the crowd lets up," says Betty Newby of Shoshone.

The fiddlers form a multi-state group famous for some of the finest fiddle playing in the country, Newby added. Anywhere from 50-100 musicians attend and play anything from bluegrass to birthday songs.

"You name it and they will play it," Newby said.

The event has been known to draw audiences as large as 5,000. It is sponsored by the Shoshone Chamber of Commerce.

A traditional summer event, the Twin Falls Arts and Crafts Fair begins its 20th year in the city park. The fair is set for July 14-15 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. each day. Admission is free.

Local artists and craftsmen will be selling their wares which include watercolor and oil paintings plus a large group of handmade products including pottery, jewelry and sculpture.

Proceeds from an entry fee paid by the participants will be donated toward the Harry Eaton Memorial Scholarship at the College of Southern Idaho.

Rounding out the summer will be one of the largest Appaloosa horse shows in the state. The Southern Idaho Regional Appaloosa Show and Sale, scheduled for Aug. 3, 4 and 5 at the Jerome County Fairgrounds, will feature as many as 300 horses.

Admission is free. The show begins at 8 a.m. each day and concludes at midnight.

Among the highlights will be a sale of Appaloosas on Aug. 4 beginning at 7 p.m., a youth show Friday featuring horses trained by youngsters, and two adult contests simultaneously occurring Saturday and Sunday.

The show is sponsored by the Magic Valley Appaloosa Horse Club. Refreshments will be available.

'Voices' speaks subtly of love

By SHELLY KINZEL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Several weeks ago, I mentioned that filmmakers could expect to see a steady stream of love stories in the coming months. Happily, a delightful one with subtlety, warmth and humor has arrived at the Twin and Jerome cinemas. Entitled "Voices," this sensitive film explores the relationship between a young rock musician and a deaf schoolteacher.

Drew Rothman (Michael Ontkean) is hungrily seeking his first big break as a rock singer. In the meantime, he drives a delivery truck for his family's rundown laundry in Hoboken, New Jersey. Surrounded by the clamor of music and a loud, uninhibited family, Drew lives in a world of sound.

Rosemarie Lemmon (Amy Irving), a pretty, fragile schoolteacher, lives in a world of silence. Deaf since the age of six, she has been continually sheltered by an over-protective mother (Vivica Lindfors). Although she has a good profession as a teacher of the deaf, she has many secret longings and aspirations which have not been fulfilled.

When she and Drew inadvertently meet, their separate worlds collide. There is at least one spark, but there are also many obstacles. Drew's shaky future, her mother's opposition to the match, and the very real problems of a non-hearing person in a hearing world all threaten their vulnerable and tender feelings.

It is a tribute to the writer and director that the film refrains from maudlin sentimentality and attempts to honestly depict a difficult situation. The love story, which is in itself compelling, is even more interesting because it is played against a colorful ethnic backdrop. Drew's family is composed of three generations of Rothmans — his old-world grandfather (Herbert Berghof) who has very modern ideas, his gambling father (Alex Rocco) who is never out of debt, and his younger brother (Barry Miller), a street kid who is never out of trouble. The four personalities clash in some of the film's most lively and humorous scenes.

We also view Rosemarie's homelife which is less volatile and more tense. Her mother's concern and constant vigilance are readily observed in several taut, well-written scenes. These glimpses of family life not only add to the rich atmosphere of the film, but make the love story more meaningful and plausible.

As the young lovers, Michael Ontkean and Amy Irving are irresistible. Ontkean, with his Travolta-like vulnerability and sex appeal, gives a dynamic performance as the emotional, brash would-be rock star. His character is perfectly contrasted to the shy, subdued young woman portrayed by Irving with exquisite delicacy and intensity.

"Voices," which marks the feature debut of director Robert Markowitz, could be accused of tugging at the heart strings. Personally, I don't mind this as long as it is honest tugging and not manipulation.

