

Midday Wednesday plunge—maybe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Skylab is expected to fall around midday Wednesday, give or take 9 hours, lessening the chance of debris dropping over the most densely populated areas of the globe, the space agency reported Monday.

Officials emphasized, however, it's too soon to predict where pieces of the doomed, 77-ton space station will fall. They said the chances of the debris causing harm are remote.

If Skylab were to plunge into the atmosphere at the exact center of the 18-hour period, at 10:21 a.m. MDT, it would drop out of orbit south of Africa and scatter pieces over the southern Indian Ocean and Australia and into the South Pacific Ocean.

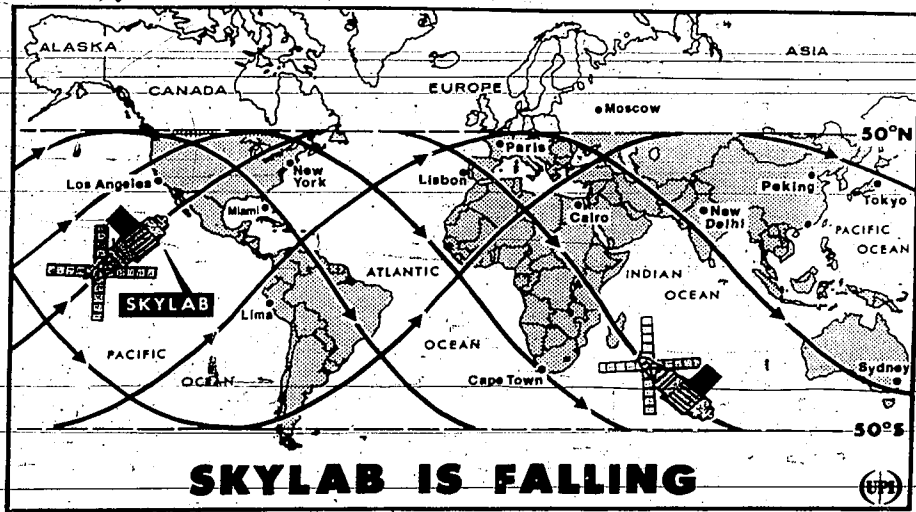

"This is one of the lowest populated tracks there is," said Richard Smith, deputy associate administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The re-entry estimate issued by the North American Air Defense Command Monday evening said there was a 95 percent likelihood of Skylab hitting the atmosphere between 1:21 a.m. MDT and 7:21 p.m. MDT Wednesday.

The orbiting laboratory, launched in May 1973 and abandoned by its third three-man crew in February 1974, has dropped to an altitude of Earth after traveling more than 87 million miles in orbit.

Smith said orbits that bring Skylab down around the middle of the 18-hour re-entry period generally are those that cross the United States, Africa, the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans.

"Those are the orbits that have less population than the world average density." However, if Skylab were to fall during the beginning of the re-entry period, it would be crossing over Europe and Asia, the most densely populated areas of the Earth.

About 500 pieces of metal capable of causing injury are expected to survive Skylab's plunge and scatter along a 4,000-mile long belt 100 miles wide.

On the average, NASA estimated there was one chance in 152 of one injury somewhere around the world. The odds drop to 1 in 1,500 if Skylab falls during orbits crossing the least populated areas of the globe. There is only 1 chance in 600 billion of a specific individual being injured. NASA activated its special Skylab command center Monday to monitor the final hours of the flight of Skylab, the largest man-made object in space.

The center, closed to news media because it contains classified space tracking information, was being manned by representatives of the State Department, the Defense Department, the White House, the Federal Aviation Administration and the Federal Preparedness Agency in addition to NASA.

The broad period of uncertainty in the prediction of Skylab's fall is the result of a lack of precision on the amount of atmospheric drag a specific spacecraft will encounter when it falls out of control.

To further complicate the situation, variations in the gravitational pull of land masses versus oceans and in atmospheric density can influence the orbital path of a descending vehicle.

Smith said controllers at the Johnson Space Center in Houston will deliberately start Skylab tumbling end over end when it descends to an altitude of about 75 miles. This will occur about 4 to 4½ hours before re-entry.

Smith explained that Skylab's tumbling will make it easier for engineers to calculate the amount of air resistance the spacecraft will encounter as it rubs through the thin upper fringes of the atmosphere on its final orbits.

If it appears Skylab might re-enter the atmosphere over the most densely populated regions of Earth, NASA plans to maneuver Skylab into a more streamlined orientation about 12 hours before re-entry. By reducing drag, this would slow its descent and allow it to stay in orbit a few additional hours when its orbital track would move it over less populated areas.

Energy consensus developing

THURMONT, Md. (UPI) — President Carter met with congressmen Monday for the first time since he began the Camp David summit and a spokesman said he was pleased to see a consensus developing on how to deal with the energy crisis.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said the 22 members of Congress who discussed energy with the president agreed it is time to give him standby power to ration gasoline, and generally on the need for conservation and synthetic fuel development.

When the energy talks were completed and a separate discussion on inflation had started, White House press secretary Jody Powell issued a brief statement expressing Carter's satisfaction with the talks.

"There was unanimous agreement on the serious nature of the problem we face — we do have a long term energy crisis," Powell said. "The president is pleased with the significant amount of developing consensus on the steps we need to take to deal with the crisis."

Powell did not elaborate on what those steps were, but others who have been attending the Camp David sessions said they center on conservation, rationing, synthetic fuel development and creation of a powerful energy mobilization board designed to get new energy projects under way in a hurry.

While most of those ideas would require sacrifices from Americans, Carter also gave the congressmen good news — more oil is coming. He told the group Saudi Arabia has agreed to increase its production temporarily — a move White House spokesman Rex Granum said was taken because the Saudis are "a reliable friend" to the United States.

But Granum said Carter emphasized that "this action by no means relieves this country of the need for action."

One of the potential actions discussed Monday was gasoline rationing and O'Neill told a news conference upon his return to Washington that Congress is more in the mood to approve a standby plan now than it was earlier this spring.

He said all 22 members of Congress who visited Camp David Monday morning agreed Carter must be given power to ration gasoline, and predicted Congress will approve such a plan — even though it rejected the idea May 16.

He said agreement appears to be taking shape on a plan that would allow Carter to institute rationing unless either house of Congress vetoed it. O'Neill and House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas said Carter tended to listen rather than talk, during the meeting with members of Congress, and did not say what recommendations he will make on energy.

At Bridger plant

Grudge probable sabotage motive

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. (UPI) — An employee or ex-employee with a grudge may have sabotaged the Jim Bridger Power Plant, an FBI investigator has said.

"From all appearances, it's an employee or maybe an ex-employee who did it for whatever personal reasons," FBI agent Russ Bowes said. "Maybe it was a grudge."

An unidentified abrasive substance, thought to be a sandblasting ingredient, was poured into the lubricating system of one of the three 500,000-kilowatt turbines at the plant, located 35 miles northeast of Rock Springs. The sabotage was discovered June 27.

An estimated $100,000 damage was done to the turbine and company officials said they would lose up to $3 million in revenue while the unit was shut down two weeks for repairs. The loss of that unit, combined with a maintenance shutdown of another turbine, caused a critical power shortage in Idaho, one of five states served by the 1.5-million kilowatt plant.

Bowes said there is no evidence of extortion related to the incident.

"So far, I haven't been able to come up with any kind of previous warnings, threats, demands for money, worker or union demands, or anything like that," he said.

A Boise newspaper reported last week that the plant has been the target of several sabotage attempts. In a copyrighted article, the newspaper quoted plant and law enforcement officials as saying cables were cut last year during construction of a fourth, still unfinished unit at the plant. Other less serious incidents have been perpetrated by saboteurs, the publication said.

Church declines invitation

WASHINGTON — Idaho Sen. Frank Church, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, was asked by President Carter Monday to attend the Camp David "domestic summit."

But, because of on-going hearings before his senate committee on the proposed Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II), Church will be unable to visit the presidential retreat.

For the past week Carter has summoned elected officials and private citizens to the Camp David, Maryland, presidential compound — seeking their advice on a wide range of national and international issues.

Monday the call came to Church. "We'd like to have you able to go," Church Press Secretary Cive Corlett told the Times-News. "But we have a previous obligation with the SALT hearings."

The Idaho Democrat is one of only a select group of Senators asked to attend the Camp David meetings. Others asked to attend include largely senators holding leadership posts.

Church was the only member of the Idaho delegation contacted by the White House.

To breast-feed infant

Mail carrier wants time off

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Postmaster Wilton Banks is determined that neither rain, steer nor breast-feeding will hold up the U.S. mails.

Jean Durkin, who like her husband, Michael, is a mail carrier, has been on maternity leave for six months, and wants more time off to breast-feed her 4-month-old baby.

Banks wants her back on the job. Mrs. Durkin said Monday she and her husband will file a union grievance this week to get more time off to breast-feed her daughter Sarah every two hours. Mrs. Durkin said breast-feeding is essential to the child's health.

"It'll probably go to arbitration eventually," Durkin said. "That takes eight months to a year because they have such a backlog of grievances."

"I'll be back before then," said Mrs. Durkin. "That's what's so ridiculous about the whole thing."

Banks ordered Mrs. Durkin back to work Saturday. She reported at 6:30 a.m., but immediately asked for and received a sick leave to breast-feed her daughter. She did not report to work Monday.

"I feel six months is very reasonable. I've never had anyone gone this long," Banks said. "Breast-feeding is optional. If she wants to do that, that's fine. But she shouldn't expect us to keep her job for a year if she chooses to do that."

Mail carrier Jean Durkin, daughter Sarah flexible. "We never discussed how long I was going to be gone when I started to leave," Mrs. Durkin said. "No one ever asked how long I was going to be gone." Postal regulations say the length of maternity leave should be "jointly determined by the employee, her physician and management."

Andrus proposes enlarging Idaho refuge for raptors

By DAVID MORRISSEY

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus said this week proposed a substantial enlargement of the Snake River Birds of Prey Natural Area.

In a draft environmental statement Andrus said the southwest Idaho bird refuge, home of the world's densest nesting population of raptors, should include 719,914 acres, of which 515,257 are federally owned.

Of the remaining acres proposed for inclusion in the enlarged sanctuary, 43,619 acres are owned by the state and 161,037 are privately owned.

The proposed expansion, said Andrus, a former Idaho governor, "will not adversely impact private or state holdings. All present uses will continue. This means the stockmen will be able to continue to graze their cattle and sheep and the Idaho National Guard can continue to use the area for training exercises. This also means all recreational uses will continue."

Mining and other traditional uses of the land would also be allowed to continue, Andrus said.

What will be barred, if the proposed environmental statement is accepted, is further conversion of public lands in the birds of prey area into privately owned farmlands. Such conversions have taken place in the past under both the Desert Land Entry and the Carey Act programs.

Presently there are 260 Desert

Land Entry and 20 Carey Act applications within the proposed expanded refuge area.

Andrus' action comes after nearly eight years of discussion and controversy over the Idaho sanctuary.

The Birds of Prey Natural Area was recognized for its uniqueness in 1971, when then Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton set aside a 31,000-acre refuge to protect eagles, hawks, falcons and other species of raptors. The original sanctuary, included rough bottom lands and a narrow canyon lip stretching some 33 miles along the rocky Snake River in the southwest Idaho desert. More than 1,000 birds of prey were known to nest within the region, a raptor concentration unparalleled in the world.

