

Gov. Evans irate over handling of fires

United Press International
Idaho Gov. John Evans is irate at the Forest Service for just watching four so-called management fires burning through thousands of acres in his state, including one uncontained blaze that jumped in size by at least 2,300 acres Friday.

In the past month, fires have blackened more than 120,000 acres in rugged terrain in Idaho and another 100,000 acres have been scorched in three neighboring states — and California.

Forest Service Chief Max Peterson said he shared Gov. Evans' concern but refused to send numerous crews to fight management blazes, saying they were needed in other areas.

If anything, he said, his reaction was being "overly cautious" in making sure the controlled fires do not get out of hand or threaten life or property.

Forest Service officials said the blaze was "beginning to move again." Despite a 2,000-man firefighting crew, the fire has burned more than 60,000 acres.

The Forest Service pushed another 300 men Friday, all of whom are exhausted men home. Another 19 crews — about 200 men — arrived in Boise Friday night.

The independence fire in Idaho's Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness Area had reached 10,400 acres by late Friday, making it the third largest fire burning out of control in the state and the largest so-called management fire.

A management fire is allowed to burn to clear away dead wood, brush, trees and heavy undergrowth, unless it endangers people, buildings, healthy timber or regularly used recreational areas.

The Gallagher Peak Fire was reported under control late Friday after it destroyed more than 36,000 acres of grass, brush and light timber in south-eastern Idaho since blowing out of control eight days ago. It had been a 300-acre management fire until last weekend.

Evans is fearful the Forest Service's controlled-burn strategy might backfire as it did at Gallagher Peak. He has called the management fire policy "a mistake" as far as Idaho is concerned, due to the state's drought conditions.

Peterson spent Friday afternoon on the Mortar Creek fire lines and flying over the fire before returning to Boise to map strategy. He said the weather would have more effect on the fires than his men.

The next 10 days are expected to be generally dry and unseasonably hot, but the Weather Service said there is "a respectable chance" of rain tonight or Sunday.

The Gallagher Peak blaze was finally contained Thursday night. But the 58,000 acre Mortar Creek Fire was still raging along the Middle Fork of the Salmon river Friday, along with the 11,000 acre Ship Island Fire just to the northeast and the 1,000 acre East Fork Kennally Fire to the west.

Friday the Forest Service also banned all private aircraft from flying over the fires to prevent any accidents. "We've had some near misses," said Bob Bjornson of the Interagency Fire Center. And it closed four national forests — in central Idaho to wood cutting and open camp fires.

Carter shake-up hits staff

© The Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — The White House, in a long-promised staff shake-up that leaves President Carter's inner circle of Georgians virtually intact, Friday announced that presidential counsel Robert Lipshutz is resigning and three other officials are getting top White House jobs.

The move, which had been widely billed as the second half of Carter's sweeping reorganization of his administration, fell far short of his Cabinet shake-up last month, in which five of 12 department heads were replaced.

Carter had pledged that the White House shake-up would include substantial changes in the staff, and some of the president's staunchest supporters had hoped for a more extensive reshuffling that might help change the perception that he gets most of his advice from a tightly knit group of Georgia aides who exercise enormous power and influence.

After the Cabinet shake-up, a high-level administration official describing congressional reaction to the move as "savagely angry," told the Los Angeles Times.

Although Lipshutz is from Georgia, he has never been considered a member of the inner circle.

Other changes included:

- The resignation of Tim Kraft, assistant to the president, to become director of the Carter-Mondale re-election campaign committee.

- The promotion of Sarah Weddington of Austin, Texas, from a second-level presidential aide post to senior aide status. She will continue to work on the White House staff, but will assume some of the political duties that have been carried out by Kraft.

- The appointment of Ambassador Esteban Torres of East Los Angeles, who has been U.S. permanent representative at the United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), to be Carter's special assistant for programs and policies dealing with Mexican-American affairs, a second-level aide post.
- The appointment of Joseph J. Joseph of Los Angeles, who resigned last February.

- The appointment of Ambassador Alonso L. McDonald, Carter's deputy special trade representative, to be an assistant to the president and director of the White House staff under chief of staff Hamilton Jordan.

Some contamination found Boil order in effect for Filer water

FILER — The Filer city water supply is contaminated with bacteria, and the Department of Health and Welfare has told city residents to boil their drinking water until further notice.

The advisory was issued Friday after tests at city well number three indicated the presence of the bacteria, according to Basil Tupy, environmental engineer at the regional office of DHW's Division of Environment.

Residents who receive city water should heat it to a rolling boil and let it boil for five minutes before drinking, said Tupy. An alternate purifying method is to add two or three drops of chlorine bleach to each quart of water desired and then let the water stand for 30 minutes before drinking, he added.

Tupy, who expects the warning to be in effect until the middle of next week, said the city is adding additional chlorine to the water supply to kill the bacteria. The germs that are still in the well die naturally from the lack of a growth medium, he said. The advisory will be lifted after two successive tests show no bacteria is present.

City well number three, near the city limits in the northeast section of town, is close to the bean warehouse that burned last week, said Tupy. The several million gallons that firemen poured on the fire probably depleted the well to the point where surrounding groundwater flowed into the well at a much faster rate than usual, he said.

One theory, said Tupy, is that the water that replenished the well contained bean fragments and bacteria from the site of the fire. Under normal conditions these impurities would be filtered out before reaching the well, but gravity demanded the well be replenished.

Another possible cause of the contamination is an open well which firemen discovered near the fire. This well could have taken in rotting bean fragments as well, Tupy said, spreading the bacteria into the surrounding water table.

The fire, at a warehouse owned by Beans, Inc., started July 30 and flared up again during the next two days.

Agents' killers sought

FBI mounts large manhunt

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The FBI, stung by the worst-day violence in its 75-year history, has launched a nationwide manhunt over the fugitive accused of killing one of three agents shot down Thursday.

The suspect, Melvin Bay Guyton, was shot in the back by the death of special agent Johnnie L. Oliver by jumping through a window and fleeing on a stolen bicycle.

Oliver, 35, married and the father of three children, was the first agent assigned to Cleveland to be killed in the line of duty.

Authorities said federal agents and police combing about 100 were systematically checking more than 20 leads in Oliver's death with the search focusing on Cleveland's East Side ghetto.

Authorities said Oliver was shot once through the heart when he and five other agents attempted to arrest Guyton at an East Side public housing project.

Guyton was initially sought on a federal fugitive warrant after being charged by Chicago-area authorities with kidnapping, rape and armed robbery. Guyton is also charged with sexually assaulting 10 women.

