

SALT ratification campaign begins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter told Congress and the nation Monday night SALT II is "the most detailed, far-reaching, comprehensive treaty in the history of arms control" — and failure to ratify it "would be the height of irresponsibility."

In a grueling, marathon day, Carter wound up his summit with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, signed the pact in Vienna, flew home, stopped briefly at the White House and raced to Capitol Hill to address a joint session of Congress and a nationwide television audience.

He thus parlayed the glamor and publicity momentum of the Vienna summit into a climactic pitch for Senate ratification of the treaty, addressing an audience that included a strong bloc of men dedicated to kill the pact and already accusing the Soviets of trying to "blackmail" the Senate into acquiescence.

"Its provisions are interwoven by the give and take of the negotiating process. Neither side obtained everything it sought.

"But the package that emerged is a carefully balanced whole, and it will make the world a safer place for both sides."

As for possible Senate rejection, Carter said:

"It would be the height of irresponsibility to ignore the possible consequences of a failure to ratify the treaty."

Even as Carter flew home from Vienna, however, anti-SALT senators were condemning the treaty as a sell-out and vowing it will never win ratification without such substantial amendment that Carter will have to go back to square one and renegotiate it with the Russians.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., foremost SALT critic within Carter's own party, joined Republicans in rebuking Brezhnev for presuming to warn the Senate against attempting any such amendments.

"Brezhnev's warning will boomerang against SALT II, Jackson predicted, "because it is threatening the clear limitation of ratification ... They're already trying to do a little blackmailing."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., chief voice-counter for pro-SALT forces, conceded as Carter flew home that SALT opponents may have as many as 30 votes right now — just four short of the one-third-plus-one bloc that could thwart ratification.

Cranston estimated pro-SALT forces number about 58 — nine short of the 67 needed for a two-thirds ratification vote.

Already to the full list of consequences already cited many times by Carter and his advisers — a spiraling arms race, rising defense expenditures, East-West tensions, other nations jumping into atomic weapons production — the president Monday night added a new one:

"Rejection would be a damaging blow to the western alliance," he said.

"If the Senate were to reject the treaty, America's leadership of the alliance would be compromised, and the alliance itself would be severely shaken."

The details of the treaty are complex but the fundamentals of the treaty, he said, "are not so complex."

"When all is said and done," he went on, "SALT II is a matter of common sense."

It reduces the danger of nuclear war, he said, by placing equal limits on each side's nuclear arsenal. It makes future competition "safer and more predictable;" it slows and even reverses the momentum of the Soviet arms buildup; and it allows the United States to concentrate on building up conventional and allied forces.

"The treaty enhances our ability to monitor Soviet actions," he said, "and it leads directly to the next step in controlling nuclear weapons."

Carter, summing up, said that the new treaty was "not a favor—we are doing for the Soviet Union," but rather, "a deliberate, calculated move we are making as a matter of self-interest—a move that happens to serve the goals both of security and of survival, that strengthens both the military position of the United States and the cause of world peace."

President Carter, Leonid Brezhnev exchange signed SALT II treaties

Senators' approval probable

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church said President Carter made it obvious Monday night that for civilization to continue nuclear limitation must be realized.

"I think the president made it clear that the survival of our civilization depends upon bringing this insane nuclear arms race under control," the Idaho Democrat and chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said.

"Now the Senate must assess the treaty: Is it evenhanded in preserving our strategic position? Is it verifiable by our own means? If, on the evidence, the treaty meets these two tests then it would clearly enhance the security of the United States and should be ratified."

Earlier, Church said the treaty will be ratified, but not until the Senate tacks on some language of its own.

"President Carter has said the Soviets will not accept a Senate-amended version of the nuclear weapons limitation treaty.

Church says he recognizes the treaty is delicately worded, but he indicates the Senate's reservations will be added to the agreement.

The Idaho Democrat said on KTVB's Viewpoint program it is too early to predict whether the Senate will ratify the treaty. Counted by many as a likely supporter of the treaty, Church insists he has not made up his mind regarding how he will vote on it because he has not read the treaty.

"I think it depends on two key factors," said Church. "First, that our close examination of the treaty leads us to conclude that it's evenhanded and protects the American position as far as the strategic balance of nuclear weapons is concerned. Then, if we find that to be the case, the second question is, is it verifiable?"

Carter was conciliatory — saying "I come in a spirit of patience, of hope and of reason and responsibility" — but, with his very first words, he cast the SALT II ratification issue against a stark, grim backdrop of possible nuclear war.

"The truth of the nuclear age is that the United States and the Soviet Union must live in peace — or we may not live at all," he said.

"From the beginning of history, the fortunes of men and nations were made and unmade in unending cycles of war and peace ... My fellow Americans, that pattern of war must now be broken forever."

"In the age of the hydrogen bomb," he said, "there is no longer any meaningful distinction between global war and global suicide."

The president carefully avoided any direct reference to what might happen if Senate foes succeed in adding substantial amendments to the treaty — an issue that became touchy when Brezhnev angered some senators by warning in Vienna that such amendments would nullify the pact.

But Carter raised that issue with between-the-lines references.

"SALT II is the most detailed, far-reaching comprehensive treaty in the history of arms control," he said, adding:

Midwestern dealers call for station strike

Gasoline squeeze spreading in East

By United Press International

Northeast motorists grumbled Monday about the "worst yet" lines of the gasoline shortage.

Gasoline dealers threatened to strike.

At rationing plans were being prepared in New Jersey, the Washington D.C. area and even Texas, the birthplace of the gusher.

While the most serious shortages appeared to be in the Northeast, supplies were tightening across the country and frustrated motorists were not at all mollified by the federal government's claim the lines would disappear later this summer.

Many stations, including some in Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Oklahoma and Georgia, set 45-gallon purchase limits, and to discourage topping off, at some stations there were even $10 minimums.

In Illinois and Pennsylvania, gasoline dealer groups urged station operators to close for three days at the end of the month to protest government regulation of gas prices. The executive board of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association asked dealers to join in the shutdown June 28, 29 and 30.

The Pennsylvania Service Station Dealers Association will shut down at noon June 28 to protest the current gasoline situation, the president of the organization said.

"It is going to happen," Rudy Moinar said. "We're tired of the Department of Energy, tired of them freezing our prices for the past 3 1/2 years and now letting it all run away. We'll take a four, five or seven-day vacation and maybe then they'll start listening to the people."

An odd-even gasoline rationing plan went into effect along New Jersey's Garden State Parkway at 12:01 a.m. today amidst skepticism the program will work. In Washington, the chief executives of Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia announced that they will put a regional odd-even gas sales plan in effect Thursday for the Washington metropolitan area.

The plan is to take effect at 12:01 a.m. Thursday unless the gas situation improves significantly before then.

The odd-even scheme, whereby owners of cars with license plates ending in even numbers are allowed to buy gas only on even-numbered days and owners of cars whose license number ends in odd numbers buy gas only on odd-numbered days, began in California.

Officials in a number of other states were considering the odd-even plan, but no decisions had been taken.

In Texas, Gov. Bill Clements said he would announce today his plan to stretch gasoline supplies and hopefully end long lines and short tempers at service stations.

While there were long lines at some California stations over the weekend, weekday gas-buying has posed no significant problems.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said last week there will be significantly more gasoline available later this summer and long lines at pumps will disappear.

A spokesman said Monday Schlesinger was still contacting refiners to try to persuade them to turn up their production rate on gasoline and other products, but pare their inventories of crude oil somewhat.

The refinery utilization rate was 87 percent of capacity two weeks ago and dropped to 84.5 percent last week, a fact that caused Schlesinger some alarm.

Idahoans critical of laetrile ruling

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Supreme Court's decision affirming the authority of the Food and Drug Administration to regulate interstate shipments of laetrile brought criticism from some Idahoans.

But other Idahoans said the ruling would have little, if any, impact on Idaho.

One critic was Rep. Rusty Barlow, R-Pocatello. In 1977 Barlow sponsored a measure, which became law, affirming the right of Idahoans to use the controversial substance produced from apricot pits.

"It was a terrible decision, although it wasn't a total loss. They kept intact the lower court ruling letting terminally ill patients have it. Only those people who aren't terminally ill, but who think they might be, could be in trouble. I think it will be real tough to obtain it now in Idaho," Barlow said.

Laetrile was legal in Idaho prior to Barlow's bill, and his measure was sharply criticized by some legislators as little more than a self-serving publicity stunt that merely reaffirmed an existing fact. But in Idaho, as in other states, FDA prohibition of interstate transportation of laetrile has prohibited legal shipment of the substance to Idaho. No company in Idaho now produces laetrile.

But while Barlow was critical of the Supreme Court's action, other legislators said the move would have little effect on Idaho.

"I really can't see that it's going to make much difference," said Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl. Barker, the chairman of the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee, said he knew of no efforts before the court decision to make large laetrile shipments to Idaho.

Individuals using laetrile appear to have been going to California or Mexico to purchase the substance, Barker said, adding the FDA will be unable to stop such trips.

Near death on Oregon beach, sperm whale raises tail in futile gesture

Whales die on Oregon beach; carcass removal next worry

FLORENCE, Ore. (UPI) — Experts from more than half a dozen state and federal agencies tried to decide Monday how to get rid of the carcasses of 41 sperm whales that beached themselves and died during the weekend.

Scientists studied the dead mammals' tissue to try to find out why they died. They speculated the whales may have been infested with a parasite that affected their natural sonar systems.

"If we can't get them off the beach that puts it down to burn or bury them there," said Dave Gemma, public affairs officer for the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality.

He said the Coast Guard reported there were no ships in the area, with the capability to tow the huge beasts off the beach. "There might be a commercial tug at Coos Bay" 50 miles south of Florence that could pull the whales out to sea, Gemma said, "but as time passes the bodies get soft and can't be pulled."

