

U.S. veto of Arab resolution likely

WASHINGTON — Seeking to overcome the appearance of governmental turmoil over the emotional Palestinian issue, President Carter said Wednesday that he and his top foreign policy advisers were in total agreement on the U.S. approach to a new U.N. debate on the Middle East.

The president told reporters at Burlington, Iowa, that the press "grossly exaggerated" reports of friction within the administration over the American response to an Arab resolution to give United Nations sanction to the "right of self-determination" for Palestinians.

Carter said the United States wants the U.N. Security Council to postpone the debate, scheduled to begin today, on the resolution which has enraged Israel but has won wide support among Third World nations. But a key Arab delegate Wednesday flatly rejected the proposal.

U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young had announced earlier he would make a last-ditch effort for a postponement of the debate and vote on an Arab-sponsored resolution affirming the Palestinians' right to "self-determination, national independence and sovereignty, and their right to return to their homes."

"The U.S. is committed to vetoing the resolution. Impossible," said Ambassador Abdulla Yaseoueb Bishara of Kuwait when asked whether the Arabs would agree to a postponement.

"There will be a vote and there will be a veto," he said entering Young's office at the United Nations. He said the Arabs would introduce their resolution Thursday.

The president said he had approved the recommendation of Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, Middle East negotiator Robert Strauss and other advisers to abandon plans to sponsor a compromise resolution that would give additional recognition to the Palestinians but would stop far short of the Arab draft.

In a television interview Wednesday morning, Strauss said the United States would veto the Arab resolution if it obtains a Security Council majority. U.N. sources say that majority approval is likely.

The United States abandoned its compromise proposal after Strauss was unable to convince either Israel or Egypt to support it. On the way back to Washington Sunday following Strauss' talks in Jerusalem and Cairo, a senior official aboard the ambassador's plane told reporters that Strauss was unenthusiastic about the proposal all along. The official said the plan was backed by Vance and Zbigniew Brzezinski, the president's national security adviser.

The reported discord between Strauss, Vance and Brzezinski reinforced a picture of confusion over Middle East policy which had been created by the resignation of Andrew Young as U.S. representative to the United Nations following an unauthorized meeting with the U.N. observer of the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

Carter sought to repair the political damage that such an impression might cause by describing it as a minor matter much overblown by Washington-based reporters.

"People out here are not really as excited as the Washington press about personnel changes, transient changes," Carter said as he waited to reboard the Delta Queen for his trip down the Mississippi.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the press grossly exaggerated what Bob Strauss said about the Middle East," Carter said. "I talked to Bob (Strauss) and I talked to Vance and Brzezinski and there is no serious thing there."

Strauss and Vance patched up any differences they may have had during a White House meeting Tuesday that was presided over by Vice President Walter F. Mondale. By the time Carter talked to reporters, Strauss and Vance had already said they had no disagreements.

Second area to get relief for drought

By UPI and the TIMES-NEWS

BOISE — Boundary County will become the second Idaho county this year to be declared an emergency drought area, the office of Gov. John V. Evans said this week.

Don Watkins, the governor's news secretary, said the Boundary County Commission had a formal request for drought relief in the mail and it was expected to arrive Wednesday.

Evans most likely will grant the request later this week, allowing Boundary County to join Blaine County as a recipient of federal drought aid, Watkins said.

Camas County also has expressed concern to the governor's office about severe drought conditions, and gubernatorial assistants have said as many as 21 Idaho counties may apply for federal aid before the end of the year.

In Blaine County, normal precipitation in the water year to date would total 18.27 inches. But only 11.49 inches of rain have fallen, leaving a water shortage of 7.23 inches.

In the present water year, which begins in October, Blaine County has had eight months with below normal rainfall, and three with above normal rainfall.

The first three weeks of August, however, have encouraged the Weather Service office in August Blaine County normally receives 35 inches of precipitation. With one week remaining, the county has already received 1.49 inches.

In Camas County, statistics gathered since January of this year show the county has received only 6.74 inches of precipitation to date. Normal precipitation for those months comes to 11.92 inches.

As with the other counties, August has been wet. In the first three weeks of this month, Camas County received .74 inches of rainfall. Normal rainfall for August is .52 inches.

Twin Falls County has also had lower than average precipitation during most of the current water year, although the first weeks of August have been wetter than normal.

According to National Weather Service statistics, between Oct. 1, 1978, and Aug. 22, Twin Falls County has had 7.1 inches of rain. The normal rainfall for that period is 8.23 inches, or 1.72 inches more than has fallen.

But .75 inches of rain had fallen in August alone, as of Aug. 22. This compares with a normal August rainfall for the entire month of .35 inches.

Less than normal rainfall occurred in Twin Falls County in October, November and December of last year, and April through July of this year.

The other drought-stricken counties reach from Boundary County on the Canadian border to the extreme southeast tip of the state, Bear Lake County. The three southwest counties — Ada, Canyon and Owyhee — and in the mid-Panhandle region, as well as the east-central section surrounding Laramie County.

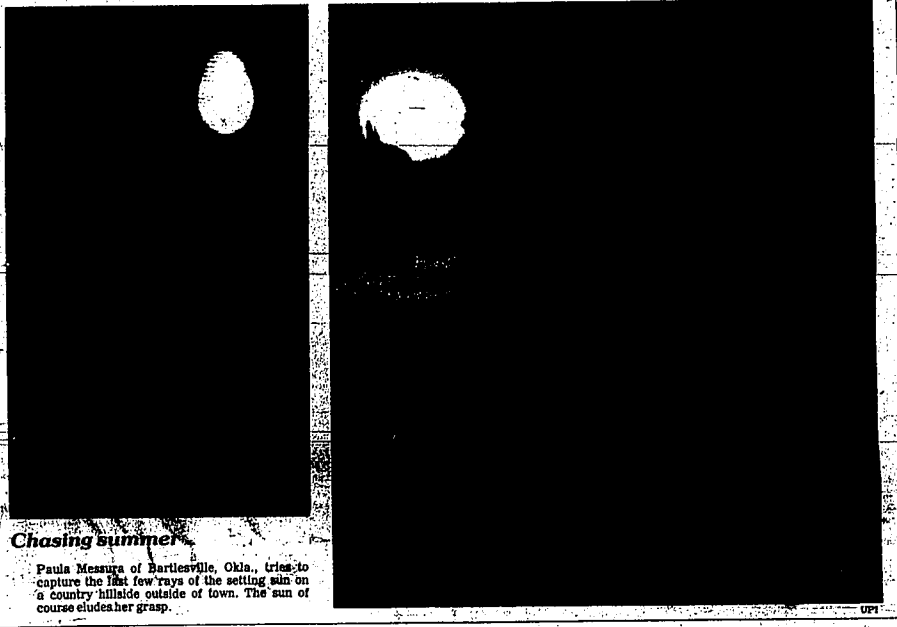

In addition, four south-central counties, including Blaine, have applied for and received emergency assistance as a result of a storm of golf-ball-sized hail last week.

A gubernatorial announcement of drought relief sets the federal wheels in motion and farmers and ranchers can apply for loans or grants from several federal agencies, including the Small Business Administration and Farmers Home Administration.

Most requests for aid are not acted on by the federal government until some monetary damage due to drought is recorded, but a few programs — such as the emergency livestock feed service — often go into effect immediately after a request.

State water resource officials said recently stream flows in most cases this year were as low as during the drought of 1977 and in many cases were at record lows.

A heavy draw on water supplies for irrigation and power generation because of the hot, dry summer has left many reservoirs in the state at extremely low levels. Officials fear the drought will get much worse unless substantial moisture falls on the state in the next few months.

Gooding picks sewage plant designer

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

GOODING — The Gooding City Council Wednesday night voted to hire J-U-B Engineers of Twin Falls to complete the remaining phases of the city's proposed $12 million sewage treatment plant.

The firm was hired over Hamilton and Voeller Engineers, the firm that completed the original plant feasibility study and federal grant applications.

H & V had the support of Gooding

Mayor Don Morrow and City Councilman Chet Floyd.

"I think they would do us a good job, Hamilton and Voeller. They have bent over backwards to help the city," Floyd said.

But the remaining three council members refused to second Floyd's motion to hire H & V to design the plant and supervise its construction.

Morrow then indicated he would entertain a motion to hire the Twin Falls engineering firm. Council member Autrey Haws made the motion which was seconded and approved by council members Harold Reed and Bob Moline. Floyd abstained from the vote.

Morrow said H & V deserved the chance to finish its work on the system. "I felt that they were entitled to a chance. It didn't work that way."

Floyd agreed, adding "We should have at least showed them our loyalty since they did two good jobs for us. I think you're going to run into problems as long as you have humans working for you."

Media coverage of problems at H & V plants in Twin Falls and Rupert also may have had a hand in the final decision, Floyd said.

"I know from my experience that newspapers print what sells copy. I didn't let Rupert or Twin Falls bother me. I was looking at what they had done for us."

Both Morrow and Floyd added working with J-U-B would cause no hardship.

But subsidies continue

By WARD SINCLAIR
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Against a backdrop of intense political pressures, Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus and the country's most heavily subsidized irrigation district have ended a fight, lasting for years, over the cost of its water.

The agreement, reached this month but still to be ratified formally, leaves the Westlands Water District in California with a subsidy worth millions of dollars, although requiring it to pay more for its water.

Department officials deplored the agreement as a triumph, but Andrus' personal intervention in the lengthy negotiations and the terms he agreed to have created bitterness among others at Interior.

"There's no question Westlands will continue to be subsidized," said Interior Solicitor Leo

Interior settles Westlands dispute

Krullitz. "But this agreement provides $100 million more to the government over the life of the contract than we could have charged otherwise."

Said another high-level Interior official: "These Westlands guys have had their way for years. There's no question they used some real influences on this — we had the whip hand and we should have held out for more."

The decision by Andrus came at a time when growers from Westlands, a district of about 500,000 acres in the lush San Joaquin Valley, have intensified their lobbying efforts to win support in Washington.

Unconfirmed reports recently indicated that the White House had directed Andrus to reach a quick agreement on the Westlands issue. Andrus would not comment on the reports and a query to White House press secretary Jody Powell went unanswered.

Solicitor Krullitz said he knew of no directive but "assumed" the White House had been kept informed of developments in the case — a procedure he said is routine when Interior is dealing with sensitive matters of money and regulation.

Westlands farmers, many of them Republicans, have made heavy campaign contributions to the Democratic National Committee this year. Last month they played host to Rosalynn Carter at a Carter-Mondale fund-raising function in Fresno.

Part of their effort has been aimed at influencing congressional action on a pending revision of the Reclamation Act of 1902, which set up the irrigation program and allowed the creation of agricultural empires in the western states.

A centerpiece of the empire has been the Westlands district where individual and corporate holdings run in the thousands of acres — far beyond the legal, but not enforced, limit of 160 acres per person.

Interior's dispute with Westlands is related to the larger battle over tighter enforcement and revision of the 1902 law, and whether the large growers or new and smaller farmers will be allowed to share the subsidy.

George Ballis of Fresno, a leader of National Land for People, a small-farmer group pushing for reform of the 1902 law, said Interior's agreement with Westlands amounted to "much ado about nothing."

"It's a political misstep — they're arguing over whether the subsidy is going to be 95 cents or 90 cents on the dollar. The only issue is whether the subsidy goes to the small family farmer or to the big monopoly grower. Taxpayers ought not to have to subsidize the growing food monopoly," Ballis said.

Whether the chance for going to trial is enhanced. We have worked out a proposal for a settlement of the claim that will not cost the state any money.

"It sounds to me like the state of Maine has decided it is in deep trouble in the Indian land claims and has done the same thing President Nixon did after he decided that he was in deep trouble in his presidency," he said.

Before leaving office, former U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell said the land claims case would be the most complicated and drawn-out legal matter ever litigated in the United States if it goes to trial — and could take up to 20 years to resolve.

St. Clair declined any comment on the case.

Maine gears up for legal battle over Indian lands

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — The state's retention of President Nixon's former lawyer, James H. St. Clair, in the Maine Indian land claims case strengthened opposition Wednesday to the claim to two-thirds of Maine may be headed for trial.

Maine Attorney General Richard S. Cohen said he hired — with Gov. Joseph E. Brennan's approval — Boston lawyer because of his experience in Indian law and complex civil litigation in the event the tribes' case comes to court.

The Penobscot and Passamaquoddy tribes claim 12.5 million acres, roughly the northern two-thirds of the state, but without congressional approval in violation of federal law more than 150 years ago.

An agreement drawn up by ex-Sen. William D. Hathaway, D-Maine, was tentatively accepted by negotiators last fall. It called for a settlement of $62 million to be paid by the Federal government to the Indians.

But tribal representatives recently asked to have the settlement increased to as much as $86 million.

A prepared statement from Cohen stressed the retention of St. Clair — who unsuccessfully argued the Watergate tapes case for Nixon before the U.S. Supreme Court in 1974 — "did not stem from any 'prejudice'" about the prospects for a negotiated settlement with the Indians.

But in a briefing for reporters, Cohen revealed the tribes' attorney, Thomas N. Tureen, "has indicated the case could be very close to trial," and that the retention of St. Clair "is a very cheap insurance policy for the people of this state in the event of trial."

Cohen said St. Clair "doesn't come cheap, but we're not talking about $50 an hour at all." The governor said he had agreed to an initial retainer fee of $25,000 for St. Clair.

If the case goes to trial, it could trigger a court face-off between St. Clair and Archibald Cox, who was special Watergate counsel before being dismissed in the 1973 "Saturday Night Massacre." Cox is co-counsel with Tureen for the Indian tribes.

Tureen said in an interview "It is strictly up to the state whether the chance for going to trial is enhanced. We have worked out a proposal for a settlement of the claim that will not cost the state any money.

"It sounds to me like the state of Maine has decided it is in deep trouble in the Indian land claims and has done the same thing President Nixon did after he decided that he was in deep trouble in his presidency," he said.

Before leaving office, former U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell said the land claims case would be the most complicated and drawn-out legal matter ever litigated in the United States if it goes to trial — and could take up to 20 years to resolve.

St. Clair declined any comment on the case.

Landrieu discounts reports

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Former mayor Moon Landrieu, nominated as secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Wednesday dismissed suggestions he may have profited by his part ownership in a company that did business with the city during his term.

Landrieu said he and a newspaper have reported Landrieu may have violated the city's code of ethics through his part ownership of Bartlett Chemicals. The company did about $25,000 in business with the city and city agencies during Landrieu's term.

