

Energy independence price tag $142 billion

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Setting forth an energy program he hopes will lead to "a rebirth of the American spirit," President Carter Monday announced a $142 billion effort to break free of OPEC — with oil companies paying the tab.

Carter told country leaders in Kansas City he will ask Congress to authorize a 10-year program aimed at developing synthetic fuels, improving mass transit and giving aid to the poor who cannot pay spiraling energy costs.

He said the program — the most expensive ever in peacetime — would require $142.2 billion, and all of it would come from taxes the government can impose on profits oil companies are getting from rising crude oil prices.

Later in the day, Carter flew to Detroit for a question and answer session with 4,000 members of the Communication Workers of America — his first since the Camp David retreat.

Despite the president's plea for less selfishness and more public sacrifice, four of the questioners complained about the 7 percent wage guideline.

Several, however, appeared to have heeded the president's idealistic call. One man from Corpus Christi, Texas, asked when the energy war bonds Carter hopes to sell to support his synthetic fuel program will be on the market. The answer was later this year, if Congress approves the program quickly.

In both Kansas City and Detroit, Carter continued the emotional appeal he made in his speech Sunday night, exhorting Americans to overcome their "crisis of confidence" by slaying the energy dragon.

In Detroit, he said, "It is our common task to commit ourselves to a renaissance of America, to a rebirth of the American spirit... we must believe, and we must belong to, something bigger than ourselves."

To the whistles and applause, he replied softly, "Thank you, thank you."

In Kansas City, Carter said his main idea is to spend heavily on development of new fuel sources and public transportation over the next 10 years so "that never again will our nation's energy independence be hostage to foreign oil."

He also made clear his program is heavily dependent on nuclear power, although there are no new proposals for nuclear power pending a report from a special presidential panel on Three Mile Island.

"Nuclear power must play an important role in the United States to insure our energy future," he said, in the strongest statement of support for the industry since the accident.

Carter made these additional specific points on energy in Kansas City. He will:

- Offer new financial incentives to spur production of heavy oil (a tar-like substance that can be converted to crude oil); oil shale and hard-to-get-at natural gas.
- Ask Congress for power to set "mandatory state by state conservation goals" and authority to impose conservation measures on a state if it does not meet the target.

"Use 'the full power for the law against those who profiteer from our national shortage, or who try to cheat the American public.' He will send 200 energy auditors out to check oil company profits and supplies.

• Seek low cost loans for homeowners who improve their homes to save energy.

Carter announced he will limit oil imports this year to 8.2 million barrels a day, a more stringent goal than he set in Tokyo last month, and said he is prepared to take on the giant oil companies if he feels they are not doing their part to help.

"The oil companies must cooperate," he said to loud applause, his voice rising to a shout.

He said the $142.2 billion he plans to spend on energy between 1980 and 1990 will be used mostly to develop synthetic fuels.

Idaho view of Carter plan cool

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho political and business leaders are cautiously hopeful about the energy program proposed by President Carter Sunday, but most say they are waiting for the details of the plan.

Some also are critical of items excluded from the president's energy battle strategy.

Gov. John Evans says Carter should have fired Energy Secretary James Schlesinger as part of a major reorganization of the Department of Energy.

Still, Evans says the president "did a good job of convincing the nation he understands the problems facing us and that we must all pull together to overcome the mess we're in."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, says Carter spoke forcefully and candidly, and "offered evidence of new leadership." Church says he supports Carter's goal of a "massive energy development program coupled with stringent conservation efforts."

Church adds he is particularly pleased with Carter's endorsement of a gasoline program "which I had urged him to include in his program." But the Idaho senator says "it remains to be seen whether he is prepared to enforce my bill requiring mandatory mixing and distribution of gasoline throughout the country."

According to Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, "the president's words are good, the question is whether the actions are any good." McClure says Carter currently has the authority to do a number of the things mentioned in the speech, but he's not choosing to do them.

McClure also says he is critical of the president for asking for a greater dependence on the federal government, rather than on private business, to solve the nation's energy problems.

Congressman George Hansen, R-Powell, is critical of the speech, saying it is "a back-passing operation." Carter did not address the basic problem of the energy situation, which Hansen says was the president's lack of leadership.

Pat Ford, executive director of the Idaho Petroleum Council, describes as realistic Carter's goal to have 20 percent of the nation's energy be solar by the year 2000.

Ford says he is also pleased the president plans to spend more money on mass transportation.

But Ford says increased shale oil production and coal degassification may prove too expensive to be economically viable.

Doug Bean of the Idaho Petroleum Council says Carter's speech had lofty aims, "but he has way too much stress on continued federal government intervention."

Cautious support for Carter also comes from P.K. Harwood, president of the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry (IACI). But the IACI president says he wants to see the details of the president's energy program and the way Carter isn't planning to funnel new funds through either the Department of Energy or a new federal Energy Corporation.

"I think we should use the private sector to develop energy," Harwood adds.

State Rep. J. Vard Chaburn, R-Albon, chairman of the House Resources and Conservation Committee, says he approves of Carter's speech, "but it's a long ways down the road, but it's a beginning."

Possible JFK plot ignored

NEW YORK — The House Assassinations Committee has concluded that conspirators were "likely" in the murders of President John F. Kennedy and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. — but that neither the Warren Commission nor the Federal Bureau of Investigation adequately explored conspiracy possibilities in either death.

The final report of the committee, which will be made public Wednesday at a news conference in Washington, maintains that elements of organized crime "probably" conspired to have Kennedy murdered and that two people shot at his car in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

The committee concluded that King's death in Memphis on April 4, 1968, "probably" evolved from a conspiracy of right-wing St. Louis businessmen.

The report clears both the FBI and the Central Intelligence Agency of any involvement in the conspiracies, although it says that the FBI helped create a climate conducive to the murder of King by attacking his civil rights activities through its Counter Intelligence Program, known as COINTELPRO.

The panel also maintains that a conspiracy in the slaying of King could have been found within months had the FBI gone beyond identifying the killer, pursuing him as a fugitive and preparing a murder case against him.

The committee's findings differ considerably from those of earlier investigations, and its report is likely to produce more controversy over conspiracy theories in both cases.

The committee found that Lee Harvey Oswald did kill Kennedy and that "probably" the "hit" King. While it praises the Warren Commission and law enforcement agencies for their roles in determining who pulled the triggers and clears them of any allegation of cover-up, it is strongly critical of both the commission and the FBI for seeming to concentrate their efforts on proving to the American public and the world that both assassins acted alone.

"With an acute awareness of the significance of its finding... the committee concluded that the FBI investigation of whether there had been a conspiracy in President Kennedy's assassination was seriously flawed," the 686-page report contends in a complaint it also applies to the Warren Commission. "The conspiracy aspects of the investigation were characterized by a limited approach and inadequate application and use of available resources."

It had a similar criticism of the FBI in the King case.

Miami haven lures Somoza

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — President Anastasio Somoza Monday gave his top military commanders permission to leave Nicaragua and military sources said that Somoza's own departure appeared imminent.

The sources said they expected Somoza to leave for Miami either Monday night or sometime today.

In Washington, informed U.S. sources said Somoza's departure was "imminent."

The embattled president met with his military advisers at his La Curva residence Monday and issued an order releasing from the national guard all officers with more than 30 years of service — a move that allowed senior commanders to leave the country if they choose to do so.

Hours later, more than a dozen senior officers, including guard commander Gen. Jose B. Somoza, the president's half-brother, submitted their resignations, military sources said. Named as new commander, the sources said, was Gen. Heberto Sanchez, who had been the director of the national telecommunications company.

Somoza returned to his bunker office complex after the meeting and aides were seen taking suitcases out of the compound.

"Look, there's no one here, I'm all alone," the sole doorman at the door told a reporter.

A UPI photographer saw men carrying out suitcases and eight parrots in cages. When the man carrying the parrots was asked where they were going he replied, "Miami," where Somoza has a mansion and is expected to go into exile.

"They didn't take the parrots out for housekeeping," a porter said. "I think the president is getting ready to leave."

Earlier Monday Nicaraguan national guard airplanes bombed Sandinista positions in the rebel-held northern cities of Esteli, Leon, and Matagalpa.

Heavy ground fighting was reported at La Paz Centro between a Sandinista column from Leon and a national guard blocking force on the Pan American Highway North.

Smaller guard units were counterattacking the guerrillas at Nagarote on the eastern flank of La Paz Centro, 20 miles northeast of Managua, guard internal communications indicated.

Members of the five Andean Pact countries — Venezuela, Colombia, Peru, and Bolivia — were meeting with the guerrilla-backed provisional junta in Caracas, Venezuela, to map an orderly transition of power.

At 3:15 p.m. MDT, Somoza emerged briefly from the garage exit of his bunker, looked around, then turned quickly and went back inside. Somoza's son, Lt. Col.

Anastasio Somoza Portocarrero, also came out of the bunker and strode to the nearby officers' club for a meeting with his fellow national guard commanders.

"I knew anything I would tell you," the younger Somoza said. Asked if his father was going to resign, he replied: "I just have to fall back on that good old American comment, 'no comment.'"

Sandinista field commanders in a radio conference call said they would soon begin a major offensive against the main national guard southern front 4 miles above the Costa Rican border at Siquia.

Heavily reinforced guard troops have been holding back a rebel invasion force of about 1,000 Sandinistas for the last month.

Somoza, dressed in a powdered blue suit, stepped out of his bunker command post briefly Monday to stroll to the nearby national guard press office where he showed reporters what he claimed was a Chinese-built rocket supplied to the guerrillas by Cuba.

The machine was lucky Robot bests backgammon champion

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI) — A 3½-foot robot has beaten the new world backgammon champion.

"The machine was lucky," insisted the champion, Luigi Villa, a professional from Milan. "The dice were not rolling for me tonight," he complained, and stamped his foot.

Villa's disappointment was shared by several fellow Italians, who surrounded him in an indignant and gesticulating mass immediately afterwards and hurled insults at the machine.

The robot, termed a gammonoid, won four of its five games in a 7-point match and walked — or rather rolled — away with $5,000 in prize money Sunday night.

The machine confined its comments after the match to a long stream of electrical impulses, which were transmitted by telephone line and satellite to a computer at Pittsburgh's Carnegie Mellon University.

"This was a fantastic victory for science," said tournament director Lewis Deyong.

Earlier, former world champion Paul Magriel was left gasping with excitement during his commentary on the robot's fifth game, which was broadcast on closed-circuit television to a 200-strong audience at the Winter Sporting Club.

"Look at this play," he enthused. "I didn't even consider this play... this is certainly not a human play. This machine is relentless. Oh, it's aggressive. It's a really courageous machine."

The audience, looting on plump, upholstered chairs and sipping champagne, broke into wild applause and laughter when the machine eventually won.

"They came to mock and they stayed to marvel," Magriel said. "This is certainly a great day for backgammon. This robot can really teach us something."

The robot's artificial intelligence was designed by computer research scientist Dr. Hans Berliner of Carnegie Mellon. The machine's computer program — nicknamed the "Mighty-Pec" by scientists in Pittsburgh — represents a breakthrough in cybernetics — the science of computer language — which will be explained to the world's computer science community in a long, technical paper to be read by Berliner in Tokyo in August.

Tuesday briefing

Adams continuing fight to cut back Amtrak

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said Monday he would recommend that President Carter veto Amtrak legislation if Congress votes not to cut back the current passenger train system.

Adams made his threat in a letter to Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., chairman of the Commerce subcommittee which wrote the Amtrak bill scheduled for House floor action on Wednesday. Florio released the letter at a press conference.

Florio said Adams now supports his subcommittee's bill which would result in some train cuts, but not as much as the 43 percent cut recommended earlier this year by Adams.

Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., and Wyche Fowler, D-Cal., will offer an amendment to freeze the current system as it is for a year.

Florio's subcommittee bill does not say exactly which routes should remain in the Amtrak system.