The whales were beached on a half-mile-long stretch of sand within a mile of Florence. They died Sunday despite a massive effort mounted by the whale-saving conservation organization Greenpeace to get them back into the Pacific Ocean.

The last two survivors were given fatal injections to end their suffering more than 12 hours after the giant mammals grounded themselves.

The disposal of the whales was beginning quickly because dead, bloated whales have been known to explode within three or four days and, in one case, a man was killed by the flying flesh, State Police Cpl. William Hart said.

The whales drew throngs of sightseers, some from as far as Portland 175 miles away. Crowds were estimated at 1,500 to 5,000 on Sunday.

State police guarded the area and arrested one man on an accusation of possessing portions of an endangered species. Wolfe said Michael John Watts, 23, of Westlake, Ore., was booked in the Florence City Jail, accused of having 20 whale teeth in his possession.

Bruce Mate, of the Oregon State University Marine Sciences Center, said some beaching incidents involving larger number of whales have been recorded but Florence beaching bears the record for sperm whales, which normally remain in deeper waters far from shore.

Trucker shot as protest reaches 20 states

By United Press International
A trucker was shot Monday and striking independent truckers stepped up their protest with demonstrations, fuel pump blockades and picketing in at least 20 states.

The Independent Truckers Unity Coalition, a group of truckers from 12 states which has called for a nationwide shutdown of all trucks to begin at 11:59 p.m. Wednesday, met with White House representatives to discuss their grievances.

"Nothing has been resolved," said

William J. Hill, the group's spokesman, following the meeting.

"At 11:59 Wednesday night we are going out ... by the end of the week all trucks will be involved."

Acting Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti assured the nation's governors the Justice Department will make every effort to enforce the law and prevent blockades.

"I am asking United States attorneys to work closely with you ... to make certain that the law is obeyed and violence is prevented and that lives and property are fully proected," Civiletti said in a message to all governors.

The truckers are protesting rising diesel fuel prices, the 55 mph speed limit and truck weight limits.

Leaders of the protest said they expect their shutdown to result in empty shelves at some grocery stores this week. Shortages of gasoline due to trucker blockades and picketing were already reported in Alabama and Minnesota.

A survey by UPI showed there were blockades or demonstrations by striking truckers in Alabama, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Texas, Virginia and Wisconsin.

A truck driver was wounded by a sniper Monday as he drove his rig along Interstate 40 near Crossville, Tenn.

Charles R. Martin was grazed by a bullet that crashed through the windshield of his truck. Police said at least four other trucks traveling that highway were hit by bullets. No arrests were made.

The cab of a tractor-trailer was set on fire at the Keystop Truckstop off Interstate 65 near Nashville, Tenn., and a front tire of a truck was shot out in Winona, Minn. A trucker was injured in a shooting on Interstate 90 in Minnesota with a sign on the dummy that said, "Shut Down Now."

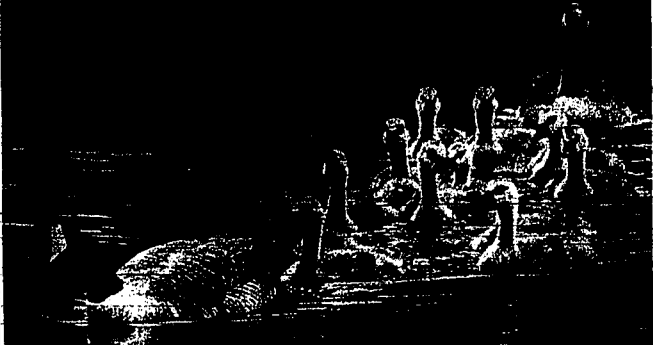

A convoy of about 40 trucks traveled from Atlanta to President Carter's hometown of Plains, Ga., in one of numerous demonstrations by independent truckers.

Alabama state troopers, accompanied by National Guardsmen escorted convoys of trucks hauling primarily gasoline and food stuffs. Troopers reported 11 shootings at p.m. Sunday. No one was injured.

Fuel terminals at truck stops in several states closed voluntarily either in sympathy with the protest or for fear of violence. Others were forced to close because of blockades or pickets around their fuel pumps by striking truckers.

Darter loses a round

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Monday to order the Tennessee Valley Authority to complete the Tellico Dam in Tennessee — despite the threat it would present to the endangered snail darter.

The amendment, to an energy and water appropriations bill, was passed by voice vote with no explanation and no debate. Reporters did not learn until after it passed what the amendment would do.

The amendment was offered by Rep. John Duncan, D-Tenn., who has been pushing for completion of the dam.

Freighter takes plunge

CHATHAM, Mass. (UPI) — A freighter loaded with 3,000 tons of scrap iron sank off fog-shrouded Cape Cod Monday night after colliding with a tanker loaded with asphalt.

All 38 crewmembers aboard the freighter abandoned ship in life rafts and were rescued, the Coast Guard said. An Exxon official said no asphalt escaped from the tanker.

They won't be shot

By United Press International
Bowling to international protests, Malaysia Monday called off its threat to shoot boatloads of new Vietnamese refugees approaching its shores, but it did not rule out the possibility of shooting them if they find someplace else to go.

Prime Minister Hussein Onn, in a message to UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim from Kuala Lumpur, reaffirmed his nation would stick to its hard-line policy of turning back all new refugees and expelling 78,000 already crowded into festering refugee camps if they are not accepted by other countries for resettlement within a "reasonable time frame."

Adair ready to try

CIUDAD DEL CARMEN, Mexico (UPI) — Houston daredevil Red Adair returned to Ciudad del Carmen Monday for a final try at capping a runaway well that has spewed nearly half a million barrels of oil into the Gulf of Mexico.

He went to Houston last week to prepare the equipment needed for an attempt, expected Wednesday or Thursday, to shut off a valve at the mouth of the runaway oil well 153 feet below water.

Bacteria above Venus?

Daily Telegraph, London
LONDON — The clouds of Venus may be inhabited by colonies of living bacteria, say astronomers Sir Fred Hoyle and Chandra Wickramasinghe in a provocative paper published this week.

Their conclusion is surprising, because the Venusian clouds are composed largely of droplets of sulphuric acid, which are believed to be more concentrated than the acid in a car battery.

Fallout kills sheep

©New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The deaths of thousands of sheep after a series of atomic tests in Nevada in the spring of 1963 can definitely be attributed to nuclear fallout, according to a private report for the first time makes a direct scientific link between the deaths and radiation.

The report also said that some of the dead sheep had been grazing in areas where the reported fallout was within the safety levels that had been set by the Atomic Energy Commission.

High court to hear Idaho fish suit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court said Monday it will not summarily dismiss an Idaho lawsuit against Washington and Oregon but that it will hear oral arguments instead.

Dismissal was recommended in a Feb. 2 report by the court's Special Master, Jean S. Brotenstein.

Idaho instituted the suit to protect its diminishing runs of spring and summer chinook salmon and summer steelhead in the Columbia-Snake River system.

The court assigned the case to the special master who recommended dismissal after receiving evidence the U.S. government would decline to join as a party in the action.

Sandinista drive smashes northward

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Sandinista guerrillas smashed northward Monday along the Pan American highway to within nine miles of Rivas, which they plan to make the capital of a provisional Nicaraguan government.

In Washington, the State Department said Monday that while U.S. military intervention in the embattled Central American nation is "extremely unlikely" it could not be ruled out, and asked for a meeting this week of the Organization of American States.

Dismissal was recommended in a Feb. 2 report by the court's Special Master, Jean S. Brotenstein.

The court's decision to hear oral argument in the Idaho case is a good sign that the combination of the constitutional issues and biological dangers have dramatized the need for immediate action by Idaho Atty. Gen. Dave L. Gray and Mr. Brotenstein. "Idaho seeks only a fair hearing and a fair share of the fish. We are grateful to the court for the opportunity to clarify by argument and possibly protect by action the continued health of Idaho's salmon and steelhead runs."

Treaty won't prevent nuclear war, put lid on arsenals

Washington — Fewer than 2,000 of the 15,000 Soviet warheads now in U.S. and Soviet arsenals could fall apart the economies of the two nations, end their status as super-powers, and severely threaten their social and political systems, according to a congressional study made earlier this year.

The new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, SALT II, signed in Vienna Monday by President Carter and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, will do little to reduce the size of those nuclear arsenals, lessen the chance of atomic warfare, or curtail the three-decade arms race between the super-powers. The new treaty, provided it is approved by the Senate following debate later this year, will place upper limits on the number of strategic weapons allowed on each side through 1985. It is but a small step, however, in attaining the goal expressed by Carter in his inaugural address 2½ years ago — elimination of nuclear weapons from the face of the earth. The Soviets will have to dismantle 276 old missile sites and the United States will have to destroy 24 outmoded B-52 bombers (already out of service) to comply with the overall limits set by the treaty.

U.S. near mark on counting Soviet weapons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union Monday revealed its exact number of nuclear weapons — showing U.S. intelligence estimates had been close to the mark in most cases. U.S. negotiators who put together the SALT II package said it is unprecedented for the secretive Russians to divulge details of their strategic military arsenal, even though the United States routinely makes such information public.

The Soviet figures published Monday as part of the SALT II package are included in two memos attached to the treaty itself. The treaty puts a limit on the number of weapons each side can have and the memos show where each side is starting — or in State Department terms, what the "data base" is.

When SALT I was signed in 1972, the Soviets refused to say outright how many missiles they had, but permitted U.S. intelligence estimates to be used — a diplomatic signal the estimates were correct.

The figures show that since November, the Russians have added to their arsenal 48 land-based sea-based launchers equipped to fire missiles with multiple warheads. Such missiles are known as MIRVs — multiple, independently targeted re-entry vehicles.

with MIRVs on Nov. 1, 1978, and that the number has now grown to 608. The memos show the Soviets have 950 submarine-launched missiles, and that the number equipped with MIRVs grew by 16 — from 128 to 144 — since November, indicating deployment of one new submarine with 16 launching tubes.