Talk of tugged heart strings! An almost comical tear-jerker also opened last night at the Twin Cinema. Like "Voices," "Hanover Street" is a love story, but unlike "Voices," this syrupy feature about a World War II love affair is ridiculously riddled with clichés. Step right up folks — you will see: Love, Passion, Adultery, Guilt, Bravery and Sacrifice on such a large scale that you may be forced to giggle.

From Lesley-Anne Down's gushing tears to the sentimental music which soars to dramatic crescendos at appropriate moments, the film is reminiscent of many of the "oldies" which starred performers like Ronald Colman and Greer Garson. The problem however, is that a new film made in an obviously out-dated style seems anachronistic and unbelievable.

"Hanover Street" even has all of the improbable situations and twists of fate so prevalent in the classic melodramas. Harrison Ford plays an American Air Force officer stationed near London where he meets Margaret Sellinger (Lesley-Anne Down), a British hospital aide married to a peasant but staid upper-class chap (Christopher Plummer). They fall passionately in love at first sight supposedly because "this was a time of passion" and also because she is bored by her pleasant but staid husband.

He, by the way, just happens to train secret agents, and just happens to volunteer himself for a dangerous mission at the same time that our American pilot is asked to fly that mission. And guess what — their plane is shot down and the two men just happen to be the only survivors, and must complete the mission together. I'll let the reader fill in the (sob sob) conclusion.

Harrison Ford is attractive in the role if you like the boyish, inarticulate type, although his mumbling is sometimes a strain on the listeners. Lesley-Anne Down is quite beautiful, but she does little more than cry her big blue eyes out. Christopher Plummer is by far the most sympathetic character with some dimension. Despite the talents of these performers, "Hanover Street" is still hard to take seriously. One also wonders why a filmmaker would bother with such "old hat" material when there are so many vital themes of today which are virtually unexplored.

MARILYN MONROE
...script-driven ?

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN —
MORE ABOUT MARILYN: The last minute rewriting of the script of her last movie may have been the final straw that pushed Marilyn Monroe to an overdose of pills and death. In "Flashback," Nora Johnson's biography of her screenwriter father Nunnally Johnson, she recounts the circumstances behind Monroe's last film, "Something's Got to Give." Johnson says director George Cukor, who disliked Monroe, ordered a full rewrite of Nunnally's script. Marilyn objected and had trouble coping with Cukor's antagonism. She was already very depressed and Johnson says it may have been her inability to handle the conflict that led to her suicide.

Q: I know Paul McCartney's father died about three years ago. Is he close to his stepmother? — G.E., Peoria, Ill.

A: They were never really close although Paul's father Jim and Angie McCartney were married for 12 years. The final wrench came last year when Paul got furious with his stepmother when she opened a pop music management agency. He accused her of trying to cash in on the McCartney name and they haven't spoken since.

Q: Not long ago you mentioned that actress Susannah York was about to marry a British college professor. Has that wedding taken place? — Augusta, Ga.

A: No wedding yet. Dr. Nick Humphrey and Susannah did move in together but it didn't quite work out. Right now, each has his own place. Friends think that Humphrey, who is writing a book, couldn't get any work done because of Susannah's children, Orlando, 5, and Sasha, 6. We'll keep you posted.

Q: How is Diane Keaton coping with all the success that's been coming her way lately — things like being recognized in public? — B.T., Bangor, Maine.

A: She's handling it very nicely but she prizes her privacy. When Diane realizes she's been spotted in public she assumes an assertive stance and fixes on the person with a stern gaze. This startling eyeball-to-eyeball contact is very effective in preserving her privacy. With this treatment, nobody bothers her.

Q: Now that Gene Cooney has finally agreed to do another James Bond film, I wonder if anyone knows why he didn't continue making them with his old outfit? — N.S., Grand Rapids, Mich.

A: Two reasons: He did get tired of doing the 007 films. But more than that he was furious that the original producers, Cubby Broccoli and Harry Saltzman, would never give him a share of the profits. This time, with a new production company, Cooney is involved in the script and the producing chores as well as playing Bond.

Q: Do you think the movie "Love at First Bite" will revive George Hamilton's career? — O.M., St. Louis.