The other two FBI agents killed Thursday were shot to death in their Cleveland, Calif. office by a former social worker who then put a pistol in his mouth and committed suicide.

James Maloney, 30, who killed agents Charles W. Elmoro, 34, and Lt. Robert Porter, 44, was apparently bent on suicide. He left a page-and-a-half suicide note with his estranged wife.

Maloney, a married man with five children, made an appointment to see one of the agents about a request submitted under the Freedom of Information Act regarding an alleged investigation of his activities as a member of the leftist Weather Underground. No connection was ever found.

Authorities, trying to piece together his motives, said he entered the FBI office with a shotgun in one hand and a .38 caliber pistol in the other and just opened fire on the agents.

"I think he was a man who was trying to make his mark on the world — and he did," said Roger Young, agent in charge of the San Diego FBI office.

FBI Director William Webster termed the killings "tragic" and placed Guyton, alias Tyrone Little, on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List.

Authorities split up Cleveland's East Side ghetto area into sectors and moved from square to square searching for possible hideouts.

Oliver was shot with a .38-caliber revolver as he cornered the suspect in a bedroom at an apartment at the Carver Park Estates, according to authorities. Oliver, brandishing a shotgun, was the first to enter the room.

Engineers give solutions to worldwide energy crisis

BOSTON — A huge body of new technology is being disclosed here this week by some 700 of the world's most innovative engineers, who believe that solutions to pressing global energy problems have already been found and the technology can be applied as soon as money is made available.

An air of optimism and practical achievement has prevailed, in contrast with the sharply mounting public anxiety about energy prospects and with recent presidential warnings on the subject.

The technical papers presented at the 14th Intersociety Energy Conversion Engineering Conference fill two volumes, each the size of the Manhattan phone book.

Some show how to store immense amounts of energy in devices as simple as the common wheel, while others describe how to produce energy massively and cheaply from complex gadgets developed for spacecraft.

There are papers describing how to build electric cars fueled by alcohol, how to generate electricity and manufacture gasoline in hundreds of new ways, and how to develop hydrogen fuel, wind and sea energy, safer nuclear power plants and efficient new home heating and cooling systems.

Solar energy alone is the subject of 59 papers. Other reports deal with the direct conversion of chemical and heat energy to electricity, with superconducting magnets and with the storage of energy in exotic new electric batteries, in ponds of water and in underground caverns filled with compressed air. Systems for heating and cooling buildings using sunlight and salt in place of machinery are described.

Some of the research described here deals with such radical new ideas as a magnetic cannon conceived at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology that could unload freight from offshore ships by firing it in projectiles.

Despite the bewildering array of technology being presented in written and oral reports at the conference, participants agree that their contributions share one essential quality — the technology is ready to be developed and applied right now.

While the need for conservation was discussed at a few meetings, the main stress of the conference was on accelerated technological progress and growth.

People will drive as much as or more than they do now, houses will be heated and cooled more comfortably and civilization will soak up energy at an ever faster rate if most of the findings presented here are to be believed, but the new forms of energy that are needed will be tapped.

Applying this new technology on a large scale will be expensive, engineers agreed in their discussions, but they said that thanks to soaring petroleum prices — an "exciting new era" of technological innovation has suddenly become economically realistic and inevitable.

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

It's time for us to know more about each other.

The CIA took out large display ad in several newspapers last week.

CIA recruiting brings success

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA has started a "pepped up" advertising campaign to recruit new agents and the results have been "tremendous," an agency spokesman said Friday.

"Suffering from a battered public image after several years of congressional investigations and Freedom of Information suits, the once super-secret agency has faced a drop-off in recruiting."

But with help from Madison Avenue, the Central Intelligence Agency has found 4,000 to 5,000 would-be agents in less than a month, a spokesman said Friday.

A New York advertising agency has been directing a sleek new recruiting campaign for the agency "big-city, new-wave" across the nation since July 22.

"Every time we go to the post office, there's another bag of responses," the spokesman said.

The agency previously depended on small, discreet advertisements, mostly in professional journals for engineers and scientists or college newspapers, but the number of recruits dropped steadily.

The CIA decided to try a new approach.

"We began looking at it, got together with them (the ad agency) and decided that the old ads were too sterile," the spokesman said.

"They needed to be pepped up."

They were also targeted at a wider audience, with an advertising campaign in 12 major newspapers.

A typical new ad reads: "We're looking for you special men and women who still have a spirit of adventure."

"There aren't many of you. One in a thousand, maybe. You're a bright, self-reliant, self-motivated person we need to help us gather information and put together a meaningful picture of what's happening in the world. One of an elite corps of men and women."

"Another ad invites applicants who 'want to be on the inside of international affairs.'"

"It's not a job for everybody," it says. "It's for a very few special men and women who have the special talents and skills, intelligence, self-reliance and self-motivation to work in challenging situations, withstand hardship, make on-the-spot decisions."

The spokesman said the response had been "tremendous."

One New York ad alone produced 2,300 responses.

One side effect, the spokesman said, was that "applicants who applied six months ago and who were rejected because they were not what we were looking for, wrote to ask how they can possibly turn me down?" and claiming they had all it takes."

CIA ordered to give names

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge has given the CIA with Oct. 1 to release or disclose names of professional people and institutions involved in the agency's drug and mind control experiments.

U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer issued the order at the request of two Ralph Nader associates.

The action was taken over the objection of CIA Director Stanislaw Turner, who submitted an affidavit arguing that making public the names of certain researchers and institutions would compromise the agency's "sources and methods."

All the people and institutions were involved in the CIA's top-secret MKULTRA project which began in the 1950s and ran for more than a decade.

According to evidence released during subsequent congressional investigations, the program consisted of experiments in mind and behavior control, including the use of hallucinogens such as LSD, alcohol, hypnosis and other techniques.

At the time, the agency feared the names of certain researchers and institutions had "perfectly brainwashing" and mind control techniques and was searching for ways to counteract them — or to use them itself.

Suspect arrested

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The FBI today arrested a third suspect in the $18,000 robbery last week at a Bankers Trust branch in New York, but said it had recovered a "large" amount of money that might be held up.

Edward Hegarty, special agent in charge of the FBI's Baltimore office, said the money was recovered several hours after FBI agents arrested suspect Willie Glenn Hopkins, seized as he sat in a parked car.

DC-10 tested for design flaws

ROSEMONT, Ill. (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Administration is conducting tests to determine whether to order design revisions for DC-10 jetliners, an FAA official told a hearing Friday on the nation's worst air disaster.

