

Disaster aid OK'd for Blaine County

By MARTY WALLER

CAREY J. Gov. John Evans Thursday declared Blaine County in a state of emergency, opening the door to federal financial assistance.

Blaine County farmers are facing an estimated grain and alfalfa crop loss of 20 to 30 percent due to extended drought weather and conditions reminiscent of the 1977 drought.

The Blaine County Commissioners' last month petitioned the state for a declaration of emergency. The state's emergency law allows the governor to place the number of counties affected in groups near 50, and the declaration may be for a certain county.

The proclamation by the state "does little" more than allow the state to apply for a disaster aid from federal sources, Evans said.

Most of this aid is available until farmers have experienced a net monetary loss, Idaho disaster coordinator Darrell Waller said.

"The governor's declaration in and of itself doesn't do anything, but it indicates that the state recognizes the serious problems in the county and has honored the wishes of the county commissioners," Waller said.

Evans requested federal aid from the Small Business Administration, the Farmers' Home Administration and the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Those agencies determine that the farmers or are eligible for assistance, they may obtain loans and the state of about 5 percent.

It also is sought in the form of emergency feed assistance payments, Waller said.

"In the process of going into the emergency aid for Blaine County and Boundary County," county Commissioner Ray Sweet Thursday said, "I am certainly not a total solution, but it may give farmers relief."

"I think it's going to help some. It may help some people who are in pretty bad spot," he said.

Commissioner Charles Corwin said the aid will help solve financial problems. "It's not going to alleviate the drought situation. What we need is water."

The drought in 1977 is still fresh in the minds of many Blaine farmers. Apparently, the area has never fully recovered.

But the drought of 1979 is not isolated in Blaine County, Waller said.

"The crossing of people throughout the state suggest that there are 20 more counties that we know of now that could have some serious problems of one extent or another by the end of the month."

This year's impending drought may turn out to be worse than the poor water year of 1977, said Ken Dunn, deputy director of the state Water Resources Department.

Dunn added the 1979 drought, now primarily affecting alfalfa growers and cattlemen, also may have severe carry-over effects during next summer's growing season.

"Most of them (ranchers and feed-growers) are really hurting," Dunn said.

He said unusual precipitation patterns during the winter have disrupted the drought which is being accelerated by below-normal summer rainfall.

The group's freeze unthawed early and hard, causing later rainfall to run off quickly, filling reservoirs to capacity. Much of the rain that ended up in reservoirs was the water that usually soaks into the ground and provides water for streamflow later in the year, Dunn said.

Subsequently, farmers and ranchers who rely on stored water are having few problems so far — but those needing water from rivers are being hit severely.

"Generally speaking, water levels are as low as those in 1977 and in many areas are even lower," Dunn said.

Rainfall needed New crews thrown at Idaho blaze

By United Press International

Fire-fighters from Wyoming and Montana joined new crews from the East, New York, Idaho Thursday to battle the huge Mortar Creek fire raging out of control in the state's primitive area.

The crews were given the chance of quickly containing the 17,000-acre fire on the Middle Fork of the Salmon River, but controlling them will be difficult unless they get an unexpected break in the weather.

Forest Service Chief Max Peterson will meet with his fire experts Friday to map strategy on controlling the last four Idaho fires. In the past weeks 30 major fires have destroyed about 170,000 acres of timberland in five western states. And officials said summer fires have already added another 24,000 to 26,000 acres to the total.

"It looks like the weather's the key," said crew boss Gary Olson, 34, of Pinedale, Ariz. "We had this fire under control two weeks ago, and then we went to western Wyoming on another fire. The heavy rain in Wyoming and the big wind got that fire. Olson said. "But after we were in Wyoming, winds blew the Idaho fire back to life and out of control. So now we're back at it. It's a dirty, dangerous job. And if it doesn't get cooler, I'll be harder."

Bad news came from weather forecasters who predicted more sizzling, hot and dry conditions through today.

Crews in northern Idaho Thursday contained a small fire that had threatened the small logging community of Bonners Ferry, burning three homes. And the 50,000-acre Gallagher Peak Fire in southeastern Idaho was "all but contained" late Thursday.

The Mortar Creek fire on the Middle Fork of the Salmon River continues out of control.

Also still burning in Idaho were the 11,000-acre Sals Island Fire just to the north of Mortar Creek, and the 800-acre East Fork Kennedy Fire to the west.

Gusty winds this week blew up some major fires so fast that forest service crews did not dare to work in their path. They could only work their flanks.

In addition to fires in California, Montana, Oregon, Wyoming and Idaho, three lightning-caused blazes consumed 185,000 acres of tundra in remote areas of Alaska. But only 467 men were assigned to them.

The Bonners Ferry blaze was halted 2 miles south of town, but not before it had burned two residences and some small buildings.

All Bonners Ferry, state and federal firefighters were joined by volunteers. The blaze was believed to have been started Wednesday by an electric fence on private land, and officials hoped to control it Friday morning.

The biggest effort was concentrated on the Mortar Creek fire, which was man-caused and broke out of firelines a week ago after being contained earlier in the week.

More than 8,000 men and women were battling the Western fires, and some crews were pulled off for a couple of days of rest and replaced by fresh crews.

A fire boss said some of the men were exhausted from working 18-hour days for more than two weeks. They were replaced by new men, some of whom have been fighting other fires now under control.

US inflation surges again to 14% rate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Another big wave of inflation hit the economy in July, with rampaging energy costs pacing a 1.1 percent percent jump in wholesale prices — more than double the increases in each of the previous two months.

The Labor Department, reporting this bad news Thursday, said the surge pushed its overall wholesale price index to 215.2, meaning goods and services costing $100 in 1967 were priced at $215.50 last month.

"It's a disconcerting picture across the board," one government economist commented. "And the report is certain to heighten concern within the voter-conscious White House."

President Carter had expressed hope for price deceleration during the second half of the year — but the inflation report card for July, starting off the second half, contained no hint this will occur.

In fact, the only bright spot for the past few months — food prices — may be turning upward again, the report shows.

The price of food ready for sale to groceries was unchanged last month. But food prices at the intermediate and crude stages rose 6.7 percent, 7.1 percent, respectively, indicating possible higher supermarket prices in the offing.

The price of gasoline and home heating oil soared again. Gasoline ready for delivery to service stations rose 3.9 percent in July and prices were 28.4 percent above the July 1978 level.

The home heating oil situation was even worse, with prices rising 9 percent during July and soaring 31.8 percent higher than a year earlier.

The overall 1.1 percent wholesale increase last month — a 14 percent at a compounded annual rate — was the steepest since an identical one last February, and more than double the respective rates of 0.4 and 0.5 in May and June.

"It's a disappointing picture across the board — from crude to finished," said William Cox, a Commerce Department economist. "I admit to being unpleasantly surprised."

But Cox said he still hopes consumer prices will decelerate during the second half of the year.

"I'm not ready to kiss that off yet," he said. "I have long believed that energy product prices cannot keep rising at the pace we've seen in the past. But the fact crude oil increases are just beginning to roll in."

Experts say the new round of oil price hikes in June by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries should begin to show up in the inflation figures for this month.

Amtrak ridership passes 2 million

By UPI and the Times-News

WASHINGTON — The gasoline shortage helped boost Amtrak to its first 2 million passenger month in June, officials of the government-run railway said Thursday.

Another 1.3 million requests for space were turned down.

The company said that 2,050,000 persons rode Amtrak trains during June, compared to 1,651,000 riders in June 1978. The average trip length was 243 miles, compared to 223 miles in June 1978.

While individual train performance for the month of June are not yet prepared, records are available for May.

And Amtrak officials call the track record of Idaho's Pioneer for that month "impressive."

According to Amtrak News Manager John Jacobsen, the Pioneer carried 17,304 people in May. That's an increase of 18.3 percent over May of 1978, when the Pioneer carried 14,697 passengers.

In the fiscal year to date, the number of passengers taking the Pioneer for long distance rides is up 14.3 percent.

According to Jacobsen, that's an "impressive" increase, because nationally the number of passengers taking long distance train rides is up only 1.3 percent.

In the current fiscal year, 109,240 passengers have ridden the Pioneer, which runs between Salt Lake City and Portland with stops in Idaho including at Shoshone, compared to 83,623 in 1978.

Also in May the Pioneer had an on-time performance record of 88.7 percent, the highest on-time performance of any train in the entire Amtrak system.

"The month of June 1979 continued to reflect this summer's upsurge in reservations, ridership and sales activity for Amtrak," a company statement said. "Trends established in May, partly in response to higher fuel prices and shortages, continued in June."

Amtrak said it denied 1,381,685 space requests during June, compared to 912,425 in June 1978. But an official emphasized that "space request denials refers to specific space requests, not numbers of individuals."

For example, a caller denied four space requests could reflect the fact that only three spaces were available. Many callers would be expected to make repeat requests in order to obtain their final reservation," he said.

Reservations problems, caused mainly by the swamping of its central telephone reservation system, got worse in June.

Amtrak handled only 1,427,744 calls during June 1979 compared to 1,622,690 in June 1978.

"Despite the addition of more clerks, longer duration calls have effectively reduced the number of calls Amtrak can handle daily," Amtrak said.

Top secret report CIA accused of aiding foreign spies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A top-secret Senate report has accused the CIA of apparently breaking the law by helping foreign spies in the United States.

The draft report by Senate staffers — marked "Top Secret-Sensitive" — also accused the State Department of discouraging investigations of alleged violations.

Syndicated columnist Jack Anderson, who made portions of the report public last week, provided a United Press International Thursday with a copy of the voluminous study.

The report — prepared by the staff of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee's panel on international operations — was leaked while being circulated to such agencies as the CIA and State Department for comment before official publication.

The study, while admitting a more extensive investigation is warranted, concludes that:

- The CIA "appeared to break U.S. laws" by helping SAVAK, the former Iranian security agency, operate in the United States. The CIA is barred from engaging in domestic spying or helping other agencies do it.

- The State Department "does not play its mandated role" in enforcing laws that limit the activities of foreign diplomats in the United States.
- The State Department "has actively discouraged FBI investigations of likely violations" of U.S. law by foreign spies, apparently because of fears of retaliation against U.S. diplomats abroad.
- There is "insufficient evidence" to determine whether the FBI breaks the law in cooperating with foreign agencies or failing to investigate them properly.
- The report, although clearly outdated in parts, says some U.S. immigrants have "valid reason" to fear injury or assassination from foreign agents.
- The State Department denied violating the law since President Carter took office, and said the agency actively encouraged investigations into illegal actions by foreign intelligence agencies.

The CIA said the report is "a leaked, secret draft which doesn't reflect our comments, so we don't have anything to say about it."

The State Department and White House said an investigation has been started in an effort to determine how the document was leaked.

The draft report, running to more than 100 pages, deals with the activities of six countries involved in intelligence operations in the United States: Chile, Iran, the Philippines, the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, and Taiwan.

It devotes several pages to the activities of William Sullivan, a retired diplomat who served as U.S. ambassador in both Iran and the Philippines.

The report said Sullivan urged the Justice Department to call off investigations of Iranian and Philippine spies in the United States because of threatened retaliation against American agents in the two foreign countries.

The State Department defended Sullivan's intervention in the Iranian investigation as "proper," but refused to discuss cases involving previous administrations.

Cleveland police stand at broken window pane where suspect escaped after FBI agent was shot

Three FBI agents killed in agency's 'worst day'

By United Press International
Three FBI agents were shot to death Thursday — two of them by a man authorities suspect was once a member of the radical Weathermen group — in the worst day of violence in the agency's 71 years of existence.

"This is the first time in the history of the FBI that three agents were killed on the same day," said Jeffrey Maynard, an FBI spokesman in Washington.

After shooting the two agents the suspected former Weatherman then killed himself in the FBI office in El Centro, Calif.

The other agent was shot trying to arrest a fugitive in a public housing project in Cleveland. The fugitive escaped after the shooting.

In Washington, FBI Director William Webster called the slayings "tragic" and announced the man sought in the Cleveland shooting was placed on the 10 Most Wanted List.

"While nothing can allay the sorrow of their families, I want them to know that we in the FBI share their grief," Webster said at a news conference.

"All three agents maintained the finest tradition of the FBI. Their deaths are tragic losses and epitomize the sacrifices made by agents and their families."

Court stops Laetrile treatment

BOSTON (UPI) — The Massachusetts Supreme Court Thursday ordered the parents of 3-year-old leukemia victim Chad Green to end the "dangerous" Laetrile therapy they have chosen to combat their son's disease.

In a 24-page decision upholding an earlier state Superior Court ruling, the high court said medical evidence showed the metabolic therapy chosen by the parents "is not only useless, but dangerous, for their child."

The high court also refused to return full custody of the boy to Gerald and Diane Green, charging that the parents had exercised "consistently poor judgment that seriously threatened their son's welfare."

The boy is in the physical custody of his parents, but he remains a legal ward of the state.

Midway fire kills workman

TOKYO (UPI) — A fire broke out on the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway Thursday, killing a Japanese workman and injuring 17 American sailors, the U.S. Navy said.

The fire started at 5:20 p.m. in an air-conditioning room of the navy carrier, which was undergoing overhaul at a naval base at Yokosuka, 40 miles south of Tokyo, a Navy spokesman said.

About 700 Japanese workmen were working on the carrier when the fire, caused by a break in an acetylene gas line for welding torches, swept through the air-conditioning room.

Today's weather

Fair skies forecast until Saturday

Twin Falls, Gooding, Jerome, and Burley Report: Partly cloudy Saturday with a chance of widely scattered afternoon thunderstorms. Overnight lows mostly in the 50s, highs both days 80.

Outlook through Tuesday shows continued dry and warm for good drying conditions. Spraying forecast calls for winds generally 4 to 8 mph through this morning except gusts near any thunderstorms. Winds will increase to 8 to 12 mph this afternoon. Fair, evaporation expected to be 38 today, and 34 Friday.

Humidity, Casan Prairie, and Wood River Valley.

Partly cloudy tonight. Partly cloudy Saturday with scattered thunderstorms likely. Overnight lows mostly in the 40s, highs both days in the 80s.

Partly cloudy and warm conditions were reported during much of the state Thursday. Clouds formed over some portions of the southern portion due to the afternoon heating and residual moisture remaining from yesterday.

Thursday morning temperatures were generally in the 50s throughout the state with some of the mountain stations dipping into the 40s and lower. Lowest was Bovill with 24 degrees.

Fair skies with scattered thunderstorms are forecast for today. Temperatures should again be in the 80s and lower 90s. Overnight lows are expected to be mostly in the 50s.

Utah and Nevada are expecting generally the same type of weather through Saturday, fair and warm but with isolated thunderstorms, with little temperature change.

More defense funds sought

By N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — The Carter administration, in a bid to win the support of Senate moderates for the strategic arms treaty, is seeking a budgetary formula this month to use to increase the Defense Department's spending program over the next five years, government officials said Thursday.