Landrieu said he decided to get rid of his interest in Bartlett Chemicals in early 1977 when he learned it was dealing with the city.

"All I can tell you is that this is a screwy tale," Landrieu said in an interview published Wednesday. "It happened quickly. I frankly would have given my stock away rather than be involved in the messy publicity it has come to."

Landrieu said he has "never received a penny" from his investment in the company.

'Days of Dillinger' under

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bank bandits struck again in New York City Wednesday, prompting Mayor Edward Koch to warn that the days of John Dillinger and Babyface Nelson had returned.

As of early Wednesday afternoon, three more banks had been robbed — one in Manhattan, one in Queens and one in the Bronx.

The new robberies ran up a two-day total of 13 bank jobs and raised the overall total so far this year to 583, compared to 628 for all of last year.

FBI agents and police, meanwhile, pressed a search for the men who stole more than $2 million in a well-planned robbery Tuesday afternoon of a Brinks armored car making a pickup at the headquarters of the Chase Manhattan Bank in the financial district.

"The banks are now the subject of what you can only refer to as the old Babyface Nelson and Dillinger operation," said Mayor Koch. "And we're going to have to do what they did in those days — we're going to have to make sure that you can't get away with it."

"The Day The Hoops Ran New York," the New York Post declared in a banner front-page headline over a story about Tuesday's activity.

"Obviously, this is the worst robbery situation we have seen in recent memory," said FBI spokesman Quentin Eitel.

Police Commissioner Robert McGuire has ordered the mobilization of a special squad of shotgun-toting police officers to patrol in unmarked vans. A police spokesman said the squad, which is to rush to reported bank robberies, would be trained before being sent into the streets.

Khomeini offers amnesty

TEHRAN (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini Wednesday offered Kurdish rebels general amnesty if they stop fighting on Iran's restive western frontier where government F-14 Phantoms are blasting rebel tanks.

Heavy fighting raged in Saqqez, where Kurdish rebels took shelter after their retreat from Erbil last week. Fighting reports said at least 15 persons were killed, bringing the death toll in nearly 24 hours of renewed fighting to over 100.

More than 400 persons reportedly died in Paveh last week when several Kurdish groups united in a battle to expel government guards from the town.

Khomeini, acting as Iran's de facto head of state, offered amnesty in the face of a threat by the Kurdish Democratic Party to declare open war if revolutionary guards were not withdrawn from Kurdistan.

Priest trial ordered resumed

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI) — A Delaware Superior Court judge decided Wednesday to continue the armed robbery trial of Roman Catholic priest Bernard J. Pagano, even though another man has claimed responsibility for robberies allegedly committed by the "Gentleman Bandit."

The decision to resume the trial Thursday morning came after a 45-minute meeting between Judge Andrew Christy and attorneys for Pagano and the other man.

But Christy refused to say whether the charges against the 53-year-old Pagano, who is charged with the series of Wilmington-area robberies, will be dropped when the trial resumes.

Georgia St. Sen. Julian Bond reads statement

Blacks want concessions

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jews must show "more sensitivity" to the needs of blacks if they want to reduce tensions between the two groups, an ad hoc group of 200 black leaders said Wednesday.

The group also said Jewish organizations should insist Israel stop supporting the "repressive and racist regimes" in South Africa and Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

A statement read on the group's behalf by Georgia state senator Julian Bond said the burden of resolving black-Jewish tensions "cannot be placed disproportionately on the backs of already overburdened blacks."

D.C. amendment moves slowly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One year to the day after Congress approved it, the constitutional amendment to give the District of Columbia congressional representation has won ratification by only six states — and its future looks bleak.

Although backers remain guardedly optimistic, the ratification drive is beset by rivalries and disorganization.

D.C. Mayor Marlon Barry has been accused of failing to take the lead in the ratification drive. But he insists he's committed to doing everything he can on behalf of the amendment, which would allow Washington's 700,000 people to elect voting members of the House and Senate.

Orders for goods plunge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New orders for durable goods received by the nation's factories plunged 5.2 percent during July, the government reported Wednesday, a gloomy signal that the "mild" recession predicted by the administration may become deeper.

The new Commerce Department report said the July decline was the third in the past-four months and followed a 1.5 percent dip registered in June. It was the first back-to-back orders drop in a year.

Durable goods statistics are watched closely by economists because they reflect decisions by companies on whether to build up their inventories or start cutting them back because of lagging consumer demand.

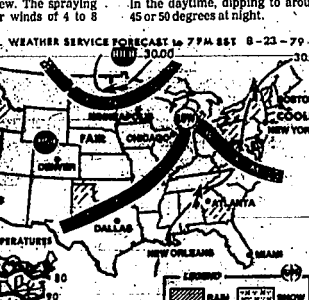

Guard fires on protesters

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — National guardsmen fired on a group of demonstrators putting up roadblocks north of the capital Wednesday night, and killed three of them, authorities said.

They said the leftist demonstrators fired first in the clash on a highway 18 miles north of San Salvador.

A New Jersey businessman filed by striking Salvadoran women textile workers was not released as expected Wednesday because of what a U.S. Embassy spokesman called a "hold up in negotiations."

Authorities said three people were killed when the guardsmen fired to disband about 150 demonstrators of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc, a leftist coalition of 20,000 workers, peasants and students — the largest antigovernment group in the country.

Palestinian issue still blocks peace

By JOHN M. GOSHEK
 of The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — To the Israelis, they are mortal enemies — violent, desperate people prone to vicious terrorism and determined to destroy the Jewish state that was carved out of Palestine in the aftermath of the World War II holocaust.
 But to their Arab brethren, they are victims of a historic injustice that has bitterly ironic parallels to the Jewish Diaspora of an earlier age — a talented, hard-working folk driven from their homeland and forced to wander in permanent exile.
 These are the starkly contrasting views the opposing sides in the Arab-Israeli conflict have of the approximately 3.5 million Palestinians who live under Israeli occupation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip or who are scattered elsewhere in the Middle East and beyond.
 In the last three decades, four major regional wars and countless skirmishes have been fought over the Palestinian issue. Even now, at a time when the Egyptian-Israeli peace accord has raised the first real hope of resolving the conflict, the question of the Palestinians and their future remains the principal barrier to bringing the rest of the Arab world into the peace process.

 That fact will be underscored anew Thursday when — unless U.S. diplomatic maneuvering succeeds in bringing about a postponement — the United Nations Security Council begins a debate on the rights of the Palestinians to an independent state.
 In its broad outlines, the debate probably will focus on the status of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, two non-contiguous territories captured by Israel from Jordan and Egypt, respectively, during the lightning war of 1967. Since then, the 1.1 million Palestinians in these areas have lived under Israeli military rule.
 Increasingly, a vague international consensus — shared in some degree by all the parties involved — has formed the idea that the problem can be solved by creating a "Palestinian homeland" or "entity."

 But, no one has found a way to make the leap from such vague words as "homeland" and "entity" to defining what they mean in practical terms.
 Most of the Arab world insists it must mean, at the least, a fully independent state controlled by no one but the Palestinians. But that idea is rejected categorically by the Israelis, who see such a state as inevitably becoming a hostile, radical-controlled "dagger pointed at the heart of Israel."
 For their part, the Israelis would like to see the West Bank and Gaza remain, directly or indirectly, under their control, with some measure of limited, internal self-government for the Palestinian inhabitants. That, in turn, is scorned by the Arabs as an Israeli attempt to create a "Palestinian Bantustan" on the order of South Africa's much-condemned puppet black homelands.

 Other proposals have called for rejoining the West Bank to Jordan or giving the territories a status that would make them independent in some respects and tied to both Israel and Jordan in others. But none have met with the approval of Israel, of the Arab countries or of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the faction-ridden umbrella organization that is the dominant spokesman for the Palestinian cause.
 Even if an agreement could be reached about the West Bank and Gaza, there is no guarantee that it would put an end to the Palestinian problem. These are small, resource-poor areas only marginally able to support their present populations and incapable of taking in the more than 2 million Palestinians

Many, if not most, of the Palestinians in other countries spurn the idea of resettling in a new "homeland" and cling to the dream of returning to the homes that they or their fathers once had in what is now Israel. Even if they could be induced to change their minds, there is the danger that a big infusion of people into the new entity would turn it into an economic basket case whose poverty would only inject new tensions into the turbulent Middle East.
 The roots of this situation go back to 1948 when the Arab world defied the U.N.'s attempt to partition Palestine into separate Jewish and Arab states and launched an unsuccessful war to wipe out Israel at the moment of its birth. In the course of the fighting, millions of Arabs fled the Jewish-controlled areas of the country.

160,000 Chinese peasants may be considering escape

HONG KONG (UPI) — The end of the summer harvest in China has left an estimated 160,000 peasants considering escape to Hong Kong, according to British military intelligence sources here. The British colony's higher living standard, a British military commander said in remarks made public Wednesday.
 Burkha Field Force Commander Reg. Mike Carleton-Smith said intelligence sources have indicated 160,000 Chinese peasants fled since the harvest were seeking ways to cross the barbed-wire border.
 "Within 14 days of walking distance" from a patrol perimeter thrown up by his troops.
 "People will continue to sneak across the border as long as there is a disparity in the living standard between China and Hong Kong," the commander said.

 British intelligence said many people were idle in Guangdong province, adjacent to Hong Kong, because the summer harvest is over, and schools were closed after the summer holidays.
 "That gives them more time to contemplate about making it to Hong Kong," where people earn an average of 10 times as much as the Chinese across the border, the source said.
 More than 40,000 illegal Chinese immigrants have been sent back to China so far this year by local authorities. Many are ethnic border patrols and reached the city.
 The colony's other major problem, Vietnamese refugees, has reemerged after a brief lull following the Geneva refugee conference in July.

The Marine Police intercepted 269 Vietnamese who arrived in small boats, pushing the number of refugees in crowded Hong Kong camps to 67,000.
 In Southeast Asia, three European ships were to cooperate in helping some 30,000 Vietnamese refugees living under poor conditions and threatened with starvation on the Anambas Islands of Indonesia when the monsoon starts in a few weeks.
 The 6,000-ton German ship Cap Anamur, now in Singapore, will join the French hospital ship Ile de Lumiere and the Norwegian freighter Lyssell to transport food and medical supplies to the Anambas.

Author Farrell dies at 75

NEW YORK (UPI) — Novelist James T. Farrell, who chronicled the rough-and-tumble life of the Irish working class of Chicago's South Side in his powerful "Studs Lonigan" trilogy, died Wednesday of heart failure here he was 75.
 "A novelist, critic, essayist, short story writer, poet and part-time journalist," Farrell published 52 books and had recently finished work on his last novel, "The Death of Nora Moran."
 Farrell died in the apartment on Manhattan's East Side that he had shared for the last 15 years with a woman companion, Cleo Paturis.

 Growing up on Chicago's South Side, Farrell first glimpsed the so-called "sports," poolroom bums and "big men" who later populated the trilogy made up of "Young Lonigan" (1932), "A Boyhood in Chicago Streets" (1932), "The Young Manhood of Studs Lonigan" (1934), and "Judgment Day" (1935).
 Farrell won a Book of the Month Award for 1937, the first of many honors. The "Lonigan" trilogy was the basis of a television series earlier this year.

Terry Jean Moore smiles at her mother, sister before leaving Florida prison

Inmates will miss infant Precious

LOWELL, Fla. (UPI) — Paroled convict Terry Jean Moore says the her former fellow inmates will miss her infant daughter, Precious, who spent all of her first five months of life behind bars.

Miss Moore, 23, was paroled Tuesday. She served two years and one week in prison for stealing $5 in the summer of 1977 while a hitchhiking companion kept a gun on the motorist who picked them up.

The daughter of a Youngstown, Ohio, steelworker, who claims her child was fathered by a prison guard she still loves, concealed her pregnancy for six months for fear correction officials would object.

When she was found out, the officials said she would have to surrender the child at birth. But a judge agreed with Miss Moore, that the baby should not have to suffer for her mistake.

Disco dining in school salad bar

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Wild lights, colors and the latest disco beat will pep-up lunches for students at a bar in Classical High School this fall.

But the kids will get lettuce, not liquor.

School lunch director Paul Rannenberg has planned a disco-themed salad bar in a cafeteria alcove complete with "wild lights," shocking pink-and-white striped walls and the latest disco music piped in.

"The bar will go 'the whole route' with a variety of vegetables, cheese, jelly, ham, tuna, turkey, potato, macaroni and three-bean salad, he said Wednesday.

"We're just trying to add a little enthusiasm—to a dull environment, namely—the Classical-cafeteria," Rannenberg said.

"There will even be peanut granules to sprinkle on the salad. It must be coincidence, but we seem to be getting an awful lot of government peanut commodities since Jimmy Carter became president."

For 30 cents students will be allowed to take all the food they can pile on a 5 inch by 7 inch tray — including the beverage and dessert of the day.

"We wouldn't dare give a 200-pound football player the standard 12 inch by 16 inch tray to go through the 'salad bar line,' Rannenberg said.

Although he doesn't anticipate any problems, he explained there are some rules for disco-diners: a sliming salad could cause a student to get bounced from the salad bar.

Lawyers mum on plea in goose case

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Federal prosecutors refuse to say whether a Washington, D.C., physician accused of budgeting a Canada goose to death with his golf putter has pleaded innocent or guilty in a plea bargain agreement.

U.S. Attorney Kurt Schmok said Tuesday details of the agreement between his office and Dr. Sherman A. Thomas, 46, would be released Thursday, the day the physician was to stand trial on charges of killing the bird during closed season and of illegally possessing a Canada goose.

Thomas claimed in court papers he killed the goose to put it out of its misery after injuring it during a golf game at the Congressional Country Club May 3. He said the bird was struck by an errant approach shot to the par 4 hole.

But witnesses told federal authorities that Thomas hit the goose in anger after its honking disturbed his putting.

Schmok said the plea agreement is subject to the approval of U.S. District Judge Joseph Young, who was to preside over Thomas' trial.

Tight jeans can cause varied troubles

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Habitually wearing tight-fitting jeans causes pelvic congestion and can even result in sterility for men and women, a Mexican gynecologist says.

Dr. Oscar Bravo Carradel of the Mexican Social Security Institute said constant rubbing of tight jeans against the pelvic area produces irritation and infections that, left untreated, result in sterility.