Testimony on an FAA investigation into the design of pylons that secure wing engines to McDonnell Douglas Corp.'s wide-body jets concluded the National Transportation Safety Board's public hearings into the May 25 crash of American Airlines Flight 191.

An FAA official said tests on DC-10 pylons have been ordered and results are expected by the end of the year.

The NTSB panel, after hearing 10 days of testimony, must attempt to pinpoint a "probable cause" for the crash, which killed 275 persons.

The DC-10, on a flight from Chicago to Los Angeles, lost its left engine and pylon on takeoff. The plane crashed 31 seconds later.

NTSB Vice Chairman Elwood Driver said the board will study the testimony and documents introduced at the hearings and probably will issue a report within 90 days.

However, he said, the case of Flight 191 was unusually "complex" and it may take longer.

In final testimony to the board, Charles Foster, FAA assistant administrator for aviation standards, said the FAA had come up with 84 recommendations and proposals in the wake of the crash near O'Hare International Airport.

The FAA has acted on about one-third of that number and the rest are being reviewed by FAA Administrator Langhorne Bond, he said.

Foster also said the design of the DC-10 wing-engine pylons was being reviewed.

"We are conducting damage tolerance tests and assessments (on the pylon) to determine if there are any changes that need to be made to increase tolerance," said Foster.

After the tests are complete, Foster said, the FAA will decide whether to require McDonnell Douglas to redesign the pylon. He said the damage tolerance tests should be concluded by the end of the year.

McDonnell Douglas has said it will not redesign the pylons unless ordered to do so by the FAA.

A crack was found in the pylon which fell from Flight 191. Board investigators believe damage occurred during maintenance by American Airlines mechanics two months before the crash. Cracks were subsequently found in other DC-10's and the discoveries led to month-long grounding of the aircraft.

American contends the DC-10 pylon is poorly designed and is excessively vulnerable to damage during maintenance.

U.S. to challenge territorial limits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House has decided to reassert the traditional claim to free passage anywhere on or over the high seas beyond the three-mile limit, administration and military officials said Friday.

The decision, resulting from a National Security Council study on navigation rights, could lead the United States into confrontation with the Soviet Union and China, which claim sovereignty 12 miles out to sea.

But the decision was aimed more directly at smaller countries such as Peru, Libya, the Philippines and Argentina, some of which claim sovereignty 200 miles out.

Peru, for example, has frequently seized U.S. shrimp boats working the waters within 200 miles of its coast.

Navy officials said the White House instructed the State and Defense departments last month to have no hesitation about reasserting the traditional claim.

Under a directive from the Joint Chiefs of Staff, naval and air units have been advised to use water and air space anywhere outside three miles offshore, rather than detour to respect sovereignty claims beyond that distance.

As a seagoing nation, the United States has traditionally insisted that travel in and over the "high seas" beyond the three-mile limit should be totally unobstructed.

The State Department's Jill Schulze said Friday, "There has been no change in our policy regarding our three-mile claim in territorial limits or in terms of the enforcement of this policy."

Recently, however, some U.S. ambassadors have urged that U.S. Navy ships and Air Force planes avoid certain disputed areas to avoid international disputes. And American vessels have honored other nations' 12-mile claims so as not to inject tensions into Law of the Sea negotiations.

Still, the Law of the Sea conference has been unable to agree on a worldwide ocean limit.

The United States has been prepared to go to a 12-mile limit as part of a comprehensive agreement covering the high seas, coastal waters and development of seabed resources.

The three-mile limit became popular around the 17th century because that was about the maximum range of a cannon in those days.

Today only 22 countries, including the United States, recognize the three-mile limit, while most others have adopted 12 miles.

The United States has established a 200-mile zone, but it applies only to fishing rights.

Laotian refugees aided by Lutherans

FILER — A Laotian refugee family, sponsored by Peace Lutheran Church, has arrived in Idaho to begin a new life.

They are the sixth refugee family to be sponsored by the Lutheran churches in Magic Valley. The Buhl Lutheran Church took two families in February, the Clover Trinity Lutheran Church is sponsoring three families.

Tay, a former first lieutenant in the Laotian Army, can drive a car or truck and is willing to work at any kind of job. He prefers a rural area and his friends and church committee are trying to find him a job on a farm or in a factory.

Like other refugees, Tay will repay his plane fare to the Lutheran Immigration Service and will become self-supporting as soon as possible. The sponsoring church will provide living quarters, furniture, food and clothing until the refugees can support himself and any dependents.

Passion play now revised

By ALLISON MITCHELL
©1979Newsday

It began with a vow.

In 1634, as plague swept through Bavaria, the elders of the small village of Oberammergau prayed for deliverance and decided to present a passion play each decade as an act of penance.

According to legend, the people of the Alpine village were spared death and, faithfully, almost every decade since 1680, they have staged a lengthy spectacle about the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ.

But in recent decades the seven hour spectacle, staged by close to 2,000 villagers, has been sharply criticized by both Jewish groups and Catholic theologians as anti-Semitic because it implied that all Jews of Jesus' time called for His death and that all of Jewry has inherited their guilt. Despite changes in the 1970 production, which was presented 10 times and drew about 500,000 visitors, Jewish groups such as the American Jewish Congress and the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith felt the production was still seriously anti-Semitic.

Closing prices

Week adds up to one of best

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks wrapped up the busiest and one of the best weeks of the year Friday, climbing to a four-month high as institutional investors bought quality issues while ignoring grain inflation news. Trading was active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down more than 4 points the week ended, climbed 4.73 points to 867.06, the highest level since it finished at 867.46 on April 25. Despite a 4.88-point loss Thursday, the Dow gained 20.50 points for the week, the best since it closed 27.11 points the week ended March 9.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.59 to 80.84, a 1979 high, and the price of a share gained 28 cents. Advances totaled 364 to 473, among the 1,857 issues traded at 4 p.m. EDT.

Big Board volume totaled 36,740,000 shares, up from the 34,630,000 traded Thursday, and brought the week's total to more than 196 million shares. That's the most since 219.6 million changed hands the week ended Nov. 3, 1976.

Brokers said institutions have been active for three weeks because they believe that appeal cheaply priced and they don't want to miss a major market move.

The big investors apparently have discounted dismal economic and monetary news such as reports money supply rose $1.2 billion in the latest statistical week and that July wholesale prices climbed at an unexpectedly sharp 13.2 percent annual rate.

1979 grain crop

U.S. corn crop forecast to be biggest in history

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department Friday estimated this year's corn crop at 2.13 billion bushels, up 16 percent from last year's record of 1.84 billion bushels.

