MIAMI (UPI) — Hurricane David, leaving hundreds and perhaps thousands dead in its wake, rapped across the tourist-packed Bahamas Islands Sunday night, aiming its 85-mile-an-hour winds "right at Miami."

At 11 p.m., David was 130 miles from Miami. Its first squalls were approaching the coast and gusts of nearly 50 miles an hour were reported at Fort Lauderdale.

Dr. Robert Sheets, a senior forecaster at the Hurricane Center, said, "We're projecting winds of about 100 mph when it comes ashore."

"At this moment, it's aimed right at Miami," said John Hope, senior forecaster at the Miami Hurricane Center. Hope said the official steady winds around David's core were 55 miles an hour "and increasing," and there was a report from Andros Island estimating peak winds of 115 miles an hour.

At least 470 people were killed in the Dominican Republic which was ravaged Friday by David. The death count was expected to reach as high as 1,000.

At mid-afternoon Sunday, Gov. Bob Graham ordered all residents of low-lying areas from Dade, Broward, Palm Beach and Monroe counties to evacuate.

Thousands of residents fled their homes, seeking shelter with friends and relatives inland or going to the dozens of public shelters set up in the area.

Hundreds of pregnant women were checking into hospitals, having been warned that falling barometric pressure can trigger premature births.

After nightfall, blustery winds driving a thin rain whipped thru small limbs across virtually deserted streets and highways.

Late Sunday, Joe Edwards of the Bahamas News Bureau reported winds "in excess of 80 mph" lashing Nassau, where he estimated there were about 25,000 tourists, most of whom never knew David was coming.

Visibility was about 100 feet, he said, "and beyond that it looks like a solid sheet of water. There are trees down all over Nassau, there are utility pole fires all over the city and some of the main arteries are blocked with fallen trees."

"Seas are breaking over the bulkheads and flooding the streets. I saw at least a half-dozen boats sunk in the waters. Key area around noon," he said.

In the Dominican Republic, government officials working their way into isolated areas were just beginning to uncover the full devastation of David, which was the greatest Caribbean hurricane of the century when it roared into the country Friday.

Vice President Jacobo Mujula said 400 persons hiding in a church at Villa de Ocoa were killed when floodwaters washed the building away.

"There are deaths all along David's path," he said, "and there are places we haven't been able to get to yet."

He said at least 70 people were reported dead in the city of San Cristobal, 18 miles west of the capital city of Santo Domingo.

Hurricane warning flags whipped in the night along 150 miles of the Florida coast, from Marathon in the middle of the Florida Keys to Cape Canaveral. They greeted David on the 44th anniversary of the "Labor Day hurricane," the most violent ever to strike the state. With winds up to 200 mph, it cut a swath of destruction 44 miles wide across the keys on Sept. 2, 1935, killing 408 people.

"David claimed its first victim in Florida Sunday afternoon when a man fleeing the Florida Keys in a truck, towing a boat, slid off the road, hit a power pole and was electrocuted."

The display of vintage motorcycles was a feature of the Idaho Vintage Motorcycle Club's rally, show and picnic and attracted several hundred visitors to the park during the afternoon.

Shuttle may carry caulk gun along

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first space shuttle-astronauts may carry a spray can and caulk gun for space-walk repairs in case vital heat insulation tiles protecting the rocket plane Columbia are damaged during launch.

Space agency officials said the possibility of equipping the ship with in-orbit tile inspection and repair powers is under consideration at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

The square, silica tiles — a novel feature of the revolutionary rocket plane — are designed to make sure the winged ship can repeatedly withstand the 2,000-degree-plus heat of re-entry from orbit into the atmosphere.

Loss of even one tile might be catastrophic during re-entry.

Space agency officials began having second thoughts about the tile system when minor damage occurred as the Columbia was ferried last winter atop a 747 jet from California to Cape Canaveral, Fla. That trip was in preparation for launch, now expected next spring or summer.

There is concern that during launch, ice breaking off the shuttle's external fuel tank might damage the Columbia's underside, or that severe aerodynamic stress during the climb to orbit might hurt the tiles.

Two weeks ago, officials at NASA headquarters directed the Johnson Space Center to look at options for solving the problem, in case on-going tests indicate the tiles could be damaged.

"A lot of people are working very diligently to understand the characteristics of the tile and to relieve any concern that we presently have about the possibility of either tile damage or tiles coming off during the ascent phase," said Reginald Machell, manager of the engineering team studying the inspection and repair possibilities.

He said an inspection and repair system may not be necessary, "but if you don't start doing the work now, you close out the option by default," Machell said. Decisions will be made in the next few weeks.

The first problem, he said in a telephone interview, is to devise the best way to inspect the outside of the shuttle orbiter.