The officials disclosed that at the request of President Carter, an interagency group was created earlier this week to examine the implications of increasing the defense budget for fiscal 1980 and later years, for both the American economy and the nation's military strength. The group, which has been meeting almost continuously, is expected to present its findings in the near future to a special Cabinet-level committee consisting of James T. McIntyre, the director of management and budget, Secretary of Defense Harold R. Brown and Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's assistant for national security.

Although the budgetary review is not yet completed, several officials predicted that it was likely to result in a multibillion dollar increase in the 1980 fiscal year defense request as well as a commitment to continue to increase military spending into the mid-1980s.

Energy chief promises cooperation with states

DENVER (UPI) — Energy Secretary designate Charles E. Duncan Thursday promised Western governors whose state's hold the bulk of the nation's fuel reserves, he would work closely with them to solve America's energy problems.

"The federal government has no intention of usurping states' rights," Duncan said during a news conference after a three-hour meeting with five Western state governors and three representatives.

"I intend to have the closest possible relationship with Western governors," he said. "Having the right relationship is crucial to the success of our energy program."

Attending the meeting were Govs. Elshard Lamm of Colorado, Bruce King, New Mexico, Tom Judge, Montana, Scott Matheson, Utah and Robert List, Nevada. The governors of Nebraska, Wyoming and North Dakota sent representatives.

All of the governors participating in the conference are members of the Western Governors Policy Office, which is headed by Judge.

Judge said the governors, whose previous relationship with President Carter's administration has been strained due to his decision to scuttle several proposed Western water projects, said he was impressed with Duncan.

"Frankly I'm surprised with Secetary Duncan's knowledge of the problems in our various states," he said. "I think we have a real manager and there is no question we will have a very good relationship between WESTPO and the federal government."

The governors said they were most pleased with Duncan's adoption of the major points of a resolution which they approved at a WESTPO meeting in Denver last month.

The resolution called for a partnership between Western governors and federal energy officials, phased development of synthetic fuels and the federal government sharing in costs of energy development.

"This was the first opportunity I've experienced where the secretary of energy outlined a plan of action in keeping with all of the views expressed by the Western governors," Matheson said. "As a practical matter, we could have adjourned with his (Duncan's) opening remarks."

Lamm, who previously voiced concerns that the Carter administration's energy proposals would pre-empt states' rights, said the meeting was the best he had attended with any federal official in the past five years.

"Secretary Duncan is smart, intelligent, low-key and he listens," the Colorado governor said.

Lamm also said he was "more than satisfied" with Duncan's indications that the federal government would not violate state's rights in the push to attain energy independence.

"Mr. Duncan assured us there would be no substantive override of states' rights," Lamm said. "But we're still somewhat concerned about any procedural overrides."

Duncan said the development of synthetic fuels such as oil shale and coal which are vastly deposited in the West, would proceed in a phased, intelligent manner.

"We have a commitment to proceed with caution, assuring first that the technology is ready for commercial exploitation," he said.

Duncan, who still faces confirmation by the Senate as the new energy chief, also said conservation would continue to play a major role in the campaign for energy self-reliance.

"The immediate payoff is in the conservation area," he said. "We will push conservation programs hard."

Judge said although the governors supported Carter's energy goals, the backing was not meant to be a political endorsement.

"This is not a political endorsement for Jimmy Carter," the Montana governor said. "The United States is going down the drain if we remain dependent on the OPEC countries."

"We support the president's energy goals and we intend to be heard from as Western governors," he said. "We must do this as a region. They (federal officials) have to deal with the West because we have most of the coal and oil shale."

Protestors stage nuclear 'die-in'

DENVER (UPI) — Twenty-four demonstrators Thursday conducted a "die-in" outside a hotel where Energy Secretary Charles E. Duncan met with Western governors to protest the continued development of nuclear power.

The demonstrators laid on the ground and said they were commemorating the bombing of Nagasaki, Japan during World War II.

The protesters sought answers from Duncan on his position on the continued operation of Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant northwest of Denver and whether he would support a nuclear moratorium on new licensing and construction of nuclear facilities.

Duncan did not meet with the demonstrators and was ushered out of a side door after his meeting with the governors.

Some advice to weekend campers

Those heading for the mountains this weekend can still enjoy the outdoors, the scenery and the recreation despite the extreme fire danger.

But they must be very cautious with every match, piece of burning material and engine.

To encourage people not to travel deeply into the forests, the forest service in many places including the Sawtooth National Forest will not charge for the use of developed campgrounds.

Campers would do well to take advantage of the offer.

Firefighting manpower and equipment are stretched to its utmost. Crews from throughout the region have flown in to Idaho to help battle the worst fires.

In this state alone, the fires have claimed more than 130,000 acres, and that figure will grow much higher before it's over.

New restrictions on the use of chain saws and fires were put into effect in forests Friday. Campers should become familiar with the rules, because they will help avoid disaster.

Articles in today's and Thursday's Times-News explain the new restrictions.

Public awareness is vital.

No one but an arsonist intends to set a forest fire, but being alert to danger can avoid the carelessness that leads to destruction.

Cabinet purge a media event

WASHINGTON — Ten days have passed since the Great Upheaval of 1979. The dust has settled; the president has reconstituted his Cabinet. It was all good fun while it lasted. But to look back upon July's headlines is to recall Macbeth's soliloquy. Life, said the doomed laird, is "a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

What we have experienced, and about all we have experienced, is a media event. This is a term of journalistic art. A planned demonstration — as distinguished from a spontaneous demonstration — is a media event. The staged dressing-room fracas of two boxers is a media event. If the media were not around, such events would not occur.

There is a nice irony in all this. Mr. Carter has developed a truly Nixonian animosity toward the press in recent months, but from the moment he canceled his scheduled July 5 address, he has manipulated the media, held us hostage and made us work for him. His unexplained cancellation set off shock waves, precisely his adversary anticipated. The news was pure hype, the grand stuff of press agency in the study school — the helicopter parade of advisers to Camp David, the sudden visits to Conoco, Peoples in Pittsburgh and Martinsburg, the descent from the mountain. The Sunday night address attracted double the audience. Mr. Carter might have drawn otherwise.

July 5 address, he has manipulated the media, held us hostage and made us work for him. His unexplained cancellation set off shock waves, precisely his adversary anticipated. has emerged, clenching his fists, growling and pawing. Was he criticized for being indecisive? Mr. Carter would make his critics grovel. Overnight he became the Man of Action, demanding, reorganizing, firing members of his Cabinet, naming swift replacements, tirelessly sounding forth on the virtues of his reorganization. What, one wonders, does he do for an encore?

It is an overstatement to remark that the Great Upheaval signifies nothing. Political accountants can enter some apparent gains on the president's ledger: He has elevated a black woman, Patricia Harris; he has appeased fretful Catholics with the nominations of Moon Landrieu to Housing and Urban Development and Benjamin Civiletti to be attorney general. He has wooed the business community with his nominees to Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board. He has made other gestures to the West and to the South. Several of his new people are in fact outstanding but the effect, overall, is that the new faces came from Central Casting. This is tokenism, banana time, the politics of Look What I've Done for You Later.

In political life, as in the theater, so much depends upon timing. The president waited almost 100 long, or not long enough. By timing his Great Upheaval for late July, just as Congress was about to take its longest recess of the session, Mr. Carter gave himself a fine action. He begged the people to write their congressmen, but the congressmen have scattered to the four winds. He wanted action on his proposals for windfall profits, standby rationing authority and an Energy Mobilization Board. But even if his specific proposals were the noblest works ever struck off by the hand and mitre of man, he could not have rushed them through this wary, belligerent Congress.

From the very beginning of his administration, Mr. Carter's most formidable problems have stemmed from his own lack of experience in federal procedures. His three most intimate advisers — Rosalynn Carter, Hamilton Jordan and Jody Powell — came to town as innocents as he. The past 30 months have helped, but 30 months are not enough, not when the time is passed in resisting the capital instead of embracing it. Mr. Carter and his entourage, now the quintessential insiders, remain outsiders still.

My thought is that Mr. Carter has taken his earthquake capacity and embraced it. Every president has such a capacity, but it has to be used sparingly. One cannot erupt in Great Upheavals every day — not if one wants to retain those other elements of presidential image: stability, dignity, steadfastness, unflappability. Great Upheavals demand greatness; Ham Jordan's puerile evaluation forms were the stuff of which farce is conceived. And once an upheaval has subsided, some change in the landscape must be perceived.

It all looks pretty much the same to me. Life in this muggy city has resumed its petty pace from day to day. For the time being, at least, our leading player, strutting and fretting, has had his hour upon the stage.

Susan B. Anthony coin-insults women's liberation

Editor, Times-News: In my opinion, the Susan B. Anthony dollar is the biggest put-down of women since the crusader for human rights devoted over 50 years to the effort to make women equal with men.

I believe the "planners" knew this. The idea that women are inferior to men, not to be taken seriously, still dominates the subconscious. If not the conscious minds of most males, and many females. A good way to reinforce this belief is to set up an association something like this: Anthony dollar: nuisance, avoid! I urge the boycott of the coin as a way to reject the insult. Ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment will truly honor the memory of this great woman. We must believe as she did, "Failure, is impossible!" and increase our commitment to equality.

Thoreau, the drop-out

CONCORD, Mass. — It is 10 o'clock on a Monday morning and I am playing hockey at Walden Pond. Because I am, hopelessly, a member of the wrong class, I carry a prop with me: a library copy of "Walden."

My excuse is a simple one: an anniversary trip. The book in front of me was published 125 years ago this week, so I sit here reading it, only mildly self-conscious, taking notes for the simple life.

It is impossible not to feel the incongruity between Henry David Thoreau's Walden Pond and this Walden Pond. Today, where the man built a house and took up a rather solitary existence, there is a state park.

The pond has been paved with three parking lots. The pond now has a concrete dock. Children cover the water like ants on a peach pit. The water is dotted with aluminum cans and the air is polluted with portable radios. Sitting near me on the shore are four teenagers mixing the beat of a disco drum.

It is easy, maybe too easy this morning, in this place to share the feelings of a man who preferred nature to conversation and "never found the companion who was so companionable as solitude." It is easy to understand his preference for the simple life.

But dropping out isn't what it used to be. Thoreau left his Concord in rebellion, rebellion from the harshness of his workaday life, his relentless Protestant ethic. He was a romantic on a private quest for joy.

"The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation," he wrote. "What is called resignation is confirmed desperation." Thoreau rejected desperation. He left to cultivate a life so pared down that it left no room for misadventure but for the leisure to read and to think.

"I went to the woods" because "I wished to 'live deliberately, to front only the essential facts of life and see if I could not learn that which had to teach and not, when it came to die, discover that I had not lived." He wanted to live so sturdily and Spartanlike as to put to rout all that was not life."

There was, I think, a passion about him which I used to see in others who also dropped out of one life and into another. In the late '60s people left Boston, New York, cities and corporations. Some of them were naive and some of their experiments were a dismal failure. But there was at least the energy, the desire to create "better ways."

For many of them, self-sufficiency was the baseline and joy was the goal. But now when people leave — work, town, school — they don't seem to be questing — but, rather, quitting — it isn't the optimists who are dropping out, it is the pessimists. It isn't the people who want to avoid "quiet desperation," but rather those who are confirming their desperation.

Thoreau wasn't copping out in Walden, he was engaging the world. His sense of responsibility, to himself, for himself, runs through the book like sinew. He wanted his life to make a difference. But the dropouts I meet now don't seem to know that there is a difference.

In the past year, actually, I have met a half a dozen healthy, enjoyable young people who talk about living off the land, but actually live off the dole. I have seen too many ex-students cashing checks from mom and dad and foot stamps from Uncle Sam. I hear older others talk about "alternative life-styles," when they are just drifting.

Last week, I browsed through a book called "breaktime" about young people who talk about living off the land, but actually live off the dole. I have seen too many ex-students cashing checks from mom and dad and foot stamps from Uncle Sam. I hear older others talk about "alternative life-styles," when they are just drifting.

I wonder what is missing among the new breed of dropouts could be an answer.

Handle luggage the Dent way

Los Angeles Times Syndicate
Many air travelers have noticed that their luggage has been getting more of a bashing recently than it has in the past. It's an accident.

Most airline luggage handlers must now go to school before an airline will allow them to touch a piece of baggage.

I was fortunate to visit the Dent Airline Luggage and Freight Handlers School in St. Louis last week. The Dent school trains most of the airline baggage handlers in the United States. Dent, the founder and president of the school, took me out on a large playing field the size of a football gridiron. Several classes were in session. The teachers all wore baseball caps and sweat shirts, and had whistles around their necks. The pupils were dressed in white coveralls. The first class we stopped to watch were throwing pieces of luggage to each other.

"All right, let's throw them a little harder," the coach yelled. "What are you guys, a bunch of cream puffs? You there, Pitowsky. You're not able to catch every bag. Drop a few."

Pitowsky dropped the next one, and it broke open, scattering clothes all over the field.

"Beautiful," the coach yelled. "Now you've got it." "We use real luggage," Dent said proudly. "We simulate every possible situation a luggage handler will face."

"Now you're catching the bags with your hands," the coach yelled. "You'll never break any that way. How many times have I told you to use only one hand when trying to catch a piece of luggage?"

"We walked down the field and came to a 16-foot tower. Several men were on the tower, dropping boxes marked FRAGILE to the ground.

"The object of this exercise," said Dent, "is for the men to get used to dropping fragile packages from great heights."

"But nobody's catching the packages," I said. Dent chuckled. "Of course not." We went over to the coach who was inspecting each box after it dropped.

"Claremont yelled back. 'Well, put some spin on it the next time.' Claremont threw another box, and we heard the glass shattering. The coach nodded his head. "Good boy."

The next group we came to was running an obstacle course. Pieces of luggage were strewn on the field, and the men had to jump from one piece of luggage to another without their heavy work boots hitting the ground. The hinges were broken on all the bags and the locks were crushed."

"After running the 100-yard course, stomping on the luggage," Dent said, "the men then have to throw a 40-pound bag 15 yards; kick a cosmetic case 25 yards, and thrust a sharp object through a canvas suitcase blindfolded."

"You're doing wonderful work here," I told Dent. "When a man finishes our school," Dent said, as he picked up a broken camera that had fallen out of a bag, "he is certified to work as a baggage handler for any airline in the world."

"I was over to the coach who was inspecting each box after it dropped. "Claremont," he yelled up to the tower, "these scientific instruments are all intact. Will you be using a throwing arm?"

"I threw them as hard as I could," Claremont yelled back.

"Skating and hockey were popular sports. Fires would be built around trees to warm the participants. Wagons, with kerosene torches, sold hot waffles coated with powdered sugar. The children spent Election Day building fires in swinging tin cans to roast potatoes until they were as black and hard as coal. A most delightful treat."

"A few deliveries were made to the families; one of these was the covered ice wagon filled with large blocks of ice. These blocks came via railroads from country lake huts. After looking at the sign in the consumer's window, the ice man would chop the size of ice wanted. Flinging the piece with ice tongs to the father pad on his shoulder, he would carry it into the house and put it into the top of the kitchen icebox (about the size of today's refrigerators). In the meantime — a crowd of children — were cleaning up the ice chips from the flow of his wagon."