Tuesday briefing

Evacuation plan set

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The United States Monday put a transport plane and two helicopters on standby in Costa Rica to remove Americans from Nicaragua if their lives are endangered by the growing civil war.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman emphasized the contingency evacuation plan would be put into effect only if Ambassador Lawrence A. Pezullo decided the lives of the Managua mission's 45 staff members were in danger. The U.S. Embassy in San Jose, Costa Rica, said 35 U.S. airmen deployed to help in an evacuation had set up a command post in the northern part of the country 15 miles from the Nicaraguan border.

Sandinista guerrillas and national guardsmen clashed in the towns of Diriamba and Catazina south of Managua Monday in an attempt by the guerrillas to capture nearby Granada and shut off guard supply routes to the key southern front.

If the guerrillas capture Granada, a colonial city founded in 1524, they will be able to consolidate their control across the isthmus between the Pacific Ocean and Lake Nicaragua, completely cutting guard supply routes to the southern front.

Revenue sharing out?

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Revenue sharing, the federal government's practice of turning a portion of its money over to the states and localities to use pretty much as they wish, has come on hard times and is likely to be wiped out of the next federal budget, according to a wide range of authorities.

While complaints of federal control and regulation have increased across the country, revenue sharing has been losing support in Washington because of budget restraints in competition from programs that members of Congress and the bureaucracy can control.

Finding a way to save revenue sharing has been one of the top items on the agenda of the National Governors Association, which is holding the annual convention here.

Voyager passes Jupiter

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Voyager II streaked by Jupiter at 45,255 mph Monday, reaching its closest approach at 1:29 p.m. MDT, and then aimed toward Saturn.

It took nearly an hour for photos and data to reach Earth at the speed of light. The data was received on Earth at 4:21 p.m.

Photography and science data returned across the 579 billion miles of space show the four large, Galilean moons of the planet may be the superlatives of the solar system.

Fuzzies continued to stack up at Jet Propulsion Laboratory as volumes of information were sent from the spacecraft.

Soviet grain crop off

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three agriculture specialists reported Monday that wheat production in Russian grain regions they toured recently could be as much as 25 percent below last year's record.

Dry, hot weather in some areas of Russia has contributed to increased Soviet demand for American grain, resulting in higher-grain prices over the past few months.

They also observed that if dry weather continues in the North Caucasus regions visited, corn grain production "may be significantly reduced." They reported corn to be shorter than usual and showing some moisture stress.

Mail monopoly ending?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Service Monday proposed relaxing its monopoly over letter mail to allow private firms to carry extremely urgent letters either at any price under stringent delivery deadlines, or at a minimum price of $3 each.

The proposal, published in the Federal Register, is aimed at answering pleas from bankers, realtors and other business groups who have told Congress the regular mails fail to meet their needs for hurried deliveries.

Resigns

Deputy Energy Secretary John O'Leary said Monday he will resign effective Sept. 4. O'Leary, 53, has held that post since late 1977. He has been under fire from congressional critics.

Bundy quizzes witness

MIAMI (UPI) — Theodore Bundy, on trial for the slaying of two Florida State University coeds, took over the cross-examination Monday of a campus policeman who was the first investigator to find the victims.

A former Utah law student who is aiding with his own defense, Bundy questioned officer Raymond Crew closely on which hand, or hands, he used to open the door of the rooms in the Chi Omega sorority house in Tallahassee where coeds Margaret Bowman, 21, and Lisa Levy, 20, were slain the morning of Jan. 15, 1978.

'Modest' costs ahead

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Agriculture Department official told the House Inflation Task Force Monday he expects only "modest" increases in retail food costs during the rest of 1979. Dawson Abell, chairman of the department's World Food and Agriculture Outlook and Situation Board, said food prices have outrun the overall cost of living rise since 1967 — the year used as a base for calculating the inflation rate.

Direct vote bill up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the outcome in doubt, the Senate agreed Monday to vote late today on a constitutional amendment under which presidents would be elected by direct popular vote. Under the agreement, pushed by opponents, only one amendment, which might or might not be offered by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., would be permitted.

That amendment, designed to lure enough votes to assure a two-thirds majority, would require a candidate to carry at least one-third of the states in addition to the 40 percent of the vote, already provided in the amendment.

quartzes reported .35 inch. High temperatures Monday reached the 90s over the southern areas of the state after dipping to lows generally from the middle 40s to 62 at Boise. Stanley however, was the cold spot at 29 degrees. The extended forecast, Thursday through Saturday, calls for mostly fair and warm with highs in the 80s or low 90s and lows mostly in the 50s. The having outlook through Saturday in the Magic Valley is for excellent drying conditions with above normal temperatures and mostly dry. The spraying forecast calls for winds of 5 to 10 miles an hour in the morning and at night and from 12 to 15 mph in the afternoon. Pan evaporation is forecast at .34 inch today and .32 Wednesday.

Powerful board likely key to energy program

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — President Carter's energy program probably will include a board that has extraordinary powers to get new fuel projects going in a hurry, a White House aide said Monday.

Other White House aides and governors at the National Governor's Association conference said Carter also is likely to propose strong conservation measures and energy development.

At the governor's conference Monday, members argued over what course Carter should take on energy, and took a "cautious approach" to development of nuclear energy in the wake of the Three Mile Island accident in Pennsylvania.

A governor's committee approved a series of resolutions proposed by Gov. Dick Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, which will be offered at the closing session of the full conference today.

The proposals call for improving reactor operator training, assessing existing plants, reviewing and upgrading emergency plans, and most of all, according to Thornburgh, setting up a communications network by which federal, state and local officials can get "reliable and consistent information."

Those who sat in on the president's continuing think-tank sessions at Camp David said they believe he made the nuclear decisions on his own and will announce them shortly.

Perhaps the newest idea to come out of Camp David so far is for an energy mobilization board with vast powers similar to those held by the war mobilization board during World War II.

Philip Smith, associate advisor to the president for science and technology, said the board would be able to halt court suits and keep state and local government agencies from blocking construction of nuclear power plants, pipeline construction and other energy projects.

Evans applying pressure

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Idaho Gov. John Evans told the National Governors Association Monday he was "putting the pressure on the White House" to help states with nuclear waste management.

Evans, chairman of the group's Nuclear Power Subcommittee, said in a report he is disappointed President Carter has not initiated action to create a state planning council to help states find suitable locations for nuclear waste.

Evans said Carter had appointed an interagency review group but that he has not taken action on its recommendation to form a state planning council.

The council would consist of elected officials appointed by the president. It would provide a formal mechanism by which state and local officials could impact national policies and programs for nuclear waste storage.

Evans said recommendations from his subcommittee and the interagency review group have been that "the time for action is overdue."

Raptor haven enlargement proposed

Shortly after that initial action, Bureau of Land Management biologists undertook studies to determine the amount of land needed to sustain the small rodent population on which the raptors depended. Those studies concluded the lands surrounding the natural area "constituted a raptor haven."

The BLM studies, formally sent to Andrus last month, also demonstrated a direct relationship between a reduction in the birds' food supply and a reduction in the number of new birds born each spring.

The studies also demonstrated futher Desert Land and Carey Act conversions in the area were at best economically questionable. High irrigation costs; plus low prices for agricultural produce, the BLM studies said, indicated few new farms in the region would survive.

Public hearing. Andrus the studies supported the argument for an enlargement of the existing area.

"The 515,257 acres of federal land which will make up the proposed conservation area will assure the birds have an adequate kitchen and pantry for their protection just as we now protect their bedroom in the canyon," Andrus said.

If the proposed expansion is accepted, Andrus said, raptors and their habitat will be protected and managed along an 81 mile stretch of the Snake River.

Both written and public testimony will be accepted before a final decision on an expanded natural area is made. Written comments will be accepted until Aug. 1 and should be sent to the BLM-Boise District Manager, 230 Collins Road, Boise, Idaho 83702.

Public hearings will be held in Boise, Aug. 2, at 7:30 p.m. in the Rodeway Inn and in Washington, Aug. 9, at 2 p.m., in the Interior Department auditorium.

Military aspects of SALT terms first testimony in Senate

Newhouse News Service
 WASHINGTON — The Carter administration Monday opened its formal campaign to convince a skeptical Senate and its defense hardliners that a new Strategic Arms Limitation agreement with the Soviet Union will not harm U.S. national security.
 The overwhelming emphasis of four hours of testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by Security of State Cyrus R. Vance and Defense Secretary Harold Brown was on the military aspects of the pact signed last month by Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

 The outcome of the debate, expected to continue into October or November, is in doubt. A two-thirds vote is required to approve the controversial agreement, which sets upper limits on strategic nuclear weapons but does little to reduce the strategic arsenals of the two superpowers.

 Neither supporters nor opponents of the treaty claim to have at this time the necessary votes to ratify or reject the SALT II treaty.
 The caution that individual senators are exercising was evident during the first day of hearings. Not one of the committee's nine Democrats or six Republicans stated categorically he would vote for or against the agreement.
 Vance told the committee that approval of SALT II would not only permit the "necessary modernization of U.S. strategic forces," but would in fact aid it.
 He also said the treaty would not interfere with existing patterns of defense cooperation among the United States and its European allies.
 "Arms control is not an alternative to defense," he said, "it is complementary to sound defense planning."
 Throughout their testimony, the two cabinet officers sought to convince the committee members that the treaty would contribute to more certain defense planning and thus would provide a major benefit to the United States.
 The agreement would reduce by 750 the number of Soviet missiles and bombers that will likely be deployed by 1985 without it, Brown said. An upper limit of 2,250 nuclear "launchers" (missiles or bombers) is imposed on both sides by SALT II.

 "The United States' best estimate" is the Russians will have 3,000 launchers six years from now if the Senate rejects the agreement and present Soviet military trends continue, the defense secretary said.
 Both cabinet officers also emphasized that Soviet compliance with terms of the pact could be "adequately verified."
 SALT critics have charged that the loss of U.S. outposts in Iran earlier this year makes verification of the treaty uncertain.
 "As with SALT I, verification will be based upon our own observation and our own technical systems, not on faith," Vance said.
 In response to a question from Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, who has publicly questioned the Pentagon's ability to be certain the Soviets do not cheat, Brown said, "SALT II will be verifiable from the moment the treaty takes effect."
 Indicative of the skepticism among senators is the attitude of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., a liberal and longtime advocate of arms control.

McGovern said.
 He said there are "four or five others (senators) who feel as I do" and "we will not vote for the illusion of a peace that is not real."
 The administration should not assume that senators of its political persuasion will automatically support SALT II.
 "I am not willing to endorse an arms control hoax which turns a weapons limitation treaty into a blank check for a nuclear rearmament program which is militarily unwarranted, fiscally wasteful and diplomatically destabilizing," McGovern said.

On the other side of the issue, Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., the minority leader who has already announced he will not support the treaty without changes, told Vance and Brown that Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles would be three to four times more powerful than their U.S. counterparts by the time the treaty expires in 1986.
 Brown did not disagree, but said that would be the case with or without SALT and that other U.S. deterrents—bombers—and submarine missiles—would make up the difference.