A: George's Dracula spoof will most certainly alter his previous image in the movie colony — that of a somewhat frivolous playboy with a minor movie-TV career. We can recall attending a testimonial for producer Bob Evans at which George was the target of some rather nasty ribbing. Now, that "First Bite" is a box-office hit, George's fortunes are on the rise — so high, that he's planning a movie about Zorro, a character previously portrayed on the screen by the likes of Douglas Fairbanks Sr., and Tyrone Power.

Q: Settle an argument. I say you can always tell a rich girl and doesn't Al MacGraw come from a moneyed background? — T.O., Englewood, N.J.

A: In Al's case you're wrong. Yes, she was raised in Pound Ridge, a chic Westchester community but the family was far from well-to-do. Her father, who died last year, was an artist who never made a great deal of money. Al was a scholarship student at Wellesley and worked as a waitress. She has one brother who is a carpenter.

Q: Am I mistaken or has Prince Phillip given up playing polo? There used to be so many pictures of him on the polo field and now you never see them. — V.H., Newark, N.J.

A: Phillip, who just turned 58 this month, has been forced to give up his beloved sport because of severe arthritis in his wrists.

Gossip

Q: Any chance of Patty and Maxine, the two surviving sisters of the legendary Andrew Sisters, getting together again? — D.T., Jacksonville, Fla.

A: If you mean in person, better forget it and stick to their vintage records and movies. There just won't be any up-dated versions of "Beer Barrel Polka" — not in the immediate future, anyway. Patty, who is 59, and Maxine, 61, are not on speaking terms. But a friend says they could be singing together again if they could get rid of the bitterness between them. Laverne died in 1967.

TV BREAK: A friend visited rock star Alice Cooper at his Beverly Hills home and noticed that there seemed to be quite a few TV sets. When asked about it, Alice confessed he had 22 sets from an eight-foot jumbo to a three-inch mini and what's more, he has the sets going around the clock.

Q: Each time I view Dick Cavett hosting his TV talk show, it somehow comes through that he's a frustrated ham. Correct? — P.R., Lansing, Mich.

A: Judging from Cavett's antics at last month's Lincoln Center Film Society testimonial honoring Bob Hope, I would certainly agree. Dick proved he still hears the roar of greasepaint, showing up for rehearsals wearing a pair of tap shoes. Dick covely confided that he'd love to get together with Hope for a soft-shoe routine, but nobody bit. And later, the performer could be heard around—the set before show time, singing several Jeanne Moreau songs in French!

TV show draws honor to Kitty O'Neil

LOS ANGELES — Kitty O'Neil, premier Hollywood stuntwoman who has been deaf since birth, was presented with the Volia Award by the Alexander Graham Bell Association for the Deaf May 4 in ceremonies at the National Geographic Society in Washington, D.C.

Miss O'Neil came to the attention of the Bell group through the CBS Television Network's motion picture-for-television, "Silent Victory: The Kitty O'Neil Story," which was broadcast in February and starred Stockard Channing (Miss O'Neil performed the dangerous stunts).

The Alexander Graham Bell Association for the Deaf is a non-profit organization established in 1890 by Alexander Graham Bell to encourage the teaching of speech, speechreading and the use of residual hearing.

Miss O'Neil was taught to lip read by her mother, who was instrumental in founding the School of Listening Eyes for deaf children in Wichita Falls, Texas. Having set a woman's land speed record of 618 mph driving a rocket-propelled car, her next goal is to best the man's land speed record of 738 mph.

Of her deafness she has said, "Deafness is not a handicap; it's a challenge to overcome."

Michael Douglas: The Son Also Rises

Establishing a career in show business isn't easy for everyone, but it's especially hard when your father is Kirk Douglas. Michael says being Kirk's son gave him publicity but also meant a lot more was expected and demanded of him. He gave up his detective role in The Streets of San Francisco to pursue his dream of film-making four years ago. Douglas has succeeded with both One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest and China Syndrome. Michael's most recent successes, however, are in his private life. Read all about them this week in FAMILY WEEKLY.