Carter says Chrysler should get little aid

BURLINGTON, Iowa (UPI) — President Carter said Wednesday Chrysler Corp., financially crippled by an energy crunch that has slowed the automaker's sales, must "reconstitute" its management to receive minimal federal aid.

The president, making a working vacation of his cruise down the Mississippi River, attended a town hall meeting in an outdoor amphitheater in a park on the Mississippi River bluffs.

Carter told one questioner he preferred minimal federal involvement in the financial problems of Chrysler and said the automaker and its 130,000 employees had "the shared responsibility" for resolving its financial plight.

"We are approaching the Chrysler question very cautiously," he said.

"It requires Chrysler, first of all, to reconstitute their management so they can be more effective and more efficient in the future than they have been in the past."

Chrysler has requested $1 billion from the federal government in the form of advance tax credits. The administration has rejected the tax credit proposal and indicated it will consider no more than $750 million in loan guarantees.

Chrysler's economic problems reached crisis proportions when the energy crunch virtually eliminated the market for its one-hot-selling recreational vehicles and small trucks and slowed sales of its larger cars.

"Chrysler must change as the other auto manufacturers must change in order to make automobiles more fuel efficient," Carter said.

The automaker said it needs financial help until it can introduce its 1981 line of fuel-efficient front-wheel-drive cars.

President appeals for refugees

Promises farmers enough fuel for coming harvest season

By BILL PETERSON
The Washington Post

BURLINGTON, Iowa — Standing on a gentle bluff above the Mississippi River, once a major thoroughfare for immigrants moving north and westward, President Carter Wednesday made an emotional appeal for the Southeast Asian boat people.

"Let me remind you that the United States is a country of immigrants. We are a country of refugees," the president told more than 2,000 people at a town meeting here.

"The refugees who are now leaving Southeast Asia were our allies in the recent Vietnam War. They are leaving a country that has taken away their basic rights. They believe in individual worth, individual initiative and personal freedom. They're more philosophically attuned to us than the Communist regime that has taken over."

Later, Carter used the occasion to let American farmers know they will be allocated enough fuel for harvesting and to announce his support for steps to promote gasoline, an alcohol-gasoline mixture that can be made with Iowa corn, among other things.

His statements on the boat people came in response to a question from a student who suggested the refugees are costing Americans jobs.

Only 220,000 boat people, or about one for every 1,000 Americans have come to this country, Carter explained, adding, "I believe that 1,000 Americans can support for just a few weeks one refugee searching for freedom, particularly when these people have proven already that they are eager to learn our language. They are eager to be self-supporting."

"So I hope that all Americans will realize that your families came to this country years ago looking for exactly the same thing that the Vietnam refugees are looking for now."

Carter has spoken about the boat people before, but not with such emotion or evangelical fervor. It was one of 15 subjects, ranging from nuclear power to his daughter's violin lessons (she still plays poorly, he admitted), that Carter touched on at the town meeting, while the steamship Delta Queen, on which the president is vacationing, waited in a shaded street in this suburban community 15 miles south of Vienna.

The Krols are among the latest arrivals at Europe's biggest and oldest temporary haven for people who have fled, or were expelled, from their homelands — the Traskirchen refugee camp.

More than 30,000 men, women and children have passed through Traskirchen since it was established in 1956 in connection with the Hungarian uprising. They have come from 30 countries, mostly from Poland, Romania, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and the other countries of Communist-dominated east Europe, but also from Jordan, Lebanon, Uganda, Turkey, Pakistan, Chile and other countries.

TRASKIRCHEN, Austria — Jerry Krol is still bewildered by the sudden change in his life. He is not sure about where he wants to go or what he wants to do. But he said he is certain of one thing: he would never go back to Poland.

"The (Communist) party there is everything," Krol, a tall, blond, 39-year-old electronics technician, said. "It tells you when to stand, when to sit, when to eat, when to go to work and when to go to sleep."

Krol (not his real name) admitted that he was exaggerating, then added: "But that is how I feel."

He said he could no longer cope with the feeling of being caged, so he, his wife and their 10-year-old daughter left their homeland as tourists, and made their way to a cluster of old army barracks on a two-shaded street in this suburban community 15 miles south of Vienna.

The Krols are among the latest arrivals at Europe's biggest and oldest temporary haven for people who have fled, or were expelled, from their homelands — the Traskirchen refugee camp.

More than 30,000 men, women and children have passed through Traskirchen since it was established in 1956 in connection with the Hungarian uprising. They have come from 30 countries, mostly from Poland, Romania, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and the other countries of Communist-dominated east Europe, but also from Jordan, Lebanon, Uganda, Turkey, Pakistan, Chile and other countries.

They include Christians, Moslems and Jews, individuals who left their homelands for religious or political reasons. Some came simply in search of a better job or education.

"They all have one thing in common," Karl Radak, the energetic, 61-year-old director of the camp, said. "They want a new life, not only for themselves but also for their children. That is why we have so many couples with young children here."

Traskirchen is not the only refugee center in Austria. A Red Cross camp in the Kaiser-Eberhard section of Vienna handles the heavy flow of Soviet Jews emigrating to Israel or the West. About 54,000 were received last year.

At the moment, Traskirchen has about 2,000 refugees. Five hundred others are at four subsidiary camps including Thalham near Salzburg, where the first 60 of 500 Indochinese refugees that Austria has agreed to resettle have arrived.

Traskirchen is the central fixture of an Austrian tradition, dating back several hundred years, as a way station for refugees from political or religious oppression.

"Because of our geography and the policies of the old Austrian emperors, millions of people came into the country, some to settle, while others continued on to other countries," Radak said. "This has not changed in recent years and will probably never change as long as there is 'political' or 'religious' oppression in the world."

Workman rakes oil spill, heavily loaded with Mexican crude, into plastic bag to prevent it reaching the beach

Scientist wants long term study of oil slick's damage

CORPUS CHRISTI (UPI) — Charging "We've been left in the dark long enough," the science officer of the team protecting the delicate Texas coastline from history's worst oil spill said Wednesday a long-term, multi-million dollar study of the damage was being considered.

"We just need to know after careful study just how dangerous a spill really is," said Dr. John Robinson of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

"It's going to be expensive, but we have had so much ambiguity about the effects. Our feeling is we've been left in the dark long enough."

Robinson said team members representing NOAA, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Coast Guard and other agencies were preparing a proposal for a three-year study at $3 million to $5 million a year, depending on the extent of damage from oil spilling from the Ixtoc I well in Mexico's Bay of Campeche.

Officials said visible environmental damage so far had been limited to a dozen dead birds and washup of tons of oil on the beaches of 113-mile long Padre Island, a natural barrier guarding wildlife-rich shallows from Brownsville northward. The invisible damage — including impact on birds far at sea — remained under study.

The Coast Guard estimated 1,250 tons, the equivalent of 8,750 barrels of oil, remained on isolated beaches that had low cleanup priorities. One-thousand cubic yards of oiled sand has been removed from tourist beaches and 14,000 gallons of oil has been picked-up from tourist-area waters.

What's what

Little Dog Star linked to origin of dog days

In old Rome, the rising and setting of Canicula, the little dog star, between July 3 and August 11 seemed to be connected to the fact that a lot of citizens thereabouts got sick in the intense summer heat. It was because of that star that the time became known as the dog days.

It's not extraordinary for a rabbit to take 18 naps a day. The late great clown, Emmett Kelly, wore the same suit for more than 40 years.

An Atlantic City ordinance makes it illegal there to smoke a cigarette in your own kitchen. Assume it's one of those "anywhere food is prepared" deals.

A groupup is about 58 percent water. A newborn baby is about 71 percent water. This may not be news to the mother with a diaper in her hand.

SEATING THE QUEEN

Q. If you invite the Queen of England to your house for dinner, where should you seat her at your table?

A. In your own customary chair, if you're the host, and then you sit on her right. So say the protocol folk. The situation doesn't come up often enough hereabouts to make it common knowledge.

Q. Why do we refer to the warm sunny days that usually show up in the late autumn as "Indian summer"?

A. Goes back to the earliest settlers when the Indian riding parties chose that time to make their last marauding attacks of the year. Some dry wit among the whites coined the phrase sarcastically and it caught on.

PORCUPINE

No other animal at birth is as large in comparison to the size of its mother as the baby porcupine. A 30-inch female can bear an 11-inch baby. As for weight, it's incredible. If a human baby were as big proportionately, it would weigh at birth 80 pounds.

Gold bullion soars to record price; dealers ponder cause

By United Press International
Gold soared to a record $311.50 an ounce on bullion markets Wednesday.

Dealers were divided as to whether the sharp rise was mostly speculative or represented real demand.

The dollar surged against the Japanese yen and was little changed against European currencies in subdued trading.

The gold buying spree, which began Tuesday afternoon in New York when spot gold rose to over $306 on the commodities exchanges, took off when Zurich and London opened Wednesday. Gold was priced in London at a record $311.50 an ounce at mid-morning.

In Zurich gold closed at a record $310.125 an ounce, up over $9 on Tuesday's finish of $301. In London, it fell off a bit from the $311.50 mark to close at a record $309.75 an ounce, still up over $9 from Tuesday's $302.625. Gold fell still further in New York to close at $310.80.

The dollar moved up fractionally in Tokyo to 217.93 yen from 217.63 and surged to 219.20 in New York. Dealers said there was a "major portfolio shift out of yen into gold" and they attributed the sharp drop in the yen to Japan's vulnerability to disruptions in oil supplies.

In Zurich the dollar closed at 1.6592 Swiss francs, up from 1.6583 Tuesday; in Frankfurt, at 1.8317 francs, down from 1.8323; in Paris at 4.2610 French francs, down from 4.2640; in Brussels at 30.445, down from 30.455 and in Milan at 817.45 lire, down from 818.80.

In London the pound rose to $2.2185 from $2.2105.

In New York the dollar generally weakened against European currencies to close at: 1.6550 Swiss francs, 1.8289 German marks, 29.28 Belgian francs, 2.008 Dutch guilders, 817.30 Italian lire and 4.2570 French francs.

Kuwait boosts gas price

KUWAIT (UPI) — Kuwait has decided to increase the price of natural gas by 17 percent, the Kuwait News Agency said Wednesday.

The increase is retroactive to Aug. 15, according to the agency. Oil Minister Sheikh Ali Sabban has set the average new price for one-ton-of-gas at $201.7.

Under the new standards, the price of one ton of butane was set at $218.3, up from $180, and propane at $185.

Kuwait's natural gas reserves have been estimated as high as 32 trillion cubic feet.

Debt collection paradox

© Field Enterprises, Inc.

If you, a consumer overloaded with debts and behind in your payments, are pursued directly by the creditors to whom you owe money, your creditors can use any harsh, abusive tactics they choose in order to compel you to pay up.

But if you, that same consumer, are pursued by collection agencies hired by your creditors, the agencies are under strict rules prohibiting them from hounding you with identical tactics.

A creditor can inform your boss that you're in arrears on your payments and by so doing, endanger your job.

A collection agency is banned from doing this, is actually at a competitive disadvantage compared to the creditor who gives the agency the collection job.

A creditor can call you at all hours during the night, threatening you if you don't pay up, terrorizing your children, starting all sorts of bitter battles between you and your spouse.

A collection agency cannot use this cruel technique.

A creditor can spread rumors about your delinquency among your neighbors, do almost anything it wishes to do — as long as it acts on its own.

A collection agency is prohibited by law from using similar (harsh but effective) methods.

When the Federal Debt Collection Practices Act was written into law, its provisions could be made extremely tough just because its coverage was so narrow. The law was opposed by only a small minority and the objections of those opponents were easily overwhelmed.

But evidence since the law became effective has dramatized that the omission of limitations on practices of creditors themselves could not possibly lead to a satisfactory solution.

So now, the Federal Trade Commission has recommended that the law applicable to collection agencies be extended to cover creditors themselves. The FTC frankly states that creditors are as responsible for as many abuses as collection agencies covered by law.

New York City's Department of Consumer Affairs under Bess Meyerson led the way toward a key revision of the current federal law as far back as 1971 by banning contact by creditors with a consumer employer for the purpose of having the employer exert pressure on the alleged debtor to pay.

Again, the New York City department under Consumer Affairs Commissioner Bruce Ratner led the way in 1979 with Regulation 10, which applies most of the provisions of the federal law to creditors as well as to collection agencies.

Among other things, this means:

- A ban on asking your boss to tell you to pay.
- Your right as a consumer to stop further dunning of you by retaining a lawyer or by telling a collector to "stop it." (This might, of course, trigger suit for the debt.)
- Recall that you, the consumer, be told of your right to ask for correction of any billing errors if this hasn't already been done.
- Ratner's Regulation 10 this year like Meyerson's initiative in 1971, will may set a national pattern.
- The FTC also has brought several recent cases against creditors (not just collection agencies) under the general prohibition of any unfair or deceptive practices applicable to all businesses affecting interstate commerce.
- Some of the more controversial provisions of Regulation 10 and of Meyerson's law make it harder to find debtors who disappear by imposing complex rules on "skip tracing" and inquiries undertaken to track down such deadbeats.
- Thus, the extension of the federal law to creditors will may have to be accompanied by moderating its more stringent provisions (such as those on skip-tracing) to make it acceptable.
- How all this, now develops may deeply affect us all, for increasing millions are borrowing to and above their sensible limits — and even a moderate business decline in 1979 from the 1978 period.

Sears income shows drop

CHICAGO—Sears, Roebuck and Co. reported net income for the second quarter and first half year slightly below the year-earlier levels, in part because of higher interest expenses and higher inventory accounting provisions.

For three months ended July 31, net was $193.6 million, or 60 cents a share, down 3.6 per cent from a year earlier. Sales were $4.25 billion, down 5.2 per cent from a year earlier.

Net for the six months was $343.6 million, or $1.07 a share, 3.5 per cent below year-earlier levels, and sales were $7.88 billion, down 7.9 per cent

Tomato grower, UFW sign

KEENE, Calif. (UPI) — A major King City tomato grower signed a three-year contract with the United Farm Workers union Aug. 10, the second in a week to reach an agreement with UFW, a union spokesman said.

Gonzalez Packing Co. was not among six major growers that have been struck by the UFW since January, but the union considered the agreement a "significant victory," said UFW spokesman Mark Grossman.

Gonzalez Packing is the second firm in a week to break away from a group of lettuce growers that have been negotiating unsuccessfully with the union since the strike began, said Grossman.

