

Truck strike turns rough

By United Press International

Truckers and motorists angered by gasoline shortages battled police in Levittown, Pa., Sunday and 30 people were hurt in the bloodiest episode of a truck strike that has sent food prices skyrocketing and slowed industry.

Consumers faced possible food shortages, workers were confronted with layoffs and highways became shooting galleries as the nationwide strike by independent truckers entered its fourth full day.

About 20 truckers blocked an intersection in Levittown — a Philadelphia suburb — Saturday night to protest short fuel supplies. Motorists, angered when a nearby service station closed before they could purchase gas, joined the truckers and area residents, hearing about the protest, looked to get in on it too.

Police were summoned to clear the intersection and were greeted by a hail of rocks, beer bottles and cans.

Authorities marshaled new forces. Police in riot gear moved through the crowd with billy clubs and police dogs early Sunday and finally dispersed the angry crowd. At least 30 people, including nine policemen, were injured. None was seriously hurt.

Police said 69 people were arrested — 67 for disorderly conduct.

At least one group of truckers called for an end to the strike but leaders of the national shutdown decried the back-to-work call and predicted it would be ignored.

Police and National Guard troops escorted convoys delivering vital shipments of food and fuel in parts of Minnesota, Florida, West Virginia, Georgia and Missouri. National Guard helicopters kept watch on highways in Illinois to guard against violence among truckers.

Snipers fired on trucks in Arkansas, Pennsylvania, Utah, and Idaho during the weekend. No one was injured.

One non-striking trucker was abducted and robbed along a Maryland highway early in the weekend by four strikers armed with a sawed-off shotgun. The strikers set the driver free with a warning to pay more heed to the strike, police said.

Truck stops and major fuel depots were blockaded or picketed by striking independents, causing scattered gasoline shortages. Some produce terminals also were targets of blockades and pickets. Fruit and vegetables were left to rot on strike-idled loading docks across the South and West, where harvests were in progress.

Grocers and industrial analysts predicted problems with food supplies and industrial shutdowns if the independents continue the shutdown — aimed at winning concessions to demands for more fuel at lower prices, higher freight rates and increased load and speed limits.

A Chicago grocery wholesaler said food prices already were increasing because of the strike. He said groceries around the country have adequate food supplies to meet consumers' needs and cautioned against panic buying.

However, he said spot shortages of selected items could crop up as the strike drags on.

The Hershey Chocolate Co. has laid off 950 workers, a third of its force, at Hershey, Pa., because truckers refused to ship the perishable candy bars. Wausau Homes of Wausau, Wis., halted operations at its prefabricated house plant because of delivery problems. And an Armour meat packing plant at Worthington, Minn., closed for lack of refrigerated trucks to ship meat from the 4,500 hogs it butchers daily.

Idaho beefs up patrols after sniping reports

By United Press International

Truckers in Idaho were shot at and hit by rocks Saturday, and Idaho Law Enforcement Director Kelly Pearce said he will increase state police patrols to help eliminate attacks on independent truck drivers.

Pearce's action came after an Oklahoma trucker was hospitalized when a rock shattered his windshield as he drove on Interstate 80 north some 11 miles north of the Utah line.

Trucker William Stefano, who drives for Bray Transportation of Cushing, Okla., was taken to a Tremonton, Utah, hospital; then transferred to Ogden in satisfactory condition.

State police in Twin Falls said a trucker reported he was shot at on the same highway near Rupert but that he was not hurt. A third trucker's tires were shot out Thursday near the city.

And a Boise dispatcher said Lloyd S. Walker of Grand Rapids, Mich., reported his truck was hit by a shotgun blast five miles east of McCammon on U.S. 30. Walker told police the blast came from an oncoming pickup truck.

First talk with Ohira for Carter

TOKYO (UPI) — Emperor Hirohito officially welcomed President Carter to Japan Monday in an elaborate ceremony that almost began with a breach of imperial court etiquette by first lady Rosalynn Carter.

Hirohito greeted the President and his wife Rosalynn at the Akasaka Palace, styled on France's Versailles palace, while thousands of motorists sat sweating in 90 degree heat when police blocked expressways leading past the building.

The 78-year-old emperor met the Carters at the entrance to the Palace and escorted them to a courtyard for the playing of the American and Japanese national anthems.

Mr. Carter stepped off ahead of Hirohito but was gently restrained by her husband. No one precedes the Emperor of Japan.

Japanese school children dressed in crisp white uniforms enthusiastically waved the Stars and Stripes and the Rising Sun. A group of American residents, mostly in shirt sleeves, waved at the President, stirred as formally as his host in a navy blue pin stripe suit.

Carter inspected a Japanese honor guard, blew a kiss to the members of the American community and then went to meet the rest of the imperial family gathered with cabinet ministers.

The President, light perspiration on his brow, broke into a grin as he shook hands with Masumi Esaki, Japan's Minister of International Trade and Industry, the only one of the dignitaries wearing informal clothing.

Rosalynn Carter ill

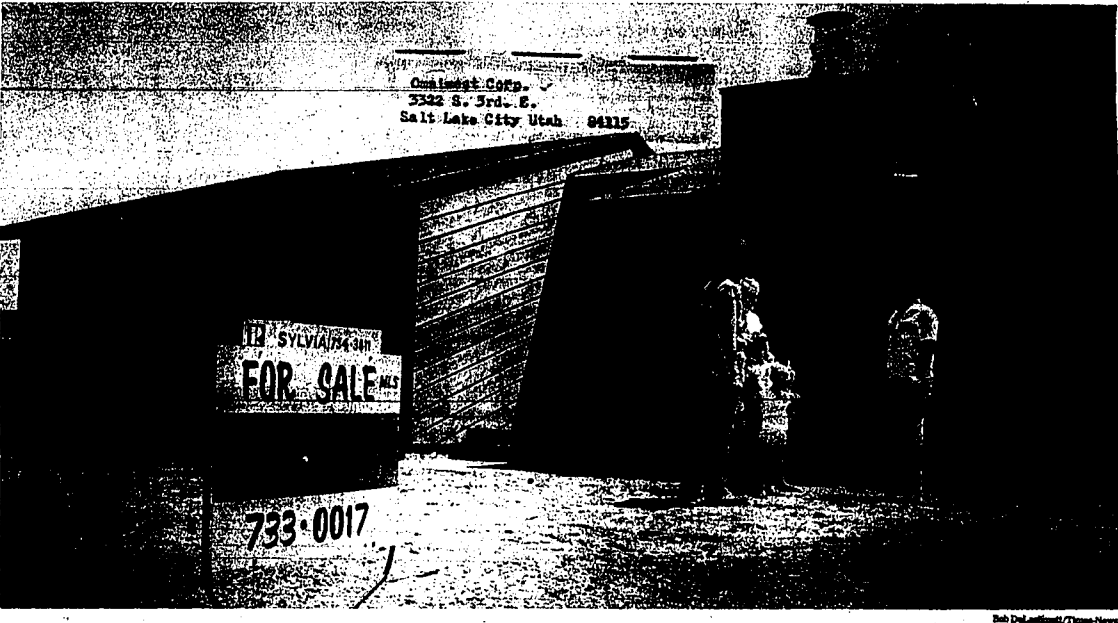

TOKYO (UPI) — Rosalynn Carter became ill Monday while standing in a receiving line before a luncheon hosted by Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

She was escorted to a private room by Mrs. Ohira.

Dr. William Lukash, the White House physician, was immediately summoned.

There were no immediate details on what caused the first lady's illness.

She looked faint as she stood in the line and turned to Mrs. Ohira who immediately called for assistance.

Buyers' market in Twin Falls homes

By JEFFSHER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Has the rampant inflation in the cost of housing and the cost of money finally outstripped the average home buyer's ability to pay the price of a new home?

Have housing costs and interest rates peaked, and should home seekers wait for interest rates and price inflation to drop off before buying? Or is it better to buy now, because the cost of housing has nowhere to go but up?

Twin Falls bankers and realtors are uncertain which way the economy and interest rates are headed, but several factors indicate that the housing market is a buyer's market right now and may improve for at least the next several months.

First of all, there are more homes for sale now in Twin Falls than usual.

Estimates of the number of homes on the market range from 400 to 600.

"My immediate reaction is that there are just an awful lot of homes out there listed," stated Rich Stivers of TitleFact Inc.

Mike Gray of Gem State Realty commented, "When you have increased interest rates you normally increase the number of units available in the market for a certain period of time, and you normally sell fewer units."

Part of the surplus in homes is the result of an extended period when money was virtually unavailable from last fall until April when the Idaho Legislature lifted the interest rate ceiling.

Contractors continued building, although not as many starts were recorded, anticipating strong demand when the ceiling lifted.

The mortgage business was brisk in April as people who had been unable to get loans during the prior six months took loans.

But after the supply of people in need of money at any price was exhausted, borrowers became scarce, despite the fact that plenty of money was available.

In May the dollar amount of real property mortgage loans issued by Twin Falls' major lending institutions was down significantly from May of 1978 and was also below May of 1977.

Realtors and bankers agree the market is "soft," particularly when compared to two years ago when houses were selling as quickly as contractors could build them.

High cost of money is the reason most often cited for buyer uncertainty, but an unclear energy picture is also worrying many potential buyers.

Demand is particularly slow for homes in the $50,000 to $65,000 range.

Realtors and bankers estimate the average cost of a new home in the Twin Falls area today is between $55,000 and $65,000.

Homes priced above $65,000 are not suffering as much because their potential buyers tend to worry less about price than about features, such as location.

Homes $40,000 and below are "moving quite readily," according to L. James Koutnik of Western Realty.

"They're the best buy because they can do nothing but go up."

Homes below $40,000 are popular because a buyer can expect to resell his home and still realize a profit. There is room for the property to appreciate before it approaches the level where other houses are not selling well, the $50,000 to $65,000 range. But once a resale home appears at that price range, high-interest doubts and competition with similarly-priced newer homes comes into play.

Gray said those who cannot afford to wait for their price, which is often the case in the resale market, have to be "realistic." He said it is normal for the resale market to take up the slack in the new home market, partially because prices are more flexible.

New home builders, on the other hand, cannot drop their prices because building costs are fixed and are rising at the rate of 4 percent per month, promising that the cost of new homes will continue to rise despite reduced demand.

However, if the widely-predicted recession materializes — many economists say it has already begun — housing price inflation should slacken.

Ohio success may send Crime Bug across land

OTTAWA, Ohio (UPI) — If he proves to be a success in northwestern Ohio, Crime Bug may be heading for points east and west, too.