Average soybean yields were forecast at 30.3 bushels per acre, compared to 29.2 bushels last year. The estimate was 0.3 bushels below the record high yield of two years ago.

Corn and soybeans are used for animal feeds and partially determine consumer costs for meat, poultry, milk and eggs.

The 1979 crop was forecast to be the largest in U.S. history, with a record 7.06 billion bushels last year.

Last month the department's Crop Reporting Board forecast a 6.66 billion bushel crop.

Based on Aug. 1 conditions, the average per-acre yield was estimated at a record 102.1 bushels, compared to last month's estimate of 94.6 bushels. The record average yield of 102.3 bushels was set last year.

The first official estimate of soybean production was a record 2.13 billion bushels, which would be the second largest crop on record. The estimate was 19 percent larger than last year's crop of 1.79 billion bushels.

The nearly harvested winter wheat crop was forecast at 1.1 billion bushels, up 2 percent from last month and 23 percent more than last year.

The estimate for spring wheat other than durum was 423 million bushels, down 2 percent from July and up 1 percent from last year. The durum wheat estimate was 109 million bushels, down 3 percent from last month and down 19 percent from last year.

Total production of all livestock feed grains — corn, grain sorghum, barley and oats — was estimated at 218 million tons, 1 percent below last year's record.

Russian harvest estimated at 22% below 1979

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department Friday estimated this year's Russian grain crop at 185 million metric tons, a record and unchanged from last month's estimate.

Last year's record crop was 237 million tons.

The Russian grain harvest is the season's largest. In recent years, it has been hampered by winter grain harvest.

By contrast, a team of American experts recently returned from a three-week visit to the Soviet Union with reports of a good spring wheat crop and possible record yields in some areas.

The spring crop usually makes up 40 to 60 percent of Russian wheat production.

The Russians' heavy buying of American grain caused U.S. officials to offer the Russians a chance to buy an additional 10 million tons of wheat in the next 18 months. The offer was made in secret talks in London.

American officials said that for now there was an understanding that the Russian wheat estimate was 22 percent below 1979.

The department predicted the Russians would use 27 million tons of grain and would need to import a record 32.5 million tons from all nations. The import record was increased 2 million tons from last month's estimate.

The United States is expected to supply 18 million to 20 million of Russian import needs.

India and South Korea, the department said, contributed to a record in the world rice forecast.

The 1979-1980 cotton crop worldwide, USDA said, is estimated at 63.6 million bales, up from 59.5 million last year. USDA said higher domestic yields account for about three-fourths of the increase. Foreign production estimates for the Soviet Union, India, Central America and a few other nations were reduced.

Worldwide production 4% less than last year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While the August forecast of world total grain production was slightly over July's estimate, the Agriculture Department said the total production would still be about 4 percent below last year's record level.

The agency also projected record world soybean production of about 52 million metric tons, more than 12 million tons above the 1978-1979 crop. The increase, said the USDA, was due in part to expanded acreage and higher yields in the United States and a forecast that Brazil's crop might meet or exceed last year's drought-reduced level of a year ago.

Total grain production, including wheat, coarse grain and rough feed, was put at 1.615 billion metric tons, enough to make it the second-largest harvest on record.

The wheat crop, said the agency, was forecast virtually unchanged from July's estimate. The global record had been about 7 percent smaller than last year's.

The monthly coarse grain forecast was up by about 2 percent from July's estimate, but significant increases in forecast American production offset lower estimates of foreign production.

Reduced crop prospects in China, India and South Korea, the department said, contributed to a record in the world rice forecast.

The 1979-1980 cotton crop worldwide, USDA said, is estimated at 63.6 million bales, up from 59.5 million last year. USDA said higher domestic yields account for about three-fourths of the increase. Foreign production estimates for the Soviet Union, India, Central America and a few other nations were reduced.

St. Louis quarterback Jim Hart facing little pass rush, picked apart the Falcon secondary. Hart hit 13 of 19 passes for 146 yards in the first half — completing eight straight tosses in one stretch — to set up two short runs by Wayne Morris to give the Cardinals a 14-10 lead at the half.

Rookie Daniel leads Britz, Breer

JERICHO, N.Y. (UPI) — Tour rookie Beth Daniel, contending that she has the ability to win once she puts her mind to it, shot a 2-under-par 71 Friday to take a two-stroke lead at the midway point of a $100,000 LPGA Championship.

This gave her a 36-hole score of 144, the only sub-par total on the difficult 6,450-yard Meadow Brook course made even more testy by dry, slick greens and tricky pin placements.

U.S. Open champion Jerilyn Britz, following a dull 72 that included 17 pars and one birdie, was tied for second at even par 146 with Murie Breer, who had a 71.

A severe thunderstorm hit the course in late afternoon and played a 45-minute suspension of play.

"I'm sort of gotten to me that I haven't won yet," said the slim,

JANE-BLALOCK near the top

22-year-old Daniel, who had four birdies against two bogeys. "I thought I would have by now, but in the meantime I've learned a lot.

"Mentally, I wasn't prepared to win. I get down on myself too easily and that's hurt me. The ability is there to win, but maybe it has something to do with confidence. There are a lot of good players here and maybe I don't feel as good as them. In amateur golf people were scared of me, whereas now I'm scared of some people."

Daniel said that whenever she got into contention she would put too much pressure on herself because she wanted to win so much.

"I'd like to win here," she added. "But if I don't win, it's not the end of the world — just don't talk to me if I don't."

J.C. Snead ahead in PGA tourney

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — A sudden and severe thunderstorm interrupted the second round of the Greater Hartford Open Friday, forcing a suspension of play until early today and leaving J.C. Snead in the lead.

Torrential rains flooded the fairways and greens and PGA officials said they had to cancel 90 minutes before the second round. The tournament was scheduled to resume at 7 a.m. MDT and the cut, expected to be about 141, was to be made after the round was completed. The third round is scheduled to begin at 10:15 a.m., with players starting from the first and 10th tees, PGA officials said.

J.C. Snead, just $22,000 short of becoming pro golfer's next millionaire player, fired a 5-under 66 to leave him with a 11-under 131 before the rains came.

Snead, who last won at San Diego in 1976, fashioned a seven-birdie round marred only by a double bogey on the friendly 5,568-yard Wetherfield Country Club course where he has twice been a runner-up.

Three strokes behind Snead among the early finishers was Mike Brannan, who matched his opening round of 67 for a 36-hole total of eight-under 134.