Secretaries Vance, Brown prepare to testify

Critics greet secretaries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican leader Howard Baker and Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, two prominent critics of the SALT II treaty, took time out today to warmly greet Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Defense Secretary Harold Brown as they arrived to testify in support of the pact.
 Baker, who has pledged to work to defeat of the treaty unless it is modified, approached the witness table, shook hands with Vance and posed for photographers.

 Garn, who has detailed a number of changes he favors, chatted briefly with Vance. One reporter overheard him say how much he personally admired Vance even though he had difficulties with the treaty.
 Vance and Brown were the first two witnesses to testify as the Senate Foreign Relations Committee opened hearings on SALT II.

DC-10 grounding may end shortly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Administration said Monday it may end the grounding of the nation's DC-10 fleet this week, but each plane must still pass an individual inspection before going back into service.
 "Perhaps, and I say that with all kinds of qualifiers, it (lifting the grounding) will come later on this week," FAA spokesman Dennis Feldman said.

Population grows faster than grain

U.S. food imports to Egypt increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As the United States steps up its involvement with Egypt as a consequence of the Egyptian-Israeli peace agreement, American officials are increasingly concerned with Egypt's ability to develop its agriculture.

President Anwar Sadat initiated the peace process in part so he could divert his country's resources away from constant readiness for war toward peaceful economic development. He has said boosting food production is a key goal.

But when it comes to feeding his people, Sadat is faced with an inability to increase production as fast as the population grows. Egypt has increased its dependence on imported food, including U.S. food aid.

On one hand, Egypt is a large market for expanding U.S. agricultural exports, but on the other hand, it is likely to make few economic gains without extensive foreign assistance.

Last year Egypt received $554 million in U.S. farm products. In recent years, about half of the exports have been in the form of cash sales and the rest under various U.S. assistance programs.

Grain shipments delayed and financing worked out last year could raise U.S. farm exports to Egypt for this year to $700 million. The financing includes a Food for Peace agreement to ship $214 million of wheat and wheat flour.

In the July Issue of Foreign Agriculture magazine, Agriculture Department officials in Cairo say most experts believe U.S. farm exports to Egypt will reach $1 billion in the near future "but with a sizable share continuing to move under U.S. assistance programs of one form or another."

Agricultural attache James Ross and assistant attache Gerald Feaster said feeding 17 million more people each year on more than 3 percent of Egypt's land area adds up to a losing battle by most odds.

Last year Egypt's bill for farm imports was $2 billion, twice the income derived from agricultural exports and nearly seven times the amount of food imports in 1970-73. Agricultural trade deficits first arose in Egypt in 1974.

Hoss and Feaster said "there is no point in the visible future where Egypt can reasonably expect to be self-reliant in food production, despite programs now underway to tackle both the rapid population growth rate and the lagging agricultural output." The Egyptian government has a major project underway to reclaim land by irrigation and to eliminate a need for draft animals by 1985.

Other sectors of the economy have taken up the slack so that its foreign exchange deficit declined from $4 billion in 1975-77 to about $3 billion last year.

The food import deficit is eased with petroleum exports, tourism, the Suez Canal and money from workers living abroad as well as, foreign assistance.

Other nations are competing strongly with the United States to provide farm products to Egypt. The U.S. share of the market fell to 30 percent last year, down from 40 percent five years earlier.

Foreign nations have sold Egypt substantial amounts of meat, dairy products, processed foods and canned meats, juices and fruits. Competition also has come from Australian wheat, French wheat flour and Greek tobacco.

But Egypt is the major Arab market for U.S. wheat, wheat flour, corn, fallow tobacco, soybean meal and frozen poultry.

Last year more than 40 percent of Egypt's grain, including 72 percent of its wheat was imported. Egypt has become the world's fifth largest market for wheat.

Egypt's corn imports have risen from nearly nothing to 800,000 tons last year, almost all from the United States, up from almost nothing a few years ago.

Efforts to improve the protein content of the Egyptian diet created almost a 50 percent increase last year in imports of beef, poultry, meat and dairy products.

Egypt exports its short- and medium-staple cotton and imports long-staple cotton, much of it from the United States.

The nation also exports rice, oranges, potatoes and onions. Ross and Feaster say it is difficult for Egypt to export its wide variety of perishable fruits and vegetables because of a lack of refrigeration and adequate transportation.

They note that even good agricultural years like last year have not halted the trend toward more Egyptian farm imports.

Last year crop production rose but livestock output, except for poultry production, was down, due in part to a scarcity of feed and lack of pastures.

Meanwhile, demand for better food from a more urbanized population with rising per capita income is consuming food faster than it can be produced.

FTA veto time

© Universal Press Syndicate
WASHINGTON Our government, as every schoolboy knows, theoretically embraces three branches — the executive, the legislative and the judicial. Recent years have produced a fourth branch: the bureaucracy. One of the most troublesome political questions of our time goes to the problem of restraining bureaucratic power.

Sen. Harrison Schmidt, R-N.M., has an idea. He wants to provide for a legislative veto over the formal Trade Rule Regulations imposed by the Federal Trade Commission. He makes a convincing case in support of his plan.

Most persons — and certainly most businessmen — are familiar with the general problem. Over the past 15 or 20 years we have witnessed in Washington an explosion of federal regulations. The powers of old agencies, such as the FTC, have been greatly expanded. A dozen new agencies have been created. Upward of 200,000 civil servants now are engaged in regulatory activities.

Some of the agencies, such as the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), function as complete little governments. OSHA effectively makes laws, a legislative function; OSHA administers its own laws, an executive function; and OSHA prosecutes, tries and fines those who violate its laws, a judicial function. An aggrieved victim of OSHA's power has but one avenue of relief — the miserably expensive and time-consuming process of appeal to the federal courts.

In the old days, a regulator agency typically had a limited field of authority. The Maritime Commission dealt with ships, the Federal Communications Commission with radio and television, the Civil Aeronautics Board with air transportation, and so on. The new breed of agency is different. The writ of the FTC, for example, runs clean across the board. Any activity that is even remotely "affects commerce" is fair game for the commission.

At the FTC, 1,700 bureaucrats, including 600 lawyers, are actively, eagerly, obsessively engaged in the promulgation of rules and regulations. By Schmidt's count, the FTC is working on 40 public investigations, 120 private investigations, 30 active litigations and 15 proposed Trade Rule Regulations. The TRR's cover funeral homes, health spas, used cars, hearing aids, mobile homes, children's television advertising and a mind-boggling assortment of other matters.

"The Federal Trade Commission," Schmidt contends, "may be the second most powerful legislature in the country. The FTC claims the power to declare any commercial act to be 'unfair,' regardless of state law, and thereby to amend all state statutes and reverse all state cases that may be inconsistent with its declaration. All 50 state legislatures and state supreme courts can agree that a particular act is fair and lawful, but the five-member appointed FTC can override them all."

Schmidt's concern goes beyond particular TRR's. The basic question is a question of power: "who writes the laws in this country — unelected administrators or the elected representatives of the people?" His disturbing answer is that the regulatory agencies are spinning out 18 laws for every one law enacted by the Congress. For all practical purposes, the agencies are untouchable. They are headed by boards or commissions whose members are named for fixed terms and they are served by bureaucratic staffs with what amounts to life tenure.

Under an amendment proposed by Schmidt to the FTC authorization bill, Congress would have 60 days in which either house could impose a legislative veto upon a TRR. There is nothing especially novel in a legislative veto as such. Since 1932, Schmidt says, Congress has reserved such a power nearly 300 times. At least 34 states have some form of legislative veto over state agencies. The analogy appears to be purely useful. "Just the existence of the veto has improved the quality of regulation and has made the agencies more responsive to the legislatures."

Schmidt's resort amounts to a last resort, and last resorts ought to be seldom invoked. The device troubles some observers who regard the veto as an intrusion upon executive responsibilities, but there seems to be nothing unconstitutional in the approach. My own inclination would be to try the Schmidt plan for a few years and to see how it works with the FTC. If a veto would restrain that power-hungry outfit, the same kind of emergency brakes could be provided for all the rest.

Some tax dollars support lobbyists

By DONALD LAMBRO
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government pours hundreds of millions of tax dollars into thousands of lobbying organizations, public studies and law firms, associations and other special interest groups across the country.

Little is known about how these organizations and associations spend the money. They are rarely, if ever, examined by Congress even though the funds often are used to influence legislation and policy ranging from food stamps to the Equal Rights Amendment.

Many of these organizations are establishing tax-exempt spin-off groups — so-called educational and research foundations through which the funds are spent.

United Press International conducted a five-week investigation into this federally financed world of private groups and organizations. UPI discovered:

— Grants and contracts for low-priority or dubious projects and studies going to law firms, associations and organizations with multi-million dollar budgets.

— Political organizations such as the Americans for Democratic Action are recipients of federal funds.

— Law firms are among the biggest beneficiaries of these funds, in some cases spending the funds in behalf of the actual recipient group.

Skylab's demise brings mixed reaction

Many U.S. citizens will have their heads tilted upwards during the next 48 hours. They'll be awaiting a hoped for glimpse of that long awaited event — the fall of Skylab. That's a glimpse, mind you, not an out and out encounter.

"Anticipation is running high, and reaction is varying. Some are spending their pre-fall hours seeking protection.

Special Skylab protection helmets, equipped with early warning spikes and constructed of durable poster board, have been popular items in some areas of the country. And the San Francisco Chronicle, in a show of concern for new readers, has offered free Skylab protection insurance to new subscribers.

Others are taking a more positive view of the downfall; hoping large chunks will seek out certain locations or people. Some believers in divine justice have Idi Amin or Nicaragua's Somoza in mind. "They deserve it," goes the usual reasoning. Others think a few chunks dropping in on a meeting of OPEC leaders would do wonders for the country's morale and economy and justify every tax dollar that went into the 12-story flop.

Dollar signs gleam in the eyes of some as they dream of possible debris landings.

Perhaps it will fall on their house, they think, totalling up the sums from the lawsuit.

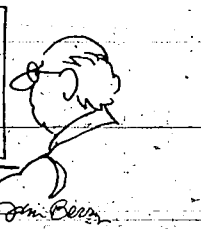

Collector hounds also have questions. What if it falls on their lawn? Do they own that chunk of Skylab? Or does NASA have the right to confiscate? It would, after all, make a great conversation piece for the coffee table. Better yet, they could turn it into the San Francisco Examiner, collecting the $25,000 reward.

Here at the Times-News, several reporters have their fingers crossed. "Let it fall in the Magic Valley," they are saying. "What a great story to go under my byline." Some news reports have fed their anticipation, with at least one prediction bringing the Skylab's demise near the center of Idaho.

Estimates of the fall are changing by the hour. As of Tuesday evening, predicted re-entry was for 10 a.m. MDT Wednesday. Most of the debris was expected to splash Earth's surface somewhere in the Indian Ocean — a closing chapter to a long-running news story, which will offer relief to some but much disappointment to many others.

Kennedy autopsy photos forged, consultant charges

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A consultant to the House Select Committee on Assassinations claims four autopsy photos of President Kennedy were forged to eliminate evidence that Kennedy was shot from the front, the Baltimore Sun reported Monday.

The Sun reported it was shown copies of photograph technician Robert F. Groden's conclusions, which will be part of the House committee's final report. The report is to be released later this month. The Sun quoted sources as saying the House committee will conclude in its final report that the assassination involved a "conspiracy by organized crime." But the paper also quoted a former committee staff member as disagreeing with that theory. "The mob is the new patsy," he told the paper.

