

Fish killed when the Main Line Canal broke near Murtaugh lie rotting in the sun while Union Pacific section crews rebuild washed out track Monday.

Rain delays canal repairs, benefits some arid fields

MAGIC VALLEY — Monday morning's rain delayed repairs on the ruptured Main Line Canal east of Murtaugh but could have saved crops that otherwise would have gone without water.

Twin Falls Canal Co. workers, afraid one of their dump trucks would slip off the muddy canal bank, stopped work early Monday and resumed repairs at about 1 p.m. according to Thomas Olmstead, company board chairman.

Olmstead said the break will probably be patched sometime today. Then the company can gradually open gates at Milner Dam to refill Murtaugh Lake with irrigation water. The lake functions as a reservoir for the entire canal system of the Twin Falls tract.

The canal company had to let most of the lake drain through the break across farmland and over the edge of the Snake River Canyon before they could begin to fill the gap in the canal bank. Thousands of dead fish were left behind on the mud flats.

Union Pacific Railroad crews finished repairs Monday on the railroad tracks between the break and the canyon. The flood moved a 1,400-foot section of track about eight feet toward the canyon and washed away the dirt below the section, down to the hardpan. Although the repairs were complete enough Sunday for the nightly train to pass, a strike had stopped all traffic along the rails.

Kimberly bean farmer Henry Sievers said the rain will definitely help bean farmers who had been left waterless by the canal break.

"As a whole, I think it probably did more good than harm," said Sievers.

The harm, if any, would be to grain which had been swathed and left in windrows. The kernels begin to sprout if they stay wet too long, said Sievers, who had swathed 25 out of his 120 acres of grain before the rain.

"But it would have to rain for several days to do any real damage," Sievers added.

Elsewhere in the Magic Valley, the rainfall presented no serious problems, according to area law enforcement agencies.

Only in Gooding, where officials estimate a half inch of rain fell between 1:15 and 2:15 p.m., was the moisture a bit of an inconvenience. Gooding County Sheriff Earl Brown said the streets were filled with water and it came close to getting in downtown stores.

Motorists also were forced to turn on their lights then "..."cause it really got dark out there," he added.

Economic woes, more branch banks Bank holdups show sharp increase

By United Press International
In Raleigh, N.C., FBI agent Herbert Monahan Jr., scoffs at the theory that economic bad times are responsible for a national increase in bank robberies.

"Most people who rob banks don't work. They rob banks for employment," Monahan said.

But other law enforcement officials blame the national economic decline for the expected 13 percent increase in bank robberies this year. Still others say they believe the increase is due to the growing number of banks, especially branch banks that are easier to rob.

"Whatever the reason is, one fact is not in dispute: bank robberies are on the increase."

The FBI says the number of holdups is running well ahead of last year and it expects more than 6,000 bank robberies by Sept. 30, the end of the current fiscal year. In fiscal 1978, there were 5,300 bank robberies.

FBI officials in Portland, Ore., said the number of bank robberies has increased dramatically in the past two years. There have been 69 bank holdups so far this year and 95 in 1978. In the 1977, there were 62 for the entire year.

In New York City, there has been a virtual epidemic of bank stickups, with more than 430 reported through July when a one-month record of 123 holdups was set. On one day early this month, 14 banks were held up. Last week one bank was robbed of more than $50,000 — the largest bank stickup in the city's history.

In all of 1978, there were 338 bank robberies in New York.

"Usually an increase like this will fit in with a recession or economic slowdown," said special agent Joseph MacFarlane, of the FBI's New York office. "In 1975, we experienced the same thing."

"It's definitely tied to the economic situation," said Gene Scrum, head of security for the Cleveland Trust Co., Ohio's largest bank. "As the economic situation worsens, bank robberies seem to increase."

An FBI agent in Madison, Wis., where an increase in bank robberies has been reported this year after a three-year decline, agreed there is a relationship between economic conditions and bank robberies, but he said there were many other factors, such as thrill-seeking and anti-labor-getting.

Monahan, the agent in North Carolina, and Oregon authorities say they believe that an increasing

Rains aid, hamper Idaho fire crews

BOISE (UPI) — Firefighters battling flames that scorched 150,000 acres "throughout Idaho" made headway on "all fronts Monday as the first measurable rain of the summer fell on the state's parched forest and rangelands.

Fire officials said while the rain would not douse the blazes, it was slowing the spread down so more than 2,000 weary firefighters could build firelines to contain them.

"The rain hasn't penetrated that much, but it has slowed down the spread of the fires," Joe Nadolski, a fire information officer in the fire command center in Boise, said.

More than a half inch of rain has fallen since Sunday and the fire food is for scattered showers into Wednesday, when the weather is expected to once again become hot and dry.

But the moisture and cooler temperatures moving into the area from Baja California prompted fire bosses to predict containment of the Mortar Creek fire in the Idaho Fritillive Area.

"The Mortar Creek fire along the Middle Fork of the Salmon River is the largest of those burning in the West. It has spread over 100 square miles of rugged wilderness area, consuming 65,300 acres.

Officials said the blaze hasn't grown since Sunday, and Dick Leitch, fire boss noted that the fire lines should be completed by the weekend to contain it.

So far, firefighters have built 42 miles of containment lines around the Mortar Creek fire and have 28 miles to go.

Nadolski said those remaining 28 miles will all have to be done by hand because the terrain is too rugged to use heavy equipment.

Only the Mortar Creek fire and one other blaze in North Idaho now are being listed as not contained or controlled.

Firefighters still were trying to contain a 5-acre blaze in the Nez Perce National Forest in the northern half of the state.

The Ship Island blaze some 60 miles south of Mortar Creek was contained Sunday night after burning 10,488 acres.

The Boise Interagency Fire Center said one new fire was reported Sunday — a range fire, apparently started by lightning in Nevada, which was brought under control by Bureau of Land Management crews after burning an estimated 100 acres.

While the rain slowed or halted the spread of flames, it was creating a logistical problem for the Mortar Creek fire. It reduced visibility and forced the shutdown of air operations. Roads also were becoming slippery and supplies, in some cases, were being moved into accessible basecamps by pack train.

"The rain is creating a logistical headache for us," Nadolski said. "We have 31 helicopters and haven't been able to fly them."

Because of the ruggedness of the area, the helicopters were the primary means of providing hot food and dry clothes to tired firefighters as well as bringing in other necessary supplies.

The helicopters also are used to ferry firefighters from the firelines to "spike" camps scattered throughout the area where men return for food and a little rest.

"It's making life miserable for firefighters," Nadolski said.

Food chain heads persuasion target

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's food price press paid to farmers for food had dropped 17 percent, while retail food prices had climbed 29 percent.

Overall, retail food costs are expected to increase 11 percent this year.

The Agriculture Department has been concerned about the farm-to-retail cost spread since May, when it did a study showing supermarkets charged 15 cents a pound too much for beef and 10 cents a pound too much for pork.

The latest agriculture study shows supermarkets charge 10 cents a pound too much for beef and five cents a pound too much for pork.

The studies did not pinpoint the exact stage in the marketing process where the extra costs were added.

But government statistics show that in June — the latest information available — marketing margins were still a major cause of food inflation, which increased 0.2 percent. It was the smallest monthly increase this year.

The food industry has argued its higher prices are justified because it has higher costs for energy and other key products.

On average, farm prices account for about a third of the food dollar, labor — another third — and other marketing costs the remaining third.

The American Farm Bureau Federation said last week the administration is "shadow boxing" by blaming the food industry for high prices.

"Spinning prices for all kinds of products, food and everything else, are inflation's result — not its cause," said bureau president Allan Grant.

retail distributors and processors Monday that he is "very concerned" about the continued increase in food prices and the simultaneous drop in prices paid to farmers.

About two-thirds of the cost of food takes place after the food leaves the farm," Carter told the White House Cabinet Room.

"The prices of food have been going down ... but the price to consumers keeps going up," he said.

"In meat there has been a 109 percent increase in the farm-to-retail spread, and fresh fruit has gone up 90 percent, while the cost of processing food has gone up only 13 percent."

It was the first time since Carter announced his wage-price guidelines last fall that the president has used personal persuasion — widely known as "jawboning" — to signal his displeasure on an inflation issue with a major industry segment.

Carter told the group, which listened silently to his opening remarks, that the Council on Wage and Price Stability had sent out 30 letters of complaint about alleged violations of wage-price guidelines in the food processing and distribution industry.

None of the group present — which included the chairman of such food stores as Kroger, Safeway, Winn-Dixie and A&P — had been targeted with such letters, he hastened to add.

"Since you are distinguished leaders," he said, "I wanted to meet with you and get your explanations and particularly your advice on how to stabilize the widely fluctuating

ISP head quits over 1% impact

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho State Police Superintendent Thomas Proctor, handed in his resignation Monday, citing departmental cuts caused by the one percent tax initiative as the cause.

"I am proud to have been an integral part of those accomplishments which have brought increased pride and respect to the Idaho State Police," Proctor wrote.

Unfortunately, however, I have accomplished all I am capable of with the present and anticipated cutbacks in budget and manpower due to the climate of the 1 percent.

Proctor's resignation is effective Sept. 1. Gov. John Evans and Department of Law Enforcement Director Kelly Pearce will select his replacement from candidates within the department, Pearce said.

He said the selection will be made from the department because of the short amount of time left to make the choice and to save money by not adding more personnel.

Pearce said he had no idea who would be considered as Proctor's replacement, but that the new superintendent would have a difficult job.

"We're down 27 officers," Pearce said. "If (superintendent) isn't going to be an easy job. With the budget cutbacks, there will be no new or exciting developments within the next year or so."

The director said Proctor "had been a very colorful and able administrator" who had accomplished much for the department.

Proctor said he plans to move back to Utah to be with his family and continue a career in law enforcement. He had held the position as superintendent for about one year.

Western nations let sea power lag

LONDON (UPI) — The United States and other non-Communist powers have allowed their naval strength to slump to a point where they will soon be vulnerable to Soviet military blackmail, the authoritative Jane's Fighting Ships said today.

The manual said the Soviet blackball could mean deprivation of raw materials and markets and the loss of freedom by nations unable to defend themselves.

The warning was given in a foreword to the 1979-80 edition of the journal written by Jane's editor, Capt. John E. Moore, a former deputy chief of British naval intelligence.

"Indecision and miscalculation by many non-Communist powers have resulted in a position where insufficient ships are available for surveillance of the Soviet fleet, much less for inter-position," Jane's said.

"By dropping the shield on maritime security," it said, "Western leaders have so far weakened their own position that they are moving towards a position of vulnerability to blackmail." The results of that blackmail: deprivation of raw materials, markets and the freedom of those friends who are not strong enough to guarantee their own security are some of them.

Jane's said the Soviets now have two aircraft carriers operating east of Suez, with at least two more expected within the next three years.

It said they have begun building a giant 32,000-ton "Soviet Soyuz" class warship at Leningrad — the first of 12 reportedly planned by the 1990s.

The vessel will be twice the size of the planned strike cruisers the U.S.

Navy has now abandoned and "bristles with missiles and guns, can carry aircraft and can best be described by the old-fashioned title 'battle cruiser,'" Jane's said.

It said the Soviets also are building two more classes of warship capable of long-range operations: The 13,000-ton "Ivan Rogov" class of landing platform decks built to carry a battalion of naval infantry, helicopters, hovercraft and supporting armor; and four "Berezhina" class support ships of 36,000 tons with a surface gun armament, SAM missiles and antisubmarine launchers.

Jane's said the U.S. Navy, which ended the Vietnam War, with 976 active combatant ships, now has only 535 such ships and will have only 528 by September 1980.

"By the end of the century the U.S. Navy might be well below the 400 mark," it said.

Moore's foreword did not cite a specific figure for Soviet active combatant ships in comparison to the U.S. Navy. The volume's detailed listings, however, indicated the Kremlin's seapower was more than 2,500 ships.

Actress has Russian flu

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Teen-age film star Brooke Shields, coughing incessantly and her face swollen, was ordered confined to her hotel bed today until she recovers from the Russian flu.

She developed a badly swollen face and a wracking cough on Monday and today her condition had worsened.

She had two rounds of tests Monday at Prince of Wales Hospital, the first for dengue fever, a tropical illness. A second round of tests revealed that Miss Shields was suffering from Russian flu and bronchitis in the right lung.

Quake rocks Bay area

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An earthquake measuring 4.2 on the Richter scale hit parts of the San Francisco Bay area Monday, just one week after a tremor that registered 5.9 damaged parts of California, the U.S. Geological Survey said.

The survey said the latest quake was centered near Orinda, just east of Berkeley on the eastern side of the bay.

The survey's National Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo., said the tremor occurred at 12:19 p.m. PDT.

Berlin Wall denounced

BERLIN (UPI) — West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher Monday marked the 18th anniversary of the Berlin Wall, erected to block an exodus of iron curtain refugees, by denouncing the barrier as a "monument to slavery."

Berliners were on Aug. 12, 1961, to find the wall snaking along 102 miles of the demarcation line dividing their city.

Relief operation starts

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Authorities mounted a massive relief operation Monday for survivors of the flash flood that smashed through the thriving southwestern Indian city of Morvi and killed hundreds of unsuspecting people.

The search for bodies from Saturday's disaster continued while floodwaters still covered the area.

Gujarat State Minister Keshubhai Patel said an estimated 1,000 people died when a dam weakened by days of torrential rains collapsed and sent a 20-foot-high wall of water crashing down on Morvi.

Unofficial estimates of the death toll ranged as high as 7,000.

Authorities said 300 bodies have been recovered and brought to hospital morgues already.

Aziwke leads in voting

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — Nnamdi Azikiwe, the grand old man of Nigerian politics, took an overwhelming lead Monday with early vote returns in the race for president of black Africa's richest and most powerful nation.