He said terms of the agreement were similar to that reached Aug. 12 with Meyer Tomato Co., also headquartered in King City.

The pact contained all the language of the old contract and raised hourly rates from the present $3.70 an hour to $5.95 an hour in 1981. Piece rate pay was raised from the present 35 cents a bucket to 44 cents a bucket in 1981.

The contract also contained increased medical and pension benefits, Grossman said.

Parliament dissolved in India

© The Los Angeles Times
NEW DELHI, India — President Neelam Sanjiva Reddy Wednesday dissolved the Lok Sabha, the lower house of Parliament, and called for mid-term elections to resolve India's seven-week-old political crisis.

Reddy asked Charan Singh, who resigned Monday as prime minister rather than face defeat on a motion of no-confidence in Parliament, to stay on as leader of a caretaker government until elections are held most likely in December.

In deciding to dissolve Parliament, Reddy rejected the advice of those who said that he should first offer opposition Janata Party leader Jagjivan Ram a chance to form a government.

Ram's Janata Party was the largest in the Lok Sabha, controlling 298 of the 544 seats. Ram claimed he could find the necessary backing from other parties to form a working majority.

 Ram, 71, acknowledged leader of India's 100 million untouchables, claimed Reddy's decision was "an infringement of the constitution itself" and a "planned conspiracy" against him.

Janata Party president Chandra Shekhar, reacting angrily to the decision, called for Reddy's impeachment.
 Shekhar claimed the president was "guilty of denigrating the honor and dignity of the nation."

Shekhar hinted that Ram had been passed over because he was an untouchable. "This will be thoroughly exposed," he said.

The party's general secretary, Nanaji Deshmukh, claimed that Reddy's decision was a clear reflection of caste bias. "He didn't want to give a chance to a Harijan (untouchable)," he said.

 A group of Janata Party members of Parliament marched on the presidential palace, but were stopped by police before they could enter. Groups of untouchables also protested in the capital.

"There will always be the lurking suspicion that because he was Harijan (untouchable) he wasn't given a chance," Ramesh Thapar, a New Delhi publisher said. Reddy himself is a Brahman, the highest Hindu caste whose members have dominated Indian politics since independence.

(Singh was the first non-Brahman to hold the prime ministership.)
 Most political observers, however, feel that the president made his decision when a group of 73 members of Parliament loyal to former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi indicated that they would not support Ram and asked that Parliament be dissolved.

"Without her support, he could only have gotten a majority by luring MPs away from other parties," one political analyst explained. "It would have been very difficult."

Other parties welcomed the election call. Singh, who advised the president to dissolve Parliament when he resigned Monday, called Reddy's decision "just."

The election process in the world's largest democracy is both elaborate and expensive. By law, all the electoral rolls, consisting of an estimated 360 million names, must be revised. The actual voting usually takes up to three days, with an additional day required for tabulations. Cost of the last national election in 1977 was $20 million.

NRC inspector says accidents ignored

© The Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — An Inspector for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Wednesday that Three Mile Island plant operators would have been better prepared for an accident there if the commission had responded to problems he had spotted earlier at another reactor.

The inspector, James S. Creswell, said that he had urged an investigation of two incidents at an Ohio reactor in 1977 because he feared that problems might occur at similar reactors.

Creswell told a presidential commission investigating the March 28 accident at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania that he had written reports, made telephone calls and had discussions with nuclear officials but had been told that he was spending too much time on old issues that were beyond his responsibilities.

He said that he had again expressed his concern at a meeting with two officials from the regulatory agency just a week before the accident.

"I can't help but feel it would have improved the operators' ability to deal with unexpected incidents" if they had known about problems at the other reactor, he said.
 The President's Commission on the Accident at Three Mile Island is holding hearings on the incident and the operations of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. It is scheduled to submit its report Oct. 25.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission also said at the hearing Wednesday that it did not learn until last April about a similar nuclear accident, Bessau, Switzerland, in August, 1977.

Joseph D. LaFleur Jr., deputy director of the commission's Office of International Programs, said that if such an accident were to happen today without the knowledge of the regulatory commission, "it would say the system is not working."

Westinghouse, which built the Swiss plant, immediately issued a statement saying that in the incident a relief valve had stuck open but was quickly fixed by established procedures.

Shipment of radioactive plant to cost $1 million

© Washington Star
WASHINGTON — The federal government plans to spend about $1 million to haul a 220-ton radioactive piece of a nuclear power plant about 8,000 miles from Tidewater Virginia through the Panama Canal and up the Pacific Coast.

At the federally owned Hanford reservation in Richland, Wash., scientists will conduct a five-year, $5-million "autopsy" on the equipment to find out why it became corroded and failed to function properly as part of Virginia Electric and Power Co.'s 7-year-old Surry power plant.

Similar problems plague about 20 other nuclear plants around the country.

A local anti-nuclear group, the Potomac Alliance, complained Tuesday that the shipment will contain 10 times the radioactivity as all the nuclear wastes shipped from the Surry plant in a typical year.

"It involves an unprecedented procedure in pulling out, as far as we know, the largest radioactive item that's ever been pulled out of a nuclear power plant and transporting it halfway around the world," said Potomac Alliance spokesman Fred Miller.

"We think there should be a full-scale environmental impact statement." The Department of Energy, which has agreed to take custody of the massive equipment when it leaves the Vepco site, contends the barge shipment would not add significant radiation to the route it travels.

Harold Ransom, program director of DOE's operations office at the Hanford facility in Richland, Wash., said a person standing six feet from the equipment will receive a dose of radiation about one-fifth as strong as a chest X-ray.

Still, Ransom admitted the shipment would emit about three times more radiation than normally allowed under rules set by the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Katsura Hata maintains old traditions

Japanese-American woman, 99, radiates Oriental courtesy

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer
SHOSHONE — If happiness is a secret for a long life, Katsura Hata of Shoshone apparently has one of the important ingredients.

While bent with nearly a century of living, the Japanese native radiates contentment and epitomizes traditional Oriental courtesy with a slight frame to bow to visitors.

On Dec. 6 she will be 100, but her family celebrated the century milestone this month because all four of her children were able to be here then. Most of her 12 grandchildren and 21 great-grandchildren also attended the birthday party.

Mrs. Hata who makes her home with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hata who own the Manhattan Cafe here, has lived in Shoshone since about 1962.

She feels that Shoshone is a nice town and that people here have been good to her.

"I'm so happy," she confided in halting English during our interview.

While her husband was busy organizing new congregations of Japanese-Americans, Mrs. Hata taught Sunday school and conducted sewing and cooking classes in her home. She would teach the young girls, second generation Japanese-Americans, the art of their native cooking.

She no longer speaks English enough to be comfortable with the language although she spent most of her life in the United States, working with Japanese-Americans.

Her late husband, Rev. Sui Hata, was sent to America in 1910 by the Presbyterian Church in Japan to help start new congregations of Japanese-Americans in California.

Mrs. Hata had three children when they first arrived in the United States as missionaries to their native countrymen. Their family later grew to six, four of whom are still living.

Most of their missionary work was done in California, according to her son, Bill, who said his parents served in Los Angeles, Salinas, Stockton and San Francisco and later in Salt Lake City.

While her husband was busy organizing a new congregation of Japanese-Americans, Mrs. Hata would teach Sunday school and conduct cooking and sewing classes in her home, usually held in her home, she would teach the young girls, second generation Japanese-Americans, the art of their native cooking.

Since meal has traditionally been scarce in Japan, many of the native dishes concentrate on fish and vegetables, Hata said.

Asked about the prejudice the family encountered, he said they experienced racial feeling in Salt Lake City than in any other of the communities which he remembered while living with his parents.

When World War II broke out, the Hatas were sent to relocation center in Arkansas, despite the fact Bill was serving in the United States Armed Forces.

Neither Hata nor his wife have ever heard his mother say a word about the experience and attempts by her daughter-in-law to discuss the concentration camp with Mrs. Hata, who is extremely deaf, drew a blank.

Mrs. Bill Hata, a native of Paul, also was caught in the mass relocation of all West Coast Japanese-Americans even though she lived in Magic Valley.

The former Sunie Onishi, she had gone to San Francisco to see Bill off when the order was issued for all Japanese-Americans to sell their property and businesses and move to the various camps throughout the country.

Hata indicated his wife could have returned to her home in Paul, but she opted to stay with her husband's parents during the war years.

Like many Japanese-Americans, Hata said he thinks the mass relocation episode "should be forgotten" and his mother apparently has long ago put it completely out of her mind.

After some 40 years of missionary service in this country, at an age when most people would be retired, the Rev. and Mrs. Hata returned to Japan to continue their efforts at spreading Christianity.

Rev. Hata died there at age 82 and his widow returned to this country, first making her home with a son in Chicago. After he died she came to Shoshone where the Bill Hatas have been connected with the restaurant business for about 25 years.

Despite her lack of fluency with English, Mrs. Hata talked animatedly for her daughter-in-law to translate. She spoke of her many friends here, her liking for the town and how she expects Shoshone to grow.

She also said she was grateful to this country, apparently sincere in her attitude, despite the wartime blot on her family's civil rights.

Although physically bent by a near century of living, Mrs. Hata radiates the graciousness of a cultured background. Her father was a professor in a Presbyterian college in Japan.

Mrs. Hata has never become an American citizen. She was barred by law from doing so until after the war. About the time the law was changed the Hatas had returned to Japan, her daughter-in-law said.

Despite the weight of a near century of living, Mrs. Hata radiates the graciousness of a cultured background. Her father was a professor in a Presbyterian college in Japan. Both he and his sons were interested in antiques and among her family possessions are many heirlooms, some of which date back 1,300 years.

These have now been divided among her children who include, in addition to Bill Hata, Tom Hata of Las Vegas, Mary Sadaaki of Cleveland, and Yuriki Yamanao of Yokohama, Japan.

Mrs. Hata loves plants, an interest she shared with her father, and the Hata living room is filled with living greens.

Here Katsura Hata sits, happily greeting other Japanese-American friends who live in Shoshone, creating for relatives and visitors like a winsome bit of her native land.

Katsura Hata, whose upcoming 100th birthday was celebrated last week, enjoys a bowl of red rice customarily served by the Japanese during special occasions to bring good luck.

Common sense rules help add more good years

HAROLD BLUMENFELD
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
Everybody wants to live a long life. That is, if it's an active and fulfilling one.

To find out how, it's worth reading the book "How to Live to Be 100 Years Young" (Frederick, Fall, $9.95) by Dr. George B. Tietken, a 71-year-old retired general practitioner.

The book tells how to add 40 health-packed years to our lives, to avoid the diseases associated with aging, to beat daily tensions and to eliminate fatigue. He also explains how to work, play, eat and sleep better. Health will also make us look slimmer, younger and more attractive.

Basically, Tietken says a person is as old as his or her arteries. We can keep them young by exercising and emphasizing the prevention of disease rather than only the cure.

Tietken's longevity regimen and diet are important to the people of all ages, but especially to the young. We need to learn how to avoid tension and depression, have more fun in life — and even enjoy sex in the later years.

The author says that we are the masters of our own destinies when undertaking life-extension programs. We must change the type of health care that many of us casually accept. He stresses that prevention is better than cure.

Tietken's seven principles for maintaining good health are:

- Eat a nourishing breakfast regularly.
- Don't nibble between meals.
- Get seven to eight hours of sleep each night.
- Maintain a normal weight.
- Stop smoking.
- Exercise moderately.
- Exercise regularly.

Although it is not mandatory, Tietken suggests consulting your physician before taking on his own "Madison program. Heartline supervision is especially advisable if you are being treated for a physical ailment.

Obviously working to have a better and healthier body will require patience on your part. We must not worry when healing sometimes requires time. The eventual rewards will be buoyant good health, zest for more activity and a better life.

Unfortunately, insomnia is a major disturbance for many older people.

You are more inclined to remain awake when you start thinking the moment you put your head on the pillow of real the problems facing you. Tietken suggests ways to avoid this tossing and establish a good sleep pattern without drugs.

Exercise is important. It doesn't have to be violent and tiring. It should just involve using muscles in ways they aren't used normally. For example, walking at a slow pace is not classified as exercise, but striding along at a brisk pace is.

Good health doesn't only have to mean exercising, dieting and keeping the heart and blood vessels functioning.

Tietken doesn't consider sex an erosive influence. Rather, he advocates it as uplifting, stripulating and gratifying.

He wants to debunk the myth that sex is only for the young, because the elderly can be sexually active and competent. Sex should be a declaration of intent to remain young in spirit.

Make every effort to maintain the romantic elements of sex. If romanticism is a lost art for many of us, let's resurrect it.

Tietken doesn't think we can do all this alone. So, he has started a "100 Years Young Club" in the Florida community where he lives. He hopes the club will spread to other parts of the country, making it possible for people to live to be centenarians instead of septuagenarians.

He suggests organizing local non-profit clubs that recruit doctors and pharmacists as volunteers. Committees can then be formed to deal with specific subjects such as sleep, exercise, fatigue, hygiene, senility, drinking, smoking, obesity and depression.

Information available on insurance firms which cover elders

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 43081. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I am 76 years old; my brother is 65 years old; and my brother-in-law is 94 years old. We all have a mutual problem, one which I am sure is a common problem among us oldersters. That problem is that we can not find an insurance company which will give us affordable life insurance. Most companies will not even insure us at all. Those few we found that will insure us want a fortune or they say we have to buy insurance by amounts of $5,000 or $10,000 or more.

We only want to purchase a couple thousand dollars worth of insurance at a reasonable price. Is there an insurance company that will sell us old fellow a little life insurance for a reasonable amount? All three of us also have a mutual problem, one which as they call it, which makes our situation even worse. — K.E.

You are right, this is a common problem. With rising burial costs and runaway inflation, most older Americans find that what seemed like adequate life insurance 10 years ago is not adequate today.

There are a few good companies which make life insurance available to older Americans at a reasonable price. Heartline has been researching this situation for several months. We have now compiled some useful information on the subject. For free information on life insurance, write to Heartline's Tips on Life Insurance, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 43081. Please enclose 25 cents to cover postage and handling.

HEARTLINE: I live in a retirement community and my neighbors and myself always read your column. One of my neighbors told me the other day that she saw something in your column about health insurance, and she took it to mean that Heartline now sells its own Medicare supplement. Is Heartline now in the insurance business? — K.C.

