Domestic summit cloaked in mystery

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

Governors returning from the Camp David domestic summit said Carter did not give details of his plans. But they said it would include a way of making the oil companies

Seven governors who flew from Washington to the National Governors' Association conference said Carter did not give details of his plans. But they said it would include a way of making the oil companies

"more accountable" to the government and the public and was aimed at freeing the nation from the "stranglehold" of the international oil cartel.

"The meeting was like a new Declaration of Independence for the United States," said Gov. James Hunt, D-N.C.

Carter flatly ruled out wage and price controls, they said. After talking with the governors, Carter met with a civil rights leader, a union official and a citizens' lobbyist at Camp David Saturday to learn how the man on the street is coping with America's economic woes.

A White House official cautioned the public against expecting any dramatic results from Carter's wide-ranging talks with prominent Americans at the remote mountain retreat in Maryland.

The official conceded the president is taking a close look at the performance of administration officials, indicating a shakeup may be in the making. The aide indicated the president is hoping the talks will lead him to a new way of dealing with the nation's lengthy gas lines, double-digit inflation and threat of recession.

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell said Carter's mood was "very positive and very good." Visitors generally agreed, saying Carter looked "very well" and "jogged several miles Saturday."

Carter invited former Common Cause President John Gardner, civil rights leader Jesse Jackson and AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Lane Kirkland to Saturday's talks at the isolated retreat.

Joining them were veteran presidential adviser Clark Clifford; long-time diplomat Sol Linowitz; political operative Bob Keefe, who ran Sen. Henry Jackson's presidential campaign in 1976, and Barbara Warme Newell, president of Wellesley (Mass.) College.

A White House official said Carter wanted to question the "generalist" group on the status of American society. The group adjourned Saturday evening and planned to stay overnight at Camp David.

The president wound up discussions with a delegation of governors earlier Saturday. He summoned Cabinet officials, oil industry leaders and academicians to Camp David for Sunday's round of talks.

Officials said the domestic summit, which was to hear the views of congressmen early next week, was expected to last through Wednesday.

Kennedy ahead

Carter losing political grip on the South

By WAYNE KING
UPI Times Service

ATLANTA — Hamilton Jordan and other White House aides who are pressing Southern states to set their primaries ahead to offset expected poor showings by President Carter in the early New England primaries are in for a shock: A new poll has found that the president is running behind Sen. Edward M. Kennedy among registered Southern Democrats by 11 percentage points.

The new poll, conducted by the Darden Research Corporation of Atlanta and released Saturday, also indicates that Carter would lose to former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, a Republican, by 48 percent to 44 percent with only 8 percent undecided, a low figure this far ahead of any election.

The poll suggests that, if Democratic primaries were held today, Carter would lose every Southern state, including his home state of Georgia, to Kennedy, the Massachusetts Democrat. Among all voters, the poll showed Carter running barely even with Kennedy. Moreover, Kennedy has gained six percentage points since a similar poll was taken two and a half months ago.

"The writing is on the wall," said Claiborne Darden Jr., president of the Darden Research Corp. "Mr. Carter's last bastion of defense is broken; he's getting close to being a man without a country. The polls nationally have been bad, this one is especially so."

The new Darden poll was conducted by telephone from June 26 to 29 among 750 registered voters in 10 states: Southern states — Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia — such a poll, as a statistical matter, would have a margin of error of plus or minus 3.6 percent.

When Democrats were asked, "If Ted Kennedy was running against Jimmy Carter for President, who would you favor?" 51 percent said Kennedy and 40 percent selected Carter; only 9 percent said they were undecided. In mid-April, 45 percent of the Southern Democrats polled said they favored the president, while 39 percent favored Kennedy.

In the new poll, of those who said they voted for Carter in 1976, 46 percent now favor Kennedy, and 43 percent prefer Carter.

Over all, among Democratic, Republican and independent voters in the 10 states, 49 percent said they would vote for Carter and 42.7 percent said they preferred Kennedy.

The Massachusetts senator's strength was in direct proportion to the age of those questioned. Fifty-five percent of the young voters, from 18 to 24 years old, chose Kennedy over the president, while only 35 percent of those 65 and older said they would vote for Kennedy.

Among Southern blacks, who were instrumental in Carter's 1976 victory, Kennedy fared even better than he did among the young — 60 percent said they favored him and 29 percent said they preferred Carter.

Ironically, the new poll was taken at a time when the president's political advisers were applying pressure on some Southern governors, including George D. Busbee of Georgia, to move up their 1980 primaries to March and consolidate them so that Carter would gain some regional momentum, offsetting expected poor showings in the earlier New England primaries.

Busbee said Tuesday that he would probably go along with Carter's campaign strategists, but, if the present pattern holds and Kennedy's name is on the primary ballots, such a strategy might backfire.

FEC report to be released

Bilingual voting lagging in Southwest

SAN ANTONIO — A long-awaited report by the Federal Election Commission on the conduct of bilingual elections in parts of California and of the Southwest are providing minimal or even no compliance with either the letter or the spirit of the Federal Voting Rights Act.

The lack of compliance, the report said, is most pervasive in Texas, whose Hispanic population is second in size only to that of California and which is the state "most seriously affected" by the 1975 amendments to the act that sought to remove linguistic barriers to voting for citizens who do not speak English. The 220-page report, which has not yet been released by the commission, found that many local officials remained unfamiliar with the provisions of the law and that many of those were disinclined to learn more about what it required of them.

Compliance was generally better in large cities than in small rural areas, the report said, but the commission investigators everywhere encountered numerous instances of misunderstandings of the law, as well as expressions of "blatant hostility" toward it by local officials responsible for carrying it out.

More than half the 403 officials who cooperated in the survey said they would not do more than they had already done "to promote the involvement of language minorities in the political process," the report said.

It added that "the bulk of respondents" had taken advantage of the survey to assert "the lack of need for bilingual elections" at all and to inveigh against federal intervention in local affairs.

The report was completed last December but is not scheduled for release until next month. The study has generated concern among Hispanic leaders that Congress may prematurely conclude that bilingual elections are not practicable and move to dilute, or even abolish, the statutes that now require them.

A draft copy of the report, obtained by The New York Times, asserts: "The electoral system of the United States has, by and large, been quite reluctant to face its multilingual problem. Even now, one gets the feeling that this legislation is looked upon as a necessary-evil that hopefully will go away, preferably in the near future."

Political jurisdictions in some 30 states are affected by the 1975 law, which mandates the holding of bilingual elections based on a complicated formula, worked out by the Justice Department, that takes account of the number of non-English-speaking voters in each county as well as illiteracy rates and levels of participation in past elections.

Instant swimming pool

Youngsters living at the end of Caswell Avenue West took a dip Saturday afternoon when an eight-inch water main broke, creating a neighborhood pool almost a block long. City water crew were not so happy. They worked for more than three hours to mend the break and restore service to about 10 homes. Dale Nowbry of the Twin Falls city water department said a plug flew out of the end of the line, probably when construction crews dug away the reinforcement behind it. A sewer and water line extension project is underway in the area. Lupe Gallan, who lives in the home nearest the break said no hoses were damaged, but part of his garden washed away. The Gallan children and their neighbors above waded knee deep in the water.

U.S. jeans going legitimate in Russia

WASHINGTON — The symbol of "Western decadence," blue jeans soon may contribute to the gross national product of the Soviet Union, the nation which has so strongly denounced such other symbols of present day culture as rock and abstract art.

For years, visitors to the Soviet Union have found jeans to be prime black market commodities. Now, the Soviet government is negotiating with U.S. companies to set up a jeans factory in the USSR.

Levi Strauss & Co., maker of Levis; V.F. Corp., maker of Lee Riders; and Blue Bell Inc., maker of Wranglers, all have representatives in Moscow negotiating for the potentially profitable contract.

Although details of the talks are scarce, some company representatives say, even they can't find out what's going on — it appears that the Soviets are extremely interested in setting jeans production under way.

Officials probing stabbing at prison

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho State Prison Warden Ed. Dermitt said Saturday the prison has been locked down and no visitors will be allowed during an investigation into the stabbing of an inmate.

Dermitt said it was not known who stabbed Crawford or what kind of weapon was used. He said the incident occurred at about 1:15 p.m.

The warden said it is not known how serious Crawford's wounds are. "We didn't have time to check," Dermitt said. "We just found him lying there and rushed him away to the hospital."

Dermitt said there was no way of telling if Crawford's wounds were multiple because "he was covered with blood."

Radiation reports' credibility doubted

BY EDWARD ROBY
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Official claims that low levels of radiation were released in the Three Mile Island nuclear accident came from a firm partly owned by the utility that operates the reactor, citizens groups reported Saturday.
 Two groups allied with consumer activist Ralph Nader said General Public Utilities, which owns the Three Mile Island complex, also owns part of Radiation Management Corp., the firm that processed radiation detectors for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.
 The Critical Mass Energy Project and the Health Research Group said their investigation also showed the Philadelphia firm lost what may have been its only other government contract for falling to turn in timely atomic fallout reports to the Department of Energy.

 The groups reported that NRC set up 47 radiation monitoring devices, called thermoluminescent dosimeters, at 42 sites scattered around the Three Mile Island reactor beginning March 30, two days after the worst U.S. nuclear accident occurred.

 When the commission collected the dosimeters, it asked Radiation Management to process them, although at least three government laboratories were capable of doing the work, the investigation revealed.
 "Unfortunately, the NRC's use of RMC may cloud the credibility of the agency's released figures for radiation exposure of the general public," it said.

 The NRC announced in April that the cumulative radiation dose for persons living within five miles of the malfunctioning reactor was 80 millirems, considered an insignificant amount.

Carter's hope: synthetic fuels pro

By PETER S. NAGAN
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter could take a giant step toward solving the country's long-term energy problems — and boosting his chances of re-election — by getting behind the proposal for an all-out synthetic fuels program.

But instead, the president gives the appearance of dragging his feet.

Officials of his administration are offering only lukewarm support to congressional programs for commercial extraction of oil from coal, shale, or tar sands, saying that the White House will go along if certain changes are made.

Carter, himself, though, has said nothing. His energy spokesmen continue to offer alternating optimistic and gloomy forecasts about gasoline and other fuel supplies. But the public doesn't know what to believe, whom to blame, and whether there are really grounds for hoping that the lines at gasoline stations will disappear.

Maybe it isn't all Carter's fault, or Congress' either, but most Americans have the feeling that there is no one in charge when it comes to energy. There is no national energy policy.

The country is drifting along, letting a conspiracy of weak but oil-rich nations dictate major American decisions on domestic and foreign policy. We are witnessing growing government intervention in our lives — through a maze of fuel regulations — that doesn't seem to promise progress.

That's why the proposal by several prominent citizens and former government officials for a massive crash program to create a synthetic fuels industry, has caught the country's imagination. It would parallel the effort during World War II in which we built a synthetic rubber industry that, in comparatively few years, was meeting 67 percent of our needs.

Specifically, the program would call for legislation providing loan guarantees, tax incentives — and guaranteed prices to private industry for the construction of conversion plants applying already known technology. The price guarantees would protect industry from price cutting by the oil cartel should a successful synthetic program provoke such efforts at sabotage.

The program wouldn't end the gas station lines right away. It is expected to be producing 500,000 barrels of synthetic fuel by 1984 and — as the program is expanded — perhaps 10 times that much by 1990. Together with continuing conservation efforts, that could reduce America's dependence on foreign oil to manageable proportions, break the oil cartel, and restore the country's freedom of action in domestic and foreign affairs.

To be sure, there are strong and legitimate arguments against a crash synthetic fuels program. There will be a lot of money wasted as various production methods are pursued, including some that prove to be blind alleys.

What's more, political pressures could lead to uneconomic projects in the wrong places, and one congressman called "the biggest pork barrel in history." And the more successful the program, the less incentive there'll be for further conservation.

The biggest argument of opponents, though, is the cost. Though much of the government's obligation would be contingent — that is, invoked only if private industry is losing out — Washington will have to build some plants and pay for some process development. And that would operate against the president's drive for a balanced budget for fiscal 1981.

But the country is in a crisis. Ordinary considerations of cost cannot be allowed to control the decision. The case for drastic action is overwhelming — and the public is waiting for leadership.

Here's a chance for Jimmy Carter to provide it — to galvanize the country into action, turning doubt and dismay into renewed confidence. In the process, he can retrieve some of the erosion that his prestige has suffered on the energy as well as many other issues: He can come across as a purposeful, even forceful leader.

He would not only be doing a lot to re-establish U.S. energy self-sufficiency, but would also be convincing many doubting Americans that he is a leader worth voting for.

Election year tax cut not inflation's answer

The biennial tax cut, Congress' favorite election-year charade, is already gathering momentum, fueled by fears of an impending recession.

Even without the threat of recession, Congress grows extremely concerned with the status of the American taxpayer about once every two years, coincidentally just before election time.

About every two years, to hear some Congressmen tell it, a tax cut really is warranted — to reduce the burden on the American taxpayer.

This year the need for a tax cut will be even more pressing, several Congressmen have already announced, to stimulate the economy out of the impending recession.

But closer examination of why a tax cut is necessary every two years shows that Congress is not doing anyone any favors.

Two years of wage inflation at the present rate kicks so many people into higher tax brackets that, if Congress didn't declare a tax cut, it might face the embarrassing situation of having balanced the budget without having cut a single government spending program.

So a cut is declared, and everybody is happy.

Except that the cut usually leaves most taxpayers paying about the same percentage of their income out in taxes as they did before their wages went up. And many lose real income to taxes in the year before the cut is declared, income that is never replaced.

If the Congress really wanted to do the taxpayer a favor, it would index the tax system to inflation, so taxpayers would not get hurt in the lag period between income increases and tax cuts.

But if the Congress did that, it wouldn't be able to declare a tax cut every election year.

As for the argument that a tax cut will be necessary to stimulate the economy out of the recession that everyone knows is coming but no one knows when, that is a dubious proposition at best.

Tax cuts have worked in the past to properly put the economy back on its feet, but only when the timing has been right.

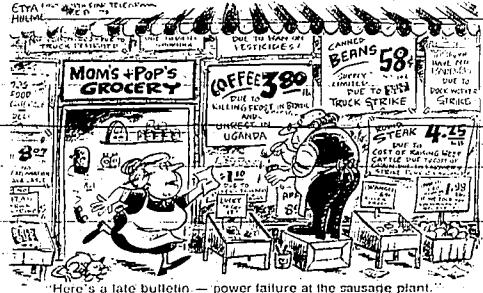

On the other hand, tax cuts have also worked to overstimulate the economy after a healthy rebound has already begun, accomplishing nothing more than initiating another round of spiraling inflation and setting the stage for yet another recession.

Yes, taxpayers will deserve a tax cut this year.

But when they get one they shouldn't thank Congress.

And Congress should be wary of making a larger-than-usual cut on the premise it will cure a recession.

A balanced budget will do more in the long run to help taxpayers fight inflation than a huge tax cut, and the bigger the tax cut, the slimmer the chances of reducing the federal deficit.

Tough lady attacks

Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — If you like tough, hard-nosed, spunky little ladies — and who doesn't? — you'll like Sandra Jamison.

She really is little: about 4 feet 11 inches tall. And at a full meal, she weighs about 97 pounds.

And tough? Somewhere on the South Side, there is a tall, gangling teen-ager, whose eyes still may be smarting and ears ringing after his terrifying confrontation with little Sandra.

He met her a few days ago at the bus stop near an elevated train station, although they were not introduced formally.

The bus stop was crowded with people on their way home from their jobs. The crowd included Sandra, who works for an "insurance" company downtown.

Sandra's purse strap was looped over her arm. As she moved with the crowd toward a bus, she felt a slight tugging. She assumed it was just someone trying to push ahead of her.

Just as she got on board, a woman behind her said, "Use, I think your wallet is gone. That boy just took it."

Sandra looked in her purse. The wallet was gone. She could see a tall young man push through the crowd and with something in his hand toward the train station.

Enraged, Sandra jumped off the bus and ran after him. Then she noticed two policemen "tackling," illegally parked cars.

"Some bastard just pickpocketed me," she said to the cops. "And I'm not going to be responsible for my actions. I'm going after him."

She said the policeman casually responded: "OK. If you see him, let us know."

"They didn't even ask me any questions," Sandra said later. "They just kept on writing their tickets."

When she got to the station, she couldn't see the young man. But a scotchound train was pulling out, and she figured he was on it.

"I got the next train and rode to the end of the line at 56th. I took a chance that he'd be there."

But he wasn't. So she gave up the chase, rode back to 87th, and went to catch her bus.

"I didn't feel bad about the money, because I didn't have any money in the wallet," she said. "I keep my money in another part of my purse. But my business cards were in the wallet, and my I.D.s. And the wallet was new. It was a gift from my husband. That made me madder than anything else."

As she approached the bus stop — there he was.

"He was standing on the edge of the crowd. Just as he did before, acting like he was going to get on the bus. He must have been planning to do the same thing to someone else."

"Oh, it was him, all right. I recognized him right off. About 6 feet tall, and skinny, with a beige coat on."

"And he had a sneaky look on his face. He is a very sneaky-looking boy."

At that point, the prudent course of action would have been to look around for a cop and hope he would take a break in writing his tickets.

"I guess I didn't have any money," Sandra said. "But I got so mad when I saw him that I decided I would do something horrible to him."

So she walked up behind him, stood on her toes, and screamed at the top of her lungs into his ear. "You rat! You stole my wallet!"

The kid jumped about two feet straight into the air, she estimates. And when he came down, things got worse.

"I pulled out my can of Mace and I sprayed it right in his eyes and up his nose," she said. "Paast. Paast. I really gave it to him right in the face."

Mace is something like tear gas. A squirt in the face will knock you off your feet. That's what happened to the young man.

Sounding like a happy housewife in a TV soap commercial, Sandra said: "That stuff is wonderful. He fell right down. I had never used it before, and I was really impressed. It is so great. I was walking, he couldn't see or breathe or anything. He just fell right down on the sidewalk and was wiggling around with his hands over his face."

So if the makers of Mace ever begin doing commercials, Sandra is available. But to resume the story:

"He has my paper bag and I grabbed it to see if my wallet was in it, but there were just some clothes."

"So I hit him on the head with my purse and said: 'Where's my wallet, you stupid ass, you damn fool, you. I'll get you, you wallah. He couldn't see or breathe or anything. He just fell right down on the sidewalk and was wiggling around with his hands over his face.'

"I cried to search his pockets, but he crawled away. Then he got up on his feet and tried to run away, but he couldn't run because of the Mace. He just walked, but I kept following him and yelling."

"There were a lot of people watching, but nobody did anything. I guess they didn't know what was going on. Or maybe they thought I was crazy. My hair was kind of flying and my coat was open and I was hitting him with my purse and pointing the Mace at him and screaming."

"When he got his breath, he pointed at me and said: 'You're crazy, lady, you're crazy.'

"He kept going down the street, trying to get away from me, and I kept following him and hitting him with my purse and trying to spray him some more."

"But I finally got his breath and started running. His legs are a lot longer than mine, and I couldn't keep up."

"So I went back and caught the next bus and went home. But every time the bus stopped, I kept hoping he'd get on. I would have let him have it in the face with the Mace again."

The next day someone turned in the contents of the wallet to the Chicago Transit Authority and the wallet and its contents were returned to Sandra. The thief apparently tossed everything on the sidewalk while looking for money.

"I got everything back," said Sandra. "And I taught him a lesson he'll never forget."

But after talking to Sandra, one thing bothers me.

"What if it wasn't the same young man? The annals of crime are filled with cases of mistaken identity. And the city is filled with youths who are 6 feet tall, gangly, and have sneaky looks on their faces. Most teen-agers look sneaky — it is their natural expression."