One possibility is to rig a television camera to an extendable boom attached to the shuttle's remote-controlled manipulator arm.

A second option is to provide astronauts John Young and Robert Crippen with a device that would let one fly around the shuttle spacewalk-fashion to inspect it.

Aerospace contractors already have been asked to bid for contracts to provide insulation repair kits, Machell said.

Three concepts are under study, and he said all three might be made available if the space-walk repair option is chosen.

Machell said one idea is to develop a silicon carbide spray to restore the external properties to any damaged tiles. For more seriously damaged tiles, the astronauts might use a caulk gun to "secrete insulating material into cavities."

Environmental issues last year than those in the southwest, the League of Conservation Voters concluded Sunday.

The organization compiled charts showing how each House member voted on 30 energy and environmental issues ranging from parks, dams and pollution to nuclear power.

The average member of Congress got a 49 percent "correct" score on the league, but regional differences were considerable — an average 60 percent for New England compared to 18 percent for members from the southwest.

House Democrats averaged 58 percent, Republicans 32 percent. In state delegations, Vermont was highest with an average 84 percent, followed by Massachusetts with 82 percent, Alaska and New Mexico tied for the lowest score, 8 percent.

This year, for the first time, the league plans to distribute the charts door-to-door, beginning in July.

"Public opinion polls consistently show much stronger public support for the environment than you would expect," said a 48-percent average," said League Director Marion Edey.

No House member received a perfect score of 100 in the league's survey for 1978: Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., had the highest score with 99 percent, followed by Rep. William Brodhead, D-Mich., with 96 and four members with 97 — Bob Carr, D-Mich., Joseph Early, D-Mass., Jeraldine Cannon, D-N.J., and Gerry Studds, D-Mass.

Pioneer hunts life on Titan

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — Scientists were excited Sunday by the flow of information from Pioneer 11 about Saturn's largest moon, Titan, the only place in the solar system besides Earth where life might exist.

The spacecraft flew by Titan on its outbound journey from Saturn, the most distant planet from earth to be investigated by a man-made spacecraft. Pioneer passed through Saturn's rings twice Saturday as it approached to a point 13,300 miles from the planet's cloud cover.

The first picture taken of Titan by the spacecraft had resolution similar to the Earth's moon when viewed by the naked eye from Earth on a clear night. Titan is 50 percent larger in diameter than Earth's moon.

"I'm very excited by this," said

Martin Tomasko, a University of Arizona astronomer. "We are seeing color variations in Titan's atmosphere."

These color changes, together with ultraviolet and polarization measurements, should provide a wealth of information about the possibility of life on Titan. Meanwhile, scientists were still digesting data from SATURN. They discovered a huge and unexplained cloud 141,000 miles from the ringed planet.

Andrew Ingersoll of the California Institute of Technology said that the radiation of more heat from Saturn than had been expected suggested "something is going on in the interior that we don't know about yet."

Saturn radiates twice as much heat as it receives from the sun, one billion miles away.

At Ames Research Center, NASA said Pioneer had slowed Sunday to 24,000 mph and passed Titan at the closest point 220,000 miles away.

The possibility of life on Mars has been virtually ruled out by the landing of two Viking spacecraft.

The key questions about whether life might exist on Titan is whether the satellite's surface is warm enough. It is thought temperatures must be above freezing in order for life forms to exist.

On the basis of calculations made on Earth, some scientists have estimated that the surface temperature is much too cold, minus 290 degrees Fahrenheit, but there is no certainty about this.

Pioneer was seeking evidence of a greenhouse effect in Titan's methane atmosphere that heats the planet's surface. This effect occurs when an atmosphere keeps heat from the sun trapped at low levels.

White House, oil companies cut gas supply

Editor's note: This is the first of four articles by a Newday team of investigative reporter Brian Donovan, Washington correspondent Bob Wylick, and energy and environment writer Stuart Diamond.

Washington (UPI) — The Carter administration and the major oil companies deliberately took actions that helped cause, worsen and prolong this summer's gasoline shortage.

That is the central finding of a Newday investigation into the origins of the shortage, which forced millions of Americans into gas lines, nearly doubled the price of gas and pushed the nation's economy toward a recession.

A complex series of forces and circumstances, including the habits of American consumers, contributed to the shortage. But the Carter administration and the oil industry were largely responsible.

Once the shortage developed, the administration could have ended the gas lines at any time but chose not to, a top federal energy official acknowledged in a recent interview. At the same time, the administration withheld, not only from the public but also from Congress, data that contradicted what its spokesmen were saying about the severity of the shortage.

Both the industry and the administration had reasons for wanting the shortage: the oil companies to improve their economic position, and the government to reduce consumption.

