

Carter debates anti-inflation tax cut in 1980

© The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — While rejecting any additional stimulus for the economy now, President Carter's top advisers have started to discuss elements of an "anti-inflation tax cut" for 1980 in case the recession gets worse than they expect.

Officially, Carter has ruled out any request for lower taxes when Congress reconvenes after Labor Day, and his aides say it is four months too soon to make a decision on a tax cut for next year.

Cabinet-level advisers, however, have been discussing two major types of tax reductions that they feel would perk up a sagging economy and still contribute to the fight against inflation.

One approach would be to lower Social Security payroll taxes. This would increase the average American's buying power and simultaneously reduce the cost of doing business for nearly every firm.

A second approach would be to channel business tax cuts to increase investment in new equipment on the theory that this would lower unit production costs and perhaps prices.

In any event, Carter faces a dilemma in January when he must decide whether to wage the fight against inflation with a balanced budget and no tax cut or step up the government's attack on the recession through lower taxes or some other type of economic stimulation.

If the recession is more severe than the mild dip now anticipated by the administration, it would wreck Carter's chances of balancing the budget, a cherished political goal. Federal spending on jobless benefits, welfare and food stamps rises along with the unemployment rate.

But Carter also runs the risk that a tax cut would counter inflation but add to it by giving consumer spending and business investment an unneeded shot in the arm.

"My personal feeling is that if it were a choice between presenting a balanced budget or presenting a tax cut, he'd be better off, politically speaking, presenting a balanced budget," one top adviser told the Los Angeles Times.

"It would basically mean postponing a tax cut for a year to present a balanced budget in January," the adviser said.

But the adviser, who asked not to be identified, said it might be necessary to have a tax cut early next year to get the economy out of the recession. If the current forecasts prove to be too optimistic, Carter's dilemma — and the nation's — was outlined by Lyle Gramley, a member of the president's Council on Economic Advisers, in an interview.

"We've got an inflation rate that was being aggravated in the first half of this year by rapidly rising energy prices and rapidly rising food prices, and a run-up in mortgage interest rates," Gramley said.

"The energy prices rise, particularly, has a dual effect. It not only accelerates the inflation rate, but it also slows economic growth by draining consumer purchasing power."

"Other countries around the world face this same dilemma. If you take steps to prevent the effect of rising energy prices from getting into the inflation rate, you worsen your problems, slowing growth and potentially raising unemployment."

"If you move to try and offset the effects on growth and unemployment, then you aggravate the inflation rate."

"There just isn't any satisfactory way to deal with this problem."

Secretary of the Treasury G. William Miller said, however, that the dilemma is not as acute because the business slump appears to be relatively mild.

"While the recession is here, so far it hasn't become very pervasive or very deep," Miller said in an interview. "The recession is being seen in limited sectors — such as autos — and limited regions."

Supporting Carter's decision to defer a tax-cut decision, Miller said: "It would be wise to be cautious about any action that would stimulate the economy, because the last thing this country could afford is to be pushed toward another round of inflation."

Participatory television

Qube may be the tube of the future

By TOM ZITO

COLUMBUS, Ohio — It's 7 p.m., the dishwasher is humming, the lawn has been trimmed, the dog has been fed, the kids are out of their sneakers and tonight's guest on "Someone Wants to Know" is Takashi Suetune, from NHK-TV, Japan's equivalent to the ABC television network.

Suetune is sitting in a television studio with a potential live audience of about 90,000. He's come here to sample American attitudes toward Japan.

"Do you think most Japanese believe in hara-kiri?" he asks this town that demographically epitomizes middle America, a place populated by more trial tubes of iodine per capita than any other burg in the nation.

In the studio, a mere 150 people are responding. But scattered throughout Columbus are 23,000 households equipped with paperback-sized computer terminals whose five black buttons allow viewers to answer back at the TV. Twenty seconds pass and the results are displayed on the screen: Only 12 percent of middle America believes that the Japanese still commit hara-kiri.

Next question: When you think of Japan, do you think about geisha girls (button number one) or 35 millimeter cameras (button two)? The computer in the studio spins its tapes. And the Nikons have it over the girls 85 percent to 35.

Then the inquiries get personal, and the program host reminds viewers that no record is kept of responses by individual households. "Do you think the Japanese are sneaky or treacherous?" Button one is yes, two is no. Touch now. Twenty seconds. Twenty-eight percent say yes, 60 percent no, and 12 percent are undecided.

polling, however, is only one aspect of the system. Thirteen white buttons on the home computer unit summon up the 30 channels of Qube's "menu card." One enter is "Talent Search," a song show that jets the viewer into cut the raspberries.

Host Flippo the Clown introduces a fellow who claims to be the greatest escape artist since Houdini, immobilized in chains and locks. Click. The clock allows 40 seconds before viewers can begin to vote, either to continue this guy's act or cut the aspiring Houdini off the screen.

BZZZZT! Which is exactly what happens, after one minute and 20 seconds. Junior is nearly in tears: "I'm getting it, I'm getting it," he's secretating, even as they're sending him behind a curtain.

"Qube is the logical place for television to go. How much more local can you get than an individual household?"

After a year and a half of operation, these tobbles of the nation's first viewer-responsive TV system seem less and less representative of its overall promise.

Qube is growing up. This month for instance — in addition to a full range of entertainment and educational fare — subscribers can exercise an option to have Qube-based burglar and fire alarm service installed in their homes. Home energy-management programs are in the planning stages, and the future may include information retrieval, electronic banking, and perhaps even voting through the family television set. All this is beyond Qube's present standard offerings of town meetings, book discussion groups, public hearings and instant polls like the one displayed on NBC immediately following President Carter's God Bless America speech.

"Qube," says Gustaf, chief chairman of the system's parent company Warner Cable, "is the logical place for television to go. Market surveys are showing the trend in magazines and books is to smaller audiences with specialized interests." "I suspect that going to the true of television, too — and how much more local can you get than an individual household?"

Indeed, in the past 10 years there has been a resounding acceptance of cable television. The first step toward personalized TV viewing, Twenty percent of American televisuch an interview," a department spokeswoman said in Washington.

But the interview never took place, she said, and the Soviets defied the agreement by whisking Ms. Vlasova aboard the jet, which was scheduled to take off at 5 p.m. Friday.

"The circumstances under which she boarded the plane . . . certainly raises questions about the voluntariness of her departure," the spokeswoman said.

In New York, Donald McHenry, the deputy U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, was asked if the ballerina could be considered in Soviet custody after her husband defected. "I don't think you could call it custody, but she was not walking around free in the streets of New York," he replied.

The Soviets refused to let Ms. Vlasova leave the plane, which was parked at Gate 10 of the Pan American terminal at Kennedy Qube works through the wiring system installed in Columbus by Warner Cable. In the 37,000-household cable system here, there are 23,000 Qube subscribers who pay an additional $3.45 monthly for 10 extra free channels of programming and the access to 10 special pay-per-view channels.

Qube subscribers say they have become used to test-market offerings, enjoy novelty items, find that Qube does indeed provide a voice for the Silent-Majority: say they watch more television, see more movies and go out less. One detractor claims that Qube's local coverage remains too provincial and amateurish, and she has cancelled.

Two days before death

U.S. Supreme Court stays Bishop sentence

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — The scheduled Monday execution of Jesse W. Bishop, a convicted murderer who wants to die in the Nevada gas chamber, was halted Saturday by a stay issued by U.S. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist.

Bishop, who got the news in Carson City at a meeting of the Nevada Pardons Board, said, "I expected something like this."

He showed no emotion and added that he expected the stay "to be ruled unconstitutional."

In issuing the stay of execution, Rehnquist instructed lawyers to file papers responding to six questions.

They concerned whether a court should now determine Bishop's present mental competency to waive his rights to appeal and whether the lawyers who sought the stay have a right to be heard in the case.

Bishop has disavowed all attempts to halt his execution and has dismissed papers filed in his behalf as "trash." His relatives have refused to intervene.

Efforts to prevent the gassing have been conducted by two public defenders who were appointed by a court "to stand by" when Bishop insisted on pleading guilty to murder. They argued they have a special obligation as attorneys to fight for Bishop's life.

At the pardons board meeting, Bishop said these efforts "prolong the suffering of myself and my family. They are in direct violation of my rights."

Bishop said his execution was inevitable, and called his uncertainty about when he will die "cruel and inhumane punishment" and "a miscarriage of justice."

However, while he won't beg and snivel for a commutation to life imprisonment, he said "I will accept it. I'm not a madman trying to make someone kill me."

The pardons board asked Bishop what he would like to do if he were released, and he answered, "It's very doubtful I would change my life style, unless somebody can come up with a mind bending drug."

Bishop describes himself as "a professional gunman" all his adult life. He was sentenced to death for a fatal shooting during a $238 holdup in 1977 of a Las Vegas casino.

If he is executed in the near future, he would be first to die in the Nevada gas chamber in 18 years and only the third in the nation since 1967.

Deputy Nevada Attorney General Ed Taylor predicted the stay of execution would be set aside and said Bishop then would be immediately flown to a Las Vegas court to reset the date for his death.

The public defenders, who have been joined by the American Civil Liberties Union, contend that before Bishop can be executed, a court must make a formal finding that he is presently mentally competent.

The last such finding was in January, 1978. He was examined last week by a psychiatrist retained by the state of Nevada, but he has refused to see specialists representing the public defenders.

A prison official, according to the ACLU, has said that for "the last two weeks, Bishop has been living on enough tranquilizers to knock you or me out."

After a three-hour hearing, the Nevada Pardon Board rejected a plea by the ACLU for commutation of Bishop's sentence.

Gov. Robert List, board chairman, said he was convinced Bishop did not have a "death wish." He said Bishop is displaying a "Machio desire to go like a man. Underneath, he would like to have relief from his pain."

A lower court earlier Saturday found Bishop competent to waive his right to a stay of execution. Page A2.

Defector's wife aboard

Soviet plane still grounded

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United States accused the Soviets Saturday of whisking the wife of a defecting Soviet ballet star aboard an airliner now being held on the ground at Kennedy Airport in defiance of an agreement that she would not return to Moscow until American officials interviewed her.

The blue and white Aeroflot jet had been grounded for more than 24 hours and the State Department said the plane would not leave until Ms. Ludmila Vlasova, the wife of defecting Bolshoi Ballet star Aleskandr Godunov, voluntarily returned to her home.

Godunov, 30, defected Wednesday and the State Department said it told the Soviets the next day that the dancer's 36-year-old wife would be barred from leaving the country until interviewed by U.S. officials.

"Soviet officials indicated to the State Department that the Soviets understood it was our right to conduct such an interview," a department spokeswoman said in Washington.

But the interview never took place, she said, and the Soviets defied the agreement by whisking Ms. Vlasova aboard the jet, which was scheduled to take off at 5 p.m. Friday.

"The circumstances under which she boarded the plane . . . certainly raises questions about the voluntariness of her departure," the spokeswoman said.

DETROIT (UPI) — The latest auto industry figures have revealed that more than 75,000 workers have been laid off their jobs.

Sunday briefing

Energy forecast optimistic

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A major new study on America's energy prospects concluded Saturday the nation can tap adequate fuel supplies of its own in coming years and preserve the environment without even giving up dependence on cars.

The National Energy Strategic Project, financed by the Ford and Mellon Foundations, predicted that "one way or another, U.S. personal transportation will continue to be dominated by automobiles."

The optimistic forecast was presented in a 555-page book entitled "Energy in America's Future: The Choices Before Us."

Among the authors' key findings: • The United States could become nearly self-sufficient in energy in a few decades at no more than twice the cost of oil imported in 1978.

• Solar power can have an immediate impact in space and hot water heating and certain farm and factory applications, but research breakthroughs are needed before the sun will produce competitively priced electricity.

• Oil and gas price decontrol and other reforms are critical, although steps may have to be taken to offset the inflation and hardships higher prices cause.

• The cost of synthetic fuels will level off at no more than twice the cost of oil, although they will be imported and will eventually become competitive with oil.

Blame laid for Lance's trouble

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bert Lance was indicted on federal banking law violations because of his efforts to help spendthrift in-laws and to bring prosperity to his hometown, Harper's magazine said Saturday.

An in-depth study of the Lance case, including five volumes of material compiled by government investigators, reveals "a picture not of a man stealing money, but of a man solving problems in highly inventive, possibly illegal ways," reporter-novelist Lt. Davis wrote in the September Harper's.

"Certainly they were unwise. But they worked," Davis said.

Prison guards taken hostage

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Three armed guards were overpowered and taken hostage Saturday in the second floor jail of city hall housing 84 prisoners near Las Vegas' downtown "glitter gulch."

Sharp-shooting SWAT teams with shotguns and rifles blocked entrances and exits to the building, and an ambulance stood by.

All the city's traffic officers abandoned their usual posts and deployed to the city hall area. The facility is located on the Las Vegas "strip" two blocks from the downtown gambling area.

Police did not know if all 84 inmates were actively participating in the uprising.

"In the last telephone contact a spokesman for the prisoners said the hostages were well and unharmed," Lt. J.O. Smith said. He added police were negotiating with the inmates on the phone.

One policeman said that Pat experts have shown the longer something like this goes on without an overt move by either side the better."

Cease fire quickly violated

By United Press International Lebanon announced a cease-fire Saturday to end a week of snelling duels between Palestinian guerrillas and Israel and its Lebanese Christian allies, but less than three hours later Soviet-made Katyusha rockets rained on northern Israel.

Israel responded at once with artillery barrages across the border and announced it was not a party to any truce with Palestinian guerrillas.

Until the scream of rockets split the mid-afternoon lull in the Golan Heights and Western Galilee regions, the cease-fire had appeared to be holding with only sporadic firing. The truce had ended a week of bitter artillery battles in south Lebanon's villages and Palestinian camps. Civilians were the target of most of the explosions.

But Beirut radio said Israel had violated the cease-fire six hours after it was called, opening up with heavy artillery and shelling the coastal city of Tyre and its neighboring villages.

Carter's Chief of Staff, Hamilton Jordan

White House defends Jordan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House says chief of staff Hamilton Jordan is the victim of "false and sensational charges" raised by the owners of a jet-set New York disco club, who claim Jordan peddled cocaine in the club's basement hideaway one night last year.

The Justice Department announced late Friday it has ordered the FBI to "conduct a preliminary investigation" under the Ethics in Government Act, which compels inquiry into complaints of a serious nature lodged against any high government official.

Shortly before midnight Friday, the White House issued a statement defending Jordan — who is trying to shake a reputation for controversy — and questioning the motives of his accusers, who are under criminal indictment.

"This allegation comes from persons indicted and awaiting trial for criminal tax evasion. These criminal defendants have a clear interest in making false and sensational charges in an effort to bargain for leniency."

No evidence of Young bugging

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said he has no evidence Israeli intelligence agents bugged Andrew Young's secret meeting with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"Based on the knowledge I've received, I have no reason to believe the meeting was tapped, bugged or surveilled," Civiletti told reporters Friday night.

There has been speculation Israeli agents planted an electronic listening device in the home of the Kuwaiti ambassador where the secret session was held, then tipped Newsweek Magazine of the meeting. Newsweek's inquiry to the State Department set off further questions that forced Young's resignation.

Country will change name

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe Rhodesia (UPI) — Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa said Saturday his bi-racial cabinet has decided to drop "Rhodesia" from the country's name.

Muzorewa and other internal black politicians wanted the country renamed Zimbabwe, but were persuaded by former prime minister Ian Smith that retaining Rhodesia would give the white minority confidence in the new government.

Killer storm hits Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — A violent rain storm spawned by Typhoon Judy swept through the southern coast of South Korea Saturday, killing at least 39 people.

Police said Sunday that at least 27 persons were missing in the storm and that the number of casualties was sure to go up once communications were re-established with the hard-hit areas.

The rain storm struck along the southern coast causing mudslides, flooding homes, disrupting railroad traffic, flooding rivers, breaking dykes and cutting off communication circuits.

Today's weather Fair skies and 80-degree temperatures persist

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and Gooding-Jerome Areas: Continued fair weather is expected today through Monday. Highs will be in the mid 80s while lows are expected near 50. The hazy outlook through Thursday calls for mostly dry weather with near normal temperatures for good drying conditions. Moderate morning dew is expected. The spraying forecast is for winds 4 to 8 mph during early morning and night time hours increasing to between 8 and 14 mph in the afternoons. Pan evaporation .25 today and Monday. Camas Prairie, Halley and Upper Wood River Valley: Mostly fair weather will continue through Monday. However, there may be isolated afternoon or evening thunderstorms near the mountains. Highs are expected near 80 and lows in the 40s. Synopsis: Weather Service reports say the "splendid summer weekend" will continue through today with sunny skies; mild temperatures and light winds making outdoor activities inviting. Early morning temperatures Saturday were in the mid 40s and 50s except in Stanley where the reading dipped to a frosty 28 degrees. Saturday afternoon readings were mostly in the upper 70s and low 80s. A westerly flow aloft over Idaho has become drier but satellite pictures reveal afternoon clouds appearing, especially over higher mountain areas. Widely scattered showers and thundershowers were forecast for northern Idaho and some isolated afternoon and evening thundershowers may occur in southern Idaho in the next two days. However, little change in the weather pattern is expected through Monday. Some bands of clouds will cross the state, especially to the north, but temperatures are expected to remain unchanged.

Erin Moriarty, 27, a lawyer and host of "Columbus Alive"—Qube's answer to the "Today Show"—says, "It hits you that you can really communicate with people. You can turn to a TV audience and say, 'Do you understand this...and get a response!'" Moriarty herself was chosen as a TV host through auditions judged by Qube viewers.

Talk-show host Tom Snyder, who used the system on his show following the Carter speech, notes that although the Qube network is an unscientific sampling, its result tracked within one percent of NBC's statistically valid survey conducted the following day. Food and Drug Administration head Donald Kennedy, who held public hearings on truth-in-labeling regulations over the Qube network, says that the experience seemed like the first hearing in which households and not lobbyists were providing the real input.

Says talk-show host Phil Donahue: "Think of the consequences. Would you believe a politician getting up there and asking, 'Do you believe me?'"

Qube's program director is almost as remarkable as the system itself. Scott Kurmit, a New Yorker who at 25 came to the system in June from a career in public TV at Boston's WGBH. "The one thing that public TV taught me in preparation for this job was: Serve the audience and don't care about huge numbers," Kurmit says. "This goes one step beyond: Help the audience to tell you what to serve them. Just think of the potential: Buddy Hackett is really hot on the Johnny Carson show, and Johnny turns to the camera and says, 'Should he stay on-longer?' And in 20 seconds he knows if he should bring out another guest or stick with Hackett!"

Kurmit cites some of the 20-month-old system's highlights:

- A Ralph Nader talk on consumer rights resulted in 700 volunteers whose names and phone numbers on a computer printout were handed to Nader after he walked out of the TV studio.
- Rock musician Todd Rundgren went through a live performance, asking the audience to criticize the show and help him reorder his concert format.
- Qube viewers held their own Academy Awards, rarely agreeing with the Hollywood picks.
- With a choreographer, Qubers designed a dance.
- A town meeting on rezoning was designed so that only Qube subscribers in the district under discussion could vote on the issues.

Qube subscribers were used to help pick covers for Us magazine and to choose between different TV trailers for the film "China Syndrome."

Even with 30 channels, Qube is already almost saturated with programming, and operators are starting video tapes 2,500 times a month.

Defector's wife, Ludmilla, may never see him again

Dancer considered a rebel by Soviets

Daily Telegraph, London
MOSCOW — The Soviet Union has reacted to the loss of one of the nation's top ballet dancers with total silence.

No mention was made by the news media on Friday of the defection of Alexander Godunov, one of the most outstanding of the Bolshoi's principal dancers.

The defection in New York of the tall, blond, 29-year-old Godunov is a major loss to his company.

By coincidence, two U.S. embassy diplomats called on Soviet cultural officials in Moscow on Friday to bring them: the latest reviews from the New York press of the Bolshoi performance there.

Some of the reviews contained praise and pictures of Godunov, but the fact that he had just defected was never mentioned at the meeting.

With foreign news broadcasts heard regularly in Moscow, it is hard to believe that the news had not reached those interested in ballet and the arts.

But it could be weeks before the defection is officially reported, and when it is, it is likely to be in the form of a character assassination of a man who decided to follow the path of Rudolf Nureyev, Mikhail Baryshnikov and Natalia Makarova.

Godunov's defection did not come as a great surprise to Moscow's ballet world, and it was perhaps more surprising that the KGB secret police took the risk of allowing him out of the country.

He had gained a reputation of being a rebel, was known to have been disappointed in not getting the same degree of official acclaim as other leading dancers, and had threatened to resign 18 months ago when a foreign travel ban was imposed on him.

He had also expressed dissatisfaction about the roles being offered him. But he recently built up a tremendous reputation as Tebal in a new Bolshoi production of Romeo and Juliet, the part he was dancing in New York.

Judging by past behavior, Soviet authorities can be expected to prevent him ever seeing his wife or other members of his family again as a warning to others to stay in the fold.

The new 24-hour radio station

A welcome newcomer has been added to the Magic Valley air waves.

The new 24-hour radio station probably won't be the latest thing-for-disco-dancing, but it will certainly help farmers and those who work and play outdoors.

It is the local station of the National Weather Service and can be reached with a multi-band radio or special weather band radio, which can cost as little as $10 to $15.

Friday, officials from the Boise weather service headquarters dedicated the station and showed it off to the public. It is located northeast of Kimberly and reaches most parts of the Magic Valley on a frequency of 162.4 megahertz.

The station will help replace the loss of the agricultural meteorologist, who was formerly stationed at Kimberly. The position was lost due to budget cutbacks mandated by the Idaho Legislature this year.

The agricultural meteorologist developed extra forecasts and information of special interest to farmers.

Presently, only weatherman Bill Galkin mans the weather service post.

The new radio station won't take the place of a second weatherman, but it will provide up-to-date information. The service operates and programs the station from Boise with eight or nine separate reports that repeat regularly.

The station is capable of warning residents of oncoming storms, and sometimes the information could be broadcast 30 minutes beforehand.

That advance warning could have been enough time to have helped farmers somewhat during the recent hailstorm, which caused millions of dollars of damage in three counties.

Those repressive sports

WASHINGTON — The World Council of Churches, a purportedly religious and relentlessly political organization, is famous for both the intensity and selectivity of its indignation. It is quite polite in dealing with Communist governments, but catalogues 116 varieties of "repression" in Latin America, including a form of "cultural repression" described thus:

"Distraction of public opinion by means of football, sports events, etc. to inhibit attention to the grave problems of the community."

This calls to mind the Irish politician who, in 1828, assured voters he would tell them of 500 grievances "which they had previously known—nothing about." Compare the WCC's concern about repressive football with this cheerful assessment, in a WCC document, of the Soviet Union:

"From the day of its inception the Soviet state has attached great importance to the question of political rights... (which are) guaranteed by the right to vote and the right to stand for election."