If it was the wrong kid, what did he think? And even more important, what did he tell his mother when he came home into the house, wheezing, sputtering, tears streaming from his red eyes, bruises on his brow?

Did he babble to his mother: "Ma, there was this lady dwarf and she had a can of Mace on her face. ..."

Believe me, mother, if your lad told you that, it is true. He's on my drugs. Or maybe he is, but it still is the truth.

Laetrile bedside opinion

WASHINGTON — Considered in a vacuum, which is where the Supreme Court often seems to operate, the Court's recent opinion in the Laetrile case is sound, sensible and unexceptional. Considered by the bedside of a cancer patient, the opinion is something else entirely.

On the surface, the case involved little more than a routine matter of statutory construction. Under the Food and Drug Act, the government had banned the use of a drug product known as Laetrile. Did the government have the power to issue this order? A district court in Oklahoma City had said no. The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had agreed.

The lower courts turned a tolerant eye on Laetrile. The drug is derived from amygdalin, a substance that occurs widely in nature. Taken properly, it is no more toxic than aspirin. Though there is no scientifically acceptable proof that the drug is effective against cancer, thousands of persons have managed to give it a try. The testimonial evidence is impressive. The lower courts found that for terminally ill patients, it makes no sense to insist that drugs be "safe" and "effective." Let them have Laetrile — if they want it.

The Supreme Court reversed. In a unanimous opinion by Justice Marshall, the Court held that the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration had not abused his authority. The statute is clear and unambiguous. The law contains no exception for terminally ill patients; the legislative history demonstrates that Congress intended no such exception. Laetrile cannot qualify for special treatment under the law's grandfather clauses.

"Under our constitutional framework," said Marshall, "federal courts do not sit as councils of revision — empowered to rewrite legislation in accord with their own conceptions of prudent public policy." No one can quarrel with that pious assertion.

Marshall went on to emphasize that the Court intended its decision to apply not only to Laetrile but also to every other drug that fails to satisfy the act's requirements.

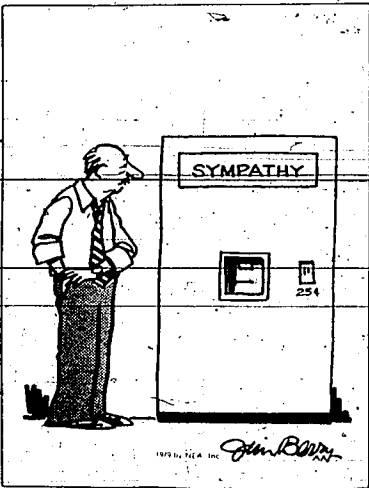

"To accept the proposition that the safety and efficacy standards of the act have no relevance for terminal patients is to deny the commissioner's authority over all drugs, however toxic or ineffectual, for such individuals. If history is any guide, this new market would not be long overbooked. Slice the turn of the century, resourceful entrepreneurs have advertised a wide variety of purportedly simple and painless cures for cancer, including liniments of turpentine, mustard, oil, eggs and ammonia;

peat moss; arrangements of colored floodplains; pastes made from glycerin and Lumburger cheese; mineral tablets; and 'Fountain of Youth' mixtures of spices, and it has been a bit of the clock since medical experts regarded leeches as the legitimate and conventional therapy for "high blood" pressure. Only yesterday, as time is measured, the exact surgical drills holes in a lunatic's head to let the demons out. It is a characteristic of the totalitarian state, not the free state, to decree that a particular kind of medical treatment is "approved" and that other kinds are banned under penalty of law.

No one can quarrel with the basic objectives of the Food and Drug Act. Yes, the people should be protected up to a point — against quackery and fraud. But it is a cruel kindness on the part of government to go beyond that point.

The First and Ninth Amendments, in my own view establish the right of a free citizen to let his own personal decisions about his own medical treatment. By conventional standards those decisions may be wrong. But it is far better for the health of a free society to let a man make wrong decisions than to protect them insistently from their own folly.

Gooding County assessor lauded for reappraisal stand

Editor, Times-News:

I recently viewed with some degree of interest, the scathing editorial in the Times-News, taking Gooding County assessor Wes Trounson to task for refusing to implement a property re-evaluation program in Gooding County.

It is little secret that Wes is the longest tenured assessor in the state of Idaho, a foremost tax authority, and above all, respected by his constituents. Wes has maintained the courage to question the ambiguous directives of the Tax Commission.

The Commission would have us believe that Idaho law directs that each of Idaho's 22 assessors to completely re-evaluate all real property in the county every five years. That is a half truth.

The present Tax Commission regulation directs the assessors to conduct an on-going property valuation program, but leaves to the discretion of the assessor; the method he will employ.

Property re-evaluation is nothing more than a vicious, on-going, bureaucratic attempt to broaden the tax base at the expense of the home owner. I would challenge any member of the Idaho State Tax Commission to put in writing the section of the Idaho Code directing each county to conduct a comprehensive property re-appraisal every five years.

I have repeatedly asked Commissioner Don Loveland to do just that and he won't. He knows he can't, and so does Mr. Trounson, so why not refuse. Wes Trounson should be applauded for possessing the courage to protect the people of Gooding County.

Check the facts, and I believe you will agree that Mr. Trounson is only answering to the people who elected him and ignoring the unanswerable bureaucrats. This re-evaluation boondoggle has come under increasing scrutiny in Lincoln, Jerome and Bonner counties.

Possibly, instead of playing the Magic Valley watchdog, the Times-News should also begin asking a few questions.

After all, if it had a few years ago, it would not be paying out over a million and a half dollars to the Sierra Life Insurance Company.

We should all begin to ask a few questions of our Tax Commission and our Legislature before we are faced with an unmanageable tax burden.

Free enterprise system has answers

Editor, Times-News:

Open letter to Sen. Frank Church

Your solution to the fuel shortages are true to form. The government is again the golden goose and the answer to all our problems, both individual and collective. When will you discover that the free enterprise system is left free of government interference. With proper incentives, will build aircraft, run railroads, explore for oil, develop gasohol, provide jobs, extract oil from oil shale, develop electric plants and all other forms of production, without government subsidies?

Collectivism is not a solver of problems. It only creates them. The initiative and creativeness of men are destroyed by its use. No country can long endure and support itself after embracing such a system. The free enterprise system of America, even with both hands tied behind its back has kept the collective world alive. The life blood of America is nearly exhausted. Please, Mr. Church, give it a chance to replenish.

You must keep in mind as you give aid and comfort to the enemy that the invasion against constitutional government, individual initiative, individual responsibility, and the bolstering of the socialistic world plan, that the total purpose for promoting this type of a system is for men to get power and wealth. It is intended that all people become subservient to these promoters.

Please, Mr. Church, look where you are going and where you want us to follow. Remember that the country you save might be your own.

Somoza betrayal demands extended

Editor, Times-News:

When will Americans finally realize that conspirators in our own country are betraying our friends around the world in their quest for a one-world, communist-style government. At the same time at home they do everything possible to kill our free enterprise system through bureaucratic controls, ridiculous environmental standards and mountains of paperwork.

For there is no question about Carter and his cohorts having a carefully designed plot already in process for enabling the Sandinista Communist terrorists to destroy our good friend Somoza and make another Cuba out of Nicaragua within just the next few days. It is being done primarily by preventing Somoza from being able to buy ammunition for even the arms that he has, while the terrorists are being supplied all of the guns and ammunition they can use, from many sources, through the helpful connivance of our government.

Which is exactly the same means and methods, of course, by which George Marshall enabled Mao Tse-tung to take over mainland China from Chiang Kai-shek; Eisenhower's Administration enabled Castro to take over Cuba from Batista; and today's conspirators are planning to have Red China take over Taiwan in due course.

But by awakening enough of the American people in time to the fact that what is planned for Nicaragua is simply a part of the same treasonous conspiracy as the surrender of the Canal in Panama, it can still be stopped.

So let us do all we can, as quickly as we can, by contacting our patriotic congressmen and senators in this fight and expose this betrayal of still another friend.

Winter utility cuts endanger health

Editor, Times-News:

Something must be done about natural gas and electricity terminations in the winter. The utility companies now routinely cut off the heat in thousands of Idaho homes annually. This is endangering the lives and health of many of our citizens.

Unfortunately, the brunt of these termination actions falls most heavily on those among us who are least able to afford it or take care of themselves. Mainly these are elderly citizens, women with little kids who don't have much money, and wage earners who don't make enough to keep up with inflation and pay skyrocketing winter heating bills.

It is morally repugnant to deliberately subject people who are already having a hard time to the added peril of not having heat, cooking and lighting facilities in the home for themselves and their families.

The laws of the State of Idaho protect the welfare and lives of domestic animals. It is a misdemeanor to subject animals to freezing or starvation; yet the laws of the state allow the utility companies to disconnect life-supporting electric power and natural gas for a delinquent bill of $25.00. We must put humans and animals on at least an equal basis.

The utility cuts, if they are sincere about holding down costs, cut back on their political contributions; lawyer's fees, lobbying expenses, contributions to the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry, the Idaho Taxpayers Association, and other organizations that work to promote their special interests.

We aren't talking about any big amount of money in doing away with winter utility service cutoffs. Other states have adopted similar regulations. No rate increases have resulted from their action. The advertising budgets of the utility companies very likely exceed the small amount of money involved in doing away with these potentially death-dealing cutoffs.

Florida sells sand

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The guy who carried coals to Newcastle and sold ice cubes to the Eskimos have nothing on United Airlines executive Len Sweetman, who sold a load of Florida sand to Hawaii.

The 21,000 pounds of white sand was shipped to Honolulu aboard two United 747s in 230 bags.

Sweetman, who put the $10,500 deal together, said the cargo will be used as blasting sand for a construction project and is not headed for any of Hawaii's famed beaches.

Sensationalism wears thin on several topics in news

Editor, Times-News:

Lets have an end to promotion of "shortages" in the news media. One day there is a near riot in the south, next day in the eastern states; then in the midwest and on the third day the Mountain states face a "possible, probable or reported" shortage of fuel. Now this reporting by men who have never left the swivel chair in their cubby hole office is keeping the tanks full and the dealers rolling in cash. The truckers have about worn out their savings and credit by mob action aimed at forcing fuel supplies into their hands regardless of cost.

Drop the publicity and a quick settlement would be gained.

Three things have been worn thin by sensational news. Homosexual antics promoted as a spectator sport, fuel shortages (in fact, the word shortage) and Jimmy Carter as a dud.

How about dropping those motheaten subjects and concentrate on the better things in this great land. Some of the positive that gives us hope. In Sweden this morning gas was quoted at $2.80 a gallon. Here with many times Sweden's economy and future we weep over gas at 87 1/2 cents and look the other way at a useless energy bureaucracy. MONEY is the cheapest thing we have with the printing presses working overtime putting out new bills, which are just a piece of paper without backing.

We just returned from a drive of 4,900 miles. Not once was we told that fuel was scarce or not available. Talking to others I have the same answers. So where's the truth in 'shortage'?

Perhaps the economy is going to hell in a handcart, but we are going in style with a whisky bottle in one hand and bones at $50,000 with little down. The screams of inflation with its 10-cent dollars is lost in the chortling of bureaucrats and politicians with their arms up to the shoulders in the public till. All too often the loudest political screams attacking the President is the next caught selling influence, taking kickbacks from his overpaid office workers and working the 'gimmie' rackets to the bone.

But face the facts. These men are representative of the electorate and few today would conduct themselves differently. When men who have been found guilty of every malfeasance in office known to man are returned amidst the cheering of the voters, it is time for serious thinking on the part of those who still believe in America.

Fun-Run aid appreciation extended

Editor, Times-News:

The Magic Valley YFCA would like to express sincere appreciation to the many people who donated much time, effort and money to ensure the success of the Ladies Fun Run held June 16, 1979. Besides encouraging running as a means of attaining fitness, the run raised $128 for Improvement of the "Y" fitness facilities.

Special thanks go to the two sponsors KMYT Studio and Dannon Yogurt for their many contributions; KMYT for their cooperation in publishing the event and Dannon Yogurt for donating the prizes and refreshments as well as making available running numbers and a finish banner.

To the 10 Twin Falls merchants who so generously contributed gift certificates for the drawing, the Y and the recipients would like to extend their heartfelt gratitude.

Of course, the Run would not have been such a success were it not for the numerous others who helped in no small way: Pepsi Cola Co. who provided free Pepsi for everyone; members of the Optimist Club who secured the route; the media, especially the Times-News, KKEP and KLLX, who publicized the Run; Willetta Warberg, the Dannon Yogurt representative who presented the awards; Donna Stalley, Dorothy Gestel and Esther Simpson, who were responsible for organizing the Run, and the many, many volunteers who helped in running the event.

Martha and David Mehl — a preaching couple.

Couple realizes dream in sharing city ministry

By DALE SINGER
ST. LOUIS (UPI) — David and Martha Mehl have a lot to share — their marriage, their love for the city, their household chores and a pulpit.

The Mehls are co-pastors at Friedens United Church of Christ, a 122-year-old congregation that was willing to give a chance to a young couple to try their team ministry and to realize their ambition to get involved with the inner-city.

In the past year, the Mehls have become part of the "New" Side neighborhood. They live and work on a first-name basis with their neighbors and members of the congregation and it is hard to tell where their ministry stops and their involvement begins.

"We wanted a city parish ministry, one that saw that its location had a lot to do with how it became what it was," Mehl said in an interview in the couple's apartment across the street from the church.

"In a neighborhood that's undergoing revitalization such as this one, the church has an important role to play in helping the direction that the neighborhood will take."

The Mehls were married in January 1977 after they realized their eagerness for a city ministry could best be realized together. In Friedens, they found a congregation strong on tradition yet willing to try a team ministry.

Friedens allowed the Mehls to pool their talents and share one job and one salary.

"The search committee was very receptive to doing something new. We liked them and they liked us," Mrs. Mehl said.

Now they share a parish, alternating at preaching and the other chores and doing community service work.

Mehl, 28, is the son of a St. Louis area clergyman. He said he didn't plan on being a minister but entered the seminary following a few years of "slopping around" after college.

His wife, who is 26, is from upstate New York. She entered the seminary right after college.

They confer regularly with other married couples involved in team ministries to compare notes. And they make a special effort to get away from their roles as leaders of the church.

Nudes find a loophole in the law

By TOM HILLSTROM
NEW YORK (UPI) — One law bans swimming in the nude and another bans sitting in the nude. But there's nothing on the books about sitting in the buff.

In the eyes of some New York City Council members, too many sunbathers are taking advantage of the loophole and some sections of city beaches have assumed a decidedly "natural" look.

The opponents of nude sunbathing have set out to close the legal gap. But the issue has proven as prickly as a beach thistle.

For 14 months, the 43-member Council has weighed the matter with, as yet, no solution. And the question has touched off more acrid parliamentary maneuvering, more acrimonious debate and more side-line snickering than any other question — to come before the normally austere body.

Law or no law, nude sunbathing has been common for years in the city, principally at a section of Jacob Riis Beach in Queens favored by gays and on a stretch of Brighton Beach in Brooklyn frequented chiefly by young Europeans.

Councilmen representing these and other beach districts say they have been receiving an increasing number of complaints from constituents objecting to such exposure. So one councilman, Leon Katz, proposed a local law banning nudity on any beach, dock, shore, pier or other structure adjacent to city waters.

The measure is intended to fill the gap between two Parks Department regulations banning nude swimming and nude walking.

Both police and the Parks Department say the law is unnecessary but Katz contended that current laws "do not raise someone who wants to use public beaches from people who want to sunbathe in the nude."

Russians caught in candy heist

PLAINVIEW, N.Y. (UPI) — Three Russians in a Mercedes-Benz have been arrested for stealing $200 worth of gum and candy including 37 six-packs of Chunky bars and five nine-packs of Hershey bars, police said.

A Nassau County police spokesman said three Russian citizens — Victor Semenov, 22, a ballet dancer residing in New York, Vladimir Kaplunov, 30, an art dealer from Harrisburg, Pa., and Valentin Samosonadze, 17, a student living in Flushing — were arrested Friday outside the King Kullen store.

Voyager 2's view of Jupiter's Great Red Spot

Jovian moons studied by Voyager spacecraft

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Voyager 2, heading into its close encounter phase with Jupiter, sailed through the inner satellite system of the planet at 30,000 mph Saturday while receiving computer commands to guide its course for the next six days.

"This is a very critical event, a very high activity period," Ek Davis, deputy project manager, said at a news conference. "It is the largest computer load ever put into the spacecraft."

Two computer command loads; one, repeating the other, were started at 10 a.m. PDT Saturday and were finished Saturday evening.

"It covers the activities from near-encounter phase (which began Saturday night) until July 15," Davis said.

Voyager 2 hears "in a monotone" because one of its radio receivers has been out of commission for several months. Davis said.

"We have to tune ever so precisely to get these commands in. The spacecraft is remaining very quiet with no maneuvers and no turning on and off of instruments."

Davis said that as with Voyager 1, the quality of the mission's science was "again exceeding our expectations."

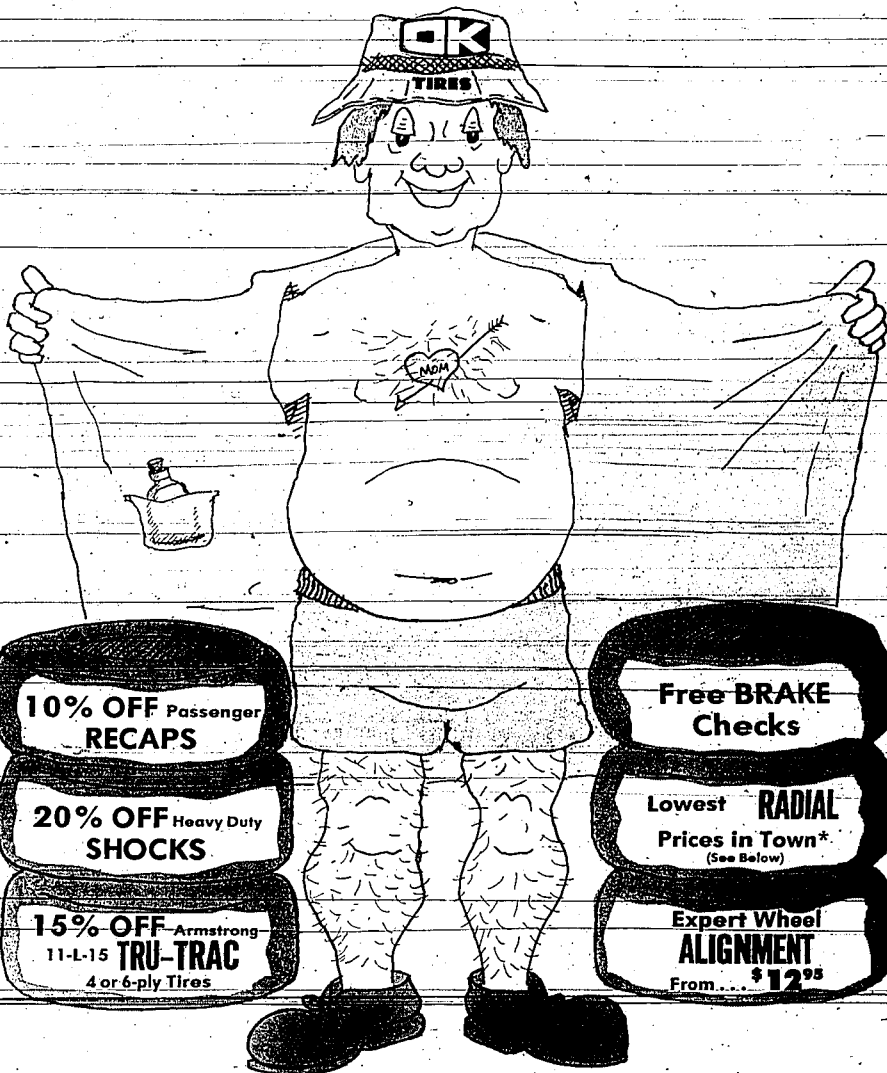

"Navigators are projecting that they put the spacecraft through the bullseye."