Plan demands approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Monday to force states to adopt nuclear evacuation plans, a move the sponsor called the "first major reform resulting from the Three Mile Island accident."

The Senate approved by voice vote a watered-down amendment to the $473.3 million Nuclear Regulatory Commission bill, setting a June 1, 1980 deadline for states to adopt federally approved evacuation plans.

A loophole in the legislation would give the federal government authority to keep atomic plants running even if the time limit is not met.

The amendment, significantly weaker than the Senate Environment Committee's original proposal for a six-month deadline, was passed after the narrow failure of three attempts to drop the time limit altogether.

Murder trial begins

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Jury selection began Monday in the trial of Dr. Jeffrey R. MacDonald, a former Green Beret doctor, accused of murder in the slayings 9½ years ago of his pregnant wife and two young daughters.

"I'm confident of the eventual outcome," said MacDonald, 35, who contends his family was slain and he was repeatedly stabbed by four hippie-style intruders who burst into the apartment chanting "acid is groovy, kill the pigs."

Guide to lids coming

DENVER (UPI) — The National Conference of State Legislatures said Monday it has published a guide to limiting state and local government through tax and spending lids, measures already adopted by other states.

The limits have been adopted in Idaho, California, Colorado, Arizona, Texas, Hawaii, Michigan, New Jersey, Tennessee and Utah. Similar limits were proposed in more than 35 states during legislative sessions this year.

DC-10 grounding sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Airline Passengers Association Monday asked a federal appeals court to ground all DC-10s again until the planes can be modified or redesigned to meet airworthiness standards.

The group's emergency request asked the U.S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia to overturn last week's order by the Federal Aviation Administration permitting the DC-10s to fly again.

Iraqi leader resigns

BAGHDAD, Iraq (UPI) — Iraqi President Ahmad Hassan al-Bakr, 65, Monday announced he was resigning and would hand over power to strongman General Saddam Hussein.

The nationally televised announcement, reported by the Iraqi national news agency, came without warning. The ruling Revolutionary Command Council said it would immediately elect Hussein to the presidency.

but instead would rely on a formula based on how many people ride a particular train and how much money it loses.

Under this formula, Florio said, he was "fairly certain" that at least four trains would survive although they had been recommended for discontinuance by Adams: the Washington-Montreal "Montrealer," the Washington-New Orleans "Southern Crescent," the Chicago-Laredo "Interamerican," and at least one extra New York-Florida train.

Others might be preserved, he said, but that would depend on 1980 ridership projections now being done by Amtrak.

He said his bill would "allow any train that is worthy of being maintained to stay in the system."

Three Mile study released

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (UPI) — General Public Utilities Corp. said Monday there appeared to be no technical reasons it couldn't reactivate a 133-Mw Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in four years.

"We realize there are many issues large in the public mind concerning the reactivation of the No. 2 reactor," said Robert Arnold, a vice president of GPU, the plant's holding company.

"But at this point, we have not identified any technical reasons for not starting it up," he said. GPU released the findings of a study conducted by Bechtel Power Corp., a designer and builder of nuclear plants, that indicated there were no technical obstacles in rehabilitating the facility in four years with up to $400 million.

The announcement came as GPU and operator Metropolitan Edison Co., struggling to regain public trust, said Robert Arnold, a vice president of GPU, the plant's holding company.

"But at this point, we have not identified any technical reasons for not starting it up," he said. GPU released the findings of a study conducted by Bechtel Power Corp., a designer and builder of nuclear plants, that indicated there were no technical obstacles in rehabilitating the facility in four years with up to $400 million.

Tornado hits Cheyenne

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — A tornado spinning from a thunderstorm over northeast Cheyenne Monday killed a child, injured several, and damaged Air National Guard C-130 transport planes at an airport.

Jim Murray, state director of Emergency Medical Service, said there were many other injuries but most were minor.

A supervisor at De Paul Hospital said several persons were treated for minor injuries. The tornado hit shortly after 3:30 p.m. MDT.

Refugees reach shore

SINGAPORE (UPI) — The 93 Vietnamese refugees rescued by the American mercy ship "Sea Sweep" were allowed ashore Monday, the first step in a journey to new homes in the United States.

The refugees, at sea for two weeks, were brought ashore for transfer to holding camps in Singapore from the 1,500-ton vessel that plucked them from a sinking boat in the South China Sea July 9.

The refugees included 20 children, the youngest of whom was 1½-year-old.

Gulf oil slick studied

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (UPI) — Four scientists aboard a Coast Guard cutter Monday began a five-day sail in the Gulf of Mexico to gather data on a huge oil slick moving toward the Texas coast.

The slick, reported to be 300 miles long and 25 miles wide, is being fed by 10,000 to 30,000 barrels of oil a day from an offshore rig in the Bay of Campeche that blew out and caught fire June 3.

Jet plunges, explodes

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — An Air Force EB-57 jet on its way to mothballs in Arizona plunged 33,000 feet and crashed into a building Monday in an industrial section of the city, causing a fiery explosion.

Pilot Richard Hastings, 33, Willards, Md., and Capt. Charles Tom Sanchez, 32, Saugus, Calif., an electronic warfare officer, parachuted to safety with slight injuries. A woman on the ground was treated for shock.

Former SALT negotiators Paul Warnke, left, Gerard Smith visit before testimony on pact

McGovern calls for strategic arsenal cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee sought ways Monday to overcome possible failings of SALT II treaty with Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., urging annual 10 percent cuts in U.S. and Soviet strategic arsenals.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., urged the United States and Soviet Union to do some way to stabilize their political differences with each other as well.

An additional question, Javits said, was "how to stabilize and make less dangerous the two systems which are dominant in the world today."

Sen. Charles E. Percy, R-Ill., threatened to turn against the pact if reservations were not added to clarify ambiguous points.

The ideas which the senators threw out at a committee hearing on SALT seemed directed at improving the prospects of Senate ratification of the SALT treaty.

McGovern, a liberal critic of the treaty, warned: "I cannot support SALT II as presently constituted without some such accompanying resolution based on what I believe is the emerging consensus of both 'hard liners' and longtime advocates of arms limitation."

He said his proposed resolution would call for a freeze on new missiles and warheads after the treaty is ratified, and then would require U.S. negotiators to seek agreement with the Russians on annual 10 percent reductions.

After three years, McGovern said, U.S. and Soviet leaders should meet to determine if reductions should continue and at what level.

Earlier, the former chief of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency said Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev lied to President Carter during last month's SALT summit about the capabilities of the Kremlin's Backfire bomber.

Fred Ikle said Brezhnev's Vienna statement on the Backfire gave the misleading impression that the Soviet warplane could not bomb the United States.

Ikle did not testify before the panel because of a conflict in his schedule. But he forwarded his prepared testimony to the panel which was obtained by UPI.

Three former arms control negotiators — Paul Warnke, Gerard Smith and U. Alexis Johnson — told the panel the Soviets occasionally engaged in ambiguous actions under SALT I but all questions were eventually resolved satisfactorily.

Idahoans hopeful, await details

Chatham says the impact on Idaho of reduced foreign oil imports, as called for by the president, could be lessened if Idaho receives a larger share of the Bonneville Power Administration's hydroelectric production.

"We produce a lot of the water, so there's no reason we shouldn't be considered for the allocation of that energy."

The state representative says he is drafting "a bill that will give a full tax rebate to anything that will produce energy within the state of Idaho, whether it's alcohol, methane, solar, conversion of a house, or whatever."

Kirk Hall, director of Idaho's Office of Energy, says he is pleased with Carter's speech. "I hope people realize that the purpose of the energy mobilization board is to cut through red tape, and that 'no' is one of the two decisions that could be made." The board should also have the power to recommend legislation to congress, Hall says.

State Sen. Ken Robison, D-Boise, publisher of "The Idaho Citizen," an energy and conservation magazine, calls Carter's speech "very impressive."

"He laid out a strong and a realistic program," Robison says. "No one is saying it's perfect and people may disagree with parts of it.

But we've reached the point where we need to stop debating and quarreling so much. We have to get on with some strong, constructive action."

Robison adds, "I think we all have to recognize this is a tough ballgame, and we may have to make some sacrifices, including some in the environmental area."

Criticism also comes from Robert Carter, an Idaho power Co. senior vice president for finance. He says Carter's speech contained no incentives for domestic energy production.

Rule changes boost profits

Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — In an attempt to head off a strike by gas station operators, the Energy Department has altered its gasoline price controls to give most dealers a 25 percent boost in their profit margin.

The department's regulatory arm also announced Monday a change in allocation rules that would generally increase gas supplies in Northeastern urban areas.

David Bardil, director of the department's Economic Regulatory Administration, said at a news conference that independent gas dealers will be allowed a profit margin of 15.4 cents a gallon starting immediately instead of the current average margin of 13 cents.

Bardil said this "penny or two" price hike at the gas pump would be offset by ending the practices of deferring increases and by improving price control enforcement.

However, spokesmen for independent gas dealers — who own or lease three-quarters of the nation's 175,000 filling stations — said the new profit margin is unsatisfactory, and that dealers in several Northeastern states would close their stations in protest. The dealers had sought rules allowing them a floating 30 percent mark-up rather than a fixed 25 percent boost.

A key feature of the pricing rule would put an end to the practice of allowing retailers to take advantage of current tight market conditions by passing on cost increases incurred in past years.

The new rule will mean that beginning Aug. 1, independent dealers no longer are permitted to "bank" their operating costs and apply them to later prices. In the past, there's been no way to determine exactly how much or how fast dealers have passed through banked costs.

Bardil said the regulatory agency expects to issue new pricing regulations for filling stations owned by oil companies within a few days.

He noted that the 15.4-cent-per-gallon ceiling on dealer profit margins covers such operating expenses as rent, utilities, labor and insurance. All of this must come out of the 15.4 cents — as well as the dealer's profit," he said.

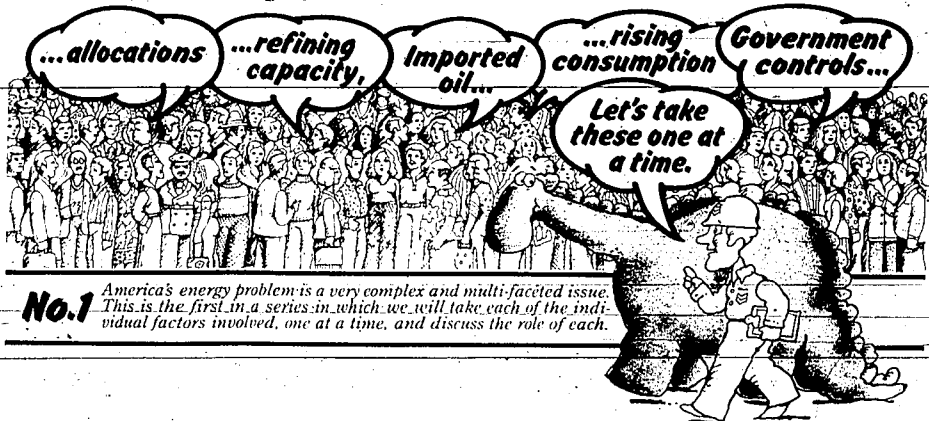

On the matter of allocations, the agency established a rule that prevents new stations from receiving any more than 30,000 gallons a month from their suppliers. This is designed to prevent more high-volume "gas-and-go" stations from springing up while the current gas shortage continues, since new stations draw supplies away from existing outlets.

The new regulations, which take effect Aug. 1, will lighten supplies going to priority users of gasoline, like agriculture and the Defense Department.

Bardil said the new allocation rules also are designed to stop gas supplies from going to "phantom" businesses being supplied by wholesalers called jobbers.

Bardil said allocations for new gas supplies would be based on a new base period of November 1977 to October 1978. He said the agency rejected a request from dealers to give each station the option of receiving supplies based on its 1972 purchases, which would provide a larger allocation.