Recently the WCC has gone from "widespread ineligibility" subsidizing terrorist organizations, such as the one that killed 35 members of missionary families in Rhodesia. Fortunately, a counterattack against the WCC has begun.

Ernest Lefever of Georgetown University has written a history of the WCC's slide into "leftist extremism." And Edward Norman, author of Peter and Paul and lecturer in history at Cambridge University, in "Christianity and the World Order" (Oxford University Press), has dissected the theology that underlies the politicization of religion.

As Norman says, the history of European politics since Constantine's conversion is a history of Christian involvement in politics. But the "politicization" of religion is different. It is the reduction of religion to social morality. As Norman says, "modern Church leaders are at variance from traditional religious doctrine." But they are ferocious when it comes to departures from the orthodoxy of the left on political questions.

Today's controversy is not about "quietism" versus "activism" in Christian life. It is not about whether Christians may be politically active, or whether they should inform their actions. Of course they may; of course it should. But Christians have identified, in good faith, with a wide variety of regimes and causes.

Christ was, to say no more, impatient with this world, and he urged his followers to have only provisional attachment to any part of it, including any regime or social system.

This does not mean that Christianity is "inherently" revolutionary, or that Christians can casually undertake or underwrite upheavals.

Revolutionaries usually invest in politics a kind of expectation that Christians consider not just unrealistic but unseemly, even impious. The first Christian insisted that there were things his followers should render unto Caesar. And when Peter enjoined the faithful to "fear God, honor the king," the king, it is well to remember, was Nero.

A permanent purpose of Christianity is to place spiritual distance between its adherents and the culture of the day, any day. As Norman warns, "if the content of Christianity is drained away into the great pool of secular idealism, Christianity may 'identify itself so closely with secular ideas that its fate will be inseparable from theirs.' That is dangerous because 'the orthodoxes of thought within Western liberalism now rise and decline with remarkable rapidity, dragging the perpetual reinterpretation of the content of Christianity along with them.'"

Today a Christian figure familiar in fact and satire is the Trendy Cleric who will join no "progressive" parade pass unjoined. There are many clergymen for whom theological interests are peripheral and political interests are central, or who insist that politics "really" is theology carried on by other means means more "appropriate" to the times.

The WCC is dominated by vaguely religious but intensely political intellectuals who are remote from real political experience. Regarding various theories of "secular redemption," and especially regarding Marxism-Christianity, Norman says, "an extraordinary propensity to regard its own replacements with benign approval."

Because it once was recklessly attacked by the likes of Joe McCarthy, the WCC has enjoyed a kind of "innocence by association," by association, that is, with McCarthy's innocent victims. The WCC somehow has been innocent of wrongdoing. It is no longer.

WASHINGTON — "Sergeant Riley, Fifth Precinct, Homicide Division, please."

"Sergeant, I would like to report a crime. Someone tried to poison my entire family."

"Are you sure?"

"I'm certain. I had my water and food analyzed by a laboratory and they were full of pesticides. Someone dumped the poison in our wells and rivers and not only my loved ones but all our neighbors may be coming at this very moment."

"This is serious. Anybody have any grudges against you?"

"No one that I know of. Certainly we do poison us."

"Maybe it's a crazy person who has some beef against the community. We better put out a dogpatrol."

"It's possible, but the person would have to have access to a lot of poison. Our pigs and cows are all sick and our horses are dying too."

"Let me get this straight. You think there is a mass murderer in your neighborhood?"

"Sergeant, I think there is a mass murderer in the county."

"You're not a kook, are you?"

"No, sir. If you check my record I am a very respectable person and have never been in trouble with the law.

"Okay, do you have suspects?"

"Well, the Frankenstein Chemical Co. is about two miles from my house and they've been dumping all sorts of sludge in the river."

"Sometimes it's green, sometimes a dark red, and other times it's a deep brown. They do it mostly at night so no one will see them."

"Wait a minute, the Frankenstein Chemical Co. is a multi-million dollar corporation with plants all over the United States. I know the men running the one in this county. They're lodge brothers of mine. Are you accusing them of poisoning people?"

"I know it sounds hard to believe, Sergeant, but I have this niece who works in the company's office and she has memos signed by two of the officers instructing the Frankenstein employees to dump all the waste in the river at night. The memos say that if anyone questions them about it to deny they did it, because if they get caught Frankenstein will have to close down the plant and they'll all be out of jobs."

"So what's the crime?"

"They're knowingly poisoning all of us. Isn't that a felony?"

"No, that's an environmental problem."

"Let me ask you something, Sergeant. If someone came into your house and started sprinkling arsenic on your food and fed your dog DDT and poured cyanide into your children's milk, would you arrest him?"

"Damn right I would, and I'd see he got hung up for life."

"What's the difference between that and a company doing the same thing to an entire community?"

"The police only deal with individual crimes. We have no authority to arrest company officials just because they have no way of getting rid of their pesticides."

"Then—you mean—the average citizen has no recourse when a large corporation knowingly tries to kill him?"

"If the government thinks they're doing anything wrong they have ways of punishing people who dump their waste in the wrong place."

"What's the punishment?"

"I think it's a $5,000 fine. It could be less. But you better be careful before you make wild charges such as you have."

"Why?"

"I can arrest you for harassing a respectable business establishment."

A tribute to Gene Gamet and his daughter

Editor, Times-News: A Special Tribute to Gene Gamet and His Daughter. Too often enough words can't be said to thank someone like Gene Gamet and his daughter, Carol Wagstaff. The long hard work they both did this summer shows how good of a coach they both are. Their team came in first place and they also won the city tournament.

It's so nice to see a father and daughter work so hard with these young boys.

It must be very time consuming for both of them to run the Junior League plus be a coach.

From what I understand just for the love of baseball and being with these young boys they do this. They don't get paid for this and they don't want to. They get their enjoyment just being together and with the boys.

Keep up the good work, Gene and Carol.

Looking forward to a great season next summer.

Much ado about a lot

Editor, Times-News: You received a letter recently from a gentleman taking issue with your use of "alot" on the front page. I have studied "alot" and decided it lacks character. It just lies there. However, it can be saved by adding "a," which gives you "alotta," a versatile word—with unlimited possibilities. For example, "alotta bologna," or change the locale or you can have "alotta spaghetti," "alotta cheese," Egypt could be described as "alotta hushbabes," Saudi Arabia as "alotta thievs," Israel as "alotta walling about the P.L.O." Move up to China and you have simply "alotta people." On to Vietnam and you are back to "alotta bologna" or you are back to the Boat—People—who keep chanting "alotta darn water!" Or Hawaii and "alotta pineapple," or if you are interested in the arts, "alotta grass skirts."

Alaska is great for "alottas," "alotta snow, bears, Eskimos, sled dogs, igloos, gold, oil, etc."

On to Washington, D.C. and you're confronted with "alotta hot air," or even Twin Falls, "alotta nonsense."

Inflation's not a tragedy but a crime

©The Los Angeles Times

"A cynical 'each man for himself' becomes the rule of life. But only the most powerful, the most resourceful and unscrupulous of the haves, and all those who pay for their useful work—but don't know how to manipulate money, the elderly who hope to live on what they earned in the past—all those are doomed, suffering an experience of this kind 'pollutes the morale of a nation...'"

I happen to like those words a lot, even though Thomas Mann wrote them about inflation that occurred in Germany more than 30 years ago. I like them because they enlighten the discussion of what's happening to American life with a clarity of emotion and reason that dry statistics never reach. We need the numbers to plot the course of our life's decline, but we need men like Mann to remind us of what the rot of our economy is doing to our souls, and what the pay for not speaking honestly about inflation's victims.

These are hard times—and they're going to get worse. Gasoline costs if a gallon. Houses cost $100,000. But that's only the tip of it. At current inflation rates, a pound of beef will cost $7.50 by 1981, and a gallon of milk, $3.95.

Mann concluded from watching German inflation that inflation was "a tragedy," but it's not. It's a crime, and the victims of it are far from evenly distributed in society. To date we've failed to understand precisely that fact, and we ignore it not just at the peril of greater inflation, but of the collapse of the public.

Last month, a gruesome milestone was reached in the Great Inflation Debacle of the '70s: the number of millionaires in America passed 500,000. Less than a decade ago, there were fewer than 100,000 millionaires in the United States, and inflation alone comes nowhere near explaining how the very richest among us have quintupled their numbers in so incredibly short a time.

In the same period, the average pay of the American factory worker actually declined in real, inflation-adjusted dollars. And the poor—though this should come as no surprise—fared even worse. Ten years ago, the federal poverty level stood at one-half the median American income; today it stands at barely a third. One in four Americans lives below what the government itself calls a "minimum budget."

Two months ago in a commencement address at Yale, John Kenneth Galbraith finally said aloud what have been afraid even to whisper: We are not merely in the midst of inflation but are experiencing "a revolt of the rich against the poor."

For those of us who do neither rich nor poor, if this sounds exaggerated in the slightest, consider for a moment these statistics:

- In the first four months of 1979, inflation rose overall at 7.1 percent.
- In four key sectors of the economy—housing, health, food and energy—inflation increased, not at a serious 7.1 percent, but at a staggering 17.2 percent.
- Four out of five Americans spend between 60 percent and 70 percent of their income on those four items alone, and the suffering grows proportionately as one moves down the income ladder.
- By that definition, Galbraith's "poor" encompasses 80 percent of us. And that 17.2 percent inflation rate was before President Carter devalued the dollar.
- Americans are an exceedingly poor people, but in our tolerance we have failed to sort out how inflation rises disproportionately among us. We blame, for example, the gasoline crisis on our indulgent driving habits, when in fact pleasure driving accounts for only the thinnest fraction of the total energy consumption in America. The production of useless plastics and carcinogenic herbicides accounts for far more.
- What we fail to understand—and what we receive little help in understanding—is that the very structure, the very distribution of income and wealth, is at the root of inflation. Most of us are not the hedonistic spendthrifts whose wasteful buying and lack of "discipline" make inflation; we can't afford to be. Life even at $20,000 or $25,000 a year requires careful shopping at the supermarket, not those "let's see what we can do" who after the arrival of the Mayflower—the people of Charlestown decided they had better uses of their time than sitting around in meetings.

They posted a notice that year that read:

"In consideration of the great trouble and charge of the inhabitants of Charlestown by reason of the frequent meetings of the townsmen (not men and women, you will notice) meeting things were not so easily brought into a joint issue, these eleven men, whose names are written on the other side (with the advice of pastor and teacher desired in any case of conscience), shall attend of all such business as shall concern the townsmen, the choice of officers excepted."

...What they (the eleven selectmen) or the greater part of them shall conclude of, the rest of the town willingly to submit unto as their own proper acts."

After that, they met once a year and decided whether they liked what the selectmen had done or not, and either kept them on or kicked them out accordingly.

Over time, as towns grew in population, the meetings became less important. By 1820, for example, Boston was so big there was not enough room in Faneuil Hall, the cradle of liberty where Sam Adams and his colleagues met to plot their revolution, for all of the qualified meeters or voters.

As one scholar of the times wrote: "When the subject was not generally exciting, town meetings were usually composed of the selectmen, the town officers, and 30 or 40 inhabitants. Those who thus came were, for the most part, drawn to it from some official duty or private interest."

The town meeting survives in New England, although more out of respect for traditions than out of necessity. In some towns, there are simply too many people to fit in any of the available halls. In others, there's just no interest.

One account of a town meeting a few years back describes the town officials raiding "the Women's Relief Corps, the American Legion Auxiliary, and the standing committee of the Elm Street Congregational Church" to get a quorum.

In another town, they rang the fire bell, then collared the volunteer firemen who responded to the false alarm and held them until the year's business was concluded.

None of this deprecates the important role of the town meeting in establishing the principle in the United States that power should flow upward rather than down. Even though the meeting did not last in a pure form for long, it lasted long enough to create the sense of community and of control over one's immediate life, much of which slipped away as the towns grew in size—and the problems grew in complexity.

But the important point that comes through from these old records is that Americans have never been very political. This has always been a country of buyers and sellers, not voters. Tocqueville, for example, thought the westward movement in America was more a matter of an instinct to subdivide than of any frontier mystique. People moved west, cleared the land, built a home, and then sold it to the next family coming west for a handsome profit. That, he concluded, was what kept them moving.

If the early settlers of America could get away with staying in the fields or at the apple tree siphoning off syrup, they did it. We are: no different now, except that there are seven more distractions—flying to Chicago, helping children with homework, writing checks, bowling and soaps.

There is another point, as well. These old histories give a reader the sense that the selectmen were less manipulative and more direct than many, perhaps most, of the politicians of our day. In Charlestown, they consulted the pastor and the teacher in matters of conscience. Today, they look to the pollster and the public relations man.

It is not the voters who have changed so much, it is the people they leave in charge. In between—the meetings.

Women said designed as homemakers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — God designed women to be homemakers and mothers, Mormon Church official Ezra Taft Benson said Saturday.

“One apparent impact of the women’s movement has been the feelings of discontent it has created among young women who have chosen the role of wife and mother,” Benson said in a speech at the church’s Los Angeles Temple Visitors Center.

“They are often made to feel that their more exciting and self-fulfilling roles for women — professional, housewife, diaper changing, and children calling for mother.”

“This view loses sight of the eternal perspective that God views women to the role of mother,” he said.

Benson, a member of the Mormon church’s Council of the Twelve Apostles and the next man in line for the presidency of the 4 million-member sect, spoke on what he termed “the honored place of women.”

“The Lord God gave woman a different personality and temperament than man,” he said. “By nature, woman is charitable and benevolent; man is striving and competitive.”

“Man is at his best when complemented by a good woman’s natural influence. She tempers the home and marriage relationship with her compassionate and loving influence.”

Benson blasted calls for women to break out of the traditional wife-mother role, saying any change would “distort and desecrate” a “divine pattern.”

“We hear much talk — even among some of our own sisters — about so-called ‘alternative life styles’ for women,” he said.

“They maintain that some women are better suited for careers than marriage and motherhood, or that a combination of both family and career is not inimical to either.”

“Some have even been so bold as to suggest that the church move away from the ‘Mormon woman stereotype’ of homemaking and rearing children. God grant that that dangerous philosophy will never take root among the Latter-day Saint women,” he said.

Benson also said church leaders oppose equality for women. “We say, we would not have you descend to that level,” he told the women in the audience. “More often than not, the demand for equality means the destruction of the inspired arrangement that God has decreed for man, woman and the family.”

He said the church recognizes that not all Mormon women can become wives, and that some women must work.

“But we do not encourage our young women to enter careers as life-long objectives nor as alternatives to marriage and family,” Benson told the women at the meeting.

Women honor suffragettes

By United Press-International

Suffragettes who won voting rights for women 59 years ago were honored by feminists Saturday in ceremonies also intended to raise money for the drive to pass the Equal Rights Amendment.

The National Organization for Women held weekend walkathons in more than 50 cities and slated a series of vigils, rallies and galas to mark Sunday’s Women’s Equality Day, anniversary of ratification of the 19th Amendment extended voting rights to women.

NOW has predicted 250,000 people will participate in walkathons and other women’s rights events during the weekend.

“Today we honor those women whose unparalleled devotion to equality won for American women the right to vote,” national NOW President Eleanor Smeal told a walkathon rally in Philadelphia Saturday.

“We rededicate ourselves to completing the work they began more than a century ago,” she told a crowd that gathered on the steps of the city art museum to begin the walkathon.

“She said NOW had implemented a new drive to generate pressure for ERA ratification in the final three states needed to make it part of the Constitution.”

Singer Helen Reddy was among the celebrities at the Philadelphia walkathon.

Another walkathon was held in Pittsburgh.

Pennsylvania ERA President Dixie White called ERA a “bread-and-butter issue.”

Beauty grows a mustache

WHEELING, W.Va. (UPI) — Terry Ryan was named a finalist in the Miss West Virginia-United States Teenager Pageant — but that was before he started growing his moustache.

Ryan, a high school senior, entered the contest as a lark when he got a letter from pageant organizers in Clinton, N.C., stating:

"As an outstanding teenager in your community, you have been recommended for competition in the pageant."

"He" and his older brother Rick filled out the application form. "We just sent it in to see what they would say," he said.

Nowhere did the application have a place to mark gender. "But it did ask for height and weight — to which he dutifully reported as 6-foot-1 and 160 pounds.

In the space marked "hobbies," he listed touch football and basketball. The long-haired youth even sent a picture, as requested, but it was after that he decided to grow a moustache and trim his hair.

To his surprise, he got a letter from pageant officials saying he had been selected as a finalist in the competition to be held Sept. 28-30 in Charleston, W.Va.

As he had to do was mail in his $200 fee.

"I was tempted to see it through, but $200 is still $200, and I could use it somewhere else," said the Wheeling-Central Catholic High School student in declining to drop out.

The letter from pageant organizers said contestants were referred by schools, churches, civic and volunteer organizations, modeling and dance studios, and last year's contestants.

Embezzler gets 'life'

ELLCOTT CITY, Md. (UPI) — A credit manager for a carpet firm, told he was dying, stole $28,000 from his employer to spend his last days in comfortable living — then found out he wasn't sick after all.

Dennis E. Soyster pleaded guilty to embezzlement Friday and told Howard County Circuit Judge Robert Fischer that he stole the money after doctors told him he had a rare, terminal intestinal disease.

"He went off the deep end and blew a lot of money on wild parties, spending up to $1,000 an evening," said his lawyer, Preston Palro, Jr.

Soyster, 32, of Laurel, then learned that his disease was really an allergy to the surgical gloves used by doctors who performed exploratory surgery, his attorney said.

Fischer gave Soyster a suspended sentence and ordered him to repay $8,000 per year.

The embezzlement was detected shortly after Soyster left the carpet firm in 1977.

Plant manager escapes home

MIAMI (UPI) — Textile plant manager William Boorstein, imprisoned in San Salvador by striking textile workers, said Saturday he took him nine days to figure out his escape plan but only half a minute to reach the barbed wire fence under which he crawled to freedom.

Boorstein, en route to Cherry Hill, N.J., to rejoin his family spoke to the UPI telephone from the Miami International Airport.

In the telephone interview, Boorstein said "it took me nine days to figure the deal out and 30 seconds to make it 150 yards from the building to the barbed wire fence."

Boorstein had scratches on his fingers and wrists from his scramble under the fence.

Boorstein, 60, said he called an American consul just after he reached his apartment.

"He told me to pack a bag quickly and get out of the country the fastest way possible. "I got a private car and drove into Guatemala. I stayed overnight and flew into Miami (board a commercial jet). Once I got into Guatemala, the pressure was off and the danger was off."

Boorstein, manager of the American-owned Apex textile factory on the outskirts of the capital city, said the plant made women's suits and sportswear for sale in the United States. He was taken hostage Aug. 14.

"What happened was a band of 25 to 30 women and five men took possession of the plant, sort of a strike," he said, adding that he and another executive were held so the owners would "make a settlement in agreement to pay more wages and

Can Hannibal be repeated?

PARIS (UPI) — An American student of history, a French businessman and a former Folies Bergere dancer Saturday said they and two rented elephants will try to become the first expedition to successfully "cross" the Alps by pachyderm since Hannibal.

The three humans and two elephants, who normally lead placid lives at a zoo in Turin, Italy, will leave Monday, trying to retrace the route the Carthaginian warrior is believed to have taken in 218 B.C.

Hannibal's army crossed the mountains along precarious, snow-covered footpaths above the 8,000-foot mark, en route to a series of victories against the Roman Empire in the Second Punic War.

Jack Wheeler, American leader of the group, said he hopes to complete the crossing into Italy Sept. 3, eight days after his departure from the French mountain town of St. Jean de Maurienne.

5th grader wins over principal, professor

BOSTON (UPI) — A fifth grade student from New York Saturday defeated a high school principal, a college administrator and a high school teacher in the championship round of the East Coast Monopoly Tournament.

The new East Coast champion Angelo Repole, 10, of Staten Island, N.Y., will play U.S. champion Dana Terman and three other regional champs at the national tournament in New York City in November.

The U.S. champion that emerges from the nationals goes to Bermuda in April to play representatives of 18 countries for the world championship.

The current world champ is Chong Seng-Kwa, an oil executive from Singapore.

After playing brilliantly in the first two rounds, young Repole was the first player to gain a Monopoly in the final round and immediately checked hotels on Virginia Avenue, States Avenue and St. Charles Place.

The youngster never lost control of the game after that as one by one his opponents were forced to mortgage or sell their property to pay Repole his exorbitant rent.

Anderson: Only I or Baker can win

Rep. John B. Anderson

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., said Saturday he and Sen. Howard Baker are the only presidential contenders in the crowded-Republican field who can beat Jimmy Carter or Sen. Edward Kennedy next year.

"I don't believe any of the others stand a chance," Anderson said in an interview with UPI.

Anderson, who has formally declared his candidacy, said former California Gov. Ronald Reagan "cannot get elected" even though polls show he is the most popular candidate among Republicans.

Asked who could beat the Democratic candidate in the November, 1980 election, he said, "Other than myself... only Baker."

Anderson, No. 3 Republican in the House, also said he thought Carter stood only a "50-50 chance" of winning the Democratic nomination next year — adding with a wink that meant Kennedy's odds were about the same.

"As far as Kennedy is concerned the 50-50 comes in when you try to assess whether or not Kennedy will respond to all the draft appeals that are being mounted around the country."

"I think there's a 50-50 chance he will decide the pressures have become irresistible and, to save the Democratic party, he will have to enter the race," Anderson said.

Anderson said his presidential candidacy did not mask a bid for the vice presidency, but he declined to declare he would not accept the No. 2 spot.

"I see no need to be exemplary in that regard when out of the total field of 10 candidates I haven't heard of any such declaration from any of the others," he said. "I'm quite sincere when I say I do not seek that office."

Anderson said he thought he had an excellent chance to win the Republican nomination because he is the only true moderate in a field full of conservatives.

"My contention is Reagan is going to be cheved up by all of these other candidates who are barking for the same vote, he is trying to get," Anderson said.

Baker warns of threats

© Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — Arms, energy and the economy are threatening to undermine American self-sufficiency, according to Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. (R-Tenn.).

"Failure to maintain an adequate defense arsenal against the Soviet Union is a threat," said Baker, declaring, "The Soviet Union is engaged in the most massive military build-up since at least World War II."

The Senate minority leader, an unannounced candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, told 300 members of the Chicago City Club at a Bismarck Hotel luncheon Friday that the United States had been "outbargained" on the strategic arms limitation treaty and urged re-examination of the pact.

Dependence on foreign oil sources also is eating away at American self-sufficiency, Baker said.

"If the unit of energy is the best measure of wealth of industrial societies, then from that standpoint, we're in tough shape," he said. He advocates an "energy trust fund," generated by a windfall profits tax on oil companies, to plow money into private research rather than government projects.

Baker also backed a tax cut to produce more revenue and blamed Congress for excessive governmental spending. He said he would support a law requiring a two-thirds majority in Congress to approve any federal deficit spending.