The 1,800-pound robot spacecraft was aimed at an elliptically shaped area of space 70 by 80 miles in diameter and 576 million miles from earth for its approach to Jupiter.

"It is only a little high and a little left," he said.

Voyager 2 returned pictures of Jupiter and three of its four satellites most of Saturday except for the eight-hour period when the computer was being loaded.

PAUL FLEMING

The lettuce game is hardly a bowl of cherries

By RICHARD H. GROWOLD
UPI National Reporter
SALINAS, Calif. (UPI) — In America's salad bowl the lettuce grower talks of war.
Farm workers are on strike. Truckers are on strike. County deputy sheriffs, once the umpires of the strike life on the vegetable plains, went on strike for a few nervous days. "Every day is a war," said grower Paul Fleming.
He stands ankle deep in lettuce, great green leafy flowers lit for food advertisements, and before the grocery clerk slips off the giant petals, the better to make a plastic-wrapped ball of each head.

"There are people out there trying to stop us," said Fleming who is 31 and has light brown curly hair and a mustache and is divorced and could be played with no injury to life by Robert Redford or a younger Paul Newman. He just might be played; Hollywood is not far South.
Above the lettuce fields — more than three-fourths of America's salad greens comes from these parts — rise the coastal Pacific Mountains. They are fit for science fiction, golden barren mounds speckled by an occasional giant version of Japan's twisted dark brown miniature trees.

Below the Gavilans is science — water irrigation and farm techniques that have made an Eden of the Salinas Valley. The fiction would be the thought that life hereabouts is Booth, Tarkington rural, an American myth of genteel farming.
Fleming reaches into a puke and displays a handful of what are called "Tijuana tacks."
They are twisted heavy wire, with puncture points, choicer bits of chopped barbed wire. They are dribbled on Monterey County roads by the angrier elements of Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers, he said.

"We put sealing fluid inside our truck tires," Fleming said, "but four or five Tijuana tacks and that she blows."
An intersection near his company's Salinas headquarters has a corner lot parked with the burnt out wrecks of pickups, trucks and a bus. Fleming said they are casualties in the war between striking workers and growers.
"We're on, on salary, only 40 cents an hour apart. Nothing, really. The trouble is the union's aim; they want to control this valley, this industry, setting not only working conditions but production, shipping, marketing and quality control."

California looking at its judges

By RICHARD M. HARNETT
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The idea that a man or woman who dons the judicial robe leaves behind emotion, personality and politics is taking on a serious meaning in an unprecedented open inquiry into the workings of the California Supreme Court.

Hearings before the California Commission on Judicial Performance have turned into possible political maneuvering by Chief Justice Rose Bird's court enter a third week Monday. Some of the most distinguished jurists in the state are saying the investigation is doing nothing but harm.

Some have already expressed shock at the disclosure of personal animosities, political shenanigans and petty bickering that go on in the high court's sealed chambers.

It is now on the public record that the seven state supreme court justices haggled among themselves about the political impact of several decisions that Ms. Bird gave two other members of the court the silent treatment, refusing to speak to them for weeks at a time when they disagreed with her; that the infighting among the judges was the subject of widespread gossip on the part of the court staff.

This week one justice testified that when offices were being reorganized his secretary didn't get any because the justice was in disfavor at the time with the chief justice.

The purpose of the hearings is to explore the proposition that Ms. Bird, in cahoots with another justice, sat on a controversial opinion until after she had been confirmed in her job by the state's voters. Ms. Bird asked for the hearing "to clear the air" — after she had won confirmation of the polls.

"If the mystery is being pretty well destroyed by these hearings," a leading legal scholar told UPI.

"For a long time the courts have been making rules that govern our behavior. And if those rules were accepted because they purported to be expressions of law. Now the public is finding out that these are very human people who let their personal preferences dictate the results."

That observer, who declined to be identified because of his position, added:

"The other two institutions in government, the legislature and the executive branches, don't enjoy a good reputation as a result of things like Watergate. Now the courts seem to be getting into that same situation where there is a lack of trust and lack of respect."

Reporters covering the hearings had expected a dry, distinguished recitation by justices of how they go about reaching decisions in cases before them.

They were surprised to find the justices taking the role of witness as nervously as persons appearing before them accused of crime. Most of them brought along two attorneys to advise them how to answer questions.

Most surprising was the refusal by Ms. Bird to answer a simple factual question about whether she had seen any documents dealing with the leaking of court affairs to the news media. She said to answer the question would have violated confidentiality between her and her attorney.

Indians ponder suit over land

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (UPI) — The Navajo-Hopi Relocation Commission may sue Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus over the Navajo-tribe's attempt to buy land for Indians forced to relocate from former joint use areas.

Sandra Massetto, newly elected chairman of the commission, said she will meet with Navajo leaders this week to consider possible legal action over Andrus' indecision in the matter. She said the land in question is the House Rock area west of Page, Ariz.

But the Navajo tribe applied four years ago to Interior for approval to purchase the land.

"Either the secretary is going to approve the application or not but either way we have to know," she

Bjorn Borg savors fourth Wimbledon

Top ranked Swedish tennis star, Bjorn Borg, liked the taste of his record fourth straight Wimbledon tennis championship

Roscoe Tanner forces 'cool' Swede to five sets

WIMBLEDON (UPI) — Bjorn Borg, looking like a Viking warrior with his long blond hair, beard and mustache, became a Wimbledon immortal Saturday when he edged American Roscoe Tanner 6-7, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 to win the men's singles title for the fourth consecutive year.

But Tanner, making his first appearance in one of the "Big Four" finals came near to giving his new chapter in the tournament's 12-year history a surprise ending as he took the champion down to the wire in a five-set thriller—lasting 2 1/2 hours, 50 minutes.

Borg, hot favorite at 1-6, needed all his fighting qualities to subdue the left-handed fifth seed whose sharp serve and volley game threatened to cause the biggest tennis upset in years.

In the end Tanner could not maintain the pressure as Borg went on to retain the title he first won four years ago. Borg's record will stand alone in the record books—because, although New Zealander Anthony Wilding completed four back-to-back triumphs in 1913, he only had to play in the final challenge round in those days, while the 23-year-old Swede has racked up a winning streak of 28 matches now.

Tanner, making his first appearance in the final after two semifinal losses, could not have chosen a more fiery baptism than to try lift the crown from Borg. But the 27-year-old southpaw, born in Chattanooga, Tenn., and schooled at Lookout Mt., Tenn., stunned the defending champion with his 150 mph serve — the hardest in tennis.

Roscoe's rockets thumped out 14 aces and Borg found himself having to battle for every point.

Tanner gave a hint of what was to come by producing an ace in his opening service game and Borg found it impossible to break through when the American was in full flow.

There were no service breaks in the 43-minute first set which Tanner took 7-4 in the tie-break.

Borg has been behind before, however, and after sharing the first two games in the second set, he reeled off the next five to level the match and the 15,000 Center Court crowd could not be blamed for expecting to see Tanner fold up.

But Tanner, who has beaten Borg only once in eight meetings since 1976, had different ideas. Serving as well as seeing and volleying with precision, he opened the third set by forging ahead 3-0 on the back of a service break in the second game.

The champion never managed to close the gap, despite producing some of his characteristic fierce topspin passing shots—down both lines, and Tanner served out to 6-3.

Borg, facing another crisis, again dipped into his reservoir of fighting qualities and managed to break Tanner's serve for a 2-1 lead which he maintained to take the set 6-3 and level the match.

Showing renewed confidence, the champion immediately broke Tanner's serve in the opening game of the fifth set but was made to battle all the way to hold his advantage as the American never gave an inch.

The American nearly broke back in the next game when he had three break points. But Borg escaped with three flashing forehand passes.

Right up until Borg was serving for the title at 5-4 he was never allowed to relax. Leading 4-0 in the final game, the championship looked in the bag, but Tanner refused to lie down.

The American saved three match points, two with volleys and the other with a rasping backhand pass to go to deuce.

For the first time Borg looked rattled. He put his first service into the net but it was Tanner's nerve that finally snapped and when the end came it was surprisingly easy.

Tanner netted a return and then sent a wild backhand out of court.

Borg, as he had done in three previous finals, sank to his knees and raised his eyes to the sky.

Borg's victory added another $4,000 to the $79,142 he has already won this season. Tanner's purse was worth $22,000.

Golf showdown Wednesday

Strong field set for state amateur

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Every day will be ladies' day at the Burley golf course this week.

The highlight will be the women's state amateur championship Wednesday through Friday but there will be two days of prelude competition.

The women start arriving Monday for a pro-am, which is expected to attract about 40 teams, according to host Professional Earl Simpson. A two-person best ball will serve as the second day of competition plus act as the practice round. From then on it will be for state honors.

The tournament has attracted, perhaps, its strongest championship flight ever. An example of this is the fact that 11 will be the high handicap in the flight and the 17-woman flight is filled with seven and eight handicappers.

Burley has a couple of local contenders who could walk off with things in Lori Vegwert, who holds the course record at 73, and Sergene Sorenson, who set a Jackpot course record with a 77 Thursday to indicate her game is near-peak condition.

Vegwert, just graduated from Burley High, already has picked up the Blackfoot and Idaho Falls women's Invitational titles this spring and summer. Sorenson, an eight handicapper, won the Gate City in Pocatello.

Other, Magic Valley hopefuls are three shooters from Twin Falls, Virginia Undheim, an eight handicapper, has won the state title three times in the past while Rosemary McRoberts, a seven, hasn't won it but has taken most of the other "major" women's events around the state.

Making her first try for state will be Karen Brown, fresh from winning the Magic Valley amateur and playing in the national women's finals on the BYU golf team. She is a nine handicapper.

Treasure Valley sends a host of good golfers including Lynn Tigers of Boise who has an eight, Jackie Atterbury of Ontario with an 11, Jean Smith of Boise, low with a five; former champion Sue McCurdy Kushaln of Caldwell, a six, and Caldwell's Peggy Stanwood, a seven.

Kali Curdy, who has taken the title three times, will be unable to compete due to personal reasons.

But the one that everyone is looking forward to seeing is Mary DeLong of Coeur d'Alene, the defending champion, who ripped through last year's three rounds in even par to win quite handsly.

DeLong had the advantage of playing her home course which didn't hurt her chances and the same reason gives Vegwert and Sorenson a good shot at the title this year. Still DeLong is a long hitter and most of those playing feel she would have to be favored when action begins Wednesday.

Monday's pro-am will be on the regular lines, two best low balls in a five-person team with amateur net and gross sweepstakes. It is part of the Northern Chapter, PGA, competitive schedule.

Sorenson, who also doubles as publicity chairman for the event, said several social activities are planned throughout the week.

TFHS football coach considers Genesee job

TWIN FALLS — Whether Twin Falls High School goes or doesn't have a head football coach vacancy will be decided one way or the other Monday.

Ed Knecht, who guided the Bruins during the 1978 season, reportedly is contemplating accepting an administrative position at Genesee High School.

The Times-News has learned that Knecht was in Genesee this weekend and has interviewed there before. He reportedly has been offered the job, but apparently hasn't made a decision whether to accept it.

Twin Falls Principal Frank Channing Saturday night said he couldn't clarify the situation at all.

"I had a long talk with Coach Knecht Friday about this and as of that time it didn't appear he had reached a decision. It was left at the point that nothing would happen until a meeting here Monday with Coach Knecht, myself and Superintendent James Sawin. I can't speculate on what his (Knecht's) decision will be," said Channing.

Channing said the administration currently had no idea of how it would proceed should Knecht leave Twin Falls.

"If Coach Knecht should leave and Coach (Ron) Boyd resigning to go into private business (Friday), we would have teaching vacancies in social studies and math and the board could go outside and seek applicants. Of course, it could be filled from within and we could get some assistant combinations out of the teaching vacancies. But that's something we don't have to think about until we had a vacancy. Right now we don't have one."

Should Knecht leave, TFHS will have four different head coaches in four consecutive years.

Judges don't always make a 'splash' with swimmers

JEROME — She constantly walks up and down the pool deck, both eyes fixed on the water just waiting for someone to break into an illegal stroke.

She then raises one hand into the air and points into the pool with the other, indicating to scorers that a disqualification has just been registered.

Next she has to hurry over and explain to the swimmer just what he did wrong. Some take it in stride and simply hop out of the pool and dry off. Others break out in tears.

That's the job of D.D. White, Snake River certified swimming official. She had the dubious honor of working the Tupperware Invitational Friday, a meet in which more than a handful of swimmers were disqualified.

"This is a learning meet so there will be a lot of disqualifications," said the Pocatello resident. "For a lot of these swimmers, this is their first time in a race."

Dressed in white shorts and shirt and wearing a white sailing hat, White kept moving all day long at a brisk pace, never hesitating to point her powerful finger into the pool.

"This meet is designed for the summer swimmer, so there will be a lot of mistakes," she said. "But the swimmers have to learn what they can and can't do in the water if they are going to go on."

As expected, most of the disqualifications were in the younger age brackets. In the boys 9-10 100-yard individual medley, six of the 12 swimmers entered were disqualified. In the boys 9-10 50-yard breaststroke, 11 of 24 swimmers had illegal strokes.

"I just told one little girl that she was disqualified and she said, 'Oh good. What does that mean?'"

Most of the swimmers, however, know what it means and they don't particularly like it.

"After we tell them what they did wrong, a lot of them start to cry," White said. "It makes you feel mean."

Mean or not, White, who grew up two blocks away from the Buhl city pool, knows it is an important job. That's why she studied so hard to learn all the necessary swimming rules.

The most disqualifications came in the breaststroke and butterfly, two of the more difficult swimming strokes. The average swimmer does not realize that there is much more to it than just moving the arms and legs.

In the fly, for instance, a swimmer is allowed just one arm pull under water before coming to the surface. Many swimmers were caught trying to sneak in one or two extra turns.

The body then must be kept perfectly on the breast with both shoulders in the horizontal plane during the arm stroke.

White said most of the problems in the fly, however, are with the kick.

"It has to be an up and down movement," she said. "A dolphin kick."

"Look there," she said pointing two fingers in the pool to indicate that the swimmer in lane number two had just been disqualified. "She is using a scissor kick."

In both the butterfly and the breaststroke, swimmers must touch the wall with both hands simultaneously. No kick turns are allowed.

Swimmers diving into the pool often begin the breaststroke with a few flutter kicks, something which draws White's finger. Scissor kicks are also not allowed.

White said the swimmers must use a whip or frog kick. If it is used to be illegal to bring the legs out of the water during the kick, but now they allow that," the official said.

But besides rules governing swimming strokes, White must also keep abreast on the other laws of the sport. Several swimmers complained the cold water in the Tupperware pool was giving them leg cramps. But White explained that the rules state the water is to be kept at 72 degrees.

Another young swimmer was scratched from the race when one coach complained about her wearing a two-piece suit.

White glanced at her rule book for assistance and read, "The swim suit must be one-piece and transparent..."

"Well, you can take off the top if you want to," one official suggested.

"That's OK, I just won't swim," the young girl decided.

Never a dull moment in the life of a certified swimming official.

Three Twin Falls teams in final four

TWIN FALLS — Three of the four teams still unbeaten in the Twin Falls Women's Softball Association B League Invitational are home town entries.

Sunrise Construction will play Magic Valley Memorial Hospital in one quarterfinal this morning at 8 o'clock on diamond one. Both teams are from Twin Falls.

In the other quarterfinal, Obenchain Insurance of Twin Falls will play Arthur Anderson of Boise. That game is set for 8 a.m. on diamond two.

Sunrise Construction and Magic Valley Memorial both took the long route to the quarterfinals, having to win opening round games Friday night.

Sunrise then started action Saturday by whipping Clippers of Idaho Falls 14-0. They then knocked Burnside Construction of Roberts 29-2.

Magic Valley Memorial opened play Saturday with a 14-0 win over First Federal Savings of Twin Falls. They then downed Sherwood Sports 15-7.

Obenchain Insurance took the identical route as the other two

Twin Falls teams, having to win Friday before playing two games Saturday.

The local team opened the day with a close 12-11 victory over Haney Seed of Twin Falls. They then whipped Fredrick Craig of Jerome 17-0 to advance to the quarterfinals.

The winners of the two quarterfinal games will meet in the semifinals at 11 a.m. on diamond one, with tournament finals set for 5:30 p.m. If necessary, a second final game will be played at 7 p.m.

Saturday's scores

Sunrise Construction 14-0	Clippers of Idaho Falls
Magic Valley Memorial 14-0	First Federal Savings of Twin Falls
Obenchain Insurance 15-7	Sherwood Sports
Obenchain Insurance 12-11	Haney Seed of Twin Falls
Obenchain Insurance 17-0	Fredrick Craig of Jerome

Billie Jean King ties mark for victories at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — In a twist of fate that Billie Jean King labeled bizarre, she won her 20th Wimbledon title Saturday less than a day after the death of the woman whose record she broke. — Elizabeth Ryan died Friday night at a hospital near here after collapsing earlier in the day at the All-England Club.

"I couldn't believe it," King said after she — and Martina Navratilova beat Betty Stove and Wendy Turnbull in the women's doubles final. "I'm more relieved than happy. Elizabeth's death has taken a lot of the joy out of winning. While I was out there today, she was heavy on my mind."

Martina Navratilova and Billie Jean King celebrate doubles victory

King and Ryan were well-acquainted, despite a 33-year difference in age. King grew up in Long Beach, Calif., and Ryan lived most of her life in Southern California before settling in London. Long after she had retired from tennis, Ryan was still keeping a keen eye on promising junior players. She used to watch a 13-year-old girl named Billie Jean Moffitt at the Los Angeles tennis club.

Two decades later, King won the women's singles here in 1975 for her 19th title. Ryan, who had won 19 in doubles from 1914 to 1954, said men "did not do it" and that she "did not want anyone breaking it. Last year, before King barely missed winning the women's doubles. Ryan told her that if anyone broke it, she was glad it would be King; not someone else.

"I made it a point to read a chapter called 'Elizabeth' in (dress designer) Teddy Tinling's tennis book," King said. "I wanted to know more about her."

King still going reasonably strong at 35 after four knee operations and other surgery, reminisced after talking about

Ryan. She said she could recall — "clear as a bell" — the day in 1961 when she and Karen Hantze won the women's doubles here. It was the first Wimbledon title for the bespectacled teen-ager they called "Little Miss Moffitt."

King went on to a fabulous career and later transcended tennis as a symbol of the women's movement. She said she plans to play the circuit for another 18 months, if not longer.

Pan Am games

More gold for swimmers

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — United States swimmers and divers refused to be shoved into the background by the start of the Pan American Games track and field competition Saturday night when they once again turned in a flawless performance by sweeping all five gold medals available.

Mary Meagher of Louisville, Ky., who at 14 is the youngest member of the powerful U.S. swimming squad, stroked her way to a world record 2:09.77 in the 200 meter butterfly to highlight the evening's swimming competition.

U.S. swimmers and divers also picked up golds in the women's 400 meter freestyle relay, the men's 100 meter butterfly and the men's platform diving to earn their 29th gold medal in 30 events since competition began Monday.