Aziwke, leader of the Nigerian Peoples Party, had 65 percent of the ballots cast in the states of Lagos, Anambra and Imo — 2,081,039 votes. His nearest rival, Chief Obafemi Awolowo, a veteran tribal politician, had 688,190 votes; 22 percent.

Peking, Hanoi try talking

PEKING (UPI) — China and Vietnam are resuming their peace talks to try to settle problems stemming from the February border war, but new inflammatory incidents have increased tension between the two Communist neighbors, diplomats said Monday.

The Vietnamese Embassy and Chinese Foreign Ministry said the 10th meeting between the two sides would begin today in the Chinese capital's old Austro-Hungarian legation building.

Iraqi ambassador wounded

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Iraq's ambassador to Lebanon was wounded Monday in a grenade and machine-gun assassination attempt that possibly was linked to a mass execution of Iraqi leaders in Baghdad five days ago.

Unknown gunmen ambushed a car carrying Ambassador Abdel Hussein Mustem, his driver and his bodyguards as they left the Iraqi Embassy just south of Beirut, the state-run Beirut radio said.

Papal agenda pondered

NEW YORK (UPI) — A visit to Harlem or the South Bronx, masses in Shea and Yankee stadiums and a trip to Wall Street are among the possibilities being considered by Pope John Paul II's visit to New York in October, church officials said Monday.

The pontiff arrives Oct. 2 for a 24-hour stay in which his only definite plans so far call for an address to the United Nations General Assembly. The other agenda items are being discussed by a special 15-member planning committee of the Catholic Archdiocese of New York.

BLM removes Utah lands from study

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Bureau of Land Management Monday trimmed nearly a million acres from its list of areas designated for wilderness study in Utah.

William G. Leavelle, associate state BLM director, says as a result of public comments, 942,000 acres have been deleted from the agency's "wilderness intensive inventory" — the government's name for land that will be studied further to see if it should become full-fledged wilderness.

A total of 5.4 million acres — one fourth of the BLM land in the state remain on the study list which will become a law by Sept. 15.

When the BLM completes the study, it will recommend permanent wilderness areas to Congress. Areas set aside by Congress as wilderness will be virtually locked up from future development, accessible only on foot or horseback.

More than half of the land trimmed from the wilderness study, 387,000 acres, is in the Elkhart District, which includes west central Utah from the Wasatch Mountains to the Nevada border.

The largest single tract designated as non-wilderness was Sevier Lake, 23,300 acres of dry lake bed in Sevier County.

The old lake bed has been a favorite place for marijuana smugglers to land planes flying in from Mexico, although the BLM did not cite that as an "intrusion." It is heavily patrolled by local authorities and the military.

Worker grieves beside the body of a victim of Monday's Chicago stadium roof collapse

Five construction workers die as Chicago stadium roof falls

ROSEMONT, Ill. (UPI) — The roof of a half-completed stadium near Chicago collapsed without warning Monday, killing five construction workers and injuring 15 others trapped inside.

The Rosemont Horizon Stadium collapsed about 8:30 a.m. The trapped workers were freed about 45 minutes later.

If it had happened 45 minutes later, we all would have been gone," electrician Leonard Norbye said. A coffee truck usually pulls into the middle of the stadium at 9 a.m. and about 50 workers lounge around the truck, he said.

It was deadly still immediately after the collapse, said Norbye, but seconds later "people just started screaming. It sounded like an engine roaring through a tunnel."

A temporary morgue was set up near the stadium site, 25 miles northwest of the Chicago Loop. The victims were identified as Arturo Reyes Sr., 30, Chicago; John Gelb, 30, Frankfort, Pa.; Martin Wilkison, 36, Elk Grove Village; Doug Wilson, 24, Chicago, and Chester Phillips, 40, Des Plaines.

"The roof came down in a terrible crash. I heard this terrible roar like a crash, and the ground shook for a little while. When I turn to look at it, the roof was gone and people were running around everywhere," said Chris Sharples, a gas station attendant who works about 150 yards from the stadium.

There was no warning the roof was about to collapse, workers said.

Rosemont Mayor Donald E. Stephens said the roof "will have to be replaced. It appears there is no basic damage to the structure. We will, of course, investigate to find the cause of the accident."

Stephens said the collapse "caused something under $3 million" in damage to the $8.5 million structure.

He said a firm would be hired to investigate the cause of the tragedy.

"The roof will have to be replaced," he said. "It appears there is no basic damage to the structure."

A spokesman from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration at the scene said the agency would also launch a "catastrophe investigation" into the collapse.

He would not speculate on any causes, but Stephens said the wind might have been a factor in the collapse.

Authorities said there was neither fire nor explosion when the arched, wooden roof plunged 65 feet to the ground. But a careful eye was kept on the east end of the structure, where part of the roof remained suspended from two-story concrete pillars. Fire departments from Chicago and seven suburbs sent men and equipment to the scene.

Nicholas Kouracos, whose office is located within sight of the stadium, could see "many ambulances at the scene." "They were carting them (the injured) away like crazy."

Dave Beatty, who was sitting in the Sheraton-O'Hare Motor Inn about 200 yards from the stadium, said, "One minute I was looking out the window, I turned away and I looked back and it looked as if someone dropped a huge weight into the center of the building."

Philadelphia police target of suit

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The federal government filed an antitrust suit against Philadelphia Monday, accusing city officials from Mayor Frank Rizzo on down of condoning widespread police brutality that "shocks the conscience."

Rizzo called the suit "complete hogwash."

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court, seeks an injunction forcing the city to end the abuses or lose millions of dollars in federal funds.

The Justice Department said the government is looking into police brutality problems in a half-dozen other cities and two similar suits are under consideration.

The suit accused Philadelphia of pursuing "internal administrative policies, practices and procedures which directly contribute to and result in physical abuse and other denials of rights."

It said the city government and municipal police department encourage officers to use "arbitrary and unassailable force or force which shocks the conscience."

Philadelphia has been plagued in recent years with nearly 1,200 brutality complaints annually, 75 involving police shootings. The suit said victims of the shootings have been overwhelmingly black or Hispanic.

The suit — signed by outgoing Attorney General Griffin Bell in one of his last acts in office — painted a grim picture of alleged police beatings, unjustified shootings and flagrant civil rights abuses in Philadelphia.

It accused 20 top city officials — including Rizzo and Police Commissioner Joseph O'Neill — of failing to prevent or discourage officers from committing the abuses.

Deputy Mayor Tony Zecca called the suit "ludicrous" and quoted Rizzo as saying, "We welcome it."

"I have read this brief and it is complete hogwash," Rizzo, a one-time detective and police commissioner, told a news conference later. "Nobody, but nobody is going to take advantage of this great police department."

He said the Justice Department should spend its time investigating crime, instead of a department which was trying to deal with it.

The Justice Department said Bell ordered an investigation of alleged brutality in Philadelphia after a police shootout with a group known as MOVE triggered widespread citizen complaints last summer. Assistant Attorney General Drew Days told reporters the suit, if successful, will put other cities "on notice that they must reform their practices or face actions by federal courts."

Strauss schedules Middle East trip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ambassador Robert Strauss, the president's personal envoy to the Middle East peace negotiations, will leave Thursday for Tel Aviv and Cairo for three days of talks, the State Department said Monday.

Resolution of the Palestinian question "will be brought up in both capitals," spokesman Tom Reston said, adding Strauss "has full authority to give our views."

Reston declined to elaborate on the mission.

Strauss will be accompanied to Tel Aviv by a group of American businessmen. He will then go to Cairo, return to Tel Aviv and fly back to the United States.

Death penalty law signing due

BOSTON (UPI) — Legislation to restore the death penalty as punishment for certain convicted murderers in Massachusetts was scheduled to be signed into law Tuesday by Gov. Edward J. King.

The bill was enacted earlier this month by the Legislature. King, who campaigned last fall on a pledge to reinstate the death penalty, has spent several days since reviewing claims by opponents of capital punishment that the bill is unconstitutional.

The legislation would allow the state to execute convicted murderers who committed their crimes under 12 specific sets of circumstances.

The bill calls for execution for those convicted of killing on-duty police, firefighters or corrections officers or of killing in connection with a rape or kidnapping.

Mayor mulls march permit

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Mayor Emory Folmar said Monday he is reluctant to grant the Ku Klux Klan permission to march to the state Capitol because weapons were confiscated from Klansmen during last weekend's Selma-to-Montgomery march.

Thirty-seven weapons were seized and 23 Klan members and a juvenile were arrested Saturday. Authorities arrested 177 unarmed Klan marchers on the outskirts of Montgomery Sunday for parading without a permit.

The Klansman had intended to march to the state Capitol to complete their march, but were prevented from doing so because they did not have a city parade permit.

Following the arrests, Imperial Wizard Bill Wilkinson, of Denham Springs, La., said the Klansmen would try to resume their hike in several months.

Make wisest use of oil dollars

Congress had better make the most of its vacation this year, because when it returns to work it must address some pressing issues, particularly the energy mess.

In setting the nation on a sensible energy course, the Congress will have to decide the question of whether to deregulate oil prices.

At the same time, the question of whether to levy a windfall profits tax on the oil companies must be answered.

Deregulation of oil prices is an attractive proposition because it will finally bring the price of oil to the American consumer in line with world oil prices, which should stimulate reasonable gasoline consumption habits by Americans.

In theory, Americans will reduce their consumption, reducing the U.S. balance of payments deficit and stabilizing the dollar.

The other side of the deregulation coin, however, is not so bright.

Huge price increases will price many Americans out of the gasoline market. In the many areas where suitable mass transportation alternatives are not available, many people may not be able to afford to get to work. Motorists will cut out vacations and trips to the local shopping mall, and the entire automobile industry will be affected, adding to the strain on the economy.

That's where the windfall profits tax comes in. Many congressmen support using the windfall profits tax to provide relief from high gasoline prices to low income Americans without adding to the federal budget deficit.

There is another potential use of the windfall profits tax which is much more attractive, using it to fund the development of alternative energy sources.

Without a windfall-profits-tax, there is no guarantee that the profits of the oil companies would derive from deregulation would be used to develop new energy resources; especially, in light of the fact that oil company officials have admitted that the possibility of discovering major new oil fields grows less likely every day.

For the same reason, a plowback provision to require reinvestment in oil exploration would be no more effective in guaranteeing future energy supplies.

Some of the windfall profits revenue could also be used to fund workable mass transportation systems.

Deregulation of oil prices would bring Americans to the hard realization of what a barrel of oil is really worth.

A windfall profits tax would help to ensure that every time they scraped out their pockets to fill up their gas tank, some of their money would go toward producing their next tank of fuel.

What to do after WWII

LARRY Buchwald is being revealed by the White House to Washington. While waiting for a decision, he left behind some of his favorite columns. — Editor

Anyone who doubts that the federal government is prepared for World War-III just doesn't know how organized Washington really is. A short time ago someone who works for the Treasury Department received his instructions in writing on what he has to do in case of enemy attack.

They read as follows, and I haven't made a word of it up:

After the National Office Employees with or without emergency assignments should follow this procedure. If you are prevented from going to your regular place of work because of an enemy attack, keep this instruction in mind:

GO TO THE NEAREST POST OFFICE, ASK THE POSTMASTER FOR FEDERAL EMPLOYEE REGISTRATION CARDS (sample shown on reverse side), FILL IT OUT AND RETURN IT TO HIM. He will see that it is forwarded to the office of the Civil Service Commission, the instructions in the registration file for your area. When the Civil Service Commission receives your card, we will be notified. We can then decide where and when you should report for work... You should obtain and complete your registration card as soon after enemy attack as possible, but not until you are reasonably sure where you will be staying for a few days...

Nobody believes it will ever happen, but let us suppose that Robert Smiley (a fictitious person working for the Treasury Department) has just crawled out of the rubble after an enemy attack, and remembers the instructions for federal employees.

After walking for four days and 350 miles, Smiley finally finds a post office that is still standing. He registers up to a window, but just as he gets there, the man behind it says, "Sorry, this window is closed," and slams it down.

Smiley stumbles to the next window and he told to get in line behind 20 other people. Two hours later he gets to the head of the line and croaks, "I want to register."

"I'm sorry," says the post office clerk, "but this window is just for stamps. Registered mail is at the next window."

"No, no," says Smiley, "I want a Federal employee registration card."

"We don't sell those. Now do you want any stamps or don't you?"

"You see," says Smiley, holding on to the window, "I was instructed to find the nearest post office after the enemy attacked and fill out a card."

"You'd better try the parcel post window," the clerk suggests.

Smiley goes over to the parcel post window and gets in line with 20 people. Four hours later he is informed that the post office has run out of federal employee registration cards. They suggest he try another post office.

Smiley sluggers out into the road and starts walking again. Four hundred miles up the highway he finds another post office. After catching his breath, he takes the clerk shakingly to the counter and asks to fill it out. But the pen won't work. He informs the postmaster of this, and the postmaster replies, "We know it, but there's nothing we can do about it. There's a war on."

"But I got to register!" says Smiley, "or the Civil Service Commission won't know where I am in case the United States Treasury wants to start up again." Couldn't I borrow your pen?"

"What? And ruin the point? Listen, why don't you go over to the Smithsonian post office. I hear their pens are still in working order."

"Excellent," the clerk. Smiley walks 60 miles to Smithsonian, where he fills it out. He mails it that very day. Years later, Smiley is still waiting for a reply. For in his haste and fatigue, Smiley had forgotten to write down a return ZIP code.

In Rhodesia, easy does it

WASHINGTON — Since early spring, Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has been giving more attention to a Baltimore school on the third-base line, so it was not much of a surprise when she laid the hit-and-run on Zimbabwe-Rhodesia in last week's Commonwealth Conference. Suddenly the game has become a political one.