Nagasaski survivors gather

NAGASAKI, Japan (UPI) — Survivors of the world's second atomic bomb blast, including an American who says he is dying from bone cancer caused by radiation, came to Nagasaki Thursday for silent prayer and memorial services.

As the mourners marked the 34th anniversary of the blast that ripped apart Nagasaki and killed more than 53,000 people, officials in Hiroshima, the first target of U.S. A-bombs in World War II, said they had sent a note of protest to both France and America over recent nuclear tests. Officials in New Zealand Thursday disclosed France set off a powerful nuclear device July 26 at its Pacific Ocean test site at Mururoa Atoll near Tahiti. The United States said it detonated its ninth atom bomb of the year in Nevada on Wednesday.

Taking note of the protests, Nagasaki Mayor Hitoshi Motoshima said, "I express indignation at responsibility for dropping the atomic bomb that resulted in the deaths and injuries of a large number of people has been ignored."

He did not mention the United States specifically.

For the first time since the 1945 bombing, children and high school students participated in the annual Peace Park ceremonies.

Nagasaki's memorials are always smaller than those at Hiroshima. About 17,000 people attended Thursday, compared to 30,000 of the Hiroshima anniversary Monday.

'Amityville Horror' story called hoax

AMITYVILLE, L.I. — The "Amityville Horror," the story of an expensive Long Island home infested by demons, is a complete hoax and "Long Island's equivalent to Watergate," the couple who now own the infamous house said Thursday.

chamber" the Lutzes said in the book they had bought. It was a small pantry under the stairway which, he said, was an original part of the house.

The curious and sight-seers, said Barbara Pfunder, who lives down the street, have been unbearable.

James and Barbara Cromarty held a press conference in their home, supposedly the haunt of pigs with red eyes, mysterious green slime, levitating housewives and a satanic hideaway, and said all those stories were "complete hoaxes."

The couple claimed the former occupants of the house, George and Kathy Lutz, had concocted the story that they were driven nearly mad by satanic goings-on in the 28 days they lived there.

The Lutzes made up the tales, which became a best-selling book and a recently released movie, "for money and nothing else," Cromarty charged.

The Lutzes moved into the house after Ronald DeFeo shot and killed his parents and four brothers and sisters there in November 1974.

The Lutzes' story got its credibility from the involvement of a Catholic priest, known in the book by the pseudonym "Father Mancuso."

They called the cleric, whose real identity was not revealed, "a charlatan Catholic priest who has been banned from performing his religious duties by the diocese of Rockville Centre."

In the finished basement, newsmen were shown the "secret

Joining friendly groups gives Taurus needed data; Aquarius needs to plan for additions to income

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is fine for combining your intuition and good judgment to make decisions on how to operate in the future. Be as cheerful as possible when in the company of outsiders.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Use your intuition now and you can clear up puzzles quickly and accurately. Follow the advice of a trusted adviser.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Come to the right decisions where personal matters are concerned. Join friendly groups and gain the data you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Follow through with any ideas you have about engaging in civic affairs and get good results. Take no risks in motion.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can now gain the data you need to the satisfaction of all concerned in the future. Don't neglect your health.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make interests you have more practical and you can become more successful. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are able to handle a partnership matter to the satisfaction of all concerned. Show mate you are generous and outgoing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study every phase of a new project you have in mind before putting it in operation. Show more understanding of co-workers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make early plans for weekend activities so that all will go smoothly for you. Strive or increased happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can handle home affairs most efficiently now, so get an early start on such. Think along more constructive lines.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You want to expand in career affairs and it is wise to spend this day studying just how to do so. Think objectively.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make plans for adding to present income and start putting them across. Be careful of outsiders at this time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study every phase of your daily existence and figure out how to have greater abundance in the days ahead. Be more alert.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can get at the core of any situation and then handle it most intelligently. Give as fine an education as you can so that the success here will be heightened.

What's what

Planets will line up all on same side in '82

In 1982, all the planets in our solar system will line up on the same side of the sun. Only happens once in 179 years. Planets exert tidal forces on the sun. When all are on one side of it, those forces build up. They cause more sunspots. More sunspots send more solar particles to the earth's upper atmosphere. These generate unusual movements of big air masses, which in turn affect the rate of the earth's spin. Changes in the spin rate trigger earthquakes and strains in the earth's crust. That could mean more tsunamis. Or so say the scientists.

Martin Washington invited friends in just about every Friday night for a long time there. And at 9 o'clock with-out fall George got up, walked out, and went to bed. I've not read even one historical reference to George that indicated he was ever the life of the party.

GRIZZLY

Q. How far away from a grizzly bear do you have to get to be out of danger?

A. A grizzly's attack zone falls somewhere between 100 and 200 feet. If he spots you before you get that close, he can be expected to take off on the run.

Fur breeders know that if they keep their minks in cages illuminated with blue lights, the litters will be mostly female, but if they keep them in cages illuminated with pink lights, the litters mostly will be male. But they don't know why.

Rogel's Thesaurus lists 17 words for an honest man and 193 for a thief. It gives only nine synonyms for birth but 360 for death. Odd, is it not, that the lingo is so much richer in negatives than in positives?

What, you say you're tired of ham and eggs with toast? How about this for breakfast? Ammonium carbonate, sodium ascorbate, ferric orthophosphate, nicotinamide and thiamine mononitrate, plus some other things. The foregoing is, in fact, a widely advertised brand of instant breakfast.

Dear Abby

Too many after her dream

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© The Chicago Tribune
N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am 38, attractive, desirable, live in Seattle and could pretty much have my pick of men.

I recently met the man of my dreams in a little town called Townsend. He's handsome, slightly younger, is built like a million dollars, drives a Porsche and is the world's greatest lover. More than that, he's so kind, considerate and fun to be with that the first night I was with him I thought I had died and gone to heaven!

Sounds perfect, doesn't it? Well, it's not — a dozen other women feel the same way about him.

Abby, how do I capture such a perfect man with so much competition around?

Please don't tell me to look for someone who's more available. In 30 years, and after one unsuccessful marriage, I know he's "Mr. Right."

HEAVEN CAN'T WAIT

DEAR HEAVEN: It won't be easy, but try the cool, laid-back approach. With so many women drooling over him, he's sure to notice the one woman who presents a challenge. If that doesn't work, get in line. Your chances are still 1 in 12.

DEAR ABBY: My mother, who is 80, is getting married to a gentleman who is 82.

They will be married in a church and want to send out about 50 invitations and have a reception afterwards!

Do you think this is proper for people their age? Frankly, I don't.

I think they should get married quietly, with just the wedding party (six people) going somewhere for dinner afterwards. Then they should go away for a few days.

I would like your opinion.

DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Age has nothing to do with it. If anything, I think their ages would enhance the beauty of the occasion.

Encourage your mother to have the kind of wedding and reception she wants. Do whatever makes her happy and, I promise, you'll look back on her wedding with no regrets.

DEAR ABBY: I have a married granddaughter I'll call Shelly. Last night, Shelly's husband, Harry, arrived home at 10 o'clock. He had driven 150 miles to get there after being away from home all week.

When he heard Harry's car in the driveway, Shelly's mother asked her if she wasn't going to the door to greet him. (Shelly was sitting, reading.) Her reply was, "Oh, it's only Harry."

Abby, that set me thinking. "Only Harry." Not long ago, Shelly thought Harry was very special. Of course, he is still special, and Shelly would realize it fast enough if he didn't arrive home one night.

A traveling salesman's work is not easy. Sleeping in a strange motel room every night isn't fun either. But that's what Harry does because it's the way he can best provide for his wife and children. He is a loving, loving husband and father. He is something special, and I hope Shelly doesn't wait until after he's gone to appreciate him.

WIDOWED GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: How true. The saddest thing in the world is a kind word left unsaid. Please say that Shelly says this.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WANTS FRIENDS": There are two kinds of people in the world, those who come into a room and say, "Here I am!" and those who come into a room and say, "There you are!"

Which kind are you? Think about it.

Are you the lonely face in the crowd? Friends make you a winner, and Abby tells you how to win them in her booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long self-addressed, stamped (25 cents) envelope to Abby: 133 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

MR. AND MRS. D. MATTHEW SHEEHY

Moore-Sheehy

TWIN FALLS — Suzanne K. Moore and D. Matthew Sheehy of Boise exchanged wedding vows July 28 in the First United Presbyterian Church in Twin Falls with the Rev. Tom Young officiating at the candlelight ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom W. Moore of Twin Falls and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Sheehy of Boise.

Matron of honor was Cindy Mead of San Diego, Calif. Bridesmaids were Kelly Johnson of Boise and Kelly McCullough of Twin Falls. Marcia Moore and Elizabeth Sheehy, sisters of the couple, served as candlelighters and junior bridesmaids. Flower girl was Shannon Paterson of Boise, niece of the bridegroom.

Best man was Pete Eisenman of Boise. Serving as ushers were Randy Moore and Brian Sheehy of Boise, brothers of the couple.

Soloist was Kurt Snyder who sang and played the guitar and was accompanied by Rich Steen. Mrs. Charles Allen played the organ.

Silk flowers were made and arranged as wedding decorations by the bride's mother.

A reception and dance followed at the Moose Hall.

Corinne Hunter and Michelle Randall, sisters of the bridegroom, cut and served the cake. Kelly Moore and Jean Moore, sister-in-law and aunt of the bride, served the punch and coffee.

Tina Paterson, the bridegroom's sister, was in charge of the guest book. The table was attended by Lila Wallace, Doreen Slimper, and Suzi Slimper.

Following a wedding trip, the couple make their home in Boise.

Electrodes used to measure ad effectiveness

DANBURY, Conn. (UPI) — Scientists are developing a new way to test the popularity of corn flakes, commercials and TV shows.

And in the field of mass advertising, millions of dollars can be made or saved — depending on whether somebody takes a moment to look at a magazine cover, or an advertiser can junk a dud commercial before it's put on the air.

Stanley Weinstein says it all boils down to money. It's up to his research firm to help advertisers pick their winners and losers.

The author, a New York University professor whose NeuroCommunication Research Laboratories, Inc. looks like a backyard workshop, specializes in testing advertising by measuring brain waves.

"It's a little like 1984," Weinstein said. "It may enhance our powers of diagnosis and our intelligence; on the other hand, people think 'My God, what harm can be done?'"

"But my philosophy is, there isn't a thing man has conceived that doesn't have a potential for evil. Look at the match."

The new technique began when the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency contacted Weinstein at the New York Medical College about the measuring response to newspaper advertising. They talked, called in a psychologist and began experimenting.

A resulting paper, published by research team leader Dr. Herbert Krugman in 1976, described a way of measuring and evaluating a person's response to media and other external stimuli by attaching electrodes to the head and recording brain-wave patterns.

Weinstein has since used the method to test products ranging from pilot television shows to a new soup.

His firm gets volunteers through advertisements and lists of clubs and groups. Often, the client will want the researchers to select a "target" group, such as housewives, executives or people in a certain income bracket.

Electrodes the size of a shirt button are attached to volunteers with a water-soluble adhesive. Then the film is run, the product is sampled or the magazine scanned, and brain waves are automatically recorded.

Weinstein explained that researchers check two types of brain waves. The beta waves are emitted when the subject is stimulated by the environment. Alpha waves come when the environment is uninteresting.

Each of these are emitted by either the right or left side of the brain. The right side handles global, pictorial, sensual, emotional and musical concepts; the left brain handles the details, such as words.

Each product or ad is analyzed according to which side of the brain it should be directed toward. The perfume advertisement featuring actress Catherine Deneuve is "definitely right brain," Weinstein said.

"When a guy goes to a perfume store he doesn't need any words to know what he wants. He doesn't remember the name of the perfume. He just has to mention Catherine Deneuve. That's all they (advertisers) want."

A luxury car ad describing fuel economy, mileage, and acceleration smoothly left brain with a touch of right brain appeal, he said.

As the subjects react, the shape of their brain waves plotted on paper show if their reaction is positive or negative.

Survey shows divorce rate leveling off

© N.Y. Times Service

The divorce rate in the United States shows some signs of leveling off, according to figures released by the National Center for Health Statistics.

In 1977, the latest year for which the federal agency has final statistics on this aspect of national behavior, there were approximately 1,091,000 divorces among Americans. That was less than a 1 percent greater than the 1,063,000 for 1976, representing the smallest annual increase in the number of divorces since 1962, the report said. The government's provisional figures for 1978, however, indicate an increase of 2 percent over the final 1977 figures.

While the total number of divorces continues to rise, the federal data indicate declines in the proportion of divorces in two major age groups — those under the age of 25 and those over the age of 39. Another indication of changing ways of life evident in the statistics was the total number of children under 18 in divorcing families. The total for 1977 was 1,095,000, a 2 percent decline from the previous year.

"This was the second consecutive decline in the annual number of children affected by divorce, which prior to 1976 has increased each year since 1960," the vital statistics report said.

Scientists have developed many theories, but no consensus, on the question of why fish often swim in tightly organized schools. One of the most popular explanations has been that schooling gives a hydrodynamic advantage — the fish can move through the water more easily when they swim in unison and close together. One theorist even calculated that fish swimming in hydrodynamic formations would save 35 percent of the energy cost of swimming.

In what they describe as the first empirical test of this theory, British scientists found that it simply was not true — at least for the three species tested, pollock, herring and cod. The fish do swim in schools, says the report in Nature, but not with the spacing and tight-to-fish organization that would conserve their effort.

Fay Frahm and Genevieve Goodwin were married June 9, 1929, in their home north of Hansen. Mr. Frahm came to Hansen in 1906 and has lived on the same ranch for 73 years. The couple have married on the ranch their entire married life.

Dad's handicap affects sons

By VIRGINIA ADAMS
© 1979 N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — The possibility that the son of a physically handicapped father may face greater psychological hazards, especially in sexual adjustment, than a child who is himself handicapped has been raised by a Montreal psychoanalyst.

In a paper presented at the 31st Congress of the International Psychoanalytical Association at the Waldorf-Astoria; Dr. Andre-Lussier also said that in some cases a temporary injury, such as an arm or leg fracture in adolescence, seems to cause more emotional difficulty than a permanent handicap.

The degree of psychological trauma that results from a lasting handicap, Lussier suggested, depends heavily on the ability of the handicapped child's mother to accept him as he is.

Some 2,300 psychoanalysts from about 30 countries attended the week-long congress, the first meeting of the association to be held in the United States since the organization was founded in 1908. The theme of the congress is clinical issues in psychoanalysis over the life cycle, and the principal address was given by Erik H. Erikson, the most influential of the psychoanalytical theorists who believe that personality development proceeds by stages and continues throughout adulthood.

Lussier said that a study of some of his patients had led him to believe that physically normal, though neurotic, people "are unconsciously aware of their handicap, and the principal identity of a crippled parent than is the congenitally handicapped patient by the sight of his own crippled body."