He also suggested the government provide tax incentives to encourage citizens to save and invest income.

Strauss may serve without pay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Special Middle East negotiator Robert Strauss plans to ask President Carter for permission to carry out his job without pay so he can resume some business and personal interests, it was reported Saturday.

"It is my desire at the age of 61 to have some semblance of private life and still serve this president in the ways he wants to be served," Strauss said in an interview with The New York Times.

However, Strauss said he doubts Carter will approve such a plan.

The decision to seek the status of an unpaid worker also was seen as an effort by Strauss to establish himself as an independent negotiator, the Times said. He has declined to move into an office in the State Department, where he would be perceived to be working for Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

State Department officials Saturday declined to comment on the Times report.

Strauss was recently instructed to discuss with Israeli and Egyptian officials a U.S. plan to introduce a compromise resolution on Palestinian rights in the United Nations Security Council, a plan he opposed and which also brought strong opposition from both Israel and Egypt.

Strauss complained his instructions were so narrowly worded that he was not allowed the kind of control over Middle East negotiations he had been promised when he took the job last spring.

Radiation leaking in Tucson

TUCSON (UPI) — The American Atomic Corp. plant, which is being closed, is still emitting radioactive tritium and the emissions are expected to get worse in the next 30 days.

The Arizona Atomic Energy Commission said the process of closing down the mid-town plant could result in the release of 30,000 curies of tritium in a 30-day period which would be 9,000 curies more than the highest loss reported by the firm over a three-month period.

Kenneth Geiser, acting AEC director, says he just wanted to warn the Tucson Unified School District that there may be some large emissions of low level radiation as the plant's tritium-filled tubes are packed and shipped out of the city.

The school district, whose central kitchen is located near the plant, is still trying to figure out where to dump $300,000 worth of tritium-contaminated food.

Dr. Dileep Bal, the director of the Pima County Health Department, says the emission levels are so high that even if the district's kitchen is decontaminated now it could be recontaminated.

Meanwhile, the County Health Department says its review of statistics do not support the claims of a University of Pittsburgh physicist that the tritium emissions caused an increase in fetal deaths.

Ernest J. Stenglass also claimed the tritium emissions increased premature births in areas downwind from the manufacturing plant.

But Bruce W. Porter, Health Department communicable disease director, says there was an increase in fetal deaths but this also occurred in areas not near the plant. He says he does not know why the fetal death rate rose "but it didn't follow a pattern." He also says he could not detect any pattern of increases in premature births downwind from the plant.

Money-saving state worker says he is simply doing his job

DENVER (UPI) — G. Marvin Mock, who works for the Colorado Department of Social Services, has offered suggestions that have saved the state more than a quarter million dollars over the years.

As a reward for his work, Mock, a 17-year state employee, has received $195 and three certificates.

But he is not dismayed.

"I don't believe in getting awards for doing your job," said the 53-year-old supervisor of the data processing unit for Social Services. "The only reason I put in the last two is because my boss insisted that I put them in."

In 1971, Mock made a suggestion dealing with the shipment of boxed documents which has saved taxpayers $212,500. Two months ago he offered another suggestion which will save the department $58,000 a year and his most recent suggestion is expected to result in annual savings of $14,000.

Mock's first suggestion "should have gotten him a bonus equal to 10 percent of the annual savings, $2,500, but the Legislature did not fund the program that year."

Idaho lawman nabs suspect wanted in Arizona and Nevada

MOORE, Idaho (UPI) — A 31-year-old man arrested in a bar late Friday will be returned to Nevada on a murder charge and also questioned in the shootings of 10 young Arizona women, authorities said Saturday.

Jose Jime Agullar was apprehended in the tiny eastern Idaho town of Moore after Idaho State Police Cpl. Maurice Anderson spotted Agullar's car, which was registered on an interstate list of wanted vehicles.

Sheriff's officers in Lincoln County, Nev., said they would seek Agullar's extradition on a first-degree murder charge in the Aug. 14 death of Colleen LeFevre, 49, of Ennachi, Nev., whose bullet-riddled body was found outside of Pioche, Nev.

Arizona authorities confirmed Saturday that Agullar was a suspect in a series of shootings in Pinal County stretching from Dec. 16 to July 14. Three teenage girls were killed during this period.

The gunman usually approached his victims without warning, often in public, then fired shots at them, police said.

Agullar, a Texas native who had a California driver's license in his possession when arrested, was being held without bond in the Bonneville County Jail at Idaho Falls.

Arizona authorities said they would travel to Idaho to question the suspect, while Lincoln County authorities said they would start extradition proceedings immediately.

Portland hijacker goes before judge

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Ball was set at $50,000 Thursday for James R. Allbee, 26, a former mental patient who hijacked a United Airlines jet and demanded that some of his bill be paid before surrendering to the FBI.

Allbee was arraigned on air-piracy charges before U.S. Magistrate George Tuba who set Aug. 30 for a hearing and set the bail.

The Boeing 727, carrying 112 passengers and a crew of seven, was commandeered on a flight from Portland to Los Angeles. Authorities said Allbee told the crew he had a bomb.

Geothermal potential found

NORTGLENN, Colo. (UPI) — A consulting engineer with Conroy & Associates says Colorado has at least 120 known hot springs throughout the area which some day might be capable of helping meet the state's energy problems.

Steve Goering said the most active areas for hot springs include the Buena Vista region, the San Luis Valley and the Pagosa Springs area. Pagosa Springs already is in the process of installing a system that will heat the downtown area with geothermal energy.

Goering said the temperatures of the hot springs will determine how valuable they are in providing energy. Geothermal energy — derived from the hot water springs — can be used for home or building heating if it reaches between 130 and 180 degrees.

When the temperature is above 300 degrees, the steam can be used in industry for such things as sugar refining, borax and lime and dehydration of fruits and vegetables. Above 350 degrees, the steam can be used to generate electricity.

Surrounded by Nevada prison guards, Jesse Bishop is led to parole hearing Saturday.

Lower court ruled Bishop competent

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Stanford Law Professor Anthony Amsterdam attempted without success to dissuade the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals from rejecting a petition for a stay of execution for condemned killer Jesse W. Bishop on grounds he is incompetent.

The court denied the petition Friday, but Saturday U.S. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist stayed Monday's scheduled execution.

Bishop, 46, in the Nevada State Prison at Carson City, had not sought the petition, but it was carried by Clark County, Nev., Public Defenders Kirk B. Lenhard and George E. Franzen.

Lenhard and Franzen said a stay was needed until a competency hearing could be held to determine the convict's competence to waive possible relief in the federal courts.

Bishop has persistently said he did not wish any appeals because they would only delay the ultimate judgment of death in the gas chamber. He has said he wants a commutation to life in prison — or nothing.

Amsterdam, a leading legal thinker among foes of capital punishment, entered the Bishop case to argue that Bishop cannot be executed without another psychiatric examination. He appeared for an hour of oral arguments before the court.

Amsterdam argued that examinations conducted on behalf of the attorney general of the state of Nevada, and examinations conducted 19 months ago, are not sufficient.

He said the question is whether Bishop is competent to waive his rights at the present time. The court ruled that he is.

"In this case ... there has been no showing of Bishop's incompetence," the court said. "He was found to be

Mondale promises China favorable trade status

PEKING (UPI) — Vice President Walter Mondale arrived in China Saturday with a promise Peking would soon enjoy "most favored nation" trade status and other agreements resulting from the two nations' first year of diplomatic ties.

Senior Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping met Mondale and his wife Joan at Peking International airport while People's Liberation Army bands struck up the Star Spangled Banner, a sign the government considers Mondale's visit of top importance.

Security was heavy. Runways had been cleared of all other planes and uniformed police blocked off traffic at every intersection as the motorcade wove its way for an hour to the government guest house.

Mondale told reporters on the flight that he was coming to meet the Chinese on a one-to-one basis. "Now we're on the basis of a proper, sustainable, dignified relationship of two great powers," he said.

The vice president was scheduled to relax until a scheduled 12-course state banquet at the Great Hall of the People Sunday night. His wife said she wanted to do some shopping at Peking's renowned Friendship Store and do some sightseeing Sunday.

But Mondale's relaxation was to include getting last-minute briefings by his aides and embassy staffers.

Mondale began two days of talks with Deng and Communist Party leader Premier Hua Guofeng.

Officials traveling with Mondale said the delay in giving China favorable export-import status was caused by a backlog in legislation rather than by any White House fears of disrupting detente with Moscow.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., has warned that the Chinese are irked over the slow pace normalizing the trade pact initiated by former Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps in May.

Jackson, an opponent of the SALT II Agreement as it stands, said Mondale's first order of business should be to assure the Chinese the trade pact will be presented to Congress without further delay.

Mondale's aides indicated the White House intends to send the legislation to Capitol Hill as soon as the congressional August holiday ends.

Mondale said the Carter administration has worked on a list of specific proposals for two months to pave the way for greater cooperation and exchange between the United States and China.

He would not reveal the details of the proposals.

Afghan province captured

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Moslem guerrillas, some posing as government troops, have assassinated a governor and killed more than 1,000 Afghan soldiers in the takeover of a provincial capital. A rebel report said Saturday.

The Islamic Front of Afghanistan said the recent takeover of the Kunar Province capital of Asmar was orchestrated by a Moslem rebel posing as a brigadier general commanding government troops in the area.

Moslems fighting Afghanistan's Marxist government had besieged the Kunar province capital of Asmar for four months and the rebel "commander" gave the signal when to mount a final attack on Asmar, the press release said.

Sahara war escalates

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI) — Polisario guerrillas Saturday reported the capture of a military base inside Morocco in an attack that killed "many hundreds" of Moroccan troops and destroyed 40 tanks in a stepped-up war in the Western Sahara.

In a statement issued in Algiers, the Polisario Front said it destroyed 40 Moroccan tanks at the village of Lebourate in southern Morocco.

The village is near the former frontier with Western Sahara, occupied by Morocco three years ago after Spain gave up the territory.

The guerrillas, fighting for independence of the territory, said they also captured Moroccan artillery and other weapons, then sent a Moroccan relief column 25 miles away and caused further heavy casualties.

The communique said "many hundreds" of Moroccan soldiers were killed in the seizure of the base.

In the Moroccan capital of Rabat, where government offices were closed for a holiday following the Moslem holy month of Ramadan, spokesmen said they had no reports of fighting in the remote desert area.

Nicaraguans protest currency switch

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Hundreds of working-class Nicaraguans waved paper money and shouted protests Saturday in a demonstration against an order calling in all high-denomination banknotes before Monday, when the cash will become worthless.

The ruling junta, determined to reduce the cash supply, ordered sympathizers both in Nicaragua and abroad to a pile of worthless paper, has ordered all 500-cordoba and 1,000-cordoba bills turned in by Sunday.

The bills, worth about $50 and $100 each in U.S. currency, could not be exchanged for smaller-denomination notes. They could only be converted to cash for six months.

All 500- and 1,000-cordoba bills became worthless Monday, the government said.

In the first protests against the new junta, which overthrew President Anastasio Somoza on July 21, some 200 persons marched from the eastern section of Managua to Government House Saturday, shouting, "We want change, not deposits!"

The crowds started gathering at banks in Managua at 8 a.m. As the tropical sun bore down and lines grew longer, people grew more agitated at the junta's ruling.

"This is almost as bad as Somoza," said one man as he stood in a line almost a mile long leading to the Banco de America.

The demonstrators, waving 500-and 1,000-cordoba bills, walked to Government House and demanded to see the junta.

"We want a solution today, not tomorrow or the day after," they chanted.

Bayardo Arce, one of nine principal leaders of the Sandinista National Liberation Front that overthrew Somoza, climbed onto a construction scaffold and pleaded with the protesters to obey the junta's rules. He promised a more satisfactory arrangement for the currency problem would be announced soon.

Junta member Moises Hassan said the junta would "pass a new decree to help the poor people who have been most affected. Some people feel they have been hurt by the measure."

All bills deposited at banks, which were ordered to remain open Sunday, will be exchanged for deposit certificates and refunded after six months with a percent interest, officials said.

Junta member Sergio Ramirez, who announced the currency rules in a nationwide broadcast Friday, also disclosed several conditions to prevent "Somozistas" from laundering their cash.

Chief among them was a requirement that all depositors prove they acquired the cash legitimately in salary or receipts from a business, or by producing bank receipts indicating the cash was properly withdrawn from an account.

Havana to get facelift

HAVANA, Cuba (UPI) — The city of Havana, neglected for 20 years by a revolution that cared more for people than buildings, has been given a million-dollar facelift in preparation for next week's non-aligned nations summit conference.

"They have been painting so much in the past month they ought to put a giant 'wet paint' sign over the whole city," said one foreign journalist who frequently visits the Cuban capital.

Some of the money found its way to houses throughout this city of 1 million that since 1959 had given up the battle against the corrosive tropical humidity of the Caribbean.

But most of it was brushed around the capital's hotel center and westward along the main road to the new $30 million conference center where the summit will be held Sept. 3-7.

The summit is expected to draw about 60 heads of state, 1,300 delegates and 600 journalists to Cuba and, for at least one week, put the spotlight of world attention on the Marxist island 90 miles from Florida.

Cuba's government-run newspapers and even President Fidel Castro himself have been urging "Habaneros" to be on their best behavior and keep everything spotlessly clean during the summit.

One area where the overnight improvements can be seen immediately is around the Nacional, a 50-year-old hotel that has borne up badly under the constant blasts of salty spray from the sea.

In January, the hotel's air conditioning was broken, paint was peeling, bathroom fixtures leaked, furniture broke at a touch, the carpeting had an overpowering stench of humidity and the area was a hangout for Cuban partymakers, including girls who would do just about anything for a pair of blue jeans.

Now the area is kept free of these people by scores of uniformed and plainclothes police, and the immediate neighborhood has even been given shiny new garbage cans.

The hotel itself has been painted inside and out, the carpeting is brand new, the air conditioning works and it takes only five minutes to find the plumber when needed.

Iran's troops capture town

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Government forces held the Kurdish stronghold of Saqqez Saturday despite heavy counterattacks from the insurgents who seized a radio and television station in nearby Mahabad and took the staff hostage.

The Kurds, armed with mortar and machine guns smuggled in or captured from the army, beat back a government convoy of tanks which was closing on Mahabad Friday in an apparent bid to reinforce government authority.

The Kurds were in control of Mahabad, main operating center of the outlawed Kurdish Democratic Party, the small town of Baneh southwest of Saqqez and areas surrounding Saqqez.

The Kurds took over the radio and television center in Mahabad Saturday and were holding the staff as hostages, Tehran Radio reported.

The broadcasting center went off the air following the takeover, the national radio said, and the rebels threatened to kill the staff unless the transmitters were fixed.

The military garrison in Saqqez came under heavy fire from the Kurds, who were earlier forced to retreat from the town under a barrage of gunfire from army helicopter gunships and advance units armed with machine guns.

The only gas station in Saqqez caught fire after it was hit by shelling, reports reaching Tehran said.

An overloaded Iranian air force helicopter crashed at the military airfield in Sanandaj, the main Kurdish city in the area, the Pars news agency said. It also confirmed the crash of a C-130 transport which crashed on the battlefield Thursday.

But the military command denied another report that the Saqqez airport was recaptured by the Kurds in fighting Saturday.

Mohammad Hassan Shaker, chief of the joint staff of the army, told Pars news agency the army was stationed inside the garrison and had full control over the city.

DHW claims superior probation services

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The concept of hiring a probation officer in Jerome County is correct, a regional director of the state Department of Health and Welfare says. But he feels his staff could provide "a better service" at a third the cost.

DHW Region 5 Director Kent Henderson said Friday a diversion program which a county probation officer would set up is necessary to try and keep youngsters out of the court system.

The Jerome County Commissioners have indicated they would approve creating the post at Monday's commission meeting in the county courthouse. The commissioners have indicated they would approve creating the post at Monday's commission meeting in the county courthouse.

from the 1 percent initiative have forced the agency to announce it will have to charge for such counseling services in the future.

"I think they have made up their mind to go with their own officer," Henderson said, "and that's their prerogative. I really think we can provide a better service...but that's their decision to make. That doesn't make an awful lot of fiscal sense to me."

Henderson objected to comments appearing in a Times-News story Wednesday that indicated the commissioners and Prosecutor Eugene Frederickson were not happy with the quality of work DHW employees provided.

Frederickson had said there was little case follow-up work done by DHW staffers and Commission Chairman Mel Grindstaff said he felt the state employees didn't seem like they were doing a good job.

"That is the first time I have had notice of it," Henderson claimed. "Normally, you are first given a meeting to work out anything you feel are problems."

Henderson says he doubts that someone Jerome County would hire will be as qualified as DHW personnel, who are all state-licensed social workers with at least a college degree.

He said often a person a county will hire is not a licensed social worker and without the education qualifications DHW personnel are required to have before being hired.

Henderson said DHW's track record in organizing diversion programs for youngsters is a good one. For example, he said, DHW helped set up a program for the Burley-Rupert area that is the direct responsibility of the prosecutors offices—and gains support from community efforts.

The Region-5 director said DHW personnel are only helping do consultation work there on a few cases, but for the most part it is "strictly a community deal."

Henderson said his crew has tried to set up a similar program in Jerome, "but met little success in that area." He declined to say why the efforts failed because he did not wish to start a squabble with community leaders.

Henderson agreed with the proposed program a Jerome County probation officer might work under—one relying on records kept of contacts made with youth who get in trouble with law officials for any reason.

Such a program, used by Gooding County Probation Officer Jim Finch, involves contacting children and parents and trying to set up voluntary conduct programs to keep the cases out of juvenile court proceedings.

"Counties need copious records so they will know what will work and what hasn't, and where to go in the future. That way you're not wasting the youngster's time and running through things that already have not worked," he said, "and you're not wasting staff time by trying something that won't succeed."

Jerome Council delays decisions

JEROME — The Jerome City Council decided Tuesday that tomorrow would be too busy to make a lot of decisions, as it tabled several business items until its next regular meeting.

A recommendation from Police Chief Howard DuBols that reserve officers be allowed to carry sidearms was the chief item tabled.

DuBols made the recommendation following his announcement that regular and reserve officers recently passed a handgun marksmanship test.

Quered as to whether passing that test meant a volunteer policeman was a qualified law officer in other areas, including when and when not to use a weapon, DuBols said yes. He explained that reserve officers must also spend four hours riding with an on-duty patrolman for three months to learn police procedures.

City Attorney Robert Williams told the council there is always potential liability when any officer carries a weapon. He said legally such a practice appears allowable, but he decided to offer a further opinion, saying he would remain neutral in the decision.

On the recommendation of Councilman Ralph Peters, the city fathers agreed to postpone any decision on the matter until its next regular meeting Sept. 4.

The council also will take up at that meeting a resolution Williams submitted that would prohibit carrying open liquor containers in Jerome. The resolution was drafted at the council's behest on the recommendation of the police chief.

Expected action on having a privately-run city dog pound was tabled as well after Williams asked the council to meet in executive session to discuss what he termed a problem with personnel. A short meeting was held immediately after Tuesday's regular meeting.

Ronald and Barbara Knox had asked the council Aug. 11 for permission to run the dog pound and use the facilities for a private business of training and selling dogs.

Suggested new rates for users of the Jerome's swimming pool were also tabled for further study. Peters explained that the proposal by the Jerome Recreation District, which runs the pool for the city, would help the city cover increasing utility bills that the city pays as part of its joint agreement with the JRD.

Peters noted that a hearing bill for one month alone ran $1,100 and the new fees would bring in estimated additional revenue of $1,200.

Rates would remain at 35 cents for the youngest pool users; while other rates run 75 cents for older children and $1 for adults. Swimming lesson prices would go from $5 to $7.

below a reasonable goal, we've got to check closely to see that they've done all the things they say they have done."

Nelson officials said about 10 days ago that telephone conversations with Bird indicated he foresaw no problems in the EPA accepting the bid.

EPA undecided on sewage plant bid

SEATTLE — The Environmental Protection Agency is still playing wait-and-see on whether to accept Nelsen and Company's $4.2 million bid to build Jerome's new sewage treatment plant.

Harley Bird, civil rights officer here for the EPA, said it will be Monday or Tuesday before a final decision is made on whether the Twin Falls firm has made an acceptable "good faith" effort to include minority subcontractors and suppliers in the project.

Federal standards say that a reasonable "goal" for the northwestern states is to have 10 to 15 percent of a contract involving federal funds go to minority-owned businesses. Nelson officials figure this project now has about five percent of the dollar total earmarked for minority businessmen.

Seventy-five percent of the construction costs of the Jerome plant will be paid by the federal government.

"We are trying to work the situation out," Bird said. "We're not overly excited about it. We are pretty sure we can. They are so far

Ashford upsets East German in World Cup

MONTREAL (UPI) — Evelyn Ashford of Hollywood, Calif., upset her second world record holder in as many days Saturday to win the 100 meters and pace an otherwise lackluster effort by the United States team on the second day of competition at the World Cup II Track and Field Championships.

The 25-year-old Ashford, who Friday night stunned world record holder Marita Koch in the 200, led virtually from the outset to topple Marlies Gohr of East Germany, who owns the world mark in the 100 meters. She ran the race in the 1:07.10, while Gohr clocked 1:08.60.

The double victory, her first since the Outstanding Female Athlete award for Ashford, who also won both races at the Pan American Games in Puerto Rico last month and is fast establishing herself as a double favorite for the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow.

"I want to do well next year in Moscow," said Ashford. "I think I'm still in shock" from the two victories. "I thought I'd be myself in both races. I surprised myself. It must have been all that hard training paying off."

Ashford's triumph was the only one for the Americans in the track competition, which included two major disappointments — Tony Darden in the 400 meters and Steve Carlton in the 500.

Darden, of Norristown, Pa., one of two Americans who beat Cuban star Alberto Juantorena at the Pan Am Games, ran a poor 4:00 and finished third behind Africa's Kossan, El Kissel, and the Soviet Union's Nikolai Chernov.

"I was disappointed with the race," admitted Darden. "We had 30 minutes in that control center when the adrenalin isn't running you're not so geared up. We just had to sit there and wait."

Scott, the favorite in the 1,500, was never a factor as he finished fourth in a race won by West Germany's Europe Thomas Wessinglage. The Ukiah, Calif., native had been unable to make amends for a disappointing finish in World Cup I, where he placed two years ago.

The only other American presence in the track events came when the 400-meter relay team finished second to a strong finish by the United States and France Larrieu of West Texas finished third in the women's 2000 won by Russia's Svetlana Ushakov.

The Americans did well in the field events as Mike Tully of Long Beach, Calif., successfully defended his World Cup title in the pole vault and Fairleigh Dickinson's Franklyn Jacobs won the high jump. Tully, who admitted earlier in the week that his heavy competition load of the past two months (14 meets) has left him weary, 1.74 rather weak vault event with a best of 17 feet 40 inches.