Defending the allocation system, Bardil said an investigation by agency auditors shows there has been "no undue bias" against any region of the country.

No.1 America's energy problem is a very complex and multi-faceted issue. This is the first in a series in which we will take each of the individual factors involved, one at a time, and discuss the role of each.

Imported oil — part of why we're coming up short.

In 1970, the U.S. imported less than 23% of its oil. Today, we depend on other countries for about 45% of our total supply. This heavy dependence on other countries means that even small interruptions in our imported supply can cause severe problems here at home.

"Sorry, no oil for a while, we're having a revolution."

The unexpected revolt in Iran cut the world's oil supply by about 5 million barrels daily. Almost immediately, a world-wide scramble for the limited supply of oil still available took place. In the months that followed, some oil exporting nations did boost production somewhat, but not enough to off-set the world-wide loss.

"And what about today?"

Though oil is once again coming out of Iran, they are exporting only about 3 million barrels daily, less than two-thirds the amount exported before the revolution. Making the current supply situation even more uncertain is the fact that, except for Saudi Arabia, most of the other OPEC countries are unable or unwilling to increase production to make up for the Iran shortfall.

Events in other countries are not the only reasons why the world is coming up short — and why Americans are experiencing shortages at the pumps. But these events are a significant part of the problem.

Factors like refining capacity, increased demand, government regulations, environmental restrictions, and different qualities of crude oil have all played a role and all will be discussed in future communications.

"... And what about tomorrow?"

The fact is, we are consuming energy at an alarming rate. U.S. oil consumption has jumped by over 16% during the last three years, while U.S. oil production, including Alaska, increased only 3%.

While we cannot control the availability of oil from foreign suppliers, we can and must begin developing more of our own domestic energy resources. We must, at the same time, do everything possible to conserve the energy we have now.

Thank you for listening.

Judges' aid invited

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chief Justice Warren Burger Monday urged the nation's judges to join the energy war by making unnecessary lights be turned out in courthouse buildings and taking other conservation steps.

Some judges and lawyers have complained about high temperatures in courtrooms where air conditioning has been turned down to meet federal guidelines.

Burger, on the heels of President Carter's address to the nation Sunday night, asked them to do all that they can to reduce energy use in courthouses.

"I am very aware of the problems of trying to conduct trials and other proceedings in excessively high temperatures," he noted in a letter to U.S. district and appeals court judges.

Burger said the Supreme Court has recently moved its summer air conditioning temperature to 78 degrees, has employees monitoring energy use and has for some time been cutting off unneeded lights in corridors and offices.

Cutting energy usage may hamper recovery

By United Press International
 Most energy analysts Monday applauded President Carter's decision to put a lid on oil imports but warned that skimping on energy could make it tough for the United States to pull out of a recession.

The oil industry and many energy experts were critical of other aspects of the president's six-point energy independence program, however.

"After telling the nation Sunday night the United States 'will never use more foreign oil than we did in 1977,'" Carter said Monday he is setting an import quota of 8.2 million barrels a day for 1979 — 500,000 barrels less than the 1977 average of 8.7 million barrels a day.

"Limiting oil imports is probably the one real thing the president has the power to accomplish that has some meaning," said Paul Edwards, managing editor of Energy Users News in New York.

Edwards also said Carter had decided to hold imports at 1977 levels, "which happen to be the highest in U.S. history, to give him some elbow room."

Monte Gordon, vice president of Dreyfus Corp. in New York, said "at least Carter has established a small energy program by cutting imports."

But Gordon warned the import quota "means we'll have to fall back heavily on conservation since additional domestic oil production simply isn't there and this will cause us some pain as the economy heads into a recession."

The nagging question is "how will we come out of the recession and start to grow again at historically high rates without increasing our use of energy," he said.

"Limiting oil imports poses some difficulty in terms of our economic recovery."

"Carter's decision to reduce imports puts the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in a beautiful situation," said David Mizrahi, editor of the MidEast Report in New York.

"The OPEC nations can now cut oil production and raise prices which means, in short, they will sell less oil for more money."

A Mobil Corp. spokesman said the Carter plan to finance his $140 billion energy independence program solely with windfall profit taxes from the oil industry would come out of the consumer's pocket.

Both Mobil and Exxon USA called for greater reliance on the private sector rather than government for development of synthetic fuels.

Standard Oil Co. of Indiana said Carter's program is "simply more of the standard misery share-the-shortage concept that we have heard since 1977."

Enforcement deadline set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said Monday he and Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal have been given 30 days to come up with a way to enforce President Carter's strict oil import quotas.

Schlesinger, in a briefing on the details of Carter's sweeping 10-year plan to help achieve energy independence, said details for enforcing the quota system on multinational oil companies still must be worked out.

He conceded it would take "some additional number of public employees" to perform the auditing chores that might be needed to see that Carter's goal of a 4.5 million barrel-a-day import reduction is met.

Carter's objective is to hold imports of oil and finished petroleum products — currently averaging about 8.2 million barrels a day — below the 8.5 million barrel ceiling he pledged at the recent Tokyo economic summit.

The 4.5 million barrel target reduction is a figure derived by subtracting the ceiling from the 1990 projection for imports of about 13 million barrels a day.

After 1980, Carter plans to set his quotas on a year-by-year basis, said Schlesinger.

Carter's authority for the quotas comes from a clause in the 1953 Trade Expansion Act that permits the president to restrict imports if the treasury secretary determines would threaten national security.

Blumenthal on March 14 determined that current oil import levels pose such a threat.

Congressmen at home

Times-News Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — It is hard to learn the mood of the country when you are sitting in Washington, D.C. Most congressmen and senators pay homage to that truth whenever the Congress is in recess, as it was during the July 4th week.

For Northwest lawmakers, staying in touch with one's constituency is a particularly difficult, taxing matter, simply because of the long airplane flight that stands between here and there. Only an Alaskan or Hawaiian senator or congressman has a more difficult time of it.

As the July 4 recess began, news reports indicated this might be a particularly fruitful time to take the pulse of Idaho's voters.

How are Idahoans responding to the gasoline shortage? How do they feel about the SALT agreement? Can Jimmy Carter be re-elected?

Those are questions that might interest a reporter, but Sen. Frank Church is probably a lot more interested in how his re-election campaign is looking, and Rep. Steve Symms is probably a lot more interested in how Church is doing.

Glancing over last week's travel schedules of the state's two congressmen and two senators reminds one that electoral politics is, at bottom, a grind of restaurant luncheon speeches, parades, town meetings and — especially in Idaho — long road trips.

Church's schedule was definitely that of a re-election campaign with visits to Boise, Idaho Falls, St. Anthony, Rexburg, Sugar City, Challis and Ketchum. Church was grand marshal of a Fourth of July parade in Idaho Falls.

Emphasizing his chairmanship of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Church witnessed the signing of a Taiwanese grain purchase agreement in Boise and in a speech to American Field Service students on the importance of international understanding.

If Church's tour looked like a re-election run, Symms' travels looked like the sort of pulse-taking a candidate does before making a race, with trips to Elk City, Burley, Jerome, Pocatello and Idaho Falls, where he also rode in the Fourth of July parade.

Symms criticized the SALT agreement in a speech to the Burley Chamber of Commerce, and he talked about roadblocks to development of geothermal energy in a speech to the Gooding Optimist Club.

Sen. James McClure made a brief appearance in Idaho, chairing a Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee hearing on gasoline in Boise before returning to Washington.

Rep. George Hansen got around to Driggs, Island Park, Pocatello, Idaho Falls, Jerome, Chubbuck and Inkom during the recess. Like Church and Symms, he appeared in the Idaho Falls Fourth of July parade.

Zoning change could open business door

KMVT, Twin Falls' only television station, is seeking a little support for a change of address.

The station, according to manager Douglas Moore, has outgrown its 25-year-old building on Eastland Drive. Its owners want to build a new station and their preferred 12-acre site is on the northern edge of the campus.

Right now that land comes under the jurisdiction of the Twin Falls County Zoning and Planning Commission. The problem is that the land is not zoned for commercial use, the designation under which a television station would fall.

To build the new station, KMVT owners would either have to apply for a costly zoning variance or for city special use R-1 status and request annexation to the city.

Both alternatives would require the support of the CSI Board of Trustees for successful approval. So the KMVT management made a plea to the board during their Monday meeting, asking for their help in the zoning matter and sweetening the request with suggestions of joint programs to benefit students interested in broadcasting.

The CSI board has consistently and successfully opposed previous zoning changes which would have allowed commercial building nearby. But the television station owners claim theirs is a different proposition.

No tower would be needed at the new site because a microwave dish is used to beam its signal to a broadcasting tower on Jerome Butte. Traffic would be minimal, says KMVT management, especially since the companion radio station KLIX would not be housed in the new building. The building itself would be kept to one level, set back from the road on slightly sloping land.

The proposed television station probably could be tastefully executed, with attractive landscaping and minimum use of lighting and signs. So the station itself is not a problem.

As CSI Board Chairman Leroy Craig pointed out, the real problem is establishing a precedence for commercial zoning in the area. Once the station is built, it would be increasingly difficult to rebuff the many requests for less unobtrusive businesses wanting to build in the area.

Right now the land surrounding the attractive CSI campus has been developed into clean, pleasant residential neighborhoods. A CSI board decision to support the television station's change of zoning request could endanger one of the city's finer housing areas and slice into the peaceful atmosphere of the campus.

Detroit's devastation

Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — One of the problems in Detroit, you see, is that half the hospitals have been wiped out. Even if vehicles were available to transport the hideously buried victims through the rubble streets, there would be few hospital beds to take them to. A one-megaton nuclear bomb has left the city a shambles.

That is part of a scenario put forward last month by the Office of Technology Assessment in its bone-chilling book, "The Effects of Nuclear War." I am minded to run through the Senate office buildings, grabbing senators by their lapels and crying, "Read! Read! Read!" The great debate on an arms limitation treaty has begun, but the debate so far is bloodless; it is a seminar of technocrats, a shuffling of scholarly papers — senators are talking in numbers of missiles; they might better be talking in numbers of dead.

Let us talk about Detroit. Calmly, methodically, the authors of the OTA report conduct us through their chamber of horrors. They imagine that a nuclear war has begun, that the Soviet Union has launched a one-megaton missile upon Detroit, and that simultaneously we have hurled an identical weapon upon Leningrad. The two cities are roughly of a size. Both are major transportation and industrial centers. In each of these metropolitan areas four million human beings go about their daily lives.

Let us talk about this one missile only, and let us make certain assumptions. The bomb lands squarely in the middle of the squarely in the middle of the cloverleaf intersection of the Edsel Ford Freeway and the John C. Lodge Freeway in downtown Detroit. It is high noon on a weekday. The campus of Wayne State University is crowded with students. Many persons are enjoying a stroll in LaSalle Garden Park. At Ford Hospital and Kleber Hospital, patients are having their midday meals.

The authors describe their report as a "tutorial," they will tutor us in what happens. First, as to the human beings: Such a blast, under such conditions, would "kill" 350,000 persons instantly. The dead would be the lucky ones. The explosion would seriously injure another 500,000 to 715,000 persons. The injuries would be horrible — third-degree burns, mangled limbs, crushed bones. The human body is a tough work of God, but it was not made to withstand winds of up to 470 miles an hour.

The injured would present a medical task of incredible magnitude. The affected area has 63 hospitals with 18,000 beds. In the split-second of the blast, 55 percent of the beds would be destroyed. Another 15 percent would be severely damaged. Perhaps 5,400 usable beds might remain. Half a million victims cry out for help. Obviously, hospital facilities "are incapable of providing significant medical assistance." In any event, "Transport of injured out of the area will be severely hampered by debris clogging the streets."

Let us talk about the damage to property. Imagine a circle 1.2 miles in diameter. Within this circle "nothing recognizable remains." Tiger Stadium is gone. The downtown hospitals have ceased to exist. The buildings of Wayne State have been blown to bits. Enlarge the diameter to 3.4 miles. This is the closest range in which any significant structures will remain standing.