No. Heartline is not in the insurance business, never has been and never will be. As a consumer protection organization, Heartline has been, for years, investigating the Medicare supplement industry in order to make available our findings to our readers. As a consumer protection organization, it is our obligation and duty to make available consumer information designed to help you understand insurance and to know what to look out for in the way of rip-offs. But, we are not an insurance agency, nor are we in any way tied to any insurance company or agency. Our free literature on insurance is only one of many types of free literature which we make available to our readers.

HEARTLINE: Now that I have retired, I find myself getting bored quite easily. I think I need a hobby, but after checking around, I find that many hobbies are expensive. Especially stamp and coin collecting. Besides, you can only stare at your coins or stamps so long and you still get bored. My son has tropical fish, and I do enjoy watching them, but I'd enjoy it much more if they would do something interesting. I'd like to have an aquarium — if I knew something a little more interesting to put in it other than fish. Have any suggestions? — L.J.

How about something different and challenging which might well pay for the hobby and make a little extra besides? How about frogs? No we are not kidding — to be exact, African clawed frogs (scientific name "Xenopus") which live underwater in an aquarium. These little gray frogs are fascinating to watch and easily bred.

The African clawed frog ranges in size from half an inch to four-and-a-half inches depending upon age. They are strictly aquatic, although they can survive on land but are quite helpless. All you need to start your hobby is an aquarium with a hood, a filter, a little gravel and a few rocks and plants and you are in business. Many pet shops carry Xenopus and they range in price from 35 cents to $2.95 depending on size.

This hardy little frog is tropical, but can easily survive in water temperatures as low as 62 degrees and as high as 78 degrees. Thus, an aquarium heater is not essential.

The African clawed frog does not have the long tongue to catch its prey that other frogs do. Instead, it uses its short front legs to cram in its food as it scoots or swims through the tank. These little frogs are very easy to feed. They will eat insects, any flake-type fish food, freeze-dried or frozen tubifex worms, blood worms, mill worms, daphnia, brine shrimp, etc. All of these foods may be obtained at any pet shop.

You will notice that most people who work in pet shops will not know a female Xenopus from a male. The female has a little stubby tail which is hardly noticeable in young frogs or the dwarf species. You will also find very little published information on the Xenopus. Perhaps you will be the one to study them and write a book on raising and breeding them.

You may obtain a mated pair of Xenopus, a complete breeding kit including food, a breeding aquarium complete instructions for around $40.00 from the Carolina Biological Supply Company, Burlington, N.C. 27215.

Check with any pet shops in your area to see if they would be interested in purchasing from you the frogs you raise from your hobby.

Symphony season starts

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Symphony Orchestra will start rehearsals for its 21st season at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Room 121 of the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Building.

The group is made up of musicians from the many Magic Valley towns. Members are music teachers, students, farmers, housewives, businesspersons and people from all walks of life.

The orchestra rehearses every Tuesday evening from late August to April.

The first concerts will be Nov. 19 and 20 and will feature one of the world's outstanding cello soloists, Leonard Rose. Rose will perform the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto with the symphony.

The Dvorak "New World" Symphony and the march and scherzo from Prokofiev's "Love of Three Oranges" are also planned for the first concerts.

Persons interested in becoming members of the Magic Valley Symphony should contact Lawrence Curtis, director, at the college, 734-2634, or at his home, 734-3981.

It may be taken for college credit. The symphony is in need of violin, string bass and bassoon players.

India has fabulous ghost town

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Fatehpur Sikri could be the world's most fabulous ghost town.

Built in 1575 by Akbar, the greatest Moghul emperor, to commemorate a mystic who predicted the birth of his first son, Fatehpur Sikri was one of the most splendid capitals in the world for a brief 16 years.

Akbar and his court abandoned Fatehpur Sikri, it is said, because its water source dried up.

Whatever the reason, the sandstone and marble city and any one of 10 dhool-clad men who offer their services as guides transport visitors instantly to the splendid days of Akbar.

One imagines lute music in the air on a stroll through the five-storyed Panch Mahal, where Akbar watched the ladies of his court dance among the elaborately carved pillars.

The checkerboard courtyard where Akbar played board games using his ladies as the moving pieces and the houses he built and decorated according to the homelands of his five wives are preserved to near perfection by the desert air.

Fatehpur Sikri is about one hour by bus or car from Agra, home of the Taj Mahal, and five hours' drive from New Delhi.

Trudy Dilworth

CAREY — Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Dilworth of Carey announce the engagement of their daughter, Trudy Lynn, to Kurt Martin Bockoven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil M. Bockoven of Twin Falls.

Miss Dilworth graduated from Carey High School and is currently employed at the Everton Mattress Co. in Twin Falls.

Bockoven is in the Navy and stationed at Oakland, Calif.

A Sept. 1 wedding date has been set. They will be married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Howard in Twin Falls.

High incomes affected by inflation too

NEW YORK (UPI) — Home-buying and parenthood are being gloombed by inflation just as much in young families with incomes of $20,000 a year and up as in those with considerably lower incomes.

According to a Gallup survey for Redbook magazine, 75 percent of married Americans between the ages of 18 and 35 say inflation has cramped their lifestyles — although 47 percent said they are better off financially than they were a few years ago.

Forty-five percent from all income levels between the ages of 18 and 25 said the economic situation has prevented their buying a home and 22 percent said they were postponing parenthood for the same reason.

The study showed higher income couples more conscientious about saving energy and saving money on clothing purchases and small luxuries than couples making less money.

Jeanne Mathers

KIMBERLY — Mr. and Mrs. Bill Mathers announce the engagement of their daughter, Jeanne, to Terry E. Hanson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Hanson, all of Kimberly. Miss Mathers is attending Kimberly High School.

Hanson is attending Kimberly High School and is employed at Cummins Farms in Murtaugh.

No definite wedding date has been set.

Country music

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A gala "Celebration of Country Music" will be held at historic Ford's Theater Oct. 2 as part of President Carter's designation of October as "Country Music Month." The Ford's Theater gala will include Johnny Cash, Dolly Parton, Glen Campbell, Loretta Lynn and a host of other stars.

Dear Abby

Life revolves around piece of paper from birth to death

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN... DEAR ABBY: Many couples who live together without marriage say, "We don't need a piece of paper to make our commitment binding. A piece of paper doesn't mean a thing..."

...makes sure he has that "piece of paper." And when a person graduates from high school, college or a trade school, that "piece of paper" can make the difference between getting a job and not getting one.

DEAR PAPER: Granted, written documentation makes life immeasurably less complicated, but common-law marriages have been recognized as legal and binding for a long time in some states.

DEAR ABBY: I feel like a silly adolescent writing to you about this but I've always respected your advice. I'm a 26-year-old woman, never married, who is currently dating a man my age who is in the same boat.

DEAR ABBY: There is a great deal of controversy in my family as to the proper terminology of the following: When the bride enters the church to meet the groom, is she walking UP the aisle? Or is she walking DOWN the aisle?

PHILOSOPHER IN KODIAK, ALASKA: To quote an ancient philosopher, Buddha: "Believe nothing, no matter where you read it, or who said it, unless it agrees with your own reason and your own common sense."

Bran is better than laxatives to control function of colon

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D. Dear Dr. Lamb: I enjoy your health column very much and have read your advice frequently about the use of bran for good digestive functions.

Judge in the esophagus and cause problems. You must have read my comment that when bran is softened it's not roughage. For years many doctors felt that bran was roughage and would irritate the digestive system.

It's true that many cereals contain excessive amounts of salt and sugar. You can get a lot of good whole wheat cereals, however, that contain no added sugar. There are a lesser number that don't contain salt.

Efficient sharing of needed blood ongoing concern for Red Cross

BOISE — The need for blood and efficient sharing of that precious natural resource is a continuing concern of American Red Cross Blood Services.

The collections and needs do not always equalize in every Red Cross service region — nor do the other blood collection agencies always manage to balance their needs and collections. Natural disasters will sometimes render a blood center helpless just when the need for blood is urgent.

A large city sometimes finds its bloodmobiles falling short of their goals. A snowstorm will make it very difficult for donors to reach the collection site, or for hospital deliveries to be made. Sometimes a center will have a surplus of one or more types of blood which cannot be used in their system before the expiration date.

What processes nationwide equalize this see-saw of surplus and deficit?

American Red Cross Blood Services has been using a system for the past several years called COMPASS. It was conceived and functions as a central clearinghouse for all 57 blood centers in the Red Cross family including the Snake River Region which is the total blood supply for our community.

Each day, each center at a specified time, reports its inventory through a telex machine to a computer at National Headquarters in Washington, D.C. The reports also contain special information, such as centers needing blood and what types, and centers having a surplus and what types. The reports are compiled and the final report is telegraphed back to each center later in the day. The centers then contact other centers on their own to share resources.

In cases of disaster, the COMPASS system is used to funnel blood supplies into the affected area quickly and efficiently.

The Red Cross COMPASS gained a strong partner in the past year when the Community Council of Blood Centers joined with Red Cross Blood Services in sharing their resources. These two major blood agencies provide a strong force toward an ultimate goal of sharing all blood and blood components nationwide — a major objective identified by the American Blood Commission in recent deliberations.

During the first quarter of this year, shipments of blood and blood components through COMPASS reached an average of 28,814 units per month. This represents a significant sharing of the resource.

Skylights rising in popularity

By Della O'Hara
 ©Chicago Sun-Times

Skylights recently have gone through the roof in popularity among new-home buyers, according to a survey conducted in Southern California.

The survey, conducted by Walker & Lee Inc. of Santa Ana, a real estate services firm, showed that skylights have joined fireplaces and wet bars as features most wanted by buyers.

Andrew C. Barber, senior research analyst for Walker & Lee, said the survey involved nearly 900 family units at 21 Southern California new-home developments.

Barber said that at condominiums and town house developments: "A big response from shoppers is, 'let there be light.' The highest number, 39 per cent, want a skylight to make up for one or more common walls without windows."

At single-family developments, skylights were desired by one-third of home seekers, making them fourth in popularity behind wet bars, a hot tub or whirlpool bath, and bay windows.

"Home shoppers seem to expect all types of features in all parts of the house," Barber said. "However, it is difficult to fault their expectations when so many new homes are priced at more than $100,000."

Barber said three detailed questions were asked to determine the features people would like to have in their new homes.

Hubby overindulged at salad bar

By ERMA BOMBECK
Field Enterprises, Inc.
 My husband and I went to a help-yourself salad bar the other night where he overindulged and I had to drive home.
 He insisted he could do it, but anyone who ate that much lettuce couldn't even sing, let alone drive the car.
 It's the restaurant's fault. You can't just lay out 10 vegetables, croutons, gelatin, three-bean salad, cold plates and chilled forks and expect people to exercise temperance.
 Personally, I am a social salad eater who can go either way. If everyone has a salad, I'll have one, but I don't need it to have a good time.
 My husband does not have that kind of restraint. We hadn't gotten inside the door before a waiter urged him to belly up to the salad bar.

 When he grabbed a large chilled dinner plate I knew it was going to be another one of those nights.
 People at salad bars are a real study in human greed.
 There's the secret salad eater. He gets two plates and acts like one is for someone else.
 There's the one-salad-limit eater. He's going to nurse one salad all night so he slowly but painstakingly puts on a mound of lettuce, two dozen tomatoes, a sliced onion, 1/2 pound of bean sprouts, freshly ground pepper, a box of croutons and a pint of sour cream.
 There's the "diner who keeps going back to the salad bar again and again and hits the shrimp so often he becomes an embarrassment to his family.

 On the way home, my husband observed, "You're sore, aren't you?"
 "We can talk about it in the morning."
 "Why can't we talk about it now?"
 "Don't breathe on me. You smell like roquefort. All-I can say is you certainly set some kind of example for your sons... pigging out on the salad."
 "I told you. It was something to do until the food arrives."
 "Why can't you sit around and eat bread sticks like Fred?"
 "Are you saying I can't handle a couple of salads before dinner?"
 When he starts going to the salad bar alone... I'll worry.

Favorable home market

—There will be an easing of home price increases.
 —The real estate market will show continued strength, equalling or surpassing last year's performance in most areas.
 —There will be more buyers and sellers in the relocation market; this will continue to be a mobile society.
 —Despite concerns about the gasoline outlook, it has yet to have any significant impact on the market.
 The RELO survey participants provided a nationwide perspective on mortgage rates, which, they reported, have risen from an average of 10 per cent last January to 11 1/2 per cent by midyear. Rates across the country now range from a low of 9 1/2 per cent to a high of 11 1/2 per cent for conventional mortgages with 20 per cent down payments.
 However, survey participants see an easing of these rates by year's end with an average of 11 per cent. The anticipated range would be 9 1/2 per cent to 13 per cent.
 "The membership sees home prices keeping pace or rising faster than the rate of inflation," Conway said. "Homeownership is still the best investment for the average person."
 With regard to business, 66 per cent said that the first half of 1979 was better than 1978, while another 20 per cent said volume was unchanged.
 Looking into the future, 77 per cent expect business to increase or remain unchanged during the final six months of 1979, as compared to 1978.
 While gasoline supplies concerned most respondents, 66 per cent did say that shortages or the prospect of shortages has not dampened the interest of buyers.
 RELO members specialize in handling relocations, helping people sell a home in one community and buy in another.

PEARS WITHOUT PARTRIDGE TRACKS

With all the notice given to partridges roosting in Pear trees the last couple of hundred years at Christmas time, Swensen's thought it would be well to announce the arrival of fall canning pears along with a strong assurance that the pears are completely free of partridge contamination of any kind — no partridge peck-marks, no partridge feathers or footprints, and definitely no partridge droppings.

Schools to comply with rule

RUPERT — The Minidoka County school board will probably agree to stop granting credit for students who attend religion classes during school hours, according to board member D.W. Smith.

Smith, the only school board member who could be reached by press time, said the policy change will probably come at the board's Sept. 17 meeting, in order to conform with a directive from the state Board of Education.

At its monthly meeting Monday the board voted to table the issue after listening to comments from members of the Minidoka County Christian Education Association. But Tuesday, after consulting with the Department of Education in Boise, school district superintendent Wayne Fagg began telling students they would not receive credit for the religious classes.

"We'll probably have to sustain him," said Smith. "He's the administrator, and I guess we'll have to support him if he's going to abide by the state rule."

Smith said he was not upset with Fagg, but does not approve of the state board's new policy.

"I think the Legislature will probably have to straighten them (the state board) out a little bit," Smith said.