Jacobs, forced to travel for some 11 hours Friday as a result of bad weather in the New York area, won his competition over Olympic champion Jacek Wesoła of Poland by virtue of fewer misses. Both jumpers cleared 7-10.

Despite the unimpressive showing Saturday, the American men maintained their lead in the overall standings with 83 points, five more than Europe. The women are fourth with 57 points, 13 behind East Germany.

Other winners on the second day of the three-day nationally televised meet included Russia's Sergel Litvinov in the men's hammer; Poland's Grazyna Rabstzyn in Europe in the women's 100-meter hurdles; Bulgaria's Europe; Nikolina Stiverca in the women's 800; Cuban world record holder Inoa de Olickera in the men's triple jump; West Africa's Kiprotich Romo in the 3,000-meter steeplechase; and East Germany's Ruth Fuchs in the women's javelin.

New CSI recruit

Elletson eats way to fun run victory

By GARY EIL LASSEN
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — It's not unusual for Englishman Peter Elletson to eat a bowl of spaghetti, hamburger and fries, or some tea or coffee before he goes out and runs 10 miles.

But it's also unusual to see the lanky, blond-haired runner of Southern Idaho cross country recruit come across the finish line ahead of the rest of the field in any races he enters.

"I've never had any runner on the team who could eat like this guy does before," said CSI coach Monte Brattwell of Bellevue by 25 seconds (1:05:16 to 1:05:42) to win the fun run and a couple free dinners at the Primavera.

Those two runners were the leaders of a pack of 35 early morning joggers who got up at 7 and took off on the 13-mile course through the city of Twin Falls at 7:45. The field, organizers say, was reduced because of a new ruling by the state high school athletic association that high school cross country runners can't take part in fun runs.

The top woman finisher was Tammy Asher of Twin Falls who finished in 1:33:21.

Two hours, 14 minutes and 50 seconds later, the last runner to finish, the one called 11-year-old Amy Smack of Twin Falls, crossed the finish line to loud applause and cheers from a crowd which had grown to about 100.

For Elletson, a new altitude and climate took some getting used to.

"I felt like my lungs were going to bust," said the self-confessed snack lover who last night loaded down on a pizza, hamburger, milk, three cookies and three dishes of ice cream. "Where I live and run, the altitude is only 60 feet above sea level, but here...

Kleinopf can't help but be pleased with his new runner, and he thinks he will give an already talent-laden cross country team even more added firepower. In addition to Elletson, CSI has Fernando Hernandez (who came in third in the race), Mike Carlson of Borah High School the placed fifth, and arriving today, Derrick May, the national cross country champion from South Africa. Chris Black of Glenns Ferry also will return to the team.

Elletson, who got out of high school at the age of 16 and since has worked as a recreation assistant, came to CSI after running in some races in California.

"I saved enough money to come to California and while running here got to talking to the Nevada-Reno coach," he said after finishing the 13 miles. "He recommended CSI for one year, and then maybe I can go to Reno next year."

In addition to cross country, the Englishman also runs the 5,000 meters with his current fastest time 14:10.4.

He sums up his attitude toward running this way: "I like winning more than having a good time."

In contrast, Ray Bowman of San Diego, Calif., who is currently staying with his daughter-in-law just outside of Twin Falls, runs to have a good time. At 59, he was the oldest competitor in the field.

Sports insurance pays off

By PETE DONOVAN

©1979, The Los Angeles Times
IRVINE, Calif. — The odds are of staggering proportions to:

- Make a hole-in-one in golf.
  - Beat 20.
  - Become a self-made millionaire.
- According to Golf Digest, the odds of making a hole-in-one are 43,000 to 1. According to the American Bowling Congress, the odds against rolling a perfect game are 50,000 to 1. And in today's economy the odds of making a million on your own are nearly incalculable.

But by using the golf and bowling odds to form a lucrative business, Dennis Chase of Irvine, about 30 miles south of Los Angeles, is bucking the odds on becoming a millionaire.

A 33-year-old former stockbroker, Chase operates a company called Sports Achievements Association, that insures against a hole in one and is about to expand its operation to insure against a 300 game in bowling.

Here's how it works. In a golf tournament, the promoters decide to give away a car worth $10,000 for a hole-in-one on a certain par-3 hole. The promoter can insure against the hole-in-one with Chase. The premium runs about 3.5 percent of the prize. He will do over 1,500 tournaments this year and figures to gross about $600,000.

And in September he will begin to insure against perfect games in bowling, launching a campaign to persuade elite operators and tournament sponsors to put up prizes.

Chase got into sports insurance in 1977 when the University of California, Irvine was sponsoring a golf tournament.

"We were going to give away a $10,000 Cadillac," he said. "The only people we could find who would insure against it (a hole-in-one) were in Los Angeles and they wanted 10 percent, $1,000. I took out the policy myself and have been in the business ever since, although I really didn't go full time until late last year."

Chase bases the amount of the premium on (1) the number of players in the tournament, (2) the length of the players, (3) their length of the hole and (4) the dollar value of the prize.

He has paid off seven times. He uses Mission Insurance of Los Angeles as the underwriter and it shares the profit and loss.

"The first one was last September up in Turlock. (In Central California). The guy (promoter) called me at 7 in the morning to tell me I'd won a Chrysler Cordova."

"That's all you do?"

"Gulped. And then mailed him the check."

Dallas ready to revenge Super Bowl loss...

Editor's note: Another in a series of NFL sizeups. The Dallas Cowboys

DALLAS (UPI) — Ed "Too Tall" Jones has decided to enter a profession in which he doesn't have to wear a uniform and get paid. The Cowboys' Super Bowl loss last year is back, which is reason enough to suspect they have a chance to make it three trips in a row.

Dallas has had some 50 trips to pro football's ultimate game the past decade that it seems the only thing that can motivate the Cowboys these days is the thought of winning the championship game, something they did two years ago (and something they failed to do against Pittsburgh last Saturday).

Dallas has the incentive to win the Super Bowl should give us all the incentive we need to come back and win it all in 1979," said Cowboys Coach Tom Landry. "That will be our goal this year."

To make that goal a reality Dallas could easily field its best offensive team ever.

"Offensively," says Landry, "we're kind of an amazing team. We move the ball well, we score a lot of points and we seem to do what we need to do."

around to catch the ball and the Cowboys' still youthful offensive line has matured another year.

So Dallas appears to have the capabilities of being an excellent offensive club. But it is Dorsett, most of all, who appears ready for a great season.

"Tony played well early in the year last year," said Landry, "but not anything near the way he played in the latter part of the season. He started to learn the holes, where the softness is in the defense and he started making key plays for us. Tony's future is very, very bright."

Dallas appeared a certain loser when it had to give up the ball with 1:48 to play, but regained possession at its own 27 with a mere 38 seconds left in the contest.

That set up Septien's game-winning field goal, which handed Pittsburgh its first exhibition loss after three consecutive victories.

It is on defense where the question marks appear. Jones, characterized by some Dallas coaches as never really having had his heart in football, surprised the Cowboys during the summer by announcing he was becoming a professional boxer.

The fact that Jones quit the Cowboys was not that much of a shocker. He had played out his option with Dallas and Landry said he had become aware a few weeks before the announcement that Jones was going to leave football.

But everybody was surprised by Jones' choice of boxing as a career.

The loss of Jones at left end and Pugh at left tackle (although Larry Cole played in front of Pugh for much of the 1978 season) and a severe injury to star steady Charlie Waters leaves some holes to fill in the defensive unit.

"The defensive line provided the Cowboys much of the momentum that carried them to the Super Bowl last year and now half of the four-man unit is gone."

"I thought it was the strongest part of the entire team, especially late in the year," said Landry. "Randy White (1978 Defensive Player of the Year in the NFL) was exceptional—and even though Harvey Martin (who plays alongside White at end) was hurt much of the season, he still ended up with a lot of quarterback traps."

Now the Cowboys will have to move Larry Bethea — their No. 1 draft pick in 1978 — into Jones' spot at left end, Cole or David Stalls probably will replace Pugh.

"Larry is coming in as a second-year player. He's a good young football player. I think he can move in to left end and be a good, active performer."

The Cowboys, like any other team, need a good pass rush to keep the pressure away from their linebackers and defensive backs.

Waters and Cliff Harris made up a splendid tandem at safety and now Harris will have to work with Randy Hughes, a five-year veteran who has seen most of his action as a fifth back in passing situations. The Cowboys are not strong at cornerback and Dallas' linebackers are seldom mentioned as being among the tops in the league.

... first step win over Steelers

IRVING, Texas (UPI) — A 47-yard field goal with two seconds remaining by Rafael Septien clinched a Dallas comeback and gave the Cowboys a 16-14 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers in a Super Bowl rematch Saturday night.

Dallas appeared a certain loser when it had to give up the ball with 1:48 to play, but regained possession at its own 27 with a mere 38 seconds left in the contest.

That set up Septien's game-winning field goal, which handed Pittsburgh its first exhibition loss after three consecutive victories.

Pittsburgh scored its two touchdowns early in the second quarter on a 1-yard run by Franco Harris and an 8-yard pass from Terry Bradshaw to Jim Smith.

Dallas cut the deficit to 14-6 on an 18-yard TD pass from Staubach to tight end Billy Joe DuPree midway through the second quarter, but the extra point try by Septien sailed wide to the left.

The Cowboys' other touchdown came on a Staubach pass of 8 yards to rookie running back Ron Springs with 3:10 to play in the third period. Bradshaw, going the distance, hit 10-21 passes for 151 yards and was particularly sharp in the first half.

Pittsburgh began its first touchdown drive late in the first period and Bradshaw worked the ball downfield on a 10-yard pass to Lynn Swann; a 21-yarder to John Stallworth and another of 11 yards to Smith.

The Astros are holding on by the skin of their teeth. Joe Niekro, with relief help from Joe Sambito, pitched a three-hitter Saturday night to become the first 18-game winner in the major leagues and spark the Houston Astros to a 3-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies in a game delayed by rain for 148 minutes.

The victory enabled Houston to remain in the lead ahead of second-place Cincinnati in the National League West.

Philadelphia scored its lone run in the second when Bob Boone walked and scored on a double off loser Nino Espinosa. 13-10, Niekro pitched the first 5 2/3 innings and after the delay, Sambito held the Phillies hitless for his fifth save.

Houston tied the game in the fourth on Jose Cruz's eighth-inning homer and took the lead in the fifth on doubles by Alan Ashby and Niekro. 18-7. The third run crossed the plate when Craig Reynolds tripled and scored on a single by Terry Pugh.

In other early games, Cincinnati beat New York 3-1 and San Francisco downed Chicago 5-2. Montreal and Atlanta were postponed by rain.

George Foster's 23rd homer of the season, a double by Johnny Bench and a pinch squeeze hit RBI single by Hely Cruz lifted the Cincinnati Reds to a five-run ninth inning and an 8-4 victory.

Steve Nouri slashed a bases-loaded double with two out in the seventh inning to carry the San Francisco Giants to their victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Jack Clark stole home with one out in the sixth to tie the score at 2-2 and in the seventh, Larry Herndon started the Giant rally with a double. Herndon got as far as third on a single by Joe St. John, who advanced to second on a throw home. That finished Lynn McGlothen, who suffered his 11th loss against 11 victories.

Ken Reitz drove in the winning run with an eighth-inning sacrifice fly night, helping the St. Louis Cardinals score a 5-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Reitz's blow capped a two-run rally that gave reliever Roy Thomas, 4-2, the victory. The loser was Ken Brett, 3-3.

Los Angeles took the lead when Steve Garvey, Joe Ferguson and Gary Thomeas all slammed solo home runs and Garvey added an RBI single in the third. St. Louis responded with a three-run homer off reliever Garry Templeton and a sacrifice fly by Keith Hernandez.

Green Bay, 4-1, Atlanta 3-0. David White set a record in leading the Green Bay Packers to a 45-33 preseason victory over the Atlanta Falcons.

Los Angeles 23, San Diego 17. Fred Perry claimed an interception 22 yards for two touchdowns and Pat Thomas set up a second score with an interception in the second quarter. # Angels hammer out 24 runs

By United Press International
It was a case of much too much for the California Angels and nothing of anything for the Boston Red Sox.

California, taking advantage of 26 hits, scored eight runs in the first inning and got into the lead to embarrass the Toronto Blue Jays 24-2 Saturday. Boston, meantime, still struggling to catch Baltimore for first place in the American League East, managed only four hits in dropping a 1-0 decision to the Kansas City Royals.

Don Baylor had two home runs, including a grand slam, to drive in eight runs and Bobby Grich, Dan Ford and Bob Clark each had two-run homers to lead the California attack. For Clark, it was his first major league homer.

David Proff went all the way, scattering 10 hits, to pick up his 13th win against first losses.

Craig Kusick, a first baseman, made his major-league pitching debut and gave up two runs and three hits in 2-3 innings for Toronto.

Raiders rip Bills, 48-21

By United Press International
Derrick Jensen picked up a fumble of the opening kickoff and raced 65 yards for a touchdown Saturday night, helping the Oakland Raiders to a sloppy 48-21 triumph over the Buffalo Bills in the preseason finale for both teams.

Raider kick-returned Ira Matthews took Tom Dempsey's opening kickoff at the 1-yard line and returned it 35 yards before tumbling into the hands of Jensen, who dashed the rest of the way.

Oakland scored on its next two possessions, moving 70 yards in 10 plays to score on a 5-yard pass from Ken Stabler to tight end Ray Chester and driving 37 yards in eight plays to score on a 9-yard Stabler-to-Chester pass.

The Raiders made it 28-0, five minutes into the second period when running back Art Whittington swept around left end for an 18-yard TD. Buffalo scored its first touchdown on a 44-yard Joe Ferguson pass to Jerry Butler.

With four minutes gone in the second half, Ferguson connected with Dan Fulin for a 9-yard TD pass. That made it 38-14, but by the end of the third quarter Oakland led 41-14.

Johnson off to ISU

POCATELLO — Lauri Johnson of Filer, is competing with the Idaho State University volleyball team this year. The 5-8 freshman was a standout player with the Filer team in 1978. ISU will play matches against BYU, Utah, Utah State, Wyoming and Weber State.

Orioles won't be in D.C.

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The Baltimore Orioles will not play any home games in Washington next year because the players' association would veto any schedule changes by prospective owner Edward Bennett-Williams. In a copyrighted story for Sunday, the Baltimore News-American quoted player association director Marvin Miller as saying next year's schedule has already been accepted by players and cannot be changed without a full membership vote. However, the newspaper also said that a split schedule or a permanent Baltimore-Washington regional franchise is considered inevitable among major league officials.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — South Carolina's hopes of breaking into the college football elite suffered a major blow Saturday with the loss of starting tailback Johnnie Wright for the season. Wright tore some ligaments in his knee during a rain-drenched afternoon session on a grass field behind the Rex Enright Athletic Center. The 6-foot-1, 200-pound junior from Ft. Myers, Fla., who averaged 5.1 yards per carry on 176 rushes for 903 yards and seven touchdowns last year, underwent surgery later. "Nobody hates to lose Johnnie for the season more than I do," Coach Jim Carlen said. "It's a quality player and some of our other players like (linebacker) Jeff Kenderdossi and James McKie will have to step in now and take up the slack."

Arnoux grabs Prix pole

ZANDVOORT, Holland (UPI) — Frenchman Rene Arnoux's Renault Turbo edged Australian Alan Jones in the battle for pole position Saturday, clocking a lap record of 1:15.47 on the final day of qualifying for today's Dutch Formula One Grand Prix race. Arnoux, missing a chance for second place at the Austrian Grand Prix two weeks ago when he ran out of fuel, clipped half a second off the former mark set Friday by Switzerland's Clay Regazzoni in a Williams. Jones, third fastest Friday, clocked 1:15.65 in his Williams ahead of teammate Regazzoni who posted 1:16.23. Jean-Pierre Jabouille of France, nominally the No. 1 Renault driver, struggled against understeering as he managed fourth place on the grid in 1:16.31.

Former Saint indicted

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A former member of the original New Orleans Saints has been indicted on charges of mail and wire fraud and transportation of stolen property. A three-count indictment handed down Friday accused Louis Cordileone of defrauding James Porter Crosby in a deal to invest funds in Silver Recovery Associates of Canoga Park, Calif. The indictment said the company, a legitimate business, recovers silver from X-ray films. Assistant U.S. Attorney Fredericka Hoerg said Cordileone was charged with inducing Crosby to invest $25,000 in the business and to loan Cordileone another $25,000.

Burton wins PBA event

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — Three closing strikes by Nelson Burton Jr. and a three-pin split on George Pappas' final shot Saturday gave Burton a 203-201 victory and the $8,000 first prize in the $70,000 Sarasota Open tournament. After leaving a 7-10 split on a crucial shot in the ninth frame, Burton, a PBA Hall of Famer from St. Louis, wrapped it up with his perfect final balls. The top-seeded Pappas' only chance was to follow suit. The Charlotte, N.C. native settled on his first two shots slammed solidly into the 1-3 pocket for strikes, but he left the 3-10 pins on his last ball to settle for the $5,000 second prize. Burton, 37, qualified third for the finals. He defeated Marshall Holman of Medford, Ore., 225-203, and then Wayne Webb of Rehoboth, Mass., 232-187, in the semi-final game to move up to challenge Pappas.

Wallace edges A.J. Foyt

DU QUOIN, Ill. (UPI) — Rookie driver Rusty Wallace of Arnold, Mo., won the $27,000 United States Auto Club race Saturday, beating favorite A.J. Foyt. Wallace, 23, took his Firebird around the one-mile dirt oval at an average speed of 86.91 miles per hour. He will receive the larger portion of the $27,000 purse for the 100-mile event.

Orantes posts easy win

BROOKLINE, Mass. (UPI) — Spain's Manuel Orantes took only 43 minutes to advance to the semi-finals of the $175,000 U.S. Professional Tennis Championships Saturday when he crushed South Africa's Johan Kriek, 6-1, 6-0. Czechoslovakia's Tomas Smid, seeded seventh, defeated compatriot Pavel Slozil, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2 in the afternoon's other quarterfinal match. Spain's Jose Higueras, the top seed, was to play India's Vijay Amritraj and Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia was to play Chile's Hans Gildemeister in Saturday night's other quarterfinal matches. Orantes, seeded No. 3, lost the first game of the match and then won the next 12 games, during the first set, Kriek only got 10 of 32 first serves in play or 23 percent.

Taiwan captures LL flag

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (UPI) — A single by Hou Chia-Mou with two out in the eighth inning drove home the winning run Saturday and Dal Han-Chao pitched a no-hitter to give Pu-Tzu Town, Taiwan, a 2-1 victory over Campbell, Calif. and the championship of the Little League World Series. Pu-Tzu's victory before a capacity crowd of 30,000 gave Taiwan its third consecutive Little League title and its eighth championship since 1969. Lu Chang-Kuen got on base in the bottom of the eighth — the second extra inning — when he was hit by a pitch thrown by losing hurler Bob Fraka. Lu moved to third on two wild pitches and scored on Hou's single to center. Dal struck out 17 and walked two to improve his season record to 23-0 and climax a remarkable World Series for Taiwan pitchers. In three games, hurlers for the champions allowed one hit, one run and struck out 50. Campbell had taken a 1-0 lead in the first inning. Matt Allison walked and was forced at second by Dave DeCarlo. DeCarlo scored when left fielder Yin Ching-Lung committed a double error on Fraka's fly ball. Yin nearly collided with Lu and dropped the fly ball. He picked it up and uncorked a wild throw to the plate, allowing DeCarlo to score.

Cervantes outlasts Kim, still champ

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Antonio Cervantes of Colombia successfully defended his title for the 15th time Saturday with a split decision over previously unbeaten South Korean challenger Kim Kwang-nim in a world boxing championship fight.

Cervantes, with a height and reach advantage, dropped Kim with a left hook for the mandatory eight count in the 11th round that seemed to take the fight out of the challenger. Kim piled up his points in the early rounds with a ceaseless attack on Cervantes' head.

Overweighting Kim by a pound, Cervantes was in command over the last four stanzas of the 15-round fight, relentlessly punching Kim with almost no return over the final stretch of the bout.

The referee, Stanley Christodoulou, of South Africa, and Judge Esteban Vico, of Venezuela, awarded the fight to Cervantes with scores of 149-140 and 149-138.

Miller clings to PGA lead

PINEHURST, N.C. (UPI) — Johnny Miller, making his strongest bid for a victory in more than three years, shot a 1-under-par 70 Saturday for an 11-under 292 total after three rounds of the Hall of Fame Golf Classic — but Tom Watson and Keith Fergus pulled to within one stroke of the leader at the close of the round. "I wouldn't say I choked at all," said Miller, who won eight tournaments and $533,000 in 1974 but has been winless since early 1976. "If I'd had a good putting round, I would have shot 66 or 67." Watson had the hottest round of the leaders with a 6-under-par 65 and gave warning he will be going after his fifth victory of the year Sunday at the Pinehurst, Country Club's No. 2 course. Fergus, whose best finish this year was fifth in the Bob Hope Desert Classic, had a 67 Saturday in seeking the first PGA Tour victory of his young career. Danny Edwards, who started the day in a three-way tie for second three strokes behind Miller, had a 69 Saturday and finished alone in fourth place at 9-under. And North and Tommy Aaron wound up at 7-under, Aaron shooting an erratic 71 that included six bogeys and six birdies while North recorded a 6-under-par 67. Dana Quigley, who led the first round after a sparkling 6-under 63, slipped to a 74 Friday and fell further back Saturday with a 2-over 73 for a 210 total. Miller, who had a 69 Thursday, said he hopes to stay in contention until the finishing holes Sunday and will "see if I can win."

ST. PAUL (UPI) — Beth Daniel, a 22-year-old rookie seeking her first victory on the LPGA tour, shot a 2-under-par 71 Saturday for a 54-hole total of 208 and a four-stroke lead over Hollis Stacy in the $100,000 Patty Berg Golf Classic. Daniel, who led the tournament after each of the first two rounds, rifled in four birdies and slipped over par twice on the par-73 Keller Golf Course. She bogeyed the last hole after hitting a female gallery marshal above the eye with her second shot, an incident which left her in tears. Stacy, who trailed Daniel by three strokes at the halfway mark of the 72-hole event, shot a 1-under 72. Daniel, who is 14th on the LPGA money list despite her failure to win, said the 18th hole was "just plain a bad hole." "If I wouldn't have walked up and seen her I would have been alright," she said, referring to the injured marshal. "She was just covered with blood. I just lost my concentration after this. It was like I wasn't on the golf course." "If the ball hadn't hit her I think it would have been up close to the green."

Gasohol is a hit in Burley, Rupert, Buhl

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer

MAGIC VALLEY Gasohol, still selling well in Buhl, seems to be a hit in Rupert and Burley as well, according to Cenex co-op managers in all three towns.