The newspaper reported Groden said he has evidence "that raises grave doubts about the authenticity" of photographs and material used by the committee in its investigation of Kennedy's death. Kennedy was killed Nov. 22, 1963.

"For the record, my visual inspection of the autopsy photos and X-rays reveals evidence of forgery in four of the photos," Groden said in his report to the committee.

The four pictures are two color photos showing the back of Kennedy's head, which was hit by bullets, and the same two views in black and white.

ROBERT GRODEN raises new doubts

Groden said the alleged forgery of the pictures was accomplished by cutting a small portion out of a film and inserting a new image in the hole. The Sun reported that Groden's analysis, which was completed last summer, contends a photo of part of the back of a cadaver's head was inserted over that of a large exit wound in the back of Kennedy's head. An exit wound in the back of the head indicates the bullet entered from the front. The newspaper said Groden's analysis "suggesting the possibility of an exit wound in the back of the president's head is supported by the sworn statements of 10 doctors and nurses who treated or handled President Kennedy upon his arrival at Parkland Hospital in Dallas immediately after he was shot." The Warren Commission concluded in 1964 that Lee Harvey Oswald was the lone assassin, based in part on autopsy evidence indicating Kennedy was shot from behind. Groden told the Sun he was specifically forbidden from discussing the autopsy pictures when he testified before the House Select Committee on Assassinations Sept. 7, several months after his report was completed.

Laetrile bears threat of cyanide poisoning

CHICAGO—Many advocates of laetrile have argued that while the drug may not cure cancer, it at least does no harm.

Now—a suburban—Evans-ton—researcher maintains that studies uphold some opponents' contention that—in fact—laetrile can cause cyanide poisoning, which can be fatal.

Dr. Janardan D. Khandekar, chief of medical oncology at Evanston Hospital and a faculty member at Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago, entered the controversy over the apricot-pit derivative in an article in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Bubbles clean water

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (UPI) — A University of Rhode Island engineer says that for $2,000 he can build a bubble-making device which will clean pollutants from up to 20,000 gallons of water per day.

Chemical engineer Stanley M. Barnett said the device produces a foam that works so thoroughly even highly sophisticated testing equipment can give a clean bill of health to treated water.

He based his conclusions on two studies in which laetrile was administered to rats that had been infected with tumors.

In the first case, 91 rats were given different amounts of laetrile. The death rate was proportionately higher as the dosage increased.

In the other experiment, 86 rats received both laetrile and chemotherapy. Fifty-five per cent of them died. Another group of 29 received only laetrile, and 44 per cent of them died. Of the third group of 28 rats, which received only chemotherapy, none died.

"These findings seriously question the use of (laetrile) in clinical medicine under any circumstances," Khandekar said. "In fact, it is very toxic and can be harmful. If people want to use it, they should be aware that (cyanide poisoning) may happen."

Laetrile cannot be manufactured in the United States, but in Illinois it can be obtained with the written consent of a physician.

Contrary to initial reports of a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision that was described as upholding a ban on laetrile, the drug still can be obtained, pending resolution of two other issues in the case by the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Tension high in Skylab control center as re-entry nears

By WILLIAM K. STEVENS
O.N.Y. Times Service
HOUSTON — Flight controllers whose job is to keep the Skylab space station away from heavily populated areas as it plunges toward earth this week are working in a second-string, jury-rigged command center that is a bit primitive by the standards of the space program's glory years.

The collection of consoles and displays in the command center, a modest room about 40 feet long and 40 feet wide, has a used look, like the slightly worn, lived-in spaceship of the movie "Star Wars." In the middle-of-the-room is a sign that reads: "Think OGG." When that much gravity force comes to bear on Skylab, probably this Wednesday, it will officially be said to have reentered the atmosphere. What the sign means is that everyone wants to "get it down and get out of here," said a senior flight controller.

To the scientists and technicians at the Johnson Space Center here, the final nursing of Skylab is a far cry from the epic missions of the past. Presiding over the death of a spacecraft, and over a potential disaster, is not exactly the reason they are in the business.

"It's time to get on with something else," said Charles Harlan, the Skylab flight director for more than a year, who is anxious to get back to work on the space shuttle.

Almost to a man — or a woman, since more and more of the flight controllers are women — those in control of Skylab say they believe the chances are remote that pieces of the giant orbiting laboratory will injure anyone. On display in the control room the other day was a T-shirt depicting a panicky yellow chicken squawking, "Skylab is falling! Skylab is falling!"

And yet, the tension is rising as Wednesday's denouement — or Tuesday's, or Thursday's approaches. The tempo of activity is clearly picking up. Young flight controllers, anxious lest they overlook something or leave something undone, are coming to their shifts earlier and staying later. "In fact," Harlan said, "you can't run 'em off."

The adrenalin is flowing, especially for a new generation of rookie controllers in their 20s and 30s, for whom Skylab is a professional baptism. For the first time in years, the eyes of the world are on the space center again. Even to some veterans of Projects Gemini and Apollo, Harlan said. It is much Nervous doesn't precisely describe the mood. "People on the outside seem to have a feeling that we really get all up-light over this work," Harlan continued. "That's not the case. We get up-light if we're not prepared to do our work or don't have enough time. The kind of tension you feel is that you've always got more work than it seems like there's time for."

"Your adrenalin level is very much higher now," said Bonnie Dunbar, a 30-year-old controller responsible for Skylab's guidance and navigation system. If it becomes necessary to guide Skylab to a safe impact area during her shift, Miss Dunbar will be the one who orders the space station's maneuvering thrusters to do it.

"At this point," she said, "I'm going back checking and double-checking. You fill up every minute. At the end of the day, I can come off the job and it takes me several hours to wind down."

Dunbar and most of her teammates say their baptism has been especially challenging because, right from the start, the mission to bring Skylab down has in many ways been an improvised, beat-of-the-pants effort compared with, say, a moon mission.

No one expected Skylab to fall. It was supposed to stay in orbit until the mid-1980s, when the crew of the space shuttle could come to its rescue. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, however, underestimated solar forces that caused the space station to lose altitude more rapidly than had been anticipated.

It became necessary to improvise. Flight controllers moved into an unoccupied command room that had once been used to control scientific instruments on the moon. A communications system that partly uses voice commands was rigged — a throwback to the Gemini days. And control crews were shifted from other activities, such as the space shuttle.

New methods of controlling Skylab's attitude and position had to be devised as its orbit deteriorated and it became more difficult to handle.

Author, actress dies from stroke

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cornelia Otis Skinner, an author and actress who made her Broadway debut in 1921, died of a stroke Monday. She was 80.

At the age of 7, Miss Skinner began an acting career that spanned four decades. Before she bid farewell to the stage in the early 1960s she starred in such Broadway hits as "Major Barbara," "The Pleasure of His Company" and "Paris 90."

A family spokeswoman said Miss Skinner died in her apartment about 4:30 a.m. Her son and several nurses were by her side.

Miss Skinner started writing in her 20s and hit the best-seller list with such books as "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" — co-written with Emily Kimbrough — "The Age in Me" and "Life with Lindsey," her last book.

Indian brides killed over value of dowries

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Despite an active women's rights movement at least once a day a young bride in India's capital is burned to death or forced to swallow poison by her mother-in-law because her dowry is judged insufficient.

A 24-year-old bride of an automotive parts dealer died this week from burns suffered after she was turned into a human torch by her husband's mother — dissatisfied with the woman's wedding gifts.

Among the presents Tarvinder Kaur's family gave her and her husband were a television set, $625 worth of furniture, an armoire, hand-embroidered cushions, kitchenware and china. The dowry was respectable — but not acceptable to the mother of Sarpal Singh Anand.

Shortly after their marriage in February his family began to complain that he had expected her to add a motor scooter to the dowry.

Less than a week later, Tarvinder Kaur was doused with kerosene, set afire and died of third-degree burns.

A New Delhi women's group charged her mother-in-law set her on fire.

"Dowry deaths" are common in India. The women's group estimates there is at least one a day in New Delhi alone.

Police take little note of dowry deaths, contending there is little evidence to support charges of homicide.

In 1978 only three arrests were made in bride burnings and only seven cases were reported.

Lotika Sarkar, a law professor at New Delhi University, said the horrors of dowry deaths were not known until she and four other women wrote a national committee report on the status of women in 1975.

"I used to boast that our constitution provided equal rights for women that it was one of the most egalitarian in the world," she said. "We were disturbed that the dowry act did not keep dowry from prevailing in practice, we were aware that women who brought insufficient dowry were ill-treated. What we did not know was that in northern India we were killing women."

"Dowry is one of the major things affecting the status of women. It has turned into a monster."

BACK TO HEALTH

By Michael Hanelline D.C.

Often, a spinal misalignment which causes extreme pain, even to the point of disability, is the result of years of neglect. Small injuries to the spine, caused by over-exertion, improper lifting or whatever, have left the spine vulnerable to that final "spinal" injury. That means back trouble that can no longer be neglected.

Chiropractic care can often correct misalignment and provide immediate relief. In some cases, trouble that took years to develop may require a little time to treat satisfactorily.

Phone for an appointment for a chiropractic examination which will establish the facts about your health problems.

What's what

Book sales increasing rapidly across nation; there's reason for luck

Thirty years ago, the book publishers in this country put out about 8,600 titles a year. Now they're publishing almost 40,000 a year. And the trend still appears to be rising. What's your guess as to why more and more people are buying more and more books? My guess is they're getting fed-upper and fed-upper with what's on television.

A characteristic common to almost all overweight women is the tendency to assume a relaxed position either sitting or standing by crossing their arms comfortably over their midsections. So reports a medical.

Claim is that a fourth of all the gold and silver mined on earth is now at the bottom of the sea in the holds of sunken ships.

The name Henry means "boss around the house."

LUCK
O. Louie, how do you account for the fact that some people are lucky and some people aren't?

A. Take it you mean lucky in general and not just lucky in gambling games. Can only guess that the luckiest folk are those who get into the most action. You find no luck, good or bad, if you don't play, what? And you can't win, if you don't bet. Personally, though, I'm not too keen on horses, cards, dice, stocks, bonds and commodities. They're not gambles. They're sure things for the house. The bright bet on tangible stuff, like land and lumber. But the brightest bet on intangible stuff, like excellence in people.

VISION
Is it fair that people who've had their eyes removed in cataract operations can see far better at night than people with normal vision? So I'm told. Claim is the eye lens filters out ultraviolet light. With the eye lens gone, the viewer not only sees what's visible in ordinary light, but what's further made visible by ultraviolet light.

The man handed over his traffic ticket, paid the fine, and the woman behind the City Hall counter handed him a receipt. "What an I suppose to do with that?" he muttered. "Keep it," she said, sweetly. "When you collect four, you get a bicycle."

Those people who grind their teeth in their sleep typically do so for about one minute every hour.

Dear Abby

Widow looking for companionship, but she may be framed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
The Chicago Tribune
New York News Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, 79. I live in the same apartment building with a very fine gentleman. We've become very good friends. He is married but has a legal separation from his wife. She won't consent to a divorce unless he gives her a very large settlement, which he doesn't want to do as he figures he may outlive her. (She's 82 and he's 83.)