Fagg, who said Tuesday he wanted to avoid a court case against the district, said he felt the board would go along with his interpretation. He said he assumes the board will receive credit from the courses now that the Department of Education has clarified the legal meaning of the rule.

"We have to abide by the rule," said Smith. "All boards are given power by the state. If the board overrules me, I will be greatly surprised."

Students with parental permission will still be allowed to leave school for off-campus religious instruction by the MCEBA and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), said Fagg, but no credit will be granted and no attendance records will be kept for the classes.

The new state policy, adopted by the state Board of Education Aug. 10 to take effect Aug. 30, was prompted by a recent federal court decision in Utah.

Users of sanitary landfills will be paying new fees following budget-meeting action by county commissioners in Twin Falls.

Fees to be charged at county dump

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — New gate charges and operating hours for sanitary landfills Wednesday were announced by the Twin Falls County Commissioners.

The changes are a result of further compliance with Environment Protection Agency standards and preparation of the effects of Idaho's new 1 percent law. County commission chairman Merl Leonard said.

Beginning Oct. 1, a minimum $1 fee will be charged for the use of the landfills. The fees will be based on the size of the load taken to the landfill. For example, a trailer or pickup truck load will cost $2. A 7x20x2-foot truck bed load will cost $10.

The commissioners also announced new operating hours at two landfill sites.

Effective Aug. 27, the Murtaugh "East" Landfill will be opened only on Friday and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The Filer disposal site will become a transfer station. Daily household waste will be accepted but commercial loads will be handled at the county's main landfill.

Operations at the Twin Falls "Main" and Buhl "West" landfills will not change.

Imposing fees means a more equitable means of support, Leonard said. Formerly, rural residents paid taxes and used the landfills without charge. Urban residents would also pay taxes. But city residents also paid gate fees charged to the city's garbage contractor. Those fees constituted double taxation, Leonard said.

The new system eliminates that inequity, he said. "Whether they be rural or urban, they all will pay the same." The county will watch the rate system for possible modifications in the future, Leonard said. Fees will be adjusted to meet expenditures, he added. "This of course is a trial run," he said.

Leroy regrets U.S. appeal of Idaho lands ruling

BOISE (UPI) — Attorney General David Leroy said he is disappointed the federal government has decided to appeal a circuit court ruling that said Idaho had unqualified title to three million acres of desert land. Leroy reacted to a request by the U.S. Department of Justice to ask the U.S. Supreme Court to rule on whether Idaho is entitled to the three million acres. The Justice Department wants the Supreme Court to review a ruling by the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals that released the land to Idaho.

Rupert receives one grant, plans to apply for another

RUPERT — Mayor W.F. "Bibi" Whitton announced the city of Rupert has received a grant of $300,000 to replace the wooden water lines in southeast Rupert.

At the Tuesday night meeting Whitton said with the receipt of these funds from the Housing and Urban Development program he could fulfill his campaign promise to find a solution to the water problem. The J-U-B engineering firm of Twin Falls is designing the system; contracts will be awarded early this fall.

In addition, the council accepted J.U-B's offer to file a preliminary application for a Community Development Block Grant Comprehensive Program from HUD. The mayor stated that the city could be granted up to $1.5 million over the course of three years for such items as the completion of a domestic water supply, a storm drain system and a recreational complex if it is willing to put up with the red tape and stringent regulations of the federal government.

Whitton acknowledged that no one on the council likes all the requirements of a federal program, but, he said, "with the 1 percent initiative this is our only hope to get funds for these improvements." HUD requires all grant recipients to document that low and moderate income persons will receive a considerable amount of the benefit derived from a grant.

J.U-B will work with the city and Region IV Development Association of Twin Falls to file the application. Citizens will be involved in setting community priorities and in planning grant requests. A number of visitors voiced community concerns. Dr.

Dale Miles, Pat Dean, Esther Kinneer, and Sue Urbach requested revenue sharing monies be used for a new covered swimming pool. Whitton explained that since 60 percent to 70 percent of summer pool users are not from the taxing district, it is important to get the cooperation of the county, the school board, and the cities of Heyburn and Paul.

Wayne Pehrson, Frank Tibbitts, June and Ernie Neilson, Marley Inama, and Victor Bubel questioned the rezoning of property on South H Street near 100 S which has allowed for the installation of a gas bulk plant by Norvin Dickson, Conoco distributor. Whitton explained the property was rezoned last June with ample publicity.

Fire Chief Thayne Taylor assured the citizens that

Dickson has taken every safety precaution possible, and that their fire insurance should not increase as a result of the plant construction.

In other actions the council set Sept. 4 at 8 p.m. as the time for public hearing of the proposed budget for fiscal year 1979-80; approved an application by Glen Walker to build a subdivision on eight lots between the Cove and Lawson subdivisions; decided not to raise city councilmen's salaries; authorized the city attorney to draft an ordinance raising the city liquor licenses to a uniform $100; reported that the sewer is working without problems; and in executive session discussed one personnel matter and two cases of pending litigation involving the city of Rupert.

Contract bids rejected

County will hire public defenders

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Commissioners have decided to hire their own public defender.

The contract with a law firm for the job, according to Merl Leonard, commission chairman.

Four bids from Twin Falls law firms ranged from $22,000 to $72,000 a year to do the job, Leonard said. The proposed county budget would allocate $41,000, but Leonard said the commissioners feel they can hire two attorneys (a chief defender and a deputy) and a legal secretary for less than the lowest bid.

"In view of our current economic situation, we need to narrow the costs down to something we can live with," said Leonard. "We're not pointing the finger at any private attorneys. They know what their time costs them. That's not the point."

Salaries and the length of the contract are negotiable, Leonard said, but the two lawyers must start work Oct. 1, the beginning of the 1980 fiscal year. The current public defenders, the Twin Falls firm of Kvanvig, Stoker, and Slinger, are paid at the rate of $42,500 a year. Their contract expires Sept. 30, Leonard said.

The Commissioners have no plans to advertise for the positions but are willing to interview any attorney who has experience in criminal law, Leonard said. The defenders' offices will be at state police headquarters or in the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Annex; he added, until a new county administration building is constructed on the site of the old Vera O'Leary Junior High School, purchased last year by the county.

Leonard said he will expect the two new defenders to finish up their private practice caseloads as soon as possible after Oct. 1 and then devote all their time to defending people who have been accused of a crime but cannot afford a lawyer.

"I'm sure it will be a full-time job," he said. "I would hope the need could be reduced somehow, but apparently there is a tremendous need now in the Magistrate Courts."

Four-year-old drowns

JACKPOT — The body of a Twin Falls boy who presumably drowned Monday was found Tuesday, Elko County sheriff deputies said.

Andrew J. Brostrom, 4, of Twin Falls, apparently became separated from a group of children about 2:30 p.m. Monday. Deputies said the boy fell into a small pond about 9 miles northwest of Thousand Springs, Nev.

Deputies located the body about 1 p.m. Tuesday. The pond was used by the Chromolite Mining Co. in processing ore.

A search involving scuba divers, dredge hooks and boats was mounted by the sheriff's department. The mining company also began to drain the pond. Deputies credited the pond draining with eventually leading to the body's location.

The child lived with his mother, Sandra, in Twin Falls.

Hailey councilman quits

HAILEY — Hailey city councilman Bill House, who has held office since January 1978, resigned his position Monday.

Management of the area Mountain Bell Telephone office, House said he resigned primarily due to the lack of time he has to properly perform the duties of a councilman.

"I don't feel it's quite fair to the city of Hailey and to the council to continue without being able to spend a little more time in my position," House said he is involved with a reorganization procedure under way at Mountain Bell, and felt it to be more than he could do to continue serving on the city council.

What does House feel to be the most immediate issue facing Hailey? "I think the traffic problem that we have on downtown Main Street. This is the one I'm sure the council will be quite involved with before it's finally settled and resolved. That seems to be the major issue at this time, as to things left undone," House said.

Mayor Emory Dietrich said he is now in the process of searching for an appointee to fill the remainder of the term, which ends in January 1980. The council seat held by House, and those now held by Lyle Brønneberg and Vernon Murphree, will be up for election in November.

Hail relief requested

BOISE (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church Wednesday asked Agriculture Secretary Bob

Bergland and Small Business Administrator Vernon Weaver to expedite disaster relief to four Idaho counties.

On Aug. 14, parts of Twin Falls, Jerome, Lincoln, Blaine, Minidoka and Cassia counties were hit by a hailstorm that caused an estimated $10-20 million crop damage, Church said.

Gov. John V. Evans declared four of the counties — Blaine, Minidoka, Lincoln and Twin Falls — disaster areas so they could receive federal relief.

Jerome and Cassia are expected to be declared disaster areas within the next few days, Church said.

Buhl man charged

TWIN FALLS — A Buhl man Wednesday was arraigned in Magistrate Court on charges of involuntary manslaughter in connection with a Monday morning auto accident that killed Lloyd C. Gonterman, 53, of Castleford.

Christopher B. Schmah, 22, of Buhl was westbound on county road 4000 North near Buhl when his car collided with a vehicle driven by Gonterman. Gonterman was headed south of Castleford Road.

According to the charges filed against him, Schmah was under the influence of alcohol and had run a stop sign when he collided with Gonterman.

Bond was originally set at $5,000 but Schmah was later released on his own recognizance.

Budge, Olmstead rap Lenaghan appointment

BOISE (UPI) — Two Republican legislative leaders have criticized Gov. John V. Evans for naming former Idaho Public Utilities Commissioner Robert Lenaghan as acting director of the state Office of Energy.

better record of promoting energy production, blaming Lenaghan while he was a PUC commissioner for voting against a 1976 request by Idaho Power Co. to build a coal-fired plant near Boise.

$1 million in CETA funds approved in Idaho

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans said Wednesday the Idaho Manpower Consortium allocated more than $1 million for youth employed under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

The consortium is comprised of the Ada County Board of Commissioners and Evans and is charged with administering most of the CETA program in Idaho.

Evans says appointment does not violate law

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans said Wednesday he does not feel his appointment of Robert Lenaghan as acting director of the Office of Energy conflicts with Idaho law as some opponents charge.

election to any civil office, in the State of Idaho, other than that of commissioner, for a period of two years (after leaving office).

"I think it would be plainly unconstitutional to deny Mr. Lenaghan, or anyone else, the right of employment," Evans said if the appointment had charge.

conflict with the 1913 law he "thinks it's time to review this portion of the code which I think clearly violates a person's constitutional right for employment."

Move to ban winter cutoffs by utilities gains support

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Senior Citizens Lobby has joined with several other groups in asking the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to ban utilities from cutting off gas and electricity supplies during the winter months.

"The ever increasing cost of basic life necessities, including natural gas and electricity, plus the spectre of rising unemployment has made current utility termination practices unacceptable," said president Roy Watson.

White shark dies in tank

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Extraordinary efforts failed Wednesday to keep alive a Great White Shark that was captured when it became entangled in some fish nets off Tomales Bay.

The shark was kept moving by scuba divers in a special doughnut-shaped tank so that oxygen would continue to flow over its gills, but it died a little less than 24 hours after its capture.

No aquarium has ever succeeded in keeping a captured Great White Shark alive and in 1977 San Francisco's Steinhart Aquarium completed the special tank that would allow a shark to swim as fast it likes, for the specific purpose of eventually housing a Great White Shark.

The specimen that died was a female, six feet long, 200 pounds and two or three years old.

Bishop wants lawyers to drop appeal effort

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Condemned killer Jesse W. Bishop says the attorneys who are to stop his execution in the Nevada gas chamber next Monday are a "bunch of liars" and he wants them to drop their efforts.

Bishop said Tuesday in a television interview he may file suit against the Clark County Public Defender office in Las Vegas for interfering with his rights.

U.S. District Judge Harry Campbell has a hearing scheduled for Thursday on the petition by the public defender's office to stay the execution while an appeal is taken through the federal court system.

Bishop said, however, he doesn't have a chance of winning any appeal and doesn't want to delay his execution any further. To postpone it, he said, would be cruel not only to him but to his family.

Bishop will be flown here today from the Nevada State Prison in Carson City where he has been on death row for the past 20 months. Acting Prison Superintendent Howard Pyle said Bishop, 46, was calm, had passed some recent psychiatric tests and was eating well.

Bishop would be the first person executed in Nevada in 10 years and the second this year in the nation. John Spenkelink died in the electric chair in Florida.

A number of church groups in Nevada have asked the Nevada Pardons Board to spare Bishop's life but the board, headed by Gov. Robert List, has not scheduled any meeting yet.

Bishop himself doesn't hold out any hope for getting his term commuted to life in prison without possibility of parole.

The petition filed in federal court last week for a stay of execution was asked by deputy public defenders Kirk Lenhard and George Franzen. But Bishop complains those two are merely trying to further their legal careers by gaining personal publicity to benefit them when they go into private law practice.

He accused them of trying to get him to lie during his penalty hearing to tell the panel of judges that he didn't remember gunning down a Maryland man during a casino holdup in Las Vegas. And he said they tried to get his family to perjure themselves in the hearing.

"The public defenders in Clark County are a bunch of liars and are using unethical tactics. They are wasting thousands of dollars of taxpayers' money."

Bishop has been convicted previously of a long list of robberies and narcotics offenses and he says he knew he would meet a violent death because of his past criminal activities. He refused to say whether he had ever killed another person in addition to his present offense.

Bishop has granted a number of interviews with the news media in Carson City, saying he was ready to die but denying he had any "death wish." He said the "death wish" story has been spread by the public defender's office in Las Vegas.

Bishop, who has spent 20 of his 46 years in prison, says he has always wanted to try everything once and this will be the "ultimate experience."

Asked if he believed in God, he replied, "I believe in Jesse Bishop." Asked he if he believed in a life after death, he answered, "When you're dead, you're dead."

Eight killed as motorhome truck collide

LARAMIE, Wyo. (UPI) — A semi-trailer truck apparently in the wrong lane of an interstate highway under construction smashed head-on into a motor home Wednesday, killing eight persons, a witness said.

The impact killed the truck driver and six persons in the motor home, said medical technician Stan Gibson of the Laramie Fire Department. Another trucker, who was in the sleeping compartment of the truck, died shortly after the accident, he said.

Highway patrol spokesman said another semi-trailer truck may have been involved, but officials did not have details on that report.

The lone survivor, a girl in the motor home, was hospitalized at Laramie for shock and lacerations, Gibson said. The accident happened on Interstate 80 about 50 miles west of Laramie about 6 a.m.