The Soviets said they have 156 heavy bombers, or six more than U.S. intelligence estimated.

The controversial Backfire bomber is not included in the total because Russia has pledged it will not use it as a long-range weapon — that is, one which could reach the United States.

The price of your building is one thing.

The cost is another.

You know it's true. The cost of owning a building doesn't stop the day the building is completed. It actually costs more to maintain some structures over the years than it does to put them up.

That's why we build with total projected performance in mind. Uppermost among these factors is energy-efficiency. We offer certified insulation values for our installed roof and wall systems, and provide the data for true building requirements, instead of overdesigning for calculated requirements.

We can do this because our company, working with a leading research institute, has developed a unique method to measure heat penetration of complete roof and wall assemblies, as opposed to prior industry measurements of small, single-piece samples of insulation materials.

Stated simply, we know how much energy it will take to heat and cool your building before we begin to build. Because we design with certified energy information, we are precise about requirements for heating and cooling systems. Frequently this means a smaller, more efficient system.

It all adds up to this: We build buildings that are economical to put up. And economical to keep. Call us for the facts.

Name changed, Wayne stayed same

By GEORGE F. WILL
© The Washington Post Co.
WASHINGTON — I became sentimental, more or less, in the late 1940s or early 1950s, the flavor of our awakening was the flavor of Julyfruits. This candy, sold at the movie theaters where we spent Saturday afternoons, had (and for all I know still has) the texture of asphalt and the taste of dime-store perfume. It was a fine condiment for the Westerns we paid nine cents to see.

Even those who hated Julyfruits ate them, just as people who dislike champagne drink it at weddings. Central Illinois 9-year-olds had a noble sense of ceremony, and Julyfruits were part of Saturday afternoon. When we swaggered, blinking, into the sunlight, mounted balloon-like Schwinn and rode off, we were experiencing (or so we are now assured, by very-assured people) the joys of "male bonding."

The art of the Western movie has fallen upon hard times, and so has the Western world, a correlation that may be a coincidence, although I doubt it. Yet the decline of Westerns did not harm the career of John Wayne, the last cowboy.
At those hearings where congressmen pretended it was an open question whether they would vote Wayne a medal, folks testified that Wayne "symbolized" this or that, usually America. But a symbol takes its significance from its relation to something else. Wayne's significance was that he was Wayne, whether playing the lean Ringo Kid when he was lean and young, or old Rooster Cogburn when no longer young.

After about 1950, people paid the price of admission to see that walk, the heavy heaving on a burge on a rolling ocean swell. Or to hear that voice, an instrument designed by God for the purpose of saying, "I wouldn't reach for that six-shooter if I were you, pilgrim."
Wayne is not the only star who wound up playing his own persona. In "Anatomy of a Murder," Jimmy Stewart plays Jimmy Stewart playing a small town lawyer. And Stewart has raised self-caricature to an art in his Firestone commercials.
Stewart's voice is like a Holiday Inn sign, or golden arches, or any other famous trademark. It is something by which fast-moving people in a fast-changing, continental nation get their bearings. Whether you think the thing to which the trademark is attached is good, bad or indifferent, at least it is a bit of America that is holding still. It promises the same experience you had a few days ago, or a few thousand miles ago.

McDonald's current slogan is "Nobody can do it like McDonald's can." The pronoun "it" means "be McDonald's." Coca-Cola says, "It's the real thing." That is, Coca-Cola is Coca-Cola. And say what you will, Julyfruits are the real thing; the best Julyfruits money can buy.
Nightclub impressionists "do" John Wayne, trying to counterfeit the real thing. They do not "do" Robert DeNiro. As an actor, DeNiro is a rich sundae of possibilities. But his persona is just vanilla ice cream. He can be a fine actor because his persona does not overpower his roles.

In the end, no one cared a fig what role John Wayne filled. Most Wayne movies were shot somewhere gorgeous, like Monument Valley, Utah and most of the movies called to mind Alexander Woolcott's review of a play: "The scenery of the play was beautiful, but the actors got in front of it." Wayne did not spoil the view; he was part of it, a great slab of scenery, like some of those rock formations in Monument Valley, and sometimes about as expressive and predictable.
When Joan Didion, the writer, first met Wayne she was startled to realize that his face was, in a sense, more familiar to her than her husband's face. The fame conferred by movies and television often is odd. First, and briefly, a person may be famous for doing something, for flying space, or anchoring the evening newscast, or whatever. But soon he or she may be famous for being; for being famous.

Think about it: What does Walter Cronkite do? Yes, of course, he does the news nicely. But primarily he "does" Walter Cronkite: the punctuating eyebrows, the inflections of a very papal Pope, the slightly lurching cadence of an engine with a cold carburetor. He does it brilliantly—it's the real thing.
John Wayne was an unmistakably nice man who, like many nice men, knew exactly what he was and liked it a lot. And he did the best John Wayne anyone ever saw.

Pros prevail for Western Governors meet

For four long, balmy days last week, 14 U.S. governors met, counceled, listened to speeches, made speeches, chatted with the press and dined on hefty Idaho meals in the pleasant surroundings of the Elkhorn resort near Sun Valley.

The heavily-covered event was the Western Governors Conference, an annual meeting sponsored by an organization called the Council of State Governments. Governors attending the meeting did so because their states are members of the council.

The conference itself cost approximately $75,000. The final results were a flurry of 30 resolutions ranging from promised support of the independent truckers' strike to opposition to the elimination of Amtrak rail passenger service in the West.

Was the conference worth the time and the money? The real answer is not an unqualified yes or no but "the good outweighed the bad."

Chief among the bad aspects of the conference was the sources of funds to pay for it. Nearly half of the conference's costs were paid for in cash or donated in kind by various businesses. About 10 percent of the total, or $7,700, came in cash contributions from oil companies, timber operations and mining firms — who also sent numerous lobbyists to the gubernatorial gathering.

There is little likelihood that the governors attending the meeting could be bought off by the industrial concerns footing the bills. But it does appear questionable when big business seems to pay for the right to send lobbyists to a conference devoted to such topics as energy and wilderness use.

If a gubernatorial conclave is worthwhile to the states, then perhaps the taxpayers should pay the entire bill.

And the conference did offer some value, despite the fact that it ran about one day too long. The governors were offered a rare chance to hear and question federal experts on topics and policies affecting their states. And the governors also had a chance to share their ideas on some of the many common problems they share, including air, land and water use and energy. As many people know, such brainstorming often creates better and more efficient solutions.

But the top benefits reaped by both the governors and the press covering the meet were the informal ties formed. It is always easier to deal with someone you have personally met. It is easier to understand how and why someone thinks and acts, so that better working relationships and understandings can be formed. The governor's conference offered this opportunity.

Dole: political gambler

Field Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.
What makes them do it? There are 200 million of us in this country, and every four years perhaps a dozen men decide, individually, that they alone should be first among us — that they are good enough to be our president. A dozen, and then there is one.

Historians and political writers have informed us of the process itself, the winding down of the dozen to one. But what of the other process — the process that goes on in the souls of the dozen, the illogical combination of ambition, ego, self-confidence, and craziness that makes a man think he should be the one to be allowed to lead us?

One of the dozen is sipping coffee in a half-empty hotel restaurant. His name is Robert Dole; he is a Republican senator from Kansas, and he has announced that he is a candidate for the presidency. In 1976 he was Gerald Ford's vice presidential running mate; now he has decided that he should be the one to have it all himself.

"Anything worth having is a gamble," Dole is saying. "You don't inherit something like this. You have to decide that you want to go after it." But we all take part in our private gambles, his companion says. We all shoot for something. Where does the difference come in, though? What makes a man confident that he should be the president of the United States?

"It's the same in any business or union or professional group," Dole says. "Ambition isn't such a bad word. If you have drive and intelligence, you see something that you want to attain. You look around and you survey the field, and you say to yourself, 'I'm qualified more than anyone else in this race,' and so you decide to do it." Yes, the companion says — but the president of General Motors could make that same statement. And yet there is a vast difference between a man believing he could be president of General Motors and a man believing he should be president of the United States.

"I don't know how to explain it," Dole says. "I want to do this. I know someone's going to fail, and when the failure comes it's not going to be an ego builder. I'm willing to take my chance with the American people. If I can't do it, then I'll lose." The presidential campaign will be full of promises about how each candidate will make a better world, the companion says. But in the heart of a candidate himself, how much true desire is there to change the world, balanced against the secret but understandable desire to live in the White House and have Secret Service escorts and fly in Air Force One?

"I do drive past the White House every day on my way to work," Dole says. "And I look at it, and I think to myself, 'I could be living there in two years.' I haven't thought about Air Force One. One day I mentioned it. You can't just go after the power; blind ambition isn't going to get you anywhere.

"Oh, the feeling of power is exciting. It's heady stuff. During the '76 campaign, when I was running for vice-president, there was the Secret Service, and someone would pull up in a car and I'd jump in the back seat and be whisked away... but the end comes very soon. After the election the Secret Service men say, 'So long, senator, see you next time.' I remember saying to one Secret Service guy, 'I won't remember how to drive a car once this is over.' And he said, 'You won't have to worry about that for the rest of your lifetime.' He thought we were going to win. But that's not why you want to be president." The power, though — certainly it must stick in the mind. The moment at the national convention, when Dole and Ford stood together on the podium, the music and applause washing over them, the nation watching... surely he must think about it.