A father's handicap, Lussier said, seems to have a greater effect on the child's sexual identity than on any other part of the youngster's personality, presumably because acquiring a sense of belonging to one sex or the other requires a process of identification with the same-sex parent.

Although the fathers of the four patients whom he studied in detail were not psychologically weak, their handicaps made them seem so to their children, while the physically normal mothers seemed strong. As a result, Lussier suggested, the patients had difficulty identifying with their fathers; it was as if taking on the father's sexual identity meant also acquiring the imagined negative psychological aspects of his handicap. The infirmity of the fathers, Lussier said, became an unconscious, obsessive belief that "masculinity means weakness, impotence, castration, and feminine organs triumph and conquer." The result was "an endless struggle against sexual ambiguity and against depression due to a persecuting feeling" of impending defeat.

Lussier said he had found that in some of his patients the experience of breaking a limb, although consciously forgotten, "appeared to be a factor of great actual influence in the appearance of paralyzing limb dysfunction" at work and in sexual functioning. "The unconscious memory of an early accident left certain victims with the depressed feeling that they were doomed to failure. To them, Lussier said, it seemed as if the road to achievement inevitably led to a broken body."

By contrast, said Lussier, a serious deformity had a much less harmful psychological impact on another of his patients, a boy named Peter who was born with arms only six inches long and only three fingers on each hand. Peter's handicap ultimately spurred him to unexpected achievements. For example, he learned to play the trumpet, build and rode a bicycle and won an award as a fisherman.

Peter did not begin to achieve however, until psychoanalytic treatment had compensated for his mother's early rejection of him. His initial insecurity, Lussier said, was caused not primarily by his physical defect but by "the discouragement and shame of his mother."

Whatever a child's body is like, "this is the body that the mother has to acknowledge," Lussier said. Mental health grows on this soil. The child will relate to his body in the same way in which his mother relates to it.

Yet loving acceptance of a seriously handicapped child can require a kind of heroism by the mother, Lussier suggested. "One difficulty is that her pride is hurt for not having been able to produce a perfect child." Another is that the dissimilarity between the mother's body and that of her deformed child is a threat to her own sense of identity, and may cause her to wish to change the child's body.

According to Lussier, this indicates how precarious is the psychoemotional position of the congenitally handicapped child.

Baby-sitting cooperatives popular concept

ATLANTA (UPI) — Baby-sitting cooperatives are some neighborhoods' solution to the problem of too few teen-agers or teenagers who don't want to sit or older persons with prohibitive fees.

Parents say their children love the idea because they are never lonely for their peers.

Co-ops also provide an excellent way for families new to a community or a city to make friends.

Atlanta's Morningside area has at least three, the first organized about seven years ago. The second was a spinoff about two years ago, when membership in the first group grew to 40 and its waiting list to 17 families. Now the second has 40 families and a waiting list. The third has about 15 families.

"It makes parenting a lot easier," said Martha Curtis, a mother in the second. "I couldn't live without it. I always had cousins, grandparents, aunts and uncles around before I moved here so it fulfills that extended family loss."

Larrie Del Martin is a neighbor of the Curtises and mother of two. The Martin and Curtis children play together often.

"I think the cooperative idea came about at the same time as food cooperatives and the 'neighborhood concept,'" said Mrs. Martin. "This whole lifestyle came about at the same time."

In the first co-op, she said, a secretary kept track of all services.

Because so many members in the second co-op work, Mrs. Martin said, "we decided not to have a secretary. Instead we have 'chits.' They are pieces of paper with silk screen fronts that resemble playing cards."

Parents exchange chits instead of money for sitting services. Each chit is worth 30 minutes sitting time. Each family that joins the co-op receives 40 chits at a charge of 50 cents each. The money goes to the woman who makes them. No family is allowed to accumulate more than 60.

When a family leaves the co-op, it must either turn in 40 chits or pay 50 cents apiece for each one it lacks.

Mrs. Martin said the co-op's membership roster, which is updated periodically, lists members' telephone numbers, children's names and ages, doctor's phone numbers and parents' availability.

"This way we can match up ages of our children and proximity (in the neighborhood)," she said.

Most sitting is done afternoons, evenings and some weekends, she said.

The concept has drawbacks. Mrs. Martin said they found some families were in more than one cooperative at the same time. Current guidelines prohibit this.

Behavior problems also arise. Parents whose children are not well-mannered find it difficult to get anyone to sit for their children.

Families who want to retain their membership in the Morningside co-op after they move away can do so, Mrs. Martin said, as long as they don't join others.

Mrs. Curtis said most of the children "would rather go to a lady house than have a sitter. I know a lady who has never paid a sitter because she uses the co-op."

"I used a sitter once, but life is easier when I'm sitting. When I watch other children, my kid loves it so much I feel I should have paid her (the other mother) the chits."

"I now know so many people, have so many friends, which is a direct result of the co-op. One of the ladies became my best friend, our kids are best friends and we've done everything together."

Dr. Lamb

Inflammation can occur anywhere

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb: I read an article in the paper about the IUD and wanted to know what inflammatory disease really is. What other risk is there if you do get the disease besides becoming permanently sterile? I'm 43 years old and have had the IUD for some time now. I do not have any problems except some cramps during my period. If I did get inflammatory disease, how would I know it and what treatment would I use to correct it? I'm now worried about being sterile as I have four grown children and don't want any more, but I would like to know how to take care of myself.

Dear Reader: Inflammation is a term used to describe tissue responses to irritations. The irritant can be from a chemical or it can be from bacteria. The bacteria cause inflammation because of chemicals they release. Irritation can occur from a variety of other causes.

Inflammation can occur almost anywhere, from the surface of the skin to inflammation of the throat, sinuses, lungs, appendix and so on. The inflammation you're interested in involves the female organs and is commonly called pelvic inflammatory disease. Doctors dub this as PID. It can be acute or chronic. Most often it is a direct result of bacteria being introduced into the uterus, tubes or ovaries. In short, the female organs in the pelvis, it can be caused by a large variety of different bacteria.

The symptoms are those of an infection and how much trouble a woman has depends a lot on how extensive the infection really is. If the inflammation extends up the tubes and involves the ovary, it can become a large ovarian abscess.

In the case of most IUDs there may be very low grade infection of the lining of the womb. This may cause discharge. It may cause symptoms of pain and discomfort. It can cause abnormalities in the blood tests, fever and other such things that doctors associate with an inflammation.

Most of the significant problems from an IUD will occur in the first few months after it has been inserted. In a woman like yourself who has had one apparently for some length of time without any difficulties, it's unlikely that there will be any problems. It's true that you may have an increase in cramping or bleeding from the IUD just as you have experienced.

There's not much you can do to protect yourself against an inflammation and since you've done so well, I don't consider it a major problem in your case. But, of course, what you and other women should do is rely on the doctor who inserted your IUD for guidance about what should be done in your particular case. Remember that there are large numbers of women who have successfully used the IUD for years.

In your age group you can expect to go through the menopause in a few years. When that is through you won't need to use birth-control measures. If you happen to have increased bleeding during the menopause, your doctor may not want you to use it then. Again it is an individual matter.

To give you more information on the menopause, I am sending you the Health Letter number 9-12. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Plastic gas tank seen for future

By MICHAEL J. CONLON
WASHINGTON (UPI). — The car of the future may have a plastic gas tank.

The government issued a notice recently saying it may write rules for gas tanks made of materials other than metal. The tanks would have to be impact and fire resistant.

Backers of the plastic tank say it will actually be safer than current metal ones.

Opponents are mainly parking garage operators and a fire safety organization: U. Institutional and Municipal Parking Congress and the Fire Marshals Association of North America.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has published a notice in the Federal Register asking for public comment on the plastic tank concept.

Current safety rules do not specify what materials tanks can be made of, but do require that all tanks meet certain crash test standards. No plastic tanks have been offered on cars in this country except as auxiliaries or spares.

Volkswagen introduced a plastic tank during the 1970 model year on the Passat, its European version of the Dasher. The company said the tank can hold more fuel because it can be bent into different shapes than metal tanks. A Volkswagen spokesman said tests showed the plastic tank "actually performs better in a crash test because the plastic will give more than the metal."

NHTSA's notice was prompted by a petition from Ford Motor Co. which, the agency says, is anticipating "a large increase in the use of plastic tanks." Ford said it was time to address the plastic question now, and to specify what kinds of fire and crash standards such a tank would have to meet.

A Ford spokesman said such tanks could be molded into space "that might otherwise be wasted" and that they offer "excellent impact and puncture resistance."

Mitts needed to touch steering wheel

By ERMA BOMBECK
Phoenix, Ariz. — One hundred sixteen degrees. . . I live in the Sun Belt.

It's a section of the United States that is so named because the area escapes severe winters and has an abundance of sunshine.

We are having an abundance of sunshine now. To spell it out for you, I haven't been able to cross my legs at the knee since the last of May.

For some time I have felt that those of us who live in this part of the country are misunderstood and much maligned. We have the worst of all worlds.

When the East and Midwest are suffering through the brutal winters, no one is interested that we are having good weather. It's depressing and considered bad taste to talk about it. When we are suffering through agonizing heat waves and droughts, no one cares.

During the snowstorms last year in the East our papers were filled with stories of sacrifice, hardship, and devastation. During our summer, we get an occasional page-one picture of a blonde with three ounces of clothing on her back (none on her neck) frying an egg on the sidewalk. No one looks at the egg.

Have you ever heard anyone ask Johnny Carson, "How HOT was it?" Absolutely not.

Elections are won and lost over the ability to clear roads after a snowstorm, but have you ever heard of a mayor being defeated because she couldn't handle "sweat"?

If any of you has an ounce of charity for your fellow person, you will indulge me while I share with you an Arizona summer.

It's where a woman puts on a pair of oven mitts so she can touch her steering wheel.

It's where you go to a Little League game and have it called "due to lightness."

It's where a bride waxes her wedding ring melt and wonders if she's still married.

Where deodorant ads are considered fiction.

Where you cultivate fat friends so you'll always be around shade.

A reader just sent me a clipping on things that are "in" and "chic." According to the story, "sweating profusely" is definitely "in."

No one should be allowed to have this much "style."

NEW YORK (UPI) — Polka dots are on the spot this season, on hats, shirts, skirts, belts, jewelry, handbags, even stationery and bedspreads.

Not since the heyday of the Katzenjammer kids in the 1930s have dots been so prevalent on the fashion scene.

Polka dots' name dates from the early 1800s, say researchers for a leading fashion jewelry manufacturer, when the dance called polka caught on throughout Europe and America.

Montz hospital tourney raises $4,200

SUN VALLEY — The Montz Community Hospital Auxiliary's Golf Tournament held Aug. 4 at Ekborn raised the $4,200 needed to buy the new procedural table for the emergency room of the hospital.

First place winners were Al Peace and Susan Coutner. Second place went to lots of 36 persons competed in the golf tournament.

The Auxiliary plans to have the popular string fling golf tournament at approximately the same time next year.

Jack and Betty Mallowney from Twin Falls won the drawing for the week's stay in the Condominium in Rancho Mirage, Calif.

Woman campaigns against hair spray

Judy Bralman-Lipson says lung damage caused by hair spray.

By MARK D. FRANK
 ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI)—It was Christmas 1968. Judy Bralman-Lipson had had her third child just a few days before. Then, without warning, she developed a bad cough and began spitting up blood.

Doctors first diagnosed the frightening symptoms as pneumonia. Her condition worsened. Her illness was diagnosed as lung cancer.

Surgeons cut into her chest and discovered up to 60 "rounded nodules" in her lungs. They removed a portion of the housewife's left lung.

A pathologist, after requesting her to bring all the aerosol sprays from her home, determined the nodules were "inhalation abscesses" caused by the woman's favorite hair spray and not cancerous.

She was outraged, grateful and befuddled.

"I had used that hair spray about six months," she recalls. "I was absolutely shocked that it could be caused by an outside influence and I demanded to see my X-rays."

"I thought the doctors didn't want to tell me I was really dying," she said. "I said, 'How can you have lung cancer one day and be cured the next?'"

But laboratory tests convinced her that her infirmity had been caused by the hair spray.

From that day on, Mrs. Bralman-Lipson has been involved in one campaign after another, taking on the government and corporations in the name of product safety for consumers. Now a well-known consumer advocate, she is president of the Rochester-based Empire State Consumer Association, an all-volunteer group of 157 persons.

The association is primarily concerned with toy safety and the perils of cosmetics. Mrs. Bralman-Lipson has been instrumental in having certain products temporarily removed from shelves or having warning labels affixed to them.

She served two "frustrating" years from 1975-77 on the federal Product Safety Council.

"I was pretty disgusted when I served because everything was dragging on," she said. Government officials, she said, "don't do anything until they have a death toll or body count."

"She has been threatened with lawsuits one by the hair spray manufacturer—and with arrest. Her house had to be guarded several years ago when she took on a company with alleged underworld connections.

"I'm not frightened by the size of the company if the facts are right," she said.

"But now," she said, "the companies deal with us by talking to us."

Success is measured not in whether a product is banned, but whether it's taken off store shelves until a final determination on the product's safety is made.

"I resent being a guinea pig, particularly here in Rochester because we're a test market," she said. "They tell us products are safe and they're not. People figure if it's on the shelves it's safe. Everything should be questioned."

Soon after her recovery, she participated in a boycott of local supermarkets that resulted in the shunning of one local supermarket chain falling to record lows.

"I found out then that we can register a protest of vote at the checkout counter," she said.

She's currently petitioning Washington to ban genital sprays. She also wants perfumed tampons banished.

She generated publicity over aerosol, non-stick food sprays because of the chemical fumes. "Kids get high off that stuff and there've been several deaths because of that."

Her group conducts a Christmas toy survey. "Last year we found potential hazards in projectile toys—again."

She's concerned with chemicals in toys. "People have complained about their children breaking out. Why should children have to break out from a toy?"

"Toys with sharp edges are on her unsafe list. And she wants improvements made in existing products.

"There are absolutely no standards for skateboards. Some are so shabbily built it's ridiculous."

"I try to practice what I preach," she said. "In my house we avoid processed food. I bake my own bread. We don't use foods with nitrates."

The youngest of her five children play with building blocks.

There are no aerosol spray cans in her home. "Those products are bad for us and our environment," she said.

Heat pump appears best help in affording another winter's bills

By ED BRUSKE
 ©The Washington Post

Some people are looking at the prospect of a 50 percent increase in their home heating oil bill and wondering if they can even afford another winter. They may have to make some difficult choices. One of these could be whether to buy a heat pump. The newest use of a heat pump is in conjunction with an existing oil or gas furnace.

Both York and Lennox make heat pump systems that can be added to existing furnaces. Attaching the pump to the furnace eliminates the need for the indoor blower and the backup electric resistance heating coil that normally comes with the heat pump.

The pump and the furnace are wired together and equipped with sensors. They are programmed to operate under a system that takes best advantage of each device's "efficiency factor" according to the different costs of fuels. The heat pump heats first until it reaches a "balance point" temperature, the temperature at which it makes more sense to heat with the furnace. Once the furnace has raised the temperature sufficiently, the heat pump switches on again.