During her campaign as leader of the Conservatives, Mrs. Thatcher was all for lifting sanctions against Rhodesia, right or left. Once in office, she began to backpedal. She quieted down. She grew less positive by the day. By the time she got to Lusaka on Aug. 4, views that once were black and white had turned to a dulcet gray. The lady would cut a deal.

It is a deal worth thinking about. Let us consider. The government that now sits uneasily in Salisbury, ruled by Frederick Chiluba, is the product of two developments: the constitution of last fall and the elections of last spring. Under the constitution, the white minority for 10 years is assured a blocking veto of 28 seats in the 100-member parliament; during this transitional period, whites also may control the army, police, courts and civil service. Under the April elections, 65 percent of the eligible voters—a phenomenal turnout for a largely illiterate electorate in a time of civil war—freely chose the Muzorewa government. Guerrilla forces boycotted the election and indeed sought to disrupt the election by terrorism.

This is Mrs. Thatcher's deal: She would call an all-parties conference, specifically including the terrorist chieftains—Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo. At the conference a new constitution would be drafted that would reduce the influence and power of the white minority. New elections would be scheduled, both to ratify the proposed constitutional changes and to choose a new parliament. Meanwhile, the Muzorewa government would continue in the face of power. After these terms had been taken, Britain would treat the U.N. sanctions against Rhodesia as no longer operative. Zimbabwe's African neighbors would recognize the outcome. And everybody would live happily ever after.

That is as may be. There is room to turn around here. Such shrewd operatives as Tanzania's Julius Nyerere pointedly emphasize that at Lusaka conference that they were not asking political genocide for the whites. When Tanzania became independent in 1969, 21 of the 71 seats in its 120-member parliament were reserved for Asians and whites—30 percent of the seats for 1 percent of the population. When Kenya became independent the same year, 20 percent of the seats were set aside for 4 percent of the population. When Zambia became independent in 1962, 15 seats went to 3.5 million blacks, 15 seats to 84,000 whites.

Against these precedents, the present arrangement in Salisbury seems now too bad—28 percent of the seats for 4 percent of the population—but given sufficient prospective benefits, that percentage ought to be negotiable. A more rapid phasing-in of racial control in military and civilian offices could be bargained.

What benefits are in prospect? Peace, after years of bloody war. An end to the sanctions that have drained the economy of one of Africa's most prosperous lands. Recognition within the community of nations. A not-intolerable way of life for the whites who remain, following the example of Kenya.

Against that rosy prospect, bleak realities intervene. The white minority, led by former Prime Minister Ian Smith, went the last mile in accepting the present constitution. It is far from certain that the whites could be pulled even half a mile more. More to the point, it is unlikely that the terrorist leaders, Mugabe and Nkomo, would agree to any peaceful solution. Both guerrillas have scored elections. Mugabe has issued an assassinations list headed by the name of the "traitor" Muzorewa.

The convert role of the Soviet Union, suppliers of arms, has to be taken into account. Mugabe and Nkomo both envision Marxist dictatorships in the communist-ruled neighboring Mozambique. Mugabe's idea is for the existing Rhodesian army to surrender unconditionally to him. Nkomo has less bluster but he has many reservations.

Mrs. Thatcher has called a raffle-dazzle party. Good for her! But after listening to 12 years of Rhodesian "solutions," a decent skepticism ought to be reserved.

Typographical errors are no longer amusing

Editor, Times-News:

For the last year, the typographical and spelling errors in your newspaper have given me much enjoyment. It amused me very much to see an ad for a jeep with a built-in wrench, to cite only one example. After what I saw in this week, however, I can no longer remain silent. In a front-page article concerning forest fires, I counted at least five grammatical or spelling errors. Most glaring of these was the spelling of "the towns" as "the town." I dictionary I have ever seen, and I've checked several, have such a word as "alot." As a former English teacher, I have strove for years to erase this misspelling of two words from the writing of my students. When I have seen it, I have marked the user as semi-illiterate. Then, of all places, I run into my old nemesis in a newspaper on the front page. Have the schools quit teaching English?

At one time, the newspapers of our land set the standard for correct usage. Young people could find in these periodicals examples of good writing and correct English. Each article was written, edited, and proofread carefully for correct spelling and usage. Is this no longer done? Are the reporters, editors, and proofreaders employed by your newspaper so unfamiliar with the rules of English and its spelling that Americans have never been very political

BY JACK BURBY
© The Los Angeles Times

Some politicians, perhaps as bored with politics as their voters, are turning to analyzing a hobby called America on a big couch and telling it what makes it tick.

One of the symptoms of malaise, of what President Carter calls our "crisis of the spirit," seems to be that we do not vote enough.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. devoted a long passage in his inaugural address last January to voting, or the lack of voting, noting that "more than half of the eligible citizens of California again decided not to vote in the last election." He concluded it was because politicians had never said one thing and doing another and the people were in revolt.

Some analysts — the cynics — say that people do not vote because they have had it. "It doesn't work." The real alarmists make the national voting record sound like a fall from political grace, a betrayal of our heritage. The way it comes out, we are somehow not the people we used to be.

When it comes to voting, the dirty truth is that we never were the people we thought we used to be. The myth of the early American as a compulsive activist, calling a meeting to debate every proposed new turn in community life probably started with Tocqueville.

His "Democracy in America" is still the most perceptive profile of this country ever set in print, but it was not entirely without flaws.

He glorified the New England town meeting in these volumes: "Town meetings are to liberty what primary schools are to science," he wrote. Before Tocqueville toured the country in 1833, Thomas Jefferson had written: "New England townships have proved themselves the wisest invention... for the perfect exercise of self-government and for its preservation."

Tocqueville never saw a town meeting and there is no record that Jefferson did either, and that is too bad because their accounts leave some things out.

Browsing through old New England newspapers and the minutes of some town meetings gives you a sense of what they missed.

For one thing, the officials of these towns had to make the rounds, visiting titles that officials do today. There were hog-reeves, whose job was to run down stray hogs and get them off the street, and fence-viewers, the smallest details like railing and children and keeping the house warm in winter and the family full of food.

The town meeting that Tocqueville described in the pure, grass-roots expression of participatory democracy did not last very long in New England and for obvious reasons: People were busy with other things buying and selling, butting and crating, hunting and harvesting.

So it is that in 1634 — a few years after the arrival of the Mayflower — the people of Charlestown decided they had better uses of their time than sitting around in meetings.

They posted a notice that year that read:

"In consideration of the great trouble and charge of the inhabitants of Charlestown by reason of the frequent meetings of the town in general, and that by reason of many men (not men and women, you will notice) meeting, things were not so easily brought into a joint issue, these eleven men whose names are written on the other side (with the advice of pastor and teacher desired in any case of conscience) shall entertain of all such business as shall concern the town, the choice of officers excepted..."

"...What they (the eleven selectmen) or the greater part of them shall conclude of, the rest of the town willing to submit unto as their own proper acts..."

After that, they met once a year and decided whether they liked what the selectmen had done or not and either kept them on or kicked them out accordingly.

Over time, as towns grew in population, the meetings became less important. By 1820, for example, Boston was big enough to have an important room in Faneuil Hall, the cradle of liberty where Sam Adams and his colleagues met to plot their freedom, for all of the qualified voters and voters.

As one scholar of the times wrote: "When the subject was not generally exciting, town meetings were usually composed of the selectmen, the town officers, and 30 or 40 inhabitants. Those who thus came were, for the most part, drawn to it from some official duty or private interest."

The town meeting survives in New England, although more out of respect for traditions than out of necessity. In some towns, there are simply too many people to fit in any of the available halls. In others, there is not much interest.

One account of a town meeting a few years back describes the town officials raiding "the Women's Relief Corps, the American Legion Auxiliary, and the standing committee of the Elm Street Congregational Church" to get a quorum.

In another town, they rang the fire bell, then collared the volunteer firemen who responded to the false alarm and held them until the year's business was concluded.

None of this deprecates the important role of the town meeting in establishing the principle in the United States that power should flow upward rather than down. Even though the meeting did not last in a pure form for long, it lasted long enough to create the sense of community and of control over one's immediate life, much of which slipped away as the towns grew in size and the problems grew in complexity.

But an important point comes through from these old records is that Americans have never been very political. This has always been a country of buyers and sellers and movers on. Tocqueville, for example, thought the westward movement in America was more a matter of an instinct to subdivide than of any frontier mystique. People moved west, cleared the land, built a home, and then sold it to the next family coming west for a handsome profit. That, he concluded, was what kept them moving.

The early settlers of America could get away with staying in the fields or at the maple tree siphoning off syrup, they did it. We are no different now, except that there are even more distractions — flying to Chicago, helping children with homework, writing checks, bowling and soaps.

There is another point, as well. Those old histories give a reader the sense that the selectmen were less manipulative and more direct than many, perhaps most, of the politicians of our day. In Charlestown, they consulted the pastor and the teacher in matters of conscience. Today, they look to the pollster and the public relations man.

It is not the voters who have changed so much, it is the people they leave in charge in between the meetings. You can crawl-off that couch now.

Miss America formula drawn

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A good bet for Miss America would be a small-town girl of European descent who looks good in a swimsuit and plays the piano or sings, according to a report Monday to the American Statistical Association.

It also wouldn't hurt if the contestant came from California and had measurements of 35.6-23.4-35.55.

The data was included in a 17-page statistical report, entitled "The Anatomy of Miss America," and submitted to the association's statistical meeting by George Miller and Chipel Tseng of Northern Illinois University.

While several conclusions about what it takes to be Miss America are reached by Miller and Tseng in their study of the Atlantic City pageant from 1959 to 1978, they cautioned that "a predictive model of sequential decision nature is still under development."

"There is an inherent small town bias in the Miss America Pageant," they said, noting large cities can send only one representative to state pageants.

Currently the pageant judging is based on a scale of one-third for talent, one-third for swimsuit, one-sixth for evening gown and one-sixth for poise, but Miller and Tseng said there is "a definite bias toward swimsuit winners."

They said 16 of 52 swimsuit winners finished first or second, and 22 of 52 finished third or better, while only two of 57 talent winners finished second or better and six of 67 were third or better.

"Though there were more talent winners in the top 10, clearly a talented participant must win the swimsuit contest to have much of a chance for the higher ranks," they said.

Their figures showed that over the past 20 years, the mean measurements of the winners were 35.6 inches for bust, 23.4 for waist and 35.55 for hips.

"Judges do seem to favor a symmetry of bust and hips with waists approximately 12 inches smaller," they said.

California has had an entrant in the top winners 17 times.

Inflation protest lowers U.S. debt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Inflation protesters from three states lowered the government's $800 billion debt slightly Monday, delivering more than a ton of pennies to the Treasury Department in a banner-decked coal truck.

The contribution, estimated by a department official at $7,000 to $8,000, hardly will dent the national debt. "Proposition 13" organizers made a symbolic protest against inflation and government spending policies.

"The average person has the opportunity to say, 'We've had it with inflation.'"

Donald Conner given farewell hug by Cleveland patrolman

Abducted boy, 4, parents reunited

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — A 4-year-old boy abducted 13 days ago by a kidnapper who took him to Cleveland was tearfully reunited with his parents Monday.

Donald Conner, accompanied by an FBI agent, returned to Richmond aboard a jetliner and within minutes was being embraced.

The child, wearing a yellow, green, and blue shirt and checkered pants, appeared to be unfazed by the excitement as he was hugged by his mother and father, Donald and Eleanor Conner. The boy kept gazing at the small crowd gathered around them.

"I am very much relieved. It's sort of hard to explain right now," beamed Conner as he hugged his son. "My prayers have been answered. I never really had any doubt that they would be."

Conner said his family was awakened early Monday morning by police and told that Donald had been found apparently unharmed in Cleveland.

The family, which does not have a telephone, has slept on mattresses near the front door to make sure they could hear anyone knocking with news of their son, who had been missing since July 31.

The FBI arrested Joseph Gerald Bertolny, 34, and charged him with kidnapping the boy. Bertolny, who was in custody in Cleveland, was also wanted on warrants for probation violation in Missouri and auto theft in Milwaukee, agents said.

Bertolny was arrested after police responded to a complaint about a man swinging a boy off a 150-foot high bridge. Bertolny and the boy were picked up about four blocks later and police checks revealed Bertolny, who gave police an alias of Robert Cogle, was wanted by the FBI.

The Conners permitted Bertolny to take the boy from their home late on the evening of July 31. The Conners had met the 6-foot-8-inch, 217-pound Bertolny at a blood-plasma-center. The couple said Bertolny befriended the family, and the boy, who has a speech impediment, especially took to the big man.

The suspect took the child on two earlier outings and kept the boy away from the home for two days on one occasion. The Conners said they were concerned about that incident, but were having trouble supporting their three children and welcomed Bertolny's interest.

Rabbi wins apology

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — A traffic judge apologized Monday for requiring a rabbi to remove his skullcap in court — an order that had triggered calls for the judge's ouster.

In a letter to Rabbi Joshua Sackett, written following consultations with the rabbi's attorneys, Judge Vernon Hitchings expressed "my deepest and sincerest apologies for the affront committed to you and your co-religionists."

Sackett accepted the apology, shook hands with the judge and abandoned plans to file a complaint with the Virginia Judicial Inquiry and Review Commission.

Pisceans should avoid arguments with others, express fresh ideas showing off talents

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is one of those days when it would be unwise for you to take any chances where your financial security is concerned. Carry through with a plan of action already in motion.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A well-intended adviser could be off the beam today, so don't consult this person on matters that mean much to you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use care in the handling of personal affairs which are likely to be difficult now. The evening is best spent at home.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are swamped with work that has to be done, so get an early start and plow right through. Keep your temper in control.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't try to force friends to your way of thinking or you could easily alienate them. Take no risks with money today.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Use tact and diplomacy in dealing with others today, especially in business. Strive for true accord with loved one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have good ideas which need more study before you go ahead with definite plans. Avoid one who makes you waste valuable time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Not a good day to be frivolous with your money who is in a serious mood. Make sure you keep promises you have made.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Take care not to argue with an associate or there could be a severance of connections. Strive for increased happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be more attentive and efficient in doing your work so you can get ahead faster. Try to improve your health.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Await a better day for putting new ideas to work where creative matters are concerned. Be careful of outsiders.