The Putnam County sheriff's department Sunday launched a crime prevention program aimed mainly at children from kindergarten through sixth grade by introducing the "Crime Bug" creature — actually an ex-policeman in costume.

Crime Bug is to visit elementary schools and children's groups to educate youngsters about crime, how to be on the lookout for it and how to prevent it.

"We used to go to schools and talk with kids about crime prevention, but we found we really had a hard time waking up the kids to the problem," said Samantha "Sam" Buescher, head of the crime prevention unit of the sheriff's department.

Ms. Buescher and other deputies came up with the Crime Bug idea while lunching at a fast-food restaurant.

They saw how attentive the children were to promotional characters dressed like animal characters seen on television.

An ex-police officer who received refresher courses in crime prevention and who had an appealing way with children was given the job. To make him glide like a bug, he was outfitted with a kind of wheelchair, and then dressed in a costume of yellow fluff with huge feet, big bug eyes and antennae.

Ms. Buescher said Crime Bug will be concerned that children learn about such things as security around the home, traffic safety and even how to avoid child molesters.

Gasoline supply smallest yet for motorists in Northeast

By United Press International

Officials Sunday termed it the driest weekend ever for motorists in the Northeast and urged drivers to stay home and save their fuel for getting to work.

Hardest hit were the "even" drivers who under the odd-even plan can next buy gasoline on Tuesday. The rationing scheme is in effect in New York City and surrounding counties, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, northern Virginia and the Washington, D.C. area, in addition to California.

But for those "even" drivers allowed to buy gas Sunday, few stations were open, the ones that were closed early and at the few that remained, dozens of cars waited hours for gas.

Under the odd-even system, cars whose license plates end in odd numbers can buy gas on odd-numbered days, and those with even plates buy on even-numbered days.

Weekend business was reported brisk in "Brooklyn credit cards" — siphon hoses.

In Boston, a caravan of 100 taxi cabs circled the Massachusetts Statehouse to protest the gas shortage. Their horns blaring, drivers circled the Boston Common chanting "No gas, no work."

The Automobile Club of New York reported that 90 percent of all stations in the metropolitan area were closed.

In Massachusetts and New Jersey, only 10 percent of those states' gas stations were open. The figure was down to 5 percent in Connecticut and the area around the nation's capital, Rhode Island reported about 15 percent of the state's stations open.

Police in Washington, D.C. said gasoline lines stretched for a half-mile or more. In Nassau County in New York, 300 cars were waiting for one station to open for business.

In Connecticut, the energy emergency office said only 150 of the state's 3,000 gas stations were open. Many of those had already run out of their June allocations, however, and closed early for the weekend.

Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso said Saturday the state would receive part of its July allocation this week to ease the end-of-the-month crunch and would release more than a million gallons of the state's back-up supply.

Somoza may be easing stand on resigning

Nicaraguan soldier reloads clips for his rifle

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Sandinista guerrillas claimed Sunday to have captured the town of Masaya, and President Anastasio Somoza, who bombed Costa Rica and his own capital of Managua, appeared to soften his rigid opposition to resigning.

Somoza rejected calls for his resignation from the Organization of American States early Sunday in a message to his troops and received heavy pledges of loyalty from the commanders of Nicaragua's 16 states — a pledge that one Sandinista leader said would cost them their lives.

But later Sunday, the president said in a nationwide broadcast, "My government is willing to receive the initiative of member-governments of the Organization of American States which have real interest in the peaceful solution of the problem which plagues Nicaragua, and to discuss the bases and formulas to resolve the present crisis in a just, democratic and permanent manner."

UPI's Alfonso Charry reported from Las Vueltas, Costa Rica, that Somoza's artillery blasted the Pan-American highway on the Costa Rican side of the border Sunday for the third straight day. Somoza claims the Costa Rican government is harboring the Sandinistas and supplying them with arms. Although there were no official estimates, civilian casualties were extremely high in the eastern sectors of Managua, where Somoza sought to dislodge the Marxist-led guerrillas from their urban stronghold.

One by one, heavy explosive charges — possibly 500-pound bombs — rolled out the hatch of green Sikorsky 50 turbine helicopter. Saturday, causing fires and huge clouds of black smoke in the capital. A UPI photographer who reached Sandinista positions in Barrio Blandon, in northeastern Managua near the Pan-American highway, said approximately 50 percent of the neighborhood's civilian population had left the area since the national guard helicopter air raid.

One bomb exploded with tremendous force at a street intersection, killing two civilians and injuring three others a resident said.

The explosion gouged a crater four feet wide and three feet deep and destroyed wood-frame shacks in a 100-foot radius, he said.

Sandinista guerrillas said the bombs did little damage to their heavily fortified dugouts equipped with bomb-proof roofs made with paving blocks.

"We are winning the war and Somoza knows it," a young guerrilla said. "That's why the guard is throwing all it can at us now."

Slain newsman called top reporter

ASHLAND, Ky. (UPI) — ABC correspondent Bill Stewart, shot and killed by a Nicaraguan national guardsman, was eulogized Sunday by a top reporter whose desire to do his job led to his death.

"He was what he wanted to become, a network correspondent," said Frank Reynolds, ABC News co-anchor, in his eulogy for Stewart. "He had achieved his goal, a goal he pursued not from an excess of ambition, but because of a determination to live a meaningful life — to do meaningful work."

Stewart, 37, was ordered to lay face down in a street in Managua, Nicaragua, linked in the ribs and shot once in the head at close range by a national guardsman Wednesday.

Two busloads of ABC network executives and correspondents, plus another 30 producers attended Stewart's funeral.

A two-mile procession of at least 50 cars followed the hearse to the Rose Hill Mausoleum.

Reynolds said the slain veteran newsman was the type of reporter who wanted people to see what was happening to the world. And he said the network sends its best reporters to the most difficult, the most challenging and often, the most dangerous places.

"Bill would not have been in Nicaragua if he had not been the kind of reporter the kind of man he was," Reynolds said. "Now the country boy who grew up to be what he wanted to be, who saw the world and helped his countrymen understand it — a noble achievement has come home."

Nearly 200,000 members of the nation's most militant homosexual communities demonstrated Sunday to mark the 10th anniversary of a bloody confrontation with Manhattan police regarded as the start of the gay rights movement.

New York Parks Commissioner Gordon Davis estimated that 50,000 to 70,000 people paraded up Fifth Avenue to mark the beginning of "Gay Pride Week." Rally organizers put the figure at 100,000.

In San Francisco, an estimated 100,000 people marched arm-in-arm along Market Street to City Hall, where speakers condemned the murder of a gay rights leader.

It was announced that Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, who underwent surgery for the removal of polyps from his colon, also will not attend the third round of negotiations opening in the Tel Aviv resort suburb of Hertzliya today.

Whale carcasses buried

FLORENCE, Ore. (UPI) — Work crews Sunday began burying the carcasses of 41 sperm whales which beached themselves and died at this southern Oregon resort community a week ago.

MIAMI (UPI) — Theodore Bundy, who was described both as the "most vicious criminal in history" and the type of guy a person would allow his sister to date, goes on trial today for the sex slayings of two college coeds.

Malaysia bars refugees

KUANTAN, Malaysia (UPI) — Malaysia is backing off its threat to expel 76,000 Vietnamese boat people, but appeared determined Sunday to prevent any more refugees from setting foot on shore.

The Malaysian navy held two 40-foot Vietnamese fishing boats — one of them badly damaged — just off the coast, turning back all would-be visitors and offers of aid.

Klanmen stage march

DECATUR Ala. (UPI) — About 300 Ku Klux Klanmen, protesting the busing of students to achieve school desegregation, burned an old school bus and a 62-foot cross in a field Saturday night.

The Imperial Wizard of the Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Bill Wilkinson of Desham Springs, La., who led the rally, said the bus was burned to dramatize white resistance to court desegregation orders requiring busing.

Appeals process pushed

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Attorneys for convicted murderers Charles William Proffitt and Robert Sullivan have begun a series of legal maneuvers to stave off their scheduled executions Wednesday in Florida's electric chair.

The Florida Supreme Court turned down stays of execution for both Proffitt and Sullivan Friday, but their attorneys already have other appeals pending.

U.S. District Judge W. Terrell Hodges will preside at a Jacksonville hearing on a stay for Proffitt this afternoon.

Ray Black, Sullivan's attorney, has filed a petition for a stay in U.S. District Court in Fort Lauderdale. A hearing is pending.

Twin Falls housing market may be shifting toward buyer

At the same time, interest rates should decline in the event of recession.

Interest rates rose as a direct result of action by the Federal Reserve Bank to curb inflation. In an inflationary economy, in which wages and prices continue to spiral upward if unchecked, higher interest rates reduce the availability of money, thereby reducing demand and in theory short-circuiting the inflationary spiral.

As tight money policies take effect, reducing demand, interest rates should drop.

Curtis Eaton of the Twin Falls Bank and Trust predicted interest rates will fall slightly in the near future, but he declined to make any long-range predictions.

Eaton prefaced his remarks by expressing optimism about the local economy in general, based on a generally favorable farm outlook. But as for interest rates, "I feel we'll see some gradual declines, not precipitous," he said, noting that several leading financial institutions recently reduced the prime lending rate.

Eaton predicted that the decline would not exceed 5 percent and should occur, if at all, before the end of 1979.

A full-scale recession may not be allowed to materialize in 1980. Since it is an election year, it is likely that either Congress or the administration will take action to reverse a recession next year.

Come 1980, Eaton said, "all bets are off as to what happens."

Eaton noted that a possible counter-force to falling interest rates is recent federal action which raised savings account interest rate ceilings and created new short-term, high-interest savings certificates, thus raising banks' operating costs.

Gay Law, assistant manager of the Bank of Idaho downtown branch, said he does not expect interest rates to fall. He noted that interest rates are tied to the rate of inflation, and he does not agree that a recession is coming which will curb inflation.

Eaton also said continued inflation of real estate prices cannot keep outstripping the rate of increase in personal income, as is the case in the current inflationary economy.

"It appears to me that we may be evolving into a period of readjustment with regard to values of real estate."

George Haney of Century 21 Realty, on the other hand, argues that real estate prices will continue to rise and real estate will continue to be a profitable investment.

"We're never going to have any more land. We're always going to have more people," he pointed out.

He noted that rising housing costs before prices adjust to downward. The American belief that no one should spend more than 25 percent of his income for housing is going to change, Haney predicted.

"We're going to have to pay more for basics like food and shelter out of the dough we earn," he said.

Church labels coming SALT debate 'most important'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown said Sunday the oil shortage is a "serious potential security problem" to America that is made worse because the United States' strongest allies depend even more heavily on imported oil.