"I know people feel good about short-changing the Arabs," said Wayne Ranstrom, manager of United Co-op, Inc., Rupert's Cenex dealership.

Ranstrom, who sold 6,000 gallons of the alcohol-gasoline mixture in four days Aug. 8-11, bought his 200-proof alcohol from Buhl Cooperative Supply, another Cenex co-op. Convicted of gasoline-pump fuel from an underground-tank-to allow for a permanent gasohol pump at his station. He said he will start selling the fuel again in early September.

Lynn Dokkebakken, manager of the Buhl co-op, said he is selling gasohol at the rate of about 10,000 gallons a month. His price is now $1.05 a gallon.

Dokkebakken said his alcohol is distilled from wood chips by a Georgia-Pacific Corp. plant in Bellingham, Wash. He paid $1.95 a gallon for the 10,000-gallon he bought earlier this month and has since sold some to Cenex gas stations in Blackfoot and Burley as well as Rupert.

The Burley station, owned by Full Circle, Inc., is selling gasohol for 99.9-cents-a-gallon-with-a-low-profit margin to encourage customers to try it out, said Full Circle manager Carl McElhinney.

"I'm excited about it," said McElhinney. "I don't think it's making us any money right now, but it's a start. Self-sufficiency in the direction we're going to have to go, and I think the feeling in this area is quite high that we need to find a renewable resource."

All Cenex gasohol is 10 percent alcohol mixed with unleaded gasoline to maximize the octane rating. McElhinney, who says he has been selling about 750 gallons a day since he started two weeks ago, said several gasohol customers have reported better mileage.

McElhinney said he expects a major oil company to start pumping pre-mixed gasohol to Burley by pipeline next January or February. But what he and Dokkebakken really want is a local alcohol plant, which they say is the only way to reduce transportation costs and bring the price of the mixture down.

Department of Energy scientists are running experiments at the Raft River geothermal project, near Malta, to determine the practicality of building an alcohol plant there, according to John Griffith, chief of the Research and Engineering branch of the geothermal division of the Idaho Falls DOE office.

Although there are no firm plans for a plant yet, hot spring water would be used in the alcohol distillation process. Griffith will be in Washington, D.C. next week to discuss the experiment data with DOE officials.

He said funding to begin the project is probably available, depending on how the feasibility of a plant at Raft River compares with that of other similar projects around the country.

Potatoes, grain, and other vegetable matter can be used to produce the alcohol, Griffith said.

Dokkebakken also suggested a tax incentive for gasohol dealers. He said the directors of his co-op plan to ask the 1983 Idaho Legislature for a full or partial exemption from the state road tax, which he said now amounts to 9.31 cents on every gallon sold.

McElhinney said he hopes car manufacturers will modify engines to allow a higher percentage of alcohol in the fuel. Cars can run smoothly on pure alcohol, he said.

but engine seals and gaskets will be damaged eventually if the percentage is much higher than the 10 percent Cenex recommends.

Dokkebakken said he doesn't recommend any gasohol for cars built before 1972. Although alcohol does not damage metal, it will clean off carbon deposits. In older engines, carbon has often replaced worn metal, he said, and exposing the worn areas could lower compression and cause a car to burn more fuel.

Dokkebakken said many customers have requested pure alcohol to mix their own fuel, but he cannot dispense it from his storage tank in small quantities. He will deliver a minimum of 100 gallons of alcohol if the customer has a tank big enough, he said.

Woman drowns at falls

Second victim of swift channel

TWIN FALLS — A 19-year-old Air Force woman drowned at Mountain Home Air Force Base as swept over Shoshone Falls to her death early Saturday afternoon.

Search and rescue organizations and sheriff's officers from both Twin Falls and Jerome counties were searching the river below the falls late Saturday for the victim.

Air Force officials identified the woman as Airman 1st Class Kim Kim, whose home town was Carthage, S.D.

Twin Falls County Sheriff James Munn said the accident was almost identical to a drowning in May of this year of a 25-year-old Heyburn woman, Colleen Y. Page, fell while walking on rocks above the nearly dry falls and was carried over.

"Munn said in both instances the woman fell into a deep and very swift channel running from a pool of water above the falls down over the rocks."

"About the only differences in the two drownings is that the Mountain Home woman was closer to the edge of the falls when she apparently slipped on the rocks and fell into the swift channel," he said.

The sheriff said Kim and a number of other Air Force members and families were having a picnic at Shoshone Falls park about 1 p.m. The woman and several others walked out onto the rocks above the falls on the south side of the river.

"Several of her friends saw her fall into the water but were too far away to reach her," Munn said.

He said her friends watched helplessly as she was carried over the rocks that form the falls.

Jim Woods, president of the Twin Falls County Search and Rescue Unit, met with Jerome County unit members to map plans for search efforts. Munn was assisted by Deputies Larry Webb and Eric Clark in directing the search.

Munn said it was impossible to use divers or even boats close to the falls because of the turbulent water.

"We plan to work about the same way we did in May when the Heyburn woman was lost," he said.

Search efforts Saturday afternoon and until dark Saturday were confined to a watch of the water surface and the banks on both the south and north sides of the river. Searchers scanned the area with binoculars from above the river.

Two boats were kept on stand by at the edge of the river near the Idaho Power Plant on the north side in case of a sighting.

Miss Page was drowned May 12 as she attempted to jump the small swift channel running from the pond above the falls and down over the rocks. She slipped and fell into the water, officers said.

Gooding couple acquitted

BOISE — A Gooding couple has been acquitted in U.S. District Court here of 68 of 70 counts of mail fraud and violating the Packers and Stockyards Act.

There was a hung jury on the remaining two counts against Orle and Frieda Leavell. Their acquittal came after six days of deliberation by a 12-man jury Wednesday afternoon on charges of defrauding packing companies in the Midwest and Colorado.

The Leavells referred all questions to their lawyer, Jim Risch of Boise. Risch indicated the remaining two counts will soon be dropped by the U.S. Department of Justice.

"In a case based on all the transactions being tied together and they are not guilty on 68, it is difficult to see how the government would proceed with two," he reasoned.

Especially, Risch said, when U.S. District Judge Ray McNichols strongly recommended that the government dismiss the remaining counts rather than file for a retrial.

The Leavells, two other Idahoans and two Washington residents were indicted last winter, by a federal grand jury for fraud. It had been alleged that Menfort of Colorado Inc., had been defrauded of more than $1.5 million between 1974 and 1975 by being billed for higher-weighted beef shipments than had been shipped.

Risch said Menfort could not have been defrauded because it weighs and records each shipment as it comes in, so the company knew exactly what it was paying for.

Only one conviction has come from the indictments. Mike Donaldson of Lewiston received a $5,000 fine in an earlier trial. Charges against another defendant were dismissed and two cattlemen from Caldwell were acquitted.

Arts panel to meet

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Commission on the Arts has scheduled its fall meeting for Sept. 14-15 at the West Bank Motel in Idaho Falls.

Chairman Kellie Cosho of Boise said the commission will adopt the agency's budget and approve funding policies and programs for the next two fiscal years.

The commission, created in 1966, administers funds from the National Endowment for the Arts

Traffic to be detoured

TWIN FALLS — Beginning Monday morning, traffic will be blocked from the intersection of Falls Avenue East and Eastland Drive North as crews repair the intersection and its approaches.

Twin Falls city engineer Gary Young said work on the intersection will continue through Wednesday. Crews expect to finish about 5 p.m. Wednesday, he said.

Through traffic will be detoured, "I would recommend people just avoid the area if they possibly can," Young said.

Addison Avenue would be the most likely alternate route, he added.

Residents in the area will be allowed to travel up to the intersection.

The last possible detour for southbound traffic on Eastland will be Kenneth Road. Northbound traffic can turn east on Addison Avenue or west on Flir.

Westbound traffic on Falls Avenue will be required to use county road 3200 East. The last possible detour for eastbound traffic turning north is Madrona Street. Eastbound traffic turning south can use Locust Street.

Young said the city chose to close the intersection and speed construction along to reduce costs.

Brotherly assault charged

TWIN FALLS — Robert William Jones, 19, of Twin Falls, was taken into custody by city police early Saturday morning and charged with disorderly conduct after an alleged altercation with his brother, Ruben Jones, also of Twin Falls.

City police reported Robert Jones came to the police station asking to sign a complaint against his brother about midnight Friday. Told he would have to wait until a police officer on duty could be called into the station, Jones threw an ash tray against the wall and walked out.

Police said the two brothers met later by chance at the corner of Filmore Street and Heyburn Avenue where an alleged fist fight ensued. Police charged Robert Jones then ran his van into Ruben Jones' pickup truck and Ruben Jones jumped into the bed of the vehicle to avoid being run over.

Robert Jones was taken to Magie Valley Memorial Hospital for x-ray examinations. Here he again indicated a threat to his brother, police said, and tore a hospital gown off and attempted to leave the hospital. At this point, police said, he was taken into custody to prevent further problems between the two young men.

Robert Jones was in custody Saturday in lieu of $300 bond.

Visiting Russians hope to improve meat production at home

By BONNIE BAIRD-JONES
Times-News writer

PICABO — Russian agricultural experts, visiting the little Idaho ranching community of Picabo Friday, expressed special interest in the mechanization of ranching in Idaho.

Bud Purdy, local rancher and host to three Russian agricultural scientists, said the foreign visitors had an opportunity to see having operations on his ranch and to inspect irrigation systems and other ranching procedures.

The team of four, all directors in the Soviet equivalent of the Department of Agriculture in the United States, visited here as part of a Department of Agriculture-sponsored exchange program. They are making a return visit after Purdy and three other American agriculturists visited Russia in May and June of this year.

Purdy said Russia's diet lacks protein, mainly red meat. As a result, the country is attempting to produce more meat and for this must have forage crops.

"They asked me many questions about our methods of cutting and harvesting the hay and also about irrigation and other machinery and equipment we use.

"One of the major differences in our agricultural operation and theirs is the fact we use more machinery and less labor. Most of their farming is still primitive compared to ours and most of the work is done by hand," Purdy said.

Purdy's 9,700-acre ranch, including irrigated alfalfa and grain and dry, and irrigated pasture and range, illustrated the cattle feeding program in the western states, and he said the Russian visitors seemed impressed with the hay and pastures and quality of the feed.

"They raise a good deal the same kind of crops in Russia that we do and it may be we will be selling some machinery to the Russians to help them improve the handling and production of crops. We also have a product to prevent blood in cattle which interested the Russian agriculturists," Purdy said.

He said in visiting he found the Russian farmers working with much less capable machinery. While that country is using sprinkler irrigation, the equipment is obsolete and requires a lot of time and labor, the Picabo rancher said.

He added the Russians do not want to reduce their meat production but rather want to expand it. The country is short in foreign exchange, Purdy said, and wants to build livestock production from within the country by improving forage and production procedure.

Purdy was selected as a member of the American Exchange program as chairman of the Idaho Range and Livestock Commission, a position he has held about 10 years.

The Russian visitors included A.I. Olyashov, head of the administration for feeds and pastures, of the Department of Agriculture, USSR; Z.A. Zhamadkin, director of the national research institute for meadow and pasture production, USSR; S.A. Asamov, director of all Union Research Institute for sheep production in the USSR, and G.D. Vlagovestzenskiy, deputy director of all union research institute of agriculture, USSR.

Traveling with the three is Mary Panomerdinko, an American who serves as their tour director and interpreter. Purdy said one of the Russians speaks English well but Ms. Panomerdinko must interpret for the others.

The Idaho visit was one of several stops made in the four-week visit in this country. Their tour began in Las Cruces, N.M., and included Berkeley, Calif., Logan, Utah, and Point Springs near Malta. In all of their stops the specialists in research and experimental programs by USDA and agencies.

Purdy said his ranch was the only stop the team made involving a return visit to a member of the American team that earlier visited them in Russia.

Purdy said he noticed a lack of incentive and enthusiasm among Russian farmers while in that country.

"There all of the land is government-owned and the government provides the operation cost and taxes the revenue, paying the farmers for their work," Purdy said. "Under that type of situation it is natural there would be less enthusiasm on the part of the farmer than in this country where we own our own land and have to show a profit to stay in business."

Purdy added the Russians said they were able to show a profit in the farming there but did not explain the reasons, paying the farmers for their work," Purdy said. "Under that type of situation it is natural there would be less enthusiasm on the part of the farmer than in this country where we own our own land and have to show a profit to stay in business."

He said they were interested in energy supplies, especially electricity and talked about yields, fertilizers, irrigation and water management, types of grass planted here and the number of workers needed for ranch operations. Purdy said they reported having a successful tour and seemed anxious to learn about western livestock production.

Political wrangling marks week

By United Press International

The political controversies highlighted Idaho's news this week while the state crawled out from under a summer-long siege of forest and range fires.

Sen. Frank Church, a Democrat, called on the Anyone But Church committee to retract a charge that said Church cost the taxpayers $2.3 billion by voting to bail New York City out of financial trouble.

Church said he did vote for the bill-out, but said the ABC charge was misleading because he said the government ended up making $32.3 million on the loan to New York.

ABC Chairman Don Todd said there was no possibility of a retraction, although he earlier retracted another charge. Todd called Church's rebuttal of the bail-out charge "hogwash."

In another political joust, Gov. John Evans received criticism for his appointment of the controversial Robert Loughen as director of the state Office of Energy.

State Senate President Pro Tem

Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, said Loughen, who was rejected by the state Senate last winter—from reappointment to the chairmanship of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, merely was a "hacker" of Evans.

Also this week, Democrats, Republicans, state officials, federal officials, ranchers—farmers—and developers engaged in a tangled dispute over the proposed Snake River Birds of Prey Conservation Area.

The federal government, represented by Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, was proposing a refuge of 720,000 acres, but he said the proposal might be modified in the wake of a state Land Board vote.

The board, voting along strict party lines—with the Republicans enjoying a 3-2 majority, voted to delay a land trade for the bird area. The government wants to use 44,000 state acres in the refuge.

Gov. John V. Evans said it was "foolish" to delay the land transfer. Andrus warned the state that it was useless to try to use the land as a lever to speed up transfer of other lands owed to Idaho, because the government could establish the refuge without it if it wanted.

The GOP board members and the lieutenant governor made a bus tour of the proposed area and heard the views of farmers, ranchers and developers concerned about the project.

Meanwhile, the 65,300-acre Mortar Creek fire was brought under control and smothered by fire crews. It was the last major fire burning in the state and most of the week merely was a mop-up operation.

In other news around the state:

- Boundary County joined Blaine County in asking the governor to declare a drought emergency in their areas. Governorial aides said as many as 21 counties could end up applying for aid before the year is out.
- Gasolol, already a big hit in most of the state, made its debut in eastern Idaho as two service stations near Blackfoot began selling the gasoline-alcohol mixture.

- Evans appointed Lt. Gov. Phil Bait and Employment Department Director Glenn Nichols to lead a committee aimed at locating and assisting southeast Asian refugees in Idaho.
- A 20-year-old part-time Boise tavern bouncer was shot-in-the-head and killed after a struggle. His alleged assailant was the subject of a nationwide law enforcement alert for two days until he turned himself in to Boise police.
- Two Boise men dragged a 70-year-old man from a burning apartment house while flames licked their sleeves, saving the man's life.
- The Garden City Council fired Police Chief Ben Patterson after a week of feuding over the use of a police car. Two other officers turned in their resignations because they were upset about the situation.
- A 10-woman, two-man jury found Boise coroner Charles Fenley guilty of first-degree murder in the shotgun killing of his 38-year-old wife Dorothy. He could be sentenced to death.

Emmett school teachers settle

EMMETT (UPI) — Emmett School District teachers have accepted an offer for a 4 percent pay increase.

The teachers voted Friday morning to strike when school opened next Wednesday unless a salary settlement was achieved. The strike plans were killed later Friday at the end of a three-hour meeting between teachers and the Emmett School Board.

The district's original offer was for a 2 percent pay boost, while the teachers asked for a 9.3 percent hike.

Krishna cultists win right to solicit

BOISE (UPI) — Here Krishna missionaries won a court fight Friday for the right to solicit at the Western Idaho Fair in Boise during the eight-day fair, which began today.

The sect won the right to pass out literature and solicit donations on the fairgrounds after fair officials backed down when faced with a lawsuit. The sect contended in a suit filed Thursday afternoon in U.S. District Court that fair officials unconstitutionally had constrained sect members by confining their activities to a fair booth.

The suit was filed by chief U.S. District Court Judge Ray McNichols, attorneys for Ada County and the Western Idaho Fair Board agreed the missionaries could solicit on the fairgrounds.

Here Krishna subsequently dropped its request that McNichols issue a temporary restraining order barring county interference at fair.

"We backed down based on the belief portrayed by the judge that it will be futile to put on a case which might have a future on a complete case," said Ada County Prosecutor Jim Harris.

But Harris said the county plans to challenge the Krishna lawsuit for legal impact it might have at future fairs. "We're still maintaining they are a mercantile and not a religious operation."

Harris called the Krishna members "a pain in the neck."

"But we have to afford them the opportunity to exercise their constitutional rights."

The dispute began when the Ada County Commission and the fair board decided not to allow solicitation and proselytizing by religious groups at the fair booths.

The fair's general manager, Dan Peters, said the Krishna members were banned from the grounds because "we had numerous, numerous complaints of harassment" by the sect at the 1978 fair.

"They were getting in the way, impeding progress of people wanting to go to the fair booths."

Another county may burn garbage

CALDWELL (UPI) — Canyon County officials are thinking about buying a plant to convert garbage into marketable steam.

Officials in Twin Falls and Cassia counties also are mulling such a possibility for their areas. The three counties are dealing with Widjac Corp., a solid waste management company from Washington state.

Canyon County Commissioner Una Dell "Tex" Coles says 43,000 tons of garbage could be converted to steam each year at a garbage-to-energy plant in the county.

"Steam generated from the processed garbage would be sold to nearby businesses."

The state attorney general's office, however, first must decide whether Canyon voters would have to approve the $2.4 million cost of the plant's construction.

Life's Tasks End, and for the Spark, Renewal . . .

At the completion of life's tasks comes fulfillment for the spirit. This truth we endeavor to express.

Shirley Gramse Kendrick

TWIN FALLS — Shirley Gramse Kendrick, 68, a resident of Twin Falls for 45 years, died Saturday morning at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital of a lung illness.

She was born July 9, 1912, at Richfield, Utah. She married H. Dean Kendrick Oct. 31, 1934, at Twin Falls and the marriage was solemnized at the Idaho Falls Temple April 28, 1958. She had lived all her married life in Twin Falls, where she had been active in the LDS Church, serving in numerous positions. She was also active in many Twin Falls women's organizations and held offices in Ladies of Elks, Toastmasters Club and 20th Century Club.

She survived by her husband, Dean, of Twin Falls; two daughters, Mrs. Robert C. (Shirley) White of Twin Falls and Mrs. Dennis A. (Pat) Tabei of Omaha; four granddaughters; and a grandson.

She was preceded in death by a daughter, Linda.

Services will be held at the 3th and 7th Ward LDS Chapel, 847 Eastland Drive N., at 11 a.m. Wednesday. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Park. The family suggests donations to the American Cancer Society. Friends may call at White Mortuary Monday and Tuesday, and at the church from 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Charles A. Abrams

BOISE — Charles A. Abrams, 94, of Boise and formerly of Filer, died Friday in a Boise nursing home after an extended illness.

He was born May 24, 1885, near Clarkburg, Ind., and lived the early part of his life in Indiana. He came to Idaho after serving in the U.S. Army. He farmed in Magic Valley for many years and in 1955 sold his farm and retired, moving to Filer. His wife, Nancy Abrams, died in 1970 and in 1972 he moved to Boise. He was a member of the Methodist Church.

Surviving are three grandsons, Gary L. Abrams of Boise, Kenneth Abrams in the U.S. Army in Frankfurt, Germany, and Melvin Abrams of Clarkburg, Ala.; a granddaughter, Mrs. Marvin (LaRee) Stokes of Boise; a sister, Mrs. Stella Sherwood of Greensburg, Ind.; eight great-

TV newsman says court on rampage

BOISE (UPI) — Veteran newsman Daniel Schorr Friday criticized the U.S. Supreme Court, saying it is "on a rampage against the press."

During a "Right to Be" to the Pacific Northwest Library Association annual convention, Schorr told librarians the country's court system is reflects popular opinion by curtailing press freedom.

"The only way you can call it is a rampage against the press and its privileges in this country," Schorr said. "There is an extra element of venom that goes along with it. It's as though it's really time to cut down the press."

At a news conference earlier Friday, Schorr compared President Carter to "a character walking to the bottom of the world's drawing board."

He told reporters Carter's biggest mistake has been to surround himself with Georgia campaigners rather than seasoned presidential advisers.

He said Carter's staff "doesn't know how to minister his image into policy" and, as a result, the President has never gotten down to the job of governing the nation.

Schorr said Carter's trips around the country are another indication that the President is still on the campaign trail.

Schorr, who now works out of Washington for the Des Moines Register and has a nationally syndicated column, left a 23-year career at CBS News after he leaked a confidential congressional document to the Village Voice newspaper.

Schorr said he "won't place bets" that Sen. Edward Kennedy will run against Carter in 1980. He said Carter is virtually assured of the Democratic nomination.

WELL YIELDS HOT WATER

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — The deepest well drilled in the eastern Snake River Plain in southeastern Idaho penetrated a buried volcanic complex that may yield a potential geothermal resource, a U.S. Geological Survey said.

The exploratory well, drilled northeast of Arco, reached a depth of 10,365 feet. The report said the well was drilled through a volcanic area once similar to the one at Yellowstone National Park.

The survey said geothermal resources may be found in faults located by the drilling.

The maximum temperature of the well is 320 degrees recorded at 10,110 feet, the survey said.

OVER A THOUSAND GAS-MINDED AMERICANS BOUGHT A NEW FULL-SIZE CHEVROLET YESTERDAY.***

AND THE DAY BEFORE. AND THE DAY BEFORE THAT. ETC.

WHY DO YOU SUPPOSE THEY BOUGHT IT?

FOR ITS GAS MILEAGE.
The Chevrolet Caprice and Impala offer 33% better gas mileage than just four years ago. That's comparing EPA estimated MPG of our 1979 model to the 1975 model - each equipped with a base V8 engine and automatic transmission. (Highway percentage increase is less.)

FOR ITS DRIVING RANGE.***
Miles between fill-ups are important. And the Chevrolet's estimated city range of 420 miles and highway estimate of 441 miles are impressive figures. These figures are obtained by multiplying the 21-gallon fuel tank capacity by (a) EPA estimated MPG (city), 21 highway estimate for a '79 Caprice or Impala with available 5 Liter V8. Remember, compare the EPA estimated MPG with that of other cars. Your mileage and range may vary depending upon speed, distance and weather. City mileage and range will be less on heavy city traffic. And your actual highway mileage and range will probably be less than the highway estimate. The Chevrolet is equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. See your dealer for details.