While heat pumps are no panacea and do not warrant throwing out your gas or oil furnace, they can be added to your present system to save fuel.

"I personally might be tempted to do that because then I might be able to get by on only one tank of oil for the whole winter," said David Dildon, of the National Bureau of Standards. "The manufacturers originally developed the hybrid heat pump-oil or gas furnace combination) for the New England area."

"This industry right now doesn't have any better answer to the fuel shortage crisis than the add-on heat pump," said Don Rittgers, general product manager of York Davidson of Borg-Warner.

From roughly 20 years of relative obscurity, the heat pump is emerging as a means of relieving the energy pinch. Although it still does not compete economically with natural gas prices, operating one is half as expensive as running an electric resistance heating system; and if oil prices keep going up, it may soon be cheaper than using oil as well.

"The truth is somewhere in the middle, depending on the product you pick," said Dildon.

Washington, D.C., tends to be on the borderline of this issue. Further south, heat pumps tend to be more effective. Further north they are not.

The reason is that heat pumps heat with warmth extracted from the outside air. This heat is always present, even in the winter, as long as there is a sun to shine.

The pump works like a backwards refrigerator (refrigerators exhaust warm air). A closed loop coil contains a refrigerant that expands in the outdoor cycle and gives off cold. The refrigerant is then pumped back into the house and condensed to give off heat. (In summer, the cycles are reversed and the heat pump becomes an air conditioner.)

Heat pumps have been found to provide warmth even at temperatures of minus 30 degrees, though their efficiency begins to drop off at around 20-30 degrees and diminishes at an increasing rate at temperatures below that. Rittgers estimates that a sound heat pump, properly sized, can handle the complete heating needs of a home at temperatures between 23-43 degrees.

Most heat pumps have an electric resistance heating coil as a backup system.

There are dozens of heat pump manufacturers, and the cost of one 3-ton unit, enough to heat the average-size home, can vary. Both the add-on heat pumps and the standard ones with electric resistance heating seem to run consistently around $2,000.

Westhouse, for instance, makes two models. The lower-priced one retails for $1,600-$2,000; the higher-priced for $1,800-$2,200.

Dildon suggests whatever manufacturer you buy from, you purchase his top-of-the-line product. The difference in costs, he said, will pay for itself in added efficiency. When you shop for one, ask for the "energy efficiency rating" (EER). The higher the better.

To operate efficiently, heat pumps need the proper duct work. If you have an old house with dated duct work, you may need to make alterations first. Before you buy the pump, be sure the duct work is inspected.

If you want to heat and cool only a small area of the house, you may only need a room heat pump. Carrier is one manufacturer of window units, and should have its latest model out this month. Carrier makes two types: one with an automatic defrost control and the other without.

Phil Sheridan, 74, entertains passengers in cruise around Manhattan Island

Kelkers to operate Hansen's T.F. office

TWIN FALLS — Gus and Betty Kelker have been named field assistants to U.S. Rep. George Hansen and will operate the Twin Falls Congressional office, the congressman announced Thursday.

This will be the second time the husband-wife team has headed a Congressional office, having served for three years in Hansen's state office in Boise. They accepted that post after Kelker retired as executive editor of the Times-News and had served a year as editor of the Journal of Commerce, a Boise based business newspaper.

They resigned the Congressional posts in Boise in 1977 and returned to Twin Falls to reside. Prior to going to Boise they had resided in Twin Falls for over 40 years.

In the Twin Falls office, which serves Magic Valley, Mrs. Kelker will handle investigative case work and office procedure and Kelker the other duties involved in liaison between private citizens, government agencies and Congress.

During the years they have resided in Twin Falls the Kelkers have been active in community affairs including the Chamber of Commerce, the Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Kiwanis Club, Historical Society, aviation circles, the 20th Century Club and the Order of Eastern Star. Both are active members of the First-United Presbyterian Church.

While serving in Boise, in the identical positions they are fulfilling in Twin Falls, they formed one of only four husband-wife teams starting Congressional offices in the United States.

The Twin Falls (Magic Valley) office is located in the Federal Office Building at 1061 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

He's gone as far as moon in New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — Phil Sheridan has cruised more than the distance from the earth to the moon — more than 236,000 miles — without leaving New York Harbor.

Since 1953, the 74-year-old Sheridan has completed the 35-mile circle around Manhattan Island more than 6,500 times as a tour commentator for the Circle Line.

Dressed in white slacks, a navy blue blazer and a dirty white yachting cap, Sheridan mixes informative commentary and homespun philosophy with jokes to entertain passengers on the three-hour, non-stop cruise. To wit: Pointing to the Statue of Liberty, he says: "The old lady's 94 years old. I'm 74 and she's in a lot better shape than me."

"In a democracy, you get up and say what you think and hope you get away with it."

"The weaker sex is the stronger sex because of the weakness of the stronger sex for the weaker sex."

He enjoys laughing with the passengers at his own jokes. His smile, partially hidden by a bushy white mustache, comes easily.

The son of Irish immigrants, he worked the nightclub circuit in the 1930s and later appeared on Broadway in the original "Showboat," and with Eddie Cantor in "Smiles" and "Whoopie."

In 1946, Sheridan took a job as a guide at the Empire State Building's observatories and eventually worked his way up to promotion manager. After seven years with the Empire State Building, he became a tour commentator for the Circle Line and has been at it ever since.

Sheridan points out the George Washington Bridge, a few miles up the Hudson River. If clouds obscure the view, he'll admit "It's a lousy day for sightseeing."

The tour boat passes abandoned piers that once serviced luxury passenger liners. "There's no more passenger ships flying the American flag," he says with a hint of regret.

As the boat rounds the southern tip of Manhattan, Sheridan takes a break. "I'll see you at the Brooklyn Bridge."

"Take pictures, walk around, buy an ice cream cone, but please don't leave the ship."

He down beside a passenger, popping a throat lozenge in his mouth. "Helps the speaking voice."

He had a heart attack last December. "The first thing I asked my doctor was, 'When can I play tennis again?'" He says his doctor is letting him play soon.

He has thought of going back to the stage. "I have my dreams. But the competition is tough."

The average moth catch per trap indicates 0.25% damage to beans on an area wide basis in the Magic Valley for 1979. Trap counts are only 10% of the 1977 and 1978 catches. Peak moth flight was July 27. Treatments should be applied, if necessary, August 6-16. Fields in heavy bloom between July 23 and 31 will be most susceptible to damage.

Beans blooming after August 1 will not be damaged considerable. Growers should consider their area cutworm history prior to 1977 and 1978 in making treatment decisions.

This program is conducted by the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service, USDA-SEA, funded by the Idaho Bean Commission, Green Giant, and with the cooperation of Del Monte Corporation and Ken-Spray.

Firefighting crews refueled by helicopter

BOISE (UPI) — Crews returning from the Mortar Creek fire in the heart of Idaho's wilderness waited for a last supper before going home Wednesday night.

With hooks of joy, they found the energy to play softball as they waited for buses to take them home for a few days of rest. The men were killing time at the Boise Interagency Fire Center, the headquarters for firefighting in the West.

"It's hot and dirty up there," said Dave Myers, Nampa. "It's a miserable job but, somehow, we all like it."

About 20 of the men were still remembering Monday when they raced up Dome Creek canyon to avoid flames that engulfed the stream as winds fanned the blaze.

"I'll tell you one thing is for sure," said Chuck Benger, also of Nampa. "I've quit smoking. When we ran up that mountain I was coughing and wheezing and, right then, I said I'd never smoke a cigarette again."

The crews from the Nampa-Caldwell area, eastern Oregon and another group that left the Willow Creek fire in Wyoming — now under control — were hungry and tired but their enthusiasm never waned.

"Let's go home," one man yelled as more than 100 men cheered.

"It's a good feeling realizing you're doing something good out here," Benger said. "I'm an avid fisherman and hunter and it felt good for me to be saving some wildlife."

For others, the best part of the hot, treacherous job is the high pay they receive for endangering their lives. Members of a helicopter tactical crew bound for Mortar Creek from the Wyoming fire, said they expect to receive hazard pay as they help helicopter pilots transport food and equipment to the front lines of the fire.

"I do this as a summer job," Jim Trospetz, Santa Barbara, Calif., said. "I can just about finance a whole year of college with the work I do in one summer. So, you see, it's worth it for me."

The men said they successfully contained the Willow Creek fire and didn't feel too tired to enter what fire officials call one of the worst blazes in Idaho's history, burning about 58,000 acres near Mortar Creek.

"Sure, we've been working 15-hour shifts for about four days," John Gilroy, Thousand Oaks, Calif., said. "But if we're needed, that's all that matters."

A big steak dinner at cafeterias near Gowen Field awaited the busloads of firefighters whose uniforms still smelled of smoke. Their dirty sleeping bags and backpacks lying on the ground looked as if they had worn thin with hard use.

Ramiro Espinoza, a Mexican American, you know, and they're used to a life of hard work," he said. "They've grown up with picking vegetables and, right now, it's onion picking time so they've got to be making good money to leave the fields."

"And in the winter they work in a sugar factory. That's even harder work than fighting fires so these men are some of the best firefighters on the lines."

The weary men boarded buses still cheering and hooting.

"Let's go home," their leader repeated. "Yeah, let's go home."

Wolf will remain free while appealing sentence

BOISE (UPI) — A former Ada County Commissioner candidate likely will remain free while appealing his conviction on prostitution racketeering charges.

Fred Wolf, sentenced Tuesday to three years in the Idaho State Penitentiary by 4th District Judge W.E. Smith, said he will seek to have his conviction on six felony charges overturned. The offenses include accepting the earnings of a prostitute and recruitment of a prostitute.

Wolf must post a $10,000 appeal bond. He said he will be able to come up with the money.

Keeping lines supplied

While some fire crews returned to Boise to rest, Wayne Dawson, high supply officer at the Interagency Fire Center, and Howard Pickett moved mop-up outfits prior to loading aboard helicopter for remaining crews in the Loon Creek fire area. Crews in the Mortar Creek area were also being kept busy. Crews from the Boise Interagency Fire Center and another outfit were helping the 2,000 men fighting the fire.

Sludge suit to wind up on Monday

Camper advice given

TWIN FALLS — The Sawtooth National Forest Service Thursday urged campers to comply with fire restrictions now in effect at five national forests in the state.

The areas affected include the Sawtooth, Boise, Payette, Challis and Salmon national forests where stricter regulations, prompted by extreme dry conditions and limited high fire danger, went into effect today.

The Forest Service has not restricted firewood cutting at this time. But woodcutters are urged to use extreme caution and to be equipped with the required shovel, bucket, ax, and fire extinguisher.

Sawtooth Forest officials are considering a ban on woodcutting in the South Hills and the Cassia division of the Sawtooth National Forest.

Sawtooth National Forest spokeswoman Velda Lawrence said the dry conditions are serious, but not critical.

Lawrence added the forest is encouraging people to camp in developed sites by removing camping charges at those sites.

Campgrounds around the Stanley Basin area lakes are filling by mid-morning, the service said. Designated campgrounds along the Salmon River and the Wood River are usually available weekdays but are filling up on weekends.

Campfires are not allowed outside of designated campgrounds and then only in existing fireplaces or fire rings.

The ban extends to the use of hibachis and portable charcoal grills.

Smoking is prohibited except within enclosed vehicles, buildings, boats or rafts, or in areas cleared of flammable material.

The restrictions are in effect until the fire danger abates and weather conditions change.

Forest rangers will be making periodic spot checks in campgrounds.

TWIN FALLS — Lawyers, witnesses, and observers are finding sewer sludge to be a sticky matter in court.

About 50 residents near a site west of the airport used by the city for dumping sewer sludge filed suit earlier this summer. The residents want the practice stopped through a court ordered injunction.

A hearing into the city of Twin Falls' practice of disposing sewer sludge near the airport began Monday in what many thought would be a one-day hearing.

Due to a disagreement Thursday over which dump sites are at issue, completion of the case will be delayed until Monday.

According to the residents, the major problem is smell. The odor from the sludge is a nuisance and could be a health hazard, the plaintiffs say.

Several testified to that Wednesday and Thursday.

The city's position, as argued Monday and Tuesday, is its sewage treatment plant's malfunctioning heat treatment unit requires disposal of the sludge; until new sites are approved, it has no alternative to dumping at the airport site; and the practice does not constitute a health problem.

Both sides in the case concluded testimony. Only final arguments by the respective lawyers remain.

Thursday's session dealt with problems reported with the disposal of sludge at a site other than the airport site, known as the Ellis Fuller property. The site is located seven miles south of Twin Falls.

Elmer Hiler of Twin Falls reported seeing sludge in a February thaw run-off in that area. The issue of the Fuller property first surfaced Wednesday when Barbara Crawford of Twin Falls testified spring run-off had entered her property.

City Attorney Charles Brumback argued repeatedly the Fuller site was not within the three-mile radius specified in the original complaint.

He added the city had not prepared to defend the use of that site.

Twin Falls attorney Lloyd Webb, representing the residents, said the complaint's intent was to include the Fuller property. If necessary, amendments to that effect would be made, he said.

An on-site determination of the property's location would be made, Webb added.

Fifth District Judge Theron Ward scheduled final arguments for Monday at 10 a.m.

Bicycles booming bigger than ever

By DAVIS MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The history books are wrong.

The Wright Brothers blew it.

Recent economic trends show without a doubt Orville and Wilbur should never have sold their bicycle shop.

Largely because of skyrocketing gasoline prices, and a reluctant admission exercise is—a necessary part of life, America is in the midst of perhaps the greatest bicycle boom ever.

Twin Falls is no exception. A survey of local bicycle shops reveals sales are significantly higher than in previous years.

"If I can get them I'll sell in excess of 800 bikes this year," said Gale Mott, a co-owner of the Spoke and Wheel Bike Shop. That's a sharp increase in sales over 1978, Mott said.

Nationwide perhaps 15 million bikes will be sold this year, Mott said. "Every bicycle the main companies are building is selling." That compares with estimates a year ago that no more than 10 million bikes would sell nationally in 1979.

The demand is so high, Mott added, "that it's a miracle if you were to order a quality bike and get it within two months."

"Why the surge in bicycle sales?"

"Gas. Period. That's it. Just that. The price," Mott said.

Demand is also high at Valley Schwinn Cycles in Twin Falls.

"Everybody's behind" in shipping bikes, said employee Chris Crum. Demand is simply outpacing supply. A three months wait after ordering a bike is now not uncommon, he added.

The demand in Twin Falls seems to have increased by 40 percent over last year, Crum said, a situation not restricted just to Idaho.

A recent conversation he had with the owner of the second largest bike shop in California indicates bike demand is even higher in that state, Crum said.

One indication of the Twin Falls demand is in their traditional Christmas order, he said. Last year Valley Schwinn Cyclesy ordered 200 bicycles for Christmas. This year 500 were ordered.

Crum speculates on the reason for the increase — the rising price of gas. Many of the new bike owners are using their new forms of transportation to get to and from work. Others hope to use the bikes for exercise.