In track and field, the U.S. overcame an early morning hassle and won the first two gold medals available when Jan Merrill took the women's 3,000 meter run and David Laut won the shot put.

Merrill sprinted away from silver medalist Julie Brown in the final 200 meters to win in 8:53.60 and Laut heaved the shot 66 feet, four inches to beat Canadians — Bishop Dolegiewiez and Bruno Paultet.

The American success — international embarrassment when long jumper Carl Lewis of Willingboro, N.J., showed up three minutes late for the qualifying trials and was disqualified. The U.S., however, successfully protested the decision on the grounds there were not enough participants to warrant a qualification round.

Lewis then had the greatest personal triumph of the day when he won a bronze medal in his specialty.

"It was a learning process," said Lewis, who jumped a personal best of 26-8 to finish third behind gold medalist Joao de Oliveira of Brazil and David Girard of Cuba. "I worked very hard to get here and I thought I wasn't going to get the opportunity to jump. I was disappointed but the longer they talked, the better I thought my chances were. I was really relaxed and I'm very pleased with my performance."

Olympian Frank Shorter of Boulder, Colo., after leading for most of the 10,000 meter run, captured a bronze medal when he fired on the final lap and was defeated by Mexicans Rodolfo Gomez and Enrique Aquino. Gomez' winning time was 29:02.1.

The swimmers, who close their competition Sunday, suffered no such problems as Meagher, swimming in her first major international competition, chopped 1/10th of a second off the world mark of 2:09.87 shared by Tracy Caulkins of Maryland's Andrea Pollack in defeating teammate Karline Miller by more than five seconds.

The eighth-grader, who was unaware she had a record, was the first American to post a world mark, joining Jesse Vassallo (200 meter individual medley) Friday night and Cynthia Woodhead (200 meter freestyle) Thursday.

The United States continued to amass gold, collecting their 29th medal in 39 events when Bob Piacak, capped Canada's Dan Thompson by 2/100ths second to win the 100-meter butterfly in 55.84. Olympic gold medalist Brian Good won the 1,500 meter freestyle by almost 20 seconds over Brazil's Djan Madruga in 15:24.36, and the women's 400 meter freestyle relay team of Stephanie Elkins, Caulkins, Jill Steikel and Woodhead splashed to an easy 3:45.82 victory over Canada and Mexico.

In the platform diving, 19-year-old Greg Louganis of Mission Viejo, Calif., posted a stunning victory over Olympic gold medalist Carlos Giron of Mexico, compiling 592.71 points with a series of 10 near-perfect dives to win his second gold medal after capturing the springboard title on Tuesday.

U.S. roller skaters, completing their final day of competition, added three more gold medals to their collection when Tom Peterson took his fourth gold medal of the Games. He teamed with Chris Snyder to win the rain-delayed 10,000 meter relay race, two-time roller skating world champions — Laurette Arsenault and Dan Little won the women's pairs dance and Natalie Dunn captured first place in the women's artistic dance competition.

In shooting, the U.S. brought its collection to 12 gold medals when Robert Green beat teammate Charvin Dixon in the Individual Trap and the team of Jerry Wilder, Samuel Blasco, Darius Young and Jimmy Dorsey won the team center fire competition.

The United States won its first gold medals in gymnastics when Jackie Cassello won the side horse and teammate Jeannine Creek turned in a dazzling performance to win the gold in the floor exercise.

Boxers undefeated

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — United States boxers remained unbeaten in the Pan American Games Saturday night when flyweight Jerome Coffee and light middleweight James Shuter scored split decisions over experienced Cuban opponents, bloodying both Cubans in the process.

Coffee, a 21-year-old sheriff's deputy from Nashville, Tenn., with a 17-2 amateur record, outpointed Jorge Hernandez, who won the min-flyweight class at the Pan Am Games four years ago, to reach the semifinals in the 116-pound category. Coffee is now assured of at least a bronze medal.

Coffee got the votes of the Jarmalecan, Ecuadorean, Costa Rican and Brazilian judges but an Argentine voted against him, although he made Hernandez bleed from the left eyebrow.

They watered the greens last night and my iron shots today were much more accurate," said Rankin, who won this tournament in 1977, the first time Harbour Trees hosted it.

"The ball held on the green 100 percent better," she said. "When the greens are hard you might as well shoot yours — for you to start."

The top 14 included four golfers at 3-under-par 141: Hollis Stacy, Jane Blalock, Sandra Post and the co-leader at tie-off time Saturday, Shelley Ha:lin.

Alone at 2-under-par 142 was Barbara Moyness. Tied at 1-under 143 were Debbie Massey, Susie McAllister and Hamlin's first-round co-leader, Jan Stephenson.

One Liners

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — Third-year pro Dan Pohl recorded a hole-in-one on the par 3, 201-yard fifth hole at Butler National during the third round of the $300,000 Western Open Saturday.

PRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — Sam Flanagan, 36, Parkersburg, W.Va., rolled a 269 Saturday to capture a $70,000 Professional Bowlers Association tournament and pick up an $1,000 paycheck.

Flanagan defeated Guppy Troup, Savannah, Ga., 222-209 in a playoff match for a 491 total.

ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — Texas left-hander Jon Matlack, scheduled to pitch Saturday night's game against the Toronto Blue Jays, developed soreness in his throwing elbow in the bullpen and was removed from the starting lineup only moments before the start of the contest.

RENTON, THAMES, England (UPI) — Yale steam roller Oxford University by 2-23 lengths Saturday in a semifinal of the Grand Challenge Cup at the 131st Henry Royal Rowing Regatta and faces difficult opposition from the British national eight in Sunday's final.

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — Stan Smith teamed with Bob Lutz Saturday to defeat Tom Gullikson and Tom Gorman in doubles play at a $30,000 feature tennis tournament at the Sea Pines Racquet Club.

Britz takes edge in Indiana LPGA

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (UPI) — Great golfers had luck for Jerilyn Britz Saturday when she grabbed a two-stroke lead in the LPGA's $100,000 Mayflower Classic.

Britz started off 2-under par after shooting a 70 Friday and went on to shoot a 69. Her medal showed on No. 11, a par-5, 505-yard hole. She hit a tree on the first shot and had to play the second shot out of branches on the ground, but her 4-wood got her onto the green for a birdie. Her two-round total is under-par 139.

Close behind Britz and alone at 4-under-par 140 was Judy Rankin, who set an 18-hole record at the Harbour Trees course Saturday with a 69.

The old record of 67 was set two years ago by Sally Little and Donna

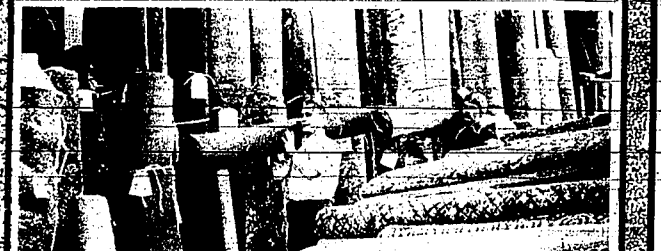

Capon Young.

Alone at 2-under-par 142 was Barbara Moyness. Tied at 1-under 143 were Debbie Massey, Susie McAllister and Hamlin's first-round co-leader, Jan Stephenson.

Boyd resigns golf post

TWIN FALLS — Ron Boyd, head golf and sophomore basketball coach at Twin Falls high school the past several years, has resigned to enter private business.

In reporting his career change, Boyd said "not being able to work with these young kids will be the toughest part about the change but it is an opportunity I didn't feel I could pass up."

Boyd said he would remain in Twin Falls.

Gomez, Hubbell honored

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lefty Gomez and Carl Hubbell, two of the pitching heroes of the major league All-Star game in the 1930s, have been named best and second best pitchers of the American and National League teams, respectively, for this year's game, July 17, in Seattle.

Gomez, one of the New York Yankees' Hall of Famers who shared the distinction with Lefty Grove of being the American League's outstanding left-handers in the 1930s, had a 3-1 lead in All-Star competition. He was the starting pitcher in five All-Star games, including the first three.

Taiwan still considering

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — Taiwan was withholding a decision Saturday on whether to accept the International Olympic Committee's decision that Taiwan participate in future Olympic Games under a new name and with a new national anthem.

The IOC on June 29 held an executive board meeting in Puerto Rico accepting a recommendation by its three-man committee that Taiwan's Olympic representation change its name to Chinese Taipei Olympic Committee and use a different song and different flag to replace its national flag and national anthem bearing the name.

Coastal coasts to win

BELMONT, N.Y. (UPI) — Coastal, who won a surprising victory in the Belmont Stakes when he halted Spectacular Bid's attempt to sweep the Triple Crown, furnished additional proof he was a 3-year-old colt of quality by scoring an easy victory in the 62nd running of the $106,400 Dwyer Stakes Saturday at Belmont Park.

William Haggin Perry's 3-year-old son of Magestic Prince Alluvial, ridden by Ruben Hernandez, who scored his 12th New York stakes victory, romped home by four lengths under top weight of 126 pounds in the good time of 1:47 for the mile and a furrow.

All arrives Wednesday

DENVER (UPI) — Muhammad Ali is scheduled to arrive Wednesday for three high altitude training in preparation for his July 14 exhibition with Denver Broncos defensive end Lyle Alzado.

Promoters said about 6,500 tickets have been sold so far for the eight-round bout at Mile High Stadium. A weigh-in for the exhibition is set for noon Thursday at the International Athletic Club.

Drag races July 12-15

ENGLISHTOWN, N.J. (UPI) — Four-time World Champion Don "Snake" Erudomond of Granada Hills, Calif., leads a field of 60 into the 10th annual Summernationals drag races July 12-15 at Madison Township Raceway Park.

The $28,000 event, sixth stop on the National Hot Rod Association pro tour, will crown champions in three professional and six semi-pro categories with drivers accumulating Winston World Championship points as well as prize money on the basis of their finishing positions.

BSU tickets go on sale

BOISE (UPI) — Reserved seat tickets for Boise State's six home football games will go on sale Tuesday, the school announced today.

Some 2,000 tickets will be sold from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at the BSU Varsity Center. They will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis.

Tickets for the six home games will total $39.

Boise State opens its season at home against Cal-State Long Beach Sept. 8. Other home games will include Northern Arizona, Akron, Montana State, Idaho State, and Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo.

Nelson clings to PGA margin

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — Larry Nelson, continuing his steady play at the tough Butler National Course, birdied the 18th hole for a 2-under-par 70 and a one stroke lead over a charging Tom Watson after three rounds of the $300,000 Western Open Saturday.

Nelson, 31, needed the birdie on the final hole to edge ahead of Watson, who chipped in a 60-footer on the 18th hole for his eighth birdie of the round and a 4-under-par 68. Nelson was at 6-under-par 210 heading into the final 18 holes Sunday.

Nelson's only blemish in the third round was a double bogey six on the 14th hole — his only above par hole over the last 36 holes. The 31-year-old Nelson, No. 5 on the money-winning list, is seeking his second PGA win this year and is trying to rebound from a playoff loss to Gil Morgan in last week's Memphis Open.

Watson, who is looking for his fifth PGA tour win of 1979, started the day three strokes behind Nelson, but he fired off three straight birdies to start his charge and wound up with the best round of the tournament.

Dan Pohl, who registered a hole-in-one on the fifth hole and wound up with a 71 for a three round total of 214, is alone in third, four strokes back. Ben Crenshaw shot his second consecutive sub-par round, a 71, and was alone at 215, five strokes back.

Australian Bruce Devlin, who started the day tied with Nelson, slipped to a 78 and was six strokes back.

Nelson said he realized the significance of his 35-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole.

"I heard the cheers for Watson when he holed it out when I was coming off the 15th," said Nelson, who has won $181,097 this year and is seeking his second PGA victory of the season after earlier winning the Jackie Gleason Invitational Classic.

Forest Hills tourney to open play Monday

NEW YORK (UPI) — It isn't the U.S. Open any more — not one of the Big Four — but for a number of the top players participating in the tennis tournament at Forest Hills, scheduled to begin Monday, that's probably just as well.

Neither John McEnroe, a six-time winner this year, nor Vitas Gerulaitis, the defending champion in this invitational tournament which was created last year largely to fill the void left by the defection of the U.S. Open to Flushing Meadows, had an especially good time at the last big tournament they attended and Sandy Mayer says he never enjoys them.

"For me the big tournaments are not enjoyable. I find them hard to get psyched up for," said Mayer, who reached the quarterfinals of both the U.S. National Indoor and the Queen's Club event and was eliminated from Wimbledon in the round of 16.

The singles field is divided into three groups of four players each, with players in each group going against each other once. The player with the best record in each group, as well as the player with the next best record, will advance to the semifinals, scheduled for Saturday.

JULY We Must Clean House

Les Hazen

Literally hundreds of pieces must be cleared. Every dept.—on all 3 floors—and the Clearance Center are involved. I'm leaving for the summer furniture market this week. I'll be working with 135 other buyers who make-up Furniture Guild Associates, the western buying group of which we are a member.

It is important that these hundreds of items be cleared if we expect to find room for the new shipments. I urge everyone to come in and take a look at these values. Just make yourself at home and shop. If you have a question ask a salesperson. Our people will be glad to help you. We can arrange special terms for you.

I've taken markdowns into the thousands of dollars and will continue taking them until we reach our objective. All items 6 months old & older, floor models, discontinued models, colors etc. Be sure to see all of the items we had to move from our old maple shop to make room for the workmen to convert the area to our New Kling Gallery of American Traditional Furniture... Soon to be announced.

Fire chars more than 4,000 acres

BURLEY — Fire fighters were still working late Saturday to maintain control of a stubborn range fire that blackened more than 4,000 acres of land near the Ogden Interchange of the I-80N highway.

Bureau of Land Management officials said the fire broke out about 3:30 p.m. Friday and crews were able to contain the fire about 3:30 a.m. Saturday, bringing it to the 200-acre stage about 9:30 a.m.

Gary Majors, information officer for the Burley District of the BLM, said the fire was extremely difficult to contain, and at one time four aircraft, two "mama" or refill tankers and five regular tankers along with seven or eight ground crews of about 40 men battled the fire.

Majors said the cause of the fire has not been determined but it apparently broke out fairly near the interstate and spread toward Lake Watcott.

Idaho State Police in Twin Falls reported it was necessary to close old Highway 30 in the area because of the many spectators. Only persons living in areas served by the highway were permitted to pass the blockades. State officers were also dispatched from the Burley-Rupert area to help direct traffic along I-80N during the peak of the fire.

Crews remained on the fire throughout the night and not until after 3:30 a.m. did any of the men get time for rest, according to Majors. About five of the crews were on the scene all day Saturday to keep the firelines from breaking through.

Majors said one fire retardant plane was called in from Twin Falls, one from Pocatello and another from Boise. The planes are contracted by the BLM for fire fighting. Each carried 2,000 gallons of retardant chemical per load and several drops were made by each aircraft. In addition one "spotter" aircraft helped direct retardant planes to the hot spots.

Majors said, after about 10 hours, a call for additional help was sent to the Shoshone district office. The one refill tanker and two or three fire crews responded.

Of the 4,075 acres of range covered by the fire, 370 acres were state land, 250, private land and the rest federal range. There was apparently no crop land involved and no buildings or fences were damaged.

Most of the area covered by the fire was sagebrush and native grass.

Majors said this is by far the largest fire in the district this year, but conditions in the area are extremely dry for so early in the summer and the fire potential is high.

The Shoshone District BLM fire center said Saturday numerous fires have been reported in the past several days, most of them man-caused.

All have been small, running 10 and 5 acres, but burning conditions in the Shoshone District are very high to extreme. All lower elevation vegetation is cured and officials say a fire can become a big one in a short time if men and equipment do not reach it immediately.

Students keep digging into the past

By BEN McKEILWAY
Times-News writer

KING HILL — Preliminary findings at an archaeological site along the Snake River east of King Hill indicate people may have lived there 8,000 years ago.

A 25-member excavation team of Boise State University students and local volunteers has uncovered clues that tell of an annual migration of natives between the Camas Prairie and the Snake, following Clover Creek.

The natives, possible ancestors of the Shoshoni tribe, used the site for centuries as a seasonal village, according to project director Mario Delisio, assistant professor of geology at BSU. Their diet included camas lily roots, rockchucks and salmon from the river.

Depressions in the soil mark the locations of shelters, dug out so they would stay cool, and probably covered with a dome of stretched animal skins. Digging into these pits, the crew has discovered weapon points, grinding stones, hand axes, bones and pottery fragments.

By immersing a fine sieve full of dirt in water, crew members can recover grains, ancient flower pollen, tiny bone fragments and even fish scales. All can be dated and evaluated to yield clues about the environment of the time. The fish remains can even indicate water temperature, Delisio said.

Traveling on foot, the tribe may have roamed as far south as Nevada for pine nuts and as far north as the Sawtooth Mountains for big game. But all conclusions are guesswork until the artifacts collected by the team can be analyzed in a BSU laboratory later this year, Delisio said.

Funded by a grant from the Bureau of Land Management, the project is part of BSU's Public Archeology Program. Students and professionals make up only half the team. The others are volunteers from nearby communities.

"We've really been happy with

Patrick Sullivan/Times-News

Ron Fowler, a Boise State University student, sifts out artifacts from soil dug along the Snake River near King Hill.

the support of the local residents," said Delisio.

"In the past, people in local communities near digs have been excluded from this type of thing. So they have turned to collecting. I'm not interested in a box of arrowheads. I'm interested in the people who made them; who they were and what we can learn from them about ourselves."

Student Carl Scofield feels these lessons will be crucial for modern society.

"Learning about those people is an important thing for a culture rushing toward technological suicide," said Scofield. "We need to keep a grip on who and what we are."

Residents who signed up for the project are learning scientific methods, Delisio said. The crew carefully records the depth and precise location at which each artifact is found, plotting the find on a grid of the area. Later, back at BSU, patterns will emerge from the data.

Practical applications of the study may include tips for area farmers. The data may shed light on climatic trends as well as the impact of humanity on the land. Early findings from the King Hill site tend to confirm the theory, generated by the 1959 excavation of Wilson Butte Cave near Dietrich, that the Snake River Plain was once far cooler and wetter.

On a hike up Clover Creek, crew members found more shelter pits and indications that big game might not have been as far away as the mountains. Mark Willard, Delisio's assistant, said the area at one time included more trees, as well as enough grassland to support herds of buffalo, antelope and elk.

Tracing the creek to its source about 30 miles north of the Snake, Willard found several rock walls and ledges along cliffs. He thinks hunters hid behind these while their companions chased a herd toward the cliff. The hidden hunter would then jump up at the right moment for a close bow shot or to scare the animals over the cliff to their death.

Willard said a fire started by a burning boxcar last year swept across the King Hill site, which is on BLM land. With vegetation burned away, the crew was better able to locate shelter pits. The crew will be at the site until July 13, when their grant will run out.

BLM officials called BSU about the site after they noticed people digging holes there, Willard said.

"When you think this has been combed over by sightseers and artifact hunters since white people first settled here, it's just amazing what's left," he said.

Greyhound sued

TWIN FALLS — Greyhound Bus Lines Inc. has been named in a damage suit filed in 5th Judicial District Court as the result of a 1977 traffic accident.

David C. and Anita Rich are seeking $38,000 from the bus company and bus driver Eldon DeWayne Hanson.

The complaint charges negligence on the part of the driver in the Aug. 25, 1977 accident on Blue Lakes Boulevard North and River Avenue.