Joe Jimman, runner-up in the Atlantic Classic, and Peter Ostrach, each had to lead a group that came in at 135, seven under par. Bob Murphy, who won here in 1970, and Tommy Aaron, each had a second 68 to join Rod Cruz, 67-69, and Jay Haas at six under 136, after 36 holes.

Haas, in third place in the opening round with a 65, slipped to one-under 71 for the second round. Pat McGowan, who shot a first-round 66, also came in one-under par 71 to join Forrest Fezler, 68-69, at 137, five under.

Defending GHO champ Rod Fungath, 69-70, led a group at three-under 139 among the early finishers. —George Cadie, the first-round leader with a 62, was a late starter and remained nine-under after six holes.

Snead, one stroke over his 65 opening round of seven birdies and a bogey, said he didn't play as well as Thursday and "I drove poorly." Snead felt the ball in the trap twice on the 12th hole and then managed to get down in one putt for a double bogey — and his only bad hole of the day.

"I really screwed up. I had an easy bunker shot. But I've been in trouble with sand this year, I don't think I could have gotten it out with a shovel. Then some guy sneezed and I almost hit my foot," he quipped.

Snead said "I drove poorly all day except for the last two holes," when he parred three at the 17th and had his only good drive on the 18th followed by a wedge two feet from the pin for birdie three.

His putting compensated for his poor driving, making a 25-footer on the first hole for birdie three and a 35-footer on the 13th for birdie two.

In Tomjanovich lawsuit

'Just trying to break up fight'

HOUSTON (UPI) — Rudy Tomjanovich testified in a $4.4 million damage suit against the Los Angeles Lakers Friday that he was trying to break up a fight and did nothing to draw a face-crushing punch from former Laker Kermit Washington. When the Houston Rockets' star forward awoke on the floor seconds after the punch he "thought the scoreboard had fallen from the ceiling and hit me on the head."

The Dec. 9, 1977 incident during a game caused Washington, now a San Diego Clipper, to receive a $10,000 fine and a 60-day suspension from the NBA. Films introduced at the trial show him punching a restrained Kevin Kunnert in the face and then standing near midcourt and looking nervously for anyone else who might approach him.

"I was downcourt and something drew my attention to mid-court, where I saw Washington slug Kevin Kunnert twice. I ran down there as a peacemaker," Tomjanovich testified.

The four-time all-star, who returned following surgery to play last season, was the fifth Rocket or former Rocket to testify in the week-old trial.

Plaintiffs Tomjanovich and the Houston Rockets claim the Lakers are responsible for Washington's action. Tomjanovich is seeking $2.8 million in actual and punitive damages. His medical treatment was paid for by the team.

He testified that he still has periodic numbness of the cheeks and gums. A sinus problem which causes him to take medication daily has worsened, he said.

The characters in lawsuit: Kermit Washington (L), Rudy Tomjanovich (R)

Asked by his attorney to disclose his salary, he said he was paid $225,000 for the 1977-78 season and $250,000 for last season.

A film of the incident shown in court earlier this week did not indicate clearly the intention of Tomjanovich as he trotted toward Washington. Washington has said he thought he was going to be hit.

Tomjanovich testified he was frightened by what was happening. "There was blood on Kevin's face. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had pulled Kevin away from Kermit but he was still hitting him," Tomjanovich testified. "I didn't think Washington had any reason to be violent towards me."

Asked if Washington ever spoke to him, Tomjanovich said, "No." Tom Nissalke, the Rockets' coach at the time, was cross-examined by a Lakers attorney before Tomjanovich testified. Nissalke said he remembered being afraid to go on the court to help the fallen player. "I stopped because I was concerned that I might be hit," the coach said.

Kappel takes PBA lead in Illinois

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (UPI) — Dave Kappel of Chicago, seeking his first victory on the PBA tour, fought with heart trouble, rolled strikes on 11 of his last 12 shots Friday to take the first-round lead of the $70,000 Waukegan Open.

Kappel, who averaged 234 for 259, 183, 243 and 278 for a 1,409 total.

Ernie Schlegel of Vancouver, Wash., closed with a final game of 285 for a second-place total of 1,392. He and Kappel are trying for their first career PBA titles.

Jimmy Certain of Huntsville, Ala., was in third place with 1,377, just behind the late Bill Gearty. Curtis Higgins, Calif. Dick Weber of St. Louis rounded out the top five at 1,350 as the 49-year-old Hall of Famer goes for his 37th career PBA title.

Kappel, 32, had his career interrupted for 10 months with heart trouble. Doctors gave him the go-ahead to bowl on the PBA tour this summer. Since then, he has earned $9,215 in nine events with a high finish of fifth in Tucson, Ariz. His best career finish was third in the 1978 U.S. Open.

Paul Hines of Kent, Wash., the winner of three previous Waukegan Opens, withdrew from the tournament after three games because of the flu.

The field of 144 bowlers will roll two more qualifying rounds before the top 24 are determined for match play. The winner after 42 games will receive $8,000 in the 16th annual Waukegan event.

Soap Box derby today

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — More than 150 youngsters from communities throughout the United States converge on Akron today, hoping to bring home a victory in the 52nd running of the All-American Soap Box Derby.

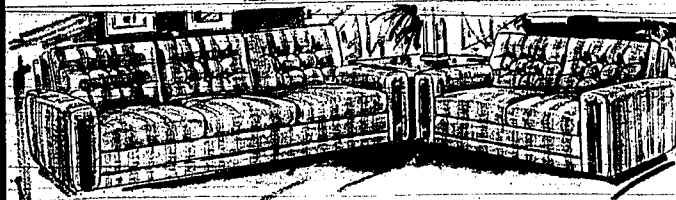

Boys and girls, ages 10 through 15, earned the right to compete in the derby by winning local Soap Box Derby races in their home communities.

The top three winners in the senior division for drivers 13 through 15 years old will receive scholarship awards of $3,000, $2,000, and $1,000 respectively. Senior competitors build the traditional Derby racers.

Junior division drivers, ages 10 and 11, build their racers from kits supplied by the All-American Soap Box Derby organization. The kits include full-size plans, detailed instructions and all the hardware needed for the racer. Youngsters supply their own wood and paint.

The juniors compete for trophies and monetary prizes. A week of exciting activities, honoring contestants and their families, culminates Saturday with a parade around the track and the first heats scheduled for 10:30 a.m. MDT.

Information calls to Mountain Bell go down

BOISE (UPI) — Mountain Bell began charging for directory assistance calls to cut the number of users, but unlike other states where the number has fallen, Idaho's populace seems to have a mind of its own.