Haffner's Key and Bike Shop is also swamped. In the 2 1/2 years he's worked at the shop, "demand has almost doubled," said manager Bradley Andersen.

"The main thing is the gas prices," Andersen said. "They can't afford the gas."

Demand is so high, Andersen added, that many of the major brand names are sold out until next year.

But while Twin Falls residents are peddling away from the gas stations in what appear to be record numbers, the Twin Falls city government seems stuck in low gear.

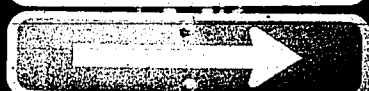

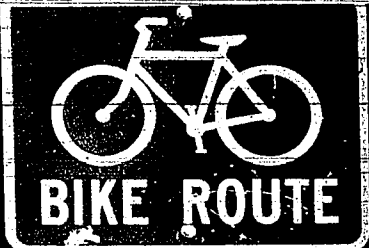

The city erected signs marking bike paths two years ago, said Community Development Director LaMar Orton. Since then, gas prices have nearly doubled, but the city has largely ignored bicycle safety.

The project isn't malicious, Orton said. But with a 1 percent initiative restrictions, funding isn't available to improve the bike paths. Suggestions have been made, he added, to construct separators between the paths and the main street.

"That would probably make it safer and give the bike rider some legitimacy," Orton said.

One suggestion which may soon be formally presented to the city council is an increase in bike registration fees, Orton said. Presently bike riders pay a $1 fee for a permanent cycle registration. Not only is that fee low, and permanent, but the law is infrequently enforced.

If the fee were to be made yearly, and raised to perhaps a couple of bucks, the new funding could be used on improving bike paths, Orton suggested.

Free children's movie today

TWIN FALLS — Children of all ages will be treated to a movie today by the Twin Falls Department of Parks and Recreation.

Friday will be Kid Appreciation Day, according to Chad Browning, recreation director for the department. The city will sponsor a free Jerry Lewis movie at 10 a.m. at the Twin Cinema, on the corner of Eastland Drive and Kimberly Road. Free snacks will also be distributed, said Browning.

The movie will mark the end of the department's summer recreation program.

Highway worker killed

MALTA — A Shoshone man was killed instantly Thursday after being run over at a work site, Idaho State Police said.

Sherman F. Sorenson, 50, of Shoshone, was supervising a state highway department crew when he was struck by a department truck. The accident occurred on U.S. Highway 77, about seven miles west of Malta. Sorenson was reported struck about 2:45 p.m.

According to a report filed by State Police Cpl. Lealle Stimpson, the truck, driven by Jerry R.

Sturgeon, 35, of Shoshone, apparently backed into Sorenson.

The truck moved at a low rate of speed, but fatally injured Sorenson. He was pronounced dead at the scene and taken to Payne Mortuary at Burley.

Four fires hit Magic Valley

MAGIC VALLEY — Lightning caused four fires in Blaine and Lincoln counties Wednesday and Thursday, according to Shoshone-based fire officials.

Andy Payne, assistant fire control officer for the Shoshone district of the Bureau of Land Management, said lightning started three fires about 7 p.m. Wednesday in Blaine County, burning about 14 acres of brush and sparse stands of quaking aspen and pine trees.

He said a 25-person crew was being rushed to fight a 50-acre brush fire about 8:30 p.m. Thursday in the desert, some 15 miles northeast of Richfield.

The BLM is spraying retardant on the fire in an effort to control the flames.

Vickie Nelson, dispatcher for the Burley BLM district, reported a one-acre fire burned brush near the Murtaugh Bridge.

Twin Falls County budget dips by $500,000

By Dave Jackson
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Because of frozen tax revenues and less help from the federal government, Twin Falls County will have $500,000 less to spend on government services next year.

The county commissioners are proposing a county budget with $14,118,356 in total expenditures for fiscal year 1980. The figure is $500,356 lower than last year's budget of $14,677,744.

The budget includes $11,820,000 for Magic Valley health care and $1,100,110 for 5th District Court, both of which are self-supporting by way of fees. In declaring last week that the hospital could make a profit of its own next year, BVMH fiscal affairs director James Alger saved the county from a bleak financial outlook. Last year the hospital cost the county $880,000.

A new funding formula for the South Central District Health Department will give the county a $14,128 break. But this and the hospital savings are still not enough to catch up with inflation or counteract the revenue loss that other county departments will bear in the harshest cost-of-living increases. The commission granted each county department head a 7 percent budget increase earmarked for employee raises.

The county will receive only $4,500,000 from federal and federal property taxes next year. The commission is in the preliminary implementation of a new revenue initiative which the revenue amount of $1,300,000 will be reduced to $1,100,000 in 1980. The county will receive $1,100,000 from federal property taxes next year.

Some major property values have risen, the assessor's office will have to reduce the number of mills levied against each property owner, so as not to bring in more money than last year.

Because of the freeze, property taxes should only go up in school districts where voters passed an override levy this May, according to County Commission Chairman Merl Leonard.

The commissioners anticipate $123,868 less next year's revenue sharing money due to a relatively low unemployment rate and relatively low property taxes in the county, Leonard said. The county received $338,137 this year but anticipates $254,319 in new funds next year. Including money carried over from this year, the budget lists $20,000 as the total revenue sharing funds available next year.

One reason the county's property taxes were low even before the 1 percent initiative passed, said Leonard, is that the commissioners were using "in-levy" funds instead of raising taxes. These funds are paid by the federal government to the county to help pay property taxes on federal lands within the county. For next year the federal government will pay the county $422,466 — 20 percent less than last year's $474,978 payment.

Congress last year appropriated $1.2 billion in "in-levy" money for all 50 states based on population. The money was to be distributed to states based on population. The state of Idaho discovered their computations were much too low. Instead of appropriating the $60 million more it would have taken to correct the error, Congress decided to penalize the other states, said Leonard, and all states were penalized.

Excluding money generated by the county's own property taxes, Twin Falls County will also receive an average of $1,300,000 from federal lands next year.

The biggest proposed increases over last year's budget include a 4 percent rise in the fee for the county's public defender, $11,000 more, a 10 percent increase for solid waste disposal, $11,000 more, a 10 percent hike for the county coroner, $1,250 more, and a 10 percent rise for the county prosecutor's office ($10,186 more).

The biggest proposed cuts are 11 percent (a $20,700 reduction) for the assessor's office, 9.4 percent ($14,128) for public health, 8.6 percent ($9,000) for the poor fund, and 5.9 percent ($9,361) for janitorial expenses.

Leonard stressed that the proposed fee of $61,000 for a public defender does not mean the commissioner is willing to pay that much, only that they wanted to be sure enough was budgeted. The commissioner is waiting for a committee of the local bar association to recommend a city law firm to take the defender contract for the next two years. Leonard said he urged the committee's chairman, Twin Falls attorney James May, to submit the name of the firm and its bid for the job before the budget was published.

"The committee has failed to act," said Leonard. "They left us hanging on a limb."

He is concerned that the bid will be higher now that the $61,000 figure is public, but emphasizes the commissioner will not be obligated to accept it.

"If we feel that we can't live with the proposal we will investigate the possibility of hiring a full-time public defender and placing him here in the courthouse. We can't afford a horrendous cost."

Part of the extra money allocated for solid waste disposal will fund a transfer from the county to Blaine, said, so that residents will not have to haul their refuse all the way to the main county landfill two miles south and two miles west of the airport.

The biggest environmental problem is general air pollution. This year has forced the county to burn less solid waste and bury more, requiring the purchase of more space for the additional use of bulldozers.

Leonard said the commission is seriously considering a standard change of $1-per-cubic-yard-at-county-landfills to help meet the additional expenses.

Leonard said the county needs more money to perform autopsies required by law. The number of autopsies has been rising as the population grows, he said.

The county prosecutor's office needs $10,186 more next year to hire another assistant prosecutor, due to a recent criminal case load, Leonard said.

Explaining the cut in the assessor's budget, Leonard said the assessor's office did not replace two women employees who resigned for personal reasons.

The drop in the public health category is due to a new formula handed down by the Legislature for the funding of the South Central District Health Department, which serves the eight counties of the region. A county's contributions to the health department were formerly based on population, and Twin Falls County paid the lion's share, said Leonard. But the new formula combines the population factor with a county's assessed property valuation. Next year Blaine County, whose property values have risen faster and higher than those of the other seven counties, will pay more.

The decrease in the poor fund is because the commissioner over the past year, Leonard said, to help fewer indigents than they used to, have decided to reduce the number of people on the poor fund. This year anticipates an unexpected carryover of $47,136 in this category, which will go back into the general expense fund. Next year's proposed poor fund budget is $93,500.

The $9.361 decrease in the janitorial budget is strictly a cutback on expenses that can be ordered, said Leonard, who called the cut a temporary austerity measure that cannot be duplicated next year.

No part of the county budget is definite until Sept. 7. The full proposed budget will be published as a legal notice in the Times-News on 10 Oct. through the commission's office. Listen to comments from county residents who visit them at their Ombudsman office. The fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

State board gives tentative approval to education budget

BOISE (UPI) — The state Board of Education gave tentative approval to the 1981 budget request for education agencies and institutions Thursday, but immediately made plans to cut the total back today.

The board approved the general fund budget request of $111,819,300, a 17.8 percent increase over the current year's appropriation.

But board chairman Jay Clint Hoopes appointed a three-member committee to study "above maintenance" requests — requests beyond the cost of maintaining current programs and services — and return with recommendations for submission to Gov. John V. Evans and the Idaho Legislature.

The board motion directs members Janet Hay of Nampa, Eugene Miller of Coeur d'Alene and Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans to make suggestions to limit requests to no more than 13 percent above the current year's appropriation.

Hoopes said no single agency or institution should receive more than a 14 percent increase. The board also will suggest a 10 percent ceiling for the new request for 1981.

For colleges and universities, the tentative general fund request approved by the board is $29,889, an increase of 15 percent over the current appropriation. The tentative general fund request for junior colleges is $3,176,100, an overall 42 percent increase which includes a 50 percent increase for North Idaho College and a 31 percent increase for the College of Southern Idaho.

Later, the board heard conflicting warnings from the chairman and a member of the legislative joint finance-appropriations committee, which has asked all agencies and institutions to prepare "100 percent plans" showing the impact on programs in the 1981 appropriation is no greater than the current budget.

Sen. David Lytle, R-Emmett, committee chairman, reiterated statements made to the board in June and said he understood economic indicators in Idaho point to the possibility of state revenue being below expected levels.

He said the no-increase impact statement will help committee members make reductions if necessary and added, "It's so much better for you people to set this than the 20-member committee."

But a member of the committee, Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston, disputed what he called the "gloom and doom" forecast and urged the board "not to comply with the request."

He said the board instead should fulfill its statutory responsibility to outline education needs to legislators and warned the board it will be held responsible if the quality of education diminishes.

Once the impact statements are released, he said, committee publicity focusing on reductions will have a negative effect on out-of-state businesses which might be considering a move to Idaho.

He said fears over the future could cause faculty members to leave the state, particularly "the ones that are the best because they will have the easiest time getting jobs somewhere else."

Mitchell said he is more optimistic than Lytle about the economic future of the state and warned the board that "we can not let it appear to those outside... that we are standing still or moving backward."

Weekend outlook

Idaho gas supplies adequate

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho State Automobile Association managers Miller said Tuesday Boise will have a better supply of gasoline this weekend while supplies throughout the rest of the state will be adequate.

Miller said eight convenience stores and one gas stop would offer 24-hour, 7 days a week service in Boise. He said there are some stores which continue to limit sales hours to conserve supplies.

The association's weekly survey found Riggin's has outlets selling gasoline on Sundays until 10:30 p.m., New Meadows until 11 p.m., Stanley until 10 p.m., and Idaho City until 9 p.m.

The report showed adequate Sunday and 24-hour supplies in Mountain Home, Bliss, Jerome, Twin Falls, Ketchum, American Falls, Pocatello, Idaho Falls, and St. Anthony and Jackop, Nev.

The average price at full-service stations was 96.1 cents per gallon for regular, 102.8 cents for premium and 101.8 cents for no-lead. The average price at self-service outlets was 94.9 for regular, 100.2 cents for premium and 98.9 for unleaded. Average price for full-service diesel was 87.1 cents, and for self-service diesel was 82.8.

Miller said two Boise convenience stores would begin marketing gasoline Friday.

Congressional hopeful quits

BLACKFOOT (UPI) — One Democrat has decided not to pursue a congressional campaign, while another says she has not made up her mind whether to run.

"If I had the money, I'd like to go for Congress," said State Sen. Inez Merrill, D-Blackfoot, said, indicating, however, he won't run because he can't get enough money to finance a campaign.

Merrill said he had explored the possibility of "drumming up monetary support, adding he got "good response," but not enough to make him keep trying.

Meanwhile, Former State Sen. Diane Blyeu, the wife of her district's present representative, C.E. "Chick" Blyeu, said she was exploring a possible candidacy but had not decided whether to proceed.

The congressional seat in question is held now by Republican Rep. George Hansen.

Walter O'Malley

Hard-headed Dodgers' owner dies following lengthy battle with cancer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Walter Francis O'Malley, who found a gold mine and three world championships after he moved the Dodgers from Brooklyn to Los Angeles, died early Thursday following a lengthy battle with cancer. He was 75.

His death at Methodist Hospital in Rochester, N.Y., was attributed to congestive heart failure, but he had been under treatment for cancer for several months.

WALTER O'MALLEY ... dead at 75

O'Malley died less than one month ago, his wife, Kay, childhood sweetheart, passed away at their Los Angeles home on July 15.

The baseball world, from his own players to opponents, mourned his passing.

Former Dodger pitcher Don Drysdale said O'Malley's death was "a great personal loss" and "a terrible loss to baseball."

National League President Charles Kenney said, "I have lost a great man and I have lost a great friend" and baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said O'Malley "was as great an executive talent as I have ever known."

The Dodgers said a private funeral mass will be held for family members only. The time and place will not be announced.

O'Malley was a product of New York City, attended Jamaica High School and went on to the University of Pennsylvania, eventually got a law degree from Fordham University, night school and began practice as a corporation attorney in 1930.

He became counsel for the Dodgers in 1943. A year later he and the late Branch Rickey purchased 75 per cent of the Dodger stock with Ebbets Field where the Dodgers had played and couldn't acquire space for a modern and more profitable baseball park.

The Dodgers became probably the most profitable franchise in baseball following their move to Los Angeles, luring sell-out crowds with top-notch teams that were nearly always contenders even when they didn't win a pennant.

The Los Angeles Dodgers won the World Series in 1955, 1959 and 1963 in addition to the world title they won in 1955 while still in Brooklyn.

O'Malley was a hardheaded businessman but he kept ticket prices down to lure the fans into his beautiful $20-million Dodger Stadium. He was content to make most of his money on parking and concessions — restaurants and souvenir stands in addition to the hot dogs, peanuts and Crackerjack "peppy ante-revenue."