Electric power will be lost throughout the area, even though the main power plants near Grosse Pointe Park and Zug Island should suffer only superficial damage. Hundreds of utility poles and transformers will have been destroyed. Linemen from other areas must be rushed in to make repairs. Without electricity, nothing works.

It is a great consolation, is it not, to reflect that we would have imposed even greater death and destruction upon Leningrad? There the population density is higher. A one-megaton air burst would kill perhaps 890,000 persons and injure another 1,260,000. How gratifying is that prospect! Let us rub our hands; let us contemplate the glorious victory that is ours.

For a variety of reasons I believe the pending arms limitation treaty is a bad piece of business. The criticisms of such senators as Baker of Tennessee and Jackson of Washington make sense to me. I have never gone wrong trusting the judgment of Admiral Tom Moore. But I would separate the cause of strategic arms limitation from this particular treaty. As we love our cities, as the Russians love theirs, we must keep striving to avoid the realities that lie beneath the scholarly papers, beyond the cool debate.

Church's past stands on defense 'most liberal'

Editor Times-News:

Rep. Senator Frank Church's backing these TV spots produced by his political antagonists and labeling them a "big lie" because of poor technicalities demands further investigation. (Journal 7-16-79) I did not see the spots but being a student of Church's record for many years, I suggest he's hung his coat in the most liberal circles. Sometimes he's voted conservative when his vote didn't matter, but when the chips were down he backed the radical liberals who even solicited joint campaign funds for he and George McGovern nationwide.

As to his defense record, he certainly didn't pull for our boys in Vietnam, or for the free Chinese, or for responsible free governments in Africa and the Middle East. In the big picture these all have had a decisive bearing on our national defense and the free world economy.

His attack on the CIA and its following emasculation effectively lost Iran and its resources crucial to the military posture of the free world. Turkey and Saudi Arabia are now flanked by Marxist intrigue. Church ignored not only the folks at home but the great mass of seasoned military and Latin opinion that our Canal in Panama is vital to our Navy's mobility and the economy.

On SALT II he's telling us the same bunk — that the Treaty's been worked out by the past three administrations. Rather, it's the brain child of the New Worlders in Foggy Bottoms, and its Church's responsibility to pass independent judgment on it, not just be Jimmy Carter's squire. SALT II assures the Soviet's a massive advantage in missile payload. In Nuclear War the first few hours are decisive, and we must demand equality in this instant. Ifrepower — something the Soviets understand and have sought to block us from — in this Treaty... Our superiority in the past has prevented nuclear war, and having to accept the first blow, we must demand at least equality in deployed missile payload.

Symms has more going for him than any contender, but many good men have fallen to Church's charisma and his well-oiled blitz. I am surprised that Church would now take the offensive when he has so little to stand on.

Mexico oil company could serve Southwest

By BRUCE BABBITT
Special to The Los Angeles Times

The high-stakes game being played out between Mexico City and Washington for purchase of Mexican gas has overshadowed and obscured the local energy needs of the four states bordering Mexico — California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas. Our geographic proximity to Mexico provides a ready market for a lot more than Mexican natural gas. The entire border area provides a unique market for Mexico to expand the scale of its energy products into the United States.

The obvious example is gasoline and diesel fuel. During May, exasperated San Diego drivers, willing to pay almost any price, waited in long gas-station lines. At the same time, just across the border in Tijuana, Pemex stations were pumping Mexican gasoline at 48 cents per gallon.

During that same month of May, southern Arizona residents were struggling to obtain dwindling supplies of diesel fuel costing more than 70 cents per gallon. A few miles south in Sonora, Mexican diesel was readily available at 18 cents per gallon.

Simple economics would dictate that the sellers and buyers ought to get together, despite the existence of an international boundary. Along the border, many Americans are hoping for something of a historical reversal: the "invasion" of American markets by a Mexican oil company.

The entry of Pemex into the United States would certainly seem to square with Mexico's economic self-interest. President Jose Lopez Portillo has repeatedly stated that Mexico does not intend to imitate Saudi Arabia and other Arab countries by exporting enormous quantities of crude oil in the traditional pattern of underdeveloped regions.

Rather, the Mexican government seems to envision the creation of an indigenous petrochemical industry to provide more jobs for Mexicans and to stimulate industrial development within Mexico.

One obvious way to develop the desired petrochemical industrial base would be for Pemex to expand its market area by extending its retail distribution system across the border into the Southwest.

The sight of a green Pemex logo at neighborhood gas stations in Los Angeles, or San Antonio, Texas, might seem strange at first, but the concept is no different from Exxon stations in England and France. And, for that matter, no different from the British and Dutch-owned Shell stations in the United States.

Why hasn't Pemex come into U.S. markets? Probably because Mexico, like most developing nations, adhered to a highly protectionist policy of discouraging imports. The lack of import competition within the economy of protectionist countries, traditionally results in weak, undisciplined export programs, and Mexico is no exception. However, Mexico is now discussing entry into the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which governs trade among developed nations. This is a clear signal that Mexico is ready to compete both in its internal markets and by developing an aggressive export policy. A Mexican "invasion" of our retail energy markets would signify that Mexico has come of age as an industrial nation capable of competing in world markets.

Slain Mafia chieftain Galante buried

Sybil Carter defends Billy's actions

NEW YORK (UPI) — Billy Carter had to make his controversial personal appearances and endorse products to support his family because his bid to buy the family peanut business was rejected, his wife said in an article published Monday.

Sybil Carter, in an interview in Ladies' Home Journal, said accusations that her husband was trying to capitalize on the Carter presidency were not true — "He did these things to make a living."

Mrs. Carter also said that her husband's decision to seek help for alcoholism — "was his alone" — with no pressure from the White House.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Slain Mafia chieftain Carmine "Lilo" Galante, denied a funeral mass by the Catholic Church, was buried Monday in a five-minute ceremony.

About 50 mourners, each clutching a dark red rose, stood in the drizzle on a hot, muggy morning as Galante's gold-painted casket was positioned over a family plot in St. John's Cemetery in Queens.

Galante, 69, and two other men were shot dead last Thursday by three gunmen in a Brooklyn restaurant. He was denied a funeral mass by the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York because of "the scandal that would ensue," the church said.

The Rev. Felician Napoli, who led a 15-minute blessing for Galante on Sunday, presided over a brief prayer-reading for the slain gangster Monday.

Six uniformed police officers kept reporters and the curious away.

"Bless this grave and send your angel to watch over it. Forget the sins of our brother. Welcome him into your presence and with your saints. Let him rejoice in you forever," Napoli read from a prayer book.

One by one, the mourners, led by Galante's relatives, dropped their roses on top of the casket.

Several women, including Galante's daughter, Nina, who had often served as his chauffeur, wept openly. Nina Galante was held by an escort who guided her to a nearby limousine.

Most of the men, many wearing dark glasses, remained composed.

Across a small road running near Galante's grave, about two dozen reporters and photographers watched the service. Two television camera crews that tried to film the service from behind lambskins were ordered to leave by a priest.

Expended mental effort requires longer period of sleep to make up, specialist confirms Claim is that the person who does brain work for a living needs more sleep than the person who does muscle work. One Dr. Brian Weiss, a specialist in sleep disorders, contends. Physical energies, says he, can be restored in about four hours while energies expended in mental effort need about eight hours of sleep to be replenished. Maybe so. Am acquainted with several mental types who insist it's true. Still, Thomas A. Edison was a brain worker, most understatedly, and it's widely known that he got by on intermittent catnaps with hardly any prolonged sleep at all.

NO NITROGEN
Q. How come such mammals as whales and porpoises can dive so deeply without getting the bends?
A. Their flexible rib cages collapse completely. That forces all the air out of their lungs. So the nitrogen in that expelled air doesn't get into the bloodstream.

Q. What did gasoline cost per gallon back around the time of the attack on Pearl Harbor?
A. A sigh, 19.2 cents.

Q. What town in this country has the lowest zip code? And the highest?
A. Lowest is Adjuntas, Puerto Rico, 00601. Highest, Wrangell, Alaska, 99229.

Thrift stores offer unbeatable bargains

Secondhand stores in Twin Falls thriving

TWIN FALLS — With today's rising prices, many parents may be turning to thrift stores or second-hand shops for bargains in children's clothing.

Second-hand shops in Twin Falls are doing a thriving business, and not all buyers, according to them, are the very poor. The Salvation Army, Kay's Closet and the Episcopal Church Thrift Shop are three used clothing stores in Twin Falls who are doing a fairly brisk business in children's clothing.

The Salvation Army has long been known as the place to go for used items, but in Twin Falls they specialize in second-hand clothing. "We sell more children's clothing than anything else," Mrs. Adelina Solis, saleswoman, said. Mrs. Solis should know. She has been behind the counter at the Twin Falls Salvation Army for more than 14 years. "They need someone here who knows what it's like to be poor and understands, she said. I was raised in poverty, and you just don't understand unless you know what it's all about."

Small children's and infants clothes go the fastest, according to Mrs. Solis, who noted while "they say there are less children being born, I don't see it. More children come in here every day." Prices on children's clothing range from 35 to 50 cents for a pair of pants, and from 70 cents to $1 for a baby's jacket. A few items, undershirts, nightclothes and small blouses, may be sold for 10 or 15 cents. Quite a bargain when compared to ever-rising retail prices parents find themselves paying.

A random sampling of area retail stores showed a pair of pants for $19 for a medium-sized boy's undershirt, and from $3.99 to $7 for a toddler's jacket. Other items, especially for children in the size 7 to 14 range, are higher. Pants for a growing 8-year-old boy can run $8 to $10 or more for the newer styles. The same size pants at the Salvation Army are around $1.

Besides local donations, a few retail stores in town donate returned items and seconds to the Salvation Army, said Mrs. Solis. These are mixed in with the other clothing on the racks, for a lucky shopper to find a bargain.

But the majority of the clothing is still brought in by families who are clearing out their wardrobes.

Mrs. Solis notes, however, that "this year is different. Not as much was brought in. Maybe the way things are getting, people are holding on to what they have."

For those who wish to purchase higher quality second-hand clothing, Kay's Closet on Blue Lakes offers an alternative. And Pat Menck, owner, isn't having any trouble filling her shop.

"I have no shortage of clothing, except possibly in a few children's items," she said. "Children's clothes just plain sell good."

Mrs. Menck takes clothing on consignment, selling the item for the "donor" and then giving him 50 percent of the sale.

"Ladies clothing sells the best in my shop, then children's," she said. School clothes do very well in the fall, then smaller children's clothing does the best for much of the year. "Little girls' long dresses are her best selling item. She said she can hardly keep them in her shop."

A full selection of good quality children's items, from infants through grade school, are available at prices higher than the Salvation Army but considerably lower than retail. Boys and girls pants are $1.50 to $3 a pair, and the fancy long dresses for girls go for $2.50 to $4.50. Retail stores also bring clothing to her, and she gives them the same deal as everyone else, 50 percent.

"People can get good stuff here," she said, and others can sell an article and get something back.

Local churches in town also have second-hand clothing available, and a few, including the Episcopal church on Blue Lakes, run their own thrift shop.

Open to the public three days a week, the Thrift Shop is staffed by volunteers and receives its clothing from church members. Prices are lower than the Salvation Army, with items for children ticketed at a nickel or a dime.

Children's items are available in the shop, according to Father Robert

Shoppers' delight

Sometimes thrift store shopping is like a treasure hunt, with the thrill of a true "find" lurking enough to keep a bargain hunter wading through tons of materials.

E. Allen, rector of the Parish of the Ascension, and the amount of clothing received hasn't changed much since the shop was opened. He added they had no problem "getting rid of the stuff. Children's items sell very well." The shop is open Tuesdays all day and Wednesdays and Saturdays in the mornings. It is staffed by volunteers. Father Allen noted the church is "not in this to make money. What we do make is used for special people projects of the church. It's amazing how nickels and dimes add up."