I am not entirely at ease with this man since I am afraid his wife might sue me, and I have a pretty nice savings account—she's very clever and I have heard that she still watches him like a hawk.

what is being said. When we are tired and wish to stay awake, we yawn to get extra oxygen to keep us alert. Please abolish forever the false notion that yawning is rude. And from now on when a speaker sees someone in his audience yawning, he can be assured that his talk is worthwhile!

E. S. R.

DEAR E. S. R.: Yawning in itself is not rude, it's leaving an open mouth uncovered that's rude. However, my wide-awake ego assumes me that yawning is a sign of fatigue, drowsiness or boredom.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married, less than a year and already realize it's not going to last. My problem is what to do with all the lovely wedding gifts. Our silver isn't even tarnished yet, but the cash has been spent!

I feel guilty keeping the presents, knowing that this marriage was a mistake from the start. Now all we need is the courage to tell our family and friends.

Is it proper to return the gifts? How about the cash?

IT'S OVER IN OHIO

DEAR OVER: According to "The New Emily Post's Etiquette" by Elizabeth Post (1975):

"Once the wedding has taken place, gifts are not returned, no matter how short the marriage. Strictly speaking, the presents belong to the wife, but the usual procedure is for the husband to keep those items that came from his own family and friends, and those particularly meaningful or useful to him, while the wife keeps the others."

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ANYONE FOR WHOM IT IS NOT YET TOO LATE." The gestation period of a mother's advice is anywhere from one week to 50 years. Losing one's mother before having thanked her for the many precious things she taught you is one of life's greatest tragedies.

Wedding bells in your future? Whether your lifestyle is bridal gown or blue jeans, Abby lays it all out for you in her booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long-stamped (25 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

He takes me out to dinner, and I have him in for meals. We play a little cards, watch a little TV, and when it comes romance, he is unbelievable! I think you get the picture, but I'm not looking for trouble — just companionship.

BEA IN THE BRONX
DEAR BEA: Ask your lawyer how much "companionship" the law allows a man in your neighbor's circumstances. I get the picture, but you aren't careful, you could get the frame.

DEAR ABBY: A reader in Tuscaloosa, Ala. asked about yawning, and you said, "It's usually an involuntary opening of the mouth when you wish others would shut theirs."

On the contrary, Abby, yawning occurs when we are most interested in

Nuclear storage opposed

HONIARA, Solomon Islands (UPI) — Twelve South Pacific nations expressed their anger Monday at a U.S. decision to store its nuclear waste in their "backyard," and told President Carter to use America as an atomic trash can.

"We don't want this stuff in our backyard," said Cook Islands Premier Dr. Tom Davis, chairman of the annual meeting of the South Pacific forum.

His views were shared by Australia and New Zealand Prime Minister Robert Muldoon, who expressed his concern over the safeguards involved.

The United States is considering storing nuclear waste in the middle of a lagoon on Palmyra Island, which lies on the equator between Hawaii to the north and the Cook Islands to the south.

"They want to store this waste above ground in the middle of Palmyra," said Muldoon. "The Americans feel there is a lack of storms occurring in the region and this combined with an above ground plan makes the proposal unacceptable."

The South Pacific leaders said if the nuclear waste "leached," or was absorbed into the land and water, it would poison fish and contaminate water over a vast stretch of the Pacific Ocean.

Race cause of clashes

PEKING (UPI) — At least 22 students were injured in apparent racial clashes between Chinese and African and Arab students in Shanghai this year, a spokesman for the foreigners said Monday.

The spokesman for African and Arab students at the Textile University in Shanghai said that police ignored calls for help during the fighting July 3-5. He also said the foreign students went without food or water for nearly three days before they were asked to leave their besieged quarters.

The spokesman said the Chinese students carried a sign reading "Black Devils." Western experts in Peking said that because the sign said "black" and not "foreign" it indicated the incident had racial rather than anti-foreign overtones.

Raid crosses tense border of Lebanon

By United Press International
Israeli troops crossed into Lebanon Monday to blow up two houses described as Palestinian "terrorist cells" and Israeli-backed Christian militia fought U.N. troops stationed on the tense south Lebanese frontier.

Egypt reportedly asked the United States and other Western nations for $18.5 billion in aid during the next five years to offset Arab economic boycotts and said failure to pay the money could cause "delays in the progress of peace."

In Jerusalem, the government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin and the opposition Labor Party joined forces in parliament Monday to protest Austria's official reception for Yasser Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The Israeli military command said its attack force slipped into Lebanon and blew up two houses in the village of Kabriha, 5 miles west of the Israeli hilltop settlement of Misgav Am.

The village is in an area controlled by Irish U.N. troops but there was no indication they were involved in an encounter with the Israelis.

Iranian leaders sack police head

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The commander of Iran's military police was dismissed Monday for claiming to have uncovered a plot within the armed forces against Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution.

In Qom, Khomeini announced a general amnesty for persons convicted of crimes except for murderers and those who ordered deaths or torture during the reign of the shah.

Brig. Gen. Amir Rahnimi was dismissed abruptly from leadership of the military police after he claimed at a news conference to have discovered a plot to provoke a confrontation within the armed forces and discredit the government.

Maintain benefits, council asked

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls city employees told the city council Monday the council should eliminate employees, rather than employee benefits, if drastic cuts are necessary.

Representatives of the city employees met with the council at a work session to present employee requests concerning the pay plan for the budget year commencing in October.

The employees asked the council to:

- Update base pay for employees to a 1979 level.
- Continue quarterly cost-of-living pay increases based on the consumer price index.

- Give employees some assurance that present benefits will be retained.
- Maintain the present number of employees to insure adequate public service.
- Investigate the possibility of providing an employee-paid, group eye and dental insurance program.

After hearing the employee presentation, Mayor Leon Smith asked the employee representatives what the council should do if faced with the choice of eliminating employees or reducing benefits.

City employee committee chairman Mike Schroeder replied that the employees had voted 74-47 to recommend that the council cut employees' first and benefits second if faced with such a choice.

In response to a question from council member Mary McClusky, Schroeder said the benefits employees consider most important are health insurance and guaranteed cost-of-living increases.

He said employees make plans based on continuance of benefits, and to revoke benefits would create a hardship on many employees and their families.

He also said workers should be allowed to accumulate sick leave and vacation leave if they do not take it in the year in which it is earned.

Smith ordered the city administration to gather cost information on group eye and dental programs to present to the employees so they can decide if they want the programs.

Councilman Hank Woodall closed the discussion with the reassurance, "We love you, and we're going to do all we can for you."

Jerome cyclist arrested

JEROME — Following a brief chase Sunday night, a 19-year-old motorcyclist was arrested by Jerome police on misdemeanor charges on resisting arrest and reckless driving.

Police Chief Howard DuBols identified the youth as Dennis Myers of Route 3 north of Jerome.

DuBols said Patrolman Del Low spotted a motorcycle cutting sharply in front of an open shop, and alerted people shortly after 10 p.m. near the intersection of Cleveland and First Street. He said the action caused the Jeep driver to break suddenly to avoid a collision, almost resulting in some of the passengers being thrown out.

Low took up pursuit in his patrol car as the motorcycle headed north on Cleveland, running the stop sign at the First Avenue intersection.

DuBols said Patrolman Dale Reddick heard the chase beginning on his patrol car radio and blockaded the intersection at Second Avenue and North Lincoln Streets. However, the motorcycle swerved around the car and turned north on Lincoln with two patrol cars now in pursuit.

The chase, which never exceeded more than 50 mph, next led east on Two Mile North Road, DuBols said.

As Reddick's patrol car made the turn onto Two Mile North Road, a tire came off the car due to low tire pressure, leaving only Low in pursuit.

Low's patrol car gradually pulled alongside the motorcycle, DuBols said. The motorcycle then collided with the front of the patrol car. The chief said the motorcycle swerved off the right side of the road into a barrow.

He said Myers then tried to fight the two police officers as he was being arrested.

The driver was released on his own recognizance after being treated for cuts and abrasions. He has 10 days in which to appear in Jerome County Magistrate Court for an arraignment on the charges.

Scurrying through scorched sagebrush, a jackrabbit attempts to find shelter in the wake of a big range fire near Hazelton

Crews contain brush, range fires

By the Times-News and United Press International

Brush and range fires continued to burn in southern Idaho Monday, but the U.S. Bureau of Land Management said all have been contained.

The largest fire, about seven miles north of Hazelton, burned 2,500 acres and destroyed a tanker truck before it was contained at 6 a.m. The tanker truck was valued at $40,000. Fire management officer Carlos Mendiola of the Shoshone District said some 40 firefighters remain on the scene.

"We have a line completely around the fire and only the interior is burning now," he said. "We don't expect any problems and hope to have it cleared out and under control by this evening."

There were no injuries in that blaze.

A second fire some 15 miles northeast of Hazelton burned 560 acres before it was controlled at 6 p.m. Monday. Mendiola said only four of 28 firefighters called in to fight the blaze remain, adding that they will stay through today "to make sure it is completely out."

Forty-three fires so far this year have burned 10,000 acres in the Shoshone District. This compares with 47 fires last year.

Low relative humidity and high summer temperatures, ranging into the 80s and 90s, dried out the grass, creating a hazardous fire situation considered early for this year, Mendiola said.

"Here it is only the ninth of July, and we still have the month of July and August to go," he said. "Those are usually the heaviest fire months for the area."

"If we don't get the rain, I think we could have lots of problems."

Twin Falls council heading north

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In an unprecedented display of interest, the Twin Falls City Council members and at least three city administrators plan to travel to the Association of Idaho Cities annual conference at Coeur d'Alene next week.

Never has the entire city council attended an AIC convention, City Manager Jean Millar said Monday.

But never has the city been faced with problems like the ones created by the 1 percent initiative, several city councilmen added.

Whatever the reason for the mass exodus to Coeur d'Alene, city taxpayers will pick up the tab for their conference representatives.

The city will pay each participant's $45 registration fee; travel expenses of $150 (15 cents per mile) for the 1,000-mile round trip to Coeur d'Alene; at least three night's lodging for each participant at a cost of at least $30 per night; plus the cost of meals not included in the registration fee.

Figuring conservatively, it will cost at least $350 per person, or $5,500 total, to send the Twin Falls delegation to the conference.

And the cost could be greater still.

City Manager Jean Millar said he, the assistant city manager and the city attorney will definitely attend the conference. He said other city administrators may go to Coeur d'Alene for parts of the program relating to their departments, although, he added, there probably will not be enough information available to justify the attendance of most departments heads.

And, when city councilmen discovered they would be paid only 15 cents per mile for transportation expenses, they decided to discuss at their next meeting whether or not to raise the city's mileage allowance to 20 cents. If the council approves a 20-cent-per-mile allowance, the city's conference bill will increase at least $500.

City Councilman Chris Talkington said Monday he plans to attend the conference "because I want to see what other cities are doing with the 1 percent."

"If there was ever a time we needed to attend, it's now," he added.

The conference agenda is heavy with discussions and presentations on how to deal with the 1 percent initiative.

In addition, the Idaho

Legislature's interim 1 percent committee, chaired by Rep. Steve Antone of Rupert, will hold a public hearing on the initiative at the conference.

"It's our one chance for input," the councilman Bud Cheney said.