"Of course," Dole says. "I'm not even sure I can describe it. It's such a feeling of total exhilaration. Not knowing why it happened, but just knowing you're up there. It's total excitement. And before that, when the president introduces you to the press conference to announce you're his choice... You keep pinching yourself and holding onto it, because you are the guy. You have to believe at that moment that the whole world really must be looking at you. And now he wants that feeling again." The companion asks him if he is disappointed that his candidacy, so far, has seemingly failed to ignite the public imagination.
"When I announced my candidacy, I didn't get a line in Time magazine," Dole says. "I got 12 lines in Newsweek. I wrote a letter to the editors of both magazines. Time said that there was going to be a big story about me, but the story got killed by another big story. Newsweek hasn't answered. That bothers me, that the press in effect decides who the candidates are. A lot of people remember me from the '76 campaign. But some came up to me and ask me if I'm 'Walter Mondale.'" Dole looks around the coffee shop.
"If you could figure out what the people in here are thinking right now," he says, "I bet not a one of them is thinking about politics. If you could figure out how to reach them, maybe you could put it together..."

Pro, con abortion fight continues

©The Boston Globe Co.
BOSTON — On Wednesday they'll arrive with their red roses, their speeches about "Baby Killers," their ten-point plans of action and a full retinue of media.
They have chosen Cincinnati this year, scene of some of the most violent attacks on abortion clinics, as the proper place for the National Right to Life Committee's annual convention.
Among the people who convene surely someone will bring along the latest Gallup poll that shows, once again, that there is a small minority view. And surely someone will also unpack the latest lists of legislative victories.

And herein lies the strange tale. The "right to life" movement, unable to budge national opinion one percentage point in their favor, has had enormous success in pushing state and federal legislation. The anti-choice movement, beset by its own conflicts and dissensions, has become a potent and unified political force.
The facts and figures are a lesson in contradictions, a chronicle of disparities.
According to the Gallup poll in this month's Redbook, only 17 percent of Americans believe that abortion should be illegal under all circumstances. On the contrary, 75 percent of us support a legal first trimester procedure if a woman is pregnant by rape or incest. Well more than half agree that a woman who would suffer physical or emotional damage by her pregnancy should be given a choice.

The right to life people have made no inroads into public opinion. Most of us — 62 percent — haven't changed our minds in years. Of those who have shifted, three out of four are now more accepting of legal abortions, not less.
Change has been more obvious inside the anti-abortion movement than outside it. While "pro-life" people vote as a block, the organizations themselves have splintered. Moderate Marjorie Mecklenburg left the National Right to Life Committee some time ago to form the American Citizens Concerned for Life. Mildred Jefferson left last year after her defeat as president in an election which was "not an amicable one." She now heads a rival group, The Right to Life Crusade, as self-described "commander in chief of the right to life forces."
Others are now part of a controversial move linking anti-abortion issues with right-wing causes.
On the other hand, they can count impressive victories. Fifteen states have now passed constitutional amendments which would make virtually every abortion illegal and every woman who had one a premeditated murderer.
Government no longer pays for the abortions of Peace Corps volunteers, military women or the dependents of military men. Last week, the governor of Massachusetts, red rose in his lapel, signed a bill prohibiting state-funded abortions for the poor, the stateworkers, public school teachers, and county employees unless the mother would die.

On Wednesday, the very day that the convention opens in Cincinnati, the U.S. House of Representatives is expected to vote on the most restrictive Hyde Amendment yet — one that would take away Medicaid funding even for the victims of rape and incest.
How do we reconcile the fact that the anti-choice movement is state-mated or losing ground in the minds of the American people with the fact that it is winning in the legislatures?
It is, very simply, the difference between two polls: an opinion poll and a polling booth.
When Dick Clark was defeated "by pro-life forces" only 40 percent of the Iowans voted. Again and again, abortion has been the only single issue for anti-choicers. Legislators are afraid of getting what is called "The Full Treatment": leaflets at Sunday masses, phone banks, massive mailings, the works.
In contrast, the pro-choice people have been less well organized, less active and more "reasonable." They have had more than one question in mind at the voting booths.
But they, too, are changing. In the past two years the membership of National Abortion Rights Action League has grown from 500 to 65,000, with a budget of a million dollars. They have nothing to rival the structure provided anti-abortion forces by the Catholic churches (although the Catholic laity is as deeply divided on this issue as any other group). But they now have an effective network able to organize the sort of effort planned this week in both Cincinnati and Washington.
The pro-choice forces are learning the hard way that it doesn't do any good to be in the majority, if it's silent. Only one poll counts. This week they will be sending Congress a new message printed on tens of thousands of postcards: I'm pro-choice and I vote.

Bomb shakes rock singer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A cherry bomb explosion on stage shook rock star Rod Stewart so much, he had to stop performing for 10 minutes Saturday night.

The show was stopped for 10 minutes while Stewart recovered from the shock, police said. No one was injured, and no arrests were made, officers said.

Curiosity costs CIA man job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA disclosed Monday it fired an employee who went through a re-sifted John F. Kennedy post-mortem file held by congressional investigators, but denied the man committed burglary.

An agency spokesman said the dismissed officer, Regis T. Blahut, had exercised "curiosity and poor judgment" in thumbing through an album of exhibits belonging to the House Assassinations Committee. Blahut "was dismissed last summer" shortly after the incident occurred, the spokesman said.

"When it was discovered, we assured ourselves there had been no collusion inside or outside the agency" in any plot to undermine the panel's investigative efforts, he said. He added that the CIA assumes the incident closed and the Justice Department had not been consulted "since no law was broken." He denied a Washington Post report that the incident had involved "surreptitious entry of a combination safe" and "rifling of files."

Blahut, the spokesman said, was assigned as a security officer to guard CIA documents loaned to the committee in its two-year, $5.6 million investigation of the assassinations of Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

"He was in a room designated as a security area where all materials were kept," including a safe for our own material," the spokesman said. "There was no break-in of their safe."

Blahut, the spokesman said, "looked at a book of photographs which he was not authorized to do and which had been left out. He did not break into the safe to find it."

Shah not worrying

CURRNAVACA, Mexico (UPI) — Despite reports that Islamic gunmen have been dispatched to Mexico to assassinate him, the deposed shah of Iran has not beefed up his security force, a spokesman said Monday.

"Babamian security had no report on terrorist activity and to the best of my knowledge neither does Mexican intelligence," said Robert Arma, a New Yorker who became the shah's spokesman when the monarch fled to Nassau three months ago.

Asked about reports in a Tehran newspaper over the weekend that Islamic Fedayeen gunmen were trailing the shah, Arma said, "Our intelligence has given me no reports on this, nothing at all except for these outrageous reports."

The newspaper Bamdad quoted Iranian officials as saying the would-be-assassins had followed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi from Nassau to Mexico hoping to win the all-expenses-paid trip to Mecca that has been offered to anyone who kills the shah.

Spies draw prison terms

DUSSELDORF, West Germany (UPI) — A husband and wife convicted of spying for East Germany were sentenced to prison terms Monday for stealing military secrets that caused "irreparable" damage to West German and NATO security.

Lohar Zula, 38, was sentenced to 12 years behind bars and his wife, Renate, 39, received a 6-year sentence from presiding Judge Franz Oppermann, who said the couple used their defense ministry jobs to steal thousands of pages of confidential and secret documents and pass them on to the communist East.

The judge said Lutze betrayed 281 sensitive defense documents to East Germany, including a full analysis of the state of West Germany's armed forces in 1975.

What's what

Despite which hand you are, left foot slightly larger than right—or is it really important?

Can you name the only U. S. president to have been born in a hospital? You've got it, Jimmy Carter.

Already mentioned that the medicines are now using laser beams to get rid of tattoos. But failed to report they're also using them to remove birthmarks and to treat varicose veins. Cost is a fifth that of surgery, I'm told.

The University of Texas Research Institute has found out something you may already know: If you let someone do you a favor, that person will like you a little better for accepting said favor. If you decline, no matter how politely, that person will like you a little less.

FIRST FRANCHISE
Q. What was the first hamburger stand franchise?
A. White Castle. More than 60 years ago, A Wichita Kans., cafe proprietor named Walter Anderson squashed a mealball with a spatula and put it into a sandwich. Excellent, excellent, said the buyer, or words to that effect. Customers multiplied. Anderson with associate Edgar Waldo (Billy) Ingram borrowed $700 and founded White Castle.

Q. Do all major league baseball players have to wear a batting helmet when at the plate?
A. All but one. Bob Montgomery, Boston Red Sox catcher, joined the league before that rule went into effect, so was permitted to choose whether to wear such a helmet. He decided he preferred a regular cap with a metal insert.

SHAKESPEARE'S SPORTS
If you don't think William Shakespeare was into sports, consider these quotations: Hockey: "Gente puck come hither." ("A Midsummer Night's Dream.") Baseball: "You bid me steal." ("Othello.") Bowling: "Mercy on us, we slip." ("The Tempest.") Golf: "Give me the iron." ("King John.") Basketball: "Hear the shrill whistle." ("Henry V.") Auto racing: "Let me clutch thee." ("Macbeth.")

"Rhapsody in Blue" was one of George Gershwin's brighter ideas, you may agree. He was riding a train from New York City to Boston when the notlog hit him. The clackety clack of the steel wheels was the inspiration.

The bark of all trees makes more ashes when burnt than does the solid wood.

Women explore their values

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Women need to decide exactly what they want to do with their lives.

Whether they are fulltime homemakers or career-oriented and whatever their age, it is important for women to "tune in" to themselves and discover their real interests and abilities.

Such ideas and discussions to further this goal were the highlights of a day-long workshop here Friday entitled "You—the Emerging Woman."

The event, which drew some 75 women, was the first of a series of free workshops sponsored by the College of Southern Idaho's Displaced Homemakers Program headed by Cherri Briggs.

While practical tips regarding the availability of vocational counseling and financial aid were offered, the workshop dealt with the much broader problems faced by women today, such as breaking out of the old stereotypes of a woman's "proper" pursuits and understanding one's own value system.