About one month ago, Mountain Bell Telephone instituted a policy allowing each customer five calls to directory assistance free of charge and charging 20 cents for each additional call.

"The charge for directory assistance was not put on to generate revenue," said Herb

Carlson, Idaho public relations manager for Mountain Bell. "It was put on to discourage people from calling to get information that was many times available in the phone book."

He said the extra charges would ultimately save the customer money since the less the service was used the less people would have to be employed and the less facilities and equipment would have to be built and bought.

"All customers in Idaho are saving money because if the use of the service continued to increase the way it was, we would have to make capital outlays to handle it," Carlson said.

Carlson said the first month's statistics showed that calls to directory assistance had dropped by about 25 percent in Idaho, or about 1.5 million calls. But he said the drop should have been more if compared with other states where directory assistance calls have decreased 40 to 50 percent.

He said he was "puzzled" by Idaho's sluggish reduction, but said he had a theory of his own.

"Idaho customers are possibly more independent than people in other parts of the country," Carlson said. "I think of it the same as with gasoline. They say, 'OK, you're going to charge a dollar and a quarter for gasoline, I'm going to use it until I don't know what you can't intimidate me.'"

"Idaho people are pretty independent thinkers. They do their own thing for their own reasons. We just haven't had the reduction in Idaho that a similar campaign has produced."

Carlson said directory assistance is not totally free to every customer; a portion is "paid for by all providers."

"Instead of going to the Public Utilities Commission and asking to increase everybody's rate, we will raise it 15 cents on everyone's bill," he said.

Although Idaho did not have the reduction in directory assistance use of other states, Carlson said he was pleased with the state's drop.

"The figures for this past month that we looked at, showed 8.2 percent of 230,000 accounts had extra charges," he said. "That means 91.8 percent didn't have charges. That shows people don't use the service that much."

Carlson said 3 percent of the first month's charges were to residential customers and 11 to 12 percent were to businesses.

He said he had not considered charging businesses more for directory assistance since they used it more, because the policy was so new and more decreases were expected.

"We're just trying to give the best possible number of individual calls and still make a reasonable profit."

Canyon Walls plan clears another hurdle

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday night granted a conditional use permit to Canyon Walls Racquet Club for the construction of an indoor tennis building.

And, after reviewing hearing testimony on proposed zoning ordinance changes that would bring the ordinance into line with the new county comprehensive land use plan, the commission sent the revisions on to the Twin Falls County Commissioners who will schedule another hearing before final adoption.

The commission approved the Canyon Walls permit application over the objections of the Twin Falls city government. A letter to the commission from Lamar Orton, the city's community development director, opposed the application because the proposed building would not be allowed under city zoning ordinances.

Although the building site is now outside the city limits, the neighborhood may be annexed by the city someday, said Orton. The commission is not bound by the preferences of city officials but consults them in such cases, according to Edward Woods, the commission's administrator.

Orton said the size and function of the building would not be appropriate for a residential area. The building would house four tennis courts.

In granting the permit, the commission required Canyon Walls to lower its proposed building's height from 39 feet to 35 feet, the city's minimum.

Orton said he will ask city council members if they want to appeal the permit decision to the Twin Falls County Commissioners.

The proposed zoning ordinance changes are designed to keep the bulk of county land under agricultural use, said Woods. In compliance with the goals of the comprehensive plan, the changes set a 20-acre minimum for land zoned agricultural and make it more difficult for a farmland owner to subdivide his or her property.

After the changes take effect, such a landowner can legally divide his or her land into two parcels, but not to another person. But to divide either parcel further, the owner must draw up a plat and apply to the Planning and Zoning Commission for the construction of a planned subdivision.

JEROME (UPI) — The ruins of a camp where Japanese-Americans were imprisoned during World War II will be dedicated as a national historical site Aug. 18, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation said.

Camp Minidoka was one of 10 such camps established for the incarceration of thousands of Americans of Japanese descent who lived in the Pacific states prior to the war.

The camp is located southwest of Jerome on Hunt Road, 2 1/2 miles off State Highway 25.

The bureau said it is sponsoring the dedication along with the Japanese-American Citizens League.

Idaho not included

TWIN FALLS — Friday's story on the Twin Falls County budget included Idaho as one of the seven states which incorrectly computed its "in lieu" funds, thereby causing a reduction in "in lieu" payments to all 50 states.

The seven states were all in the West, according to County Commission Chairman Merl Leonard, but Idaho was not one of them.

Police story in error

Due to incorrect information, a brief story on an automobile accident in Thursday's newspaper contained two errors. Sheila Sellers, 24, of Hazelton, was driving a Dodge Charger rather than a GMC pickup truck when she was involved in an accident on state highway 50 near its intersection with Interstate 80. Also, Ms. Sellers' first name was spelled incorrectly and her age was reported incorrectly.

Some campgrounds charge

MAGIC VALLEY — Friday's story and editorial in the Times-News on camping regulations in the Sawtooth National Forest were misleading.

The fee at 10 out of 15 named, developed campgrounds has been lifted until the danger of fire abates. However, the story and the editorial neglected to point out that the other five campgrounds will still be charging a nightly fee. These are the Wood-River Campground north of Ketchum and the developed campgrounds at Alluras, Redfish, Little Redfish, and Stanley lakes.

And, under the temporary anti-fire restrictions, campfires are allowed only in the concrete fireplaces of the 15 developed campgrounds, not in fire-rings as erroneously reported.

The Times-News regrets the errors.

Idahoans 'throwing away' history in trash

Editor's Note: This is the first of a two-part series on the Idaho State Historical Society.

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Are Idahoans throwing their history away with the trash?

According to archivists at the State Historical Society, that's frequently the case.

The problem, they say, is largely perceptual: "One man's junk is another man's artifact. All too often laymen fail to realize what historians consider important, and that failure results in destruction of items that could explain one generation to another."

But employees at the Idaho State Historical Society have been a force in the past, and hope their efforts will encourage Idahoans to doublecheck, to give the society a call before discarding old items as waste.

In a large sense, convincing Idahoans they have a history worth saving has been one of the toughest battles the society has faced. Even though the organization was formed in 1931, "as a private, pioneer society," many residents of the territory weren't entirely convinced they should worry about what seemed all-too-recent events.

It wasn't until 1957, some 26 years later, that the organization was accepted by the state, becoming the officially sanctioned Idaho Historical Society.

In the 72 years since that endorsement, the usually underfunded, almost always understaffed society has struggled to preserve a slice of the past for the future. That remains a central goal of the 34 employees now charged with preservation of Idaho's memories.