Matrimonial invitations average two for woman

Consider the matter of marriage proposals. That is, how many proposals the average woman receives in her lifetime. At least two proposals per woman is a typical finding in a survey on the subject, an exceedingly attractive woman in her fifties admitted she had heard 14 matrimonial invitations. Our Love and War man is not impressed with these numbers. He is of the opinion that the woman sends signals to her gentlemen friends in such a manner that she gets the exact number of marriage proposals she wants. Any woman who receives 14, he believes, isn't playing fairly.

Quick, name the only continent on which there has never been a war. Correct, Australia.

RADIATION

Q. If I ate my luminous watch dial, how much radiation would I get?

A. An amount equal to about 25 X-rays.

Scientists who've cut deep trenches into Rocky Mountain glaciers have found layers of frozen grasshoppers.

Q. Do tigers still kill a lot of people?

A. In India, the Bengals knock off about 40 a year.

The government of Sweden will ban the sale of war toys there just before Christmas. On Dec. 1, 1979, to be exact.

Q. Do hunters think it ethical to shoot any sort of bird on the ground?

A. Only the wild turkey.

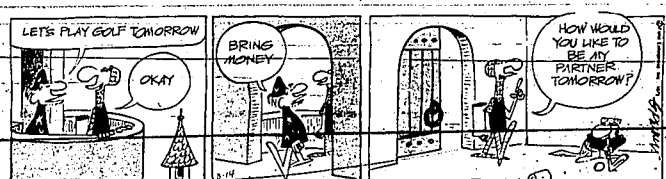

MEDICAL BILLS

Set up a special bank account. Authorize your doctor to sign checks—Deposits so much for the account every month. Reach agreement with your doctor that he or she pay all your medical bills out of that account with the understanding that you and your doctor will share whatever is left over at year's end. A Seattle-based insurance company put together just such a medical care plan. And the report now is it cuts yearly medical costs for each patient by one whole of a lot.

Mother, sons construct geodesic home

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — While many Americans read the headlines or watch the evening news and grumble about the rising cost of housing and energy, Debbie Barlow and her sons are doing something about it. The Barlow family, who live in the North Valley, just outside this mid-high city, are building their own home by themselves. At first reading, this does not seem at all extraordinary until you discover that Mrs. Barlow is a 37-year-old single working mother, and her "construction crew" consists of her five children, ranging in age from 15 to 2. The home the Barlow family is building is a Monterey Dome geodesic home. The basic dome package or shell was purchased from Monterey Domes, a Riverside, Calif., manufacturer of geodesic housing.

From the day their kit was delivered on site, other than having the driver help them unload it, Mrs. Barlow and her sons have done all the work by themselves.

This was made possible by the uniqueness of geodesic home's basic package. This pre-cut, pre-drilled, color-coded kit can be easily assembled with the help of a few ordinary household tools. This was one of several reasons behind Debbie's decision to purchase her geodesic home.

The second important factor was economy of construction. When completed, the house will have two floors and contain six bedrooms, two baths, a living-dining area, kitchen, utility room and adequate storage. The home will comprise nearly 2,100 square feet of living area, yet cost under $30,000.

By way of comparison, prior to making her decision, Ms. Barlow shopped around with a keen eye, but the only home she found that came even close to meeting their needs was $78,000.

"Even then," she said, "it was just an ordinary home in addition to being smaller and offered none of the features of dome."

The "other features," she refers to bring up the third important reason for her choice — energy ... its rising shortage and growing cost. This type house is the most energy-efficient dwelling known, because of its unique design inherent in the geodesic dome.

In the words of its creator, R. Buckminster Fuller, "anytime we double the size of a dome, we get eight times as much room while adding only four times as much external surface through which heated or cooled air can escape."

Additionally, the absence of any corners allows the air to circulate aerodynamically in a natural pattern or swirl.

Mrs. Barlow and her sons are taking Fuller's concept a giant step farther by using rigid foam insulation. Plus, they will cover their dome's exterior with shakes available from the manufacturer that gives the appearance of wood shakes, yet can be easily installed with little or no skill. The Monterey Shakes are also fire-proof and come pre-cut, ready for installation.

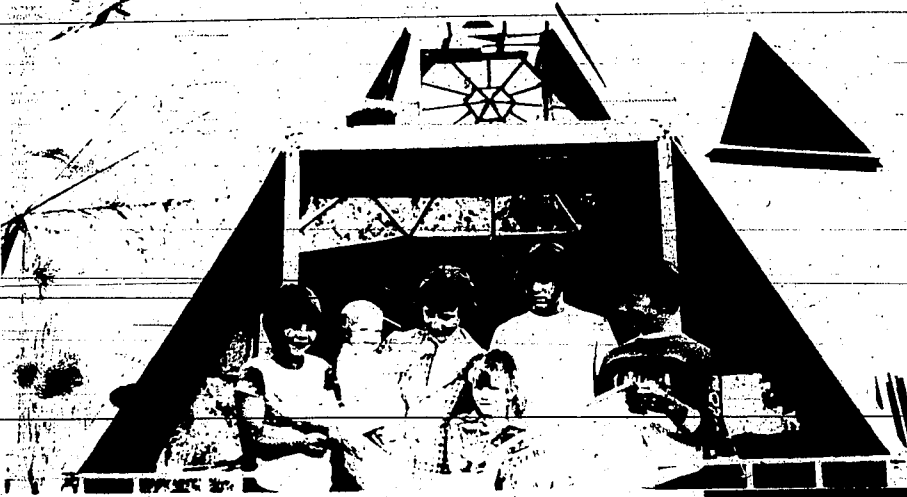

As a result of this, the home will achieve an insulation rating of R-44, a figure "never" before thought possible in ordinary residential "x" construction. On one wintry Saturday morning, with the mercury hovering just above freezing, the boys decided to test the dome's efficiency, along with that of their newly-installed wood-burning fireplace, the future source of heat for the home. Using an armful of scraps, the boys built a fire and within minutes, the family was basking in spring-like warmth — even though the interior finish and shingles had not been installed.

Ms. Barlow estimates her geodesic dome house will save her up to 60 per cent on heating and cooling costs.

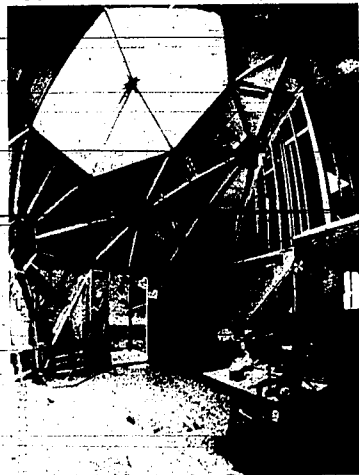

During the building of her home, her sons have helped their mother at every step of the way. On weekends when most youngsters are watching cartoons, riding bikes or shooting backyard goals, her sons have been there alongside their mother. Not only are the boys fiercely proud of their accomplishment, but two of them are using the experience in earning their Eagle Scout badges.

Best of all, the experience has brought the family closer together than ever. Even the youngest son, 9, became the official project "go-for" while 2-year-old blonde-haired Angel would sit propped in her infant seat taking full note of the proceedings. Far more than just a new home for Ms. Barlow and her children, it's been a new kind of experience as well. "It's taught my sons the meaning of the word — responsibility," she said, "and I'm glad they've learned it this early in their lives."

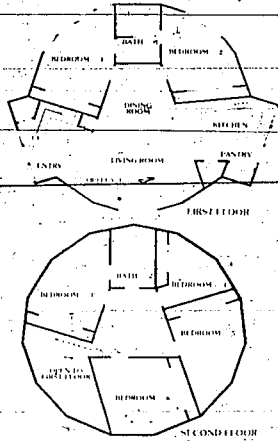

Here on the very land where a century ago, pioneer families settled the great American West, she and her sons are fulfilling a cherished dream — to build their dream home with their own hands.

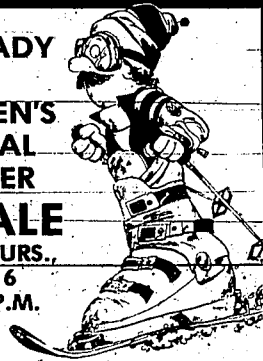

Debbie Barlow, working mother of five and her sons put this pre-cut house together

Dear Abby

Busts too small for marriage

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© The Chicago Tribune

N.Y. News Syndicate
DEAR ABBY: I am 54 years old. I have always been a fairly attractive woman, and have had many opportunities to marry, but I never did because I was embarrassed over having such a small bust.

I am going with a man who wants to marry me and I want to know if I'm too old to have an operation to enlarge my bust. Have you ever heard of a woman having this kind of surgery in her 60s? (P.S. If I decide to go ahead with it, could my husband tell the difference between me and the real thing?)

CONSIDERING IT

DEAR CONSIDERING: My medical consultants inform me that when women in their 60s have that kind of surgery, most of them regret having waited so long.

If you decide to go ahead with it, consult a Board Certified plastic surgeon.

(P.S. Your husband may or may not be able to tell the difference between you and the real thing. It depends on how much experience he had with the real things.)

DEAR ABBY: Please print this. It's an open letter to my brother:

Dear Brother,
Tomorrow will be 10 years since I took Mama into my home. You were all for sending her to a state institution, but I couldn't do that.

You tell me I'm getting paid pretty good because I get Mama's Social Security check every month. Do you really think $222.90 is "good pay" for taking care of a total invalid 24 hours a day? And when her check runs out, I use mine ($102), and before the 3rd of the month rolls around, it's all gone. Mine and Mama's.

My good husband struggles to keep our bills paid with his Social Security check. It isn't easy.

You say you can't afford to help, but I notice you manage to keep yourself in beer, cigarettes and Valium, and drive a new car. You also take vacation trips. I don't. And your home is paid for. Mine isn't.

If you don't want to give me cash because you're afraid I might spend it on myself, why don't you donate some disposable diapers since Mama is incontinent? Or buy me some detergent now and then? I use a lot because I change Mama's bed linen twice a day.

I would really appreciate it if you and your lovely wife would stay with Mama for just one night—change her diaper, bathe her and turn her every few hours so I could get one full night's sleep.

You never bother to visit Mama because her mind is gone and you say she wouldn't know that you were here. She couldn't see you because she's blind, and she couldn't hear you because she's deaf. It's true. Mama doesn't know you anymore. But YOU KNOW MAMA.

When Mama dies, you will cry hardest at her funeral. And you will probably cry more for not crying. By then I'll be all cried-out and I won't have anything to cry about. But YOU will. Think about it.

SISTER

Cushions cheap, easy way to decorate

By JUDY MOORE
© Chicago Sun-Times

College students and newlyweds have known for years that cushions for sitting and leaning on as well as resting in are among the easiest—and cheapest—ways to decorate a room.

You know, stack several cushions and use them for seating or slide a couple under a coffee table and pull them out for low-level informal dining, or prop a giant economy-size version in the middle of a room as a head prop for TV viewing.

Today, however, there is a demand for more sophistication in a home, condo or rental apartment. As a result, the cushion concept has been refined.

Selig Furniture has transformed the concept into modular living room pieces—corner sections, armless and one-armed units, ottomans, even glass-topped tables. The diet-and-white collection is done in a combination of stripes, tattersall and checks.

The furniture appears to be soft, square stacked pillows. But it is much more—complete kiln-dried, corner-blocked hardwood frames, webbing or springs and down filling.

"The low, lounge seating started in Italy in the 1950s," according to Robert H. Wexler, president of Selig, a firm that manufactures contemporary upholstered furniture. "Its popularity is due, in part, to the popularity of pants and jeans in fashion. Pillow furniture is easy to sprawl on, and move around on, too. Architects hate legs on furniture, and the low seating has a built-in quality that looks quite custom-made." The furniture creates a dramatic effect used in a room painted in black enamel with wood wall strips painted white.

Dr. Lamb

3 ways to fight acne

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
(Newspaper Enterprise Association)

Dear Dr. Lamb,
As common as this problem may sound, I have yet to get any helpful advice for it, and I would appreciate any you may have.

My daughter is 12 now and is moving into teenage skin problems. I have tried several of the skin products on the market advertised for teenage problems but nothing seems to work. My daughter washes her hair every day since most of her problem is in her forehead and around her hairline.

She also uses alcohol after washing her face. Is there anything she can do to help keep blemishes under control until she outgrows this problem.

Dear Reader,
As you know, acne or pimples and such related conditions commonly occur at puberty in both boys and girls. It is severe more frequently in boys than it is in girls, but both sexes have their problems. It's directly related to the active sex glands and the formation of sex hormones beginning at that stage of life.

The skin undergoes a lot of changes. Literally, parts of it get a lot greater because the oily skin glands start secreting a lot of oil. Those oily glands are really sex glands. And you're right, the forehead area is a favorite location.

It sounds to me like you're doing about as much as you can expect to accomplish on your own. For additional help, you will probably have to take your daughter to a doctor. There are basically three approaches to solving these problems, all of which may be necessary in difficult cases.

The first is to try to prevent the oily skin glands from secreting so much oil—to literally dry up the skin. Of course, simply washing the oil away and using alcohol is a help, but sometimes that's not enough.

The second approach is to improve the proper drainage of these oily glands so they won't cause acne and skin blemishes. This may involve using a skin peeling agent which literally peels off the surface of the skin, and in so doing opens the drainage of the oily glands. A good example here is vitamin A acid, a prescription item which can be applied to the surface of the skin.