Ms. Briggs said further workshops will go into depth this fall in assisting women to explore their vocational needs.

Two women who direct the Women's Programs at Spokane Falls Community College in Spokane, Shirley Richardson and Betty Hammond, served as guest leaders and keynote speakers.

Ms. Hammond said that for years females have been "put in boxes" with their lives neatly departmentalized between childhood, school, work and/or marriage.

"We used to believe the myth that if a person made all the right choices in their first 30 or 40 years—they were home safe," she said. "But while this sometimes works out, it does not hold true for everyone."

She stressed that too many women are held back in pursuing their natural interests or talents by fear of failure, "for which we pay a heavy price."

"As a child, we tried new things constantly, crawling, falling, learning to swim, eagerly starting school. But soon we come up against failure in some area and perhaps were told that girls don't do well in science for example, so we avoid the difficult things and stick with the safe things we know we're good at."

Emphasizing the "terrible price we pay for fear of failure" in limiting our lives, Ms. Hammond said, "nowhere is it written that if we make a decision — for job or school or anything else — we can't stop or change direction."

"Nothing is cast in cement," she said. During the workshops in the afternoon participants shared personal experiences as they explored how values affect their choice of jobs and lifestyles and identified the ways their interests influence their choices.

A third workshop led by Wendy Reininger, CSI vocational counselor, discussed how women can become aware of skills they do not know they have.

The majority of women attending the workshop were young, with a sprinkling of middle aged and older women. Several young mothers brought their infants with them to the sessions.

Marie Scott, a Twin Falls psychotherapist, urged women at the workshop on values to "get in touch with the imaginative part of you which brings us alive with ourselves."

She said it is important to identify what our real interests are because often they are not what "we feel we should be doing."

One young woman related how she had grown inwardly when she finally realized a long-held ambition to study history.

Ms. Briggs said the first requirement to grow and reach one's potential must come from within, but that the outside things "help make us happy."

She urged women to determine how physical and environmental restrictions keep them from pursuing their real interests. Characteristics once considered exclusively masculine or feminine now are known to be part of the personal makeup of either sex, she also said.

The Spokane women's program leaders pointed out in the session on values that people's values change and women have to be adaptable, but it is important to find work and a lifestyle that fulfill one's own value system and not a system imposed by another family member.

Participants were asked to list their favorite activities and then analyze how these things fitted with their value system. They urged women to take risks and not to limit their interests to the things their mothers or fathers liked doing.

"This can mean learning—a new activity at the risk of making oneself appear a laughing stock. Both Ms. Hammond and Ms. Richardson testified to the growth resulting in their own lives when they "risked" learning something new.

During the morning general session Ms. Briggs said there are now 30,000 vocations open to women and "most of us couldn't even name 1,000." She said some 2,000 jobs are available as a spinoff from the 20 vocational courses now offered at CSI.

Vocational counselors from the college and other agencies will be on the patio between the Vo-Tech building and the Shields buildings at CSI between 4 and 6 p.m. Friday to be available for women interested in obtaining job information.

Another workshop, entitled "Expanding Horizons for Women," is scheduled at the Vo-Tech building June 29.

Dr. Lamb Calcium intake not problem

(Newspaper Enterprise Association)
Dear Dr. Lamb: I am a person who wrote about osteoporosis or dissolving bones you suggested increasing quantities of calcium intake to strengthen the bones. Hardening of the arteries is usually caused by cholesterol and calcium build-up in the arterial wall. How does a person solve the osteoporosis problem?

Also, how wise is it for a person with hardening of the arteries to take vasodilators? Is it not possible that by dilating the arteries some of the plaque in the artery wall will break off, causing an embolus and resulting in damage?
Dear Reader,
It's true that if you have fatty cholesterol deposits in the wall of the artery, in the course of time calcium deposits may occur. This is a reaction to the injury caused by the fatty-cholesterol substance in the artery to begin with.

The calcium intake in your diet will not affect this any more than your calcium intake will influence the development of ordinary osteoarthritis. There's plenty of calcium in your bones that can be mobilized and deposited in the wrong places such as in a fatty-cholesterol plaque as you mentioned.

It follows that increasing your calcium intake to help prevent osteoporosis will not cause fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries or calcification of the arteries or any other form of calcification process within the body. It's a good idea to use fortified skim milk. Why? Because it contains little, if any, fat or cholesterol. If you were to consume large amounts of whole milk, you could consume too much fat and cholesterol. But the calcium is not the problem in either product.

To give you some general guidelines about diet in preventing fatty-cholesterol deposits, I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

The fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries don't usually break off.

Dear Abby Fuelish to let engine run

© The Chicago Tribune—N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR ABBY: My friend and I are having a friendly argument. She says that while waiting in a long line for gas, you can conserve gas by turning off your engine and starting it up again as you inch along.
I say you WASTE more gas that way. Can you get the facts?
CALIFORNIA PROBLEM

DEAR CALIFORNIA: Although Californians are the first in the nation to suffer gas pains, I fear that by the time this article is published it will have become a national pain in the tank.

A spokesman at General Motors says: "It takes very little energy to start an engine that's already warm. You're better off to start it up and shut it down again even if you are stopped for only 30 seconds."
So, don't be fuelish. Turn off your engine while standing still.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is planning her wedding and has asked me to be her matron of honor! I am overwhelmed. In fact, I was so touched I wept when she asked me. Now for my problem: I've attended weddings where the father of the groom was his best man, but I've never heard of the mother of the bride being her matron of honor.

When I told some of my friends about it, they all reacted the same way: "Oh, really? (Incredulous laughter.) She couldn't have been serious!"
Do you think my being the mother of the bride AND the matron of honor would call too much attention to the bride's day?

Should I accept this honor? When I told my daughter I was thrilled that she wanted me but perhaps she should reconsider and ask one of her girlfriends. Instead, she said, "Why, Mom? YOU are my best friend."
What would you do?

BETWIXT
DEAR BETWIXT: I would accept with pleasure.

DEAR ABBY: I hope it's not too late to tell you how I got back with my ex. I was another foolish woman who fled for divorce, hoping my husband would beg me to reconsider. Well, he was as stubborn as I, and before I knew it, the divorce was final. Six months later I decided to dry my tears and put my life together, so I took a course in creative writing at the local college. The professor gave us a weird assignment: "Write a letter to your worst enemy and forgive him in 500 words."

I wrote a letter to my ex. It was so good I decided to send him a copy. Immediately after mailing it, I was filled with doubts. I felt like a fool, but it was too late.

Two days later he was at my door—all smiles. He had been as miserable as I, and wanted to try again. Moral: Some people write better than they talk.

Girls State under way this week

NAMPA — "Idaho Is What America Was" is the theme of the 33rd annual session of Girls State, meeting at Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa this week.

Nearly 300 high school junior girls from throughout the state of Idaho arrived Sunday morning on campus to participate in the mock government sessions sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary.

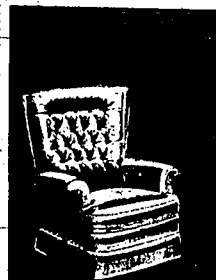

The girls, who will be studying local, county, and state government, will elect a governor and other state officials Wednesday. By Friday, they will have met in their legislative bodies and political parties and will spend the day at the statehouse in Boise debating bills which they have written.

Speakers at this year's session will include many state officials including Gov. John Evans, who will speak at the inauguration ceremony on Thursday evening. Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Idaho, Allan Shepard, who will swear in the newly elected state officials, and several state legislators.

Several Magic Valley girls have been elected to top offices at Girls State in recent years. Karole Greenawald of Gooding was elected governor in 1977. Janet Burkhardt of Twin Falls served as lieutenant governor in 1975, and Kris Strawser of Twin Falls was elected governor in 1977 and served as governor at the 1978 session. Nancy Atkinson of Twin Falls was elected a delegate last year to attend Girls Nation in Washington, D.C., and will attend the Girls State session this year as a junior counselor.

The sessions will conclude Friday evening with the selection of two delegates to Girls Nation in July.

Caramoor Festival
KATONAH, N.Y. (UPI) — Keynote of this year's June 18-23 Caramoor music festival will be a celebration of the centenary of Ottorino Respighi. It will include the American premiere of his last opera, "Lucrezia," and a new ballet by Robert Weisz to Respighi's "The Birds," danced by members of the New York City Ballet.

Action Line... by Ben McKelway

Unresponsive company draws several gripes

I am a very uptight person, and I am told you can help me. I ordered a plane coater one year ago from Holiday Gifts, in West Ridge, Colo. I never received it. After the year was up, they sent me a card saying they couldn't get my merchandise but to Denvers. I received that, either I would rather have a refund now... Barbara Jo Pearson, Fairfield.

You are one of seven people to write Action Line about this unresponsive company. The other four complaints are similar. It seems no matter what merchandise was ordered, Holiday Gifts was always "temporarily out of stock." The Rocky Mountain Better Business Bureau reports it has received more than 1,700 such complaints. On May 25, Holiday Gifts filed for bankruptcy in Denver. The file number is 78B-1480. Assets were listed as $75,000, and liabilities were $1,800,000. Unsatisfied customers should contact the Bankruptcy Court, 1845 Sherman St., Denver, CO 80202 (phone 303-837-4045) to obtain proper forms and information.

A company called Magic Valley Safety scared me into buying a fire alarm system for my home. It started with a phone call asking me if I would let them come over that night to show a movie on the dangers of fire. The caller, a woman, said I would get a free fire extinguisher. I asked what she was behind it, and she said the group just wanted to educate the public. So I said yes. The movie was very frightening. After it ended, the man started talking about the alarm system. When I said I couldn't afford it, he said, "What's the value of your with the simple, versatile Card.

Use it. Trust it!

Now 15% Instead of 18%

With the Trust Card, you can draw on your line of credit to pay off charge accounts with department stores or other credit cards.