One side of the interstate — a principal east-west route between Chicago and San Francisco — had been closed at accident site, Gibson said. The four-lane highway crosses northern Wyoming with a wide median strip between the two eastbound and two westbound lanes.

"From what we could surmise the highway department, changed it to a two-way traffic lane because they were working on it," Gibson said. "The semi-truck was headed westbound. He went to pass a lady in car, and apparently must have forgot it was two-way traffic. The truck was in the eastbound lane and had a head-on collision with the motor home."

The car the trucker had first passed was forced off the road, he said, but the driver was not injured.

Bundy given new lawyers

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Convicted killer Theodore Bundy, claiming his lawyers were incompetent, will have new defense attorneys Monday for a hearing on a motion for a new trial.

Circuit Judge Edward Cowart has named Clifford Davis of Tallahassee and Brian Hayes of Monticello to handle the pleadings for the former law student, who last month was found guilty and sentenced to die for the slayings of two Florida State University coeds.

Bundy, 32, requested the new attorneys several weeks ago, saying the team of public defenders from Leon County who represented him during his month-long trial in Miami handled the case improperly.

Bundy is being held on Death Row at Florida State Prison.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two earthquakes rated widely separated areas of Southern California Tuesday, even as the Los Angeles City Council was told that a large quake in the region could kill as many as 25,000 persons.

The day began with a light earthquake at Santa Barbara, about 100 miles north of Los Angeles, at dawn. At dusk, a moderate quake shook a large section of Riverside County centered 10 miles southeast of Hemet, a small desert community about 75 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

Meanwhile, Roger Williams, of the city Department of Building and Safety, told a City Council committee that the number of persons that would die in a major quake in a heavily populated area would depend on many factors, including the epicenter and the time of day.

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A mysterious package of radioactive waste found outside the nuclear burial site at Beatty in July, was unattended for more than 20 days, a state official said Tuesday.

But Dr. Bing Oberle, deputy state human resources director, said the public was never in danger at any time from the contents of the box. But Oberle said the handling of the package by Nuclear Engineering Co., which operates the dump site, was "totally unacceptable."

"We're not satisfied with the answers we got and we're continuing our investigation," said Oberle. Nuclear Engineering had conducted its own inquiry but Oberle said he wants some more questions answered.

The package contained a fluid pressure gauge owned by the Olin Corp., of McIntosh, Ala., which had been shipped to Beatty by a company named Kay-Ray of Illinois, which also manufactures gauges.

However the box contained only the address in Beatty and not the required information what was in the shipment.

The information about the shipment was inadvertently sent to Louisville, Ky., headquarters of Nuclear Engineering Co., said Oberle. The truck arrived in Beatty July 2, dropped off the package at a hardware store which was the receiving agent because the dump site was closed down.

When the burial grounds was reopened the package was delivered but rejected because it wasn't properly labeled, said Oberle. It was discovered July 25 in the trailer outside the site by state officials.

Oberle said he will meet with officials of Nuclear Engineering to get them to tighten their procedures for the handling of these types of goods. And he said the company would be given the option of burying the package or sending it back to the shipper.

Food burial halted

TUCSON (UPI) — The Pima County Supervisors Tuesday reversed an earlier decision and will not allow the dumping of $300,000 worth of contaminated food in a county landfill.

Residents of the landfill area protested the burial of the food, contaminated by radioactive tritium from the American Atomics Corp. plant, saying it would pollute underground water sources.

In addition, the state would not assume liability for the dumping, a condition set by the supervisors before they would allow the burial of the food.

The food comes from the central kitchen of the Tucson Unified School District, which is located near the Atomic plant.

Assistant Superintendent H.V. Summers says they will try to find a landfill site in a remote location in order to dispose of the food which health officials claim poses no health hazard if buried.

Secure packing sought for nuclear shipments

WALNUT CREEK (UPI) — Six Oregon holders of federal nuclear licenses who generate nuclear wastes have been warned to take steps assuring that such radioactive material is packed securely for shipping to burial sites.

A U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission spokesman said there are also 10 other license holders in Oregon but they are mainly federal agencies licensed to operate gauges for detecting radioactive materials. They include the Bureau of Land Management and the Fish and Wildlife Service.

The Oregon license holders were alerted as part of a national effort by the NRC that followed complaints by governors of Washington, Nevada and South Carolina about unsafe packaging and shipping of the wastes to their states.

Oregon producers of nuclear waste shipped to burial sites outside the state include the atomic reactors at Trojan power plant at Rainier, Reed College in Portland and Oregon State University in Corvallis. Others are the Veterans Administration Hospital in Portland, the U.S. Bureau of Mines at Albany and occasionally the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's research center laboratory in Corvallis, where tests are run on radioactive wastes with irradiated tracers.

Inmates back in cells

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (UPI) — Some 10 Washington State Penitentiary inmates slept in their cells Tuesday night for the first time in 43 days.

Prison officials escorted the inmates "carefully" and in "small groups" back to the cells in the prison's Eight Wing, where they destroyed over $120,000 worth of toilets and wash basins during a riot July 9.

During the riot, correctional officers swept through the wing, seized the inmates and placed them outside in the prison's "Big Yard," where they had been living ever since in tents.

"It was very peaceful, although some of the prisoners burned jackets and their tents," Dick Paulson, spokesman for the Department of Social and Health Services, said of Tuesday's transfer. He said the process took about four hours.

"They seemed to be in good spirits," prison Superintendent James Spalding said after the inmates returned to their cells.

Paulson said it would take prison employees a day or two to clean up the yard so that other prisoners can use it for recreation. More than $400,000 has been spent to repair and refurbish Eight Wing, he said.

Suit settled out of court

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — An out-of-court agreement has been reached in the first of four lawsuits pending in U.S. District Court in Portland stemming from the crash of a United Airlines DC-8 in Portland last Dec. 23.

Lawyers for the plaintiff, Joseph H. Birley, however, refused to discuss terms of the settlement.

Birley, 48, had asked for $21 million in damages, alleging negligence on the part of the airline, causing the plane to "suffer fuel starvation and to crash while attempting a landing."

Birley was admitted to a Portland hospital and released the morning after the crash which killed 10 other passengers and injured 69.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The proper contract for North-South is five clubs. Because of a preemptive two-spade overcall by West and a poor declaration by North to rebid diamonds, the correct contract was lost. The nine-card club fit was never even mentioned.

Came in hearts was a poor proposition after the diamond lead. South ruffed that opening diamond lead, cashed dummy's ace-queen of hearts and the ace-queen clubs. Now the problem was to hold his losers in the major suits to three.

Superficially, declarer is off only by the ace-queen of spades and one trump trick. At trick six declarer led a club from dummy, overtaking it in the hand and West trumped. The hand was now an open book for West.

West's club declarer had started with 5-5-5 distribution because of the way the hand had been bid and played. Now West found an ingenious way to defeat the contract no matter what declarer's three spades were.

West led a low spade, giving dummy the king of spades! Declarer had no safe way to get out of dummy. Whichever minor suit he chose would promote West's jack of hearts into the setting trick. West would ruff a club lead with his jack and then choose to ruff a diamond. West would overruff with that jack of hearts and still score his ace and queen of spades.

Knight receives six-month jail term

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Indiana University basketball coach Bobby Knight Wednesday was sentenced in San Juan District Court to a maximum fine of $500 dollars and a prison term of six months for hitting a Puerto Rican policeman during a practice session of his U.S. team at last month's Pan American Games.

Knight, who decided not to return to Puerto Rico for the trial, was convicted in absentia on charges of aggravated assault filed by policeman Jose Silva. But he was given until Monday to make a personal appearance in court to ask that the jail sentence be suspended.

If Knight decides to ignore the order, Puerto Rican authorities can send U.S. federal marshals from San Juan to have him arrested and brought to the island to be jailed.

At the opening of Knight's trial Wednesday morning, the three Puerto Rican lawyers who represented the volatile coach at his preliminary hearing and later asked the court to postpone the trial because their client was under "extreme mental pressure" the day his team was playing Puerto Rico for the gold medal, unsuccessfully tried to resign from the case.

Citing "irreconcilable conflicts" with Knight, who he said had insulted the integrity of the Puerto Rican system of justice in several personal and public remarks, attorney Luis Fermin Gonzalez Correa asked Judge George Lopez Keolan to recognize Jorge Loro Longoria as Knight's new lawyer.

But Lopez Keolan refused the request despite several legal precedents quoted by Gonzalez Correa and ordered him and the other members of the original defense team to stay on as auxiliary attorneys.

Lopez Keolan then removed himself from the case, later saying outside the courtroom that he was prejudiced against Knight for breaking his promise to return to Puerto Rico to appear in court.

defense and the prosecution.

According to testimony by Silva, the only one of five scheduled prosecution witnesses called to the stand, Knight hit him on the jaw after he reprimanded the coach for calling members of the Brazilian women's basketball team "dirty whores," apparently for making too much noise and disturbing the concentration of his players.

Silva said he asked Knight his name to report him to the Pan Am Games Organizing Committee and then, as he was writing down Knight's name, he said the 38-year-old coach hit him.

When Silva, a first-year law student, told him he was under arrest, Knight allegedly said, "To hell with you. Get your ass out of here."

Under oath, Silva said he followed Knight to the other side of the high school gym where the U.S. team was practicing July 3 and after grabbing Knight by the elbow, was told, "take your dirty hands off me, nigger." Silva is a light-skinned black.

As its only witness, the defense called Lt. Julio Ortiz

Santiago, who filled out the original complaints at the police station and he confirmed there were other potential witnesses for Knight who could have given a different story but that they could not come to Puerto Rico to testify.

In closing arguments, the defense said the complaint made no mention of obscene language although U.S. District Attorney Juan Burnet countered by saying the complaint was only a "synthesis" of the incident.

Silva, who pursued the case as private citizen when the police department refused to back him, left the courtroom immediately after the sentence was pronounced and made no comment.

Knight was not immediately available for comment and there were reports that he was on a recruiting mission on the West Coast.

Gonzalez Correa, who says he "can't understand why I'm still on the case," said the defense team will now telephone Knight's personal lawyer, Clarence Domingar, in Indianapolis to inform him of the verdict and "we will work from there."

Thompson Memorial golf event set today

By RANDY FREY
Times-News sports writer

SUN VALLEY — Danny Thompson was an infidel's infidel. Not a big man, he made up for his lack of size with determination and became one of the steadiest shortstops in the American League.

Thompson would probably still be knocking down baseballs today had it not been for the mysterious disease of leukemia. That disease took Thompson from the baseball world three years ago at the ripe age of 28.

Thompson knew for several years that he was going to die, but he kept on playing as if nothing was wrong. In the back of his mind he was praying that a miracle breakthrough would occur — and the disease possibly conquered.

Although Thompson is gone, former teammate and Idaho native Harmon Killebrew is carrying out Thompson's prayers with the annual Danny Thompson Memorial Golf Tournament set for today through Saturday at Elkhorn Golf Course in Sun Valley. Tee off times are 7:30 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Killebrew and business partner Ralph Harding started the tournament three years ago with a goal of raising money for leukemia research. Last year the tournament raised $42,000, and this year Killebrew says $50,000 is the goal.

Celebrities are paying $400 apiece to play in the tournament, which begins today with a practice round. There also will be receptions and dinners, which anyone can attend by contributing $50-$100 to the Danny Thompson-Leukemia-Research Fund.

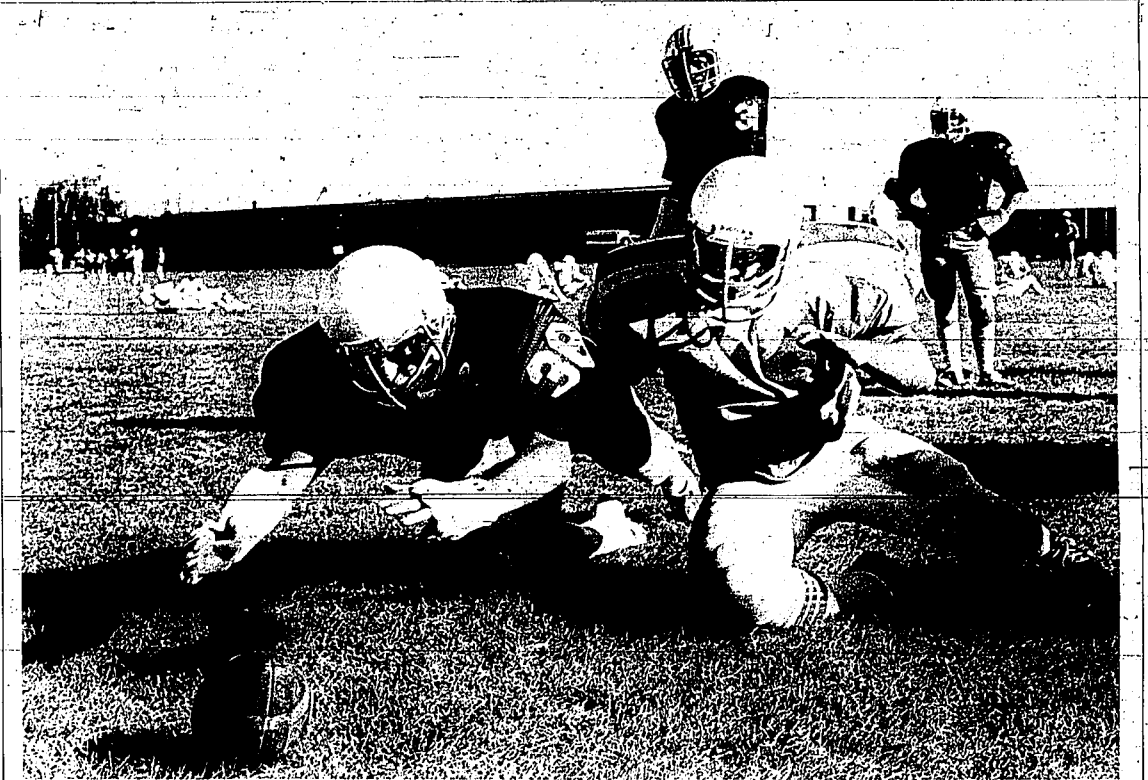

Among this year's celebrities will be several great athletes, a host of politicians and numerous entertainment stars.

Killebrew will be joined by fellow baseball greats Hank Aaron and Eddie Matthews. All three have hit more than 500 lifetime home runs, with Aaron the all-time major league baseball home run leader.