By the way, it's not the same thing as the vitamin A you swallow, so I'm certainly not recommending taking vitamin A as a treatment for acne.

Some cases of vitamin A toxicity have been reported in teen-agers who took large amounts, thinking vitamin A would cure their acne. It won't.

The third approach is to eliminate tiny bacteria that live in the pores of the oily glands. That's why the tetracyclines are used. These bacteria split the fat that's formed by the oily gland and in so doing cause the fat to become an irritating chemical. This is part of what causes the inflammatory reaction to the skin.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-2, Acne Can Be Treated.

Don't throw away that old garment... the U. of I. is interested

MOSCOW — If you have been cleaning out your attic or basement and don't know what to do with Great-Great Aunt Tilly's summer dresses or Uncle Joe's zoot suit, the University of Idaho School of Home Economics may take them off your hands.

"Our costume collection ranges from the 1850s to the present," Dr. Leila Old, professor of home economics, said. "We would like to receive donations of items worn in everyday life when we can get them, as they are more representative of the styles of the period. Wedding gowns and ball gowns, which are of interest, too, tend to be atypical of the period."

"The collection is not limited to clothing. Donations of complete ensembles, including shoes, stockings, gloves, hats, handbags and costume jewelry, are greatly appreciated, Dr. Old said. "We also like to receive made-over items since they tell us quite a bit about fashion changes and life styles. We have a nice cluster of clothing from the 1880s through about 1925, but very few things from earlier periods," she said.

Whether costumes are being kept for family heirlooms or for donation, Dr. Old suggests a written record be kept of when the garment was made or purchased, and for whom and when it was worn.

"Too often people have items about which information has been handed down through generations and they tend to forget what they know until the identification is lost," she said. Pictures of an individual wearing the garment during its useful life are also helpful, she said.

Many items are damaged beyond use because of storage, Dr. Old said. "Unfortunately, the kinds of places people tend to store things are probably the worst from a textile conservation standpoint. Attics are too hot and dry, and basements are too damp. Insect and mildew attacks are more difficult to prevent in such areas, too. Probably the only good thing that can be said about basements and attics is that they usually are dark. Light is hard on fabrics, too."

She also said that roomy, weight-free storage is important in preserving garments. Things which are folded and crushed tend to suffer from breakage of the folds, eventually deteriorating into splits and tears.

Correct storage of bulky garments usually poses a problem because of space limitations. Such heavy garments as elaborate beaded gowns from the '20s can't be hung because of the strain which would literally pull them apart in time. They are also difficult to store flat. Lighter garments with full skirts can be hung on padded hangers, but require a lot of space to avoid crushing and folding.

Items must be folded for storage, they should be refreshed by refolding every three to four years so that the fold lines fall in different places.

"We have the space to provide proper storage of these items and we welcome donations, particularly from families and friends of early residents of the area," she said.

The garments in the collection are used for illustration of style periods which students are studying and are occasionally displayed in glass showcases in the building "to care for them in the best possible way at all times," Dr. Old said. "They are never loaned out to be worn."

Anyone with clothing items is invited to bring them to the School of Home Economics University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho 83843, telephone (208) 885-6332, for advice. "We will be glad to look at items and recommend their disposition, whether to a museum, to our collection or as yard sale or Goodwill potential. We will return garments we can't use, offer them to the drama department or do whatever the owner wants with them."

She said people shouldn't forget that some of the rapidly changing styles of modern years would be preserved in a collection, too. Things like mini-skirts and hot pants that enjoy short periods of extreme popularity should be preserved, as well as men's shirts with the reflection of changing times and life styles. Other things of interest are sports clothing, ski wear and items going through rapid fashion changes.

Good examples of handmade fashion items are also of value in helping to identify interests and skills of a period, she added.

From the balcony, a blackened stage, full-sized orchestra pit and rows of first floor seats are faint shadows in a tomb-like darkness.

A hollow, deep drum roll, builds to a crescendo from behind. It echoes off the cavernous ceiling, abruptly yielding to the sound of an orchestra.

A majestic Cecil B. de Mille theme fills the somber gloom with the eerie warmth of another place, another time.

Thin, starlike lights begin twinkling from the ceiling.

Suddenly, a strange, blue light pierces the black to reveal two, larger-than-life pharaohs peering through ornate King Tut masks from niches otherwise hidden above and off to each side of the stage.

Next, a murky mauve light slowly unshrouds a peripheral scene of sand, sphinxes, The Great Pyramids and Lotus leaves.

The theater comes alive, transformed into a pharaoh's courtyard.

And so it goes these days a few minutes before curtain time at the Egyptian Theater.

The unique stage — used in the 1920s by Clara Bow, Ziegfeld's "Rio Rhythmists" and former stage idol Edward Everett Horton — is now being used by Elvis Presley impersonators, local jazz bands and Chicago-area theater troupes.

"The original owners of this place also used electrician's to blow steam and light clouds slowly across the ceiling, but those things used to be an ungodly fire hazard, so we don't think we'll try for that affect," said Barbara Kummerfeldt, the lady behind the scenes of the dramatic pre-curtain theatrics. They are part of a drive to restore the 50-year-old onetime vaudeville house.

"I think the pharaoh's courtyard idea comes across well, and the drum roll and light show is a neat way to set the stage and let people know what a gem this place is," she said.

Mrs. Kummerfeldt and several dozen other university activists, area farmers and local businessmen comprise PEET, Inc. — Preservation of the Egyptian Theater — a nonprofit organization now seeking $320,000 to preserve the theater and help restore it to its original grandeur.

Built in 1929 on the wave of the discovery of the Tut tomb in Egypt in 1922, the theater opened about a month after the great stock market crash of 1929. Vaudeville and later movies, kept it financially sound until it closed in November 1977.

The Egyptian Theater has long been a phenomenon amid neighboring drug stores and shop boutiques and formal-dick restaurants.

Architect Elmer F. Behren's Egyptian version of Atlas — a stained-glass window rendering of a scarab holding the sun aloft with its heavy legs — and twin sculptures of Pharaoh Ramesses II overpower the telephone wires that stretch across the building's imposing terra-cotta facade.

Mrs. Kummerfeldt said the Egyptian Theater, originally built for $500,000, was the showpiece of northern Illinois in the 1920s and 1930s.

Not every case of soreness or pain in the muscles requires chiropractic care. We get sore muscles by simply overdoing. This is especially true when we assume doing something we haven't done for years, such as skating or playing tennis.

However, when pain occurs and there is no explanation in terms of recent over-exertion, misalignment of joints, or trauma is often of fault. Either one severe wrench or a series of small injuries can build up to a condition of intolerable pain.

Relief from pain is usually provided by chiropractic care. Phone or write for an appointment for an examination.

California gas plan approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal administrative law judge Monday approved a project design to furnish up to 25 percent of California's natural gas needs in the early 1980's.

Judge Samuel Gordon's approval of the project design for liquefied natural gas from Indonesia and Alaska — is to be reviewed by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the Energy Department's Economic Regulatory Administration under a streamlined process for a quick final decision.

Natural gas made liquid under high pressure and low temperature can be transported in huge volumes by ship and then turned into gas again at facilities on the coast. The process is expensive. The FERC estimated the gas for California could cost $5 to $8 per thousand cubic feet.

Gordon considered two separate proposals: One for transporting liquefied natural gas from Cook Inlet, Alaska, and another for a terminal at Littleport near Point Conception, Calif., to receive and process gas from both Alaska and Indonesia.

The plans called for up to 800 million cubic feet of gas a day into California from Alaska and Indonesia for 20 years, a volume that would represent one-fourth the projected needs for California in the early 1980's.

The projects' sponsors are Western LNG-Terminal-Associates, Pacific Alaska LNG Associates, and Pacific Indonesia LNG Co., subsidiaries of Pacific Gas and Electric Co. and Pacific Lighting Corp.

Pacific Gas and Electric and Southern California Gas Co., which is owned by Pacific Lighting, will receive half the project.

The regulatory commission said Gordon found a "pressing need for additional long-term supplies in the California market and there are at present no superior alternatives to the project."

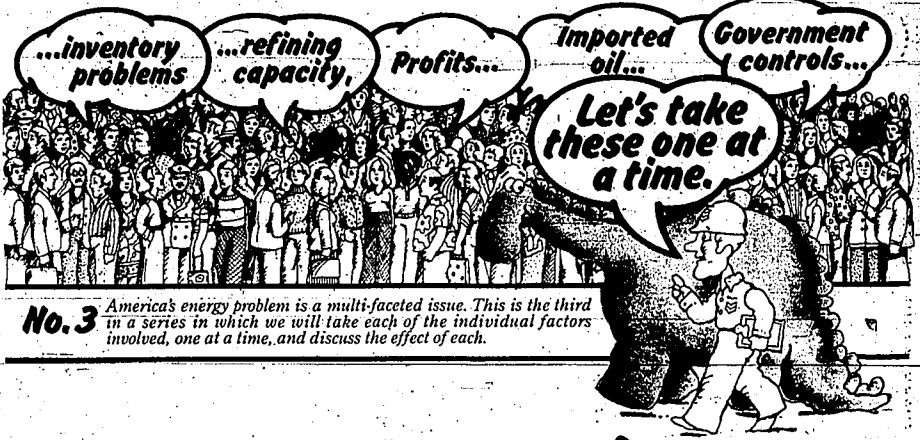

The Alaska project is estimated to cost $1.8 billion, for transporting the natural gas from producers in the Cook Inlet area by pipeline to a liquefaction plant at Nikiski, Alaska, and loading the liquefied gas onto ships for the trip to Point Conception.

There, the gas would be turned back into its gaseous state so it could be sent by pipeline to California distributors and customers.

Although foes of the project had argued it would desecrate areas sacred to the Chumash Indians, Gordon ruled that the port site had no special cultural significance.

In July 1977, Gordon had approved a proposed terminal site at Oxnard, Calif., near Los Angeles. But the state legislature passed a law ruling out the Oxnard site because it was too close to densely populated areas.

Gordon said Point Conception is a "remote, thinly populated" site that will lead to higher gas costs than an area nearer customers would have.

No. 3 America's energy problem is a multi-faceted issue. This is the third in a series in which we will take each of the individual factors involved, one at a time, and discuss the effect of each.

Idaho grain cut starts

BOISE (UPI) — Farmers across Idaho greased their combines this week and began harvesting grain crops which are expected to be smaller than last year.

Production of the state's wheat crop is down about two percent from last year, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said. Irrigated grains made good progress this summer while fields without irrigation showed signs of stress because of the dry, hot weather, the department said.

Predictions for wheat production across the nation contrast with the Idaho yield, the department said. Nationally, wheat is expected to be 19 percent more than last year, the second largest crop on record with the department.

In Idaho, winter wheat production, at 37.4 million bushels, is down 15 percent from last year while a record spring wheat crop is expected at 36 million bushels. The predictions for the barley crop stand at 13 percent below 1978.

Idaho's corn is estimated at about 3 million bushels, hay at 4.4 million tons, sugarbeet at 2.6 million tons and dry beans down about four percent from last year.

Underground home advice available

Who can I call or write to learn more about underground houses, particularly tips on construction and some possible disadvantages to be aware of? — Twin Falls reader.

You are fortunate to have an expert right here in town. He is Jay Pace, "The Idea Man", and his phone number is 733-9445. Pace not only designs underground houses but lives in one as well. He charges for consulting only if he drafts plans for you or if he has to travel out of town to evaluate the site you have in mind. Pace says Book Magic Bookstore has the four best books on the subject, but he has many others, which he will lend you.

The University of Minnesota has done a lot of research on underground houses. Many of the findings are in a book called The Book of Earth Sheltered Housing Design, published by Van Nostrand Reinhold. It costs $11, which includes postage, and can be ordered from: The Underground Space Center, University of Minnesota, Dept. of Civil and Mineral Engineering, 221 Church St., Minneapolis, MN 55455. If you would rather not order the book, ask them for the price list for their pamphlets, which cover the highlights of the book.

For $30 a year you can subscribe to Underground Space, the USC's bimonthly journal. It deals with all aspects of underground space, not just housing. Each issue has a different theme. Send your subscription check to the above address.

The Earth Shelter Digest, on the other hand, does stick to housing. Also a bimonthly, it costs $15 a year. For that one write to: Wabeco Publishing, 479 Fort Road, St. Paul, MN 55102.

And finally, the National Solar Heating and Cooling Information Center will send you bibliography on underground housing. To request this, call the center's toll-free number: 1-800-323-2829.

Of all fatal car crashes, how many involve older cars? I'm interested to know if a malfunction is more likely in a new car or an old one. — Twin Falls reader.

Because there are so many variables involved, you will never know for sure. Accident statistics can't tell the whole story. For instance, older cars are not on the road as often as new ones. Studies show an average American car is driven 15,000 miles in its first year. The figure drops steadily as the car ages. By the fourth year the average is 10,000 miles per year.

Another factor is that young people, who cause the most accidents, tend to drive older cars.

One interesting fact is that federal safety standards, a perennial irritation to car manufacturers, have saved lives. According to the Center for Auto Safety, the highway death rate was 5.5 fatalities per 100 million vehicle-miles in 1977, the last year before car manufacturers were required by law to improve door locks, signals, windshields, and other components. In 1977 the same figure dropped to 3.3.

Now for the statistics you wanted, courtesy of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Of the 40,396 passenger cars involved in fatal accidents in 1978, there were more 1977 cars, 3,771 to be exact, than any other model year. The totals for model years 1972 through 1978 are all within 500 of that figure, with the exception of 1975. Cars made in 1975 were involved in only 2,604 fatal accidents in 1978, a significant difference which holds true for 1975, 1976, and 1977 accident statistics as well. Because of a recession, fewer cars were made and sold in 1975.