Brown was asked on ABC's "Issues and Answers" whether the energy crisis was affecting national security.

"Our energy situation and the failure of plans that have been suggested to be adopted create a serious potential security problem," Brown replied.

"The United States ... imports just about half of its oil, but our European and Japanese allies import a very much greater amount. That situation makes our security problems worse because we do depend on the alliance."

"The energy crisis and the strategic arms limitation agreement signed by President Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev last week were the dominant issues on the three network talk shows Sunday."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, called the debate the Senate will have on SALT II in the coming months "the most important and fateful debate of our lifetime."

Church, whose committee will hold hearings on the treaty, said with a smile that he "reads the SALT treaty" while waiting in line for gasoline near his suburban Bethesda, Md., home.

He noted most people do not engage in such heavy thinking while waiting.

"The people have their minds on whether they're going to get their next tank of gas rather than the long-term prospects of civilization," he said in an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press."

He predicted the treaty would be approved by the Senate if it meets two tests: That it is "evenhanded" and "gives no advantage to the Russians" and that compliance by the Soviets can be verified by the United States.

He said, however, that the Senate may decide to add "understandings or reservations that would clarify" the treaty.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, a chief opponent of the pact, went much further by predicting the Senate would amend the treaty itself by reducing the number of SS18 missiles the Soviets would be allowed, limiting production of the Soviet Backfire bomber, and providing for more "comprehensive" rates, and pledge not to make it into a long-range missile.

"I think we have a good possibility of passing amendments on the SS18, on the Backfire bomber and on present production of the swing-wing verification," Garn said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Pinch-hitters parade

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Buoyed by an analysis of the 1978 elections showing they already have achieved winning speed for 1980, Republican leaders Sunday took an early look at the party's bumper crop of presidential candidates.

Actually, there were more pinch hitters than real candidates on hand to speak to members of the Republican National Committee who gathered in Minneapolis for the GOP leadership's summer meetings.

Only Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., former CIA director George Bush, former Minnesota

Gov. Harold Stassen and Los Angeles businessman Benjamin Fernandez showed up for the session.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., a likely candidate, was in Minneapolis during the weekend but had to leave early. Former Gov. Winfield Dunn of Tennessee was his representative. Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., tapped his wife, Elizabeth, to speak for him; former Gov. John Connally of Texas sent his son; Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., was represented by his congressman brother, Dan; and Rep. Thomas Evans, R-Cal., was the stand-in for former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California.

Liberals back Kennedy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a setback to President Carter, the liberal Americans for Democratic Action Sunday overwhelmingly decided to try and convince Sen. Edward Kennedy to run for president.

The vote at the organization's national convention marks the first serious big-group effort to draft Kennedy, D-Mass., who has said repeatedly he does not expect to be a candidate for the presidency.

Delegates took the stand after wrestling in more than two hours of debate over ways to support Kennedy without dividing the Democratic party.

But they finished the vote by chanting, "We want Teddy" and pledging to seek another liberal candidate if Kennedy refuses to run.

Only a half dozen of the more than 400 delegates opposed the final resolution.

Arms ceilings often become floors

© 1979 Chicago Sun-Times
(This is excerpted from a statement by Sen. Stevenson during last week's Senate debate on defense funds)

President Carter's decision to move ahead on the MX mobile missile system requires SALT supporters to re-examine the new strategic arms limitation treaty that he and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev signed Monday.

We must judge a second SALT against 12 years of negotiations that leave some doubt as to whether the SALT process escalates or de-escalates the strategic arms race, stabilizes or destabilizes the strategic relationship between the United States and the U.S.S.R.

During all the years of the SALT process, each side has raced to achieve superiority in the name of parity and always ended the process for it — more insecure and closer to the flash point. Each SALT agreement tends to give each side the weapons it wants and those the other wants, too. The ceilings on arms then become floors; each side deploys to the full extent permitted in the name of a negotiated parity. Weapons that start out as bargaining chips always end up in the arsenal. The development of missiles as accurate as the MX and Trident II signals a shift in U.S. policy away from an assured second-strike capability to first-strike. Certainly it will be perceived as such in the Soviet Union. As the dominant superpower, the United States could exercise some statesmanship, as it did by ceasing the testing of nuclear weapons in the atmosphere, and try to move both powers back from first-strike capabilities. Instead, it poses a new round in the arms race and threatens the life of the SALT process itself.

The resulting Balance will require each side faced with incoming missiles (launched by inadvertence, third parties or otherwise) to assure that they don't find their targets. It creates a launch-on-warning posture that may increase the deterrent against a first strike, but at the price of increasing the risk of accidentally destroying the nation.

With a closed society and vast territorial expanses, the U.S.S.R. could deploy a mobile land-based system with more potential for deception than we could. These systems are no more subject to verification than a nation chooses to make them. We already have doubts about the verifiability of SALT II; we would never accept the risks of verifying a Soviet system similar to that which we propose for ourselves.

The instabilities flowing from the President's decision on MX will be especially great in the mid-1980s. At that time, the Soviets will have increased the number of warheads on their missiles, but they will see the United States as having achieved a real first-strike capability. With the expenditures for MX, we will have purchased greater mutual insecurity — and a chance of half-trigger nuclear war. The risk of pre-emptive attack as well as of accidental war will then be real.

Throughout the history of SALT negotiations, the Senate has acted on the assumption that the purpose was to limit and reduce the number of nuclear weapons and their capabilities. But the SALT process has never succeeded in controlling strategic arms as fast as science has created them and political pressures deployed them.

If the SALT process squeezes the arms race in one place, it bulges in another. If quantitative limits are imposed, more dangerous qualitative improvements follow. The tactical escalation by the arms race is exasperated by the illusory restraints of strategic arms limitations. And now the morbid business is pushing sophisticated weapons into outer space.

The threat to SALT comes from within SALT. A SALT agreement that sanctions far more missiles and launchers than the security of either superpower requires is destructive of the SALT process.

A more realistic arms-control policy would recognize the inherent limitations of the SALT process, accepted as it is by habit and inheritance from one administration to the next, and subject it to critical examination. It would include alternative means of bringing this madness to an end.

For example, verification could be a more effective means of deterring aggression in outer space and on Earth if the means of verification were international as well as national. The cost of developing and deploying an international system might be shared by many nations. Global monitoring could disclose to all nations the aggressive activities of all.

An international monitoring system would require a high level of diplomacy and statesmanship and offer some advantages for the United States. It implies a lesser concession for open societies like ours than closed societies such as the U.S.S.R. It could produce information for mapping, exploration for minerals and fuels and for weather prediction.

SALT is not the only route to arms control and international security. SALT II may lead to more international insecurity. It is threatened by a proliferation of strategic arms in the world it never has controlled Soviet and U.S. strategic weapons as fast as they were created. The amendment or rejection of SALT II could portend more realistic arms-control methods and a relaxation of the tension the SALT process now threatens between the United States and the U.S.S.R.

Timber move no big deal

WASHINGTON — President Carter's decision last week to have the secretaries of Interior and Agriculture consider increasing timber harvest from federal lands by stretching the doctrine of even flow, non-declining yield forestry was a good example of what army field commanders call "firing for effect."

The announcement, delivered by inflation fighter Alfred Kahn, got good press — front page of the Washington Post — and made it look as though Carter were taking some sort of swift, decisive action that would help the economy.

But the fine print did it clear that this was no big deal, or at least not something that might happen this year, or next year, or even maybe the year after that.

It's fine to talk about increasing the timber harvest, but you have to allocate money for the increased timber sales. While Carter was calling for an increase in the timber harvest last week, his proposed budget for fiscal year 1980 includes a $5 million decrease for timber sales, which would mean a drop in the timber harvest by 700 million board feet. Thus any increase in the harvest is not bound to happen in 1980, and the president is already talking about a tight budget for fiscal year 1981.

The president's announcement was careful to respect the law which governs the national forests. Kahn said that Carter's directive to the secretaries of Agriculture and Interior were to be executed in a manner consistent with existing law and environmental considerations.

Those "law and environmental considerations" would involve at least three years of land management environmental impact statements and plans that would be completed on a forest by forest basis, followed by a public comment period.

You also might ask why Carter bothered to make this announcement when there is a 28 billion board feet backlog of federal timber that has been sold to private companies but not yet cut.

The more cynical observers of Carter's actions suggest two motives. To begin with, they say, the president had to follow through on his speech of April 1978, in which he first floated the idea of cooling inflation by cutting more trees. But since the mathematics of that inflation-fighting theory look so bad, Alfred Kahn was given the task of delivering the specious logic.

"We estimate that for each billion board foot increase in federal sales," said Kahn, "the price of standing timber will decline by 10 percent, and that of lumber by over 4 percent; that is a saving of more than a half percent of the total cost of a new house."

"The Carter administration has destroyed 75 years of timber policy for $600 on the price of a new home," says a disgruntled administration source.

Some observers suggest that Carter is nudging Congress to consider loosening up the doctrine of even flow, non-declining yield as it is enshrined in the National Forest Management Act of 1974. The Congress is now developing regulations pursuant to Section 6 of the Forest Management Act.

"What the president has done is put his thumb on the scale in favor of exceeding the even flow doctrine," says the administration source. "But he has done it not in the name of multiple use forestry, but in the name of fighting inflation, which is not a legal reason."

A Capitol Hill cynic reads Carter's announcement another way. "The law dealing with even flow non-declining yield is clear," he says. "The regulations can't have much impact, because the regulations have to conform with the law. The impact of the president's announcement adds up to a great big zero."

The Northwest has a large stake in this long term war over the national forests, because the large reserve of federal timber is in Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

Carter's jawboning, through Kahn can be viewed as one more pressure in the long term battle to open up the national forests of the region, as Oregon and Washington enter a period of timber shortage.

Before long we shall see how Congress will respond to the encouragement it is getting from the president to abandon the even flow non-declining yield doctrine.

Somoza resignation plea too late

The horror of systematic murder by Nicaraguan troops stretched across American newspaper headlines this past week. First came the report of ABC newsman Bill Stewart's execution style death. Then came the stories of mass bombings of slum areas believed to be guerrilla strongholds.

Many Americans read about or saw the television newscasts of Stewart's death at the hands of a Nicaraguan national guardsman. Government officials reacted with shock and outrage, calling for the immediate resignation of Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza Debayle. But what many media-watching Americans didn't realize is that death and deprivation of human rights have been a way of life for Nicaraguan citizens for some time.