Rich states his car was stopped on the boulevard behind a car that was waiting to make a turn when the bus collided with the rear of the Rich vehicle. Rich states he suffered back and shoulder injuries and he seeks $38,000 in general damages, losses and expenses. Mrs. Rich asks $10,000 in consortium loss because of her husband's injuries. The couple also asks for attorney fees.

State bar meeting

SUN VALLEY — A keynote address by Byron R. White, Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, will highlight the Annual Meeting of the Idaho State Bar, to be held at Elbow in Sun Valley July 11 through July 14.

Also appearing on the program will be W. Reece Smith of Tampa, Fla., President of the National Conference of Bar Presidents, Chief Justice Charles H. Anderson of the Idaho Supreme Court and State Senator Mike Mitchell of Lewiston.

Justice White, a native of Colorado, was appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court by President John F. Kennedy in 1962. A former College All-American and professional football player, White is a member of the National Football Hall of Fame. Immediately prior to becoming a Supreme Court Justice, he was Deputy Attorney General of the United States. He will address the Idaho lawyers at their Thursday noon luncheon.

Three-vehicle mishap

TWIN FALLS — Three vehicles were damaged, but the occupants escaped injury about 8:30 p.m. Friday in an accident at the intersection of Falls Avenue and Washington Street North.

City police said one driver, Vernon Lewis Nelson, 26, of Rockland, was traveling west on Falls Avenue and failed to see the stop sign as he approached Washington.

A southbound driver, Glenn Curtis Eastman, 20, of Buhl, saw the Nelson vehicle approaching, attempted to avoid the collision but could stop in time. The impact forced the Eastman vehicle into one operated by Steve Paul McMillen, 26, of Twin Falls. McMillen was traveling east on Falls Avenue and was stopped at the stop sign.

Apartment theft

TWIN FALLS — Bill Clark of Twin Falls Thursday reported the theft of $200 in cash from his apartment, Twin Falls police said Friday.

The unknown suspect entered Clark's unlocked apartment at 412 Main Ave. N., police said.

The theft was reported at 5:30 p.m. Thursday. The case is under investigation.

Liability ruling

TWIN FALLS — A ruling by the Idaho Supreme Court on a case in Twin Falls County has established that a camper unit attached to an insured pickup truck is also covered by the liability policy.

A Supreme Court opinion reversed the 5th Judicial District court ruling that a policy which insured "the automobile including its equipment" did not include the camper unit as equipment.

The ruling was issued in the B.R. Justice vs. Government Employees Insurance Co. suit which originated in the 5th District. Judge Theron W. Ward ruled the camper was not equipment, and therefore not covered in the insurance policy which insured the vehicle. Justice appealed the case and the Supreme Court granted this appeal.

Break-in reported

TWIN FALLS — About $200 in auto accessories was reported taken in a break-in at Barnes Repair Shop early Saturday morning.

A witness called police to report seeing someone in the building about 4 a.m. Police found the building had been entered and two wheels and one set of valve covers taken.

Police also reported several instances of vandalism Friday night. In most cases damage was life and confined to sugar in gasoline tanks and puncturing of tires.

Brian McFarland told police two radial tires on his 1969 automobile were slashed causing about $180 in damage. McFarland told police the incident occurred while his car was parked in front of his home at 237 Elm St. between 1 and 1:50 a.m. Saturday.

Two reasons

Backlog of cases for mental health

TWIN FALLS — Recent staff reductions have combined with an increasing number of clients to create a backlog of cases at the local Mental Health Services office of the Department of Health and Welfare.

"It's a seasonal kind of thing," said chief therapist George Lukes, who said the number of Magic Valley residents requesting counseling will probably stay high until schools reopen this fall. A client has to wait an average of two weeks for an appointment unless the case is an emergency, he said.

The busy period is already less intense than it was in May when patients were forced to wait as long as six weeks for an appointment, according to Phillip Grover, DHW regional manager for community rehabilitation programs. The waiting period depends on the seriousness of the problem, he said, as judged by a social worker after a brief talk with the client.

The region has fewer workers this year to cope with the high demand.

"Reversal of what the Legislature did as a result of the 1 percent initiative, we lost roughly 10 percent of our staff," said Grover.

Two positions, for a social worker in Twin Falls and a nurse in Rupert, were vacant this spring when the office received word of the funding cuts, Grover said. These will not be filled.

The office lost another social worker when Robert Scott resigned in late May. Grover said DHW is currently advertising to fill this vacancy.

The regional Mental Health Services personnel budget is $21,000 less this year than last, down from $457,000 to $436,000. Operating expenses will stay the same, at $86,500, with no allowance for inflation. The new fiscal year began July 1.

Built into the budget is the requirement that the division raise $99,000 on its own, $22,000 more than it collected last year from client fees. The increase has led DHW to ask Magic Valley counties to pay for court-ordered mental evaluations, a services which has been free up to now for indigents.

Grover said there are no plans to increase Mental Health Services' $30-an-hour fee or revise its sliding scale discount formula, based on the client's income and family size.

Grover said he is expecting some counties to stop referring clients involved in court cases.

"If the counties chose not to purchase the services from us, that of course would free up our staff time to serve more clients," he said.

Fish and Game director asks Evans to veto lower oxygen

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Fish and Game Director Joseph Greenley said Friday he will urge Gov. John Evans to veto any legislative effort to lower the oxygen standards of water which goes over the American Falls Dam.

Greenley, who appeared on the KTVB Viewpoint program, said he will resist that effort strongly. "Six parts-per-million is what we prefer," Greenley said. "Sometimes it's hard to demonstrate that five, could have substantial impact, but certainly it would leave no buffer whatsoever."

"The bottom line on the optimum is six parts-per-million. And we would certainly object to the lowering of it, particularly if you make it cover all hydroelectric projects. Maybe some of them can stand five but others can't."

Governor declares July 15-21 Idaho Business Week

BOISE — Gov. John Evans has declared the week of July 15-21 as "Business Week" in Idaho in conjunction with a business-education program taking place on the Boise State University campus.

Students who have been selected by their high school principals will attend the sessions on scholarships provided by businesses, civic groups and individuals which will pay all of their expenses except transportation.

Clyde Elmer West

JEROME — Clyde Elmer West, 52, of Jerome, died Friday at St. Benedict's Hospital of a short illness.

He was born March 19, 1927, at Hagerman. He married Alice Grimm, June 9, 1952, at Mountain Home. He lived in Hagerman until entering the Navy in 1943. After serving in the Navy, he lived briefly in Boise, then moved to Halley, where he worked for the Sun Valley bakery for two years. He then worked for the City of Halley prior to moving to Jerome in 1973 where he has lived since. He is a member of the Disabled American Veterans and the Fleet Reserves.

He is survived by his wife of Jerome; three sons, Monte West of Boise; Bruce and Mike West, both of Halley; two daughters, Mrs. Jackie Schnell of Twin Falls; and Nancy West of Jerome; his mother, Mrs. George West of Jerome; one brother, Ted West of Jerome; one sister, Mrs. Lois Jacobsen of Longview, Wash.; and five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Wendell Cemetery. The Wendell American Legion Post 41 will officiate. Friends may call Monday until 7 p.m. and Tuesday morning at the Leeper Mortuary in Wendell.

Gregory Allan Sanders

TWIN FALLS — Gregory Allan Sanders, 32, of Florenceville, New Brunswick, former Twin Falls resident, died June 29 in an automobile accident near Florenceville.

He was born Dec. 15, 1946, in Pocatello, the son of Wanda DeCoria and Max G. Sanders. He attended schools in Idaho Falls and graduated from the Twin Falls high school in 1965. He also attended Idaho State University. He was in the National Guard and later served in the Air Force. He married Billie Orr in Blackfoot in 1967. They were later divorced. In 1972, he married Deloris Yorgensen. He was employed by McCain Foods Ltd. in Florenceville at the time of his death.

He is survived by his wife and three children; two step-children; his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. I.A. Engen of Idaho Falls; step-mother, Marie Sanders; and five sisters, Karla Sanders Stevens, Dena Mama, Christina Crompton, Suzette Udall and Denise Sanders.

Services were held July 2 at the Marvel Funeral Chapel in Arco. He was buried in the Howe Cemetery at Arco.

Donald Louis Schultz

TWIN FALLS — Donald Louis Schultz, 59, of Twin Falls, died Friday evening in Magic Valley Memorial Hospital after a long illness.

He was born June 25, 1920, in Bemidji, Minn., and married Henrietta "Ann" Schwartz in Bemidji in 1947. They moved to Idaho in 1980. He had worked as a brick mason for 30 years, building a number of homes in Twin Falls. He was devoted to his health. He was a member of the International Bricklayers Union, Local 2 and of the Twin Falls Elks Lodge. He served as a military policeman in the Panama Canal Zone for the U.S. Army during World War II.

Surviving are his wife of Twin Falls; a son, Wayne Schultz of Twin Falls; three daughters, Mrs. James C. (Karen) Lynch of Burley; Mrs. John (Jill) Fry of Twin Falls; and Mrs. Marty (Kim) Flower of Emmett; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edzen Schultz of Twin Falls; his brother, Richard Schultz of Twin Falls, and two sisters, Mrs. Lorraine Dolan of Denver, Colo., and Mrs. Shirley Becklund of San Jose, Calif. One brother preceded him in death.

Funeral services will be conducted at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the White Mortuary Chapel with Pastor Lottoff officiating. Burial will be in the Sunset Memorial Park. The family suggests memorials to the American Cancer Society. Friends may call at the mortuary until 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Blanche Grimm

TWIN FALLS — Blanche Grimm, 93, of Twin Falls, died Saturday morning in Hazeldele Manor.

She was born Sept. 25, 1886, in Okanogan City, Kan. She was married to Austin Grimm and he preceded her in death Feb. 28, 1949. She moved to Idaho from Kansas in 1917. She was a member of the First Christian Church.

Surviving are two sons, Vernon Grimm of Twin Falls, and Byron Grimm of Phoenix, Ariz.; a daughter, Mrs. Dorel W. (Velma) Bertsch of Twin Falls, one grandchild and several nieces and nephews. In addition to her husband one grandson preceded her in death.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the White Mortuary Chapel with Dr. E. Weston Scott officiating. Burial will be in the Twin Falls cemetery. The family suggests contributions to the Christian Church Building Fund. Friends may call at the mortuary Monday and Tuesday until 1 p.m.

Blood drawing set for church July 9 and 10

TWIN FALLS — A blood drawing will be held at the Presbyterian Church behind the courthouse July 9 from 2 to 6 p.m. and again July 10 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., according to Ann Livingston, chapter manager of the Red Cross.

A new policy implemented by the Snake River Regional Blood Center states that 17 year olds weighing 110 pounds or more can now give blood. Previously, the minimum weight for 17 year olds was 125 pounds. Bloodmobile collections of 1,400 units in the Sawtooth Chapter of the American Red Cross during the past year accounted for part of the 2,600 units of blood sent to the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital blood bank for use in Twin Falls County.

The next blood drawing for Twin Falls is scheduled for Sept. 10 and 11. Following that, drawings will be held Nov. 19-20, Jan. 14-15, March 10-11, and May 5-6.

Salary plan for Kimberly?

KIMBERLY — Kimberly city employees may have a new salary plan if a proposal arrived at Tuesday is approved by the city council next week.

Mayor Von Nebeker Thursday said the plan would provide salary increases for both longevity and merit. The council will meet next Tuesday at 7 p.m.

City employees were last month to the council's decision last month to grant them a 3 percent, rather than the requested 7 percent increase. The 3 percent increase did not meet the rate of inflation, they noted.

Boy charged with thefts

TWIN FALLS — A 15-year-old Twin Falls boy was arrested on charges of burglary in connection with thefts from two vehicles parked in the 800 block of Quincy Street Thursday.

Dale Josephson, manager of an apartment at 831 Quincy St., called police to report a car owned by Monte Tolman, one of his tenants, had been burglarized. Police said a stereo and tapes valued at $150 were taken.

Another car owner, Kelly Fullerton, told police someone also entered his vehicle while it was parked at 855 Quincy St. Thursday and removed a battery and some tapes.

Symms ties with Church in voter poll

BOISE (UPI) — Rep. Steve Symms is tied with Sen. Frank Church in a possible Senate race, a survey recently conducted for Symms shows.

That survey, conducted last month by V. Lance Tarrance Associates, Houston, Tex., shows Church with 37 percent of voter support, Symms with 37 percent, and 26 percent undecided.

Although several surveys conducted in recent months have indicated a Senate race between Church and Symms would be close, this apparently is the first survey to show the two in a dead heat.

The results of the survey were published in the Political Report, a Washington, D.C.-based newsletter which provides coverage of U.S. Senate and House races.

Symms aide, Phil Reberger of Boise, confirmed Friday that the survey had been conducted, but declined to discuss the specific findings of the survey.

However, he did call the results "encouraging."

The survey, according to the Political Report, also showed when the undecided voters were pressed for a decision on whom they would vote for if the election were held now, Church's total rose to 43 percent while Symms' rose to 43 percent.

Head-to-head percentages "are not the meat of the survey," Reberger said. "What is significant (at this time) is the attitudes of the voters and their perceptions of the candidates."

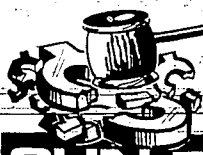

Two Magic Valley men may run

BOISE (UPI) — Two more possible candidates are lurking in the background, trying to decide whether to run against Sen. Frank Church in 1980, the Idaho Statesman said Saturday in a copyright story.

The newspaper said the two include Jerome attorney Jim Jones, who lost to Rep. George Hansen in a run for his 2nd District Seat in year, and state Sen. Dean VanEngelen of Burley.

VanEngelen said his plans depend on whether Rep. Steve Symms, an Idaho Republican, decides to run against Church. Jones said he probably will conduct a poll later this summer to determine his chances in a senate race against Church.

DC-10 inspection begins

A borescope is used to check for cracks as airlines owning the grounded DC-10 jetliners began carrying out a new pylon inspection procedure Saturday. The procedure was ordered by the FAA as a precondition to allowing the planes to fly again. Western Airline mechanic John Knill of Los Angeles conducts the inspection.

New American Falls system okay

BOISE (UPI) — Tests of a system designed to keep oxygen standards at 5-parts-per-million at American Falls Dam showed the system operated well except for a hose that slipped off.

"The system operated as it is designed to operate other than that (the hose slip)," said Idaho Power Co. spokesman Bob Brown.

The aeration system is actually divided into three separate systems, Brown said. He said the test was conducted on only one of those Saturday.

Brown said the hose, which clamps on like a car radiator hose and carries air from the compressor into a draft tube, slipped off during the test and the connection of the hose will be changed on all three systems.

"Fortunately the dissolved oxygen levels have been 6-parts-per-million or better today," Brown said.

He said Idaho Power recognizes 5-parts-per-million as the state standard.

Brown said the system was designed especially for the dam and had never been tested before. The system is designed to raise oxygen levels 2-parts-per-million over the existing level.

Oxygen levels are measured continuously in a tall race where the water is expelled from the powerhouse and again every 15 minutes, 1,000 yards below the powerhouse in the oxygen mixing area, Brown said.

Brown said Idaho Power has a policy to begin spilling water over the dam any time the oxygen goes below the state standard. He said the unit tested Saturday would be tested again next week.

Idaho Power and the American Falls Reservoir district have filed a suit against the state Board of Health and Welfare to force it to

Idaho's electricity load drops slightly Saturday

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. spokesman Bob Brown said Saturday's peak load for the firm's residential, commercial and irrigation customers was the lowest in three days, but problems continue to plague the utility.

Brown said the peak load for Saturday was 1,578,000 kilowatts, lower than the peak load of 16,000 kilowatts higher than last Saturday's peak reading when temperatures were cooler.

A power unit at the Jim Bridger complex in Wyoming returned to service earlier this week after being shutdown for repairs, developed a malfunction in a boiler dead-end pump Friday night, Brown said. The unit's power production was reduced to 180,000 kilowatts for 15 hours until the boiler was fixed.

adhere to the 5-parts-per-million standard set down in a resolution passed by the 1979 Idaho Legislature.

Idaho Power is continuing to curtail power at FMC Corp. in Pocatello and to operate a standby combustion turbine in Hailey, Brown said. He said the utility is still drawing on Brownlee Reservoir reserves.

Brown said the firm borrowed power Saturday from the Bonneville Power Administration and purchased power from British Columbia Hydro. In addition, the utility was receiving power from Washington Water Power Co. under an exchange agreement in which the Washington utility furnishes power to Idaho Power in the summer and Idaho Power returns it in the winter.

In an unrelated problem, a transformer in the Bruneau Bridge area overheated because of the heavy power load and irrigation pumps in the area lost service for a time, Brown said.

Bridger situation worsens

BOISE (UPI) — The situation caused by the shutdown of two Jim Bridger coal-fired power plants in Wyoming is "a little worse than it was yesterday," said an Idaho Power spokesman Friday.

Spokesman Bob Brown said the firm is now suffering from a shortage of power production resources rather than facilities. One of the Bridger units came back on line earlier this week.

He said the company had received figures which indicate southwestern Idaho from Boise to Pocatello is suffering from drought conditions. The figures show Boise with 90 percent of normal precipitation for this time of year, Pocatello with 63 percent and Burley with 44 percent.

He said stream flows into the Brownlee reservoir were 63 percent of a 40 year median.

Wednesday Skylab estimate remains; Atlantic Ocean now most likely spot

WASHINGTON (UPI) Space trackers Saturday reinforced their estimate that Skylab will most likely crash Wednesday but moved the optimum time back slightly to 2:30 p.m. MDT, when it would be crossing South America and heading into the Atlantic.

Officials again stressed, however, that the afternoon of July 11 is merely the mid-point of a 40-hour predicted re-entry period and the 77-ton space craft could fall anytime and thus anywhere — from Tuesday night to mid-Thursday MDT.

"The latest tracking information from the North American Air Defense Command indicates that Skylab will re-enter the Earth's atmosphere and break up on July 11, with a confidence window from 6:30 p.m. MDT on July 10 to 10:30 a.m. MDT on July 12," said a statement issued by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

A NASA spokesman said the phrase "confidence window" means NORAD "is highly confident that's when it will come down."

He confirmed that for prediction purposes 2:30 p.m. MDT Wednesday is the likeliest re-entry time because it is the halfway mark of the re-entry window.

But he cautioned, "it could be anywhere 20 hours on one side or the other."

Saturday's prediction refined and tightened the one issued Friday that allowed 24 hours' margin around a theoretical time of 1 p.m. MDT July 11.

Generalized maps of Skylab's orbits showed the space ship, at 1 p.m. Wednesday, would have been crossing the northwestern United States on a southeastern diagonal.

If Saturday's tentative prediction bears out, new and more detailed NASA maps indicate Skylab, at about 2:30 p.m. EDT Wednesday, should be crossing over northwestern Peru on a southeasterly course.

In the next 22 minutes it would travel down the center of Peru, over the southwestern corner of Bolivia, across far northeastern Argentina, along the Brazilian-Uruguay border and into the South Atlantic.

NASA updates its Skylab re-entry predictions daily, and has moved the optimum estimate forward by about 48 hours in recent days — further underscoring the hypothetical nature of impact-area predictions at this point.

The space agency estimates two-thirds of the ship will burn up harmlessly on re-entry. But some 500 pieces ranging from a few pounds to 5,000 pounds are expected to land along a track 4,000-miles long and 100 miles wide.

NASA says chances are one in 152 that anyone, anywhere, will be injured by falling Skylab debris, and 600 billion to one against any particular person being hit.

The new maps give slightly more information on which major cities are and are not under Skylab's orbital track during the three-day predicted re-entry period, although margins for error make pin-pointing difficult.