Councilman Hank Woodall, who is on the Board of Directors of the AIC and the city's voting delegate to the conference, said the conference is a serious one.

He described the conference as 80 percent educational and certainly not fun and games.

Councilman Gordon Cox said the more councilmen who attend, the more new ideas will be brought back to the city. He said, more councilmen in attendance will enable the city "to really cover" the many simultaneous events at the conference.

Four councilmen, Woodall,

Talkington, Cheney and Mary McClusky, also sit on various boards and committees of the AIC or have been asked to participate in panels at the conference.

Because of the conference, the council's next public meeting has been postponed from July 16 to July 23.

Money, safe both stolen

TWIN FALLS — An unknown burglar (or burglars) last week was apparently intent on stealing more than the money stored in a safe at Twin Falls Moving and Storage Center.

He walked off with the safe as well, Twin Falls Police said Monday.

The burglary occurred sometime between 9:50 p.m. Friday and 8:30 a.m. Saturday, police said.

Entry was made by forcing some sliding doors on the building located at 1757 Kimberly Road. A dolly was used to remove the safe, police said.

About $650 in cash was in the safe which itself was valued at $300, police said.

The case is under investigation, Police Chief Tim Qualls said.

Accident injures man, 62

TWIN FALLS — A three-vehicle accident Monday sent one driver to the hospital in Coeur d'Alene. No other injuries were reported, deputies said. The accident occurred at 10 a.m., deputies said.

Buckley was cited for failure to yield at a stop sign. He was northbound on county road 3500 east and had stopped at the intersection with U.S. Highway 30. He apparently pulled out onto the highway and was stuck by a 10-wheel truck driven by John W. Mabre, 22, of Twin Falls.

The collision spun Buckley's 1976 Ford around causing it to collide with a third car stopped at the stop sign. That vehicle was driven by Cheryl D. Crothers, 18, of Kimberly.

Damage to the 1976 compact car owned by Gem State Paper Company was estimated at $2,000. Damage to Buckley's vehicle was estimated at $2,500. Damage to Crothers' 1976 Chevrolet was estimated at $100.

Breaks force canal closing

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

HOLLISTER — A series of cave-ins along the Salmon River Canal Company's Mainline Canal forced closure of the canal early Monday after an estimated 48 second foot, or one-third of the total water in the system.

The incident posed no threat to homes or livestock in the area.

The canal serves the farming area south of the Higgins Canal.

Six local farmers and canal company employees filled the holes located on the canal stretch about six miles west of Rogerson.

A small portion of the new material had fallen out by 5 p.m.

Canal director George Humphries of Twin Falls said the material would be compacted before the canal was reopened. He added the canal may be opened in two to three days.

Humphries said low water levels in the canal were found about 1:30 a.m. Monday. The canal was subsequently shut down before 6 a.m.

Upon examination, the officials found settling-caused depressions on each side and along the bottom of the canal.

A series of one-inch wide cracks covered both sides of the canal for about 100 yards, Humphries added.

He added the hole at the bottom of the canal "looked like someone had come in with a backhoe."

The lost water escaped and seeped into the nearby land made up of rocks and a series of small faults, Humphries said.

The area's rock-laden subsoil has caused settling problems with the canal before, Humphries said. And Monday's incident was by no means the worst example.

One hole which developed two or three years ago allowed about 80 percent of the system's water to escape, Humphries said.

Humphries noted similar problems had previously prompted re-routing of the canal on the other side of the valley.

The company intends to improve the earth canal by lining a portion of it with cement. But inflation has already taken its toll, Humphries said.

"At the time this project was being studied, there were three miles of lining proposed. By the time the project was due to be started, inflation had increased the costs to where we could do only half of it," Humphries said.

Presently 1 1/2 miles of the canal is lined with cement.

Inmates questioned about prison knifing

BOISE (UPI) — Warden Ed Dermitt said Monday "several more individuals" are being held for questioning in connection with a stabbing at the Idaho State Prison Saturday, but he again declined to name two persons taken into custody over the weekend.

"We'll release the names when our investigation is complete," he said, referring to two men possibly linked with bloody clothing and a blood-stained knife found after the incident. They have not been charged.

Delbert Crawford, 34, serving a life sentence for murder and robbery, was found lying in a pool of blood on his cell floor at about 1:15 p.m. Saturday. He is recovering at St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise from an apparent single stab wound.

Shortly after the incident, the prison was locked up and visitation was suspended.

Plane wreck removed

GRANDEVILLE (UPI) — The Forest Service said Monday it has removed the last of two remaining major sections of a DC-3 which crashed into the Selway River last month and that it did not yield the body of pilot Marvin "Whitney" Hachmeister.

Hachmeister's body is the last one unaccounted for following the crash, which killed nine persons. Two men survived.

The plane went down June 11 after one engine died, the other fell off, and a wing caught on fire. Searchers have been in the area ever since.

Spokesman Steve Waterman said for Hachmeister will continue, adding the body probably is covered by sand at the bottom-of-the-river. But it could also be strapped to a piece of sunken wreckage, Waterman said.

"We plan on having divers in the water again Tuesday and Wednesday from Dry Bar (the point of impact) to Balthazer Creek," Waterman said. Eight of the nine bodies were found in that three-mile stretch of water.

"We still have our bridge watch at the Selway Falls Bridge, 15 miles below the crash site. We haven't made plans on when we might abandon the search for the pilot. We're going to check it week by week. We plan to look this week, maybe next week we won't."

Salvage operations continued Monday, with the wing section — the last major part of the craft sought by the Forest Service — lifted from the water.

"We were able to get the wing section at Wolf Creek, and it did not have the pilot," Waterman said. "We've got it lifted and are making plans to swing it out and bring it to Grandeville by logging helicopter."

Cattlemen seek delay of ban

DENVER (UPI) — The National Cattlemen's Association plans to file petitions asking for a delay in the effective date of a Food and Drug Administration ban on the use of a growth promoter in cattle.

The FDA announced recently it plans to ban use of diethylstilbestrol as a growth promoter by July 20. Manufacture and shipment of DES are to end by July 13.

The federal agency said persons are involved in producing and using DES for livestock may file a petition for a delay in the effective date of the ban.

The NCA said Saturday it would petition the FDA for at least a 120-day extension because many cattle feeders have bought DES in quantity. The NCA has sent to affiliated state cattle associations all necessary information on procedures for filing petitions for a time extension.

Lauren Carlson, president of the Denver-based NCA, said he was disappointed that the FDA had decided to ban use of DES as a growth promoter. He said there never has been any evidence of possible harm to humans.

Michigan pilot wins air race to Jackpot

JACKPOT — Overall winner in the first annual race of Meyers-200 planes Friday from Las Vegas to Jackpot was Bill Maglie of Kalamazoo, Mich.

Gary Meryehw of Sonora, Calif., flew the 398 miles due north from Las Vegas in the best time, 1 hour, 59 minutes and 3 seconds, but Maglie, carrying two passengers as did below Meryehw and Magle were Bill Perry of Hayward, Calif.; Marvin Perry of Las Vegas; Morton Greenberg of Inglewood, Calif.; Robert Clark of Yuba City; John Lyon of Los Angeles; Gene Roche of Cincinnati; and Richard Morgan of Chico, Calif.

There are only 90 Meyers-200 planes in the United States, plus one in South America and one in England. It is the fastest non-turbo-charged single engine production aircraft. The last one was manufactured in 1967.

Winners will be presented cash prizes hosted by Cactus Pete's at a cocktail party Saturday at 5 p.m. in the Horseshoe Casino Lounge.

Quick lease approval now

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho truckers who lease vehicles now can have their leases approved immediately on a temporary basis, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission said Saturday.

That means truckers may begin operating when their leasing contracts are delivered to the Boise PUC office or to one of the commission field investigators, the PUC said.

In addition, the PUC said that if truckers do not hear from the commission within four PUC working days after submitting the lease, the agreement is considered approved. They then continue hauling under terms of the lease. The former lease approval method requiring advance approval by commissioners often meant an average delay of one week before truckers could start moving.

Tour scheduled

TWIN FALLS — Chamber of Commerce Agriculture Chairman Jack Ramsey announced Thursday, Aug. 2, as the date of the Chamber's Ag Tour '79. Three operations will be toured. Because of limited seating capacity, only the first 40 persons to sign up will be able to go. Chamber members can sign up by calling Nickie at 733-3974. There is no cost to Chamber members for the tour.

Idaho Falls motel robbed

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Two women wearing ski masks robbed the Stardust Motel in Idaho Falls early Monday and escaped with some $750.

Idaho Falls police said Gordon E. Bach, night manager, said one of the robbers displayed a large caliber revolver.

Burch told officers one man held the gun and the other handed him a bag and told him to fill it up.

The robbers fled the motel, the bag broke, spilling the coins on the motel lawn, police said. The robbers got away with the currency.

River victim identified

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Bonneville County sheriff's officers said Monday a body recovered from the South Fork of the Snake River Saturday has been positively identified as Craig McCleskey, 26, Idaho Falls.

The man had been missing and presumed drowned since May 19 when the motorcycle he was riding near the Swan Valley bridge in northeast Bonneville County went out of control and struck the river, tossing McCleskey into the river.

The body was spotted by a party of fishermen on an island in the river some 20 miles downstream from the Swan Valley bridge.

Idaho court upholds term

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Supreme Court Monday upheld the indeterminate sentence of a man convicted of robbing two elderly persons at gunpoint in 1977.

Davis R. Stewart pleaded guilty to robbery and was given an indeterminate prison sentence not to exceed life. He appealed, claiming such a sentence is excessive compared with other robbery sentences and with lesser one imposed on the co-defendant.

The court rejected his arguments, holding that a disparity of sentences between multiple defendants for the same crime and between different defendants for similar crimes does not necessarily constitute excessiveness.

Idahoan chosen

BOISE (UPI) — Jonny Heath, a 16-year-old junior at Boise's Capital High School, has been selected Miss Idaho Teen U.S.A.

She will represent Idaho in the national finals Dec. 1 in Albuquerque, N.M.

Runners-up in the weekend competition in Boise were Kathleen Allen, Boise; Kathy Covington, Rexburg; Kazi Fried, Caldwell; and Michelle Veibel, Blackfoot.

Incorrect term

A Monday story on the Old-time Fiddlers' Banjo Jammer included an incorrect description of the type of music played, according to Kathryn L. O'Connor of Moscow.

The article referred to the music as bluegrass, which O'Connor says comes from Southern U.S. roots and emphasizes the banjo. The Old-time Fiddlers music stems from the fiddle and reels traditional to Scotland, Ireland and England, she says. O'Connor is state secretary of the Idaho Oldtime Fiddlers' Association.

Boston has entire All-Star outfield

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Boston Red Sox made All-Star history Monday by placing three outfielders on the starting team and the Kansas City Royals, another club beaten out by the New York Yankees in postseason play last year, will also be represented by three starters while the defending champions were shut out.

The AL starting outfield of Jim Rice, Fred Lynn and Carl Yastrzemski are all from the Red Sox — an unprecedented feat, according to the Elias Sports Bureau — and Rice, last season's AL Most Valuable Player, finished second to California's Rod Carew in last year's MVP voting. Yastrzemski, who has played first base for most of the season, is the veteran of the AL squad with 15 previous All-Star appearances.