Since the major oil companies began tightening the market last year, they have been able to turn more than $1 billion worth of credits, collected under the government's "little-understood price-control program," into cash — money they could not have collected without a tight market. In addition, the shortage prompted the government to drop or relax price controls on crude oil, gasoline and other products — a move the industry had sought for years.

The administration's motivation was made plain long before the shortage. For more than two years, President Carter's energy secretary, James R. Schlesinger, had been predicting serious oil supply problems in the 1980s, worrying about the nation's growing dependency on foreign oil and saying that apparently only a shortage would encourage conservation and convince the public that the long-range energy crisis was real.

At a May 4 press conference, as gas lines were springing up in California, a Carter comment gave listeners a glimpse of the philosophy that would influence the administration's handling of the shortage. Asked how the public could be persuaded to conserve, the President said: "I think there is a way to convince people to voluntarily control the waste of energy. I think we are going to have to have, perhaps, a few demonstrable shortages as is now being faced in California, to show that this is necessary."

Theodore R. Eck, chief economist for Standard Oil of Indiana (Amoco), said in an interview that he was convinced the administration had delayed the shortage, encouraged the shortage. "There is no question that they tried to create a serious gasoline shortage," Eck said. "They thought that is where the cuts could come. . . . But they failed to realize the economic consequences of the shortage they created."

Administration officials and spokesmen for the oil companies have denied that they deliberately helped create the gasoline shortage. A spokesman for Schlesinger said last week: "Our policy was directed toward minimizing the discomfort, not into shocking the consumers into an awareness that the problem was real. We were too busy putting out fires to spend the time coming up with Machiavellian schemes."

Meanwhile, the administration and the oil industry continue to place much of the blame for the gas shortage on a decline in world crude-oil supplies. Contradictory data, however, cast doubt on whether such a dip in crude supplies ever existed. And even if it did, Newday's investigation found there was sufficient oil available to produce the gasoline that would have eliminated the lines at the pumps.

Throughout the shortage, however, Newday found a consistent pattern: The administration gave the oil industry strong financial incentives to keep supplies down and prices up, while the industry took full advantage of the opportunity, even at the expense of adequate gas supplies to the public.

Rationing by presidential order possible

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional sources Sunday said the House-Senate conference committee working on a bill allowing the president to declare rationing even without a fuel shortage.

Issue that would not risk losing any substantial bloc of congressional support for the rationing measure.

threat of such a shortage. He said the House declined to pass a rationing bill without that trigger.

He said last week that if the conference committee tampers with the trigger he will try to kill the bill altogether.

has too tough a trigger. The conferees must also decide whether to put a similar trigger on other mandatory conservation measures in the legislation.

Job Corps training cut crime

Newhouse News Service WASHINGTON — Half the cost of training low-income youths in the Job Corps program was offset by a 50 percent reduction in their criminal activity, according to a study done for the Labor Department.

For every 100 Corps members, there are just over four fewer arrests for burglary than there would have been in the absence of Job Corps, said the authors of the study.

The drop in the number of burglaries accounted for half the savings to society of reduced criminal activity by Job Corps enrollees, the researchers said.

Gas shortage helped along

Here are the main findings of Newsday's investigation: The Carter administration could have ended the gas lines at any time, according to Deputy Energy Secretary John O'Leary, simply by releasing some of the crude oil the government holds for emergencies or by ordering the oil companies to step up gasoline production. But the administration decided against those steps, O'Leary said in an interview, because "the pain for the consumer was not sufficiently severe."

The administration, largely through Schlesinger, repeatedly gave overstated projections about the seriousness of the shortage, a course many experts believe worsened the situation by encouraging hoarding. Meanwhile, the administration concealed or disregarded data that contradicted its assertions on the severity of the shortage. For example, while the administration was telling the public that oil imports dropped in February during the crisis in Iran, the Energy Department had classified data in its files saying imports actually went up.

At every critical point as the shortage developed, prevailing government policies plus rules changes gave the companies clear financial incentives, worth billions of dollars, to get supplies and produce and sell. Publicly has deplored the oil companies' record profits, but the recent price increases have been a goal of both the industry and his administration and resulted from specific government policies and actions.

The Energy Department considered — and rejected — various regulatory steps that, taken together, would have put at least 520,000 barrels a day of gasoline onto the market to offset the shortage without touching the government's emergency oil. This is more than twice the 220,000-barrel-a-day average gasoline shortfall that a department report says existed from February through May. The report, presented to Carter last month, says the shortage hit a peak of 700,000 barrels a day in May, a figure that could have been cut sharply had the administration taken the available regulatory steps.