TO SAVE HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS.
Special incentives to Chevrolet dealers now make possible savings of hundreds of dollars. So there's a sale going on at your Chevy dealer. You could save big money on America's best-selling 6-passenger car, the 1979 Chevrolet Caprice and Impala. Sedans, Coupes and Station Wagons.

FOR ITS ROOM.
Full-size, 6-passenger room. Room for families, room for car pools. In fact, who smaller, outside and more maneuverable than the full-size 1979 Chevrolet if equipped, the 1979 Chevrolet gives you more head room, more rear seat leg room - and more trunk room!

FOR ITS RIDE.
The Chevrolet Caprice and Impala are wonderfully smooth and quiet on the road. You'll love the way they move easily through turns, over bumps, and in and out of city traffic.

FOR ITS COMFORT.
The comfort of broad sofa-like seats, fully cushioned with deep foam. The comfort of long-lasting, high-fibers and tasteful appointments throughout.

FOR ITS CHEVY-VALUE.
Impressive mileage and driving range, family-size room, big car ride comfort and now at sale prices. They all add up to a Chevrolet that's packed with Chevy value. The kind of value that's rationally best respected, and looked for in resale, too.

Interest rate hike labeled 'window dressing'

By MARY TORIN
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Board's recent hike in the discount and federal funds rates to help the dollar and fight inflation are "window dressing" and Europe isn't buying window dressing, according to investment adviser Dawn Schultz.

But Ms. Schultz thinks that while the upward price spiral is bad in the United States, America is in better shape than the rest of the world and better able to combat inflation.

Even though European countries have always kept a tight hold on their economies that is not possible in a diverse country like the United States, she said.

"Americans have more potential for the belt-tightening it will take to bring things back into balance," she said. "European countries have kept the brakes on so long 'I don't think the people will take it much longer.'"

The petite Englishwoman, former wife of currency maverick Harry Schultz, moved to Princeton, N.J., five months ago after living for five years in West Germany. She publishes her investment letter from a combination home-office on the outskirts of town.

"Ideally, I should be located in New York, but I need the feeling of space that the wall-to-wall concrete of Manhattan doesn't have," she said. "I keep in touch with my contacts by telephone and telex and I'm only an hour from New York."

She went to public school in England (equivalent of U.S. private school) on scholarship, studying economics and political science because "it was an acceptable field for nice young ladies at that time." And since a scholarship student was forced to maintain grades, "you fought for your scholastic life to stay on top."

A self-described monetarist who has 40 percent of her portfolio in gold, she thinks "it's horrendous that the United States is selling off its gold. While the rest of the world holds gold, it's madness to sell."

Ms. Schultz is not a "gold bug," however, and believes the U.S. dollar can regain its preeminence without going back to the gold standard.

"There are two ways to have sound money," she said. One is with gold backing and the other is to have a balanced budget. "We can do this only with a tight fiscal policy, limits on government spending and by keeping credit tight."

The recent hike in interest rates — "and I think they'll go higher" — will have little or no effect on the dollar, she said.

"They're merely window dressing. As witness that Europe isn't buying it, the only part that affected the dollar positively last week was President Carter's decontrol of heavy crude oil," she said.

Nor will the record high interest rates have much impact on the inflation rate — a dampening of the money supply is the only way to curb prices. "The quickest and most effective way to limit money growth is to raise reserve requirements for banks."

Ms. Schultz said she moved to the United States because "America now represents the best opportunities for investors of all countries. The foreign investment money is flowing into the United States for just a reason."

After five years in West Germany, she finds American "inflexibility" toward those in power a refreshing contrast to Germany. "Even though West Germany is a democracy the Germans have an absolute respect for authority that you don't find in this country."

But former husband Harry, "still my business partner and best friend," says Dawn's move to the United States is a good omen.

"I moved to West Germany just before the economic boom and the sharp rise in value of the D-mark," she explained.

Overseas profit claims criticized

By WINSTON WILLIAMS

NEW YORK — When the oil companies prompted headlines and wide criticism with their sharply higher second-quarter profits, the big companies seemed at pains to attribute the startling gains to operations abroad.

The fat profits did not come out of the American consumer's pocket, or so the implication ran.

"Almost all of this year's first-half increase in net income occurred outside the United States," Gulf Oil Corp. explained in full-page ads that ran in major newspapers. Similarly, Texaco Inc., in explaining a 132 percent increase in its second-quarter earnings, pointed to profits from foreign operations.

Perhaps so, but the industry's demurrers have been received skeptically by oil industry critics, who contend that the integrated oil business is not nearly as segmentable as the neat division between foreign operations and domestic operations would imply.

Industry critics contend that the oil companies' profits reports materially understate how much American markets (and thus American consumers) actually contributed to the companies' black ink, according to the critics, the profits from hundreds of millions of dollars in "intra-company" sales — reflecting transactions between, for instance, a production unit abroad and the same company's refining or marketing operations in this country — are customarily chalked up to foreign operations.

The issue is important because the industry's substantial profits gains for the second quarter and for the first six months this year have given renewed impetus to urgings that a "windfall" profits tax should be enacted to counter profiteering by the industry.

At the same time, however, many financial analysts who follow the oil industry contend that the industry's foreign profits of the first half are exceptional, unsustainable and likely to drop in the near future.

The issue is not easy to sort out. "To some extent the debate over the source of profits is polemical," said Joseph Lerner, head of Energy Economics Associates, a consulting firm in Washington. "Oil companies usually try to maximize their foreign income to take advantage of foreign tax breaks, especially during times of high price increases. The interesting question is how much foreign income do they earn on products sold in the United States."

The American Petroleum Institute, the oil industry's principal trade group, has consistently argued that, for the oil industry as a whole, the surge in foreign profits did indeed dwarf the increase in the companies' domestic profits. Accounting to the APTI, second-quarter profits for the 23 largest American oil companies rose 69 percent to $5.3 billion. By its estimate, more than 80 percent of the growth in profits came from foreign operations.

But that is not the entire story. An examination of all company income statements, together with interviews with oil executives and analysts, indicates that hundreds of millions of dollars in foreign profits are actually derived from petroleum products that are ultimately sold in the United States.

Domestic and international operations, although separated on the corporate income statements, overlap because the major international companies sell substantial amounts of the crude they produce abroad to their domestic refineries. The profits on these intra-company sales, recorded as foreign earnings, are usually buried in a larger figure that includes, among other things, earnings from foreign oil sold in foreign markets, foreign refineries and outlets, and oil-f tanker operations.

When a Gulf overseas subsidiary, for example, sells crude from Nigeria to a Gulf refinery in the United States, the foreign subsidiary is credited with any profit on the transaction. Production costs are usually less than a $1.50 a barrel. But the domestic refinery pays the prevailing market price, now between $15 and $20 a barrel plus transportation costs.

Oil companies say that generally accepted accounting principles require that they report their profits as they do. "We have to allocate profits to countries where they're earned," said Jack Morris, vice president for financial relations at Gulf.

Still, some critics assert that the oil companies tend to ship the most expensive oil to the United States refineries to keep both their domestic profit margins and their domestic taxes low.

Carmine Pellosie demonstrates infra-red glasses; automated car control panel

James Bond would be right at home in this automobile

NEW YORK (UPI) — With rear and front machine gun mounts and an emission system that can squirt oil, tear gas, or sleeping gas, the explosion-proof car would be a dream machine for secret agent 007 James Bond.

But the 1979 Cadillac on display at the Tavern on the Green Restaurant is meant not for the spy but for the man fearful of a terrorist attack.

The $245,000 car was originally ordered 18 months ago for the deposed shah of Iran. But after putting down a $50,000 deposit, the shah, who is now living with his family in Mexico, canceled the order.

"It's like a waving flag in Mexico," explained Carmine Pellosie, vice president of CCS Communication Control Inc., which designed the car.

He said the car had been bought by an unidentified European financier.

Besides the machine gun mounts and the emission system to confound pursuers, the car is equipped with a radar system that has a 6-mile range, an explosive detection system and emergency oxygen supply.

For those moments when the pressure is off, the car's passengers can unwind by mixing a drink from a bar and listening to its stereo system while reclining in plush leather seats.

Pellosie said the car "is a necessary item now" for VIPs fearful of terrorist attack.

"James Bond would feel at home in this automobile," he said.

Fuel conservation program costly

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Conservation can solve the American energy problem a lot faster than a synthetic fuel program but it will cost almost as much, says an Atlanta energy expert.

"We could save eight million barrels of oil a day by conservation measures alone," says E. Milton Bevington, president of Servidyne Corp. of Atlanta, for 10 years in the business of advising companies how to save fuel and electricity.

Bevington said practically every home and business in the country could save anywhere from 30 to 70 percent of its energy consumption.

"But," he said, "we could easily spend up to $180 billion in the next 10 years on engineering and design and remodeling of buildings, vehicles and machines to save energy."

However, Bevington said, the money would be better spent than the $140 billion President Carter wants to spend on alternative and synthetic fuels, "even though we ultimately may have to go to synthetic fuels."

The difference, he said, is the money spent to conserve fuel will not be handed over to bureaucrats. It will be spent by the fuel consumers themselves and the benefits will be spelled out for them in advance by competent conservation engineers who can demonstrate that the outlays really will pay off in fuel and power savings.

The big savings can be made in heating, air conditioning and transportation energy costs, Bevington said. The high conversion costs can't be minimized, he said. It always costs more to fix up something that is obsolete or was ill-conceived in the first place than it does to start out afresh, especially if you start afresh on a mass production basis.

A prime example of this can be seen in the current campaign of the Diesel Automobile Association, a promotional group, to persuade the automobile industry to switch to new, highly fuel-efficient diesel engines for passenger cars.

The association has a couple of American family-sized cars retrofitted with a small, four-cylinder Japanese diesel engine that gives 47 miles to the gallon.

Lower price of beauty

By SYLVIA PORTER

Field Enterprises, Inc.

Of all the industries considered "resistant," the beauty industry is ranked at or near the top.

"The reason," you have only a few dollars to spend on yourself, the odds are you'll spend them for a beauty product or service — lipstick or shaving cream, hairdo or haircut.

That explains why American women spend more than any other nation on beauty, about $1 billion a year on beauty services and products, of which $4.6 billion is spent in beauty salons and barber shops, unknown additional millions on beauty boxes and manicure, pedicure, exercise machines, scales, other health-aided products.

(A recent survey by Modern Salon revealed that 76 percent of the 15,000-plus beauty salons in the U.S. now cater to men as well as women, and that 54 percent of these salons are doing 25 percent or more of their business with men.)

If that's essential of "beauty" is taking a big bite out of your already strained budget, here are 10 ways to cut your costs.

- (1) Do some of the work yourself. Most salons will let you do your own shampoo your own hair, then go for a cut and styling and save from $1 to $5 or more by this alone. And if you have one of the popular wash-and-wear styles, you can blow-dry your own hair.
- (2) Watch for specials — generally on slow days early in the work week and in certain months. January and February are traditionally perm months. Consider store brands — "make-over packages" for clothes-shopping. Watch newspaper ads; ask your hairdresser to notify you of a sale in on Watch, too, for cosmetic and toiletry sales; after Christmas is usually a time for excellent buys in this field.
- (3) Be a ginea pig — volunteer to be a "model" at a hairdressing (or barber) school. This can be risky but instructors need models on whom to demonstrate new techniques; the work will be tops. Advanced hairdressing schools, giving experienced stylists brush-up courses, offer great bargains. Check your yellow pages for schools.

- (4) Try before you buy. Salons and stores selling cosmetics often have "demonstrators" who will cheerfully and without charge let you try beauty products. You don't need expensive perfume, prettily-packaged creams, lotions and potions.
- (5) Consider alternatives. You can soften your hands with pharmacy-mixed rosewater and glycerine, shampoo with liquid castile or green soap. You don't need expensive perfumed, prettily-packaged creams, lotions and potions.
- (6) Check prices carefully. A department store may have two beauty salons, one for head-to-toe pampering, the other for basics only. The former is as expensive as most toothpastes. Mayonnaise works as well as any conditioner on the market. Unflavored gelatin dissolved in boiling water has few equals as a setting lotion. And on and on.
- (7) Scout for store brands or name brands at discounts. Ask if the product you want isn't on display, it may be in a cabinet at a marked-down price. Consider store brands — which may even be made by the same manufacturers who produce name-brands — on which you can save considerable amounts. Differences mainly will be in packaging.

- (8) Buy in quantity. Items you use a great deal. Find out if and how you can save by buying in quantity, including large sizes. A box of say, eight cakes of hand soap for the price of six sold separately, special beauty salon rates — all add up to savings.
- (9) Take advantage of gift (or purchase) with purchase. Cosmetic makers hate them; stores love them. You benefit from the promotion gimmick of gift-with-purchase or purchase-with-gift. A box of say, eight cakes of hand soap for the price of six sold separately, special beauty salon rates — all add up to savings.
- (10) Avoid beauty charlatans. No known products can eliminate baldness, erase wrinkles, increase your bust six inches in a month, reduce your weight by 20 pounds in a week, etc. Read ads, booklets, pamphlets, packages carefully to make sure you aren't inferring permanence promises that are merely implied.

Beauty products taken internally can be hazardous to your health. Use them only with your physician's approval. Many touted feminine beauty come-ons are no more than a waste of money.

We know you're saving beauty products and services. Before you buy, determine whether a promise given can be kept.

Common sense can be your best bargain-guide. Let it be!

Dual fuel for newest Saab

HELSINKI (UPI) — The Swedish-Finnish auto maker Saab-Valmet said Friday it will introduce a new car in the autumn, powered by gasoline, kerosene, turpentine and alcohol.

The Petro Saab 99 uses gasoline only when the engine is started and then switches to one of the alternate fuels to power the car during normal driving. It switches back to gasoline when moving up steep hills.

The car has two gas tanks, one for the gasoline and the other for the alternate fuels.

The Petro Saab 99, tested in Finland for two years, has been subjected to severe conditions, including extreme cold in northern Lapland.

The manufacturer said the car runs 100 kilometers on a mixture of one to three liters of gasoline and six to nine liters of alternate fuels, or about 25 miles per gallon.

Oil profits from operations abroad

by the companies generally lack the detail for settling the question. Texaco, Mobil Corp., Standard Oil of California and Shell Co. all yielded sharply higher foreign profits for the second quarter, but declined to give separate figures on large production profits. A few companies, however — Conoco Corp., Gulf, Conoco and the Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), for instance — furnish more financial details than most. And their figures indicate that large sums are made in the intra-company transfers. During the quarter, Exxon reported profits of $780 million, before taxes, from its foreign production operations, about one-third of that oil profit is Exxon's domestic reserves, which then make such products as gasoline and home heating oil for sale in the United States. By that same token, as much as $1 billion of that $750 million in "foreign" profits is actually derived from the American market. By contrast, Exxon reported domestic earnings of $1.2 billion, before taxes, in the same quarter. Gulf said its pretax earnings on its foreign production of oil were about $53 million. Gulf imported 44 percent as much crude for its refineries as it produced outside of North America, suggesting that as much as $24 million of total pretax foreign profits of $77 million came from sales to domestic refineries. Its pretax domestic profits amounted to $283 million.

In the first six months this year, Conoco (formerly Continental Oil Co.) imported the equivalent of 10 percent of its foreign production, suggesting a pretax profit-on-intra-company sales of $48.4 million.

Standard of Indiana made a six-month profit of $145 million on its foreign production.

But according to oil industry executives, these estimates are rough at best and do not reveal a great deal.

One of our most profitable production comes from the North Sea and most of that stays in the United Kingdom," Roger Hedrick, deputy controller for Exxon, said. He added that the profit figures would include earnings on special royalty arrangements under which the U.S. companies pump oil from the well for fees of 20 cents to 25 cents a barrel.

According to Gulf, the profits it generates by selling to itself are "insignificant" compared with its total profits.

According to congressional and other critics, the international companies have arranged their business to make as much money as possible abroad and as little at home. This was done to take maximum advantage of federal tax credits on foreign income.

Oil industry executives concede that at one time this may have been the case. Companies were content to lose money on refining and marketing operations and take the profits at the well head. But now, the companies contend, nationalization of foreign properties have changed the way they do business.

Little oil is being tested — operations, especially in Europe, have become very profitable this year, they say. And higher prices for petroleum products in Europe, along with inventory profits, have been the key element in the strong overseas profits surge, they add.

According to many analysts, while the current debate is raging, the prospect for the industry is for declining foreign earnings. The member nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are expelling tightness in the market to make more direct sales of their own, cutting the supply contracts of the major companies and forcing them to make expensive purchases on spot markets. Also, product prices are starting to ease in Europe. St. Anthony Copp, an oil analyst for Salomon Brothers, said he expects that integrated domestic oil companies will probably perform better than the international companies in the second half of 1979 and in 1980.

More about asset funds

Last week's article on liquid asset funds generated many inquiries and questions from readers. We'll discuss some of these questions today.

Question: What is a liquid asset fund?
Answer: Liquid asset funds invest in short term obligations of banks, corporations and the U.S. government for these institutions sell to meet immediate cash needs. Many of these instruments are sold in large denominations such as $100,000, but more often in $1 million units.

During periods of high interest rates these instruments have a rate of return higher than a regular savings account or certificates of deposit.

They provide a simple and economical method for large and small investors to obtain the high yields in money market instruments available only to large institutions and wealthy investors.

Question: How does a liquid asset fund work?
Answer: Liquid asset funds currently invest millions of dollars each day in short-term money instruments. Money market instruments generally mature in two years or less and include Treasury bills, certificates of deposit in banks, prime commercial paper and bankers' acceptance notes.

They offer savers complete liquidity meaning they can be cashed at any time without penalty.

Question: Can I buy money market instruments directly?
Answer: Generally speaking, no, because of the high minimum required. Our clients invest by investing their money with thousands of others to gain access to the higher yielding, large denomination money market instruments. Major banks and commercial companies pay a higher rate of return on large sums of money — $100,000 to $1 million or more — than they pay on small sums of $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000. The funds have large sums to invest each day and thus earn these higher yields.

Question: What is the current return?

Answer: about 10.2 percent.

Question: What advantages does investing in these funds offer?

Answer: The principal advantages are:

- No sales charge. Either when you invest or redeem.
- Check writing privilege. Write checks on your investment account and continue to earn income until your check is redeemed.
- High current yield. Current net annualized yield is over 10 percent.
- Daily dividend. Earned interest is credited daily and paid monthly in cash or reinvested to compound.
- Diversification. Your investment is spread over a number of high-quality money market instruments.

• Professional management. Your money is invested by management companies that have invested billions in money market instruments.

Question: How often will I receive dividends on my investment?

Answer: Dividends are declared daily and are paid monthly either in cash or reinvested to compound with no sales charge.

Question: Who is the custodian of the assets?

Answer: A bank and trust company acts as custodian. The money market instruments are held by the bank for safekeeping.

Question: How do I start an account?

Answer: Just request an application through our office.

Question: What are some of the circumstances when one would use a liquid asset fund?

Answer: There are a number of occasions when an investor will find liquid asset funds attractive including, of course, the individual who wants a higher rate of return than he or she is now getting from a certificate of deposit or savings account.

One example of the use of a fund would be an individual investor who sells an existing investment in anticipation of reinvesting the money in the immediate future. By placing the money in a liquid asset fund in the interim he will earn interest at a rate in excess of 10 percent without cost or withdrawal penalty. Of equal importance is the fact that the will be able to avoid the inconvenience of making short term investment decisions because his or her money will be safely invested.

Companies, i.e., corporations, partnerships, sole owners and even individuals find liquid asset funds to be very beneficial since they relieve management of the problems of handling their own money market transactions while maintaining the liquidity required to meet company obligations. Some of the company applications of liquid asset funds are:

1. Companies with substantial cash reserves for payroll.
2. Insurance agencies that have collected premiums awaiting transfer to an insurance company.
3. Travel companies holding advance payment for trips.
4. Small banks that do not have the capability of buying Treasuries for their trust accounts or the bank's account.
5. Pension plans with cash awaiting investment opportunities.
6. Estates waiting to distribute assets.
7. Construction companies with reserves to meet payroll.
8. Any firm with cash in a savings account, certificate of deposit or excess checking account money.

Lumber mill output may be hiked 21%

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — A study of sawmills in Idaho and Montana shows that lumber production can be increased up to 21 percent from the same quantity of logs by tightening up machinery and using special cutting positions.

The sawmill improvement program was started in 1973 by the state foresters in Idaho and Montana to help the sawmill industry increase lumber production without increasing log input.

Through December 1978, 105 partial and complete studies were done in 23 companies. Board thicknesses and widths, saw cuts, and other data were studied to provide mills with information on how lumber output could be increased.

Results showed lumber production could be increased by 10 percent if machinery was fine-tuned to a high degree of accuracy and operating efficiency.

Production could be increased another 11 percent by using the U.S. Forest Service's log breakdown system called Best Opening Face. The system positions logs for the initial saw cut for maximum production.

Forest Service spokesman Lorin Hearst said increases in lumber production would vary between mills because of such things as differing log sizes, saw cuts, and the size of boards produced.

Outlets purchased

BOISE (UPI) — Boise Cascade Corp. announced it has agreed to purchase with an undisclosed amount of cash five building-supply outlets from Edwards Industries Inc.

The stores are in Beaverton and Wilsonville, Ore., and in Vancouver, Tumwater and Tacoma, Wash.

Chrysler aid plan too small

DETROIT (UPI) — Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., says he does not think federal loans will be enough to help the ailing Chrysler Corp.

The chairman of the House Subcommittee on Energy said he felt Chrysler would need between $1 billion to $3 billion in various subsidies, far more than the $500 million in loan guarantees the government appears to favor.

"In this case, half a loaf would be worse than none at all," Dingell said. He said he planned to fight for as much aid as Congress would grant.

"I'm not going to concede one square inch of that ground before we're fought over it," he said.

Dingell said he did not think loan guarantees would solve the company's problems.

"The suggestions I've heard don't indicate an adequate government proposal," he said. "I'm not satisfied with a loan guarantee plan. I don't think it will satisfy their problem."

He said he would like to see a plan that included loans, tax breaks and relief from stringent government regulations.

"The extent of Chrysler's problems are not yet known," Dingell said. "I hope they remain a viable entity in our country."

In another area, Dingell said he hoped the government would continue developing synthetic fuels, but said he didn't see much progress before 1985.

"South Africa has been working on coal liquefaction since the 1950s, and they're now producing 20,000 barrels a day," Dingell said. "The U.S. uses 17 million barrels of oil a day, and we import half of that."

He said the government would have to make a "massive investment" to get production up to even one million barrels a day, at a cost of about $3 billion per each synthetic fuel refinery.

Dingell said he felt the government has given oil companies "pretty good incentives" to increase production, but with poor results.

"I remember (former Treasury Secretary) Bill Simon saying that when we have $7.50 oil, we'll be awash in it," he said. "Well, oil is now at almost $20 a barrel, and we aren't awash in it now."