Somoza's government helped publicize its own inhumanity over the weekend by dumping heavy explosives on Managua slum areas, providing a mere 10 minute warning with loudspeakers. Earlier radio and television broadcasts, warning residents of the impending bombings, probably had little impact. Some of the barrios have been without electricity for days.

Nicaragua's story stretches back to 1934 with the murder of Augusto Cesar Sandino (hence the guerrillas' name, Sandinistas) by Anastasio Somoza Garcia, the first Somoza. The United States has been an official friend and supporter of both Somoza regimes.

It took the death of an American to change the government's stand. Secretary of State Vance called for Somoza's resignation and urged the Organization of American States to do likewise. The OAS members voted support of the resignation, but rejected the U.S. peacekeeping troops proposal.

As Somoza said Sunday the OAS resolution cannot be enforced. And it may be that U.S. action has come too late. As one newspaper columnist wrote: "Whoever wins in Nicaragua now — and it is hard not to hope for the replacement of Somoza — will inherit a devastated, embittered country."

David Morrissey Superman glamor boy

TWIN FALLS — At one point during my college years, my friend John stopped inviting me to his apartment for his weekly poker game.

John had become with no little exasperation that upon arriving I would head to his refrigerator for a beer, and then to the back room to grab a random handful of the pulp publications that made up his amazing collection of comic books.

I would then ignore him and the poker game for the rest of the evening as I read about Clark Kent, Sgt. Rock, Batman and the Flash.

I hadn't meant to be rude. It was an uncontrollable impulse.

When I was growing up I had heard of families where comic books were allowed, but I didn't really believe they existed. My parents purchased Swiss Family Robinson, Treasure Island, Robinson Crusoe and Tom Sawyer.

Those were great books with great heroes, but Superman is Superman. So when I discovered John had more than 3,000 comic books in his collection it was like receiving a lifetime pass to Baskin and Robbins.

John couldn't say how much his library was worth, though collectors had offered hundreds of dollars just for single copies of some of his early editions. He did tell me once that he had the stock market setbacks of the early 1970s but had called his stockbroker father and asked why he hadn't put his money into comic books.

John said he only did that once because he couldn't stand to bear his father's cry.

What hadn't changed, however, was the last section of the comic. The back page of "gifts and gimmicks" could have been a carbon copy of the page that arrested our attention back in Indiana 20 years ago, when Tommy Howard, the Nelson kids and I used to wonder how many Orange Crush bottles we would have to trade in at the grocery store before we could buy a real ventriloquist kit ("cool family and friends").

There in front of me were all the items I had always wanted as a kid, but had never had the money to buy. Now, as then, I was thoroughly captivated.

And blamming it on the spring weather I whipped out a check, sending it to New Jersey's "Fun Factory."

The first package arrived last week. It came by parcel post when I was gone and was left with my next door neighbor — Sue — as surprise. And what I had ordered, as I opened the box on her front porch and took out my secret X-ray glasses.

"What's that?" she said, taking a second look at the man in the three-piece-suit wearing red, white and black plastic glasses with spiraled lenses.

"X-ray specs," I answered, trying to look nonchalant.

Even though the special lenses I could see she was nervous. I felt I should explain.

"I never had any when I was a kid," I said.

"Oh. Yes. Of course," she said, quickly closing the door.

She didn't even give me a chance to tell her about the red and yellow smoke bombs just like the ones used by the allies in World War II.

At the office my mail order objects were equally a hit.

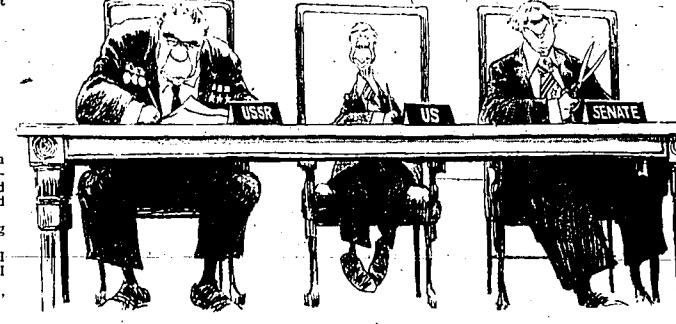

Reporters kept wanting to look at my glow-in-the-dark Kryptonite rocks, taking them in the photographer's darkroom. But I casually mentioned the odd-shaped, olive green objects were needed for my investigative story on the Three Mile Island nuclear accident and they all moved their desks to the other side of the newsroom.

The guys over in advertising kept wanting to take my two-headed nickel to Nevada.

And using my ventriloquist kit I kept getting worried stares until finally one of the girls in the circulation department asked if there was something wrong with my throat.

Still, the experience has been pleasant. It was a long wait, but worth it.

Now if I can just save enough Wheaties box tops to get that second decoding ring with the hidden compartment for messages. Boy!

Treasury decision increases tensions, vegetable prices

N.Y. Times Service

Unless reason prevails, the Treasury Department, by a single decision, is about to exacerbate tensions with oil-rich Mexico, guarantee higher prices for vegetables next winter and increase the flow of illegal aliens into the Southwest. Reason, however, has little to do with the nation's trade regulations in general, and perishable Mexican tomatoes in particular.

Each winter, Mexican growers sell us some $200 million worth of tomatoes, cucumbers, squash and eggplants. American consumers benefit because, without the Mexican supply, winter vegetables would be much plentier and prices would be much higher. Mexico benefits because the exports provide jobs for the country's swollen labor force and a diversified market to support rural development. But the 20-year-old winter vegetable industry in Florida does not benefit from competition

And the Florida growers have been demanding that the government limit vegetable imports because they are sometimes sold below the full cost of production.

The drafters of the legislation that bars such "dumping" never contemplated the special problems associated with perishable agricultural commodities. Farm products must routinely be sold for whatever price the market will bring, even if it is below cost; growers — including those in Florida — must aim to cover costs over the year rather than a single growing season. But under pressure from powerful Florida congressmen, the Treasury Department appears inclined to go along with the Florida growers.

If it does, the importers of Mexican tomatoes would be required to post a bond pending a formal finding of how much below actual production costs the tomatoes were sold. Mexican growers would probably withdraw from the American market, raising our winter vegetable prices. Thousands of rural Mexican laborers would be left without jobs — at least on their side of the border. American producers of other perishable commodities sold by Mexico — notably strawberries — will file parallel antidumping suits. And the Mexican government will probably retaliate in negotiations over oil and natural gas sales.

It may be possible next year to get Congress to pass legislation specifically exempting perishables from the antidumping statutes. In the meantime, however, it is imperative that the Treasury not play into the hands of protectionists. If necessary these cases should be fought out in the courts. Open trade — and good relations with Mexico — are too important to be bartered for the votes of some Florida farmers.

Surgeons reattach boy's feet

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Surgeons in what is believed to be an American medical first, Sunday reported reattaching the severed feet of a 3-year-old boy who wandered into the path of a hay mower on the family farm.

Samuel Perkins of Williamston was in critical condition in the intensive care unit of Sparrow Hospital but doctors said they were "cautiously optimistic" the more than six-hour emergency operation to reattach his feet was successful.

"As far as we know, this is the first time it's ever been done in the United States, reattaching both feet," said hospital spokeswoman Ann Heglin.

The boy was injured Saturday when he wandered out into a field where his father and grandfather were cutting hay. The men apparently were unaware of the child's presence, police said.

The two men told authorities they heard a scream and then saw the hay mower had sliced off the youngster's feet just above the ankles.

The boy's father, Al, wrapped the severed feet in a blanket and, with a police escort, rushed them and the injured child to a Meridian Township fire station.

Paramedics there "stabilized" the youngster, placed the feet in a saline solution and took the child to Sparrow Hospital, hospital officials said.

About an hour after the accident, the boy was in an operating room, where a team of physicians led by Dr. George Gomez, a plastic surgeon, labored for more than six hours to reattach his feet.

"They worked on one foot at a time," Ms. Heglin said. "They had to trim the bone, then they had to bring the bone together with the use of two surgical pins in each leg.

"Then they began the laborious process of reattaching each blood vessel," she said. "That was done microscopically."

Doctors did not reattach severed tendons and nerves, Ms. Heglin said, concerning themselves mainly with restoring circulation in the limbs. Further surgery would be scheduled later to complete the process, she said.

"Dr. Gomez said he thought the circulation looked good," Ms. Heglin said. "But it will take about two weeks to determine how well he's really doing."

Police near mass murder case break

LONDON (UPI) — The Yorkshire Ripper, Britain's most vicious mass murderer, since Jack the Ripper stalked gaslit London a century ago, may have tipped his hand with a tape recording to police promising to murder a 12th victim.

The existence of a tape cassette, which was mailed from northeast England to police, was revealed this weekend by George Oldfield, assistant chief constable of Yorkshire, who has headed a manhunt since the body of Mrs. Wilma McCann, a prostitute, was found in Leeds in October 1975.

Oldfield refused Sunday to answer questions about the tape but scheduled a news conference for Tuesday.

The tape reportedly contains a promise from a man claiming to be the Ripper to murder a 12th victim this time in Manchester.

Yorkshire police sources said a recording of the Ripper's voice would be an important development in the 3½ year-old case.

'Cousins' conclude annual festivities

DETROIT (UPI) — Hundreds of members of "the Cousins," a huge family tracing its roots to a Nigerian slave, ended their ninth annual reunion Sunday with an eye toward a promised return to Africa.

About 800 "Cousins" ranging in age from 6 months to 89 years attended the three-day bash, mixing the festivities of a family reunion with the serious business of running what sometimes seems like a corporation.

"Everything has gone beautifully," said Othnel McGriff,

29, a local special education teacher and a reunion coordinator. "We're just elated with what's been happening. It's been a lovely affair."

The gathering opened with a Friday night dinner-dance, continued Saturday with a business meeting, tour, picnic and evening disco party; then concluded Sunday with a morning breakfast-prayer service.

Short men prefer wives looking glamorous, pay more for her beauty; Japanese good savers

Short men are more inclined than others to want their wives to look as glamorous as possible. They pay much more than do other men for their wives' clothing, beauty treatments, perfume. Or so says a fashion authority who has made a study of this specific matter. Our Love and War man has long been aware of this. He says short men also tend to be snapper dressers themselves than the taller types.

Radio had a terrific impact in its earlier days. On Sept. 22, 1927, Graham McNamee announced the famous Gene Tunney-Jack Dempsey Long Count fight from Chicago's Soldier Field. It came out later that 10 listeners during that broadcast died of heart attacks.