Kansas City will also be represented by three starters for the 50th Classic, to be played July 17 at Seattle's Kingdome. Darrell Porter will start at catcher — ending the six-year domination shared by Boston's Carlton Fisk and New York's Thurman Munson — Frank White will be at second base and third baseman George Brett outplayed New York's Graig Nettles by a surprisingly large margin.

California's Rod Carew, elected to start every All-Star game since he reached the majors in 1967, led all players by receiving 3,997,081 votes at first base. The seven-time batting champion is not expected to play, however, due to torn ligaments in his right thumb. The league will name a replacement.

Minnesota's shortstop Roy Smalley, the major leagues' leading hitter with a .352 average, rallied in the final stages to beat out New York's Buckey Dent. Smalley is the only electee who has never previously been an All-Star and his selection gives the AL five different starting shortstops in as many years.

White's election represents the fifth straight year the league will be starting a different second baseman.

Boston Manager Don Zimmer was pleased but unfazed by his team's three-man sweep of the outfield posts.

"I'm not surprised," said Zimmer upon learning the results of the fan's balloting, "because all three are having great years. I think it's great... these guys have been so consistent all year."

Neither the Eastern Division leading Baltimore Orioles nor the Texas Rangers, leaders of the West, placed a starter on the team. Texas third baseman Buddy Bell, who finished behind Brett and Nettles, placed highest among the two division leaders. Ironically, the two NL division leaders, Montreal and Houston, also lack a starting representative.

The AL team will be managed by Bob Lemon, who look over the Yankees in late July last season and piloted the team to one of the most remarkable comebacks in league history, culminating in a one-game playoff triumph over Boston for the Eastern Division crown and a four-game victory over the Royals in the AL championship series.

Munson was the Yankees' leading representative, but still fell over 240,000 votes short of Porter at catcher. Reggie Jackson finished fourth among outfielders and Tuckey Dent and Nettles placed second-best at shortstop and third respectively for the two-time defending world champions.

California's Don Baylor, leading the majors with 79 RBIs, finished a dismal 14th in the outfield.

The remainder of the 28-man squad will be chosen by the league, with pitchers announced Tuesday, and reserves on Wednesday.

Records fall fast in Burley

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sports writer

BURLEY — The "cute snap and crackling" of the Burley Municipal golf course's women's record being broken the past few weeks swelled into a somnolent Monday.

Young Jean Smith of Boise provided the coup d' grace during the pre-am prelude to the state women's golf championship Monday when she turned the 18-hole, women's par 74 layout with a 98. It also helped her teammates from Crane Creek Country Club of Boise to tie the Elkhorn women with a resounding 43-under par 105 total.

Smith, low handicapper in the tournament which officials opens Wednesday after a two-woman best ball Tuesday, capped the attack on the course record which started a couple of months ago when Lori Vegwert dropped the standard to 77. That lasted until Twin Falls' Karen Brown went to Burley for a practice round Saturday, resulting in a 71 — Brown's first look at the course.

Then came Monday's pro-am with Smith going out in 31. She said she felt it was a comfortable round and that she played well, then answered a question "oh, yes, there was some trouble out there. I knocked one in the water." It amounted to a one-stroke penalty in a lateral hazard.

Smith's showing was just one of several indications that this indeed could be the best women's state played yet. Brown "skied" to a 78 where she was tied with Vegwert. Three-time former champion Virginia Undheim of Twin Falls posted a strong 73. Peggy Stanwood of Caldwell carded a 76 and Kall Kucy, who won't be playing in the meet, came back with a 35. And the defending champion, Sue DeLong, isn't in Burley yet. Doris Ellingham and Sergene Sorenson of Burley carded 78s on the home course and finished out of the money in the upper handicap gross division.

In net Norma McKissick and Connie Morgan, both Pocatello, had 63s while Sharon Ross of Twin Falls and Justin Lewis of Boise had 64s, and a Jam developed at 66 among Shirley Blake, Twin Falls; Mary Ellen Hammons, Pocatello, and Calleen Johnson, Burley.

In the upper division, Marilyn Edwards topped gross at 94 while Lois Orme, Idaho Falls, had 89; Clarice Broesbeck, Rupert, 89; Jean Southwick, Pocatello, 90, and Julie Peterson, Missy, Buttefield of Sun Valley and Hilary Lynch of Burley all had 91s. Net was shared by Marilyn Gregg and Teresa Cantlon, Boise, at 60; Vivian Gunderson had 64; Julie Hamblin, Twin Falls, 62; Andy Beverstock, Elkhorn, 61; Bennett, Idaho Falls; Cheryl Cammack, Blackfoot; and Norma Stoddard, all 63s.

Ed Knecht resigned Monday as head football coach at Twin Falls High School after just one season

Off to Genesee Knecht quits post after just one year

By RANDY FREY
Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS — Football coach Ed Knecht made it official Monday when he handed in his resignation to Twin Falls High School principal Frank Charlton.

It had been speculated for several days that Knecht would quit his job as Bruin football coach to accept an administrative position at Genesee High School.

Knecht, who has been the Bruin coach for only one year, will become the new principal at Genesee.

"I am getting out of coaching altogether," said Knecht from his home Monday afternoon. "I have given a lot of thought to this before and decided that now was the time to make the move."

"It would be different if I were 30 years old, but I am 51 and if I am ever going to make a swing in administration now is the time," he said.

"Knecht said it was one of the most difficult decisions he has ever had to make because he will be leaving Twin Falls before completing the job he set out to do."

He was brought to Twin Falls High School with plans of rebuilding a sinking football program, and although he feels the team has made progress in the last year it is still far from being a winner.

"We feel we have made definite strides forward even though we were only 1-10 last year," Knecht said. "But this opportunity came along in an area of the state we were interested in being in and we could not turn it down."

Knecht inherited a team with an 0-11 record a year ago and set out to build it into a winner. He did win his first game as head coach, but then lost the next 10.

"You are never entirely happy when you are 1-10, but yes I was pleased with the way things were taking shape," he said. "We were going to be a better team this year, and I think whoever takes over the team will win some more games this year."

Charlton would not speculate on who will be the new coach, but he did say a decision will be made by the end of the week or early next week.

"We are looking for applicants," was all Charlton would say. "We will look at candidates from within the staff before going outside. We have to see who will apply."

Knecht also could shed no light on who his replacement might be. Whoever it is, it will be the fourth Twin Falls coach in the last four years.

The Times-News learned last week that Knecht was considering leaving the high school. He was in Genesee last weekend and had been interviewed there before. The job reportedly was already offered to him and all that remained was a final decision on his part.

Knecht met with Charlton and Superintendent James Sawin Monday, at which time he announced his decision to leave.

"I have regrets leaving coaching, a great deal of regret," Knecht told the Times-News. "It will be a part of my life that I will miss very much."

Knecht said when he left northern Idaho he told friends that some day he would like to go back north. That day just came sooner than he expected.

"It will be a considerable increase in pay, and those things are important in life," Knecht said. "I have been in coaching for 38 years, so believe me I gave it a great deal of thought."

Knecht said he anticipates no problems making the change from coach to principal, although he said he might get a little litchy sitting in the stands watching a football game.

"I know the football coach there and told him I will probably be calling a few shots for him and he said, 'like hell you will,'" Knecht joked.

The coach will remain in Twin Falls for the next few weeks, reporting to Genesee in early August.

Robinson upsets Juantorena for gold

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — It took an hour of mass confusion involving a number of countries, but the United States' sensational Gold Rush in the Pan American Games continued Monday night with a pair of spectacular victories in track and field.

James Robinson scored one of the major upsets of the year in international track when he beat Cuban Olympic champion Alberto Juantorena in the 800-meter run. However, the victory was declared official only after a series of protests and confusion.

Robinson, the AAU champion from Oakland, Calif., burst through two runners in the final 50 yards and overhauled Juantorena at the finish line to win the men's 800 in 1:46.2. It marked the second time Robinson had beaten Juantorena at that distance in the past year.

But shortly after the race, his victory was protested when Jamaican judge Herb McKinley, a former Olympic 400-meter champion, claimed that Robinson had elbowed Owen Hamilton of Jamaica in his final dash to the wire, thus depriving him of a possible bronze medal. The protest was passed up to chief referee Uriel Tirado, who then passed it on to the logistics committee.

However, under the Pan Am Games setup, the logistics committee can only rule on protests against officials and sent it back to Tirado.

When he ruled that Robinson was the winner, McKinley then filed a formal protest of a referee's decision.

The logistics committee, a jury of appeals with members from Barbados, Puerto Rico, Brazil, Peru and Mexico, finally rejected the foul claim after reviewing films of the finish for 15 minutes. McKinley protested vehemently after the final decision was made, but Robinson got his gold medal.

Robinson's victory gave the U.S. a sensational double over Cuba's best middle distance runners as Essie Kelley of Prairie View, Tex., captured the women's 800-meter races.

Too bad there was just one winner in Legion contest

TWIN FALLS — The problem with holding a contest like this is only one winner.

Sixty-one persons turned in what they felt were outstanding choices for the Twin Falls American Legion baseball team's new nickname. Two persons were crowned co-winners, but now there are 59 persons walking around the city yelling "fo!"

The winning entry of Twin Falls Cowboys was one of 61 different choices submitted in the contest. Both Mary Alice Florence and James Blitzenburg felt the name was appropriate considering the former professional baseball team housed in Twin Falls had the same name.

Twin Falls is indeed a cowboy town. Rodeos are a dime a dozen, and if the Oakland A's had as many fans in their ballpark as Twin Falls has residents wearing cowboy boots, the team would be making money.

"The name just has a good ring to it," said Legion coach Gary Barker.

Cowboys will be a fine nickname for the city's top baseball team, but there were several other choices which would have been just as good. For various reasons, however, they were picked over.

Five persons thought the Twin Falls Twins would be best, but because Lewiston already has that name it was not picked. The names Russetts (Idaho Falls), Chiefs (Nampa) and Rebels (Pocatello) were not taken for the same reason.

Twin Falls also has a thing with bears (Twin Falls Bruins, O'Leary Cubs and Stuart Bears), so judges decided the Grizzlies would be over-doing it.

Several bird nicknames were entered, including the Eagles. College of Southern Idaho already has that nickname, and the Legion team did not want people to associate the team with the college.

There are no Cardinals or Blue Jays in Twin Falls, so those birds were tossed out. Falcons, Owls and Gulls were also proposed over.

And although the team has played at times this year like it is out in space, the SkyVib-Kneokets just doesn't catch that baseball ring. Besides, it is too long to scribble across the front of a uniform.

best, and there has been a trend to those type of names in recent years with the Chicago Fire and the New Orleans Jazz.

One person thought the Twin Falls Flame was the best choice while another preferred the Twin Falls Twilight. He even submitted a logo with interlocking Ts.

While most of the names suited baseball well, there were a few that just did not go with the sport. It is hard to imagine any team being called the Sludge, even though the name goes well with Twin Falls these days.

Animals seem to provide a good nickname most of the time, but the Aardvarks is not one of the animals most often picked. Maybe it was submitted in reference to the "multitude of ants" crawling through the Harmon Park dirt.

The Bushwackers, the Dynamites, the Cow-Pokes, the Long Rangers and the Magic Balls were also eliminated for various reasons.