Before you start second-hand shopping, here are a few tips:

to discover a gem of a buy. Debra Taylor of Twin Falls checks the clothing racks at the Salvation Army for just such a victory over the money squeeze

- Carry cash. Most shops aren't set up for credit cards.
- Watch for ripped zippers or missing buttons. It may not be such a bargain as it appears if you have to make extensive repairs.
- Have your child try something on if in doubt. You may not be able to as she holds her 2-year-old daughter Tanya. Her sons, 1-year-old Tim, who's perched in the cart, and Cory, 6, observe their mother's shopping skills.

- Above all, approach it with a feeling of adventure. Your outlook should not be "If you'll find something, but what you'll find. Chances are, you'll spend far less than you would "uptown," and you should come home with at least one good bargain.

40 area students, faculty to attend business seminar in Boise

MAGIC VALLEY — Three faculty members and 37 area high school students will travel to Boise this month to learn more about American business.

They will join other students and teachers from around the state for Business Week 1979, a week-long seminar organized by the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry and held at Boise State University. A total of 250 students will attend.

Designed to promote the free enterprise system, the seminar will feature presentations by business leaders on many of that system's fundamentals, including the supply and demand concept, government regulation, and the stock market. The students, all of whom will be juniors or seniors in the fall, will operate mock companies, electing their own boards of directors.

Except for transportation costs, participants' expenses will be paid by contributions from small and large businesses across the state, according to James Fields, IACI general counselor. Each business contributed at least $95, the estimated cost per student, he said.

There will be two sessions, July 15-20 and July 22-27. This is the second year the IACI has sponsored the seminar. Last year's single session attracted 128 students.

"I think business has gotten a lot of slander in the past few years, and this is probably their way of getting the cards back on the table properly," said Gene Harris, a Twin Falls High School counselor who will be attending the seminar.

"It seems to me that Business Week is to business what Boys and Girls State are to government," he added.

Harris said the participants will keep a hectic schedule. Activities, including a softball tournament for exercise, will run from 7 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. every day. The week will conclude Friday afternoon with a session on career planning.

"I think we'll probably do everything but sleep," he said.

Harris, along with Carey business education teacher Lana Toolson and Flier history teacher Randal Wilson, will attend classes given by Dr. Robert Behling, a BSU associate professor of computer sciences. The classes, entitled, "Business and the U.S. Economy," will provide the faculty members with two graduate credits.

Students attending from Twin Falls High School are Dan Boyle, Michelle Duty, Linda Myrland, Debra Orr, David Routh, Julie Stanley, and Tara Trappen.

From Flier: Bryce Gines and Keith Jones.

From Kimberly: Mayrene Langford and Karen Nobles.

From Buhl: Rita Bennett, Tim Hamilton, and Kathy Humphries.

From Jerome: Hosea Bradbury and Scott Welge.

From Gooding: Kathy Looper, Janie Platt, and Fred Tolt.

From Minico: High School at Rupert: Susan Bowman, Janice Gilnes, Lori Glorfield, Suzanne

Green, Robert Griffin, Jana Jones, Doug Jones, Denise Kechter, Shelley Kechter, Bart Patterson, and Karen Peavey.

From Burley High School: Adrian Bench, Scott Moyes, Helena Rodriguez, Pam Saxton, and Marlene Walther.

The IACI, a private, non-profit corporation formed four years ago when the state Chamber of Commerce office merged with several trade associations, is funded by dues from its 400 members around the state.

"We're activists in business lobbying," said Fields.

Boy scout camp gaining popularity this summer

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Snake River Council Boy Scout officials are learning the meaning of their own slogan "Be prepared" this summer.

Overwhelmed by a 55 percent increase in boys going to Boy Scout summer camp, scoutmasters are scrambling for enough tents, food and equipment for their campers.

"We have you ever tried to serve over 200 Boy Scouts, all eating hot-cakes at the same time?" said Del Hanks, scout executive. "It's some trick."

Hanks reported that 2,600 scouts have registered for Camp Bradley's 35 programs, an increase of 931 youths over last summer. He speculates that the increase may be due to an overall rise in scouting, but the present gasoline shortage may be having an effect.

"My first feeling is that because everything is up, people are intending to stay home this year, fix up the yard and send their boys to camp," Hanks said. "People are starting to know the quality of our program up there. I don't think another state can offer what we can."

In addition, the traditional summer camp, (in which swimming, hiking, archery, arts and crafts are offered) the Boy Scouts offer specialized camps in conservation, leadership, backpacking, mountaineering and river running. The cost for a one-week excursion varies from $40 for the conservation camp to $45 for the traditional camp to $100 for the river running trip.

With another $20 or $30 for transportation and additional equipment, "you can send your boy to camp for $50-$75," said Ralph Lowe, varsity scout leader of troop 159. "When you buy gas for 80 cents a gallon, $50-$75 doesn't go very far. Parents feel they can send their boys to camp as opposed to taking a nice trip somewhere."

Other area camps have noticed an increase in enrollment, though none as dramatic as the Boy Scouts. Blaine Linford, district supervisor, cooperative extension service, estimates a 25 percent increase in attendance at the 4th camp north of Ketchum. Last summer 800 youths aged 9 to 19 hiked, swam, sang, and played games at the camp. This year as many as 1,000 may go.

Attendance at the Camp Fire Girls Camp Tunkani, located near Magic Mountain, is not expected to increase, according to secretary MaryLou Keenan. About 250 boys and girls attended camp last year.

Ms. Keenan said a raise in rates and little publicity may have held the attendance down. Rates vary among the camp's programs; a five-day session, July 16-21, costs $38 for youths with two or more family members attending and $42 for individuals.

The YFCA camp at Alturas Lake also expects no increase. YFCA Executive Director Chuck Upton said about 70 youths aged 8-13 have registered for a one-week excursion. Cost is $51 for "Y" members, $61 for non-members.

Camps sponsored by area churches and the Salvation Army have maintained their popularity from last summer with slight increases. Church representatives said they thought their families were still intending to take vacations this summer although they might be sticking closer to home than usual.

Del Hanks noted that many families are apparently making a family excursion out of the trip to drop off their boys at Camp Bradley, located north of Stanley. Hanks said the Boy Scouts offered to provide a bus but most parents preferred to drive the 180 miles to the camp for their own enjoyment.

Bibb-Baughman

TWIN FALLS — Gayla M. Bibb, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Robert J. Bibb of Twin Falls, became the bride of Rev. Terry R. Baughman May 26 at the United Pentecostal Church in Rogers, Ark.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A.J. Baughman of Fayetteville, Ark.

Jolene Bibb was maid of honor for her sister, with Carolyn-Baughman, Tamra-Bibb, and Sharon-Deck as bridesmaids.

Rev. Gary Harding was best man. Groomsman included Rev. Arnold-Baughman, Rev. Russell Hamby and Robert D. Bibb. Ushers were Alvin Crosson, Dale Baughman, Don Crosson and Troy Crosson.

Following a wedding trip to Eureka Springs and Branson, Mo., the couple is traveling as an evangelistic team for the United Pentecostal Church.

Fuchs named Gem family of year

TWIN FALLS — Richard and Mary Lou Fuchs, parents of 11 children, were chosen Idaho's Family of the Year at the Knights of Columbus state convention recently in Pocatello.

The Fuchs family are members of St. Edward's Catholic Church. Fuchs has been a Knight of Columbus for 29 years and is a past grand knight of Twin Falls Council No. 1416. A pharmacist, he also serves on St. Edward's parish council.

Mrs. Fuchs, a charter member of the state's only Knight's Wives, Auxiliary, is an officer in the Council of Catholic Women and helps with many church and school activities.

According to Arlene Schmidt, local church member, the major factor in their selection is that the couple has learned "to make their way through life a bit more slowly."

"They take time to stop for a moment, to be genuinely interested in others, to listen to their children, to be aware of another person's likes, aspirations, difficulties and to offer their love, support and help," she said.

Their children include Marilyn, who is married and lives in Boise; Ed, studying pharmacy at Idaho State University; Cathy, studying civil engineering at the University of Idaho; Wayne, who plans on attending CSI this fall to study accounting and law enforcement; Dan, a senior at Twin Falls High School; Karen and Kristen, who attend Robert Stuart Junior High; Ken, Mike and Doug, students at Harrison Elementary school and Laurie, 10 months.

Dear Abby

Lawyers not always 'he'

© The Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I note that you frequently advise readers with legal problems to "consult a lawyer, and pay him what he knows."

That's excellent advice. But today, when approximately 25 percent of the graduating classes of most law schools are women, your readers could wind up paying a lawyer for what SHE knows. And it would still be a good investment.

MS. PERLMAN, ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR MS.: Thanks for keeping me on my toes. Mandy Stellman, a lady lawyer and vocal female in Milwaukee, has been chastising me for years for referring to lawyers as "him." Sorry. Old habits die hard. But I'm learning.

DEAR ABBY: A reader asked why so many children from "better" homes who have never known poverty or deprivation have turned to crime and violence.

By way of explanation, you quoted PARENTS magazine: "A peek inside the middle-class home will reveal a child who lives with two adults — but has no real parents." As a veterinarian, I have noted a similarity between the behavior of pet dogs left unattended all day long while the family is at work or at school, and the behavior of children who also, unfortunately, receive little attention or love because so-called parents are too preoccupied to spend time with their children.

Dogs become destructive and chew furniture, shoes, pillows and the like in an effort to get attention. You will find that children also become destructive, vandalizing property and injuring people in an effort to secure the attention that they, as individuals, desire and need. Thirty years of teaching experience has taught me that the child without love in the home is the problem-individual in the classroom and on the street.

DAVID C. TUDOR, V.M.D.
DEAR DR. TUDOR: Well said.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "MR. Z IN LAGUNA": One of the greatest virtues is "forgiveness." Best described: Forgiveness is the fragrance of a violet on the heel of the one who crushed it.

Are you the lonely face in the crowd? Friends make you a winner, and Abby tells you how to win them in her booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (25 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Workshop in writing

BURLEY — For a $10 enrollment fee, teachers can spend three days learning how to better teach their students how to write.

"Teaching Composition" is the title of the workshop, today through Thursday, at Burley Junior High School. Sponsored by Idaho State University's Office of Continuing Education, the sessions carry one graduate level credit.

Participants will write and polish two or more writing assignments in addition to studying writing, research, and editing techniques. They will also build programs to improve the writing skills of their students. Some learning will be in small groups.

Results of the Idaho Proficiency Test, administered to 70 percent of the state's ninth graders in April, showed writing skills to be the students' weak point. Only 66.8 percent of the pupils passed the writing section of the test.