The totals show that after a model is 10 years old the number of fatal accidents for that model year tends to drop with each passing year. There were 13-1990 cars involved in fatal accidents in 1975, and in 1978 that number dropped to six.

The refinery's challenge: make more from less.

Chevron's refineries operate 24 hours a day, all year round, except for periodic maintenance and repair of individual units. So, what do refineries have to do with the oil shortage?

The problem starts with crude oil. There must be enough available for a refinery to operate continuously at capacity. Unfortunately, the Iranian revolution created a shortage of crude.

Secondly, crude oil comes in a variety of types, some of which are better than others for producing gasoline and other light fuels. For example, heavy Alaskan crude contains on the average, one-third less gasoline than the lighter Middle Eastern crudes. And while most Chevron refineries are able to get more out of these heavier crudes than many other refineries, the reduced availability of light crude is still a problem.

Excessive regulations make matters worse.

Excessive governmental regulations also reduce the amount of light fuel we can get out of a barrel of crude oil. For instance, Federal regulations have severely limited the use of lead, an additive which can be used to raise the octane of gasoline to needed levels...this means less refined product from the same amount of crude.

Making a commitment to meet the challenge.

Over the next five years, Chevron will be spending more than $1 billion at our refineries for facilities to get more out of heavier crudes and achieve even greater energy savings and pollution control capabilities. This will help meet increased demands for gasoline, diesel, jet and heating fuels.

Even with all-out refinery efforts to make more fuel, everything must be done to develop domestic energy sources. At the same time, all of us must do an even better job of conserving energy.

Thank you for listening.

Sludge dumping banned

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Where do you put 90,000 pounds of sewage waste? Twin Falls city officials are asking that question this morning. And they are finding no easy answers.

A court order issued Monday prohibits the city from disposing partially treated sewage sludge anywhere within a three- and one-half mile radius of the airport.

The city has been disposing the sludge mainly at that site since a component in its sewage treatment plant broke down. Alternative disposal sites are being sought but those won't be approved for use by the Bureau of Land Management for another month.

Meanwhile, the system continues generating 90,000 pounds of wastes daily. That leaves the city with no immediate options — short of breaking the law.

City Attorney Charles Brumbach said the city can risk a criminal contempt of court citation by continuing the dumping, or risk a $10,000 a day fine from the Environmental Protection Agency if it chooses to channel the sludge into the Snake River.

The EPA may start federal court injunction proceedings this week to keep the city from sending waste into the river, Brumbach added.

Fifth District Court Judge Theron Ward issued the order at the close of a one-week court hearing into the city's practice of disposing the sludge at the river.

The hearing stemmed from a lawsuit filed against the city earlier this summer by about 50 people living near the sludge dumping site. In testimony given last week, the residents complained about odor arising from the site.

Ward apparently based his decision on those complaints.

But the city must go somewhere and Ward's decision ignores that fact, Brumbach said.

Responsibility for locating a new sludge disposal site lies in the hands of City Manager Tom Miller. The city council Monday, in a work session chose not to dictate any policy to Miller.

Miller indicated he would begin searching for private lands suitable for disposal.

But Brumbach noted the court action may encourage similar action from residents in any new area chosen for sludge disposal.

City member Mary McCuskey asked if BLM a site approval could be sped along under the emergency circumstances. Assistant City Manager Tom Courtney said that was unlikely.

Union Pacific strike ends in under 12 hours

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Union Pacific employees are back at work this morning and train schedules are back to normal after a strike that lasted less than 12 hours Monday.

Local members of the United Transportation Union — conductors, brakemen, and switchmen — stayed away from work under instructions from their leaders in Pocatello but returned to their jobs after receiving word Monday evening that Union Pacific had won an injunction against the union.

A total of eight freight trains and two Amtrak passenger trains were prevented from operating in the Magic Valley yesterday, according to conductor Roger Paulson, who organized the Twin Falls picket line.

Both the westbound and eastbound Pioneer passenger trains will be on time in Shoshone today, according to an Amtrak spokesman in San Francisco. Both were halted after the strike because Union Pacific employees are needed on the train and along the track. Passengers were then bused to their destinations.

Paulson estimated his chapter membership at 25, but Union Pacific employees who belonged to other unions also honored the strike if they were scheduled to show up for work after 9:30 a.m., when the picketers were in place.

The other unions could have revoked a member's job if he had crossed a picket line to go to work, Paulson explained, but those who arrived at work before the picketers got there will not be punished.

Paulson, who rebuffs local employees' grievances to the union's district headquarters in Pocatello, said he first got word of the strike at 7 a.m. Monday by way of a telephone call from a Pocatello UTU official.

The strike began in Los Angeles at midnight Sunday and spread rapidly to Union Pacific stations throughout the West. The union claims the company is not following established hiring procedures.

Poll shows Idaho Senate race toss-up now

BOISE — A poll released Monday by an anti-Frank Church organization shows Idaho's senior senator in a race too close to call with Republican challenger Steve Symms.

According to the poll, conducted by the Anybody But Church Political Action Committee and the National Conservative Political Action Committee, 47 percent of all Idahoans would vote to give Church another senate term.

But 43 percent would vote for First District Congressman Symms. Ten percent remain undecided.

Symms has yet to publicly announce he will challenge Church, whose present term expires in 1980. But he has said that barring any unforeseen difficulties he will enter the race.

According to Terry Dolan, chairman of the NC-PAC, 400 Idahoans were contacted by telephone during the last week of June and the first week of July.

The actual polling was conducted by Arthur Finkelstein, a New York professional pollster, Dolan said.

Fires during '79 worst in decades

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho's 1979 forest fires are the state's worst in almost half a century.

Without helicopters, chemical bombers and other sophisticated fire-fighting equipment they might be the worst ever.

But the impact of the fires hasn't been entirely negative. Idaho big game may actually benefit from the clear-cutting effect of the fires.

To date six separate blazes in Idaho have burned more than 118,000 acres.

The largest fire, which has consumed approximately 66,000 acres at Mortar Creek, in the Idaho Primitive Area, has yet to be controlled.

Five other burns have been checked, most after a Sunday rainstorm aided more than 2,000 firefighters now struggling with Idaho's fires.

Forest Service spokesmen say an undetermined amount of commercial timber has been lost in two of the six fires. The other four burns have occurred in lands where timber harvests are not allowed.

"This is the worst since the late 1930's," said Ray Steiger, of Boise, a Forest Service fire information officer. "Billions of acres" were lost then, Steiger said, in part because firefighters had difficulty reaching the flames. While firefighters today are helicoptered to back country, mules and horses were for years the only means of mountain transportation.

According to Steiger, the status of the six Idaho fires is as follows:

• Mortar Creek: To date, 66,000 acres have been burned on Mortar Creek, on the Middle Fork of the Salmon River. The fire, which is approximately 40 miles northwest of Stanley, is still out of control. A three-quarter inch rain on Sunday slowed the blaze, Steiger said, and containment is expected within a week.

"There will probably be some more acreage burned," on Mortar Creek, he added.

• Gallagher Peak: This blaze is located in eastern Idaho and has burned 36,000 acres. Sunday's rains were the key factor in bringing this blaze under control, Steiger said.

• Ship Island: This fire, in the Salmon National Forest, has burned 10,456 acres. As of Sunday evening, firefighters had the blaze controlled.

• Moose Creek: Approximately 2,730 acres have been lost to this fire. Located some 35 miles north of Salmon, the Moose Creek burn was controlled Sunday evening.

• Kennally Creek: This 1,239 acre fire was contained Sunday.

• Little Eight Mile Creek: Just under 1,000 acres were burned here, in a fire which was controlled on Aug. 8.

According to Steiger, even after the fires are controlled, none will be formally labeled as extinguished, until there's absolutely no heat left. That will happen only after clean-up crews have dug up smoldering roots, and heavy fall rains have soaked the forests, he said.

Commercial timber stands of undetermined size have likely been destroyed in the Gallagher Peak and Moose Creek burns. Assessments will soon be made of actual losses, said Frank Eden, of Ogden, Utah, a Forest Service regional coordinator.

The impact on fish habitat could also be significant. According to Stacy Gebhardt, bureau chief for the State Bureau of Fisheries in the Fish and Game Department, the heat of the fires will have killed much of the fish population in streams in the fire regions. Erosion from lands burned by the blaze could also cause silt in the streams, he said.

But the effect of the fires won't be entirely negative.

"The burn will destroy old plant growth," said Terry Thomas, the big game manager for the State Fish and Game Department.

Energy crunch serious

TWIN FALLS — The energy crisis is real enough for Americans to prepare for serious lifestyle changes, Ricks College physics professor Merle Fisher told a convention of propane suppliers Monday at the Littletree Inn.

"While the politicians are sitting around bawling over what to do about the energy crisis, we might just have a revolution or two, and reduce the population a bit," he warned.

Repeatedly emphasizing that time is running out for a firm national commitment to conservation, Fisher appeared as part of a Department of Energy program to explain energy issues to the public.

To dramatize the nation's exponential demand for energy, Fisher used an elaborate machine with blinking lights for various energy sources. After the machine had simulated the passing of 46 years, it flashed serious deficiencies, even with the knobs symbolizing nuclear and coal resources turned up all the way.

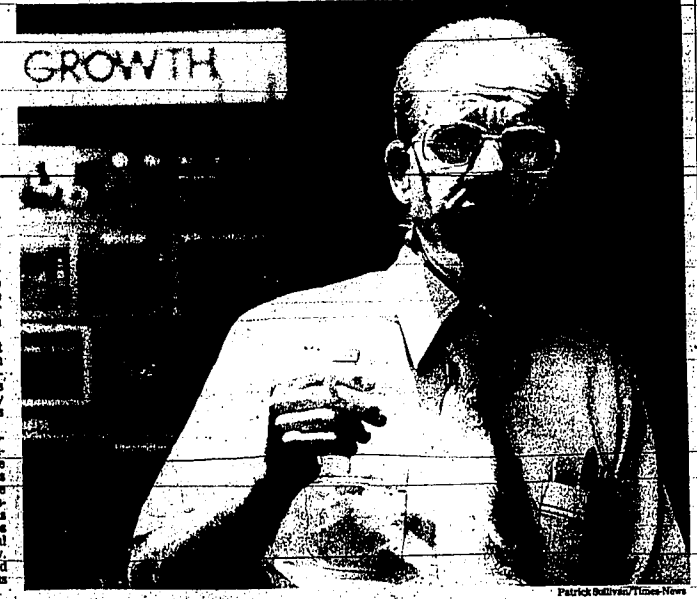

Meanwhile, an array of red warning lights signified serious environmental damage.

"One fortunate thing about this machine is when you get into trouble you can stop the clock," said Fisher. "In real life you can't."

Fisher said the demand for energy is rising at a faster rate than the population because Americans want to live better than their parents and grandparents.

The test began to resemble a mathematics class as Fisher focused on the concept of exponential growth.

"When numbers get big, they get bigger faster," he said.

Brace for lifestyle changes, Merle Fisher of Ricks College warns

Filer still boiling water

FILER — Filer's water supply is still contaminated, according to the Department of Health and Welfare, and the advisory to boil water before drinking it is still in effect.

Although the most recent tests show the bacteria count is dropping, the advisory will be in effect until two tests indicate the germs have died off, said Russell Renk, an environmental engineer with DHW's

Division of Environment.

Renk said he could not predict how much longer the problem would last. His office is testing the water daily.

One of the city's wells was contaminated after firemen used most of its water to put out a fire at a beer warehouse July 28. New water drawn down to replenish the well probably contained bean fragments and other bacteria from the fire site, Renk said.

If the United States continues to use 7 percent more oil each year, it will use more oil in 1989 alone than the total amount used throughout human history, he said.

And at its present growth rate of 2 percent a year, he said, the world's population will double from 4 billion to 8 billion in 38 years.

"We've got to quit sticking our head in the sand and saying the energy crunch is going to go away," said Fisher. "We've been conditioned that way. The politicians like us that way. But we're going to have to convince them that it's time to get to work."

"When it comes to raising their (Congress') own salaries, they do what they want to," he said, but with other issues they go by what they hear from their constituents.

What they are hearing now is things like, 'We don't want to pay a dollar for a gallon of gas or attempt to blame the whole thing on a scapegoat.'

Fisher said he gives the same talk to civic groups in hopes that people will begin to pressure their representatives into spending more money on new energy technologies and instituting firm conservation measures. He hopes for a minimum of mandatory conservation measures, but says they will be necessary if people cannot cut back consumption voluntarily.

"We're going to have to revise some attitudes in this country," he said.

Gem labor seeks equal property assessment

BOISE (UPI) — Claiming homeowners are bearing an unfair share of the tax burden, the Idaho State AFL-CIO Monday asked the Idaho State Tax Commission for equal and fair assessment of all classes of property in the state.

The group served an official request on the commission through its attorneys, McDermott and McDermott of Pocatello.

"The Idaho Constitution requires all property be taxed, Idaho's homeowners are bearing an unfair and unequal share of the property tax burden," said House Minority Leader Patricia L. McDermott.

Under Idaho law, it is the commission's duty to define how market value is determined for taxation in the state.

State AFL-CIO President Bob Kinghorn said homeowners have been required to pay more than their share by "the lack of uniformity in assessments and allowing special rates for special interests to continue."

"Homes are appraised and assessed at market value or replacement value," Kinghorn said. "Depreciation is not applied to homes."

"On the other hand, utilities, industry and agriculture are assessed by different rules and methods, often at only a fraction of true market value."

He said the group is not arguing the rate of taxation. "Our whole point is that while the rate is all citizens including industry, utilities and agriculture should pay their fair share of the property taxes," he said.

Besides demanding rules for equalized assessment of property, the group asked that the terms "actual and functional use" be applied to all property if at all, the ad valorem tax regulation be repealed, and that publications used for appraisal be listed specifically.