What is the advantage? By using the Trust Card to pay bills, you avoid paying the Annual Percentage Rate of 18%, common with most charge cards. Instead, the Trust Card Annual Percentage Rate is only 15%. Over a period of time, the amount you save on interest alone can be considerable.

*FINANCE CHARGES AND ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATES: If you have no loans outstanding, during the period your billing covers, you will pay no Finance Charge. However, if you do use your Trust Card Credit Reserve, you will owe a Finance Charge. The amount of the Finance Charge will be determined by the balance of your consolidated loan and the number of days that balance has been outstanding. Here's how we compute the charge:

1. We start with the unpaid principal balance of your account at the beginning of each new billing cycle.
2. Each day we subtract payments and credits from this balance and add new loans. This gives us the daily principal balance for your account each day.
3. We then add these daily principal balances and divide by the number of days in the billing cycle. The result is the average daily principal balance for your Trust Card Account.
4. We multiply this average daily principal balance by the periodic rate (0.01095 at 15.00%) to find your FINANCE CHARGE for the billing cycle. That is an ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE of 15.00%.

BACK TO HEALTH

By Michael Haneline D.C.

Every muscle in the human body functions according to messages from the brain, carried by the nerves which connect the brain to all parts of the body. The main nerves run along the spinal column, protected because they are located within the hollow vertebrae of the spine.

Nerves branch out from the spine, passing between the vertebrae. If any vertebra is moved from its normal position, the nerves that pass through or near that vertebra may be pinched and irritated—so, the actual, that, pain, results and muscle function may be impaired.

Chiropractic can find and correct spinal misalignments. Phone for an appointment.

Shoshone Falls park fee lifted

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Shoshone Falls and Dierkes Lake Parks will remain free to the public until at least Sept. 1, the Twin Falls City Council decided Monday.
And on the same evening that it postponed the end of the age of free parks in Twin Falls, the council embraced the century's age by authorizing the city administration to purchase a $69,000 IBM computer for city business uses.
Acting on the recommendation of city attorney Charles Brumbach, the council voted unanimously to repeal its decision of two weeks ago to begin charging a $1 fee for motorists entering the parks area effective June 20.

The council also voted 6-1, Mayor Leon Smith dissenting, to pass a resolution proposed by Brumbach "declaring a need to establish a fee" effective Sept. 1.
In the same motion, the council authorized Brumbach to institute a declaratory judgment action seeking an interpretation of language in the deeds by which the Shoshone Falls Park property was transferred to the city. That language states that the city will retain ownership of the park property only as long as the parks remain open to the "free use and enjoyment of the public."

Brumbach told the council at its work session Monday afternoon that there remains a "degree of uncertainty" as to whether the city could defend a lawsuit brought against it challenging its right to charge a fee for use of the park.
Depending on the interpretation of the language in the deeds, one from the State of Idaho and one from a former private owner, "there is a great likelihood that we could lose that property," Brumbach said.
Brumbach added that the benefits of imposing the fee immediately are not worth the risk of losing the property.

Although nothing in the deed to the Dierkes Lake property requires that the park be free to the public, the council postponed the imposition of fees for both parks because the parks share the same entrance and collecting fees for only one of the parks would be impractical.
IBM submitted the only valid bid to provide a new computer for the city, assistant city manager Tom Courtney told the council.
Burrough's submitted a bid which was found invalid.

Crash damage heavy but drivers unhurt

TWIN FALLS — A two-car collision Friday resulted in $5,000 in total damage to two cars, but both drivers walked away, apparently uninjured, Twin Falls Police said Monday.
James R. Pittman, 32, of Filer was cited for running a red light after his 1976 Chevrolet El Camino struck a 1974 Chevrolet driven by James A. Grammer, 52, of Twin Falls. Pittman was southbound on Shoshone Street East when he collided with Grammer who was eastbound on 4th Avenue East.
The accident occurred at 6:30 p.m. Pittman was cited on the testimony of three witnesses, police said.
Damage to Pittman's vehicle was estimated at $3,000. Damage to the second vehicle, owned by Union Cab of Twin Falls, was estimated at $2,000.

Pickup taken, too

Loss hits $50,000 in Ketchum theft

By JIM SHULL
Times-News writer
KETCHUM — Items valued at approximately $50,000 were stolen from a Ketchum condominium sometime in the past month while the owner was away.
Police Chief Dennis Haynes said the condominium at Horizons Four, owned by Robert E. Flint, was broken into during the last two weeks of May or the first week of June. Missing items include two fur coats valued at $12,000 each, three televisions, a diamond ring, clothing, furniture, and a new 4-wheel drive pickup truck.
"We're interviewing possible witnesses that live in the area, which we're finding very difficult to do because most of them were gone," Haynes said. "Some of the items taken were very heavy, which would have necessitated at least two people carrying them. It seems no one saw or heard anything during those weeks." No arrests have been made yet, and the stolen pickup has yet to be recovered.

Ketchum has the tenth highest serious crime rate among cities in one of three regions in the state, including cities such as Pocatello, Idaho Falls and Twin Falls. According to a crime comparison study conducted by the Idaho Law Enforcement Planning Commission, Ketchum received a 69 percent on the Uniform Crime Index for the first three months of this year. That compares to a 20 percent increase by the Blaine County Sheriff's Department.
"Things like this condominium theft are what help bring us up," Haynes said.

Lilli-Ana Kristensen and five month old Indian leopard cuddle up

Trainer constantly on guard while working with leopards

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Displaying surprisingly long, sharp teeth for such a young cat, Judy, a five-month-old Indian leopard, slinked around the cramped quarters of leopard trainer Lilli-Ana Kristensen's travel trailer.
"She won't bite, will she?"
"You're never sure," Kristensen said as she grabbed the 24-pound cat.
Kristensen, who will perform today at 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. at the Flier Fairgrounds with the Shrine Circus, is one of only two people in the world and the only woman who perform with leopards loose in a ring.
Few people work with leopards, she explained, because: 1) they are hard to get (being on the endangered species list, leopards can only be obtained with government approval); 2) they take longer, four years, to train than other big cats; and 3) they are the most dangerous of the big cats, no matter how long you work with them.
You can never let your guard down with leopards, Kristensen said.
"Lions or tigers usually will attack only for a reason, but leopards 'kill' just for the sheer pleasure of it," she continued. And while lions or tigers will make give some warning, like a growl, before attacking, leopards attack silently. They attack more quickly than other cats, and they prefer to attack from the rear.
And there's no way to train those tendencies out of a leopard.
"They really are born killers you know. You never really take that out of them," she said as she wrestled playfully with the relentless Judy, encouraging play but discouraging moves toward her throat and head.
But, Kristensen pointed out, the sneakiest animals are often the most intelligent and will perform the most tricks. To guard against a possible sneak attack from one of her cats, Kristensen's husband, Svend, stands outside the ring at all times. In her act Kristensen cannot help but turn her back at times on some of the cats. Svend watches those cats, and if he sees a cat tense its muscles in a suspicious way, he calls out that cat's name so Kristensen can whirl and face it, removing the element of surprise and, hopefully, inhibiting the cat.

"They will take you from the front," she admitted, but it's not as likely as a rear attack.
Despite the risk, Kristensen works with unleashed leopards because she does not believe in lying up wild animals. Of the eight leopards she keeps (including one black panther), five were born in the wild and two were obtained in Florida from a breeder. She said the cats she raised have better teeth and are healthier than the wild ones.
Kristensen hopes to develop a different kind of relationship with Judy, one not quite so fraught with fear. She took her from her mother at a Florida wild-animal breeding farm when she was only four days old, and she hopes to be able to trust her enough some day to take her out in public for promotional events. She does not trust her other cats enough to expose the public to them. Judy has been declawed, but Kristensen refuses to remove her fangs.
Although she is aware that Judy, who eventually will weigh about 140 pounds, might become uncontrollable some day, she feels the training attempt, which involves giving Judy free run of the house, is worth the effort.
The only place Judy can't go is into the rear of the trailer where the full-grown leopards live in cages separated by a narrow aisle.
Leopards are far less tolerant of little leopards than humans are.
"If she should get out, they'd kill her," Kristensen said.

Fire fees of cities questioned

BOISE (UPI) — Whether Idaho cities can charge a fire protection fee solely to raise revenue to replace funds being reduced as a result of the new 1 percent source tax law is questionable, the attorney general's office said Monday.
Such a fee, Deputy Attorney General Michael C. Moore said, likely would constitute an unauthorized tax rather than an authorized fee and would be invalid under Idaho's Constitution and statutes.
But Moore wrote Sen. Richard High, R-Twin Falls, that cities might be able to charge a regulatory fee, which would withstand a constitutional test.
"He said it is possible that such a fee also could be charged against otherwise tax-exempt governmental property, since it has been held that the public property exemption under the Idaho Constitution applies only to ad valorem taxes."
High requested an attorney general's opinion on behalf of the Idaho Fire Chiefs Association and the City of Twin Falls, who wanted to know whether Idaho cities can charge a service fee to provide funds for fire protection services in lieu of or in addition to ad valorem taxes.
Moore said under existing Idaho constitutional and statutory provisions, it appears a service fee for general fire protection based solely upon the need for additional revenue would constitute a tax and would be held invalid as exceeding cities' taxing authority.
"However," he added, "to the extent that such a fee were reasonably related to the cost of administering a regulatory ordinance, such as a fire inspection program for public safety purposes, it probably could be upheld under a city's constitutional police powers."
Moore said the Idaho Constitution contains a grant of authority to cities to exercise police powers with respect to regulation of persons or property in the furtherance of public health, safety, morals or welfare without the necessity of express legislative authority.
The fee charged could be progressive or graduated upon any fair, reasonable and equitable basis, the deputy attorney general said.