Smoking pot in restroom a problem

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© The Chicago Tribune
New York News Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR ABBY: We have a problem in our office building that no one knows how to handle.
Ours is a rather small building; only three floors and maybe 24 tenants. I nearly everybody in the building knows each other.
There is a ladies' room on each floor, but one young woman who works on the third floor comes down to smoke pot in our restroom on her lunch hour. The smell is terrible and clings to our clothes if we're in there for very long. Also, she ties up the stall for quite a long time, and during the lunch hour a lot of women want to use the facilities.
Apparently no one has made any attempt to put a stop to this because they don't want to get her in trouble. It's bad enough that she smokes the stuff, but why can't she use the restroom on her own floor?
If you have any idea how we can solve this problem, please let us know.
INCONVENIENCED
DEAR IV: Your complaint is valid, so tell the girl flat out to please use restroom on HER floor... and, furthermore, smoking pot is illegal, and she's asking for trouble if she doesn't stay off the grass!

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago, I had a couple to my home for dinner. The man works with my husband. Yesterday I discovered that a silver and turquoise ring was missing. It's not valuable, but it has sentimental value because my grandmother gave it to me.
I suspect the woman took it. It was in the jewelry box on my dressing table, and she lay down in my bedroom for a while. I couldn't have lost or mislaid it - I never wear it. (The band is almost worn through.) I don't know what to do about it. I don't want to ruin our friendship, but I really want the ring back.
I can't avoid meeting this woman. Our husbands work together and we see each other at business functions. What should I do?
STUMPED
DEAR STUMPED: One thing you should NOT do is accuse the woman of taking your ring. (Regardless of how strongly you suspect her, you could be wrong.)
If I were you, I would forget it.

DEAR ABBY: I simply had to respond to your reply to BUDDY IN BELOIT, who asked how to say no to a girl without making a fool of himself. Your reply was absolutely perfect.
When I was in high school I would have fallen head over heels for a young man who had enough integrity and conviction to tell me firmly, "We have gone as far as we are going - for the good of both of us."
Guys who want everything you've got are a dime a dozen - even with inflation; but most women are turned on by someone who is in control of himself and doesn't feel the need to apologize for it.
I dated a man like that in college and was so impressed with those qualities in him that we're celebrating our fifth wedding anniversary soon!

New look sidetracks rail tradition

JEAN STARKEY AT WORK cleaning new caboose

OMAHA — A century-old tradition has been sidetracked.

The result is new look for Union Pacific Railroad cabooses.

Although the latest batch of 100 are still yellow, have red lettering and numbers, and are about the same size as older models, they have bay windows in place of the cupola on top.

Frank D. Acord, chief mechanical officer for the railroad, said the bay window cabooses — which have been in use for many years on other roads — are being evaluated to see how they compare with the cupola type.

"We think there are many advantages in this new design of cabooses," Acord said.

He said railroad operations have changed over the years, and with more high roof cars in use today for special loading, it is becoming more difficult for train crews to see over the high roofs from their perches atop the cabooses.

From that vantage point, train crewmen watch for problems which might occur as a train moves along its route. Acord said that checking trains from bay windows might turn out to be easier and safer, and a trainman can handle that duty without having to climb into a cupola.

The new cabooses will be used in system-wide pool service for run-through operations and interchange with connecting railroads, Acord said.

Housing posts gain

NEW YORK — Construction of new housing units during the first quarter of 1979 rose 3 per cent over the same period in 1978, according to the F.W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Systems Information Co.

George A. Christie, Dodge vice president and chief economist, said the decline indicates "the record cost and diminishing availability of mortgage money are finally beginning to impinge upon residential building."

Boise ranks fourth

BOISE (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Commerce reports personal income in Boise showed the fourth greatest increase among the 50 largest metropolitan areas in the country between 1969 and 1977.

Personal income for Boiseans jumped 111 percent during the 8-year period, from an average of $3,632 to $7,656.

The increase moved Boise from 108th in the nation in 1969 to 49th in 1977.

UCLA economists think recession ahead

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — UCLA economists forecast a recession in the last half of this year, but not as sharp a downturn as they predicted earlier.

A slow recovery will probably begin next year, said the forecast by the university's graduate school of business management.

"President Carter's voluntary program for wage and price stability has not succeeded in holding all wages increases to the 7 percent ceiling, which suggests the wage-price spiral will continue and progress in the fight against inflation will be slow," said Larry J. Kimbell, director of forecasting models.

Inflation will drop below a 10 percent rate very soon," he said, down from 13.8 percent to 7.8 percent by the final quarter, but inflation will continue in the 6 percent area through out the 1980s.

The forecast predicted a decline in the gross national product of 1.2 percent in the third quarter and 2.9 percent in the fourth quarter — a slightly better picture than the March UCLA forecast of 2.6 and 3 percent.

Kimbell said the forecasters presumed there would be "no major fiscal or monetary stimuli by the federal government" to combat the slowdown, because the fight against inflation "will likely predominate over recession concerns."

Unlike other forecasters, most of whom expect a national recession to have little or no effect on California, the UCLA prediction said California will also suffer, perhaps a more seriously than the rest of the nation.

The price. Ask your Pay Less pharmacist.

That's the only difference. You see, a generic drug (that's the common or chemical name of a drug) must be identical to the brand name drug. Not only chemically, but therapeutically. It's the law.

Because a generic drug costs less to market than its brand name counterpart, a generic drug costs less to buy. Makes sense. So why do most people still buy brand name drugs? For two reasons, basically.

The first is that prescriptions often call for brand names. And the second is that most people just don't know there's a money-saving generic alternative to many brand name drugs.

How do you know if there's a generic drug for your prescription? Just ask your Pay Less pharmacist. He knows all about generics. And he's always ready and available to talk to you about your prescription needs.

And if he can save you some additional money, he'll be more than happy to do it with your physician's approval.

That's the Pay Less difference.

Summer job tax breaks

Q. How much can your child earn in '79 without paying federal income tax?

A. In 1979, your child can earn $3,300 tax-free, up from $2,200 in '78. And if your child expects to earn no more than $3,300 in '79, he doesn't have to "claim" his tax-free earnings to the IRS.

He (or she) can exempt his pay from income tax withholding by writing the word "exempt" on Line 3 of the IRS Form W-4 he must give his employer. To qualify, he must (1) have had no income tax liability in '78, and (2) expect to incur no tax liability in '79.

This puts cash in your child's pocket at once instead of compelling him to file a tax return to get a refund and wait for it to come through in 1980. Without it, he must file a return to get the refund — even though he's not otherwise required to file.

Q. But with earnings of $3,300, will I lose the dependency deduction for him (her)?

A. No. No matter how much your child earns, he's still your dependent if you provide more than half his support and he either (1) won't reach his year-of-age (18) in '79 or over, but is a full-time student during any five calendar months. And this is an important break, for each dependency exemption in 1979 is worth $1,000.

Getting more money into the family without losing a dependency exemption isn't the only way you can benefit from your child's job. If you own your own business and you hire, say, your daughter, the wages are a deductible business expense as well as being tax-free to your daughter. (Note, too, that if your business is not incorporated, Social Security tax need not be withheld.)

Your daughter can use her earnings to take some of the financial load off your back by putting the cash away for her college education. In effect, your business gets a deduction for her college expenses.

The revenue service has approved this child-employee set-up as long as you keep it businesslike. The wages you pay your child must be reasonable and must be paid for services actually rendered to your business as a bona fide employee.

Q. My child doesn't have a job, but he does have income from investments. Can he receive up to $3,300 in 1979 from dividends and interest without paying federal income tax?

A. No. The $3,300 figure applies only if your child's income is earned — meaning, compensation for personal services. If your child has nothing but investment income, the tax-free figure drops to $1,000 (assuming he or she can be claimed as your dependent).

Any investment income over $1,000 — for instance, dividends (after subtracting the $100 dividend exclusion) plus interest — is subject to

Contract let on power tie

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Portland General Electric Company said Tuesday it has awarded a contract for nearly $5 million for building another section of the 500,000-volt power transmission line that eventually will link Oregon and Idaho.

The contract was awarded to Power Utility Buildings, Inc., Portland, for tower foundations, assembling and erecting steel towers and installing conductor on 31 1/2 miles of the line, route across southern Oregon.

Work is expected to start this week. Construction started earlier this spring on the first section of the line, starting from the Medford terminus, under a $6.5 million contract awarded to WICO, Inc., of Spokane.

Oil tax giveaway charged in suit

WASHINGTON — A George Washington University law professor has filed a criminal complaint charging that the Treasury illegally gave away $6 billion in tax credits to multinational oil companies.

The biggest beneficiary was the Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco), which is responsible for virtually all the oil production in Saudi Arabia.

Prof. J. Reid Hambrick wrote to Attorney General Griffin Bell last week asking for a grand jury investigation to determine who was responsible for what Hambrick described as a "scandalous act...a gigantic fraud on the U.S. government."

New manager picked

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Michael E. Benefield has been named general manager of Mountain Fuel Resources, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Mountain Fuel Supply Company.

The new general manager will be responsible for overseeing the company's natural gas storage and transmission activities and for long-range planning functions. The subsidiary owns and operates an interstate natural gas pipeline and an underground storage facility.

tax. Q. What if your child has both investment income and earned income? What is the division under these circumstances?

A. Your child can receive up to $3,300 of total income free of tax, but the investment portion cannot exceed $1,000.

As an example, Premise-Hall suggests the situation of a young man who has a job this summer as a counselor at a camp. He will earn $2,200. He also has a substantial savings account from money he inherited from his grandfather. He will get about $1,100 in interest from this account in 1979. So, the young man's total income for 1979 is $3,300. What's his tax picture for 1979?

He will have to pay tax on the interest over $1,000 — in his case, the total here is $100.

And because the young man expects to have a tax liability for 1979, he loses his exemption from tax withholding.

So, although the $2,200 earned from his job at the camp counselor is tax-free, he still has to pay withholding now, and file for a refund next year. Key thing to keep in mind on these tax breaks for you and your children on summer jobs are:

- The dependency deduction is up to a record high of $1,000 in 1979, as against $750 in 1978 — and thus, you should make every pretension to protect the deduction for yourself, your spouse, and each dependent. The rules you must meet are simple and clearly stated. Do not ignore or, out of ignorance or spathy, break them.

- The relationship you establish with your child as an employee must be businesslike; the wages must be reasonable and in line with what others are paid for similar work; your child actually must work at the job you claim he or she has.