Idaho shows building dip

TWIN FALLS — Idaho residential building permit activity during July declined in comparison to June and to the same month a year ago, according to the Idaho Construction Report of First Security Bank.

Kenneth J. Newman, vice president and manager of the bank, said the report shows mortgage rates remaining generally stable in recent weeks.

Total construction value for building permit construction in 54 major Idaho locations during July was $38.2 million or 5.1 percent over 1978.

New residential construction for 606 dwelling units was $23.5 million, down 17.1 percent in number but an increase in value of 5.9 percent from a year ago.

Non-residential construction was valued at $7.4 million, up 26.5 percent over July, 1978, while alterations and repairs totaling $7.2 million were down 12.1 percent.

Non-residential building permit construction in Idaho totaled $73.5 million in the first seven months of this year, down 7.5 percent from a year ago.

Profits rise for quarter

NEW YORK — Building products manufacturers in the first quarter of 1979 posted an average profit advance of 35 percent on a sales gain of 20 percent, compared to the same quarter a year ago.

The gains were attributed to major exceptional strength in construction contracts awarded during the second half of 1978. The analysis was prepared by the F.W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Systems Information Co.

George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist for Dodge, said that "while the first quarter gains were impressive, producers will be hard pressed to match these gains in the coming quarters since the volume of contract awards this year has been sliding away from the peak reached at the end of last year."

The report was based on 84 building-products firms in 15 categories. After-tax profit gains of more than 50 percent were achieved by firms in five categories — iron and steel, aluminum, cement, gypsum and controls.

Auto output climbs

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan's four-wheeled automobile production in July rose 11.6 percent from a year ago to 841,780 units, the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association said Friday.

It said Japan's output of motorcycles and other two wheelers in July came to 382,061 units, a drop of 11.3 percent from June.

New conservation practice controls being considered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As part of a review of soil and water conservation on privately owned land, the Agriculture Department is considering new policies to enhance federal authority over conservation practices.

The Agriculture Department is engaged in the first of congressionally required reviews of traditional soil and water conservation programs for U.S. cropland and other privately owned land.

The first review is to be completed next year and subsequent reviews are to follow every five years. About 9,000 local meetings have been held already, and more are planned.

At a public hearing this past week, Assistant Agriculture Secretary Rupert Cutler released a draft document including nine alternative approaches to water and soil conservation problems. Next year, officials expect to narrow nine alternatives to three to five.

Eventually, the executive branch is expected to propose new legislation.

"Private Incentives are not sufficient to protect the public interest," the new Agriculture Department document said.

Under one alternative, federal assistance such as crop insurance or price supports would be withheld

"unless the landowner or operator met defined land-use and management objectives."

Another proposal would use tax benefits to encourage soil and water conservation.

"Taxes used as a penalty for excessive use of water or exceeding erosion standards could be applied to only selected, extreme situations to gain experience and understanding," the draft said.

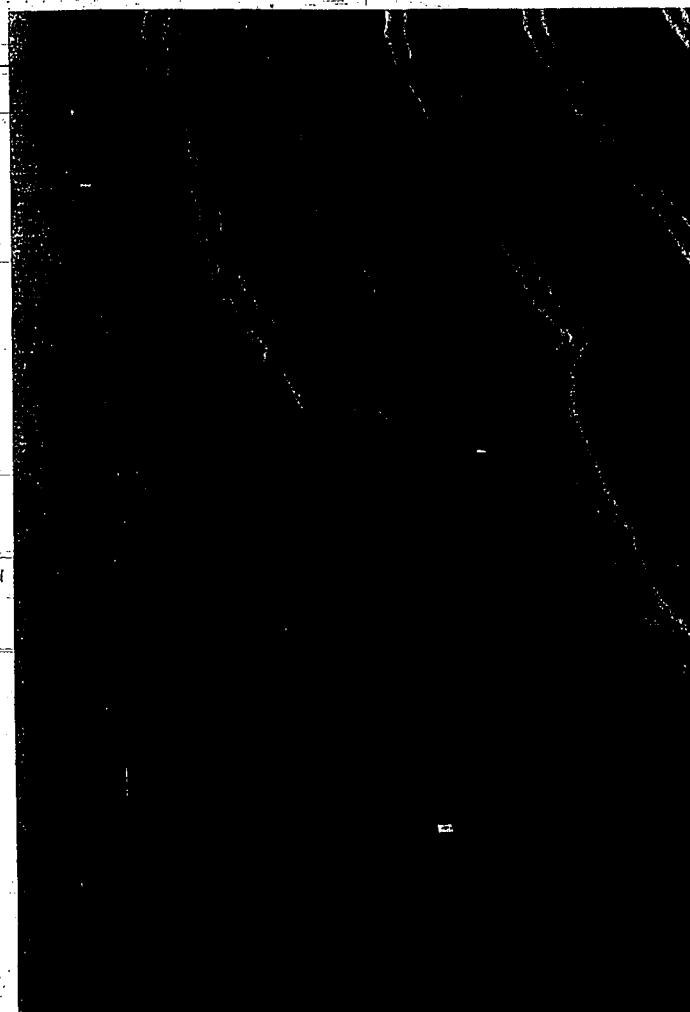

Under a third alternative, in cases of extreme pollution, federal standards would specify the amount of erosion or pollution allowed from a farm or other land. Federal officials would monitor pollution and enforce the standards.

"A voluntary agreement on a schedule for compliance would be made from each landowner that was in extreme violation of the standards," the draft said.

Another alternative would encourage states and local areas to set standards to regulate erosion and pollution.

Another possibility is continuing the current strategy, which the draft calls the "supermarket approach," under which landowners can seek cooperative assistance from 34 different programs. The draft said current programs may not address long-term problems.

Farming

Clear course of harvest

Combines weave their way across a field of wheat near Limon, Colo., leaving a set of tracks and patterns which mark the course of harvest as it approached its conclusion in that area.

As the cutting of the 1979 crop wound up, Colorado agricultural officials were predicting a record year and some of the best yields ever recorded in the state.

Foreign investments befogged

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Arab oil money is heavily invested in the United States, but only lightly in California, or so it is assumed, bank executives and state officials say.

There is no state or federal law requiring the registration of foreign investments — except for private farmland purchases — and tracking direct investments is a long and unsure process.

Nevertheless the danger, if not the actual amounts, has been overstated and possibly mythologized.

Commerce officials said the extent of Oil Producing and Exporting Countries' investment in U.S. Treasury notes, bills, certificates and bonds is known.

As a matter of fact, the most recent figures were disclosed in testimony before the House Government Operations Subcommittee in July by Ms. Courtney Slater, the department's chief economist.

The Commerce Department has the responsibility of tracking foreign investments.

"Commerce tries to, and Treasury tries to," Dick King of the California International Trade Department, said "but we are the only industrialized nation in the world that has no formal registration or law of regulation of foreign investments."

"As a result it's difficult to track

Ms. Slater said OPEC countries have invested a total of $42.4 billion in U.S. Treasury notes, bills, bonds, corporate bonds, bank liabilities and non-bank liabilities and other forms of non-direct investment.

Recently publicized threats of a sudden withdrawal of OPEC funds is mostly fallacious, according to the testimony by Fred Bergsten, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

He told the House subcommittee the funds, no matter where they were redirected, would wind up in dollar denominated deposits in other currencies and would have to come back to the United States in dollars.

The disruption would be temporary. Of greater consequence might be specific portfolio stock withdrawals which could cause some damage in the private sector, but again, only temporarily.

Direct investments in corporate stocks, bonds, real estate and other investments amounts to $325 million.

The figure is not significant in terms of other countries' investments and is only three-quarters of one percent of total foreign investment in the United States.

Most of the investment money in California would be in private holdings such as real estate and short-term portfolios.

"But nobody keeps account of this," King said.

"What we try to do is get a feel for it in dealings with our banks, and investors' contacts with banks and then we know about it. Also, some will contact the state directly for investment information and we know it."

"And we sort of track those. But that doesn't give us an accurate figure."

The U.S. Arab Chamber, with state headquarters in San Francisco, King said, puts out general numbers. But Joe Asfour, director of the Arab Chamber, was non-committal when asked about direct OPEC investments in the state.

He would say only there was very little compared to other areas of the economy and compared to investments in other states such as Texas.

Farmland purchases by individual foreign investors in California are almost impossible figures to get, Walter Minger, senior vice president of Bank of America and an agribusiness expert, said.

"Investors aren't identified that way."

Minger said the percentage of the total of state farm land in foreign control is not significant. But there is much more Italian money invested than Arab money.

"Italy leads the pack," he said.

and Belgium, and Hong Kong and Taiwan.

"And, interestingly enough, a fair number from places like Pakistan and India."

"There has been quite an influx of Hindu farmers and Hindus who have been in agriculture in the state for years."

He said OPEC land investments in recent years have been mostly in the mid west and south.

"The big action in capital gains in farm land over the last five to seven years has been in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, and even Minnesota which has a law limiting foreign investments in land."

Several states have laws prohibiting foreign ownership but few are effective, Minger said. Still, foreign ownership as of 1975 was less than 1 percent of the 1.3 billion acres of private U.S. land.

Minger provided figures from a study showing that foreign interests bought a total of 826,543 acres, or 2.25 percent, of all farm and crop land between January, 1977, and June, 1978. At the same rate of acquisition it would take about 19 years for foreign interests to obtain ownership of an additional 1 percent of U.S. farmland and just over 20 years to acquire an additional 1 percent of cropland.

Exports to Japan pushed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States is trying to promote additional farm exports to Japan — already the largest single customer of American farm products — by inviting Japanese food importers to tour the United States.

A team of 52 Japanese food importers is on a 20-day buying trip to five American cities and will meet with representatives of 275 American firms.

The importers, who represent department stores, supermarkets, wholesale firms and trading companies, started out in New York and will be in Atlanta through Wednesday.

The importers are visiting Chicago this weekend, will go to Portland, Ore., Monday through Wednesday and will be in Los Angeles, Aug. 30-Sept. 1.

A similar Japanese team visited the United States last fall. The Japanese bought $400,000 worth of food while in the United States and made commitments for about $14 million over 12 months.

Thomas Hughes, administrator of the Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service, said, "The benefits for both groups, buyers and sellers, from this kind of team are significant."

He said that small and medium-sized American firms are able to get into the export market without leaving home.

"From the buyer's standpoint, in 20 days he has a chance to meet with more U.S. firms than he ever could traveling on his own," Hughes said.

Farm Bureau sets opening at office

TWIN FALLS — An open house is planned Friday at the new office building of the Twin Falls County Farm Bureau.

Douglas R. Jones, president, said interested persons are invited to tour the recently purchased building between 2:30 and 9 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

The Farm Bureau's new office building is the former Computerized Farming building, located on Kimberly Road between Gam Equipment and Interstate Mack, Jones said.

Entries due Tuesday

FILER — Local entries — from within a 50 mile radius — for the four-day rodeo in conjunction with the Twin Falls County Fair are due by Tuesday.

Those interested in competing should either bring or mail their entries to the fair office.

Dispute over sale of cattle settled

GREELEY, Colo. (UPI) — A bitter dispute over the sale of 336 head of cattle — which led to a legal battle and an incident which reminded one judge of the tales of the old West — has been settled with a $24,144 judgment in favor of a Durango cattle operation.

However, owners of the Durango cattle firm were ordered to pay damages and costs resulting from an attempt to forcibly remove the animals from a feed lot where they were being held.

District Court Judge Robert A. Behrman issued the award in favor of Duane and Pat Cugini, of Durango, operators of the Hi-Country Cattle Co. at Durango. They filed suit against the Reynolds Cattle Co. of Mead as a result of a cattle sale last year.

Authorities said the Reynolds Cattle Co. originally paid $115,328 for the cattle to Jerry Russell, a Lafayette cattle buyer, but that money was never turned over to the Durango firm.

Russell was charged in district court with theft, but that charge was dismissed after he pleaded guilty to two fraud charges and one count of violating the Federal Packers and Stockyard Act in U.S. District Court in Denver.

Behrman ruled a bill of sale which the cattle buyer gave the Reynolds Cattle Co. fell short of statutory requirements — and that title to the cattle therefore still rested with the firm in Durango.

Because of the dispute, the Cuginis brought a group of men with them from Durango last October and removed the cattle from the Reynolds' feedlot. Judge Behrman described that incident as "an episode reminiscent of the tales of the Old West."

The cattle eventually were returned to the Reynolds Cattle Co. The judge awarded the Reynolds firm damages amounting to $271.36 for labor and transportation in returning the cattle to its feedlot.

Milk rules repeal sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Community Nutrition Institute has petitioned the Agriculture Department to repeal rules it said prevent low-cost reconstituted milk from being sold to consumers.

Milk alternatives are produced by combining nonfat dry milk powder with water and milk or vegetable fats.

Ellen Haas, an official of the consumer group, said the product could be sold at an average savings of 19 cents a gallon in most areas of the nation. If the rule were changed, consumers could save $25 million a year, she said.

"Yet existing regulations effectively eliminate this product from commerce, thereby denying all

Tobacco growth, not flowers

August brings tobacco topping time to the fields around Platte City in northwest Missouri. In order to make the plant's growth go to the leaves, Jim Jones of Weston, Mo., walks through the rows and breaks the flowering tops off the plants. The area produces more than 6 million pounds of tobacco each year.

Poultry feed drugs backed by scientist

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An official of an association of poultry researchers says there is no scientific evidence that use of low levels of antibiotics in animal feed should be reduced or limited as the Food and Drug Administration proposes.

S.A. Edgar, chairman of the drug and chemicals committee of the Poultry Science Association, said ending the 25-year practice of adding drugs to feed would raise the cost of producing poultry by .20 to .25 percent.

Drugs are mixed with poultry and livestock feed both to prevent disease outbreaks and to enhance animal growth.

Edgar, an Auburn University poultry science professor, was one of several witnesses who appeared Thursday at a hearing on antibiotics in feed held by the National Research Council, an arm of the National Academy of Sciences.

The academy was ordered by Congress to evaluate the Food and Drug Administration's proposed restrictions on use of penicillin and tetracycline in animal feed. The report is due next March.

Edgar said the alternative to antibiotics would be to use them at therapeutic levels to treat outbreaks of animal diseases, as was the practice 25 to 30 years ago.

Arizona farming area hailed out

BISBEE, Ariz. (UPI) — After suffering the worst crop damage in 20 years, Cochise County is asking the Farmers Home Administration to have the hard-hit Kansas Settlement area declared a disaster.

Hail whipped by 60 mph winds earlier this month destroyed or damaged 5,000 acres of cotton, 4,000 acres of corn, 1,500 acres of grain sorghum and 1,170 acres of vegetables.

Jim Dillon of the Cochise County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said crop damage in the county is estimated at $8.274 million.

Valley lads chosen

KANSAS CITY — Two Magic Valley youths have been chosen state winners in the National Junior Merit Award program sponsored by two cattle organizations.

They are Doug Helms, 17, of Rupert, and Michael Braun, 16, of Jerome.

The American Polled Hereford Association and the National Junior Polled Hereford Council sponsor the program, which bases its awards on polled Hereford operations and activities, long-range plans and participation in school and agriculture-related activities.

Hay grower group schedules meeting

TWIN FALLS — The newly formed Idaho Hay Growers Association has scheduled meetings to further explain the goals and programs of the association to interested Idaho hay producers.

According to association president Dennis Strom of Hill City, the association will meet Monday at 8 p.m. in the College of Southern Idaho's mini-auditorium in the Vee-Tech building.

Strom said the meeting is open to anyone producing, shipping, using or buying alfalfa in Idaho on a commercial basis. "We organized the association last spring after a meeting with more than 80 growers in Meridian," Strom said. "And interest was so strong we wanted to let hay growers in other parts of the state know we want and need their participation."

The purpose of the meeting in Twin Falls is to answer questions growers might have about how the hay association works and what we can do for them, Strom explained. We will outline the association's objectives at these meetings so growers can decide for themselves if they want to join an association. We want growers from the entire state, not just one area.

"We realize it is hard for growers to get very far from home during the summer growing season, so we are bringing the meetings to them," Strom states that the immediate goals of the association are to provide up-to-date market reports for Idaho hay growers, work for the establishment of clear and uniform hay standards, and provide better communications among growers in the state.

"Like most commodity associations, we will provide some production information, but our real problem is in marketing. So we will concentrate on helping growers increase their profits from hay."

Horses die together

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — The odds against it happening were incredible.

Gonzana and Sky Lustré thundered neck and neck down the back stretch during a Thursday morning workout at the Milnerton racetrack. Minutes after passing the finishing line still tied, the two stallions dropped dead.

"I couldn't believe it," Tommy Loftus the course manager said. Loftus said the Cape Turf Club veterinary surgeon would perform an autopsy on both horses to determine the cause of death.

Sky Lustré, a 3-year-old bay colt, had won his last two races and Gonzana won his last race on Aug. 8.

Minnesotan fills post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary Bob Bergland Friday announced the appointment of Ronald Schrader as director of the Agriculture Department's office of transportation.

Schrader, who was administrative assistant to Bergland from 1970 to 1978, when the secretary was a congressman from Minnesota, has been acting director of the transportation office since last December, when the office was created.

As railcar shortages, rail branch line abandonments and other transportation problems increased their impact on the agricultural economy, Bergland formed the new office to consolidate transportation activities of the Agriculture Department.

Bergland praised Schrader for "pulling together a working team at a time of mounting transportation pressures."

Trial set in feedlot suit

WEISER (UPI) — A 3rd District Judge has set March 3, 1980, as the trial date for a $13 million lawsuit filed last year by 35 Washington County residents against Idaho Feedlot Co.

The plaintiffs contend the company's feedlot operation is a public and private nuisance and health hazard.

It is alleged that cattle manure from the feedlot, which is located south of Weiser in the Sunnyside area, drains into the Snake River, polluting a domestic and agricultural water supply.

The suit also charges that manure from the feed lot was dropped on roads and property owned by the plaintiffs and that the feed lot generated noxious odors, attracted insects and stinkbugs and caused property values to decline.

The suit asks for closure of the feed lot, $3 million in compensatory damages and $10 million in punitive damages.

Third District Judge James Doolittle is scheduled to hear the trial in Weiser.

Cases of plague found in Arizona

PHOENIX (UPI) — Several cases of infectious bubonic plague in animals have been reported recently in northern Arizona, according to the state Department of Health Services.

The disease has been confirmed in animals southeast of Flagstaff and in Seligman, Williams, Prescott, Leupp, the Petrified Forest National Park and Young.

Dr. John Doll of the department's Bureau of Epidemiology and Laboratory Services, said evidence of the plague was obtained by observing rodent droppings and blood samples taken from wild animals that survived exposure to the disease.

Health officials said there was no cause for alarm, but urged residents, hikers, campers and other visitors to northern Arizona to take precautions. They said sick or dead animals should not be handled and added that pets should not be allowed to roam and should be dusted weekly with flea powder.

The plague is transmitted by infected fleas and their hosts.

Idahoan tours China

MOSCOW — A University of Idaho agricultural engineer is touring China as part of a 10 member team chosen by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers.

Dr. John E. Dixon arrived in Peking Aug. 18 for a three-week visit.

Dixon is expected to return to the United States about Sept. 13 following a short stopover in Japan for additional briefings.

Pioneer 11's swoop past Saturn, now a week away, is depicted in a 1974 drawing made when the spacecraft was launched from Earth.

Man reaches frontier in space

By ROBERT STRAND
MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — Man reaches another frontier in his search of space this week.

For the first time, a spacecraft controlled from earth will swoop past the planet Saturn and its mysterious rings.

It will be the farthest-out planet that a remote probe has reached and investigated.

Pioneer 11 arrives at Saturn 6½ years after its launch from Cape Canaveral. It will make its closest approach to the planet on Saturday, Sept. 1.

In 1974 the spacecraft visited Jupiter, the largest planet, and then wheeled back across the solar system on the 5-year, 1.5 billion-mile trip to Saturn.

Saturn, a yellow-banded orb 815 times larger than earth, has long fascinated poets and school children as well as scientists because of its spectacular and brilliant rings, spanning 170,000 miles.

The rings were discovered with a rudimentary telescope in 1610 by a startled Galileo. He described them as "handles."

Cut finger caused attack of illness

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — An outbreak of disease that infected 245 recruits at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot has been traced to a kitchen worker's finger, a team of medical investigators said.

Thirty six of the recruits required hospitalization, the Marine Corps said, but the ailment was not serious and all recovered without complications.

Shortly after eating a ham dinner Aug. 13, the recruits fell ill of a staphylococcal infection.

Investigators said a mess hall worker infected with the bacteria cut his finger while opening the can of ham and handled the meat.

or whether the gaseous planet is enveloped in a magnetic field and belts of deadly radiation.

And then there is the mystery of Titan, the largest of Saturn's 10 moons. Many scientists feel that Titan may be one of only two places in the solar system, besides Earth, where life could exist.

Part of the Pioneer mission is to gather data about Titan, but the spacecraft is programmed to stay far enough away to avoid an accidental crash, for fear of contaminating the moon with microorganisms from earth.

For the 565-pound spacecraft, somewhat battered by its encounter with Jupiter, the trip into the Saturnian environment is fraught with danger.

It is scheduled to dive outside the rings but through their plane and accelerate underneath them on the planet's dark side to 67,000 mph at 10 a.m. (MDT) Saturday and its closest approach, 13,300 miles from Saturn's frigid cloudtops. Then Pioneer curves up and out through the ring plane again past Titan and beyond.

The danger waits in the ring plane. The three main rings themselves are thought to be a mile thick and composed of flying metal and ice, objects ranging in size from dust flecks to chunks the size of the Pentagon.

Outside the rings and on their plane an unknown amount of planetary debris is suspected. One theory is that a newly-suspected ring, ring E, lies directly in Pioneer's path.

At high speed a collision with an object the size of a dust fleck would be fatal.

But Pioneer has survived hazards before. On its way to Jupiter it passed through the Asteroid Belt, another area of flying debris.

And near Jupiter it was zapped by radiation, equivalent to a dozen hydrogen bombs, that fried the circuitry in its asteroid-meteorite detector and degraded some instrument functions.

Nevertheless, Pioneer 11, and its predecessor in a $100 million project, Pioneer 10, garnered a treasury of data about Jupiter, its 13 moons and its Great Red Spot, a hurricane in its atmosphere 400 years old and 20,000 miles wide.

The Pioneers mapped Jupiter's radiation belts, measured its magnetic field and studied its weather.

Oddly, when Pioneer 11 was launched in 1973, a trip to Saturn was not in its travel plans. It was intended as a backup to its predecessor at Jupiter, in case Pioneer 10 was destroyed by radiation.

When Pioneer 10 survived, NASA decided to reroute Pioneer 11, to en route to Jupiter, into a risky close approach to determine if the planet's "slingshot effect" could be safely used to help whip future spacecraft on to the outer planets.