Other names submitted included: the Diamondbacks, the Americans, the Electrifiers, the Sluggers, the Whoppers, the Brewers, the Scramblers, the Patriots, the Flyers, the Lancers, the Spikes, the Pioneers, the Legs, the Brigadiers, the Wranglers, the Ambassadors, the Go Go Reds, the Magicians and the Stingers.

While there were 45 different names submitted, there were several obvious ones left out. How about the Twin Falls Canyon or the Twin Falls Rednecks?

And this is the one of the biggest fishing areas in the country, hence the Trout or the Rainbow or the Steelheads.

But it is the Cowboys, and the four persons who submitted that name are now local heroes.

For the 57 losers, they can show up at the next Cowboy home game and tell everyone sitting in the stands, "I still think a better name would be the Twin Falls..."

Falls to Falls Run set

TWIN FALLS — Registration has begun for the five-mile Falls to Falls Run, the third of five runs held this summer in the city of Twin Falls.

Sponsored by the Twin Falls YFCA and Idaho First National Bank, the run is set for Saturday, July 28. Starting point will be Twin Falls with the finishing line at Dierkes Lake.

Prizes will be awarded to winners in five age groups: 14 and under, 15-19, 20-29, 30-39 and 40 and over. Overall winners, male and female, and the youngest and oldest runners will all be honored.

Entry fee will be $5 if submitted before July 26. Late entries will cost $6; included in the entry fee is a commemorative race T-shirt.

Entry forms for the race are available at the YFCA office on Elizabeth Boulevard or wherever race posters are displayed.

Twin Falls takes second

CALDWELL — Twin Falls youth baseball teams did very well over the weekend in the annual Caldwell Little League Tournament, although it was Vallivue which walked away with the team championship.

The two tournament favorites, Caldwell Simplots and Twin Falls Kiwanis, were both dumped by the surprising Vallivue team. First was Caldwell, which won the Twin Falls tournament last year, and then came the Kiwanis, who fell 8-4.

Meanwhile, Twin Falls No. 2 team won three straight games and found itself in the finals with Vallivue. Twin Falls won games by scores of 13-6, 8-1 and 12-2, but in the finals it was Vallivue 15, Twin Falls 3.

Twin Falls players hit four home runs out of Caldwell parks during the weekend tournament. Troy Jackman had two and Darren Sandstrom and Tim Buscher had one each.

Next tournament for the Twin Falls teams will be this weekend in Nampa.

Quintero wins state meet

TWIN FALLS — Rachel Quintero of Twin Falls has won the state championship in the annual Hershey track meet in Coeur d'Alene and now waits word whether her softball throw was good enough to earn a trip to the national meet in August.

Quintero tossed the softball 114 feet to win the 10-11 year-old championship. The second place throw sailed only 106 feet.

The national meet will be held in mid-August, but Quintero's throw must be the best in the western region in order for her to qualify. The western region consists of Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Washington, Alaska and Wyoming.

Idaho is also guaranteed six entries in the national meet, so Quintero could take that route to the event.

She will not know whether she has qualified until Aug. 1.

Racquetball exhibition

TWIN FALLS — Two of the top racquetball players in the west will get together Thursday for an exhibition at the Ball Busters Racquet Club in Twin Falls.

Wayne Weightman, currently the number five ranked amateur in the United States, and Robbie Wold of Boise will square off on the local courts at 7 p.m. Wold has played against and beaten several leading professionals in his career.

Weightman, of San Diego, is in Twin Falls all week conducting clinics at the local club. He has played courts for Bud Multheisen, the only person in the racquetball hall of fame.

The exhibition will be held on the glass courts at the local club and is open to the public free of charge.

Sonics sign Johnson

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Seattle SuperSonics announced Monday the signing of veteran forward John Johnson to a three-year contract.

Johnson, a starter with Seattle the past two seasons, became a free agent at the end of the 1978-79 season and terms of the new pact were not disclosed.

Johnson was Seattle's sixth leading scorer with an 11.0 average last season, but the 6-foot-7 defensive specialist led the team with 358 assists.

McMannon All-Academic

BOISE — Former College of Southern Idaho baseball standout Steve McMannon has been named to the second team Skool/Tappy Days Academic All-America baseball team after another fine season this spring at Boise State University.

McMannon, who held the home run and RBI records at CSI until broken by Jim Good this season, finished the season at BSU nearly re-writing their record books. He was first team All-Nor-Pac, first team All-Region and honorable mention All-America.

The second baseman finished second in the nation in runs batted in with 75 (1.53 per game), and seventh in the nation in hitting with a .355 batting average.

McMannon was the only athlete from baseball playing schools in the Big Sky Conference and the Nor-Pac to receive first or second team recognition.

Dryden calls it quits after five Stanley Cups

MONTREAL (UPI) — Four-time Vezina trophy winner Ken Dryden, blocked by Soviet authorities from continuing his career in Russia, announced Monday his retirement from hockey after eight seasons and five Stanley Cups with the Montreal Canadiens.

The 31-year-old Hamilton, Ont., native said he would complete a law degree at Montreal's McGill University but "had no concrete plans beyond that."

"I'm satisfied that there are some things that I would like to do and that I would hope I have the ability to do," Dryden told a news conference.

"As you know it's very hard to talk about such things when you really don't know whether they are concrete possibilities or not. It's not fun to speculate."

Dryden said the decision to continue his law studies came after political and bureaucratic wrangling by Soviet authorities forced him to scrap plans to play and study hockey in Russia.

Dryden said he had a "conceptual interest" in playing the Russian game and had wanted to study the administrative methods that have made the Soviet's supreme in world hockey competition.

But he said after exhaustive consultation with the Canadian department of external affairs, Sports Canada and the Russian embassy, the project fell through.

"Their (the Russians') policy decision was that it just couldn't turn out," he said.

Dryden's meteoric rise began when he joined the Canadiens as a rookie in the 1971-72 season and won the Comrie Smythe Trophy as the most valuable player in the playoffs. He went on to play with five Stanley Cup teams and was selected to the NHL all-star team four times.

Dryden said he turned his back on hockey reluctantly.

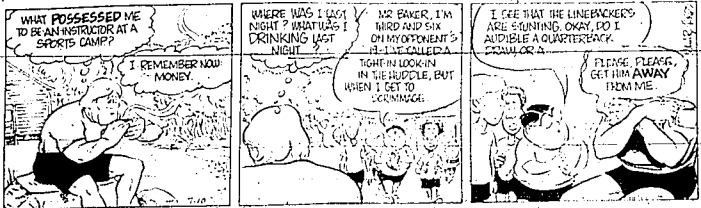

"Playing with the kind of people I have had the opportunity to play with makes for a really remarkable experience," he said. "When you do play with the best and in front of the best you really could ask for no more."

"I love playing hockey. It's not only been my occupation for the last nine years but it's been my preoccupation and passion for the past 25 years and I will miss it very much."

"One of the understandings that you have when we get to a point when you start to make hockey a career is that the years of our whole lives represent a fairly short period of time, and you're going to have to stop at a certain point and end all of those feelings that are very common to all of us."

Canadiens General Manager Irving Grundman said Michel (Bunny) Larocque would become the team's number one goalie while several possible replacements for the position of substitute goalie were being considered.

Hardest day of Nelson's life

©1979 Chicago Sun-Times

"CHICAGO—After you've experienced the hell of a hundred firetrucks in Vietnam, learning to handle the pressure of a one-shot lead in a golf tournament can seem about as challenging as boiling water."

"That's the trouble with leading a tournament," said Larry Nelson, who had a lot of trouble leading the Sunday. "It's always hardest for the leader. Everybody looks at him as if he lost it instead of winning it. The pressure is always on the guy who shoots last. He's at a big disadvantage."

But when it came time for Nelson to make a choice, he elected to take the last shot. And he pulled off a magnificent 138-yard 9-iron shot at the first extra hole to beat Ben Crenshaw in a playoff for the $54,000 first prize in the 70th Western Open championship at Butler National Golf Club in suburban Oak Brook.

"That's the best shot I've ever hit in a pressure situation," said Nelson, who topped in a 21-foot birdie put at the 16th green to end one of the most bizarre tournaments in memory. Whoever dreamed the third round leader would close with a 76 and still win?

"That's one of the toughest days I've ever spent on a golf course," said the 33-year-old Vietnam veteran. "You don't know what to expect when you step up to the first tee with guys like Crenshaw and Tom Watson behind you. I saw Watson honey and I bogeyed. To me, more I played, the more I bogeyed. I couldn't stop bleeding. The shots just got away from me."

"I wouldn't have given me much of a chance to win in the playoff. I was totally drained, mentally and physically. I was in a daze. The first 18 holes took everything out of me. I certainly didn't feel that I had an edge. Then I went out and hit the two best shots I hit all week. So how do you figure something like that?"

As bad as he was playing—he had three 3-putts and five bogeys for a 39 on the front side—Nelson continued to hold the lead until he bogeyed the 14th.

Knight in fight with cop

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Bobby Knight, coach of the United States basketball team, will not be charged with any wrongdoing for Sunday's altercation with a police officer at a Pan American Games team practice session.

The entire matter has been resolved, a spokesman for the United States delegation said Monday. "Bobby will not have to go to court and no charges will be filed."

Knight allegedly punched a policeman at a workout Sunday when the officer intervened in a squabble between one of the U.S. players and a woman spectator.

The U.S. coach refused to comment on the incident after his team wallgged Canada, 97-78.

"I'm surprised you want to hear my side of it," Knight told one reporter.

Earlier in the Pan-Am Games, Knight was kicked out of a basketball game for protesting an official's call. He was reprimanded by Pan-Am game officials and told if it happens again the United States team would be eliminated from the games.

Knight apologized for his actions following the first incident.

Sports Medicine Clinic established in Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — The University of Chicago has established a Sports Medicine Clinic to meet a growing need for special diagnosis and treatment of athletic injuries, a spokesman said Monday.

Dr. David Stulberg, who coordinates the clinic's activity, said recognition of athletic injuries often requires expertise of doctors familiar with the way the injuries occur.

For instance, he said, some competitive swimmers have been complaining of pain in their knees — an ailment which special diagnosis and treatment found stems from use of the "whipkick" as part of the breaststroke. The injury, now known as "breast-stroker's knee," turned out to be fairly common and affects both competitive and non-competitive swimmers, he said.

Treatment of athletes also requires some specialization, Stulberg said.

"The treatment and rehabilitation of athletic injuries is unusual in that athletes are usually eager to resume the activity that was associated with the injury, safely and as soon as possible," he said. Close monitoring of the healing process thus is essential.

The clinic also advises athletes how to reduce the likelihood of further injury through proper conditioning and practice.

Some of the most frequent complaints seen at the clinic, Stulberg said, are: ligament and cartilage injuries from football; shoulder separations from weightlifting.

BRIDGE
Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag
Safe but serious situation contract. What do you think? We think that our correspondence has been taught incorrectly.

The man who sits on a narrow board falls down, but he never gets anywhere. This West hand cries out for a heart lead. Sometimes it will cost the leader a trick.
On lots of occasions it will break even. But once in a while as with today's layout it will pay real dividends.
The difference between game and no game with both sides vulnerable is 700 points plus. One 700 point plus will offset a lot of 30-point overtricks.

This is a very close prob-opening bid of 1♥. We would spades but we would not really criticize a one-no-trump rebid. We definitely would not rebid to hearts.