The July 11 map, for example, shows the craft is supposed to pass almost directly over Washington, D.C. on an early-afternoon pass. On various other orbits it appears to pass over or very close to such major cities as Paris, Lisbon, Mexico City and Prague.

On the other hand, no orbit that day passes within dangerous vicinity of such major population centers as Peking, Madrid, Cairo or New Delhi.

The northern and southern limits of Skylab's track already excluded from any danger the British Isles and Scandinavia, most of the Soviet Union and northern Canada, among other areas.

Western art quick on the draw

By STEPHANIE SHOROW
Times-News writer

The walls of the Idaho room of the Elkhorn Village Inn bristled with action. Whooping Indians thundered across the plains. The sheriff and the outlaw braced for the draw. Horses bucked off cowpokes. Covered wagons rumbled by.

The second annual Western Art Exhibit and Auction in Sun Valley this weekend featured all the traditional images of the wild west, cowboys and Indians as lifelike as a Sunday afternoon movie.

Next to the craggy-faced chiefs and squinting desperados hung smoky impressions of prairies, pine trees and mountains. A surrealist tepee splashed in bright reds and yellows. A headless sketched-in feather-fine strokes.

All fall under the category of the uniquely American art form, "Western Art."

"What is Western Art? I wouldn't want to try to answer that," said Katherine Griffith, one of the auction's coordinators, as she snatched a breather between hanging pictures before the show. "I hope we will have a panel discussion that question someday. What is Western Art? Is it geographically located? Is it subject matter?" She couldn't say.

One is reminded of the Supreme Court justice who, when asked to define pornography, said "I can't define it but I know it when I see it."

Western art may be undefinable, but one knows it when one sees it, from a bronze Indian maiden to a charcoaled 10-gallon hat. Some of the country's most prominent western artists were featured in the Sun Valley show: Frederic Remington, Victor Higgins, Ed Borein, O.C. Seltzer, Julian Scott and Felor Hurd. Bronze statues, antique Navajo weavings and rare examples of Indian pottery were auctioned. The show displayed one painting by Georgia O'Keeffe recognized as one of America's greatest artists—a small study of radiant sunflowers. Could this simple subject, too, be considered Western art?

John Beaupree (left) chairman of the Western Art Exhibit and Auction, catalogues the paintings as they are hung

"She's a western artist. She lives in the west," Griffith said emphatically.

The highlight of the show was an American classic resurrected by an obituary and a sharp-eyed art dealer.

A gallery owner with an interest in Western art happened to notice an obituary of a Toronto doctor who had lived in Great Falls, Montana, during the 1920s. That was the time, the owner knew, that Charles Russell, one of the country's greatest western artists, lived and painted in the Great Falls area.

Knowing the family to be prominent, the owner called the estate in Canada on the hunch that they may have once bought a Russell.

"How did you know that?" was the response. The family owned four Russell works.

One of the four, a watercolor of a Blackfoot Indian war party, was exhibited for the "first time" at the Sun Valley auction. Never before catalogued or reproduced, the painting's value was estimated at $125,000.

Over the weekend 174 other paintings were auctioned, with a percentage of the profits going to the Sun Valley Center and the Institute of the American West. Additionally, about 40 western artists and art galleries opened salesrooms in the hotel. A "Gallery of Galleries" displayed representative pieces from galleries unable to attend.

One of the artists, Bob Wolf, of Fort Collins, Colo., is a former river runner and wilderness survival instructor. Both burly and bearded, he considers himself a western artist because his finely detailed bronze statues of birds and mammals depict western wildlife.

"Some call western art a fad. It's far too healthy to be a fad," he said. Western art may be undefinable but it's apparently profitable: Wolf's work sells for an average of $2,000 to $3,000 a piece, enough to be his sole means of support.

About $2.2 million in paintings were displayed at the show, with the minimum price tag of an auctioned picture set at $250.

Griffith said interest in western art as an investment is growing. She contends it is also an art form understandable to the average person who "finds it more appealing than ... modern art."

"People can identify with it easily and readily. You don't have to know a lot of art history mumbo-jumbo. If it's a horse it looks like a horse," she said.

Although it is largely realistic, Griffith considers western art highly romantic-idealized. Images of a wild west that existed more in Hollywood than in actuality.

Some might call it hokey.

"Hokey? There are people who feel it's genre painting and isn't art. But I feel a good painting is a good painting," she said. "We've tried to make the quality as good as we can."

Western art, like the Grand Canyon or Yellowstone, said Bob Wolf, is a "national treasure."

MR. AND MRS. FRANCOIS CASABONNE
Houston-Casabonne

TWIN FALLS — Janet Houston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Houston of Twin Falls, became the bride of Mr. and Mrs. Francois Casabonne of San Francisco, June 16.

The double-ring ceremony took place at the First United Presbyterian Church in Twin Falls with the Rev. Thomas Young officiating.

Jeri Hansen of Twin Falls served as maid of honor. Tami Powell of Kimberly was bridesmaid, and Michele Phillips of Twin Falls, cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid and carried the rings.

Raymond Casabonne of San Francisco, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Andre Casabonne of Ashton, Wis., brother of the bridegroom was groomsmen. Ushers were Jean Louis Casabonne of San Francisco, also a brother of the bridegroom, and Ray Houston of Twin Falls, brother of the bride.

Rhonda Bulcher of Kimberly played the guitar and sang. Mrs. Helen Allen played the organ, and Jean Louis Casabonne read a scripture for the ceremony.

A reception followed in the Fireside Lounge of the church. Mrs. Edward Houston, sister-in-law of the bride, Mrs. Michael Phillips, Mrs. Eugene Holsinger and Mrs. Mondford Adams, aunts of the bride, presided at the table. Julie Johnson of Boise presided at the guest book. Tim and Tom Phillips, cousins of the bride, carried gifts, assisted by Greg Houston.

A rehearsal dinner was held at the home of the bride's parents hosted by the bridegroom's family. Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Houston of Jerome, grandparents of the bride. Other guests attended from California, Wisconsin, Pocatello, Boise, Caldwell and Burley.

The couple was honored at a reception June 23 in San Francisco at the Church Hall at Notre Dame des Victoires.

Following a wedding trip to California the couple will reside in Pocatello.

Jennings-Myers

TWIN FALLS — Nancy Jennings of Twin Falls and Raymond Myers of Greenville, Miss., exchanged wedding vows June 6 at the Twin Falls falls in Snake River.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Jennings of Twin Falls and the bridegroom is the son of Raymond Dennis of Greenville.

Maid of honor was Darvete Halbrook and bridesmaid was Lori Houser. Robert Jennings, brother of the bride, was best man. David Broner served as groomsmen. A reception was held at the home of the bride's aunt, featuring a cake designed and baked by Linda Houser.

The couple will reside in Twin Falls where the bridegroom is employed at C.U.I. International.

MR. AND MRS. DANIEL BOESPFUG
O'Keeffe-Boespflug

TWIN FALLS — Kathleen Ann O'Keeffe of Billings, Mont., became the bride of Daniel Richard Boespflug of Great Falls, Mont., June 16 in the Holy Family Catholic Church in Great Falls.

The bride is the daughter of Con and Sally O'Keeffe of Twin Falls. The bridegroom is the son of Roy and Deloris Boespflug of Great Falls.

Maid of honor was Debby Monfils of Columbia Falls, Mont. Bridesmaids were Maureen O'Keeffe and Carleen O'Keeffe of Twin Falls, sisters of the bride, and Angie Boespflug of Great Falls, sister of the bridegroom.

Best man was Nick Themis of Missoula; Randy, Dave and Ron Boespflug were groomsmen, and Jerry and Mike Boespflug of Great Falls were ushers.

A reception was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Great Falls following the ceremony, and at the home of the bride's parents in Twin Falls on June 22.

The bride has a bachelor of arts degree in dental hygiene from Carroll College in Helena, and the bridegroom has a BA degree in biology from Carroll College.

Following a wedding trip to Yellowstone, the couple plans to reside in Fullerton, Calif., where the bridegroom will attend Southern California College of Optometry and the bride will practice dental hygiene.

Preservation grant applications accepted

BOISE — The State Historic Preservation Office is accepting requests for applications for matching grants-in-aid to assist in the preservation of any building or site listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

Deadline for requests covering fiscal year 1980 funds will be July 15. Requests received after that date will be held for consideration should more funds be received later in the year. Requests should include information concerning the name of the project, architect, general scope of work, and estimated costs.

Historic Preservation funds administered by the Idaho State Historical Society, support the national program for historic preservation under the Heritage Conservation and Recreation Services of the Department of the Interior. As much as 50 percent of the project can be funded, depending upon the purpose and use of the funds.

Requests may be sent to Dr. Merle W. Wells, State Historic Preservation Officer, at 610 N. Julia Davis Drive in Boise 83702.

MR. AND MRS. DANIEL R. SCHWEITZER
Lineberger-Schweitzer

FILER — Helen Lineberger of Marsing and Rick Schweitzer of Filer were married May 26 in Boone Memorial Presbyterian Church in Caldwell with the Rev. Rick Russell and the Rev. Don Frank officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norris Lineberger of Marsing. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Schweitzer of Filer.

Rhonda Yorgensen, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and Susan Lee, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. Amy VanNortwick was flower girl.

Dwight Christensen of Idaho Falls was best man. Terry Puskas of Idaho Falls was groomsmen, and Kent Yorgensen and Larry Lee were ushers. Karla Haylett was in charge of the guest book at the reception. Mary Sayers and Karen Olsen received the gifts. Reception assistants were DeAnn Dalton, Diana Myers, and Maxine Toime.

Following a wedding trip to McCall, the couple lives in Boise where the bride will teach this fall and the bridegroom is employed by Idaho Power Co.

The bride is a graduate of Homedale High School and Idaho State University with a bachelor's degree in education. The bridegroom graduated from Filer High School and Idaho State University where he received a bachelor's degree in engineering.

Queen contest deadline

GOODING — The Gooding County Fair and Rodeo queen contest deadline is July 24, according to Myrna Alcorn, contest chairman.

Contestants must be 18 years old and not more than 24 by Sept. 1, single, and never married. Contestants will be judged on personality, appearance and horsemanship.

Judging for personality and appearance will take place Aug. 2 with a dinner at 6 p.m. Horsemanship competition will be held at 8 p.m. at the Gooding Rodeo Arena.

Winner of the contest will represent Gooding at the Miss Rodeo Idaho queen contest this fall. She will receive many gifts from area merchants.

Interested contestants may contact Myrna Alcorn at P.O. Box 311 in Gooding 83330 or call 934-5534 or 934-4455.

Dear Abby

Listen to your brains and don't lend money without a note

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
 © The Chicago Tribune
 N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 32-year-old woman, living alone, supporting myself, and respectable in every sense of the word. I'm nothing special to look at (a little on the heavy side) but I never was so hungry for a man I'd date just anybody.

Well, a salesman came into our office two weeks ago and came on to me immediately. He's 36, divorced (no children). We were really attracted to each other. I honestly thought I'd found the man I had been waiting for.

Then he asked me how much money I had in the bank. I told him, and he asked me if I could let him have $2,500 for 90 days. I was shocked since he had told me how "fabulously" he had been doing. It didn't add up.

I said I'd give him the money if he'd sign a note. He never wanted to sign a note he'd have to give to a bank.

Now I don't know what to do. Half of me tells me not to give him the money without the note, and the other half tells me to give it to him. I need some advice.

HALF AND HALF
 DEAR HALF: Listen to the half with the brains and give him no money without a note.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the widow who wanted to know if she could continue using the name "Mrs. John Doe":

I find it strange that any woman (wife or widow) would want to be called "Mrs. John Doe." It is indeed a peculiar custom and seems as ludicrous as a husband-calling himself "Mr. Jane Doe."

Incidentally, I am not a young radical; I am nearing 50 and have been happily married for 27 years, but I don't call myself "Mrs. Charles LaFollett." Neither does my husband call himself "Mr. Mariens LaFollett."

If you print this you will probably hear from a lot of women who have obtained their identity through their husbands. Their rationale will probably be, "I'm proud to use my husband's name."

To that I would say, "Why doesn't he use YOUR name? Isn't he proud of you?"

Think of it!
 MARLENE LAFOLLETT IN COLOR
 DEAR MARLENE: I've thought about it, and it provides another valid reason for the use of "Ms." Read on:

DEAR ABBY: When Jane Roe marries John Doe, she becomes, as you said, "Mrs. John Doe" for the rest of her days should she choose to remain so.

She is a "Mrs." by the fact of her marriage to John, and therefore, can only correctly be called "Mrs. Jane Doe" in the event that her husband's first name was Jane! Highly unlikely!
 ALEXIS PENCOVIC IN S.F.

printed the name of a travel club that arranged tours and trips all over the world for non-smokers. I happen to be allergic to tobacco smoke and I can't imagine anything more wonderful than traveling with a group of non-smokers.

I clipped that column, although I wasn't able to travel at the time, but I am very much interested in going this year. Will you please print the name and address of the club again? I'm sure other non-smokers will be interested.

Making Homes Beautiful
 by JoAnn Rose

THE SLEEPER
 A low-budget model that proves to be an unexpected success is called a sleeper. It is a sort of up-on-your-toe offer, surprising pleasures. A sleeper from the new generation of sofa-sleepers can bring the same kind of unexpected value.

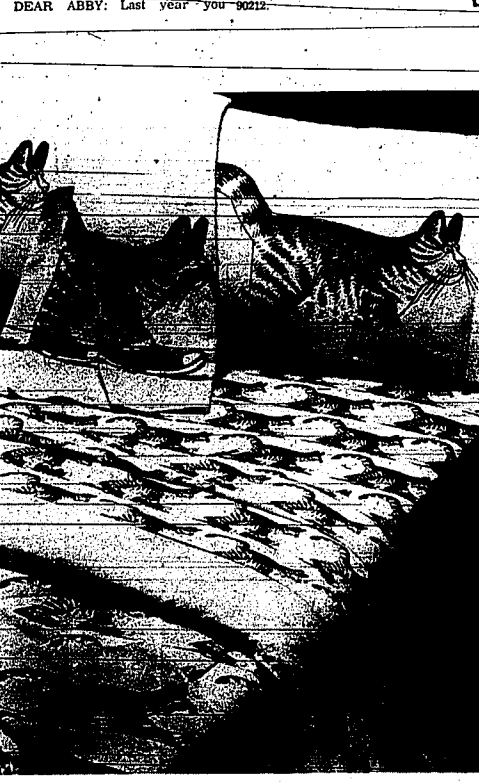

Space is at a premium in most homes, so any time you can make one area serve two purposes — and do it beautifully — you've gained a valuable bonus. And these "sleeper" sofas can turn any room into an extra bedroom for your summer visitors, friends or relatives.

If the piece will see heavy duty, choose a durable fabric — but don't downgrade the decorative potential of the sleeper-sofa. You can choose a practical vinyl, or just as readily have the soft-spoken elegance of velvet or the freshness of handwoven cotton or corduroy.

A practical tip: When you pull a cotter table in front of your sleeper sofa, select one that is not too large or heavy, or use a pair of small tables which can easily be moved out of the way when the sleeper opens up.

Today's sleeper-sofas come in styles to suit any decor, and in small, regular or queen-size. Slip in and take over our beautiful selection of these dual-purpose sofas, available in a wide choice of decorator fabrics.

STRAWBERRY RHUBARB PIE
1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 cup ground pecans
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup shortening
2 1/2 tablespoons cold water
1-1/3 cups sugar
1/3 cup all-purpose flour
2 cups cut-up rhubarb
2 cups sliced strawberries
1 1/2 tablespoons butter or margarine
In a medium bowl, combine 1/2 cups flour, pecans, and salt. Cut in shortening with a pastry blender or two knives until mixture resembles coarse meal. Add only enough water to hold mixture together. Shape into a ball. Wrap and chill. Preheat oven to 425 degrees F. In large bowl, mix sugar and 1/3 cup flour. Add rhubarb and strawberries. Mix lightly to blend. Set aside. Let dough stand at room temperature for 5 minutes, then roll out on a lightly floured board to 1/4-inch thickness. Line pie plate with dough. Fill with fruits. Dot with butter or margarine. Bake for 40 to 45 minutes or until done. Cool on rack. Makes one 9-inch pie.

Remember when it was healthy to be tan?

By ERMA BOMBECK
 © Glad Enterprises, Inc.
 Boy, you don't know what to believe anymore.
 Remember when tan was healthy and pale was sick?

Back in Ohio, I dedicated four months out of every year of my life to getting a tan. My ultimate goal was to turn brown before Jan Reeves did. I never made it.

Jan was one of those women whom I suspect hung out all winter under a bulb in the refrigerator, greased up when she stood under a lighted theatre marquee, and turned bronze when she strung Christmas tree lights.

If I dragged out to the community pool right after Easter with a coat over my terminal goose bumps, there she'd be anointing her brown body with baby oil. She couldn't have tanned more evenly if she had been revolving on a barbecue spit. When I appeared she'd look over her large sunglasses and say, "You feeling better?" I felt like a naked chicken.

We all had a Debra Paget wish. Tans made your clothes look better, your teeth whiter, and besides, they announced to the world that you had time to loiter.

I personally found being "into sweat" a bore and was relieved when it was discovered to be not only unhealthy but turned you into Doris Gray.

It makes me suspicious that if sun has only recently turned into a villain, maybe it's only a matter of time before someone figures out that carrots cause cavities, roaches are a status symbol, glasses make you look sexy, giving birth is good for your figure, jogging makes you fat, and small cars are gas hogs.

Sunflower natural herbicide

By SONJA HILLGREN
UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Department scientists are taking small but important steps in a search for natural herbicides.

They have found sunflower plants can inhibit growth of the toughest weeds.

Greenhouse tests at the department's Plant Disease Research Laboratory in Frederick, Md., found that sunflower extracts inhibited growth of selected weeds by 50 percent to 75 percent, officials report.

Field tests lasting one year were not as successful, but scientists said it may take several growing seasons for sunflowers to build up enough toxins to suppress weeds.

There is new interest in natural herbicides as petroleum-based, man-made herbicides skyrocket in price and create environmental problems.

Plant physiologist Gerald Leather who is studying the natural ability of some plants to hurt others by secreting toxic substances — said the exact chemicals in the sunflower that are toxic to other plants have not been identified.

In one experiment, however, he isolated a substance given off by sunflower roots. It inhibited growth of pigweed by 65 percent.

In greenhouse tests, the sunflower was successful in inhibiting jimsonweed, velvetleaf, johnsongrass, curlydock, red sorrel, ragweed, purslane, Pennsylvania smartweed, wild mustard and lamb's-quarters.

The mysterious ability of some plants to attack others is called allelopathy.

Leather said allelopathy may be used in the future to give crops built-in weed control capability through plant breeding or genetic engineering.

It could help in the development of safer and more stable herbicides. Use of allelopathic plants in crop rotations could provide long-term weed suppression.

Besides inhibiting weeds, sunflower extract can stimulate other weed seeds to germinate.

"This may lead to sprays that kill weeds by waking up their seeds in the soil just prior to winter," Leather said.

The sunflower, long grown in Russia and Europe for its protein oil and meal products, already is catching on in the United States and may be even more useful than people imagined.

Idaho weeds may provide oil source

Patrick Sullivan/Times-News

Extracting oil from weeds by chemical process sounds far-fetched but it may someday provide energy, better cropland usage

By LONNIE ROSENWALD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Imagine planting, cultivating, irrigating and harvesting a weed.

Farmers spend millions of dollars and countless hours trying to rid their fields of Canadian thistle, pigweed, red root and morning glories.

But researchers say those hated plants might be worth money — as a raw material used to make oil and other chemicals. Weeds for oil are already being grown in Idaho, Texas, California and North Carolina.