O'Malley exercised behind-the-scenes power among baseball owners and he was said to have verbally bludgeoned Horace Stoneham to move the Giants to San Francisco from New York so the Dodgers would have a regional rival. Another element in the win move was to help defray traveling costs for all teams by playing two teams on the Coast instead of making the long trip just to play one series.

O'Malley was a heavy-set man, phlegmatic in appearance. He seemed to screen his emotional reactions behind owlsh glasses. He had a quick tongue and was unflappable in turning aside questions from the press when he did not want to give a straight answer.

Hey, that hurts

Prospective varsity football players at Twin Falls High School gathered in the lockerroom Thursday morning as uniforms were issued for the upcoming season. Kris Oliver, a junior who hopes to crack the offensive line, struggles to get all his hair inside his new helmet. Varsity practices will begin Monday, with sophomore workouts set to begin Wednesday.

Baseball players both old and new mourn death of innovative executive

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Baseball players, owners and other fans Thursday mourned Walter O'Malley as a "great friend" and a "great executive" during his long and effective career as owner of the Dodgers both in Brooklyn and Los Angeles.

O'Malley, who died early Thursday of cancer at the age of 75, instilled a will to live in Roy Campanella and began practice in controlling auto accident, the old Dodger catcher said.

"Baseball has lost a tremendous person," said Campanella. "He was as close to me as my own father and brother."

O'Malley kept Campanella on the payroll after he was unable to play and gave him $30,000 from the receipts of a baseball game.

Flags were ordered at half staff at the Los Angeles city hall in O'Malley's memory and Mayor Tom Bradley said, "We shall miss the man, but we are grateful for his memory. The city of baseball has lost one of its giants. Los Angeles has lost one of its finest citizens."

A typical player reaction was a statement from Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey said, "It's a great loss for all of us. We do all much richer for having known him and much poorer now that he's gone. He went much deeper than sports itself."

Dodger manager Tom Lasorda said, "He was a super, super guy. He was really a fan at heart. He loved this game. He loved his fans. He loved his country very dearly. After my playing days were over, he gave me the chance to stay in this game."

E. J. "Buzzi" Bavasi, a longtime Dodger executive before he went to the San Diego Padres and then to the California Angels, said, "I, like so many others in baseball, will be forever grateful to Walter F. O'Malley for giving us the opportunity to prove we could do a job in the major leagues. I could name Walter's accomplishments by the dozens. But the ones he was most proud of are his two fine children, Terry and Peter."

"Baseball has lost a great man and I have lost a great friend," said National League President Charles Kenney. "Walter O'Malley, over a period of years did more good for professional baseball than any one man."

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said O'Malley was "as great an executive talent as I have seen or think I am apt to see ... His skills would have flourished in any walk of life. He was unfailing in his support of the commissioner's office and was a powerful ally for the good of the game."

Walter Alston, an unknown who was given the chance to manage the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1954 and stayed with them through 1976 in Los Angeles, said, "He was one of the best. I was associated with him for 23 years in the majors and about 10 years in the minors. He always treated me fair. He was the fairest man I ever met in baseball."

Don Drysdale, the big right hander who won 209 games with the Dodgers, said, "I feel a great personal loss because of the relationship I had with Walter O'Malley throughout the years. Everything I have one to the Dodgers. They gave me my start. It's a terrible loss to baseball."

Another former Dodger star, Duke Snider, said, "Mr. O'Malley loved his players and the team. He was a businessman and a person who loved to have fun with people. We were all part of a family. Whenever I'd see him, I'd say, 'Walter, I'd see him, I'd say, 'Walter would introduce me as 'one of my boys.' He once advanced me some money on my salary for personal reasons. He was always doing this with his 'family.'"

Baltimore newspaper asks O's owner to prove it wrong

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The Baltimore News American asked Edward Bennett Williams Thursday to "prove us wrong" by promising the Baltimore Orioles will not fly away to Washington.

In a front page editorial, the newspaper asked Williams, who announced plans to buy the American league team last week, to prove its reports the team would move to Washington within three years is correct by stating his intentions.

"Show us by saying clearly and precisely that the Orioles will not play one single game in Washington next year, or the year after," the News American asked.

Williams, a prominent Washington attorney who is also president of the NFL Washington Redskins, criticized earlier reports by the News American and the Washington Post that the Orioles will play six to eight games in Washington next season and move there entirely within three years.

Williams called the reports "a madman's irresponsible journalism" while attending the Orioles-Milwaukee game Wednesday. He also reiterated that he will keep the team in Baltimore as long as the city supports the team.

"I stand behind every word I said," he said. "I've always believed a person's word — until it's proved untrue. That's all I ask now."

He also attacked both newspapers for quoting unidentified sources.

"They base the stories on unidentified sources. I don't know how you can knock unidentified sources. It's like attacking shadows," Williams said.

A spokesman for the News American said the paper stands by its story, and added, "Williams has yet to deny that the team will play at least some games in Washington next year."

The News American also asked Williams to be more specific in terms of Baltimore support.

"Tell us exactly what you mean by support in terms of time, dollars and attendance. We might not like being held hostage, but if we're going to be, we'd like to know the terms," the editorial said.

In an open letter to Williams, Sports Editor John Steadman asks him to publicly state his intentions.

"Baltimore" at this time desperately wants to be reassured, almost like an orphan in a storm: You have the influence and position to exert a powerful change in the attitude of an entire city."

No Olympic invitation Taiwan furious with IOC

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — Officials of the Republic of China and the International Olympic Committee were feuding at long distance Thursday over whether or not China would already have received a formal invitation to compete in the Moscow Olympics.

Taiwan hasn't yet received an invitation from Moscow to join the 1980 Olympic games while other countries were invited before mid-July, a year before the game's schedule, as the International Olympic charter stipulates, an official of China said.

The official of the Republic of China (Taiwan) Olympic Committee (ROCOC) said the organization has received all information and booklets of the 1980 Olympic Committee (IOC).

In Lausanne, Switzerland, however, a spokesman for the International Olympic Committee said no countries have yet received formal invitations. The spokesman said the IOC had instructed the Moscow Organizing Committee not to send out any invitations before January, 1980 — six months before the Games.

All countries who belonged to the Olympic movement at that time would be invited, he said.

Oakland A's: the foreign legion of baseball

By JOSEPH DURSO
©1979 N.Y. Times News Service

OAKLAND, CAL. — The sports business is booming these days up and down the Pacific. Everywhere, except in the nearby empty and forsaken home of the Oakland A's, the foreign legion of baseball.

They run horse races for $500,000 purses on the Alameda tracks near Los Angeles. They've got Kaeborn, the best one million home attendance last week, there, and Bill Walton selling tickets in San Diego. They held a "meet the fans" football scrimmage in San Francisco this weekend to launch the 49ers while the Oakland Raiders were beating the Dallas Cowboys in the Hall of Fame game in Canton, Ohio. A man named Steve Bus recently asked up $85 million to buy the Los Angeles Lakers Basketball Team, the Kings Hockey Team, the Forum and other properties. The California Angels seem to be streaking toward their first baseball season ever in Anaheim, Calif. A man named Steve Bus recently asked up $85 million to buy the Los Angeles Lakers Basketball Team, the Kings Hockey Team, the Forum and other properties. The California Angels seem to be streaking toward their first baseball season ever in Anaheim, Calif. A man named Steve Bus recently asked up $85 million to buy the Los Angeles Lakers Basketball Team, the Kings Hockey Team, the Forum and other properties. The California Angels seem to be streaking toward their first baseball season ever in Anaheim, Calif.

Charles Finley's ball club struggles in silence. This is a team with the worst record in the big leagues, a team that loses seven of every 10 games and that could lose 110 times this season. That's right, the A's have a worse record than the expansion clubs, Seattle and Toronto. They are averaging 4,500 customers a game, they reached 225,000 for the season only this weekend and they may hit all 32,000 by the end of September, which would fall far short of last year's disastrous level of 525,000.

It staggers the imagination and the memory to realize that these are the same Oakland A's who ruled the baseball world only four years ago. After moving from Kansas City, where they hit bottom in 1967, they finished in first or second place eight years in the locker room and winning on the field than anybody else in the American League five years in a row. Starting in 1972, they won the pennant and the World Series three years in a row.

They were, says Reggie Jackson, better than the current New York Yankees in hitting, fielding and front-line pitching. They were doing "lighting" in the locker room and winning on the field than anybody else in this decade. They played in uniforms of white, yellow, green and gold, and they had the only traveling mule in the business. They were the ultimate: a show, they didn't do was make a lot of money for the franchise or earn a lot of money for themselves. So, when the free-agent revolution transformed the sport in 1976, the biggest stars of the A's began to hit the road.

Catfish Hunter found a loophole in his contract, rushed through it and the flight was on. Rollie Fingers and Gene Tenace signed with San Diego. Joe Rudi switched to the Angels in Anaheim. Sal Bando headed for Milwaukee. The big man, Jackson, was traded to Baltimore before he could leap and eventually went to the Yankees.

Finley tried to survive the migration by selling some of his talent, but by then he had too many enemies who remembered his abrasive ways. But that didn't work, either. The baseball establishment tried to encourage a shift of the club's homeplace else, but his lease on the stadium has eight years to go. Now he is being sued by the coliseum authority, neglected by the baseball brass, beaten by other teams and worse, ignored by the fans.

Make no mistake, Finley is no bundle of joy. When he moved to Oakland in 1968, his manager was Bob Kennedy. A year later, Kennedy was gone and Hank Bauer got the job. A year after that, John McVie came. Then for three winning summers, Dick Williams, followed by Alvin Dark and Chuck Tanner. In 1977, Jack McKeon opened the season as manager and Bobby Winkles finished it. The next year, Winkles started and McKeon finished. They were like the Yankees, with Billy Martin followed by Bob Lemon followed by Billy Martin.

This season, the manager here is Jim Marshall, who has no pitcher with more than five victories and a team batting average of .238. These are the A's — the foreign legion of baseball.

Finley was in Chicago this weekend while his cousin, Carl, was minding the store. But Charlie wasn't the only person absent. The customer's, who are shunning or boycotting the team, stay away in droves. On April 16, only 653 showed up to see the A's beat Seattle, 6-0. On May 16, the "House" numbered 1,125. Last Friday, 1,566. On Saturday, 1,621. On Sunday, 2,198. Season tickets this year: 250.

Cadle birdies way to early PGA lead

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — George Cadle, a chunky five-year veteran in his first tour win, Thursday shot a sizzling birdie-under-par 62 to grab the first round lead in the $300,000 Greater Hartford Open.

Cadle, a 230-pound native of Knoxville, Ky., fired an eagle and 10 birdies to lead the field of 154 players in perfect golf weather on the short, 6,568-yard Wethersfield Country Club course.

Cadle had a four-stroke edge over early finishers Mike Hayes and Keith Fergus, who each carded a five-under 65.

One stroke behind at 67 were Gibby Gilbert, Gary McCord and Halie Green, the Hawaiian and New Orleans winners.

Heading a group at three-under 68 was Wayne Levi, the Quad-Cities winner.

Followers at two-under 69 included Ladd Nelson, the Inverrary winner, Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller and Colonial champion Al Geiberger, led a large field that came in at one-under 70.

Cadle, who plays out of Indian Wells, Calif., had a seven-under 63 at Quad Cities, where he finished 15th in the next round.

but he described Thursday's first round as "my best ever."

His almost flawless round was marred only by a bogey on the par-three 9th hole when his shot missed the green and he was forced to chip back and two-putted. His longest birdie putt was a 25-footer on the short par-three third hole.

He needed only 24 putts in compiling a five-under 30 going out and four-under 32 on the back nine.

"I knew I had a chance from the start when I started out with a birdie and birdie," he joked. The hefty golfer, who once had an interest in play football, said he had been upset with his game until the Quad-Cities but he made no predictions about how he would fare the rest of the way in the GHO.

"This is a streaky game. One day you can be on top; the next, you can be down."

"I had a tendency to get down on myself and I had to learn to control my temper," said Cadle, who was playing here the first time since 1972.

Hayes, starting off from the 10th tee, had a birdie and a bogey to even par at 38 going out. He sandwiched birdies around an eagle in the next three holes, then bogeyed and parred the rest of the way for a five-under 30 on the back nine.

Fergus, 25, playing for the first time here, summed-up most of the players' finding that the course was in excellent condition with fast greens.

Fergus, who had seven birdies and two bogeys in 18 holes, said "the winner here will probably have to be 20 below par, if not maybe lower."

NFL Cardinals shatter Atlanta

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Backup quarterback Steve Pliskiewicz threw four-second half, touchdown passes and Wayne Morris scored on two short runs in the first half to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 42-14 victory over the Atlanta Falcons Thursday night.

Jim Connors advances in net meet

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Jimmy Connors, extended to 16 games in the final set, rallied for a 5-7, 6-1, 9-7 victory over Balazs Taroczy Thursday to advance in the quarterfinals of the $75,000 U.S. Open Clay Court tennis championships.

Connors, the top seed of Belleville, Ill., ousted the 10th-ranked Hungarian in a three-hour match on the stadium court of the new Indianapolis Sports Center. He will meet young Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia in the next round.

Connors, the defending champion who is seeking his fourth clay court title, was down 2-5 in the third set and shook off a match-point in the 10th game before rallying to take the match.

In women's singles, unseeded Renee Richards, Newport, Beach, Calif., upset No. 4 Virginia Ruzici of Romania 7-5, 6-4. Third-seeded Evonne Goolagong Crawford of Australia ousted Anne Smith, Dallas 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, and No. 5 Regina Marikova of Czechoslovakia shipped Joanne Duval, Dallas, 6-2, 6-3.

No. 2 men's singles seed John McEnroe, Douglaston, N.Y., routed Ricardo Ycaza of Ecuador 6-1, 6-1, to qualify against Spain's Manuel Orantes, who beat Andres Gomez of Ecuador.

Gomez, trailing 4-2 in the first set, retired with a stomach ailment.

No. 3 Guillermo Vilas ousted Czech Tomas Smid 6-1, 6-1, to meet his Argentine countryman Jose Luis Clerc in the quarters. The fifth-seeded Clerc Elliot Teltscher, Palos Verdes, Calif., 6-3, 6-2.

No. 4 Jose Higueras of Spain, runner-up to Connors last year, beat Peter McNamara of Australia, 6-4, 6-2, and will meet either Enzo Arzuffi of Italy or Wojtek Fibak of Poland Friday.

Lendl ousted Chile's Jaime Fillol, 6-2, 7-5.

Connors, a father of less than two weeks, won three consecutive games on a service ace, his opponent's double fault and by holding service in the 18-55. Taroczy had match point in the 10th game, but Connors scrambled to chase and won the game when Taroczy hit a long forehand.

Connors took his first lead in the set in the 15th game for an 8-7 lead, breaking his opponent's service. He won the last four points of the 10th game, taking the match when Taroczy failed to return a serve.