Thirteen airmen arrested

MOUNTAIN HOME, Idaho (UPI) — Thirteen airmen were arrested Monday morning at Mountain Home Air Force Base for drug trafficking after a three-month investigation by Air Force special investigators.
Capt. George Titus, information officer, said the 13 airmen were arrested in their squadron sections by the Air Force Special Office of Investigation and base police. The suspects will be released to their squadron commanders after being charged.

Titus said the men would be charged through the military courts. No names of the suspects were released. None of the arrested men were officers.

Isbell's appeal refused

TWIN FALLS — Norman L. Isbell of Twin Falls, who received a state prison sentence in 5th Judicial District court here, failed to convince the Idaho Supreme Court the sentence was excessive.
Isbell appealed the sentence pronounced by District Judge James M. Cunningham of Twin Falls but the Supreme Court has turned down the appeal saying the sentence was not excessive in view of the facts and circumstances. The Supreme Court said the district court did not abuse its sentencing discretion.

Isbell pleaded guilty to first degree burglary and Judge Cunningham sentenced him to the State Board of Corrections for an indeterminate sentence of four years.

Tax deadline Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — Juanita Stetler, Twin Falls county treasurer hopes to have $2.6 million in taxes collected by Wednesday evening.
This is the amount remaining to be collected on the 1978 property taxes in Twin Falls county.
Mrs. Stetler said taxpayers who paid only the first half of their taxes last December must pay the second half by the Wednesday deadline. The treasurer said the payments can be made at her office prior to 5 p.m. or they may be mailed prior to midnight on Wednesday. Taxpayers who miss the deadline will be required by state law to pay the taxes plus penalty and interest.

Mobile home owners who did not pay their first installments in December must pay their taxes at the sheriff's office together with penalties and interest costs on the first half.
Real property taxes and second installments on mobile homes are to be paid at the treasurer's office on the second floor of the courthouse between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. week days or mailed to the county treasurer, Box 99, Twin Falls. They must be postmarked no later than midnight Wednesday.

Flood survey scheduled

TWIN FALLS — A survey to determine areas in Twin Falls County that are subject to flooding will be undertaken in the near future by the CH2M Engineers Inc. of Boise.
County Commissioner Ann Cover said Carl Cook of Boise, representing the Federal Flood Insurance program, said his agency has contracted with CH2M to do surveys in various Magic Valley counties. About six months will be required to complete a study of potential flood areas in Twin Falls County, Mrs. Cover said. There is no cost to the county for survey work.
The program will mean residents will be eligible for flood insurance which is not currently available through private insurance carriers. However, the builders of new homes will be required to observe designated flood areas in order to qualify for insurance.

Insurance would be available to builders of new homes only if they meet requirements of building the first floor at levels above anticipated flooding.
County Zoning Administrator Ed Woods said this could bring additional work loads for his staff if county building permits would require enforcement of flood zone building regulations. He said apparently the flood insurance program building restrictions would not apply to canal breaks or other similar accidents. It would involve only live streams and regular run-off from snow and rain.
Determination of flood designated areas is based on history of flooding. An area is surveyed on the basis of frequency of flood occurrence and the highest and lowest degree of damage. A 50 year flood area means one chance in 500 that a flood would occur there in one year.

Harder pinch could bring recession

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (UPI) — A New York economist told Idaho bankers Monday the "pinch is on the consumer", something which could "kill us into recession."
David M. Jones, vice president of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., made the comment during the 72nd annual Idaho Bankers Association convention in Sun Valley.
Jones said that since Jan. 1 increases in personal income have dropped off sharply while the inflation index has escalated. The result has been a squeeze on purchasing power.
Jones also predicted the gasoline price will peak at $1.50 per gallon this year and insisted there is no fundamental supply-demand imbalance. Instead, he blamed what he called the Energy Department's fits and starts policy of ordering, heating oil production one month and gas the next.
He also said food prices are leveling off and that they may even drop slightly, and that the condition of the dollar is improving.
Jones said those indicators point to a continued slow-down in the economy but no depression crisis.
Some 500 persons representing 20 Idaho banking institutions are registered for the convention.

Seven counseling jobs at prison eliminated

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Department of Correction officials are eliminating seven counseling and psychologist jobs at the State Penitentiary because of budget cuts resulting from the percent property tax law. Correction Director C.W. Crowl's seven counselors already have left jobs at the State Penitentiary because said Sunday a psychologist and their jobs at the prison.

Funds back for nuclear waste work

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Monday passed an amendment proposed by Sen. Frank Church to restore $20 million for nuclear waste disposal management programs.

The cut had been recommended by the Senate Armed Services Committee, but the Senate agreed with Church's argument that "the urgency of nuclear waste management programs in the mind of the American public is such that if we are to err in funding for the Defense Waste Management Program, then I would hope that we would err on the side of being too aggressive."

The funds are aimed at programs to deal with the growing stockpile of nuclear waste including long-life, low-level waste stored above the aquifer at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Jerome woman found dead

JEROME — A 33-year-old Jerome woman was found dead of a self-inflicted gunshot wound Monday afternoon in her home, according to Jerome Police Chief Howard DuBois. DuBois identified the woman as Janice Thomas of 525 G St. Mrs. Thomas died of a .243 caliber rifle bullet wound to the head about 11:30 a.m., the chief said.

He said her body was discovered two hours later by her 10-year-old son. DuBois said the family indicated the woman had been despondent and was receiving psychiatric treatment. In fact, she had asked relatives to watch her son and a daughter Monday while she saw a Twin Falls psychiatrist, he said, adding that she never kept the appointment. DuBois said the boy, who is under a doctor's care, had returned home with relatives to pick up some clothes and found his mother's body. Besides her two children, Mrs. Thomas is survived by her husband, Chester.

Martin takes Yank helm

NEW YORK (UPI) — Billy Martin, professing gratitude for his "reprieve" as manager of the New York Yankees and a never-ending loyalty to them, arrived in New York Monday fresh from playing in an Iowa golf tournament, saying, "I did not come here to lose."

Bob Lemon, who replaced Martin 11 months ago following a tear-filled dismissal, was elevated to the position of general manager. Lemon brought the Yankees from a 14-game deficit to a second straight world championship last season.

"I'm really quite happy and grateful as you know," said Martin upon his arrival at LaGuardia Airport. "I did not come here to lose. I'm here to give it my best shot."

Martin's two-year contract for the 1980 and 1981 seasons will be amended to include this season as well, according to Yankee owner George Steinbrenner.

"This was all pre-arranged," said Martin, who told a large gathering of reporters that he's known about the appointment since Friday. "The name of this game is patience. We're right there now and I think we can do it. We've done it before and we'll do it again."

Steinbrenner admitted Martin's rehiring for the first time while his new manager was en route from Chicago. Martin's imminent return has been reported since Friday night.

When asked if Reggie Jackson would pose any sort of difficulty, Martin chuckled and said, "No, I think we all realize Reggie is an important part of the club."

... general manager

The irony of Martin replacing the man who so successfully replaced him last season prompted Martin to say, "He's (Lemon) my friend. If you remember, I originally hired him as part of my pitching staff. We're still buddies now."

Martin will take over a Yankee club that is 34-31 and in fourth place in the AL East, eight games out of first place. The Yankees are just one game ahead of Cleveland and Detroit, who are tied for fifth.

"The past few days have been extremely difficult for all of us," Steinbrenner said in his statement. "Bob Lemon is a very close personal friend and a fine man. He and I sat together in Texas to discuss the entire situation. He was in agreement with my assessment and felt as I did that in the best interest of the team, perhaps a change was in order."

"We will welcome him into our front office family. He did a magnificent job for us in 1978 in a miracle finish which will probably never again be duplicated."

Steinbrenner said Martin will take control — beginning with Tuesday night's game against the Toronto Blue Jays at Yankee Stadium.

"Billy is prepared to assume command of the team tomorrow night and I am hopeful that he will be able to turn the ballclub around and make a run at the championship," said the Yankees' owner. "We have had several meetings and while at times our discussions may have seemed repulsive to each of us, I feel that we are on the same wavelength for what will be necessary to turn the team around. I am confident that Billy can get the job done. I have made a decision which I felt was necessary for the team and for our fans. Time will tell whether it was the right one."

Martin's first change is expected to be the return of long-time friend Art Fowler as pitching coach.

'Superbrat' John McEnroe wins Queen's tennis tourney

LONDON (UPI) — John McEnroe discarded his "Superbrat" image Monday to carve out a 6-7, 6-1, 6-1 victory over Paraguayan Victor Pecci in an incident-free final of the $125,000 Queen's Club Grasscourt Tennis Championships.

One were the tantrums that had earlier in the week cost him two penalty points as he defeated the South American in one hour 50 minutes on the court where he made his pro debut 12 months ago.

The 20-year-old New Yorker, apart from poking his tongue at photographers when he received the winner's trophy, behaved impeccably and his tennis, after an uncertain start, was equally well controlled.

The final was umpired by Roy Cope-Lewis, with whom McEnroe had threatened never to appear on the same court again.

McEnroe said later, "It didn't have very much significance, but obviously I can't afford to make such gestures."

"I don't think the criticism of me is justified. Everything has been blown totally out of proportion. I have been really disturbed this week by the amount of noise around the courts. I hadn't played a tournament for a month and small things distract me. You are taking away something from tennis. If you turn everybody into robots.

"If I thought I was 100 percent wrong I would apologize. I haven't apologized to any one at Queen's."

McEnroe's triumph earned the WCT and Masters Champion another $17,000 and confirmed his form as second favorite for Wimbledon.