Chemical increases oil flow in pipeline

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Scientists have developed a chemical agent which will increase the flow of crude oil through the Trans-Alaska pipeline by 200,000 barrels a day by the end of the year, a spokesman for Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. says. The chemical, known as Conoco

Drag-Reduction agent or CDR, "reduces crude oil's resistance to flow" by creating a temporary change in the oil's physical properties, spokesman John Ratterman said Wednesday. Currently 1.2 million barrels of crude are pumped through the 800-mile pipe each day from the Prudhoe Bay oil fields to tankers at the southern Alaska port of Valdez. CDR, developed by the Conoco Chemicals Division of the Continental Oil Co., has been tested for two years by the Atlantic Richfield Co. and at Pump Station No. 1 on the Trans-Alaska pipeline, Ratterman said.

Big-money energy issues coming up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House takes up two big-money energy issues this week — the hotly debated windfall profits tax and a proposal for federal subsidy of synthetic fuel production.

Fuel production comes first, with debate opening Tuesday on legislation that would make Uncle Sam a full partner in efforts to substitute synthetic fuels for some of the oil America must import.

The bill would provide up to $3 billion to meet the projected cost difference between crude oil and production of synthetic fuels derived from such substances as coal, lignite, shale, pit, solid wastes and alcohol.

Sponsors say the goal is to produce 500,000 barrels of synthetic fuel a day by 1985.

The windfall profits issue comes up Thursday, when the House starts debating the 70 percent windfall tax rate approved by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The committee bill is much tougher than the tax President

Carter proposed as a means of recovering some of the extra profits industry will reap from decontrol of domestic oil prices.

Committee aides estimated the higher tax would recapture about $28.5 billion for the Treasury between 1980 and 1984, compared with $11.8 billion under Carter's proposal.

The bill also would establish an Energy Trust Fund to spend the tax revenues, although the committee postponed the controversial decision on who will get the money.

Carter wanted it used to help compensate low-income Americans for rising fuel costs and to finance the search for new energy sources.

Drugs used in feed posing new threats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government report said Sunday drugs routinely used in animal feeds have contributed to a marked increase in the amount of dangerous bacteria at large.

The Office of Technology — a branch of Congress — said drugs have been used in feeds for nearly 30 years to spur growth and prevent disease without "seriously compromising" the drugs' effectiveness for human disease treatment.

But it said that there is now evidence that dangerous bacteria are multiplying because they have become resistant to the drugs.

It said the problem at some point could lead to "large but presently unquantifiable morbidity and mortality in humans and animals."

The report said causes of bacterial resistance cannot be measured.

Consumers pessimistic

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — The Index of Consumer Sentiment compiled by the University of Michigan Survey Research Center stood at 68.1 in May, down nearly points from February 1979 and almost 15 points less than May 1978.

The index, which tops February 1968 as a base value of 100, now has slipped 21 points since reaching its May 1977 peak of 89.1, said economists George Katona and Richard Curtin.

The fall-off in consumer sentiment during the past year was described as "substantial and widespread," although the overall decline has been somewhat less severe than that preceding the 1974-75 recession.

The latest quarterly University of Michigan Survey of Consumer Attitudes indicated concerns over inflation and energy have eaten into buying habits, prompting predictions that consumer spending will decline for the remainder of 1979.

In addition, more respondents gave government economic policy a poor rating in the May 1979 survey than at any time since President Carter took office.

Wheat prices soar, farmers hold on

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Wheat prices are soaring, but farmers aren't selling. December prices on the Chicago Board of Trade's futures market, considered an indication of coming market trends, hit $5 last week for the first time since the Russian grain deal of 1972.

Magic Valley warehouses paid farmers $3.80 a bushel for soft white wheat Thursday, compared to the $3 price in April. Portland soft white wheat prices have already climbed 21 percent this month, closing at $4.82

Thursday.

Commodities analysts attribute the steep rise to two factors: convincing rumors of a major Russian grain and corn purchase and downward revisions in the projected size of the U.S. wheat crop.

"There probably hasn't been a bushel shipped yet, but people are reacting to the news," said Norman Hill, a commodities specialist with Merrill Lynch in Salt Lake City.

Meanwhile, members of the wheat industry say this year's U.S. Department of Agriculture crop predictions were too high.

"We feel the surplus isn't nearly as large as they thought it was," said a Magic Valley grain warehouse manager.

The USDA denied any major error. "There's a chance it (soft white wheat) will be off, but not nearly as much as the farmers feel it will," said Alan Chlenbein, USDA wheat analyst.

The Department is now predicting a 163 million bushel crop of soft white wheat, 13 percent below last year's crop. But the total U.S. crop of all kinds of wheat is projected at 2 billion bushels, up 11 percent from 1978.

At the same time, the Soviet wheat crop is off 25 percent partly because of drought, according to the USDA.

Analysts say the Soviets should buy 15 million metric tons of wheat. A sale would have to be reported by September 30, according to U.S. trade regulations.

Several Magic Valley warehouse managers said sales have been slow.

Only one of four local warehouses contacted said they had made any purchases recently. One said farmers are holding their wheat, hoping for better prices.

"When any commodity takes a sharp rise the producer won't sell," he noted.

John Burton of the Idaho Wheat Commission said although some wheat remains in storage, "quite a few farmers have sold some wheat."

Bean Growers Warehouse stopped quoting prices this week, because "it (the price) has been rather erratic," explained a spokesman for the company.

Analysts disagreed about what the price will do from here on.

Chlenbein said the as-yet unconfirmed Russian sale has already been reflected in the market and wouldn't have further impact.

But Hill said a definite sale would push prices up more.

"If an announcement came out that a ship left the port, that would create a bullish market," he said.

Hill is one who believes the Russian sale is likely. For one thing, the Russians have been selling gold for the first time in a year, which he says means they're preparing to finance the grain purchase.

Russia has already bought 2.5 million metric tons of wheat from the U.S. this year, nearly all of the 3.1 million ton quota imposed by the U.S. government.

Scotland tie weak for food

By MARTY TRILLHAESE
Times-News writer

FILED — The hit pitched notes of bagpipes and kiln-tiffed men seen at the Filer Fairgrounds Sunday might make one question his whereabouts.

Seven people gathered here to sport some of the ways of the old country. But whatever ties they have with Scotland, they stopped short at the stomach. The culinary preference was clearly fried chicken and potato salad.

The event was billed as the fourth annual Scottish Poltuck Picnic, sponsored by the St. Andrew's Society of Southern Idaho Inc. But it resembled a small gathering of family and friends.

"As you can see, it gets smaller every year," said 60-year-old Bob Leitch of Buhl. He shrugged off the low attendance: "I don't know if it's my playing."

He said as many as 50 people attended previous picnics.

But any disappointment didn't show in Leitch's face. With his kilt and bagpipes he seemed to be in his element.

Leitch is one of the many descendants of the Scots who came from Canada to the Magic Valley in the early 1900's. But it took an Irish girl to get him interested in his heritage, he said.

While stationed in England during World War II, Leitch met his future wife, Eileen. And it has been Eileen who has encouraged his study of Scotland — right down to five years of daily practice with the bagpipes.

The society celebrates cultural events, including birthdays of famous Scottish people, Leitch said. Among the notables is poet Robert Burns.

"He was one of the greatest poets we ever had," Leitch said. "Of course, I'm prejudiced."

But don't ask an Irish woman to agree with a Scot's assessment of culture.

"He says Robert Burns, I say Thomas Moore," Eileen added.

Leitch's study of Scotland has been a labor of love. He is president and one of the driving forces behind the society. He has also taken up the bagpipes and has researched his genealogy.

Piper Bob Leitch prepares for number at Scottish picnic at Filer

Patrick Sullivan/Times-News

Leitch has been able to date his ancestors back to two generations. Lack of information has kept him from going further back. But it is rewarding, he said.

"So what if you turn up a couple of horse thieves, it's fun."

If he can't know them by name, he can at least share some experiences with his ancestors. However, it takes awhile to get into the role.

"I've been playing the pipes for five years and I'm just now getting to the point where I feel comfortable," he said. He doesn't yet claim expertise, but to the layman's ear, his rendition of "Blue Bells of Scotland" sounds authentic.

Bagpipes present a number of difficulties to the novice, he said. First, the instrument itself is so complicated the player must learn to use his arms, breath and legs, as well as his fingers. Second, the bagpipe player cannot perform with sheet music. Finally, while he is busy with the instrument, the player must march.

"Young people expect it to be pretty easy, and it isn't," he said.

Bagpipes are only half the picture. No Scot worth his kilt would be caught without one.

"It's the most comfortable thing you ever had on," Leitch said. Comfort, however, has not accounted for people's fascination with the garment. It's only a matter of time before someone wearing a kilt is asked the typical question. That's bound to bring a typical Scottish reply.

"If you're big enough to find out, come on," Leitch said. But he did give a hint.

During World War II, Scottish Highland sergeants inspected troops with the aid of a mirror on their boots. Any unlucky trooper caught with more than the bare essentials could expect an extra work detail.

The St. Andrew's Society is an international order, Leitch said, although his organization is not affiliated with it. Similar groups exist for other nationalities.

Like many, the group has difficulty luring younger members.

Leitch said he understands that. Ties to the old country are not important to native second or third generation Americans, he said.

"You're an American and that's all you're interested in," he said.

Feelings for Scotland aside, Leitch knows his allegiance. And a trip last November to Scotland convinced him all the more.

"I really appreciate our country. I tell you we really have it good here."

"But it's still fun. There are so many things in this world and you get such a short time to see them. The fact is we're going to go back to Scotland again after I retire."

Revisions in zoning due airing

TWIN FALLS — A public hearing will be held July 18 on proposed revision of the Twin Falls County Zoning Ordinance.

The ordinance is being revised to comply with the newly enacted Twin Falls County Comprehensive Plan.

Ed Woods, county zoning administrator, said until the zoning ordinance is changed it will not be possible to implement the county plan because of conflicts.

One area of conflict is the division of land in agricultural zones. In the zoning ordinance individuals living in agricultural zones can divide land into five-acre parcels without special approval and public hearings. The county plan stipulates the minimum size of land division without making application to the zoning commission is 20 acres.

Woods said there are several other areas in which zone requirements must be changed to match county plan requirements.

He said at the same time the planning and zoning commission is recommending a recreational zone for the Melon Valley which would permit sale of land parcels of less than five acres where it appears suitable.

Presently the minimum there is five acres and the county plan would increase this to 20 acres.

Woods said some of the Melon Valley land is adaptable to housing development. In the recreational zone, subdivisions would be possible with public hearings and approval of the zoning board and county commissioners, Woods said.

The proposed zone would include everything from U.S. Highway 30 at Buhl to the Clear Lakes Road on the east of Buhl.