Alzado eyes Spinks fight

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Promoter Greg Campbell said Thursday agreements were being made for a heavyweight boxing match between Lyle Alzado, an all-pro defensive tackle for the Green Bay Packers, and former heavyweight champion Leon Spinks.

Campbell has worked closely in the past with Muhammad Ali, who fought Alzado in an eight-round exhibition in Denver, Colo., July 14.

Campbell said the fight between Alzado and Spinks could be held in any one of several cities, including St. Louis and Las Vegas.

Alzado stunned the Broncos Wednesday by announcing his retirement from pro football to become a boxer. He was entering his ninth season with Denver.

His former agent, Ron Coffman, speculated Alzado's decision probably came during a meeting with Campbell during the exhibition bout against Ali.

"Greg's a good salesman and I guess he's Lyle's new agent," Coffman said.

Campbell, who is based in Madison, has handled several deals for Ali in past months.

Phillies sweep Expo series

By United Press International

The Philadelphia Phillies went a fourth straight Eastern Division title and they can be sweeping the first-place Pittsburgh Pirates to get it, a sweep of second-place Montreal will do nicely.

Manny Trillo and Bob Boone each delivered a two-run single Thursday when the Phillies scored five runs in the fifth inning to defeat the Expos 4-4 and give Nino Espinosa his 12th win of the season and Philadelphia a three-game sweep.

Garry Maddox led off the fifth against starter and loser Bill Lee by reaching on third baseman Larry Parrish's throwing error. Maddox was forced by Mike Anderson, but Larry Bowa singled and after Espinosa struck out, Pete Rose walked to load the bases. Trillo singled home Anderson and Bowa and Mike Schmidt doubled to score Rose and send Lee to the showers.

Reliever Stan Bahnsen walked Greg Luzinski, but Boone singled to left scoring Trillo and Schmidt. Anderson led off the sixth with his first homer of the year to give the Phils a 6-2 lead.

Orioles overhaul Milwaukee

By United Press International

Rich Dauer's two-run double with one out in the eighth inning Thursday night brought Mike Flanagan his 15th victory and ended the New York Yankees' 10-game losing streak with a 3-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

With one out in the eighth, pinch-hitter Gene Grower doubled off loser Jerry Augustine, 4-5, and Billy Smith came in to pinch-run. Al Bumbry singled Smith to third and Dauer followed with his two-run double down the left field line. Smith and Grower each collected three hits to back the two-hit pitching of Richard Wortham and led the Chicago White Sox to a 5-1 victory over the New York Yankees in the rubber game of a three-game series.

In gaining a split of the six games at Yankee Stadium this year, the White Sox tagged starter Catfish Hunter, 2-7, for four runs and then reached reliever Don Hood for a single run in the eighth. Wortham, 12-11, allowed an infield single to start the inning. The Orioles led off with Pinella's 11th home run of the season, an opposite field shot in the fourth.

Alan Trammell and Steve Kemp pinch-hit for Dauer, leading off the fifth inning to break a 2-2 tie and give the Detroit Tigers a 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Freddie Lopez came out of the bullpen with the bases loaded and struck in the sixth inning to preserve rookie Mike Chris' second major-league victory. Lopez, who picked up his 11th save, retired the side on just three pitches.

Amos Otis and Al Cowens belted back-to-back home runs and Larry Garza scattered 10 hits to pace the Kansas City Royals to a 10-3 victory

'Apple Dumpling' a wholesome treat

By SHELLY KINZEL
Times-News Writer

Walt Disney Productions is synonymous with family entertainment. The films are successful for three reasons — good character actors, continual action and general appeal. "The Apple Dumpling Gang Rides Again," a new Disney release currently at the Twin and Jerome cinemas, is a good example of this winning formula.

In this sequel, Tom Conway and Don Knotts are again teamed as two bumbling outlaws, only this time they are trying to go straight. Both Conway and Knotts are masters in the art of mugging Conway with his look of lighthearted bewilderment and Knotts with his quivering terror. They are also expert at physical comedy which abounds in the film.

In addition to this hapless pair we have Marshal Woody Bill Hitchcock (Kenneth Mars), whose vanity is only exceeded by his clumsiness; Tough Kate (Ruth Buzzi), a wry old lady who tells it like it is; and Big Mac (Jack Palance), the meanest, dirtiest culprit around. With talent like this, no matter how trite or silly the plot, the film has enough interest.

There are several stories which run concurrently, but none is particularly complicated or original. The basic conflict is the same as in 99 percent of what you see on your TV screen — the good guys vs. the bad guys. I wonder sometimes if children, for whom Disney films are so capably designed, are not capable of comprehending more subtle distinctions. Black-and-white thinking is both simple-minded and unrealistic. A children's feature, with shades of grey would be commendable, as would more provocative and challenging themes. Disney Productions, however, makes a living from selling "the tried-and-true," not from pioneering new ideas.

"The Apple Dumpling Gang Rides Again" is sleek family entertainment for all but tiny tots. Pre-schoolers may become fidgety very quickly, so if you must, unavoidably take along a few be prepared to buy a lot of popcorn!

Romantics still among us

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
United Press International

Most composers of modern classical music tend to use dissonance or harsh harmonies to get across their ideas, but not Richard Nanes. His Philadelphia-born Nanes is a successful businessman, president of a corporation in New Jersey, who is delightfully involved in the composition of romantic music.

Not so long ago Nanes began recording his own work and the albums caught the ear of the program director of New York's best-known classical music radio station. The program director played some of the selections on his "Listening Room" show, causing ripples, and then "waves" of excitement among its listeners.

Nanes' most recent album, "Romantic Encounters of the Classical Kind," (Delton 67321878) is a great tonic for jangled nerves and is also recommended for lovers of good music.

The first side consists of two nocturnes and a rhapsody and the other is devoted to Nanes' "Rhapsody and Fugue No. 2 in D Minor."

There is no doubt that Nanes admired the work of Chopin and Rachmaninoff, yet he is not an imitator. His own style can be felt from the beginning to the end of this exceptional recording.

The beginning of the rhapsody and fugue has a bit of the ferocity Chopin evidenced in trying to break away from the velvet of George Sandt and then Nanes creates a panorama of music which both grips and relaxes.

Nanes is at the keyboard in all of the compositions. This is a fine record for lovers of piano music.

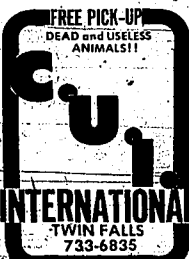

Those who would prefer to continue hearing pretty keyboard music should listen to "The Romantic Piano" (Columbia MGS3181), a two LP-set Album.

Raymond Legenthal is the pianist and Charles Mackerras and Elenzer de Carvalho conduct the London Symphony Orchestra in this extended concert of work by Anton Rubinstein, Xaver Scharwenka, Adolf von Henselt and Franz Liszt.

The album consists of four piano concertos — two by Rubinstein and one each by Scharwenka (finale only) and von Henselt — and "Potentanz" by Liszt.

"Scharwenka probably would have been a romanticist even if he had not been influenced by Liszt, who became his teacher."

AL PACINO

... homosexuals protest

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: What's the big deal about "Cruisin'" that movie Al Pacino and Paul Sorvino have been trying to shoot in New York amid the bustling battles with protesting homosexuals? Didn't I once see a different movie on the same theme — a detective on the trail of a killer of homosexuals? — T.H. of Waterford, Del.

A: You've got a good memory. T.H. In 1968, Frank Sinatra and Les Remick co-starred in "The Detective," in which Frank portrayed a cop tracking down a psychopathic murderer of a homosexual. This film, which was ahead of its time, got there first with candid and colorful glimpses of the New York gay bar scene and community.

HEAVY HAND DEPARTMENT: Life magazine saw the movie "10" and decided blonde bombshell Bo Derek should be its August cover. Fine and dandy until Bo's husband, actor John Derek (the usual to be married to Ursula Andress), insisted that he was the only person who would be permitted to photograph his wife. Life reluctantly agreed to consider Derek's pictures but after assessing them decided they could do better. A crew was dispatched from New York to Los Angeles but then on the eve of the photo session Derek canceled the whole deal. So no mag cover for Bo.

Q: Is it true that John Lennon and his wife Yoko Ono own three apartments in the building where they live in New York, and are now angling for still another? Are they in the real estate business, or just pad-happy? — J.L. of Geneva, N.Y.

A: The Lemons are simply wild about the famed castle-like landmark, the Dakota, and delight in snaring super layouts in this fabled co-op. Matter of fact, they've even commissioned an artist to design their personal stationery to show the Dakota romantically glimpsed through the trees of Central Park.

HELLO-BIRDIE—The "Man" that created the smash hit musical "Bye Bye Birdie," which was later a successful movie, are trying for a Broadway first. Composer Charles Strouse, lyricist Lee Adams and book writer Michael Stewart are back together doing the sequel to "Birdie" with the working title of "Birdie II" and it will take place in today's times, 19 years later. Some of the original cast, including Dick van Dyke and Chita Rivera, will be reassembled for the sequel. The musical featured a hit song titled "What's the Matter With Kids Today?" and maybe some two decades later it will have the answer.

Q: Who do famous personalities, such as Robert Redford, think they're kidding when they travel under assumed names to avoid crowds at airports and hotels? Nobody's really fooled, right? — Y.M. of Gary, Ind.

A: Although many TV and movie stars travel under various assumed names, more often than not, they do so more for ego than to move about unnoticed. Some stars like to think they will be recognized despite their attempts to fool the public. Imagine Redford's feelings, for example, when he showed up in the Chicago suburb of Lake Forest to scout locations for "Ordinary

Gossip

People" a movie based on Judith Guest's novel which Redford will direct. He used a pseudonym in trying to get reservations at a local hotel, but was turned down flat. Irony is that the manager of the fully-booked hotel said, had she known he was Redford, suitable accommodations would probably have materialized.

Q: What's the reaction of the family of the late Tyrone Power to the "Finner" book and stories about his supposed bisexuality? — J.M. of Hartsdale, N.Y.

A: Power's widow, Debbie, now Mrs. David Laurence of Mexico City, has written close friends of the late actor expressing her strong displeasure with the treatment Power is getting in book form. She maintains Power, who died 21 years ago at the age of 44, is getting a bum rap from money-hungry sensationalists who never knew him. So far, however, no comments for publication from Debbie nor from Power's 20-year-old son, Tyrone Power IV. Nothing either from his daughters Komina and Taryn, or Power's second wife, Linda Christian, although Linda has reportedly expressed similar disapproval.

Q: I've noticed mucho publicity centered about Gloria Vanderbilt's recent Southampton party for her friend Oona O'Neill Chaplin, visiting from Switzerland. Am I alone in thinking they look so much alike? — N.G. of Providence, R.I.

A: Oona, Charlie Chaplin's widow as well as the daughter of Nobel Prize playwright Eugene O'Neill, and Gloria bear a striking resemblance that's so uncanny, at times they look just like sisters. Way back when the two famous girls were school chums, they were forever being mixed up by fellow students and even their teachers. Nowadays, Oona is often stopped and excitedly asked for Gloria's autograph and vice versa. And when both happen to be together the result can be baffling, causing mutual giggles.

'Jaws' resurfaces
TWIN FALLS — "Jaws," the blockbuster movie that brought fame to the great white sharks and paranoia to surfboarders, will premiere Aug. 18 on SHOWTIME, Premium Channel H. The station's biggest film presentation to date, "Jaws" will be shown throughout the month and into September.
 Directed by Steven Spielberg, the Universal film has earned $200,000,000 in world wide rentals — a first in motion picture history.

The gazebo in the Twin Falls City Park was beautiful to look at but completely non-functional. The acoustics were so poor the band was forced to play on the lawn in front of it. (Cover and inside photos courtesy of the Idaho Historical Collection; Twin Falls Public Library)

Victim of 1% initiative

The city band faces uncertain future

By TRUDITARIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — This year's budget cut by the Twin Falls City Council may decide whether the city band is a remaining glimpse from a more relaxed era or if it is still a vital member of the community.

For 74 years the band has contributed to Magic Valley history. During World War I, it performed for soldiers leaving on the 5:30 p.m. trains, first grouping at the corner of Shoshone and Main streets and then accompanying them down Shoshone to the depot.

The band played again as the boys went to war decades later, performing at the bus depot at 8 a.m. during the World War II years.

Other civic extravaganzas through the years included the opening of the Hansen Bridge in 1918, the Main Line Railroad opening in Boise in 1925, the Gooding Canal opening and at the groundbreaking ceremonies for the College of Southern Idaho.

For many years, the band opened the Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo by participating in the grand march.

Founded in 1904 by J.T. Bainbridge, the municipal band supported itself by playing all kinds of conventions. In 1924, the list included the Elks Convention and Ku Klux Klan rally, two GOP rallies, the Democratic convention, the county fair and a Halloween party.

Support also came from downtown businessmen and band members regularly made the rounds asking for donations.

In 1928, the Idaho legislature passed the Idaho Band Law allowing cities to levy to support bands. Twin Falls passed a one-quarter mill levy that sustained the band into the mid-60s.

City bands were losing popularity by then, however, and the law was repealed.

The City of Twin Falls agreed to finance the band through the Parks and Recreation Department and has done so since. Last year, the band budget amounted to $4,000 to cover insurance, instrument repairs and band members' salaries.

Then came the 1 percent initiative last year. With its passage subsequently becoming law, the band's budget for 1980 has been proposed at $300. This amount is expected to cover operating expenses but leaves nothing for salaries, according to band-business manager Wayne Ford.

Ford explained that wages are minimal and seldom cover more than gas and babysitting expenses.

The questions arising from the proposed budget reduction are: "What will happen to the band if members must participate on a strictly voluntary basis?"

"How many will be willing to pay out of their own pockets to perform?"

City Manager Jean Millar said Thursday he signed, with the approval of the City Council, a working agreement with Joe Maccarillo, representative of Local 474 of the American Federation of Musicians.

The agreement was an application for trust fund money for the city band. The union, a member of the AFL-CIO, collects a small fraction of the profits from nationwide record sales for its trust fund.

Ninety percent of the fund is used to ensure free music programs for the public. Millar said although he has applied for assistance, the band must give its approval before the transaction can be made.

The musicians' union has periodically through the years tried to organize the band but with no success. During the band's 60th Anniversary concert a decade ago, longtime band member and former director Dr. Orrin Fuller explained the band's traditional independence of any organizational ties.

He said the band has been an independent bunch of roosters and several times the American Federation of Musicians has tried to unionize it, but it always kept its identity and ran its own business.

That was 1969. Today, the band stands at a crossroad. Several members recently joined the union; others remain firmly against it.

And according to Ford, only those who are union members would be eligible to receive the trust fund money. He said it wasn't known exactly how much money would be available, whether it would last the summer season or just cover two concerts.

Other fiscal alternatives would be to seek support among the business community and sponsor benefit concerts. Increased attendance at the Thursday evening concerts in City Park reaffirms the continuing popularity of the band.

The subject of using city funds to continue supporting the Twin Falls Municipal Band may come up again at the city's public budget hearing at City Hall at 8 p.m. Aug. 16.