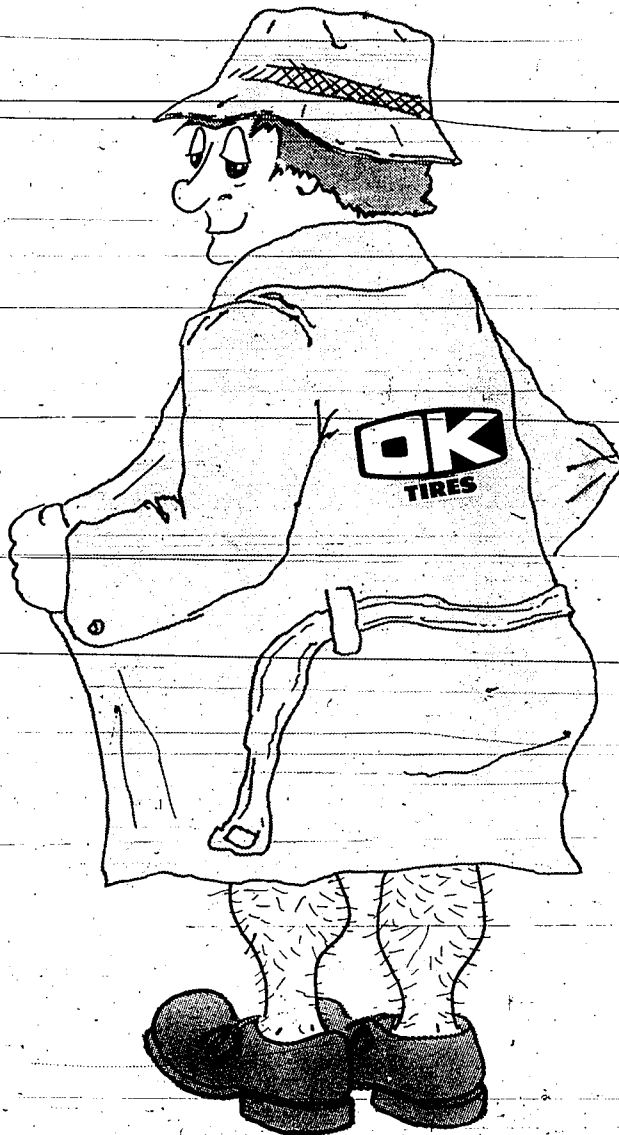

Drick Zirinsky, language arts consultant for the state Department of Education, will lead the workshops. She holds a doctorate in English education from the University of North Carolina and has served as national director of writing workshops for the National Council of Teachers of English. Marge Stotten is the local coordinator.

Lukewarm reception for energy plan

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market gave President Carter's $140 billion energy program a lukewarm reception Monday, with prices posting a small gain in the slowest trading in six weeks.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 3.33 points Friday, rebounded 1.37 points to 834.90. The closely watched average had fallen 19.46 points the previous four sessions.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.26 to 58.43 and the price of a share added 13 cents. Advances topped declines, 804 to 593, among the 1,852 issues traded at 4 p.m. EDT.

"I think he's at least gotten started on the right track, but the market just doesn't know what to think right now," said Monte Gordon, Dreyfus Corp.'s vice president of the market's lackluster reception to Carter's plan.

Carter spoke Monday in Kansas City and Detroit where he detailed the 10-year program designed to reduce oil imports by 4.5 million barrels a day in the future. He set a quota of 8.2 million barrels per day this year, about 500,000 barrels less than normal.

Much of this complex matter must be approved by Congress and anything can happen there. That was one reason investors stayed on the sidelines.

Also, some traders were disturbed by the Federal Reserve's report late Friday—that industrial production declined by 0.3 percent in June after rising 1.0 percent in May.

The Big Board volume of 26,620,000 shares, down from the 33,080,000 traded Friday, was the slowest turnover since 24,038,000 shares changed hands June 4.

Composite volume of NYSE issues traded on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 33,215,548 shares, compared with 31,815,548 Friday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 1.09 to 197.18 and the price of a share added 9 cents. The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ OTC index gained 0.37 to 138.99.

Dolphin deaths showing decline

Is it true that the fish used for "solid white" tuna are caught with hooks, without danger to dolphins? Also, how about the mercury content in tuna these days? — Kimberly reader.

Yes, you can rest assured that not one dolphin died in the catch your grocer's shelves with solid white tuna. The type of tuna used, usually albacore, does not swim beneath schools of dolphin, as some other species do.

At least 15,000 dolphins drowned last year after getting tangled in tuna nets. The death rate is down from previous years, however, since enforcement of the Marine Mammal Protection Act required tuna firms to redesign their nets. Some environmental groups, calling for a nationwide boycott of all but solid white tuna, say the modifications are not enough.

As for mercury, the Food and Drug Administration has just doubled its maximum allowable mercury content for all fish and shellfish sold by companies involved in interstate commerce, which covers all tuna sold in Idaho, of course. Effective Jan. 1, the maximum rose from 5 parts per million to one part per million. For a detailed explanation, go to the Twin Falls Public Library and look on page 3990 of the Jan. 19 Federal Register (Vol. 44, #14).

"We don't have the concern we had at one time," says Dr. Kirk Biddle, FDA's heavy metal section chief and biologist in the Contaminants and Natural Toxicants Evaluation Branch of the Division of Toxicology, admits one big reason for the re-evaluation was a lawsuit brought against the FDA by a group of seafood companies. But he is quick to add that it was newer research data, available after the suit was filed, that convinced the FDA that the old level may have been too low. He doesn't think the level should go any higher than one part per million. The seafood companies do.

A compliance arm of the FDA regularly samples seafood and would have the authority to seize or recall a batch of high-mercury tuna.

The mercury scare of the early '70s began with worldwide publicity of the Minamata Bay tragedy, in Japan. Thousands of people living near the bay or near the Agano River were stricken with loss of one or more of their senses, then tremors, loss of coordination, and continued, irreversible deterioration of the nervous system. Mercury also travels easily through the placenta, so birth defects and infant death were common. Scientific studies conclusively linked the disorders with high concentrations of methylmercuric chloride in seafood. Nearby chemical manufacturing plants had been pouring the compound into the bay and river for years. In 1972 a similar outbreak in Iraq was traced to the mercury in a popular grain fungicide.

According to a recent FDA estimate, the average daily intake of mercury in this country is 2.4 micrograms per person. The recommended maximum allowable intake set by the World Health Organization is 300 micrograms per week, so at least we are still well within that limit.

After seeing a TV commercial last fall, I sent away for a two-record Elvis Christmas Album, for $7.99. The commercial said it wasn't sold in any stores. In December I did receive two records, a week apart. The trouble is, they were two copies of the same record. And instead of the album advertised, it was one I had already. To make matters worse, I later saw the same one for sale at Sears for only $2.49. I have written the company several times with no response. I have left both records in their wrappers so that I can send them back as soon as they send me the refund I deserve. — Priscilla Fife, Twin Falls.

A form letter we received after writing to the company, Green Valley Record Store, Inc., of Nashville, talked about a delay in shipping and was totally irrelevant to your problem. The telephone sales at Sears for only $2.49. I have written the company several times with no response. I have left both records in their wrappers so that I can send them back as soon as they send me the refund I deserve. — Priscilla Fife, Twin Falls.

NOTE: Our volume of inquiries is more than we can handle. From now on, where money is at stake, the amount must be $10 or more for Action Line to investigate. However, we will still consider other questions. And all inquiries sent in before May 1, the date we started rejecting some, will still be answered. If you say you don't want your name printed, it won't be, but we do need to know it here.

Idaho crops developing ahead of '78

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho crop development is running ahead of last year's pace as generally warmer temperatures and above-normal rainfall in the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said today.

But with the advent of warmer temperatures, irrigation water usage has increased. Summer precipitation is below normal and water storage supplies are expected to be adequate to meet the 1979 demand, the service said.

The winter wheat crop is forecast at 37.4 million bushels, down 15 percent from last year but about the same as last month. A decrease from 1978 in yield per acre — 54 to 43 bushels — offset a hike in harvested acreage from 815,000 to 870,000.

Spring wheat production — at 34.1 million bushels — is expected to be 11 percent above last year. The prospective yield of 55 bushels is nine bushels less than last year, but the 25 percent increase in acreage, the service said, far exceeds the impact of the lower yield.

Barley production is forecast at 43.4 million bushels, down 22 percent from last year. And oats, mixed grain, and corn are expected to drop because of lower yields per acre and fewer acres.

Heating oil stocks climb

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oil companies are stockpiling home heating oil fast enough to meet an administration goal to insure that no American homes will go cold this winter. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger says.

Schlesinger also said gasoline supplies this month will exceed May and June levels and be close to normal.

He said crude oil imports have risen to 6.4 million barrels a day for the past five weeks, "confirming our judgment that imports had bottomed out in the month of May when they were below 6 million barrels a day."

Schlesinger said refineries were currently operating at 90 percent capacity, the highest rate so far this year and a big improvement over 83 percent last month.

The refineries are pumping out home heating oil at a rate "more than adequate" to meet the administration's October target of a 240-million-barrel winter reserve of the fuel, he said.

Slight rise seen in building totals

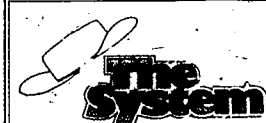

NEW YORK — Contract value of new construction in the United States in the year is forecast at $164 billion, a slight increase over last year.

McGraw-Hill Systems Information Co., in its update of the Dodge-Sweet's Construction Outlook, said that while the physical volume of construction will be about 5 percent under the 1978 peak, inflation will push the dollar value about 4 percent over last year's level.

With the construction cycle declining, there will be less housing and, more non-residential building as the latter segment of the cycle trails housing.

Housing dwelling units are expected to be down 12 percent to 1.72 million with a contract value of $71.8 billion, down 4 percent. Non-residential building will gain 3 percent with contract value up 10 percent to $48.6 billion for the year.

KMVT proposes station near CSI campus

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — KMVT television station has asked the Board of Trustees of the College of Southern Idaho to support the construction of a new studio adjacent to the CSI campus.

Station manager Douglas Moore attended the board's monthly meeting Monday to argue his case, presenting an architectural drawing of the proposed building and suggesting future joint programs to benefit students interested in broadcasting. He said the station is considering the purchase of 12 acres of land north of the college.

"To be honest, you people will be the deciding factor," said Moore. "I've had your support. I believe the city will give us the zoning change we need."

The board promised to look at the site and consider the matter. Dr. James Taylor previously had discussed the plan with the board and informed the station that the board members did not favor the project.

Although the college administration has no official say over what is built on land surrounding the campus, the board has traditionally opposed zoning changes which would allow commercial enterprises nearby. Taylor pointed out at the meeting that the college has been successful every time it has opposed such a change.

The lot, presently owned by Sierra Life Insurance Co. President Frederick Frazier, is bordered by College Drive on the south and Perrine Coulee to the east. The new station would stand between the CSI Expo Center and the Norman Herrett Museum, now under construction.

Moore said the proposed building would house only the television station staff and equipment, not KLIK radio as well. Both stations now share the same building at Eastland Drive and Elizabeth Boulevard. No tower would be necessary at the new site, Moore said, because the station uses a microwave dish to beam its signal to its broadcasting tower on Jerome Butte.

Proximity to the college would also mean the station could give live coverage to more CSI sports events, Moore said.

"I think there are a lot of good, positive things that KMVT can bring to the campus," he said.

The station's staff has been cramped for years in its current 25-year-old headquarters, said Moore. The City Council recently granted KMVT a zone change from R-2 (residential) to R-4, which would allow remodeling. But station officials now feel remodeling would still not solve the space problem, he said. Moore said he has to let Frazier know shortly whether the station will buy the property. To build, the station would have to either apply for a county zoning variance or apply again for city special use R-4 status and request annexation to the city at the same time, he said.

Duplexes and fourplexes are also allowed in R-4 zones, and board chairman Leroy Crowl said he is concerned that a zoning variance made for KMVT would set a precedent for concentrated growth around the campus.

"We are very careful about the kind of thing we allow around the campus," said Diane Ronayne, a member of the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission.

Ms. Ronayne confirmed the commission would listen carefully to the wishes of CSI officials before making any decision that would allow or promote growth near the campus.

"If we don't get their (the CSI board's) okay, we can't go any further," said Moore. "It would be a waste of time."

Shooting suspect in court

TWIN FALLS — Mahmoudshawk Yousef Rasheed was denied bond Monday at his arraignment in 5th District Court on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the shooting death Saturday of Shawki Shukul Ali.

Magistrate Judge R. Michael Rasmussen refused bond for Rasheed, and no date was set for a preliminary hearing. A preliminary hearing must be held within 10 days.

Rasheed is being held in the county jail, and law enforcement authorities fear Rasheed may be in danger of possible reprisals for his alleged actions Saturday.

"We're aware of the possibility" of reprisals, Sheriff Jim Munn said, refusing to say whether any special security precautions have been initiated at the jail.