The slingshot worked, and Pioneer was flung all the way across the solar system to Saturn, on the other side of the sun.

Passing through regions never before visited, Pioneer 11 discovered the structure of the sun's magnetic field. This finding should apply to most other stars.

Like Jupiter, Saturn is a huge ball of gas, mostly hydrogen. Jupiter is banded orange and blue-gray, and Saturn is banded in various yellows.

Saturn has a diameter of 74,560 miles, spins fast enough so that a Saturnian day is only 10 hours and 14 minutes, and is somewhat flattened at the poles because centrifugal force pulls it outward at the equator.

Located a billion miles from the sun, Saturn radiates 2.5 times as much heat as it receives. Much of the heat is believed to be left over from the collapse of the gas cloud that formed the planet. The heat rises from a core, probably of rock and liquid metallic hydrogen.

Pioneer will gather data about Saturn's structure and weather and will map its magnetic and radiation belts, if they exist, before proceeding a day later past Titan.

Because Titan, a moon larger than the planet Mercury, has an atmosphere, Titan could harbor life. It has all the necessary chemicals.

The only other place in the solar system, besides earth, with conditions for life is Mars, but scientists have almost abandoned any theory that life exists there.

For the moment they suspect that Titan's surface temperature is minus 300 degrees Fahrenheit, too cold to be hospitable to life.

But there might be "a greenhouse effect" that heats up the lower atmosphere, and there might be hot springs that make biological evolution possible in specific areas.

Titan is also interesting because its methane atmosphere contains orange-colored "smog" — aerosols that absorb incoming solar radiation.

Although Pioneer's closest approach to Titan will be 220,720 miles, its equipment could provide a lot of clues.

Much more data will be gathered by two larger, more sophisticated probes, Voyagers I and II, that will arrive at Saturn in 1980 and 1981.

By then Pioneer will be headed for an escape from the solar system. Its radio should keep beeping until 1987, and in 1993, lost forever to the pull of the sun's gravity, it will cross the orbit of Pluto.

In case any intelligent species finds it, Pioneer carries a plaque with a drawing of a nude human male, with hand upraised in greeting, and a female, together with mathematical symbols suggesting where Earth might be found.

Comparisons of U.S., Soviet strength enter partisan arena

By DREW MIDDLETON
 © N.Y. Times News Service
 NEW YORK — The next 18 months are likely to resound with partisan political argument on the question of whether the United States is strong or weak in relation to the Soviet Union. Many in the Pentagon, Congress, however, believe that the real issue is whether America can evolve an overall strategy for employment of its conventional forces in a world of shifting military priorities and situations.

These military and congressional sources contend that prolonged discussions extending through the presidential campaign and election about the abilities and costs of new weapon systems — aircraft, tanks, missiles — put the cart before the horse. Weapons, they say, should be fitted to the strategy, rather than the strategy to the weapons.

The evolution of such a strategy is all the more important because since 1975 American military responsibilities have expanded beyond the familiar areas of central and northern Europe, the Mediterranean and the northwest Pacific. The Indian Ocean and the Persian Gulf, the South China Sea between Vietnam and the Philippine Islands and possibly the Caribbean will become regions of increased American military responsibility, they believe.

The growing political and economic importance of these areas has been accompanied by a steady expansion of Soviet naval powers. Adm. Henry D. Train, the Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic, estimated recently that the Soviet Union was outpacing the United States and its Atlantic Alliance partners by from 20 to 40 percent in naval outlays alone.

"It is very sobering to reflect that the largest full-time naval presence in the Indian Ocean is not from Western nations which are dependent on Persian Gulf oil," Train said, "but from the Soviet Union, which has no need for Persian Gulf oil."

"The Indian Ocean is not the only area penetrated by Soviet naval powers. Although there is no evidence that Vietnam has granted Russia base rights, Soviet destroyers are using the port of Da Nang and Russian technicians are building a radio monitoring station at Cam Ranh Bay in that country."

The first step toward the evolution of a general strategy in the opinion of those who favor such a strategy is in the field of naval deployments. The United States has argued that it cannot permit a potentially hostile power to dominate the seas any more than the Soviet Union would permit a potentially hostile power to dominate the European land mass.

The Navy's answer to the situation is the five-year shipbuilding program presented at Congress earlier this year. This program includes one 60,000-ton conventionally powered aircraft carrier, five nuclear-powered attack submarines and 36 escort ships of which 25 are frigates.

Critics argue that in the words of Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado the program is "traditionalist in concept" and seeks to prevent Soviet naval growth from proceeding "too rapidly" rather than reversing the trend of Soviet expansion "through conceptual or technological innovation."

Train and other naval officers answer that improved electronic warfare capabilities and a better point defense weapon system will make allied fleets "in the future" more survivable than they are today.

A third group contends that no matter how effective weapons systems appear in development, there remains the strong possibility that by the time they have been deployed Soviet technology will have advanced enough to neutralize the effectiveness of the new American arms. Those critics who emphasize the primary importance of keeping open the nation's trade routes in times of war say that the present projections for surface escort construction fail to take into account numerous studies that show that aircraft are more effective than ships for both antisubmarine and anti-aircraft missions in defense of a fleet.

Test of MX launch unit successful

NEVADA TEST SITE, Nev. (UPI) — A 120-foot yellow canister, capable of housing a United States MX missile, was raised partially from a vertical silo Thursday to test the launch mechanism.

"It worked. It was a successful test and worked just like we planned. It was going to be a one shot test, success or fail," said Air Force Maj. Bill Jacobs, the commander of the MX Vertical Shelter Engineering Test Bed.

The empty canister, driven by hot gas generators, pushed its way through several feet of dirt until about 10 feet of the MX missile housing was exposed. A support system positioned on top of the canister was jettisoned, leaving the canister in a position for the firing of an MX missile.

Their solution is the rapid development of small aircraft carriers flying short-takeoff jets and the deployment of additional antisubmarine warfare helicopters on destroyers.

In view of the widening of American responsibilities and the growth of Soviet naval strength, former Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio and Senator Hart have advocated a 10-year advanced-technology shipbuilding program to fit future strategic requirements. This program would include a mix of nuclear and conventional attack submarines, small aircraft carriers for short-takeoff aircraft "to be procured in large numbers" and hovercraft and hydrofoils for antisubmarine missions.

No general strategy can be developed without taking into account the changes in land wars resulting from the advent of precision-guided munitions for use against tanks and aircraft. In this field, however, there are also critics who say that the United States and its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies have gone too far in building a defensive strategy around such weapons without considering general strategic needs.

Gen. Even-Tor, who designed the Israeli-Gabriel surface-to-surface missile, argues against the Allied position that the best method to redress the Soviet advantage in tanks is "to invest heavily in a multitude" of surface-to-air and anti-tank guided missiles.

Writing in Orbis, published by the Foreign Policy Research Institute, Even-Tor contends that the unusually high kill probability attributed to precision-guided munitions "comes from an erroneous evaluation of the battlefield utility of such weapons" and cites Israel's experience in the 1973 war as evidence.

He contends that the adoption by NATO of "a defense-only concept devoid of counterattack assets" is "a highly destabilizing and feeble form of deterrence."

To those Western intelligence officers who are puzzled by the steady increase in the number of Soviet tanks, some of which the Russians assert are proof against Western antitank guided missiles, Even-Tor says "the tank is still a decisive weapon both in attack and defense."

His views support those in Congress and the Pentagon searching for an overall strategy. Until one is developed, until the United States fixes strategic priorities around the world, they argue it would be unwise to invest too much in any one weapon system.

Irene and Wayne Thompson of Jerome heat their home with a solar energy system designed by Wayne

Rising oil and gas prices are making solar energy a hot item Here comes the sun

By EDWARD ROBY

United Press International

Egyptians once revered it as God. Archimedes turned its destructive power against an attacking Roman fleet two millennia ago. Today it's heating water in the White House.

The sun, eclipsed for three centuries in the smog of the Industrial Revolution, is emerging again to challenge the dominance of vanishing oil and gas as a versatile energy source for an age of growing scarcity.

In one decade, a renaissance of enthusiasm for solar energy has rippled from "Sun Day" rites of the spring staged by grass-roots ecology movements to government and the board rooms of industry.

President Carter, in an April message to Congress, set a goal of obtaining one-fifth of the nation's energy from solar sources, including hydroelectric power, by the year 2000. In his TV address to the nation July 15 he proposed the creation of a solar bank to help fund achievement of this goal.

Five years ago, when the Alaska pipeline was being completed and the nuclear age was nearing its zenith, such a notion might have drawn snickers. The wisdom of prevailing technology held that exotic sources like solar were incapable of satisfying more than 2 percent of the nation's ravenous energy appetites.

Today solar houses are already saving money and fuel for advantage owners in all 50 states. Firms have sprung up that will erect any kind of solar building from a warehouse to a dog house for a premium price.

A utility in California is building a pilot 10 megawatt electrical generating station and a company in Georgia is putting up a knitwear factory where heating, cooling and steam power will come from the sun.

San Diego County has decreed that all new developments in its unincorporated areas must be equipped with solar water heaters.

Carter, to underscore his personal commitment, christened a $28,000 system to heat as much as three-quarters of the White House west wing's water with solar collectors mounted on the roof.

Budgeted federal expenditures for solar development have risen from $41 million in fiscal 1975 to a current $50 million. But a burgeoning solar lobby, supported by such luminaries as Robert Redford and Barry Commoner, scoffs at the sum as paltry.

Solar deserves nothing less than the kind of massive government subsidies poured into atomic power, which they believe flunked its acid test at Three Mile Island.

Gus Speth, acting chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality,

Fourteen solar panels line the south wall of the Thompsons' house said new solar programs announced by Carter on June 20 could cost as much as $3 billion over the next five years. And they are in addition to the projected solar budget of $1.3 billion in 1982.

A recent congressional study reached the startling conclusion that a race-to-the-moon type solar program to replace traditional energy sources would make up for lost employment in the coal and oil industry with 3 million jobs to spare.

Commoner charges that despite Three Mile Island, the Carter administration's long-range energy policy remains wedded to the unproven nuclear breeder reactor.

In a book-length article in the New Yorker magazine this spring, Commoner argued that the nation must choose now between a future based on inexhaustible energy from either nuclear or solar sources because it is far too costly to pursue both.

The alternative, he said, is an economic collapse brought on by steeply rising costs of fossil fuels — oil, coal, gas — that are becoming scarcer and harder to recover every year.

It's safer and cleaner to harness limitless energy pouring from the sun's nuclear fusion inferno 93 million miles away than to build our own atomic reactors on earth with potentially disastrous consequences, said Commoner.

To skeptics who insist solar technology is still a swaddling babe, Commoner responded that nuclear power is really the brainchild of the 20th Century. Human applications of the sun's energy date back to the dawn of agriculture and the discovery of fire.

As Ralph Nader, another solar booster, put it: "When people say solar they think of some 2000-A.D. technology, but it's really 7,000 years old."

The term solar is increasingly used to encompass all renewable energy resources, except the atomic fuel that may be created in the breeder reactors of the future.

Included would be energy extracted from biomass like wood and agricultural wastes, methane from manure and decaying matter, processed steam from burning trash, the potential energy of ocean temperature gradients, alcohol distilled from crops and the power of wind and waves.

Some solar technologies are old and proven.

In the 1200s, six million windmills were powering American farms. In World War II, the Germans overcame a shortage of oil partly by burning alcohol. Modern China relies heavily on solar energy, recycling animal dung and wastes as fuels and fertilizers.

New solar technology can become an engineering nightmare because the sun's energy, although inexhaustible, reaches us in an intermittent and diffuse form.

To satisfy the energy needs of the United States with solar collectors, one might have to cover an area the size of the state of Connecticut.

And while nuclear power and fossil fuels lure corporate capital into huge, centralized power generation projects, the nature of clean solar power seems to defy such economies of scale.

Speth believes the most exciting thing about solar is that it does not share the obvious environmental problems associated with coal and nuclear, the mainstays of Carter's energy policy.

But Richard Munson, coordinator of Washington's newly organized Solar Lobby, warns that solar could be "swallowed up in the 1980 elections by the proponents of synthetic fuel development and nuclear power."

"Solar energy development offers the only socially and politically acceptable way out of the energy quagmire," adds Munson. "Yet it has been bamboozled by the oil industry and cheated by the Carter administration."

Although solar is breaking out of its cottage industry stage, its potentialities have yet to impress many of the Fortune 500.

Says Lawrence Levy, director of the publicly-funded Northeast Solar Center at Cambridge, Mass., "If it doesn't happen in the next five or 10 years, it probably never will."

But industry is awakening slowly to solar. Standard Oil of Indiana recently purchased a minority interest in Maryland's Solarex, the world's leading manufacturer of photovoltaic energy systems, which use silicon wafers to convert sunlight to electricity. Atlantic Richfield and Texas Instrument have also plunged into the field of photovoltaics.

Even the Army Corps of Engineers at Ft. Belvoir, Va., is experimenting with the solar cells. And Southern Railway in Georgia is calling its solar cell switching devices a big success.

Texas Instrument officials say its experimental solar collector and fuel cell system could generate household electricity at a very competitive 5 to 10 cents a kilowatt hour.

Commoner believes the quickest way to bring prohibitive costs of photovoltaic devices down to competitive market levels would be massive government purchase orders.

Prices should tumble like those of computers 15 years ago if the Department of Defense, for example, phased out its diesel and gasoline-powered electric field generators in favor of photovoltaic units.

As a demonstration project for utilities, the government is testing a five megawatt solar-thermal electric generating plant it built at a cost of $21 million at Sandia Laboratories in Albuquerque, N.M.

For $123 million, Southern California Edison expects to complete its 10-megawatt Solar One plant in the Mojave Desert in 1981. Two 100-megawatt demonstration models will follow in the 1980s under the government program.

The solar thermal plants generate steam in a tall "power tower" rising from the center of a huge dish of solar reflectors that concentrate and focus sunlight on it. The steam powers turbines linked to ordinary electric generators.

Solar heat is being used by about a dozen firms, ranging from a grape drying plant in Fresno, Calif., to a textile drying plant in LaFrance, S.C.

MR. AND MRS. DANIEL VANCE

Kevan-Vance

TWIN FALLS — Candace Lynn Diane Kevan and Daniel Wayne Vance, both of Twin Falls, exchanged wedding vows Aug. 10 at the Twin Falls First Baptist Church with the Rev. Gilbert Myers officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. William E. Kevan and the bridegroom is the son of Floyd Vance and Mrs. June Vance, all of Twin Falls.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Katherine Callentine, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Mary Kevan-Allen, Barbara Kimball, Jacqueline Kevan, sisters of the bride, and Rose Vance. Heather Kimball, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

David Howard served as best man. Ushers were Ken Vance, Perry Vance, Wes Vance, and Rick Allen. Candlelighters were Bridget Clysdale, cousin of the bride, and Mary Vance, sister of the bridegroom.

Kelly Clysdale attended the guest book. Mrs. Tony Kevan and Chris Molyneux were in charge of the gift table.

The wedding cake was served by Mrs. Jack Clysdale and Mrs. Richard Kevan, aunts of the bride. Mrs. Ron Kevan, the bride's aunt, and Mrs. Bert Billington served the punch and coffee.

Special guests were the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Dewey Warner and the bridegroom's grandmothers, Mrs. John Williams of Tardidge, Nev.

A rehearsal picnic dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at their country home.

Style revue set Monday and Tuesday

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County 4-H Style Revue will be held in the College of Southern Idaho auditorium at 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

The junior division, which includes all ages up to 12 years, will be held Monday. The intermediate division, which includes ages 13 and 14, and the senior division, ages 15 and up, will be held Tuesday.

All clothing modeled will be handmade by the models themselves. There will be 160 participants in the two-night show and two top models will be chosen from each division.

Narrators for the shows will be Annette Jenkins of KLIJ and Carol Stephens of KTLG. Admission is free and the public is invited.

Making Homes Beautiful by JoAnn Rose

MIXING, rather than matching, referred to by professionals as eclectic decorating, is here to stay. The combining possibilities are endless. To show how flexible interior design has become, all of the following mixtures can be used today.

FOR INSTANCE: You can mix contemporary with traditional accessories and accent pieces. Or contemporary mixed with provincial furniture and provincial country accessories.

TRADITIONAL CASEGOODS mixed with contemporary upholstery... here contemporary accessories and sculpture can be used effectively.

SIMPLE, Oriental styled room backgrounds combined with European eighteenth century designs.

DON'T BE FRIGHTENED by eclectic decorating. By following the usual rules of form and good taste you can easily learn how to mix and match. Keep to a similar feeling in choosing items and you'll be on the correct path.

Dear Abby

Relationship goes to pot over broken confidence on drugs

By BRIGALL VAN BUREN of The Chicago Tribune
 N.Y. News Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I and our children recently visited my brother and his family who live in a very affluent suburb of a large Midwestern city. We all had a wonderful time — especially the children. We have a daughter, 14, and a son, 12. They have three boys, 19, 12 and 15.

After returning home our son told us (in confidence) that his 15-year-old cousin had offered him some pot. Our son refused. He said he never actually saw his cousin smoke pot, but he was sure he had. I then asked our daughter if she knew anything about it, and she reluctantly said her brother was telling the truth.

After much debate, my husband and I telephoned my brother and his wife and told them what our children had told us. Their reaction was unreel! They said their son had never smoked pot and our children were lying! Now my brother and his wife are angry with us.

Should we have called? If not, how can we restore our once-good relationship with them? If our children had smoked pot, we would want to be alerted.

NAME WITHHELD
 DEAR WITHHELD: You shouldn't have called. Perhaps time and the realization that you meant well will improve your relationship. Your children shouldn't have betrayed their peers, and you shouldn't have violated the confidence of your children.

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a dentist who makes a pass at every new girl he hires to work in his office. He's 49 and thinks he's irresistible. I think he's entering his second childhood.

Recently he took up with a new employee (24) and started seeing her out of the office. I found out about it and threatened to divorce him, so he promised to give her up as a girlfriend, but he increased her salary so much that she couldn't afford to quit her job. She's a divorcee with a child and needs the money, and he says she's the best desk girl he's ever had and that he can't run the office without her.

Now I am uncomfortable. She is uncomfortable. And my husband still has both of us.

DENTIST'S WIFE
 DEAR WIFE: If your husband gave her up, how do you figure he still has both of you? No need for you to feel uncomfortable. She's working because she needs the money, and your husband needs her in his office. Trust them — unless you CATCH them, that is.

DEAR ABBY: How do I politely decline an invitation to a party without lying? Is there any really socially acceptable excuse? Supposing I just don't like parties? Or what if I feel I would be bored, etc.?

It would be a lie to say, "I'm unable to attend."

STAY-AT-HOME-TOM

DEAR TOM: If you want to be scrupulously honest, you may have to be brutally frank. But since you don't like parties, say so — and you'll not be bothered with invitations, which is what you want, right?

Are you the lonely face in the crowd? Friends make you a winner, and Abby tells you how to win them in her booklet, "How To Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Idaho NOW plans ERA fund drive

MOSCOW (UPI) — Idaho's National Organization for Women chapters plan to raise their share of the Equal Rights Amendment support fund in September while chapters across the nation gear up for fundraising events this fall.

Idaho NOW President Betsy Enoch said the celebration of Women's Equality Day, Aug. 26, has been delayed until Sept. 8 in this state. Because she doesn't wish to compete with a weekend program featuring Jean Stapleton, scheduled for Kallispell, Mont.

"Many of us here in Moscow are planning to attend the first state NOW conference in Montana," she said. "They're holding their conference this weekend and we thought we'd get better response here in Moscow if we waited until the 16th for the Idaho is back in session in two weeks."

In September, she said, the Moscow chapter of NOW will host a walk-a-thon to raise money for passage of the constitutional amendment which prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex. She said at a similar walk-a-thon two years ago, the Moscow chapter raised $1,700 for the national coffers.

"We are expecting about 100 people to participate this year," Ms. Enoch said. "And, I'm sure we'll see a lot of the money we raise coming back into the state because the State of Idaho has filed suit against the government because of ERA."

Ms. Enoch said, until recently, a separate ERA legal defense fund has been used to fight the Idaho Legislature's 1977 rescission of its previous ERA ratification vote. Because ratification of the amendment hinges on the Idaho rescission, she said, part of the money raised for ERA will be returned to Idaho to fight the state's lawsuit.

CSI offers class about papermaking

TWIN FALLS — A new class in handmade papermaking is being offered by the College of Southern Idaho starting Monday from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The class has been organized in response to a resurgence of interest and activity in paper by artists, preservationists and the public.

The class will concentrate in areas of basic fundamentals of fiber theory, a brief history of papermaking, paper conservation, methods of making handmade paper and art techniques involving the use of handmade paper.

For further information contact Mike Green at the College of Southern Idaho, 733-8554 ext. 260.

Daily recipe

Mrs. H.M. Peters
 Box 91, Filer

CANTALOUPE BREAD

 ¼ cup oil
 ½ cup sugar
 2 teaspoons baking powder
 1 teaspoon each soda and salt
 1 large egg
 1 cup cantaloupe pulp
 Dice cantaloupe and run in blender long enough to mash it into a pulp. Empty into cup and repeat until you have a cup full. Set aside.

Mix flour, baking powder, salt and soda, sifting three times. Cream sugar and oil until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add cantaloupe pulp and mix. Add flour, bit a cup at a time, and mix well.

Turn into a well greased and floured pan 8½ x 4½ inches. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes or until done. Serve with whipped cream plain, or with wedges of fresh cantaloupe.

Anniversaries

MR. AND MRS. W.C. LAWYER

HAGERMAN — Mr. and Mrs. W.C. "Bill" Lawyer of Hagerman will observe their golden wedding anniversary at an open house Sept. 2.

The event, hosted by their two daughters, Mary Schroeder of Bliss and Charlotte Young of Bohell, Wash., will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Schroeder home, one and three-quarters miles north and one and a half miles west of the Bliss postoffice.

Nellie-Hawkins and Bill Lawyer were married Sept. 2, 1929, at Buhl. They have farmed in Magic Valley all their married lives. They are now retired and live in Hagerman.

In addition to their two daughters, the couple has eight grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

MR. AND MRS. WILBUR LOUCKS

GOODING — Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Loucks of Gooding will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary at an open house Sept. 2 from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Gooding Masonic Temple, located at the corner of Sixth Avenue West and California Street.

Hazel Suckewirth of Hollister and Wilbur Loucks of Twin Falls, formerly of Indiana, were married in Twin Falls on Sept. 11, 1929.

They made their home in Indiana for two years before returning to Idaho in the fall of 1891. Before moving to Gooding they lived at Filer, Twin Falls, and Kimberly. They have lived on their farm north of Gooding since 1946.

The open house will be hosted by their children and their spouses, Leon and Lois Loucks of Gooding, Gwendolyn and Ralph McCray of Orofino; Marilyn Loucks of Gooding; and Carolyn and Budd Brittain of Twin Falls. They have nine grandchildren.