At least one scientist thinks the fuel crunch, along with some developing technology, could make weeds more profitable than the plants grown on America's farms today.

"Weeds (for oil) could be grown on land now used for forage," said Dr. Richard Auld, a University of Idaho plant scientist who is heading a weed research team. "We may even find a high enough return that we can afford to place it on fields where we're growing high cost crops like potatoes," Auld said.

North Idaho farmers already grow rape seed to produce a highly prized lubricating oil.

Now Amoco Oil Co., a division of Standard Oil of Indiana, is interested in using Idaho weeds to make gasoline and diesel fuel.

Amoco is paying Auld's department thousands of dollars to grow and improve weeds for them. The UI plant farm has been sowed with various kinds of weeds for two years.

Scientists at Amoco have found a way to produce crude oil, fuel gases, latex and other chemicals from ordinary, nasty weeds, as well as from oilseed and tuber plants. Although still in the experimental stage, Amoco has been able to squeeze a gallon of crude from three times the equivalent dry weight of a weed.

At today's $22-per-barrel imported oil price, weed farming begins to sound like a money-maker.

The liquid fuel shortage has spawned a number of experiments with fuel synthesis. Gasohol, the distillation of alcohol fuel from wheat, corn and sugar beets, is the most well-known. Various oil companies are trying to extract oil from oil-shale and tar sands, and are experimenting with coal liquefaction.

Amoco tried gasohol and didn't like it. Crops cost too much to make its production economical, according to Dr. Delbert Meyer, head of Amoco's Exploratory Division in Naperville, Ill.

"It just doesn't look very economical to us. There has to be a big jump in technology which we haven't made yet," Meyer said.

Amoco figured weeds, on the other hand, would be cheap to grow. So weed-oil production has surpassed gasohol in research priorities.

Like gasohol, hydrocarbon extraction is a means of direct oil production from plants. Both involve a change in the chemical structure of plants. While alcohol is made by converting chemicals to sugar, hydrocarbons are produced through a change in the molecular structure of the plant.

The process is called pyrolysis, and it involves heating the plant so that hydrocarbons, the chemical basis of oil, are produced.

"Synthesizing oil is actually a 'speed up' of the slow, natural decay process which produced the oil pumped from the earth."

Up in Moscow, they are harvesting leafy spurge and gum weed at the Plant Science Farm, and shipping them to Naperville. The process could ultimately make some money for farmers, Auld believes.

"If it does become feasible, perennial crops could be established on marginal land," Auld said. "I feel we could supply as much oil as is currently being imported without any impact on the present crop sequence."

Amoco won't disclose the extent of its work in pyrolysis. The company has made a "significant" financial commitment to plant-oil research, according to Meyer.

Preliminary experiments have succeeded in extracting oil from grasses, tubers and oilseed plants. Amoco scientists have produced as much as 2,800 pounds of oil from an acre's worth of plants.

So far, Amoco scientists are pleased with the results. But the research is at a turning point, according to Meyer. The next step would be to build a pilot plant that could process plants in a simple, economical way.

"We're convinced we ought to continue," Meyer said, but the corporation has to make the final decision.

Two potential snags in the process are preparation of weeds and an energy source for heating the plants.

"It's a similar challenge to breaking and feeding coal into a production unit," Meyer said.

Pyrolysis also requires an energy source for hydrocarbon conversion. One possibility is to "recycle" the product of conversion.

A barrel of artificial crude "is similar to natural crude," according to Meyer, "except it has more oxygen and less sulphur."

But synthetic crude probably can't be refined in current refining facilities "without some modifications," according to Meyer.

Unlike current, highly centralized refining practices, pyrolysis works best on a small scale, Meyer said. Plants should be "grown" within 10 miles of the processing plant.

If Amoco were to rely on plants for 100 percent of its oil production, about 100 processing stations would be required, Meyer estimated.

Safety in investment

In this article, we continue our discussion of the answer to last week's question.

Question: Is there a safe investment that will give a guaranteed monthly income or pay interest monthly?

Answer: Among the more popular investments offering safety and monthly income to investors are investment companies with the combined clout of substantial dollars to invest, thereby taking advantage of the benefits of volume buying. The high yield segment of the debt securities market is characterized by disproportionately larger unit costs for smaller transactions.

Because of the size and volume of its transactions, the investment company is generally able to execute transactions to produce better net prices and, therefore, a higher net yield. Stated otherwise, the company, through its volume purchases and sales, can normally effect substantial savings for the benefit of the investor.

They seek the highest level of current income available through investments in fixed income securities. Through a diversified investment portfolio, investors realize the benefit of owning many bonds under the single name of the investment company.

Since the individual bonds pay interest at specified times, normally twice a year, the investment company can structure the payment periods to permit them the cash flow to distribute to investors interest on a monthly basis.

Another benefit granted investors is the active management of the bond portfolio to maintain current value of the investor's dollars. There are thousands of issues of fixed income securities, and each potential investment has characteristics which must be evaluated relative to investment objectives. Ordinarily, the individual investor has neither the time, the expertise, nor the resources to research this market properly.

However, the investment companies, who are experienced in managing portfolios and in trading and researching fixed income securities, continuously monitor the company's investments as well as developments, and trends in the economy and the financial markets. Because market prices are fluctuating constantly, reaction to and anticipation of such changes enable the Advisor to increase the yield, prevent or minimize losses, and realize gains on the company's portfolio. A great many investors appreciate the liquidity or ready marketability of this type of investment. The shares are redeemable immediately at the net asset value thereby providing the investor with ready access to the value of his or her shares.

Usually, these companies have available prototype Keogh and Individual Retirement Account plans structured to accentuate the compound interest benefits for building a retirement asset base.

Since there are a number of these available, it is important that an investor check to determine which one is paying the highest return. This past Monday, during our regular, weekly investigation of yields, we found interest rates ranging from 8 1/2 percent to 10 1/2 percent. Everything else being equal, we used the company paying 10 1/2 percent for the investment of our client's funds.

I am sending you information on this particular investment.

This information is available to the public by writing or telephoning Mr. Smith at Edward G. Smith and Associates, Financial Planning Consultants, 219 2nd St. N., Twin Falls, Idaho 83301; telephone 734-4464.

Business

Mexican oil bonds profitable

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — While U.S. consumers reel from the latest oil price hikes, some American investors count their profits from a unique Mexican bond whose value is pegged to the price of oil.

When Mexico raised its oil prices July 5 by a whopping 32 percent, the increase translated into profits for holders of Petrobonds, three-year government obligations that in effect are valued in barrels of oil.

When Petrobonds first were issued in April 1977, they cost about $45, which theoretically could have been traded in for 3.34 barrels of oil.

The same 3.34 barrels now are worth $74.49, a 65 percent profit for the lucky investor who saw a good thing before the current spiral of prices.

When the 1977 bonds are redeemed, payments to the holders will reflect all of the oil increases, minus the 10 percent yearly interest which already will have been paid over the three years.

The bonds are traded on the Mexican stock market where partially matured bonds are sold for only slightly more than the original cost.

A few hundred Americans have purchased them mainly through U.S. brokerage houses with Mexican affiliates. One American investor now living in Mexico purchased his Petrobonds in early June for about $45.79 per issue.

"Apparently nobody had caught on to the potential value," he said. "Now they're selling for about $48.80 and who knows how high they'll go. Wall Street can't offer returns like that."

For the average American consumer frustrated by gasoline station lines, petropro profits can go a long way in easing the pain.

Petropro profits are assured as long as a substitute for oil is not found because the Mexican oil company, Petroleos Mexicanos, pushes prices up every quarter, usually following OPEC guidelines.

Mexico currently enjoys a strong international credit rating, but investors also are protected because government funds to cover the bonds are held in an irrevocable trust.

The Petrobonds also are free from the risk of peso devaluation because the issues are effectively valued in oil.

Car fleet expands

OMAHA, Neb. — Union Pacific Railroad plans to spend $15.7 million for 3,625 new cars. Of those, 1,600 will be covered hoppers for use in grain shipments, 400 boxcars, 125 auto racks and 100 bay window cabooses. The railroad will also build 1,200 open top hoppers at its Portland, Ore., shops. Delivery is expected during 1980 and 1981.

Optimistic view

LOS ANGELES — Businessmen in Idaho, Montana and Utah take an optimistic view of the third quarter of 1979 compared to last year. Sixty-two percent of those polled by Prudential Insurance Co. expect economic activity to increase, 24 percent expect a decrease and 14 percent expect no change. For the 12 state Western region, 65 percent anticipate gains, 21 percent expect a drop and 14 percent expect no change.

Totals slide on contracts

NEW YORK — Contracting for new construction eased in May with the month's total of $16.4 billion of newly started work slipping 8 percent below the year-ago total, the F.W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems reports.

The seasonally adjusted Dodge index of total construction contract value, at 178 in May, retreated 12 percent from April's 202 (1978=100). By this measure, which makes allowance for the normal month-to-month seasonal variation in contracting activity, May's rate of contracting was the weakest so far in 1979.

May's $4.6 billion of nonresidential building contract value was virtually unchanged from the year-ago amount.

Contracts for nonbuilding construction totaled $3.8 billion in May, for a decline of 32 percent. An absence of major power plant projects was the main reason for the May shortfall.

Jerome sets sewer rates schedule

JEROME — When Jerome's new sewer rate schedule goes into effect, billing contractors will find sewer rates up to $200 per inch — up to $200 per inch from $50 to $400.

The Jerome City Council plucked the new hookup charge last week when it passed the new six-step rate schedule on last reading.

City Attorney Robert Williams said the new rate schedule will not go into effect until about Aug. 1 because required publishing of the ordinance in local newspapers is being delayed for two reasons.

A new computer program has to be written so that the bills will reflect the new rates.

Also, Williams explained, a new state law which went into effect July 1 says cities don't have to publish new ordinances in their entirety, only a summary. Williams said he is in the process of writing the summary.

The first $100 of the new fee will cover the cost of the connection to the city sewer system. The remaining $300 will go into a sinking fund set aside specifically for future sewer system developments.

The action to start a sinking fund follows the recommendation of Public Works Director Ed Evans earlier this year. A sinking fund means city residents already on the system will not have to pay for future additions resulting from new growth.

In other action on the sewer front, the city council approved a new sewer rate schedule Tuesday.

The new schedule will raise the city's $650,000 share of a new sewage treatment plant. The third reading Tuesday did not generate any protests from residents and businessmen, as was the case at the earlier readings.

The new residential user fee will be $1.13 per 100 cubic feet of water used. Businesses will be charged according to the category in which they are classified. Those categories are based on water pollution content. Earlier protests from residents and businessmen dealt with the fact that the new rates in many cases represented a tripling or quadrupling of the old rates.

Also on Tuesday, the council conditionally awarded the bid to build the new sewage treatment plant to Nelson and Co. of Twin Falls for $4.2 million. The award is contingent on approval from the Environmental Protection Agency and the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. Bids were opened last month for the second time.

City Attorney Robert Williams said so far no protests have been received from the other two bidders. This was the second round of bidding, the first one having been rejected because of technical errors that could have led to legal action.

The council also ordered Williams to draw up an ordinance for the next meeting July 17 eliminating a late charge for water bill payments. He said an analysis shows the extra billing procedure costs more than the late charge.

Hospital evicts tenants

By DOUG TULLIS

GOODING — The youngsters, the oldsters and the actors were ousted from their permanent offices at the old TB hospital in Gooding when the state ended maintenance of it July 1, but two of the three have found new homes.

The Gooding County Senior Citizens, the Gooding School District Kindergarten and the Gooding Antique Festival Theater were all housed in the old building until last week.

State funding for maintenance of the buildings and grounds ended July 1, forcing the groups to seek new quarters.

The senior citizens group will stay temporarily at the old hospital grounds, in new and more limited quarters, until the group's new building is complete sometime this fall.

Gooding County Senior Citizens Director Hazel Williams said the group has moved from the west building into the basement of the building housing the alcohol treatment center.

"We were told we could stay until September or October and we hope to be in our new building by then," she said. Members of the senior citizens group are in the process of constructing a new building.

"We're laying the block walls now and we hope to have it finished enough to move in this fall," she added. Work on the building is being done with donated labor and materials, so construction may be a little slower than if a contractor were doing the work, she said.

The senior citizens will be without the boutique store operated in the building because "there is no room in the basement of the center building." "We were able to set the pool table up in one of the other rooms but we don't have the boutique."

School District Kindergarten classes have been held in the west building for the past several years, District Superintendent Eugene Gibbons said, but will be moved to the grade school for the 1979-80 school year.

Gibbons said there will be room for the 70 kindergarten students expected this fall as long as there is no unexpected increase in students in the grades at the elementary school.

"We were paying rent there but we will be saving both on rent and transportation by being at the grade school," he said.

Growth will force the District eventually to add classrooms to accommodate more students, he said, but nothing is planned this year. "In the future, we definitely will have to add classrooms, if we grow," he said.

The Gooding Antique Festival Theater, which was housed in the east building, is now operating out of the carpenter Paul Kliss of Hagerman. "I lost a carpenter and a bedroom to the props," he joked.

Most of the props and supplies for the three-member company were stored in the basement of the east building, but were moved when maintenance of the building ended.

"We're looking at places in Tuttle, Hagerman and Gooding right now," Kliss said, but added he wouldn't speculate where the group would end up.

Actors from the theater toured the southern states last winter, including stops at several Air-Force bases. A northern Idaho tour is now beginning and the company will be in the Magic Valley sometime in August, he said.

Kliss said funding for the group is "always precarious" and would not predict what effect a change in location and a possible increase in rent would have on the group.

Inventor tackles car-guzzling

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

BELLEVUE — No matter how fancy Harold Hannenbaum dresses, there is one sure way to tell if the inventor of the freewinding Carousal is tinkering with new ideas. Just check his fingernails.

Last week, Hannenbaum's wardrobe sparkled as he sat in the shaded backyard patio of the Bellevue home he and his wife Tillie own. His shoes were shiny and the double-knit pants and shirt looked freshly ironed. A neatly-knotted tie hung from his neck.

But under the nails of his large, gnarled fingers, dirt and grease had accumulated, the first sign that Hannenbaum is working on another invention.

This time, Hannenbaum said, his mind is set on reducing automobile fuel consumption. He explained his theory should result in getting more horsepower with less fuels by mixing fuels better. When they are in the carburetor, he will begin testing it in about a week on his own car, a Lincoln Continental.

With his modifications, Hannenbaum believes his Lincoln's mileage should increase from 19 to 25 miles per gallon.

Hannenbaum said today's vehicles only use gasoline and air in the combustion process. His adaptations would add water and alcohol to the mixture.

He said a California man currently receiving a lot of publicity has come up with a similar invention, but it is different because it only adds water to the gasoline and air.

Hannenbaum said he will add alcohol to the water for two reasons. First, he said, more water produces higher temperatures when combustion occurs and higher temperatures generate more horsepower.

Second, the alcohol mixed with water in a tank separate from the gas tank prevents the water from freezing, an important consideration since industrialized countries where most autos are used have freezing winters.

The latest version carries the same trademark of Hannenbaum's other 176 inventions — simplicity of parts and functions.

The alcohol-water tank is a gallon-sized coffee can that will fit under the hood of his Lincoln Continental.

By turning a valve placed inside the car, the mixture will run through a three-foot copper tube into a copper coil which will fit around the catalytic converter. Hannenbaum says heat from the manifold will heat up the coil, which will be covered with spun glass insulation and a metal protective plate, and vaporize the liquids.

The steam will run out of the other end of the coil into another copper tube hooked through the air filter fitted with a turbulator, which fits snugly behind the filter. The device is a thin circle of wire with metal fins welded inside and angled the same direction and it causes a better mixing of fuels.

Hannenbaum theorizes it will create a virtual "cyclone" of the air-come-in-through-the-filter-and-the-alcohol-water mix.

In turn, those three fuels will be sucked through the carburetor, picking up gasoline streaming out of the jets. The tumbling action will allow the gas particles to break down even smaller, Hannenbaum speculates, and mix better with the other fuels.

Smaller particles combust better and mean more of the fuels will burn than in standard carburetors, he said.

Four, fuels instead of two will cause more heat, the inventor added, which when exploded should add about 20 horsepower.

The additional horsepower means less pressure on the accelerator, Hannenbaum said, so less fuel is needed to get a vehicle up to the required speed.

The water vapor will reduce carbon buildup as well, he added.

The principal of mixing the fuels came to him through a variety of experiences, Hannenbaum says. Using water injection is an old technique farmers used on tractors years ago, he explained.

Creating a whirlwind with the turbulator popped into his mind because of the same action which causes his famous Carousal stove to burn cleaner and more efficiently.

The idea of adding alcohol also came from his childhood years on his parents' farm near Eden, the 62-year-old inventor said. There, with the help of an uncle, he built a still which uses potatoes or other agricultural produce to make a mash that cooks down to alcohol.

In fact, he has that 50-year-old prototype which produces up to four gallons of alcohol a day.

The still isn't being used because a license to make alcohol for any use has to be obtained first from the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, he noted. It isn't a speedy process.

But if the licensing procedure is ever simplified, Hannenbaum feels the smaller stills could be another marketable item that will cut down the U.S. fuel consumption rate.

Why Hannenbaum's still design would be perfect to use in conjunction with his carburetor modifications, well, that's another story.

County aid unlikely in Gooding

GOODING — Prospects look slim for Gooding-city officials to convince the Gooding County Commission to part with some funds for the city recreation and airport operations.

City officials will meet with the Gooding County Commissioners Monday morning to ask for funds to help pay for the city recreation program because many of those using the city swimming pool and playgrounds are county residents and do not pay city taxes.

A poll of the Gooding County Commissioners Friday indicated the city officials will have to fund the recreation programs on their own, but the commissioners are willing to listen to a pitch on the joint operation of the city-owned airport.

"It would be a little hard to give Gooding some money when Wendell has a recreation district," Commissioner Will Thomas said Friday. "Some of the tax dollars paid by Wendell people would go to pay for recreation in Gooding," he said. Thomas emphasized that the double taxation for recreation would not be fair to Wendell residents.

Commissioner Rick Braliford of Wendell echoed what Thomas said about the double taxation. The city asked the county for money for recreation earlier this year but was turned down. Thomas said that if the pitch is the same this time "I'm against it."

He added, however, if city officials have new facts or information about the picture, "I'd be willing to listen to them."

Braliford said an attempt last year to organize a recreation district in the Gooding area died when too few signatures were collected on a petition to put the matter on the ballot. He said that rejection of a recreation district is a pretty good indicator that those people don't want to spend their tax money for recreation.

It is a matter of robbing Peter to pay Paul to come up with funds for Gooding recreation, Braliford said, while other areas of the county are in need of funds. "We have a lot of old Sheriff's Department cars that need replaced and we're subject to the same kind of inflation facing everyone else," he said.

"If we support a recreation program for Gooding, why not for Hagerman, Bliss and Wendell," Commission Chairman George Lemmon questioned. "I see nothing wrong with the two-price set-up they have now."

That two price system Gooding now has charges a higher price for the use of recreation facilities for those living outside the city limits.

"As far as the county helping pay the cost of the city's airport, all three commissioners said they are willing to discuss that possibility but are not ready to commit any funds.

The city officials are scheduled to meet with the commissioners at 9:30 a.m. in the commission chambers at the court house.

Dora Frees' four-way Fourth fete

By DOUG TULLIS
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Dora Frees celebrated three birthdays Wednesday during the Fourth of July picnic in the Shoshone City Park.