Miss McDermott said using actual and functional use as a taxing consideration for only commercial and agricultural properties would result in an "unconstitutionally unequal system."

She said actual and functional use also should be used in appraising the value of residential property.

She said the ad valorem tax regulation which permits the use of textbooks and other technical publications in appraising and assessing property is "defective" because the titles of the publications to be used are not listed and may result in unequal appraisals.

Miss McDermott said the group is prepared to file a formal request with the Idaho Supreme Court, if the commission did not obey the request.

Yellowstone operator ousted; new food agent in park sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After finding the previous concessionaire provided inadequate services to Yellowstone National Park's 2 million annual visitors, the National Park Service Monday sought a new firm to furnish food and lodging.

The Park Service threw out the Yellowstone Park Co., a subsidiary of the General Host Corp., which had been the park's principal concessionaire since 1966.

The government issued a statement saying the concessioner was dismissed for "failure to meet contract obligations."

A government study found sanitation at Yellowstone "below the standards of many public health departments." Hotel decor was a hodge-podge of mismatched furniture, menus lacked good "taste and appearance," deteriorating rooms went unrented and personnel were said to be rude to visitors, the report said.

Officials of General Host said the park had old facilities exposed to harsh climate much of the year and said it was difficult to train over 1,500 workers for the three-month peak season.

The Park Service will require the new concessioner to invest at least 5 percent of its annual gross receipts for repair and improvements.

Park Service spokesman Duncan Morrow said several firms already have "shown some interest" in a temporary contract to operate the facilities for two years starting Nov. 1.

During this period, the government will decide whether one or more firms or a non-profit group should manage the popular park's services, which include 1.3 million meals annually in 15 separate dining rooms and lodging over 8,000 visitors.

Fire camp costs hit $2 million

By United Press International

More than 330 tons of supplies, costing more than $2 million, have been flown to fire camps in the West since July 9.

Phil Jimenez, information officer for the U.S. Forest Service, said supplies for the 6,000 firefighters waging battle against 95,000 acres of flames in the West "is like setting up housekeeping."

"We're doing our best to save the much money as possible but it's like setting up housekeeping," Jimenez said. He said one purchase was made through other government offices in Alaska, saving $250,000 for the 6,000 firefighters waging battle against 95,000 acres of flames in the West.

"To help the firefighters at the 62,000-acre Mortar-Creek fire battle swarms of yellowjackets and horse flies, purchasing agents have distributed 391 cans of insect repellent, he said. To ease the stinging in their smoke-filled eyes, more than 200 bottles of eyewash have been airlifted to the firefighters in the heart of Idaho's Primitive Area.

Jimenez said each firefighter is assigned a regular supply kit upon leaving fire headquarters. The supply figures for the Mortar-Creek fire include only those items requested in addition to the regular kit.

Fire bosses have requested 23,000 batteries for 2-way radios, 5800 fire extinguishers, 2500 pairs of gloves. In addition, 470 packages of bandages, 450 tubes of lip balm and 75 boxes of foot powder have been flown to the Mortar-Creek fire camps.

"It gets awfully hot and smelly up there," Jimenez said. "You'd think they'd use even more foot powder than that."

To help workers clean soot and dirt from their bodies, more than 16,000 disposable-bath towels have been sent to Mortar-Creek crews, requiring 2840 additional double-edged axes, 115 chainsaws and 3200 shovels.

Obituaries

Verla Rich Wickel

DECEASED — Verla Rich Wickel, 78, of Declo, formerly of Elba, died Monday in the Minidoka Memorial Hospital at Rupert.

She was born Aug. 18, 1900, at Silvercreek, Idaho, and attended school at "Hansen" and Elba. She married Elmer William Wickel Sept. 7, 1920, at Burley. The marriage was later solemnized in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple. They lived in Elba until 1960, then moved to Declo, where she had a residence for several years.

Verla was a member of the LDS Church and had served in the various church organizations. She was also a member of the Elba Senior Citizens League.

Coroner reveals cause of death

KUNA, Idaho (UPI) — A head trauma caused the death of an unidentified woman whose body was found in the desert about eight miles south of Kuna, Ada County, coroner Mike Johnson said Monday.

Johnson said he determined the woman was about 21 years old and had been dead three to seven days before unidentified citizens discovered the body near Swan Falls on the Snake River Sunday.

The identity of the woman is still unknown, Johnson said, and his job is hampered by the advanced decomposition of the body.

Riggins collision takes three lives

RIGGINS, Idaho (UPI) — A McColl, Idaho, man and a couple from Wenatchee, Wash., were killed in a head-on collision 9 miles south of Riggins, Idaho State Police reported Monday.

State Police identified the victims as Martin Cameron, 62, McColl; Rodney Gill, 25, Wenatchee, and his 23-year-old wife, Pamela.

Officers said the accident Sunday occurred when the Gill car apparently crossed over the center line on U.S. Highway 95 and into the path of Cameron's vehicle.

All three died at the scene, officers said.

Caldwell knocks Cowboys from tournament

By RANDY FREY
Times-News sports writer

LEWISTON — The bubble has burst. Twin Falls' bid for an Idaho American Legion state baseball title has come to an end. Caldwell battered three Cowboy pitchers for 15 hits early Monday and rolled to an easy 13-0 win. The loss eliminated the Cowboys from the tourney.

Despite the sound beating, Coach Gary Barker spoke optimistically after the game.

"We had a lot of guts," Barker said. "Down 13-1, we could have folded, but we stayed right in there and came back with two in the ninth."

"It has been a good season," he said. "Our goal from the beginning was to make it to the state tournament, and here we are. It would have been nice to win some more games here, but what the heck."

Barker will be the first to admit that his pitching just wasn't deep enough to win many games. After Logan Easley and Rocky Brown, the pitchers became slim.

Richie Lowe got the starting call Monday and pitched well for the first two innings. But in the third, Caldwell broke the ice on a three-run home run by Tom Edens.

For the first two days of the tournament, the wind was blowing in and kept most fly balls in the park.

But Monday it was blowing out and carried Edens' drive over the right field wall.

For Twin Falls, it was one of those days at the plate when everything goes wrong.

Only once were the Cowboys

Rains cancel Sage contest

LEWISTON — Rain took its toll on the state American Legion baseball tournament Monday.

The Lewiston area was hit by heavy rains in the late afternoon forcing postponement of games between Idaho Falls-Minico and Coeur d'Alene-Lewis-Clark.

Minico and ID if did to the third inning before the rains came, and that game will be resumed today starting at 11 a.m. with the two teams tied in the bottom of the third.

The winner of that game will go on to play Caldwell at 6:30 p.m. and the two undefeated teams, Coeur d'Alene and Lewis Clark will meet at 9:30 p.m. (All times MDT).

retired in order, but every time Twin Falls put runners in scoring position something happened to take the threat away.

In the first, Gary Krumm doubled but was left on second. In the second, John Miller tripled but did ninth.

Burton started it off with a walk, and with one out Lynn Thorpe walked to put two men on base.

Kerry Brown's ground ball to short was kicked into left field allowing Burton to score and Cummings followed with a single up the middle to score Thorpe. Logan Easley flew out to left field to end the game.

Barker was happy to see his team score those two runs in the final inning.

He was glad to see the season end on a positive note.

"This is the kind of experience these kids needed," Barker said. "They have for once gotten some feeling of success. They have discovered what a state tournament is all about."

Now, Barker wants to see them back at the state event next summer.

"They now know what it takes to get here, so next year not only had we better get here, we better win some more ball games or I will be disappointed," he said.

"I hope they have developed enough confidence right now that they will come back next year with a winning attitude," he said.

Twin Falls is losing just three players, Rocky Brown, Miller, and Scot Nass, and Barker thinks next season could be the year of the Cowboys.

The Yankees

Royko's column bared the facts about a controversial bus trip

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the Mike Royko column which appeared in Sunday's Chicago Sun-Times concerning the New York Yankees and their experience on a recent trip to Chicago. Because of the column the Yankees have come under criticism both from Yankee owner George Steinbrenner and baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

"I'm so naive, I didn't even know what that meant."

For others who might not know what it means, to "moon" is to drop your pants, bend over, and display your bare bottom.

And that, says Mrs. Glynn, is what the young lady did on the bus.

The Yankee players were so pleased to see her bottom that they autographed it.

"I couldn't believe it," Mrs. Glynn

"Martin says to her: 'Can I take your picture?' And she says sure and pulls down her pants and moons for him right on the street."

"Well, I thought my little boy's eyes were going to pop out of his head. There's this girl, with her bare butt in the middle of 35th Street, and Billy Martin takes her picture."

"And Martin said: 'Smile for me, honey,' and she wiggled her behind at him."

"When she did that, the players started cheering and banging on the bus windows, so she wiggled it some more."

'Blown out of proportion'

NEW YORK (UPI) — A spokesman for the New York Yankees said Monday that an incident on the team bus in Chicago, during which a woman reportedly had her buttocks autographed by the team, has been twisted out of proportion.

"It's really been twisted around and blown up pretty good. It's as serious as everyone is making it sound," said Mickey Morabito, director of public relations for the Yankees. "Things have been written that aren't 100 percent factual. No one is condoning this conduct, but the facts have got to be straight."

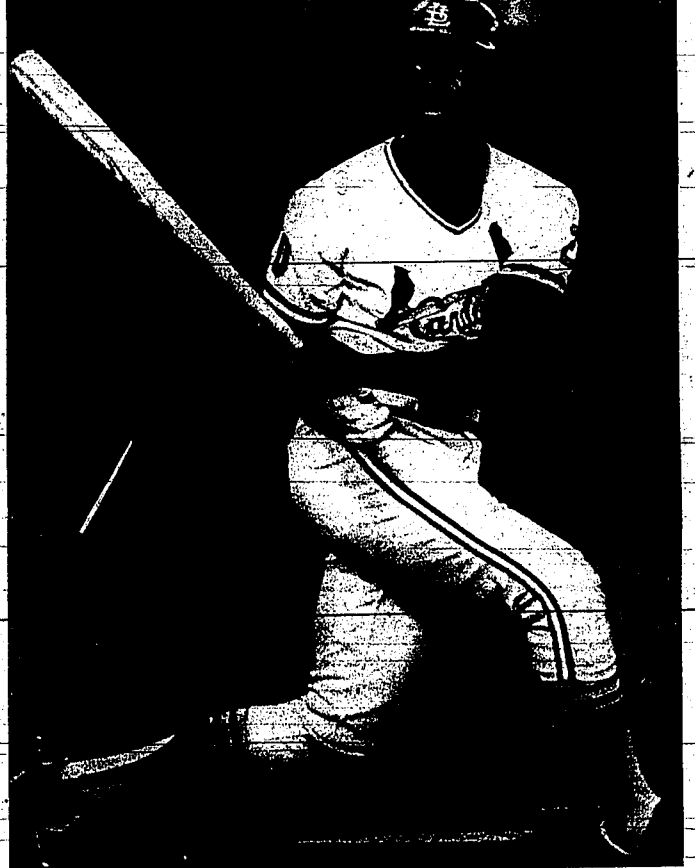

Morabito said he met Monday with George Steinbrenner, the Yankees' principal owner left for Los Angeles for the summer baseball meetings.

"We talked and I explained the facts about what happened," Morabito said. "That's really all that went on. He wants to talk to more people about it and look into it."

"Oh, yeah, I know what you're talking about. She did it three times. The first two times she did it in front of the bus and the third time she got on the bus and mooned them."

3,000th hit
St. Louis Cardinal Lou Brock became the 14th player in Major League history to reach the 3,000 hit mark Monday night. Brock, who was traded to St. Louis by the Chicago Cubs 15 years ago, will be retiring after this season in the National League. The 3,000th hit was his second of the night. Story page B4.

NFL roundup

Don't expect 49er miracle

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of NFL snippets. Today: The San Francisco 49ers.

UPI Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Bill Walsh knows he can't turn the San Francisco 49ers around in a single season, so the loyal faithful will have to be patient while the new coaching staff does something to make it an entertaining season.

"We are in the position of having to improve and please our fans at the same time," says Walsh of the 1979 season. "I'm sure we will be experimenting with new formations, 44 of them for passing plays."

If a college quarterback could learn that many plays, it stands to reason that Steve Deberg, who will quarterback the 49ers this year for Walsh, will learn as many. Deberg is considered an excellent student, so if he learns and masters the plays, there will be a lot of fireworks in every San Francisco game.

"Oh, we will throw some," says Walsh cautiously. "Every coach has a balanced offense because that is the best offense. But you have to have the right players and the right plays to be consistently balanced."

That's as close as Walsh will come to saying the 49ers will pass more. DeBerg, and Joe Montana, the Notre Dame quarterback who was the 49ers' second pick in the draft this year, are working overtime learning as many passing plays as they can.

Walsh spends most of his time with the two plus wide receivers, Freddie Solomon and James Owens. Owens, a track star and running back, was the team's top pick from UCLA. On the 49ers was a receiver.

Running backs O.J. Simpson, coming back from a knee injury, and Wilbur Jackson both are fine receivers and will get their share of passes, if things turn out the way Walsh envisions. Phil Francis, who played fullback for Walsh at Stanford, is a fine receiver, too, and although he was signed as a free agent, Francis was the top pass catcher in the Pac-10 last year until he suffered an injury and missed the last two games.

"I have a lot of confidence," says Walsh, "so I'm eternally optimistic. My teams have led the nation in passing almost any year you look at the stats, or just a few more passes would get them on top, so my track record is a positive one."

DeBerg, for one, feels right at home working under Walsh.

"Walsh's system is much like Tom Landry's in philosophy," says DeBerg, who spent a year with the Dallas Cowboys. "It's not exactly the same but it's just as complex. It takes concentration for it to work. If you stay on top of it, you can have the defense very confused."