Zoning commissioners are also expected to act at the next meeting on a request from Tom Kalgane of Twin Falls for locating a home on the canyon rim within than the 50-foot limit.

Kalgane has purchased property northeast of Twin Falls and is proposing a home on the rim overlooking the Oregon, river and some falls on the north side.

He wants to locate his living room near the edge of a curve in the canyon rim in order to take advantage of the view in both directions.

A viewing board inspected the site Thursday morning.

Sex discrimination case Twin Falls trial to set precedent

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 5th District Court case set for August in Twin Falls will set a precedent in sex discrimination cases in Idaho.

Lloyd Walker, attorney for Betty Hoppe of Twin Falls, said the proceedings will be tried before a judge without a jury and will be the first of their kind in the state.

Mrs. Hoppe brought suit five-and-a-half years ago against the Idaho Department of Employment charging the state agency discriminated against her while she was employed in the Twin Falls office. She claimed male employees were given promotions and salary advances not available to her. She said this occurred in spite of her excellent work record and seniority.

The Idaho Human Rights Commission ruled in favor of Hoppe and the commission brought legal action with Mrs. Hoppe as a co-plaintiff.

District Judge Theoren W. Ward issued a judgment upholding the Human Rights Commission's recommendations, which granted Mrs. Hoppe back pay for the period since her resignation.

The Idaho Supreme Court reversed the district court action stating a summary judgment was not proper because the case was not a "contested case" under regulations governing the Human Rights Commission at the time of the Hoppe hearing.

Judge Ward had based his summary judgment on his findings that it was a "contested case."

The case was then returned to the court for a trial judgment and a date has been set for Aug. 13.

Walker said under trial procedure the case will be conducted the same as any other trial. Witnesses, including former co-workers, can be subpoenaed into court to testify as to the alleged discrimination. Under the previous procedure this was not possible.

Walker said the Hoppe case has been one of trial and error because no similar case has ever been heard in an Idaho court. He said he has heard of one or two other sex discrimination cases pending before Idaho courts, and he said they are apparently waiting for the Hoppe case to conclude so established procedures will be available.

Copper wire stolen

TWIN FALLS — Glafiro Martinez of Twin Falls Saturday reported about $45 worth of copper wire missing from his shed, located at 501 4th Avenue E., Twin Falls Police said Sunday.

About $15 was reported missing following a burglary at about 7 p.m. Saturday.

A June 18 burglary resulted in $30 worth of wire stolen from the shed. Police said Martinez did not report the original theft because he thought no crime had been committed.

One vehicle damaged

TWIN FALLS — A three-car accident Sunday caused extensive damage to one vehicle, but no injuries were reported, Twin Falls Police said.

James E. Anderson of Twin Falls was traveling east along the 200 block of 4th Avenue East when his car veered off the paved roadway and collided with a parked 1973 GMC pickup. The pickup, owned by Kerry Kepner of Twin Falls, in turn collided with Kepner's 1977 Chevrolet van.

The accident occurred at 3 a.m., police said. Anderson was cited for driving while under the influence of alcohol.

Damage to his 1966 Ford was estimated at $2,000. Damage to each of Kepner's vehicles was estimated at $300.

Accident on Fourth

TWIN FALLS — Randy A. Ledbetter, 20, of Twin Falls Saturday was charged with passing too close to an intersection following an accident that caused extensive damage to two vehicles.

The accident occurred at about 1:30 a.m. No injuries were reported, Twin Falls Police said Sunday.

Ledbetter was heading east on 4th Avenue East when he passed two vehicles less than 100 feet from an intersection with 3rd Street South and hit a car driven by Emil F. Traenkrner, 26, of Twin Falls. Traenkrner was turning onto 3rd Street when the incident occurred, police said.

Damage to Ledbetter's 1975 GMC pickup was estimated at $1,500. Damage to Traenkrner's 1968 International was estimated at $2,000.

Voters reject bonds

EMMETT (UPI) — For the second time in less than a year, Gem County voters have turned down a $150 million bond issue, which would have financed extensive remodeling for Bricks Elementary School.

The vote in last week's election was 734-644. The same bond issue was rejected by school patrons last week November.

Thief takes woodcut

TWIN FALLS — Martha Hooker, secretary of the Magic Valley Art Guild, told police someone took an $1,100 woodcut from a display at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

The picture disappeared between 3 p.m. Monday and 3 p.m. Wednesday last week, she said.

It was one of a number of paintings and art works displayed by the guild members in the lobby and first floor hallways at the hospital. The art piece by Gary Stone of Kimberly was located near the emergency room area. Police are investigating.

Thermal power bad for Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo. (UPI) — Energy developers believe the steam that belches to the surface around Yellowstone National Park can be tapped for power generation. And therein lies a dispute that Park Service officials say "could have broad international significance."

The same volcanic activity that spews Yellowstone's world-famous geysers, hot springs and bubbling mud also results in geothermal activity in isolated island Park, a 500,000-acre area on the eastern Idaho border, and in Targhee National Forest, a popular recreation area inhabited by the endangered bald eagle, peregrine falcon and once-endangered trumpeter swan. The forest's eastern boundary is just 13 miles from Old Faithful geyser in Yellowstone, and some federal officials fear that tapping steam in island Park and Targhee could disrupt the fragile underground "plumbing" that produces Yellowstone's 10,000 geothermal features.

More than 70 companies and individuals have proposed drilling 10,000-foot wells in island Park in search of steam energy, and there are 200 lease applications on file to develop geothermal energy in the Targhee National Forest.

The steam is touted as a clean, efficient power source and advocates say drilling would result in no impact on Yellowstone.

Occidental Petroleum Co., a leading proponent of geothermal development in the area, believes the risk to Yellowstone is small. It wants to develop 10,000 acres in the island Park area and sell power to rural electrical associations, state utilities and the Bonneville Power Administration in the Northwest.

"The chances are very remote" that Yellowstone would be affected, said Malcolm Moorman of the company's Bakersfield, Calif., office.

"The thought is almost ludicrous."

"Common sense dictates the use of a clean, safe, energy supply that will not be depleted in a few years," said Nancy Alden-Bragg of Boulder, Colo., who belongs to a group of about 20 persons that has applied for a lease.

"It is what the American public demand and it is what our survival demands."

Denver realtor S. Paul Wasserstein, another applicant, said, "We cannot set aside all land in the face of progress. The beauty of Yellowstone Park cannot be allowed to influence the development of alternative sources of power in other geothermal fields of our country. Why let our emotions restrict development of an energy source outside the park...?"

But National Park Service officials say there is a possible threat to the park, and the United States can ill afford to take a chance.

The threat has "broad international significance," said National Park Service Director William Washien. "When you say 'parks' in America, Yellowstone is the first one that comes to mind. When a threat comes to a place like Yellowstone, you're going to find everybody in this country standing up to it."

"We believe" there is a real possibility that the proposed utilization of geothermal resources west of Yellowstone National Park would seriously impair or destroy the principal resource of the park, Yellowstone, Yellowstone is the first one that comes to mind. When a threat comes to a place like Yellowstone, you're going to find everybody in this country standing up to it."

ment in other parts of the world is thought to have harmed nearby geothermal areas.

Geyser Valley in New Zealand was destroyed when the Waikare geothermal area in Nevada — once second to Yellowstone on the North American continent — dried up in 1961 following geothermal exploration in the previous two decades.

The government is studying how close geothermal development occurred to those areas, but the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management did not mention the possibility of similar destruction in their draft environmental impact statement on the island Park and Targhee National Forest plans.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has cited that omission and also warned that geothermal development in island Park may adversely affect air and water quality in Yellowstone.

A final impact statement by the Forest Service is due Oct. 1 and will recommend leasing in the island Park area. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus will have final approval.

Don't Blame Your Age For Poor Hearing

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Four-time national grand championship winner Dick Barrett, 60, from Pottsboro, Tex., took second with a performance of "Durang's Hornpipe," "Three O'Clock in the Morning," and "Little Joe's Rag."

Junior Daugherty, 46, of Mesilla Park, N.M., took third with "Huckleberry Hornpipe," "Gold and Silver Waltz," and "Texas Schottische."

Idaho Democrats push voter sign-up

MOSCOW (UPI) — Idaho Democrats have called for a heightened drive to register new voters, ending a two-day discussion of political, economic and social issues.

The Democratic Party Central Committee, meeting in Moscow, approved a resolution putting the committee on record as supporting a change to increase public accessibility to registrars through an outreach-type program to unregistered voters.

In a series of forums during the two-day meeting, delegates targeted poorly-organized blocs of voters as potential Democrats — including new high school graduates and Mexican-Americans.

Ketchum team stuns softball tourney

By RANDY FREY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — No one was more surprised than player-coach Rip Kirby that his Irving's Red Hot-Bonnet team won the Budweiser Class A open softball tournament Sunday at Harmon Park.

The Ketchum team swept through the 30-team field without a loss, a feat that is even more remarkable when considering it had played just four games prior to the tournament.

At first glance, the team looked like it would have trouble beating most C League teams. Half of the players were in shorts and the other half in long pants. Some of the players wore hats and others did not, and the ones who did all had on hats of a different color. Two players were even wearing dark sunglasses.

But once into the game, it was clear that Irving's was there to play.

"We really jelled for the tournament," said Kirby, who was probably the most feared hitter in the tournament. He hit five home runs in three games Sunday, and he could have had more had pitchers not walked him intentionally four times.

"The wind was very favorable," he said. "Especially for us left-handers."

Kirby said his team has been together for the past two years, playing in the Ketchum A League. Because of the colder weather in Sun Valley, softball season does not begin until after the first of June.

"We are all rather shocked with winning the tournament," Kirby said. "But we played some very good softball."

Irving's is made up of a collection of good athletes, including five members of the Sun Valley Suns hockey team. Along with Kirby, Phil Hoene, Dick Nelson, John Burke and Hermie Haavik, all play ice hockey in the winter.

"We have some good ballplayers," said Kirby. "And picking up Marty Lakey really helped out."

Lakey, a former College of Southern Idaho pitcher, played for Donnelly's Sports in Twin Falls last year but has since moved to Ketchum. He joined Kirby with five home runs in the tournament.

Irving's started the day by beating Wholesale Carpet of Twin Falls 16-13 in 10 innings. Kirby had two home runs and Shawn Jenkins of Wholesale Carpets had one.

The Ketchum team then dumped Overhead Door of Boise 13-1 in the semi-final game, scoring at least one run in all seven innings. Kirby had two more home runs and Lakey ripped three over the Harmon Park fences.