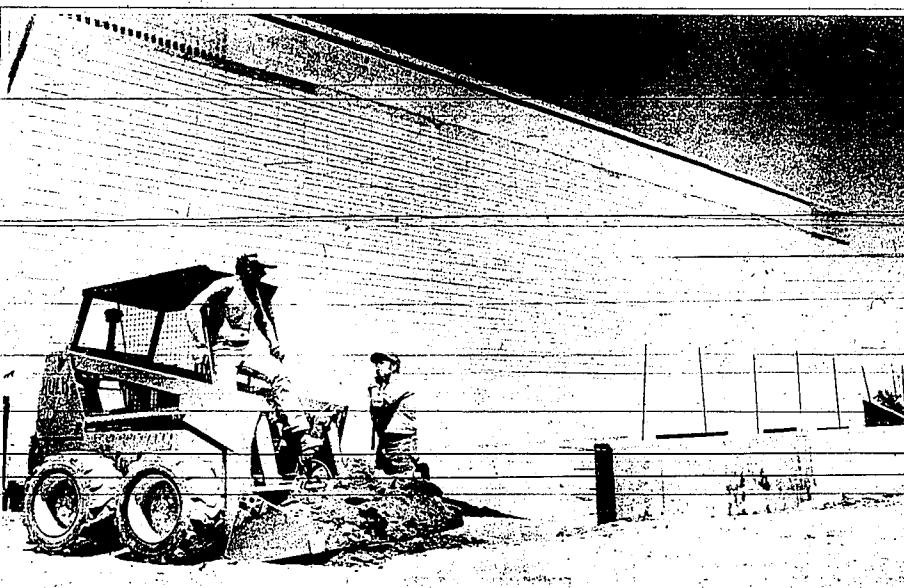

He also refused to acknowledge where the police learned of the alleged threat to Rasheed's security.

Twin Falls police lieutenant of detectives Jim Kistler said police have not yet established a motive for the shooting.

Kistler reported, however, that a witness to the shooting said "a short argument did develop between these two guys" prior to the shooting. The argument was described as "nothing serious" and "nothing that would warrant this (shooting)."

Kistler said it is not yet known whether Rasheed is an American citizen.

Rasheed is being represented by the county public defender's office.

Museum going up

College of Southern Idaho employees Marc James of Twin Falls and John Johnson of Buhl, take a brief break from the construction of the Herrett Museum on the campus. Bids for heating and cooling equipment are now being taken. The museum, which will feature anthropology displays, is expected to open in October.

Tiny bugs nuisance, no threat

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Several infestations of tiny insects called "false chinch bugs" have been reported in the Twin Falls area in the past few weeks, but extension service officials say they are more of a nuisance than a threat.

Graco Davis, who lives 2 1/2 miles south of Twin Falls, apparently had the heaviest infestation, according to Dale Beck, University of Idaho Extension Service horticulturist.

Mrs. Davis reported the bugs, ranging in size from a pin head speck to a little larger than a gnat, began collecting on the side of the house Wednesday evening and within a few hours covered the opposite side of the home.

She said the bugs piled up to an inch thickness in some areas of the house.

Bill Warner, an exterminator, was called to spray both the inside and the outside of the building.

Mrs. Davis said Warner told her insects often move in from a field or pasture, and she suspected an adjoining field where numerous seagulls had been congregating for the past several days.

Beck said he talked with Mrs. Davis and a number of other residents who have reported smaller infestations.

Two reports of the false chinch bug infestations came from near the center of the residential area of Twin Falls, Beck said. In at least one case, a nearby vacant lot could have been the origin. "Actually these are the nymph or immature insects, and they crawl at this stage rather than fly," Beck said.

He said the bugs normally feed on weeds or some types of grass and are not normally harmful to crops. They can be sprayed professionally by an exterminator or the individual can spray with Diazinon or Dursban to kill the insects.

In gardens and yards, Beck suggested spraying around the home and possibly the whole yard. He said spraying garden produce would not be necessary unless the insect is actually on the plants. This would be evident, he said, by yellowing or wilting plants.

Beck said the early hot weather, followed by cool temperatures and more hot weather, may be tied to the unusually heavy infestations. He said the insects are uncommon in this area, but usually is seen in reasonably small numbers.

Warrant out for arrest of Jerome man

JEROME — A warrant has been issued for the arrest of a man living northeast of Jerome for allegedly growing 417 marijuana plants. Jerome County Undersheriff Larry Webb said Monday.

He identified the wanted man as Greg Hancock, age unknown. He said the plants were confiscated from a farm the suspect rents six miles outside of town.

Hancock is charged with a single felony count of manufacturing a controlled substance.

Webb declined to release further information on the case, the second one purportedly involving the growing of marijuana in Jerome County since Friday.

Michael Carl Brock, 25, was arrested by sheriff's deputies on the same charge Friday afternoon for allegedly growing 34 plants in the garden of his farm five miles north of Jerome.

A preliminary hearing for Brock has been set Aug. 2 at 2:30 p.m. before Magistrate-Court Judge Russell Shaud. Brock is free on $1,000 bond.

Jail term, probation in tax case

TWIN FALLS (UPI) — A Twin Falls man, who told a federal court his conscience dictated he not pay income taxes, was sentenced Monday to one year and 90 days in jail and three years probation.

But U.S. District Court Judge Ray McNichols suspended one year of Elken A. Wolters' sentence on two counts of willful failure to file tax returns on the condition he pay his taxes for 1974-78.

"Our system of government only works if all citizens pay their taxes," McNichols told the court. "People have the right to object, but if they do it in violation of the law they must suffer the consequences."

Wolters, dressed in a short-sleeve shirt and jeans, told McNichols he broke the law because his conscience told him to.

"I think I pointed out this has been a matter of conscience with me, and I find it difficult to deny my conscience," Wolters said. "I only hope in my heart my intentions can be understood, and I trust God to give me the strength to handle whatever sentence is imposed."

McNichols said he had a difficult one, told Wolters if he fails to pay the five years back taxes, he will order him to spend the suspended one year of his sentence in jail.

"You will have to take a long look at your conscience and decide what you have to do," McNichols told him.

Window issue again

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council will consider at its next meeting whether to close the drive-in window at McDonald's Restaurant on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

At the request of council member Mary McClusky, Mayor Leon Smith has placed on the July 23 council meeting agenda the question of whether to revoke the conditional use permit the council issued allowing the drive-in window.

Ms. McClusky said the permit should be revoked until the restaurant's management complies with the conditions of the permit.

She said management has failed to provide suitable off-street parking for employees, causing them to park on streets near the restaurant and touching off a barrage of complaints from area residents.

Management prohibits its employees from parking in the restaurant parking lot, Ms. McClusky said, because it prefers to reserve the space for customers.

Management has provided off-street parking at the Episcopal Church on Blue Lakes Boulevard North, but employees have continued to park on streets in the neighborhood, competing with residents for parking space.

Ms. McClusky said employees continue to park on the street because it is closer to the restaurant than the available off-street parking.

City Manager Jean Millar added that the off-street parking provided by the management is too far from the restaurant to comply with city parking requirements.

To combat the problem, which has existed since the restaurant opened, the city prohibited all parking on Heyburn Avenue between Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Buchanan Street.

Employees then began parking on Buchanan and further down Heyburn, Ms. McClusky said. McDonald's owner, William Kyle, was not available for comment.

Sparks start fires

JEROME — Volunteer firemen were called to extinguish a grass fire near Interstate 80 Monday morning and went back again that afternoon to put out another one just like it.

Both fires were caused by sparks from welders, who were constructing a billboard one mile west and one-half mile south of the center of Jerome, according to Charles Hosman, assistant chief of the Jerome Rural Fire Department.

The fires were along the fence bordering the highway and next to a parking lot for A.C. Motors, Hosman said. The fires, one at 11:30 a.m. and another at 3:30 p.m., each took about 20 minutes to extinguish.

Fire damages home

HALEY — Fireworks thrown onto the roof of a home owned by Halley City Councilman Lyle Breneman located on Second Avenue South did an estimated $50,000 damage Sunday afternoon.

Halley Fire Chief Mike Healy said the city's volunteer fire department arrived at approximately 2:30 p.m. and fought the blaze for two hours.

Healy said the fireworks was of the type normally placed on a block of wood and lighted. He said it's not known who was responsible for throwing the items onto the roof.

Breneman, inside the house, heard a loud noise, and was informed a short time later by a group of passing children that his roof was on fire. Breneman called the fire department after first attempting to extinguish the blaze with a garden hose.

Healy said the attic portion of the building was destroyed, and that water damage on the

Sun Valley lift rate meeting called July 26

By JIM SHULL
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Sun Valley Co.'s lift rate increase requests will be the focus of a July meeting between Sawtooth National Forest Supervisor Paul Barker, Skiflation committee members and other community leaders in the Ketchum-Sun Valley area.

Inflation guidelines, were requested by Sun Valley Co. earlier this month. The request would raise Bald Mountain's lift rates from $18 to $16 for full-day tickets and from $9 to $10.50 for half-day tickets.

According to a news release issued by the company, "the increases have been requested to offset the continuous rise in operating expenses now being experienced, and forecast to continue in the coming months."

The company is now installing approximately $400,000 worth of additional snowmaking equipment on the north side of Baldy.

The Skiflation committee, which unsuccessfully attempted to appeal price increases granted to Sun Valley Co. by the Forest Service last year, has asked for a public hearing on the company's request for a minimum 10 percent rollback from current levels at Sun Valley, Vail and Aspen, Colo.

"I don't plan on holding a hearing as such, for several different reasons," Barker said Friday. "I feel Skiflation, in the concerns that they're raising in relation to the increases, are not only representing themselves, but also the mood and concern of a large segment of the people in the Ketchum-Sun Valley area." Barker indicated he'd have a decision on the company's request the week following the July 26 meeting.

"As I understand it, Skiflation will have a good share of their concerns and questions identified and submitted to me by the July 20. The week of the 23rd I'll be reviewing those comments, as well as other comments I have received from the public."

Barker said he would review ski rates from other areas to insure the requests are within the president's guidelines and are reasonable from the viewpoint of the Forest Service, skiers and the committee.

All-Star game: Ryan vs. Carlton

SEATTLE (UPI) — Only two years after turning his back on baseball's midsummer extravaganza, Nolan Ryan of the California Angels was named Monday to start for the American League against Steve Carlton of the National League in tonight's All-Star game.

Ryan's selection by AL manager Bob Lemon to start the game comes just one year after Billy Martin, the manager of last year's AL squad, said he would not select the flame-throwing right-hander to an All-Star team "if he were 50-0."

Times change and so do attitudes. The Angels' star pitcher said Monday his decision to duck the All-Star Game two years anyway, it is indeed an honor to be starting the game for the American League.

Ryan, who will be making his second appearance in an All-Star Game, has achieved a 12-6 record and a 2.54 ERA this season.

If it's an honor for Carlton, nobody will ever know. The Philadelphia Phillies' left-hander, who has been close-mouthed with the press over the last several years, refused to attend the news conference.

In naming Carlton to start, NL manager Tom Lasorda of Los Angeles said he was taking into consideration the large number of left-handed batters in the AL lineup. Carlton has posted an 11-8 record and a 3.49 ERA during the first half of the season.

Lemon said his lineup would read as follows: shortstop Roy

Baylor wasn't voted to the starting team by the fans, but Lemon was allowed to put him in the starting lineup because first baseman Rod Carew of California is hurt and won't play in the game.

"I can't think of any better hitter I'd rather have in there," said Lemon of Baylor. "I'm trying to win the game."

Lasorda named his own second baseman, Davey Lopes, to lead off followed by Pittsburgh's Dave Parker, Los Angeles' Steve Garvey, Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt, Cincinnati's George Foster, San Diego's Dave Winfield, and Philadelphia's Bob Boone, Larry Bowa and Carlton.

Boone, who almost never catches Carlton during the season, was named as the starting catcher because both Ted Simmons of St. Louis, the top vote-getter among NL receivers and reserve Johnny Bench of Cincinnati are hurt and will not play.