"Being exposed to Bill Walsh has to step up my career. I know he is teaching me the right way and it's almost like a crash course. If I'm not successful it will be because I didn't have the talent to play in the NFL, not because I wasn't taught."

Backing up the offense by passing will serve two purposes. The first is Walsh has to find a way to move the ball while a young offensive line matures.

Our hitting and defense was kind of sad the first game, but we came back," said Bartlett. "I think if anything our defense did it for us. We had several double plays at crucial times."

Coach Bartlett said he wasn't surprised with the performance of his team.

"I thought we were capable of winning if everybody came to play," he said.

Blue Lakes was successful right from the start in its state tournament action at Idaho Falls.

After two opening wins, it ran up against longtime rival, Four Haus-Smith's Concrete Finishings of Twin Falls. It was the fifth time the two teams had met, and after it was all over, Blue Lakes was on top 4-1. (Four Haus won the season series three games to two.)

In the finals, Tomodachi's of Idaho Falls gave the local team a scare by winning the first game 9-4, but after regrouping Blue Lakes took the deciding contest 7-5.

According to Coach Pete Turner, a key play by Theresa Bell, Patty Kasei and Kathy Anderson for the final out saved the day. The three girls teamed up to mow down a runner trying to stretch a triple into a home run at the plate for the final out.

"That was something," said Turner, still excited about the title. "Those girls did a job."

In addition, Turner said Lisa Molyneux had a strong hitting tourney, getting a triple on the opening day and several crucial doubles and singles throughout the tourney.

"I knew our team could do it," said Turner. "It's a young team, but it had a lot of desire. The desire made up for its inexperience."

On the year, Blue Lakes was 47-10.

Blue Lakes, MGV win slowpitch championships

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News sports editor

Two Magic Valley women's slowpitch softball teams brought home state championship trophies over the weekend.

MGV Dairy of Buhl won the state's B division tournament at Boise, while Blue Lakes-Greene's Trout Farm of Twin Falls captured the major division event at Idaho Falls.

It was Blue Lakes' second state title in three years. It won the 1977 championship and placed second in 1978.

The teams took different routes to capture the coveted trophy, symbolic of being the best women's slowpitch teams in Idaho.

MGV, which had a mediocre 8-5 regular season record, came into its tourney as the No. 1 team from the district. She did it three times.

"Just like we did in district, we lost our first game at state and had to come back and win five straight," said Coach Kelly Bartlett of Buhl.

At district, MGV Dairy lost its first game and then won eight straight for the district championship.

"I was real proud of these girls," said Bartlett, who coaches the team along with Mike Eveleth. "We came up against El Comedore of Coeur d'Alene who was unbeaten (24-0), but we didn't fold."

What the Buhl girls did was go out and whip El Comedore twice — 6-0 and 9-6, for the state championship.

MGV got two home runs in those final two games including ones by Lori Bartlett and Kay Puschel. Others who hit home runs during the tourney were Holly Howell, Chris Moore and Diane Cobb.

Royko stirs up the Yankees

Did they really, uh, autograph her? "Yeah. When she got on the bus, they all signed her." "Why?" "Oh, they got a big kick out of her." Did Billy Martin really photograph her? "Yeah, he had said that if she showed up again, we should be ready to get her picture, so we were ready." Were you surprised by this event?

"Geez, you travel with this team and you see everything." "Somehow they don't seem like the New York Yankees I grew up believing were honest, good and true." "I prefer to think of them as shown in the 'Pride of the Yankees,' the sad story of Lou Gehrig. You remember: It ends with Gehrig making that moving farewell speech and walking off the field, into the dark tunnel under the stands." "I guess if they made the movie today, Gehrig would probably stop at the entrance to the tunnel and moon at the bleachers."

Too much about too little?

Stelbrenner said Sunday he would look into the reports and "if the allegations are accurate, depending on the facts, this kind of conduct will not be tolerated by the Yankee organization. I would be appalled if it were proven true." Morabito confirmed that the Yankees asked for the picture because (Manager Billy) Martin said, "I had never seen anything like that in all my years in baseball." But Morabito said neither he nor Martin were present while the team allegedly was autographing the woman's buttocks. "I wasn't on the bus, as far as Billy Martin taking a picture, a photographer snapped the picture of the girl," he said. "I don't know if anyone signed her. I understand she did not get on the bus but was thrown off by the traveling secretary (Bill Kane). He told her, 'If Billy sees you on the bus he's going to get pretty mad.'" In Chicago, George Carlson, a photographer who covers White Sox home games for the Spanish-language La Raza weekly newspaper, said he was asked by the Yankees to take the picture. "A guy came to me and my post was 'first base before the game, handed me a card. It read 'Mickey Morabito' and had the Yankee team emblem on it," said Carlson. "He said a young lady was mooning the team bus the two previous nights and he asked me to shoot a picture of it if she showed up after that night's game." "It looked like the players were paying a lot of attention to her bared butt, but I couldn't tell if they autographed it." "But as she left the bus, she spoke briefly to Martin, who was just getting on. He had no camera and no pictures. He talked to her briefly, then went in and sat down. She walked a few feet in front of the bus and faced it."

The story originally appeared in a column by Mike Royko of the Chicago Sun-Times on Sunday. Royko had received a letter from a woman who was annoyed because her son couldn't get an autograph from the Yankees while the team was allegedly busy signing a young woman's buttocks. Morabito confirmed part of the episode when he was reached by one of Royko's researchers. "It's a little misinterpretation of what I told the girl (researcher)," Morabito said. "I said, 'Yes, she did it (bared her buttocks) three straight days.' It was upstairs in the press room with Billy Martin at the time." "The guy in Chicago (Royko) was just reacting to the letter."

Smacks historic hit Brock: No. 3,000

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Lou Brock, who became the 14th player in major-league history to reach the 3,000-hit plateau Monday night, maintained that reaching the milestone was all in a day's work.

Brock, who lined a single off Chicago's Dennis Lamp in the fourth inning on a 2-2 pitch, said he gained no extra satisfaction over getting the hit off the team that traded him 15 years ago. "It didn't matter to me if I got it off the moon or Mars," said Brock after the Cardinals' 3-2 victory over the Cubs. "They (Chicago) just happened to be in town for a dogfight series."

Despite increased pressure surrounding his quest for No. 3,000, Brock said he was not nervous entering Monday night's game. "I tried to be nervous but I couldn't," Brock said. "I slept well last night except that our new baby cried around midnight."

The 40-year-old left fielder, who is retiring after this season, blooped a single to left in his first at-bat to move within one of the mark.

The game was stopped after Brock's historic hit and the crowd of about 45,000 gave Brock a thunderous ovation with chants of "Lou, Lou, Lou."

Brock indicated last month when it became apparent that he would reach the plateau some time in August that he did not care against which team he got the hit. But it was almost a fitting climax that Brock reached the milestone off the team that traded him in June, 1964.

The hit was Brock's 100th of a season that has seen him lead the

LOU BROCK joins elite group

"I was glad to do it here," Brock said in an impromptu ceremony off first base in front of the Cardinal dugout. "I'm glad it happened here and the fans got to see my 3,000th hit. I'm extremely proud and am glad my family was here tonight."

Lamp, who instinctively reached down for Brock's liner with his pitching hand, suffered a severe contusion of his right hand. He was X-rayed at the stadium and is expected to go to the hospital for further X-rays. He was replaced by relief pitcher Douz Capilla.

The last player to reach 3,000 hits was Pete Rose, who did it in 1977 with the Cincinnati Reds. Brock becomes the second Cardinal to reach 3,000. Hall-of-Famer Stan Musial, who was at Monday night's game, had his 3,000th hit against the Cubs' Moe Drabowsky on May 13, 1958, at Wrigley Field.

Three years later, Brock broke into organized baseball with St. Cloud of the Northern League and in 1961 he had his first major-league hit, a blow off Robin Roberts of the Philadelphia Phillies.

The other members of the 3,000 club are Ty Cobb with 4,191, Hank Aaron, Tris Speaker, Honus Wagner, Eddie Collins, Willie Mays, Napoleone Lajoie, Paul Waner, Cap Anson, Art Kaline and Roberto Clemente.

Brock will likely be followed next month by Carl Yastrzemski, who entered Monday night's game with 2,977.

Brock is one of a select group of players who radically changed baseball, making people recognize that speed can win games as easily as home runs. Along with Maury Wills, the extraordinary base-stealer who spent most of his career with the Los Angeles Dodgers, Brock injected new life into the art of baserunning. He led the Cardinals to pennants in 1964, 1967 and 1968. St. Louis had gone 18 years without a pennant winner until Brock arrived in '64.

This is his last season as a ballplayer and Brock has staged a remarkable comeback. At the start of the season, Brock was 100 hits shy of the 3,000 mark and figured to fall short.

AL roundup Brewers snap KC string

Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger really knows how to pick a pinch-hitter.

Ben Ogilvie, pinch-hitting for Dick Davis in the ninth inning, belted his 22nd home run of the season with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning to lift Jim Slaton and the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-4 triumph over Kansas City Monday night, snapping the Royals' five-game win streak.

Ogilvie hit a 3-0 pitch into the right-field bleachers off reliever Dan Quisenberry, 2-1. Slaton, 12-6, pitched an eighth-inning for his 10th complete game of the season.

Amos Otis hit a two-out homer, his 16th of the year, in the ninth of Slaton to tie the score at 4-4. Fred Patek's error on a bases-loaded grounder by Slaton in the seventh enabled the Brewers to take a 4-3 lead. Singles by Charlie Moore and Jim Wohlford and a walk to Don Money loaded the bases. With two outs, Gorman Thomas greeted reliever Dan Quisenberry with a walk to force in the tying run and Lezcano's grounder slipped off the glove of Patek, allowing Yount to score.

Lezcano slammed his 19th home run of the season to give Milwaukee a 2-0 lead in the second. Robin Yount's double and an RBI single by Money put the Brewers ahead 2-0 in the third. The Royals tied it 2-2 in the fourth on Darrell Porter's RBI single and a run-scoring double-play grounder. LaCock doubled home Porter, who had tripled, to give Kansas City a 3-2 lead in the fifth.

In other early games, New York edged Texas 3-2, Chicago blanked Baltimore 7-0, and Boston pinned Minnesota 6-5.

Oscar Gamble, who earlier homered, singled borts Willie Randolph with the tie-breaking run with two out in the eighth inning to give the Yankees a win over the Garry Templeton hit a sacrifice fly with one out in the ninth inning Monday night to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs in a game highlighted by Lou Brock's 3,000th career hit.

Brock, leading two hits to become the 14th player to reach the 3,000-hit plateau, collected singles in each of his first two at-bats. Brock was removed after going 2-for-2.

In the ninth, Ken Reitz smacked a one-out single, his 1,000th career hit, off Willie Hernandez, 4-2, and Tom Herr ran for him. Ken Oberkfell was hit by a pitch. Bruce Sutter relieved Hernandez and pinch-hitter Dana Jorg greeted him with a single to left field to load the bases. Templeton followed with a fly to left fielder Dave Kingman, who made a throw to the plate that was too late to catch Herr. Mark Little, 8-3, pitched the final two innings to gain the victory.

The Cubs tied it in the seventh when Steve Dilard led off with a double and scored on a double by Larry Rangers behind the seven-hit pitching of Ron Guidry 11-7. Randolph started the winning rally by drawing a two-out walk off loser Ferguson Jenkins, 12-9, and stole second. Gamble then hit a liner to right-center. The center fielder Mickey Rivers missed on a shoestring catch attempt as Randolph scored easily from second.

Chester Lemon scored two runs and singled in the first of four runs in the fourth inning when the White Sox blanked the Orioles behind the five-hit pitching of rookie Steve Trout. Trout, 7-5, allowed just five singles with nothing his first major-league shutout in a game which also marked Baltimore ace Jim Palmer's first relief appearance since 1975.

Dutch Hobson belted his 20th homer with two out in the eighth inning to lift the Red Sox over the Twins. Hobson belted 2-1 pitch from loser Mike Marshall, 18-11, into the Red Sox bullpen to climax a rally in which Boston erased a 5-0 deficit. Tom Burgmeier pitched 7 2/3 innings of four-hit shutout relief to up his record to 3-1. Dick Drago pitched the ninth to record his eighth save. It was the 12th straight loss for the Twins at Fenway Park dating back to May 25, 1977.

In night games, Mike Hargrove and Bobby Bonds clouted homers and drove in five runs between them to back the five-hit pitching of veteran right-hander Rick Wise to help the Cleveland Indians score a 6-0 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Tom Johnson drove in two runs with a fielder's choice and an infield single and rookie right-hander Butch Edge shut out Oakland for a 2-3 inning in his major-league debut, helping the Toronto Blue Jays spot a 4-2 victory over the Oakland A's.

Lou Whitaker's three-run double keyed a four-run sixth-inning to give the Detroit Tigers a 5-3 victory over Nolan Ryan and the California Angels.

Rankin knocks off rookie in LPGA

JERICHO, N.Y. (UPI) — Defending champion Judy Rankin sank a clutch 20-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole for a 3-under-par 70 Monday that gave her a two shot victory over Beth Daniel in a rain-delayed $100,000 LPGA Championship.

Young had started the day tied for the lead, and Daniel had to settle for her best finish since joining the tour earlier this year with her 290. Young, the LPGA champion, could manage only a 74 to finish third at even par 292.

supposed to have at least seven high card points. West, had just four.

North passed to await developments and East passed in the hope that maybe two hearts would make the bid. He did not like the idea of bidding again with his piece of cheese.

The bidding may have been a bit awkward, but the defense was superb. East took his share of clubs and returned the deuce to ask for the rank of diamonds - the lower rank of diamonds is more likely to be a trump.