All-Pro basketball players Austin Carr, Artis Gilmore and Cazelle Russell will be on hand as well as former football greats George Blanda and Darryl Lamontica.

Former President Gerald Ford heads the list of golfing politicians, and will be joined by Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill, Republican Minority Leader John Rhodes, Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus, three senators and 20 congressmen.

Entertainment stars will include Clint Eastwood, Telly Savalas and Claude Akins.

Ready for action

There's a look of determination in the eyes of 52 Twin Falls High School varsity football hopefuls as the Bruins head into their second week of practice. Chasing down a loose football in a reaction drill, toughing it out in blocking practice, or sweating under the hot summer sun during spring — they are all a part of the Bruins' daily grind. New head coach Bill Jones' team will open its season against the Borah Lions at Boise Thursday, Sept. 6, and then will return home for three straight contests in Bruin Stadium — Sept. 14 against Skyline, Sept. 21 with Minico and Sept. 28 against Boise.

Joggers beware of imposter running shoes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of running experts warned Wednesday that "cheap imposter" running shoes sold by Sears, J.C. Penney, Thom McAn and the Foot Locker transmit so much shock to the body they can cause injuries.

Dr. Joe Ellis, a La Jolla, Calif., podiatrist who studied the shoes for "Running Times" Magazine, said the Sears "Runner," the J.C. Penney "Olympics," the Thom McAn "Joe" and shoes sold by the Foot Locker chain scored lowest in specially designed tests.

Ellis tested 120 pairs of shoes by wiring runners to determine the shock and gravity force they were subject to while jogging.

The results, tabulated by computer at the University of California in San Diego, showed "chances of getting an injury in what we term the cheap imposter shoes were up to 80 percent," Ellis told a news conference.

He said when a shoe is repeatedly at the bottom on performance tests, "that shoe is going to cause more injuries."

Casual runners who wear cheap shoes run an even higher risk of injury, Ellis said, noting that 22 percent of all runners eventually suffer injuries related to it.

Sears spokesman said the company was not aware of the "Running Times" test, but its own field tests "found that Sears jogging shoes are highly suitable for the purpose for which they were designed, and have reduced leg and foot problems." The spokesman added, "You might be able to get a pair of shoes for $80 that might be better."

The survey gave top rating to five running shoes — New Balance 620 and Nike Daybreak for men and Nike-Liberator, New Balance 620W and Nike "Tempests" for women.

The same top rating went to five racing shoes — Adidas TRX Competition and New Balance Comp 100 for men, and Adidas TRX Competition, New Balance Comp 100 and Nike Challenger for women.

Ed Ayres, editor of the magazine, said the top-rated shoes sell in the $50 range, and "I don't know a single running shoe I could recommend in the $10 range."

He said half to two-thirds of the shoes tested were "somewhat on the low side" to very much on the low side in terms of protection.

Ayres criticized the U.S. Olympic Committee for allowing J.C. Penney to use the five-ring Olympic insignia on its shoes.

"A company which uses the Olympic insignia on its product should be selling a product which is high in quality and which is comparable to the kinds of products that Olympic athletes could use," Ayres said.

Ellis said the amount of shock registered on runners wearing the four lowest-rated brands of jogging shoes was similar to the force a person would get with plain tennis shoes. He said that is not much different than running barefoot.

Lack of experience should hold Redskins back in pack

Editor's note: Another in a series of NFL sizeups. The Washington Redskins

CARLSLE, Pa. (UPI) — Only those within the Washington Redskins' immediate family will predict anything approaching last year's 8-8 record.

There are just too many players with question marks hanging over their heads.

There is a lack of experience. Only four players remain from the 1972 team which went to the Super Bowl.

Special teams, a Redskin trademark, are sold.

Mark Moseley will kick long, straight field goals with remarkable consistency.

Punter Mike Bragg has had just two punts blocked in seven seasons and put 52 kicks out of bounds inside the 20-yard line over the last two years.

Those two are fixtures. Other positions are not that well set, however.

The receiver are questionable. Tight end Jean Fugett has never shown the ability some feel he has. Wide receivers Ricky Thompson, John McDaniel and Terry Anderson are only adequate and all three joined the Redskins following training camp last year.

There several running backs in camp but John Higgins is the established No. 1. Higgins gained 1,084 yards last season, getting at least 100 yards in 13 of 16 games. The others can only envision such statistics.

Tony Green, a Pro Bowl kick returner a year ago as a rookie, could help at running back but his size (5-foot-9, 185 pounds) makes him suspect over the long haul.

The offense revolves around the genius of assistant coach Joe Walton.

"He's the best offensive coordinator in football," said Thelmann. "He put the system together for our personnel and when we had that personnel on the field last year, we were moved the ball well. Injuries killed us,

Coch. Jack Pardee agreed.

"We were hurt last year by injuries (only nine players, six in defense, started all 16 games). We win some close games early, when we were healthy. Later, we lost some close games because we weren't physically able to do more."

He also puts a great deal of responsibility on Thelmann's shoulders.

"Our percentage passing must improve. We need to be able to control the ball better, both passing and running," said Pardee. "We have the home run threats on both offense and defense, but we need to control the ball."

"Last year, we didn't know who would be our quarterback. We know more now. If Joe plays like we expect, we need to eliminate most of the bad plays. We need to cut down on the sacks and improve our percentage."

On defense, there are even bigger question marks.

Mark Murphy gets a chance to start at safety after three years playing behind Jake Scott. The other spots are solid — Lemar Parrish and Joe Lavender at the corners with Ken Houston at safety — so Murphy could round out the strongest area on the team.

Brad Dusek on the left side and Harold McClinton in the middle are back at linebacker. Pete Wysocki, a special teams standout for five years, gets a shot at the right side spot vacated by the release of Chris Hanburger.

Pardee has 12 linebackers in camp — quantity, but not necessarily quality.

"We have to find out if we have enough good linebackers to play the 3-4 defense or if we have to stay with a four-man front and stunt a lot," said Pardee.

Up front, end Karl Lorch and tackle Dave Butz are set — and solid. A variety of faces will join them, though.

The other end could be Coy Bacon, an excellent pass rusher, or Joe "Turkey" Jones, a veteran picked up from Cleveland. At tackle, young Perry Brooks was fighting to stay ahead of 14-year veteran Diron Talbert, who is coming off knee surgery. Brooks, however, suffered a ruptured biceps tendon in a scrimmage and won't be ready opening day.

With the usual two games against Dallas, Philadelphia, the New York Giants and St. Louis, plus deals with all-four teams in the rugged AFC Central Division, repeating last year's break-even season will be a difficult assignment.

"We'll be better than we were the second part of last season (2-8 after a 6-0 start)," vowed Pardee.

Rupert ladies lead golf

TWIN FALLS — Rupert has taken a slim lead in the Magle Valley Ladies Inter-City golf competition with Canyon Springs golfers right behind.

The leaders have racked up 56 points with Canyon Springs very close at 54 points. Burley is next with 50½ points, followed by Jerome (49½), Twin Falls Municipal (48½), Blue Lakes Country Club (48½), Buhl (30½) and Gooding (27½).

Last tournament was held in Burley, with home golfer Lori Wegvert firing an 81 to take low honors. Teammate Cateen Johnson was next at 82, with Rupert's Penny Jones and Lucille Milton tied for third at 87.

Elva Felton of Canyon Springs was the net winner with a 67. Next competition will be Sept. 11 at Blue Lakes Country Club.

Lee surgery successful

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Cleveland guard Butch Lee underwent successful surgery for partial removal of damaged cartilage in his right knee and is expected to be out at least two months, the Cavaliers announced Wednesday.

"With his great attitude and his positive thinking, we know that Butch will be back as soon as he can," Cleveland player-personnel director Jimmy Rodgers said.

Named UPI college player of the year in 1978, Lee led Marquette University to its NCAA championship in his junior year and was a consensus all-American as a senior.

Maryland loses running back

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) — George Scott, who was to have been Maryland's top running back this fall and who pleaded no contest to a pair of drug charges, has been dismissed from school for academic reasons.

Terraphin Coach Jerry Claiborne said Wednesday that Scott "did not pass enough courses in summer school to remain in school this fall." The junior from Inwood, N.Y., did not contest the charges of possession of marijuana and cocaine in an appearance in Prince George's County District Court.

Scott, who missed the 1978 season because of a stress fracture of the right leg, rushed for 369 yards as a freshman and 894 as a sophomore. He told the Washington Post he plans to remain in the area and get his degree.

Turner back with Bengals

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Running back David "Deacon" Turner, who quit the Cincinnati Bengals for unexplained reasons at the start of training camp this summer, returned to the club Wednesday.

Turner, the Bengals' second-round draft choice out of San Diego State last year, wound up as the club's third most productive running back with 333 yards in 84 carries, a 3.9 yard average last year. He romped for 116 yards against the San Diego Chargers.

Gilliam beating drug-related

TOWSON, Md. (UPI) — A white powder found in the apartment of former Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Joe Gilliam after he was beaten at a city intersection earlier this week was identified by police Wednesday as a substance commonly mixed with narcotics.

The attack on Gilliam is being investigated by Baltimore police as being possibly drug-related. He was pulled from his car Monday by four men and beaten over the head.

The white powder found in Gilliam's Baltimore County apartment was chemically analyzed and county police said that although it was not an illegal or controlled drug substance, it is commonly used to reduce the potency of narcotics like heroin or cocaine.

One of the two men charged in the assault was found to be carrying a "sizeable quantity" of heroin and marijuana at the time of his arrest, police said. Timothy Matthews, 19, of Baltimore, was charged with attempted murder and possession of marijuana and heroin.

Matthew's younger brother, 18-year-old Warren, was charged with assault and malicious destruction of property.

New records no big deal for Sutton

©1979 Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — In the bottom of the seventh, the relay went from Dick Tidrow to Barry Foote to Joe Ferguson to Tom Lasorda to Don Sutton.

It was the "fourth out" of the inning. The third out had been Ivan DeJesus' first strikeout-of-the-game and Sutton's 2,500th strikeout of his career.

As the historic ball was being rolled or tossed from hand to hand, Sutton was at the water cooler in the visitors' dugout at Wrigley Field. Because Sutton sets a pitching record in one category or another every other week or so, he had not given a thought to 15th place on the all-time list of strikeout pitchers. The rangy right-hander had come to Wrigley Field Tuesday morning with victory on his mind: He was 10-12, a record of a kind to which he is not accustomed.

As the sun was going down beyond the west stands in late afternoon,

Sutton had 11 wins, exactly 2,500 strikeouts — and 15th place — just between Don Drysdale (16) and Christy Mathewson (14). Don had been removed from the game, going into the Cubs' ninth, on his own recommendation, but he had hung around to watch his Dodger teammates beat the Cubs, 4-2. He still was hanging around 20 minutes later.

He is a class act, this reformed country boy who has broken most of the Dodger records that were set by Sandy Koufax or Don Drysdale. He was, in no hurry to walk through the maze-like tunnel behind the dugout, leaning his elbow or his shoulder up in the trainer's room obviously was not something he considered urgent.

He sat on the bench at the far end of the dugout, bantering with writers and sportscasters, amiably answering the same questions over and over, savoring not so much his latest accomplishment but the comedic aspects of the afternoon.

In the sixth inning Herman Franks, the agitator who manages the Cubs, requested the umpires to search Sutton for foreign substances. There was the usual charade at the ground, involving umpires Terry Tata and John Kilber, for the prosecution, and Sutton, for the defense.

Sutton's glove was wiped down with a towel. He was asked to wipe off his hands with the same towel and he complied. Then he took the towel and mopped off his face. "That was for me," he said of the facial. "I was warm out there. The umpires wanted me to wipe off my hands because I had been the batter in the on-deck circle when our inning ended. I had pine tar on my hands. I still have pine tar on my hands."

The great pitcher presented his palms for inspection. Pine tar, sure enough.

Had Franks' ploy bothered him? "I'd do the same thing that Franks did," he said. "He was trying to help his club. I'm at the stage of my career where something like that is not going to fluster me. There was a time when it would have flustered me."

Veterans object to All hospital visit canceled

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Veterans of the Vietnam War protested Wednesday after a visit to the facility of the Veterans of Foreign Wars was canceled. The group, who received more than a dozen letters from sponsors of the tour, said they would travel to Connecticut to protest. The group will visit the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C., on Friday. The group is led by Col. Robert D. Hines, a Vietnam War veteran. Hines and his wife, Betty, are the only living members of the group. Hines was drafted in 1967 and served in Vietnam. He was killed in action in 1968. His wife, Betty, was also drafted and served in Vietnam. She was killed in action in 1968. The group is the only living members of the group.

Supreme Court. Hines said the hospital's governing board decided unanimously to call off the visit after learning of the patients' objections. "We just thought it was overall best to cancel it and not to get into any kind of internal schism over the matter," he said. Arnold Beizer, who is planning the visit, said the children's hospital sent the boxer a telegram inviting him to visit. "Muhammad had been at the children's hospital 10 years ago and the children loved him," he said. All was to arrive at Bradley International Airport in Windsor Locks Thursday evening and then motorcade to Hartford.

Watson defends Hall of Fame title

PINEHURST, N.C. (UPI) — Tom Watson, way ahead on this year's PGA money list, enthusiastically opens defense of his Hall of Fame Golf Classic title today over the restored Pinehurst Country Club's famed No. 2 course. "I love the golf course," Watson said before Wednesday's pro-am. "This is a course you can play every day and not get tired of it." A four-time winner this year, Watson has reason to be optimistic as the $250,000 event begins. He won the 1978 tournament with a 7-under-par 277 total. "But the course is different this year. A program to restore it to its original design is near completion. The greens have been changed from bent grass to Bermuda, and many of the sand traps, which were changed to grass over the years, have been restored. Many of the golfers said the course is in ideal shape for low scoring this year, because the Bermuda grass has not been in place long enough to become firm and well-placed approach shots were holding on the greens. Larry Nelson, second on the money list with $238,505 after winning two tournaments, predicted the changes will not adversely affect scoring. "If you're going to try to shoot a low score, this is the time to do it," he said, noting that it will probably be more difficult to score once the Bermuda grass is established. "The fairways are good. They are perfect," said Nelson, winner of the Inverrary Classic and Western Open. Less than half of the top 20 money-winners on the tour have entered the tournament, which is losing its sponsor after this year, but the top three — Watson, Nelson and Andy Bean — assure stiff competition for the $45,000 winner's check.