In addition to maintaining the state's historical museum, the society conducts tours of the old state penitentiary, also in Boise. Reference works are preserved for use by students, scholars and other interested Idahoans.

The state organization also preserves state archives, works closely with local historical societies, helps secure federal funding for county and city projects, offers expertise to fourth grade Idaho history classes, and serves as a general reference bank of information.

In one example, Society Director Arthur A. Hart worked in helping nominate historic Twin Falls buildings for the National Historic Register. Buildings on the national register, in addition to being recognized as historically significant, become eligible for federal building renovation funds.

When the Twin Falls buildings surrounding City Park were added to the national register list, Hart traveled to Twin Falls to present a lecture and slide show on famous Idaho buildings.

Still, one of the most visible projects of the society is maintaining the state museum in Boise.

"We're trying to keep the things that were used by the people of Idaho in the history of the state," said Ken Swanson, a curator at the museum.

"That's a broad responsibility," Swanson acknowledged. "But let me give you an example. We're trying to build a collection of farming and ranching equipment, to show how people have farmed and ranched throughout Idaho's history, and we don't have a milking stool. But who would think of giving a milking stool to a museum? People think that if it didn't belong to Senator Borah we're not interested, but we are."

"The other day," Swanson continued, "we were given two pistols. One of them is a nice pistol that we don't have in our collection. But the other Colt belonged to the first sheriff of Caribou County. Now that second one has no much more history tied to it."

The Historical Society is trying to recreate the life of ordinary Idahoans throughout the state's history, Swanson said. At the state museum, and in warehouse storage, the society has built collections of everything from butter molds to political buttons. As their limited space and time allow, he added, the displays at the museum are rotated.

"People may think we're not interested in something because we don't display it," he said. "That's not true. It's just we don't have a lot of space."

Swanson urged Idahoans to doublecheck their junk, because it might not be.

"They can call us at any time, at 384-2120. If they want to know if it's something we're interested in," he said. The society doesn't have funding to purchase items, but donations are tax deductible.

The society is also interested in documents from Idaho's past, and has built collections of — among other things — newspapers, letters, pictures and pioneer diaries.

"History has all-too-often been written from the point of view of outstanding events and distinguished people," said Gary Bettis, a government documents archivist.

"The common people have been forgotten for years. Only recently have institutions been collecting information on their day-to-day life."

The society is always interested in documents about important persons and events, Bettis said. "But we're also very interested in finding out how less famous people lived."

Citing one example, Bettis said the society is interested in the development of the Magic Valley. "We're trying to gather information about the Carey Act about irrigation, about anything that would give us a better idea of agriculture, the crops, the finances of agriculture, and the related subjects," he said.

The society also welcomes files of local organizations, he said. Old records of business clubs or civic groups can be important for historians, trying to understand earlier years.

The society is aware persons may be reluctant to permanently donate documents or pictures, Bettis said. "But we're sure like a chance just to make a copy of them."

Shoshone woman honored

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — A Shoshone woman has been chosen to receive one of six environmental education awards presented by the U.S. Forest Service, Regional Forester Vern Hamre said Thursday.

Begle Hatmaker will receive the award for her efforts to help people understand their environment and their responsibility for the environment.

Hamre said Mrs. Hatmaker has taught conservation workshops for 5th grade students since 1963.

"The environmental study area at Lincoln School is a model for the state and the nation," Hamre said. "You have given students the knowledge and the skills needed to make intelligent decisions about the world in which we live."

Other recipients of the Forest Service's awards are Dianne Sigurdson of Logan, Ann Schimpf of Southfield, Utah; Mr. and Mrs. Leon Hunter of Henderson, Nev.; Alysia Watanabe, formerly of Salt Lake City, now residing in Washington, D.C.; and Bill Furze of Cheyenne.

The award winners will be honored at a ceremony in Twin Falls tonight.

State education budget set for 1981

BOISE (UPI) — The state Board of Education gave final approval Friday to a fiscal year 1981 general fund budget request of $107.4 million, an increase of 13.1 percent over the current year's appropriation.

Included was a 20 percent increase in state support for the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls.

Acting on recommendations of a special board committee, the members pared $4.4 million from the tentative budget request established Thursday.

The final amount, which includes $104.2 million to maintain current programs and another $3.2 million for new programs, equipment, and personnel, will be forwarded to Gov. John V. Evans and the Idaho Legislature.

Separately, the board established a $6,469,200 request to the permanent building fund for educational construction, planning and projects. The permanent building fund usually totals $5-6 million each year for all state construction projects.

Initially the board had given tentative approval to agency and institution requests of $111.8 million, a 17.4 percent increase over the current year's funding but late Thursday the board directed members Janet Hay of Nampa, Eugene Miller, Coeur d'Alene, and Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans to look again at all new requests and reduce the total to no more than a 15 percent increase.

Although board members agreed to limit each agency and institution to no more than a 15 percent increase over the current year's appropriation, it did approve a 20 percent increase for the two junior colleges which North Idaho College and the College of Southern Idaho indicated is needed simply to maintain current programs.

The board also said it will support legislation to secure necessary funds to replace property tax revenue losses for both junior college districts.

In its permanent building fund request, the board established as its top priority a total of $645,000 to be used by the UI, IJCCS, Idaho State University and the State School for the Deaf and Blind to make renovations necessary to comply with a federal requirement that educational institutions be accessible to handicapped persons.

The board's second priority was $310,000 to correct Life Safety Code deficiencies, install exit and emergency lighting at the UI, while its third priority was a request for $2.5 million for a BSU-Center for the Arts and Humanities.

BSU President John Keiser said the entire project is estimated to cost $5 million but only half the total will be sought for 1981.

The board also ranked in priority order its new funding request. The top ten items identified by the board are:

- Salary equity adjustments ($480,400)
- Step merit increases for employees ($820,000)

- Longevity payment requirements for the state Department of Education and State Historical Society ($4,700)
- Additional funding for the Professional Standards Commission (no general funds required since this agency is supported by teacher certification fees)
- Restoration of positions in the office of the state Board of Education ($18,300)
- Gasolines for a new building at Eastern Idaho Vocational-Technical School in Idaho Falls ($19,400)
- Installation of the Washington Library Network at the Idaho State Library ($117,500)
- Departmental equipment at the University of Idaho ($260,000)
- Building maintenance at the UI and Boise State University ($418,000)
- Installation of a computer connection the UI and Lewis-Clark State College ($42,000)

Fire mismanagement

Evans raps Forest Service

BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans said Friday he believed there was "mismanagement" in the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness Area should be attacked with full crews so they do not become major fires.