Lasorda said he would follow Carlton with Montreal's Steve Rogers, but Lemon said he had not made up his mind about his second pitcher. Under All-Star rules, a starting pitcher can go no longer than three innings.

With Ryan pitching, it was natural to think that Carl Hubbell's record of five consecutive strikeouts, set in 1934, might be broken. Hubbell, who will serve as an honorary captain for the NL, indicated it wouldn't be the same even if Ryan should accomplish the feat.

"I don't see how it's possible since he won't be pitching against Ruth and Gehrig," quipped Hubbell. In 1934, Hubbell struck out Lou Gehrig, Babe Ruth, Jimmy Fox, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin in succession in what is considered the best pitching performance in All-Star history. All five batters reached the Hall of Fame.

Ryan, however, felt the fact the game is in the Kingdom might lead to a high scoring contest.

"I've given up only eight home runs all season and four of them have come in the Kingdom," said Ryan, who will be trying to end the NL's eight-game winning streak in All-Star competition.

Mays set for Fame induction

NEW YORK (UPI) — Willie Mays goes into the Hall of Fame three weeks from now and he already has his acceptance speech all set.

Not a single word has been written down on paper. It's all up there in his head.

"I don't have to write anything down," he said Saturday, wrinkling his features the way he does so often at Shea Stadium where he was chief honoree at the Mets' Old Timers' Day celebration.

"I never write anything down when I make a speech," Willie went on. "The reason I don't is because whatever I say always comes from the same place — right here."

He tapped his finger over his heart.

Mays, who became a household name without ever having a candy bar named after him during his 22 years with the Giants and Mets, wants to make sure he mentions a number of people when he's enshrined at Cooperstown, Aug. 5, people who helped him on the way up.

One of them is his father and another is a man who was his surrogate father when he first came up to the New York Giants in May of 1951. The man, of course, was Leo Durocher, then manager of the Giants, who made a special trip from Palm Springs, Calif., to Shea Stadium Saturday to help honor Willie and will make another one to Cooperstown in three weeks for the same purpose.

Durocher has had two bypass heart operations in the past few years. He'll be 74 in less than two weeks and he's slowed down quite a bit from the old days although some of that old fire still burns inside him and he and Tommy Geraman, the old National League umpire, put on an entertaining little show for the fans during Saturday's Old Timers' game.

Mays, at 48, remembers who his friends were 28 years ago. He was a naive, impressionable kid of 20, green as grass, and he needed a true friend desperately then. He remembers how Leo Durocher was the one who went out of his way to welcome him, motivate him and even comfort him.

ago — the incident which triggered Martin's comments last year — was probably a mistake.

"It all stemmed from 1973 when I had two no-hitters and was left off the team," Ryan said Monday in explaining why he refused to pitch in the 1977 game after being added to the team by Martin. "I was added to the team by the league as an honorary selection, but I was embarrassed over that even though I did come."

"In '77 I anticipated making the team and when I wasn't chosen I was somewhat depressed over it and made other plans. Then when Frank Tanana got hurt, I was asked to pitch and I declined it. People said I did it because I was mad at Martin or mad at Frank for being selected over me. Neither was true.

"Hindsight is often a far better teacher than foresight. I'm not so sure I made the right decision, even though I was sure I did then.

Canyon Springs to host annual amateur event

TWIN FALLS — A strong championship flight, boasting 21 golfers with zero to four handicaps, will fight for the annual Canyon Springs amateur championship this weekend.

The tournament, restricted to 108 players, offers more than $1,000 in added money and a top prize of $300 in merchandise to the flight winners.

Host, professional Jim Packard, said pairings and tee-off times will be assigned on both days.

Glenn Blakeley, Burley, will be making his first tournament appearance since winning the state amateur title in McCall a week ago. He will be looking at several of the men who were challenging him coming down the stretch at McCall.

One is Dave Mollitor, who led Binkley for a while in the last day of the state meet. And the man who was second at state, Scott Messengale, also is in the field.

Gordon Crockett, one of Caldwell's best, should be a contender.

The local contingent is headed by Blakeley but includes Gary Miller of Wendell, Phil McRoberts of Twin Falls, Cac Turner of Pocatello, who won the Southeast Idaho amateur late last month, steady Jim Purves of Twin Falls and Dr. Chick Cutler of Twin Falls.

A darkhorse could well be young Tracy Frank of Twin Falls who has been playing well since returning from the Arizona Western golf team.

National president says trapshooting popularity rising

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS — There is an aura of ambivalence when Dr. T.E. Dillon, Caldwell, talks about his major passion, trapshooting.

The doctor's boasting of the sport is not surprising. After all, he's the national president of the American Trapshooting Association (ATA).

He was in Twin Falls over the weekend for the annual Coors Southern Idaho Trapshooting Championships.

Dillon worked many years on the local and state level and then put in five years of duty on the national executive board to get where he is now.

He has brought Idaho an almost singular honor in that he is the second Idahoan to hold the national presidency. Only the other state can make that claim.

Probably the ambivalent feeling comes from the conflict between reality and potential.

"We're just about to turn our 100,000th member... in this country and Canada," he said with obvious relish.

"These are good folks. They are among the best in the world."

But from the other side, he believes that trapshooting is only on the threshold of what could be.

"I think a classic example of that came this spring. They were having the (PGA) Phoenix open and they (the PGA) brought in their 60 or 80 players. Every newspaper you looked at, every time you turned on TV, it was full of golf. Meanwhile, we (trapshooters) are in town. About fourteen hundred of us. Not a word in the newspapers or on TV."

"As far as the economy of Phoenix was concerned, the trapshooters were bringing in 10 or 15 times more to the city than the golfers. But no one knew we were there."

"We have a full time publicity director with the ATA now. But it's a hard thing to break into the news of the magazines or on television," Dr. Dillon said, fully aware that "there are time and space limitations and probably the other guys were there first."

And yet when those clashes subside a little, Dr. Dillon is saying "our Grand (Grand American Trapshooting tournament) is the largest single participant sporting event in the world. Over 25,000 competitors..."

The doctor is not overlooked or underestimated by the shooters in Idaho.

"It's a real honor for us to have him at this shoot," said Twin Falls trapshooter Ben Ledbetter. "It's a real honor for the state of Idaho to have the national president."

Dr. Dillon believes the background provided Idaho trapshooters has been a key to whatever success he may have accomplished as president.

"This club," he said of Twin Falls, "has become one of the best around. This is as good as any shoot you'll find anywhere in the country."

He added about half apologetically, "I wasn't supposed to be here. I kinda was committed to Albany, Ore., where they are holding their first ATA sanctioned meet ever. But that's the kind of thing I have to do all year. This time I decided to heck with it. I'm not going to do what I'm probably supposed to do. I'm going to do what I want to do. Hey, being down here with all my friends, competing in this shoot. I'm having the time of my life," he smiles.

And it's the kind of thing that one can't blame the doctor for. Because he's spent something in the area of $60,000 from his own pocket fulfilling those types of obligations in the interests of trapshooting.

And lest you think that trapshooting consumes the man, he'll talk Idaho high school athletics, the SIC football situation and the upcoming state football playoffs with everyone.

"I was chairman of the school board that took Caldwell out of the SIC. I got beat around the head and shoulders for it but I feel that we did the right thing. Our participation is up, our crowds are up. Everything is better. And the kids are having fun playing now," he states.

Briefly in sports

Pour Haus wins

MCCALL — Pour Haus-Smith's Concrete Finishing captured the Yacht Club-Payette Lake Women's Invitational Slowpitch Tournament over the weekend at McCall.

Undefeated in five games, Pour Haus clobbered Cedar III of Lewiston 20-0 in the final of the title. In the tourney, Pour Haus outscored its opponents 99-4.

Karla Meier was the team's leading hitter with a .706 average followed by Patti Wasko .684 and Sandy Hill .600.

Carol Counts and Barbara Smith hurled the wins on the mound.

Tennis tourney set

TWIN FALLS — Some of Southern Idaho's top tennis players will compete Friday through Sunday in the annual Twin Falls Open Tennis Tournament at Harmon Park.

There will be A and B competition in both singles and doubles for men and women. In addition, there will be two levels of mixed doubles play.

Tournament officials expect about 200 players from Sun Valley, Pocatello, Idaho Falls, and Boise to participate. Several professionals from Sun Valley will compete.

Action begins 6 p.m. Friday and will continue at 8 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday. The finals are planned for approximately noon on Sunday.

For the first time in the tourney's history, there will be a paid director, Park Johnson of Sun Valley.

Kiwanis defeated

NAMPA — The Caldwell Simplots Little League team had it all their way Sunday. Facing the improbable task of coming back through the losers' bracket to win the Nampa Little League Tournament title, the Simplots went out and did just that.

They dropped Yallivue 14-0, Emmett 7-0, and Twin Falls Kiwanis twice, 3-2 and 2-1.

The losses by the Kiwanis gave them second place in the tourney, while Emmett placed third.

For the Kiwanis in the first game loss (3-2), Tim Buscher had a home run and Robbie Ellis had a triple to highlight action. Kirk Slater took the loss on the mound.

In the second game, Jeff Lambert got the Kiwanis' only run with a home run in the bottom of the second inning to tie the score. The Simplots scored one unearned and one earned run.

Matt Harr was the losing pitcher for the Kiwanis.

Darin Sandstrom missed the final games for the Kiwanis because of a knee injury suffered one hour before game time.

WR loses twice

HAILEY — The Boise Gems B team swept an American Legion baseball double-header from Wood River Sunday 6-5 and 3-0.

In the first game, losing pitcher Bob Montgomery only gave up four hits but infeld miscues spelled his doom.

Danny Dennis and Bob Shay each had three hits for Wood River.

Next action for the Halley-based team is next weekend at Pocatello.

MV teams to play

WENDELL — The Magic Valley Baseball Association will hold its annual little league tournament July 20-22 at McGinnis Park east of Wendell.

Association President Bob Thackery said 14 teams from Buhl, Filer, Castleford, Glens Ferry, Shoshone, Kimberly, and Hansen will participate in the three-day meet.

Games are scheduled to begin at 11 p.m. Friday and run throughout the weekend. In all, 18 games will be played.

Trophies will be awarded for the champion, runnerup, consolation bracket and sportsmanship.

Malone inks pact

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Rockets Monday extended the contract of NBA Most Valuable Player Moses Malone and moved to strengthen their backcourt by signing free agent guard Tom Henderson from the Washington Bullets.

Norton fight off

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Sunday's scheduled heavyweight elimination fight between Ken Norton and Scott LeDoux was postponed Monday when Norton apparently suffered an injury during a morning training session.

Officials said Norton was taken to a San Diego doctor for an examination. Details of the injury were not released.

Morgan released

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Melvin Morgan, a three-year veteran cornerback, was traded Monday by the Cincinnati Bengals to the San Francisco 49ers for an undisclosed future draft choice.

Morgan did not fit into our plans at this time and we are fortunate to have been able to place him with another club," said Bengals General Manager Paul Brown.

Morgan, 26, was a Bengals' 11th-round draft choice from Mississippi Valley in 1976.

Tate, Coetzee agree to WBA title match

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — The disagreements have been settled and the John Tate-Gerrit Coetzee WBA championship bout is officially set for Oct. 20 in Pretoria, South Africa.

After haggling in a day-long meeting at a Knoxville hotel Sunday, Tate's manager, Jerry "Ace" Miller, and Top Rank Inc. promoter, Bob Arum of New York shook hands and signed a final contract guaranteeing:

Tate, a West Memphis, Ark., native who now calls Knoxville his home, will get $400,000, $100,000 more than the original contract called for.

Coetzee, a native South African, will take home $300,000.

Country music singer Con Hunley of Knoxville will sing the national anthem before the televised fight for the WBA crown, which was vacated by the retirement of Muhammad Ali.

"There had been some misunderstanding about who had full say-so over where we will fight," Miller said.