Mrs. Frees, like the 500 or so gathered Shoshone area inhabitants, waved the flag and saluted the birthday of the nation, but she also marked the birthday of the state and celebrated her 89th birthday.

Mrs. Frees was born the same day Idaho was admitted into the Union, July 3, 1890, and has celebrated the three birthdays nearly every Fourth of July since then.

The spy, 89 year old, former Dietrich resident says there have been considerable changes in the country and her adopted Idaho home.

She was born in Iowa but moved to Dietrich with her husband, Christ, in 1910. That trip took two days and one night on the train but she says she has since made the trip in less than 24 hours.

The couple's first home was a tent but after two months living there, "We built a cabin. Our oldest boy was born the day we moved in," she says.

"They lived southeast of Dietrich on 600 acres of Crore Act land they homesteaded and, for years, the Frees orchard "was the place to go for the Fourth of July."

The celebration she attended in Shoshone Wednesday was "a lot different than we used to have. We used to have horse races, ball games, and bull-riding contests," she explained. "The Frees ranch was always the place to go," she added.

Her daughter, Mrs. Jude (Doris) Ingard of Twin Falls, clarified that, however, by saying that the Frees ranch was one of the few ranches where any shade trees could be found.

Dora says she has missed only one Fourth of July celebration in her 89 years and that was when her son, Gerald, was born. "That year, they had a Fourth of July Celebration and I didn't get to go," she complained.

She and her husband retired from the farm in 1942 and moved to a home in Dietrich. "When my husband's health started to fail him we moved to town."

They lived in Dietrich until 1963 when Mr. Frees died and in 1964, Dora moved to Shoshone.

Last year, she moved to a retirement center in Twin Falls but says Twin Falls is not to her liking. "I just never have liked big cities. I liked it in Dietrich and I'll always be from Dietrich."

With her celebrating the three birthdays June 3 and 4, she has since added another reason to celebrate the first few days of July: One of her 10 great-grand children was born July 5.

At 89, it might be expected that he has outlived her sisters and brothers but that is not the case. Out of six sisters and seven brothers, she is still living. "I have an older sister that is 91," she says.

While some people need a reason to celebrate the Fourth of July, Dora Frees can come up with at least four reasons to join the festivities.

House considers forest funds

KETCHUM — The House Appropriations Subcommittee is now considering a Forest Service request for $1.9 million to buy scenic easements in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

The Senate has already approved the requested funding from the Land and Water Conservation Fund. Senator Frank Church said last week he was "very optimistic" the funds will be available soon. SNRA

Lands Program manager Paul Zimmerman said Friday "We haven't received any word that it has been approved. They asked for some information earlier this week, so it appears they are working on it. They are taking a lot better than they have for a long time."

SNRA Superintendent Al Ashton, said if the $1.9 million is received, the funds would be put to use immediately.

"We've been behind in meeting commitments in relationship to Public Law 92-400, and meeting the intent of that law. We've been out of money for the last year and a half," Ashton said. Over 30 land owners have yet to be paid for land being acquired under the program.

Senator Church said last week that the funds are necessary, "if the government is to maintain its credibility with local landowners. Promises must be kept."

Ashton estimated the $1.9 million would buy approximately 1,000 acres. "We've only got about a third of the job done, as far as the purchase of scenic easements. We're still looking at approximately 15,000 acres. There are a number of folks we've been negotiating with over the years, and when we lost the dollars we had, we had to hold everything in abeyance," Ashton said $3.5 million will be available after the first of October. "We're just trying to get this $1.9 so that we can start immediately with the program here. This is just a little chunk of money authorized last January."

The property involved lies mostly in the Sawtooth Valley-Stanley Basin area.

Numerologist opens parapsychology firm

SUN VALLEY — A Sun Valley woman's interest in the occult and psychic phenomena has turned from a hobby into a business.

Virginia A. Bisantz formed her company, Creative Harmony, last January to promote interest and development of the "personal growth process" through parapsychological media.

Ms. Bisantz runs the promotion firm from her home at 232 Bitterroot Rd.

She said she decided to open shop after 100 people attended a one-day workshop she set up last fall featuring a director of the Edgar Cayce Foundation. Cayce was a noted psychic in the first half of the 20th Century who was both author and subject of many books.

Ms. Bisantz said she is sponsoring a one-day workshop on past life regressions July 14 from her home, featuring Isabel Bryce, of Halley.

Cost of the workshop, which runs from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., is $25 and it is limited to 20 people. Registration can be made by calling 622-8002 or through Synergy Bookstore in Ketchum.

Then, July 19 to 27, Kay Ortman, of Well Springs, Calif., will conduct a workshop on a variety of subjects, including movement to music, color therapy, the use of integrative arts such as pastels and clay, and massage to music.

Ms. Bisantz, who is a numerologist, explained that this year she also hopes to bring in an astrologer, a psychic—who interprets body auras—and a aura is the electrical field around a person's body—and a psychic working with groups of people on individual or group questions.

She is a native of Phoenix, Ariz., and lived in Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., before moving to Sun Valley one and one-half years ago with her four children.

BLM plans meeting on recreation site

KETCHUM — The Bureau of Land Management will hold a public meeting July 11 to gather comments about the development of a recreation site two miles north of the Ketchum.

The meeting will be held in the Ketchum City Hall at 9 p.m. and night will be both written and oral comments will be taken at that meeting.

The recreation site would be located at the Lake Creek Recreation site along Highway 75, five miles north of Ketchum and would provide access to trails north of Hulen-Medows and west of the Big Wood River.

Shoshone BLM District Manager Charles Hasler said a parking area, shelter, picnic tables and a footbridge across the river to the forest service lands are planned.

Comments can be made about the planned development at the meeting but those who miss the meeting can submit written comments to the BLM Shoshone District office in Shoshone until July 30.

Seattle Wagnerian fest draws world-wide fans

BY CARRICK LEAVITT

SEATTLE (UPI) — Intensive hospital care and wheelchair for dorned, Mrs. Nora Knoble, 79, flies in from Athens, Ga. every year to see "spiritually revivified" at the Pacific Northwest Wagner Festival.

"It's the only thing that's kept me alive," says she. "They gave me up down there" in the hospital, where three times this year she has been in intensive care for treatment of pulmonary edema.

William Cord, 58, a professor of foreign languages in Rohnert Park, Calif., underwent open heart surgery in May 1974, but less than two months later he threw off his medical restraints, rose from bed and journeyed to Seattle for two weeks of the festival and Richard Wagner's "The Ring of the Nibelung."

"There was a question as to whether or not I could make it that first year," said Cord, who has tickets for the festival again this season. "I haven't missed a one since it started. I always go to both eyes."

This summer marks the fifth anniversary of a unique presentation of Wagner's monumental "Ring." The complete four-opera cycle is presented twice in the original German, July 8-13, and in Andrew Porter's English translation, July 16-21. The Seattle Opera's production is the only "Ring" cycle performed in one week as the composer intended, in the Western Hemisphere.

Another devotee is Navy Rear Adm. (Ret.) Bertram W. Korn, 60, of Philadelphia who says he "grew up on Wagner" and just because he is on a kidney dialysis machine is no reason to stay away. His hospital telephoned ahead and made reservations at University of Washington Hospital for him to undergo dialysis for five hours, three times a week during his stay this summer.

"I have to get a hospital room first, before I make sure about hotel reservations," Korn said. "I've been on dialysis since January 1978 and I'm not going to let it hold me back from opera festivals."

"I was but there two years ago for the German version of the 'Ring.' Last year I heard it in English. I will be there for both this year. So I have to arrange for two weeks of dialysis time."

The festival will draw 6,000 people each night from 21 countries, says Glynn Ross, general director and founder. And a very special 6,000 they are. "The ring is a cerebral experience as well as theatrical," says the 64-year-old Ross.

"These are people who have alternatives — intellectually, financially and aesthetically."

They include Wagner groups such as the Nicholas Siorbans, who fly in every year from Jakarta; Madden Michael, who comes from down under Australia; John Hall from Tasmania, and Tom Yanagihara, "who is bringing guests from Tokyo this year," Ross said.

Opera lover John Alex McCone of Los Angeles, former head of the CIA, will also be there. McCone has extended an invitation to Henry Kissinger to be his "personal guest" at the festival. Kissinger will be out West anyway — on a visit to an ultra-exclusive gathering of the wealthy in the Belmorlan Grove north of San Francisco.

Jerome student in special science study

FORT COLLINS — Brian Lallatin, a senior this fall at Jerome High School, is one of 49 high-ability students participating in a student science training program at Colorado State University this summer.

Lallatin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Lallatin, 301 S. Fillmore, Jerome.

The six-week program runs from June 24 through Aug. 3 and is funded jointly by CSU and the National Science Foundation, said Dr. Wilson

E. Brumley, associate professor of mathematics and program director.

The purpose of the project is to offer guidance and encouragement to talented young people who show strong potential for scientific and technical careers, he said.

Participants were selected from the high school class of 1980 on the basis of scholastic ability, scientific interest, and completion of specified courses in science and mathematics.

Scheduled Monday night are hearings on a change in zoning around the rim of the city, and on how the city will spend federal revenue sharing funds.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the City Municipal Building.

cover but a sparkler's continuing spark could have.

Police Chief Howard Duflos said Friday the investigation is continuing but there are no suspects "as of the moment," and people in the neighborhood didn't see anything.

Water skiing boat fire under investigation

JEROME — A boat used for water skiing received about $2,000 damage in a fire here Tuesday afternoon, the Jerome Fire Department reported.

Fire Chief Lynn Bingham said the cause of the blaze which started on the boat cover is still being investigated but arson is not suspected.

The 18-foot Fiberglass boat belongs to Duane Carroll and was parked near the back yard of his home at 119 East Avenue C when the incident occurred, the report said.

Bingham said the canvas burned quickly and there were burn holes in the seats. The windshield was discolored and the paint on the fiberglass body was scorched.

He said he didn't believe the damage could have been caused by a firecracker but a sparkler is a possibility. He explained that a firecracker spark probably would not have ignited the dry canvas

Lack of quorum postpones Gooding Council meeting

GOODING — The Gooding City Council meeting originally scheduled for July 2 and rescheduled for July 5 will be held July 9.

City Clerk Isabelle Cahoon said the lack of a quorum caused both the July 2 and the July 5 meetings to be canceled.

Scheduled Monday night are hearings on a change in zoning around the rim of the city, and on how the city will spend federal revenue sharing funds.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the City Municipal Building.

Jerome swimmers defeated

JEROME — The Jerome Swim Team went down to defeat in its first dual match of the season recently.

Rupert outswam the local crew 100-188 at the city pool.

One of the highlights for Jerome was the performance of Tina Prairie who captured three first places.

Other first place winners were Tommy Daniels, 50-yard freestyle; Misty Falconburg, 50-yard backstroke; Scott Ford, 50-yard backstroke; Girls' 9-10 100-yard medley relay; girls' 11-12 200-yard medley relay; Tiffany Cris, 100-yard backstroke; Ruthie Staley, girls' 100-yard backstroke; Laurie Parkon, girls' 100-yard freestyle; Christine Davidson, girls' 100-yard freestyle; 15-18 100-yard individual medley; Rick Rogers and Troy Wall; Debbie Cook; 100-yard freestyle.

Three more days pari-mutuel racing set for fairgrounds

JEROME — This weekend marks the beginning of pari-mutuel horse racing at the Jerome County Fairgrounds.

The first day of action was Saturday, and another field is set for today.

More than 123 horses will be competing for the three top purses. Fifty-five have entered in the Magic Valley Quarter Horse Futurity, with an estimated purse of $12,000.

According to racing officials, finals for the Intermountain Quarter Horse Derby will be next Saturday. The Magic Valley Quarter Horse Futurity and the Jerome Recreation Stallion Service Futurity finals will be Sunday.

Entries are still being accepted for the $1,500 Paint Horse Maturity and the $800 Idaho Bred Thoroughbred Futurity. Nominations will close Sunday.

Check warranty for 'magic' strawberry options

"QUESTIONS PEOPLE ASK" is a reader service column. Questions should be addressed to Ken Thornberg, Executive Director, BBB, Idaho Building, Suite 321, Boise, Idaho 83702. Questions of broadest general interest will be answered here. Others will be answered by mail.

By KEN THORNBERG
Executive Director, BBB
Q: What do you think of the advertisement from Isle of Tara Nurseries in Fresno, Calif. that offers what they claim to be strawberry plants that will grow "The biggest, juiciest, sweetest, chimpling strawberries in all the world... 30 days guaranteed!" Mrs. D. Bole.

A: The important thing here is to realize what the "guarantee" actually says. Simply stated, the guarantee says you can have your money back if, after 30 days, the plants have not produced as promised. Not at the end of 90 days, not even after six months, but only after a full two years would you be able to exercise your guarantee and hope the company was still in business.

Believe me, if there was such a "miracle" strawberry plant, the commercial growers would have been onto it long ago. There isn't, and the promoters anticipate that the vast majority of mail-order buyers will have forgotten all about the guarantee when they dig up their "miracle" plants along with the crab grass a few months after they plant them.

Buying any sort of plants or nursery stock by mail is risky business. The same advertisement goes to the coast and humid northwest as goes to the more torrid climates that we are familiar with. Do business with a local, established nurseryman and follow his advice.

Q: I notice most savings and loan associations are offering a version of the "Treasury Bill Plus" which pays one-quarter more percent in interest than regular U.S. Treasury certificates. However, I notice that some advertisements say that the Treasury charges a fee if you wish to deal with them directly and the savings and loan associations do not. I wonder if you could clarify the situation so those of us who are trying to cope with inflation by such investments could be better-guided. A concerned investor (no name).

A: There is talk now about limiting such offerings by private institutions. However, as of this writing, S&Ls are offering a six-month certificate for a minimum investment of $10,000 which pays one-quarter percent more interest than the current weekly interest rate of U.S. Treasury certificates, which is arrived at by a weekly auction of the Federal Reserve Bank.

The Federal Reserve does not charge a fee. However, you must go to one of their banks which are few and located in large cities. If you wish to purchase a "T-Bill" — you pay the discounted amount — $10,000 less the amount of interest and then the full $10,000 is paid you at the end of six months. When you buy the savings and loan offering, you invest the full $10,000 and receive the $10,000 plus the interest after six months.

Q: I am sending along a mail promotion which I would like you to examine. As you can see it is called the "$25,000 Magic Bingo & Sweepstakes." Anyone with half a brain could complete the first puzzle so I suppose you have to send in more money for future puzzles? — W.F. Burley.

A: That's it. We call it the "Stupid Puzzle Come-On." American Holiday Association has been doing this for years, and it is only recently that they have been required to spell out all of the particulars of their deal. You will find, tucked away in the fine-print, the statement — "We anticipate 96 percent correct solutions to initial game entry." But then the plot thickens. If you wanted to get in on the big money, you had to send in an entrance fee of up to $7,000 — that first puzzle. Subsequent "tie-breakers" (of which they anticipate three) require additional fees. The fine print further states that they anticipate 450,000 players, so you can see this promotion will be very profitable. — for American Holiday Association.

Q: I have been reading your column for years and you are always warning people about this or alerting them to something else or pointing out some other ripoff. What I'd like to know is why does the Better Business Bureau allow such things to continue — I.D. Bole.

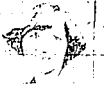

A: The answer is so simple that many people overlook it. Better Business Bureaus do not "permit" such things. It is the general public, the homemaker, the business person, the industrial worker, the professional man — which permits dollars to be taken from them by various schemes. As long as the public supports schemes — that is how long they will survive and grow. Withdraw the money, the schemes lose their income and fade away.

"There are hundreds of schemes, but successful ones require two people — an operator and a victim. We are all potential victims. We all are susceptible to the possibility of instant gratification, whether it be weight loss, more hair, less hair, instant money, etc., etc. I guess it all goes back to the Better Business Bureau admonition — if a thing looks too good to be true, it probably is!"

Deceptive advertising comes in many varieties

JEROME. — Advertising is on radio and television, in newspapers and magazines, and even in your mail. Sky riding, sponsored race cars and recipes on cereal boxes, all are part of advertising. The advertising business is very large, amounting to $20 billion a year.

Good ads provide important facts about a product to help in your buying decisions. They save you the time and expense of walking into each store to compare shop. They make it easier for you to get the most for your money.

Advertising also supports radio, television, newspapers and magazines.

Not all advertising is beneficial. Some advertising is deceptive. These points are clues to help you recognize deceptive ads.

1. Unqualified claims — You should examine carefully statements that the product is "the best," "the finest," "the richest" or the "prettiest." To be acceptable, most claims must at least show how they are determined — for example, "compared to brand X, Y and Z?"

2. An unbelievably low price — A price that is much lower than comparable merchandise sold by others is a danger signal. The circumstances that make low prices possible must be disclosed.

Thunderstorm precautions offered

SAFETY (UPI) — When thunderstorms threaten:

—Outdoor recreationists should be particularly concerned. Above all, they should check the latest weather forecasts before going into remote areas with minimal radio reception.

—Campers should avoid dry gulches. Heavy rainfall with thunderstorms may miles away can result in flash flooding there and in deep canyons.

—A growing number of National Weather Service stations have continuous FM radio weather broadcasts transmitted on 162.55 or 162.40 megahertz. Many modern portable radios carry these weather channels. Check your location for their broadcasts.

Lightning kills more people annually than tornadoes and hurricanes combined. Only flash floods in recent years exceed the number of deaths by lightning. Lightning usually kills only one person at a time, thus attracting less attention than more spectacular hurricanes and tornadoes.

—To avoid the lightning hazards, move inside a large building or a metal vehicle if possible.

—Do not stand beneath a natural lightning rod such as a large tree in an open area.

—Avoid projecting above the surrounding landscape.

For instance: The quantity or selection is limited, or the model has been discontinued, or the items are damaged or irregular. If the item described is available in reasonable numbers for the price quoted, it may be a real bargain.

3. Unstated terms — In ads for loans or merchandise sold on credit, if a monthly payment is quoted without disclosing the total amount borrowed or the effective annual percentage rate, beware! Besides being deceptive, it may be a violation of truth in lending laws.

4. Failure to disclose facts — When the ad does not tell things about the product that are likely to influence the buying decision, such as that "the 25-inch color television set is a kit requiring extensive assembly," or "the brand name house paint is available only in purple," beware!

When you find an ad that seems misleading, even if you aren't interested in buying the item, complain. Call or visit the advertiser. Tell them you feel the ad is misleading. Ask them what they will do to correct it.

Most advertising is legal and most firms are as anxious as you are to prevent any problems. There are also many industry groups and governmental agencies involved in making sure that ads are fair and complete.

The National Advertising Division, Council of Better Business Bureaus, screens ads appearing in print or broadcast form. Companies running ads that are questionable may do one of three things: 1. supply adequate substantiation; 2. modify the claims made; or 3. discontinue the ads.

Send written complaints to the National Advertising Review Board, 850 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. If the advertiser refuses to make the suggested changes, the board refers the complaint to the appropriate government enforcement agency.

The Federal Trade Commission has authority to determine and enforce truth and fairness in advertising, particularly when the ad uses tests and comparisons. If an ad has a tendency or the potential to deceive people — even if it is unintentionally so — it is still illegal.

The FTC is the primary federal enforcement authority.

Other federal agencies also monitor various types of advertising, including the Food and Drug Administration, Postal Service and Federal Communications Commission.

Common sense is your best protection against deceptive advertising. By reading ads carefully you will be able to tell the difference between real bargains and schemes.

If you want to stop deceptive advertising, don't be deceived and don't buy! Getting your money back is difficult and time-consuming — sometimes impossible. To protect yourself, always ask questions before you buy, and report problems to the appropriate authorities.