Evans was a critic of the U.S. Forest Service earlier this week when sudden winds sent a so-called management fire searing across 50,000 acres of eastern Idaho near Gallager Peak. Such fires are used to improve range and forest conditions and wildlife habitat.

At a Boise news conference Evans urged national Forest Service Chief Max Peterson to make sure the three Selway-Bitterroot fires — totaling 10,000 acres — do not escape containment.

"These fires appear to be similar in nature to the other (Gallager Peak) management fire and I would urge the Forest Service to view them very closely," said Evans. "I don't think they should be allowed to burn very much longer. They just let the Gallager fire go too long."

Evans, however, reiterated his praise of the overall efforts of the Forest Service.

Meanwhile, six huge fires remained out of control in five Western states. More than 180,000 acres have been scorched in the last few weeks, a total of 1,000 men were fighting the Idaho Primitive Area's

Neusmen caught aboard plane

BOISE (UPI) — The Forest Service is upset about two newsmen who donned fire fighters' gear and attempted to sneak in with a crew heading for the 50,000-acre Mortar Creek Fire in Idaho's Primitive Area.

Fire expert John Marker said the idea almost worked, but the two newspaper reporters were spotted just before the crew left Boise for the installation of a rugged and remote central Idaho mountains.

"It's not a lark out there," Marker said. "It wouldn't have been very Army if these men had walked into a chopper blade or been overrun by the fire." He declined to identify the two reporters.

Marker said the men could have taken "valuable seats" needed by firefighters heading to the line.

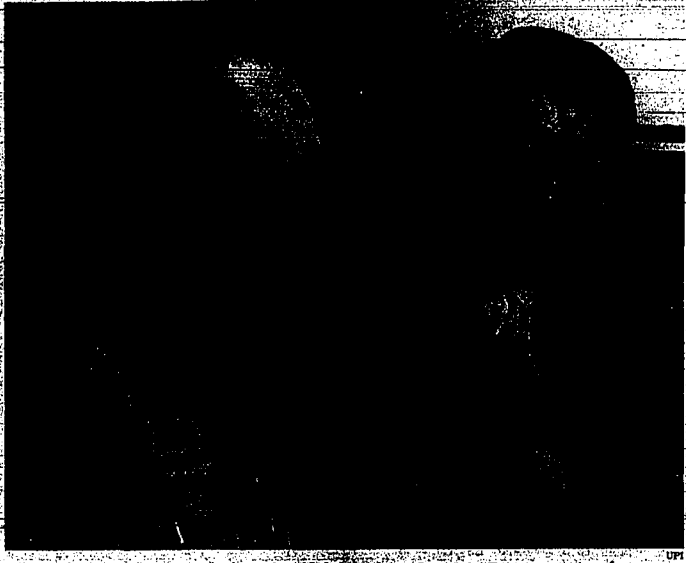

He said the Forest Service is "re-evaluating its relations with the press as a result of Thursday's incident. We've been trying to give the press as much opportunity as we can to cover this fire. But the safety of everyone is our prime concern."

Officials "replaying" the Gallagher incident to see what mistakes were made.

Peterson described this week's fire potential as "much worse than normal — the most serious fire danger days we've had since we've been keeping records."

"The best fire is the one that doesn't start," Peterson said.

The forest service boss said Evans' criticism of the handling of the Gallagher fire was "not the reason he flew to Idaho; Peterson said he would huddle with regional Forest Service officials to determine the best fire-fighting tactics.

Sherman F. Sorenson

SHOSHONE — Sherman F. Sorenson, 50, of Shoshone, died Thursday from injuries received when a "crack" beamed over him while working on a road project near Malta.

He was born May 18, 1929, at Burmah, Idaho. He lived all his life in Lincoln County, attending schools at Burmah, Richfield and Shoshone. He was a veteran of the Korean War. He farmed for a short time after leaving the service, but for the past 23 years has been employed by the Idaho Department of Transportation. He was foreman of the special maintenance crew at the time of his death. He married Mary Ann Boyd Aug. 8, 1952.

Idaho schools 'disentangled' from religious classrooms

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho State Board of Education Friday formally adopted a new draft time policy for students, pulling school districts out of all off-campus religious instructional programs.

The board made some minor changes in its final draft before approving the statewide released time policy effective for the 1979-80 school year. But it held ground on granting of class credit for religious programs offered by such groups as Mormon Church, LDS Church and other religious groups.

Jerry Evans, superintendent of Public Instruction, said revisions of Idaho's current policy, drafted more than 30 years ago, were prompted by a recent federal court decision in Utah against granting of class credit for Mormon Church-run courses in Bible history.

Evans said that Utah decision indicated "the public school machinery should be disentangled" from these programs. The new policy bans granting of classroom credit for any released time programs such as religious instruction, and it bans school districts from maintaining attendance records for students enrolled in such programs.

He said participating in such programs is voluntary and districts will still allow students to leave classes for one hour each day upon written request from parents.

Dr. James F. Parsley Jr. of Idaho Falls, superintendent of School District 91, urged the board to amend the policy to allow districts to keep attendance records.

"We feel we have a responsibility in accountability for the students of our students," Parsley said. He also asked the board to drop the parental consent requirement because of paperwork costs.

He said that about 1,800 students involved in released time programs.

Eariene Ricordo, of the Mindoka County Christian Education Association, also asked the board to reconsider its ban on credit for released time programs. She said the association offers a three-year Bible course, and students taking the courses should be able to gain credit for elective school classes.

Dr. H. Keith Bulmer of Boise, Mormon Church Educational System area director, said some 15,000 Idaho students are enrolled in the LDS Church's statewide seminary programs at secondary schools.

Bulmer said he did not know what the effect will be of banning class credit for attending the seminary programs. But he urged the board to allow districts to keep attendance records, and convinced the board to QUESTION...

I was not eligible to receive a Social Security monthly benefit when my husband died. I am remarried now and over 60 — does my remarriage affect my entitlement to benefits?

ANSWER...

If you remarried before you became 60 you still are not entitled to any benefits from your deceased husband's earnings. If you remarried after you became 60 you are entitled to benefits even though your second husband may not be retired. If you remarried before 60 and this marriage ends whether by death, divorce or annulment you may become entitled to benefits on the earnings of your first husband. In our estimator form print or public agencies search the knowledge and helpfulness of the personnel in our local Social Security office. We suggest you discuss this problem with them. You will find them very helpful.