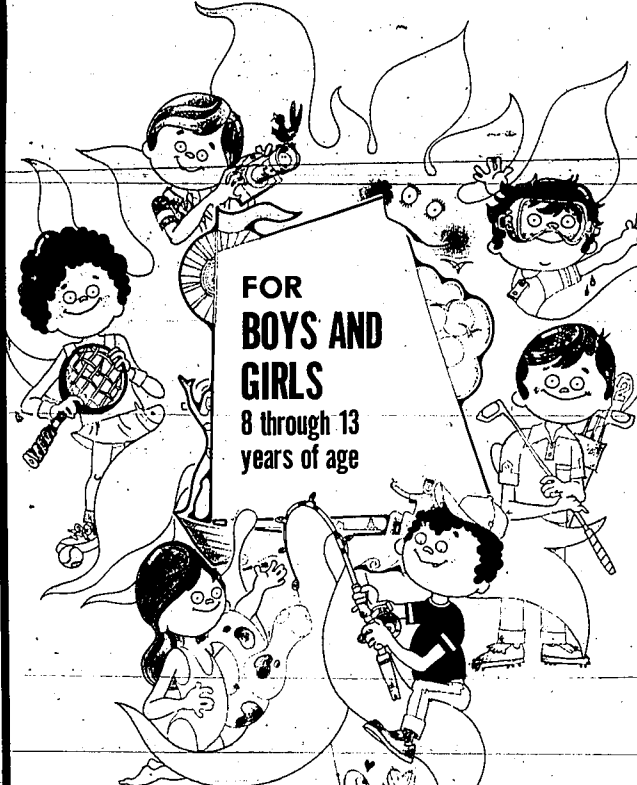

Commenting on the seedings for Wimbledon where he has been sandwiched between Sweden's defending champion Bjorn Borg and Jimmy Connors, McEnroe said, "I am surprised Jimmy Connors hasn't been seeded two instead of me. Connors has already won Wimbledon and he has got the experience, but maybe the reason is that there is a doubt he may not turn up."

"I didn't think I had a chance of winning Wimbledon in the last two years, but now I think I am capable of going all the way. I am not going to worry about my image, it's my tennis that matters. Playing on grass really takes it out physically and I'm glad I have got a week to recover."

Briefly in sports

Stockton wins VIP

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Dave Stockton sank a 30-foot putt to birdie the ninth hole and went on to defeat Tom Watson Monday by one stroke in the VIP golf tournament at the University of Iowa's Flinking golf course.

Stockton finished the 18 holes with a 7-under-par 65 to defeat Watson, the early clubhouse leader. Watson carded a 66 in the event, the richest one-day pro-am in the nation.

Police investigate slaying

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Police began an intensive investigation Monday into the slaying of Vic Weiss, a prominent local businessman and boxing figure whose body was found in the trunk of his Rolls-Royce at a nearby hotel.

Weiss was found last Wednesday following a meeting with Jack Kent Cooke, the former owner of the Los Angeles Lakers, Los Angeles Kings and Inglewood Forum, and Jerry Buss, the new owner of the sports empire. Weiss was reportedly negotiating an agreement to have University of Nevada-Las Vegas basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian take over the Lakers' coaching post.

Soviets top Italians

TURIN, Italy (UPI) — The Soviet Union established itself as the favorite to capture the European Basketball Championship Monday by downing Italy 80-87 and landing a final match against Israel, a team it has already defeated.

In another game contending toward the first through sixth places in the tournament, Czechoslovakia defeated Spain 107-100.

Nehemiah slows down

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Renaldo "Skeets" Nehemiah, suffering from jet lag, captured the 110-meter hurdles with a poor time of 13.66 seconds Monday in the international track and field competition at Stockholm's Olympic Stadium.

Nehemiah, fresh from a 13.19 second win in the AAU championships in Walnut, Calif., arrived late Sunday night and had not adjusted to the time change when he was called to start in the hurdles.

"I felt it in my body and then I also missed two of the hurdles badly," the 20-year-old world record holder from Scotch Plains, N.J.

Nehemiah hopes he will break his world record of 13.00 seconds during his European tour.

Borg top Wimbledon seed

LONDON (UPI) — Bjorn Borg, aiming for his fourth consecutive Wimbledon title, predictably was seeded No. 1 Monday for next week's 33rd Championships, but John McEnroe said he thought he should have been the top seed.

"I'm surprised," said the New Yorker, who was seeded second. "I thought I would be above him. But I suppose he has won Wimbledon one or two times."

McEnroe beat Borg in the WCT final in Dallas in May — the last time they met — and actually holds at 3-2 winning edge over the Swede in their head-to-head record.

The seeding list announced by the All England Lawn Tennis Club held few surprises but one of them was McEnroe's No. 2 spot above Jimmy Connors, who slipped to third — the first time in six years he has not been seeded to reach the final.

McCovey player of the week

NEW YORK (UPI) — San Francisco Giants first baseman Willie McCovey, who hit four home runs last week, including his 513th which put him ninth on the all-time list, was selected National League Player of the Week Monday, the league announced.

McCovey, 41, the oldest player in the major leagues, also drove in runs, and had a .381 batting average, while surpassing Hall of Famers Ernie Banks and Eddie Matthews in career home runs.

Campbell admits endorsement

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Houston Oiler running back Earl Campbell said he agreed to sign a letter supporting the Republican presidential campaign of former Gov. John B. Connally at the request of University of Texas Athletic Director Darrell Royal.

But Campbell conceded, "Personally, I don't even vote. I wouldn't know John Connally if he walked in my front door. I'm not into politics."

The names of Campbell and Royal were among 38 prominent on the John Connally for President National Campaign Committee.

Royal said he contacted Campbell about serving on the committee at the request of Connally's office.

"I didn't pressure him," said Royal, who recruited Campbell to Texas and coached him for three years.

Rodeo board elects Davis president

LAKE CHARLES, La. — Shawn Davis, rodeo coach at the College of Southern Idaho, was elected president Monday of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association.

Davis is in Lake Charles for the national collegiate rodeo finals and was elected during the association's annual meeting.

The CSI coach was serving this year as president of the Intermountain region of the rodeo association.

Meanwhile, competition began for the CSI team in the week-long rodeo finals.

Coach Davis reported that his team "was sitting as good as anybody right now."

In first day action for CSI, Delwin Amy rode third in the saddle bronc with a 65 score. The first place cowboy has 69 and second has 66.

Rye Brower, with a 63, stands fifth in the bareback; Monty Webb, despite an outstanding 4:37 clocking, rates seventh in the steer wrestling; and Calvin and Delwin Amy are in the top 10 in the team roping with a 10.3 second time.

Brower was bucked off his first ride on the bull, while Downey Qualls of Twin Falls has yet to ride.

The first go rounds will end tonight, and then the cowboys will begin the second round of rides Thursday, Davis said.

The finals are slated for Saturday evening.

"It's hard to say right now just how we stand," said Davis. "Last year, we started out real fast, but that hasn't been the case so far."

CSI led the 1978 national rodeo almost up until the final night of action before falling to fourth place.

Jazz name Nissalke to head team

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The owners of the Utah Jazz ended two months of speculation Monday, naming Tom Nissalke as head coach of the newly moved NBA franchise.

Jazz General Manager Frank Layden had been attempting to woo Nissalke away from the Houston Rockets since April, to succeed Elgin Baylor. Layden was at first rebuffed by Rockets owner George Maloof. But when Layden officially became Jazz general manager June 1, Maloof changed his mind, allowing Layden to talk with Nissalke.

Nissalke is returning to the state where he coached the Utah Stars of the defunct American Basketball Association four years ago. He has been with Houston for the past three seasons, coaching the Rockets to a 47-35 record last year and a berth in the 1979 NBA Eastern Conference playoffs.

Maloof purchased the Rockets at the end of the season and had named Nissalke's assistant Del Harris as coach, offering Nissalke the general managership. But Nissalke declined, saying he couldn't accept a one-year contract.

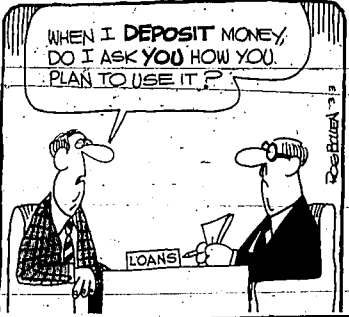

The terms of the Jazz contract were not disclosed, but the 44-year-old coach said it was a multi-year pact that was the "best and fairest" in his 12 years as a professional coach.

Overhaul damaged airliner

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Transportation Safety Board told Congress Monday the DC-10 that crashed in Chicago in the nation's worst air disaster probably sustained critical damage during an overhaul in March.

Chairman James King said the American Airlines DC-10 which lost an engine and crashed on takeoff from O'Hare Airport — killing 273 persons — apparently suffered a major crack in a wing mounting during the overhaul.

The tragedy resulted in the grounding of all 138 DC-10s operated by U.S. airlines pending a complete investigation.

Safety board experts reported a procedure used by American Airlines to overhaul the pylon which attaches the engine to the wing could have damaged the structure.

King told a House Government Operations subcommittee he may call for Federal Aviation Administration approval for an airlines' maintenance practices.

The FAA came under heavy criticism at the hearing from consumer advocate Ralph Nader and Air Line Pilots' Association President John O'Donnell, who accused the agency of being more interested in airlines profits than safety.

O'Donnell said aircraft approved by the FAA do not have "the desired level of safety but the minimum that the manufacturer can induce the FAA to accept."

NOTICE OF LETTING

Bid proposals will be received by the IDAHO TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT only at the office of the IDAHO TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT, DIVISION OF HIGHWAYS, 3311 West State Street, Boise, Idaho, until two o'clock p.m. on the 10th day of July, 1979, for the work of reconstructing the base at 81 locations of the Buhl Highway District and furnishing aggregate for base in stockpile, known as Idaho Federal Aid Project No. 808-42000, (FOR ADDITIONAL INFORMATION CONCERNING THIS PROJECT PLEASE CALL THE RESIDENT ENGINEER AT 206-750-3000) Key No. 2206 in Twin Falls County.