Overhead Door then waited through the loser bracket games to see who it would play in the loser's finals, and K&W Masonry of Rupert downed Jack Ellis Glass of Boise and Brass Lamp Pizza of Boise to make the finals.

Both teams scored five times in the first inning, with K&W Masonry adding three more in the second. Overhead Door took a 9-8 lead with four runs in the fifth, but K&W came back with two in the fifth to take a 10-9 win.

Paul Saras, Kent Driscoll, Bob Head and Denny Warburton all had home runs for K&W.

Saras hit two home runs and Driscoll another one in the final game, but it was not enough to get past Irving's.

Lakey, besides hitting five home runs, was named the tournament's leading hitter with a .750 average. Head, the K&W shortstop, was named the tournament MVP.

And the outstanding umpire award went to Steve Thomas of Twin Falls.

Rubwiler Class A Open:
1. Irving's Red Hot-Bonnet team (Ketchum); 2. K&W Masonry (Rupert); 3. Overhead Door (Boise); 4. Brass Lamp Pizza (Boise); 5. Jack Ellis Glass (Boise); 6. Wholesale Carpet (Twin Falls).
Sunday's scores:
Jack Ellis Glass 15, Moose Hardware 13; Irving's 18, Wholesale Carpet 15, 10 innings; Brass Lamp 5, R.C. Dale 6; Rocky Broad 8, Sargent 7; Intercontinental Direct 9, Overhead Door 10; K&W Masonry 16, 4 innings; Jack Ellis Glass 9, Rocky's Bread 11; Brass Lamp 11, Intercontinental Direct 11; K&W Masonry 15, Wholesale Carpet 11; Jack Ellis Glass 8, Brass Lamp 8; Wholesale Carpet 11; K&W Masonry 11, Brass Lamp 9; K&W Masonry 11, Overhead Door 9; Irving's 11, K&W Masonry 7.

Affirmed hits record earnings

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Affirmed achieved a racing immortality by becoming the first horse to earn $2 million when he captured the $500,000 Hollywood Gold Cup Sunday at Hollywood Park.

Carrying 132 pounds, the most in his career, the 1978 Triple Crown winner and Horse of the Year was extended to the limit down the stretch by second-place finisher Sirlind but responded to the urging of jockey Laffit Pincay Jr. to score a three-quarter length victory. Text finished third and Farnesio was fourth in the field of 10.

Affirmed raced the 1 1/4 miles in 1:58. 2/5, just one-fifth of a second off the stakes and track record set by Quack in 1972, which also tied the world record.

The crowd of more than 50,000 installed Affirmed the 1-5 favorite and he paid $2.60, $2.20 and $2.10. Sirlind returned $2.80 and $2.10 while Text, as part of a three-horse entry, paid $2.10 to show.

The victory was the fourth straight for Affirmed, who closed out his Western campaign with the Gold Cup victory to await a few select fall races before being retired at the end of this year.

The winner's purse of $275,000 increased Affirmed's lifetime earnings to $2,044,218 to boost him past Kelso, who had been the leading money winner with $1,977,896.

Affirmed had a battle all the way from the Irish-bred Sirlind, who came out of the gate first and then trailed the winner by a head going past the stands the first time and around the clubhouse turn. Farnesio raced closest to the leaders followed by Text while the rest of the field lagged behind.

Going around the final turn, Sirlind, with Darrell McHargue aboard, drew almost even with Affirmed but as they passed the eighth pole Pincay applied the whip and Affirmed responded to draw out to the win of nearly a length.

The rewards were rich for the horses behind Affirmed, with Sirlind earning $100,000 for second, Text $72,000 for third and Farnesio $38,000 for fourth. Text was coupled with Syncopate and True Statement as the Elmendorf Farm entry. Others finishing out of the money were Double Discount, As de Copas, Saros and How Curious.

It was Affirmed's 19th win in 28 starts for the Harbison Farm of Winton, W. Jacksonville, Fla., who bred the son of Exclusive Native in Kentucky.

In climaxing his West coast campaign, Affirmed added the Gold Cup to his wins in the California, Santa Anita Handicap and Strub Stakes, all worth $100,000 or more.

Coetzee clobbers Spinks

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI) — South African Gerrie Coetzee stunned former heavyweight champion Leon Spinks after 2:03 in the first round of their World Boxing Association semifinal elimination bout Sunday.

Three clubbing right hands from the 24-year-old smashed Spinks to the canvas and the third and final blow sent Spinks tumbling against the ropes. Although Spinks got up, his eyes were glazed and referee Isidor Rodriguez of Venezuela stopped the bout.

Coetzee now will meet American John Tate for the WBA title which Muhammad Ali is expected to give up officially next month.

Watching from ringside, Tate said: "I thought he was real good but I shall beat him."

There were only 1,500 spectators to witness the upset in a makeshift stadium on a parking lot beneath the cliff where the castle of Monaco's ruler, Prince Ranier, stands.

Of these, 320 were South Africans and at the finish they tried to invade the ring to salute their hero. But scores of Monte Carlo riot police prevented them from reaching the canvas. The South Africans had jeered "Ali, Ali" at the former world champion as Spinks came in to the ring for his first fight since he lost the title to Ali last September.

Spinks, the 25-year-old Olympic light heavyweight champion from St. Louis, Mo., was expected to win easily in spite of weighing only 200 pounds to Coetzee's 220 pounds.

Spinks swarmed into the attack at the start, landing a cluster of left jabs and right crosses.

Yanks say Reg to stay

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York Yankees President Al Rosen admitted Sunday that Reggie Jackson has been put on the waiver list but insisted that the controversial player will remain with the club.

Rosen said that Jackson, who stated before the return of New York Manager Billy Martin that he could not play for him, remains on the disabled list and will be the Yankees' right fielder as soon as he and team doctor John Bonomo agree that he is ready to play.

"Reggie was put on the waiver bulletin," Rosen said. "But just about every player will be put on it at least once. This procedure has been going on since baseball began."

"Reggie will be back as soon as he can and will be our right fielder. Billy (Martin) has said that the Yankees need Reggie to win the World Series and Reggie is anxious to get going."

Rosen also said that emotional outbursts between Jackson and Martin, which almost led to blows in the dugout in Boston's Fenway Park in 1977, are commonplace in baseball.

"There are a lot of players who don't get along with the manager or other players," Rosen said. "Look at (Joe) Tinker and (Johnny) Evers. They never talked to each other and were probably the best double-play combination in baseball in their time."

"Reggie gives 110 percent every time he goes between the white lines and he will not be back until he and the doctor agree that he's ready. He might be out a week or he might be out a lot longer."

Jackson injured his left leg June 2 when he was running the field at the end of an inning, tearing muscle fibers in his left leg between the calf and the Achilles tendon.

Wimbledon field ready

Borg seeks fourth straight tennis title

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — One is Supercool, and the other has become known as Superbrat. Two weeks from now, it is expected that one of them will be crowned the King of Wimbledon.

Ejorn Borg, the stolid, stoic Swede, always calm under pressure, always reserved in style, is seeking to become the first man to win Wimbledon four years in a row since a New Zealander named Anthony Wilding did it 66 years ago.

On current form, it is expected that his stiffest challenge will come from 29-year-old John McEnroe, a fiery-tempered New Yorker who defiantly flaunts his nervous tics against foes, fans and officials during his matches.

well because it's Wimbledon, but I don't go look for arguments, you know."

Undenably, when he settles down to tennis, McEnroe has enormous talent, and the young left-hander holds a 3-2 lifetime edge over Borg.

Borg, the No. 1 seed and 6-4 favorite, has a tougher draw than the second-seeded McEnroe, beginning with Monday's opening match against a tough American veteran, Tom Gorman. Before Borg can think about a final, though, he very possibly may have to contend with third seed Jimmy Connors in the semifinals.

Connors, who lost to Borg in the last two Wimbledon finals, and was the beaten finalist three of the last four years, provides a mystery element this time around. He is concerned about the imminent birth of his first child, which could affect his play, and has said he may fly home if his wife Patil delivers the baby during the tournament.

Not forgotten by Borg is the nightmare of last year's opening round, when he dropped the first two sets to American Victor Amaya, nor the near debacle of 1977 when he also fell two sets down to Australian Mark Edmondson in an early round.

"I want to be known as one of the greatest," Borg states simply. "I want people to say, 'He was one of the great players.' That is why I am more hungry for a fourth successive win. Then I can be sure."

"I still want their things. I want the U.S. Open title because I have never won it. But Wimbledon this year is my priority."

While Borg is dealing with his opening round anxieties on center court, McEnroe will be next door on Court One for his first round match against Terry Moor of Monroe, La. And for McEnroe, as for Borg, there will be no fear of overconfidence.

the All-England Club at 2 p.m. (7 a.m. MDT). "The first round is still the hardest, the match in which I am the most vulnerable and the one I must really be prepared for," said the 23-year-old Borg. "It takes time to get used to the center court, the atmosphere of the tournament."

Shoemaker to ride Spectacular Bid

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Jockey Ronnie Franklin, whose recent misfortunes include a cocaine charge and a paternity suit, has been replaced by Bill Shoemaker as principal jockey for Spectacular Bid — the horse Franklin rode to victory in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness.

The bad news for the increasingly controversial 19-year-old jockey was announced Saturday by Bid's trainer Grover "Bud" Delp. Delp said Franklin "has suffered from the pressure of enjoying too much success too soon in his career."

Delp threatened to demote Franklin to a stable boy last week after his young jockey was arrested on a cocaine possession charge in a parking lot at Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif.

Franklin, who was tald about the charge Thursday, said he was not as upset about the move as his arrest. Franklin was jailed last week and later released on bail pending a hearing Thursday.

Delp said he picked veteran Bill Shoemaker to ride Bid because he wants Franklin to become a kid again and learn his profession.

Shoemaker, 47, has ridden more than 7,000 winners and earned more than 700 million in purses. He is currently riding in Hollywood Park.

Delp said the arrest was a blessing. In disguise, because it will relieve the pressures that have been mounting on Franklin since he won the Derby and the Preakness and reiterated he was not removing Franklin because of Bid's loss in the Belmont Stakes that cost him racing's Triple Crown.

Caulkins withdraws

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (UPI) — Tracy Caulkins, appearing tired and not near peak condition, withdrew Sunday from the women's 200-meter bobsroke in the Swim Meet of Champions.

Caulkins, the nation's top amateur athlete in 1978 and a member of the Nashville Aquatic Club, planned to compete in seven individual events and three relays.

She is scheduled to represent the United States—in four individual events and two relays in the Pan American Games July 1-15 at San Juan, Puerto Rico.