The private minutes of Carter's cabinet meetings as the shortage developed show that steps to increase gasoline production were being considered. The administration's main priority continued to be getting the public to cut consumption. Those documents — some excerpted by columnist Jack Anderson, some previously unpublished — show no discussion of releasing the government's emergency oil or of exercising the government's powers to force oil companies to produce more gasoline.

After beginning 1978 with a crude-oil surplus that made price increases impossible, major oil companies in the United States forced prices up by allowing their crude-oil inventories to drop sharply throughout the year, even when turmoil in Iran provided a clear signal that the U.S. oil supply might be disrupted. The administration, which had the authority to stop the depletion of U.S. oil stocks and which publicly said the Iranian fall-off would be a key factor in the amount of crude oil coming into the country, chose not to intervene.

This spring, while drivers began finding lines at their gas stations, oil companies operated their refineries, which turn crude oil into gasoline and other products, at a rate substantially below capacity. Meanwhile, millions of barrels of surplus crude oil built up in the companies' storage tanks. Although top Energy Department officials criticized the companies for that "conservatism," the same agency had just finished issuing new price regulations, called the "oil" rules, which required the companies higher future profits for gas if they held back on gas production temporarily and kept the market tight.

As the shortage developed, the oil industry steadily cut back on its domestic well-drilling, reversing a pattern of steadily increasing oil exploration during the past several years. And according to some congressional analysts, production from existing domestic wells also dropped at a rate substantially greater than the normal seasonal decline. The drilling of new wells did not start increasing until June — the month that the Carter administration's program for gradual lifting of crude-oil price controls took effect.

Acting under still another financial incentive from the administration, the oil industry stepped up its production of jet fuel — at the expense of gasoline — during the first half of the year. That kept significant supplies of gas off the market. The industry's shift to greater jet fuel production followed the administration's decision to remove price controls on jet fuel, making it more profitable than gasoline. A senior Energy Department official acknowledged in an interview that the agency was aware early in the year that the situation was hurting jet-fuel supplies. But the department, he said, decided against ordering companies to step up gas output because "to change production patterns is a very complex matter."

Conflicting government data have raised questions about the department's contention, and that of the oil companies, that the main cause of the gas lines was a crude-oil shortage caused by the temporary cutoff of Iranian oil. According to statistics the Central Intelligence Agency regularly publishes, world oil production increased substantially during the Iranian shutdown, with other nations increasing production to make up the difference. Similarly, U.S. Customs Service figures declared that U.S. oil imports declined early this year because of Iran. The Customs statistics show that oil imports were higher than last year in the first eight months of the record year of 1977.

Although the Carter administration and the oil companies have focused the blame for high gasoline prices on the members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, the gas price squeeze, actually started in mid-1978, a year when there was no OPEC price increase. And what allowed gas prices to start rising was the government's price control rules. Those rules let the companies begin jacking up gas prices when it must be rationed in the market by cutting supplies — at a rate three to four times their increases in crude-oil costs.

Final SALT hearings coming up this week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee begins its final round of hearings on SALT II when Congress returns to work Wednesday and President Carter is expected to make a decision shortly on how much to increase defense spending.

The two issues have become intertwined. Carter's decision on defense spending will influence — and could even determine — whether the Senate will ratify the arms limitation treaty with Russia.

On one side, he faces senators who say the United States must increase defense spending substantially to catch up with Moscow and keep pace with weapon development the Kremlin will make under SALT II.

On the other side are senators who see the arms limitation treaty being an excuse for an arms build-up in the United States.

Both those views will be represented when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the Armed Services Committee continue their SALT hearings this week. The Foreign Relations Committee is scheduled to send the treaty by Sept. 25 to the Senate floor, where it must be ratified by two-thirds of members voting if it is to take effect.

Carter's decision on the defense budget probably will be announced to the foreign relations committee by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who testifies before the panel privately Sept. 12 and publicly the next day.

Anderson has solution

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., a candidate for president, said Sunday he has a solution to both the gasoline problem and the Social Security dilemma, but few people are listening.

He has proposed a 5-cent tax on gasoline, with revenues from it being used to cut Social Security taxes.

Anderson outlined the proposal last week, but said he has not put together legislation on it because he sees no grassroots support for the idea so far.

He said he asked factory workers recently if they favored a cut in Social Security taxes.

"Oh, boy, hooray. I would have had the election won right there," said Anderson, who is seeking the 1980 Republican presidential nomination. But then he explained the money would come from a 50-cent gasoline tax.

The cheers faded.

Under Anderson's plan, the 50-cent gasoline tax would raise about $6.4 billion a year, if gasoline consumption did not change. But the anticipated gas use would drop with the high price and so the take would be closer to $6.9 billion.

With that, the government could cut the payroll tax rate for workers from 6.1 percent to 3 percent, and could reduce the employer's contribution from 6.1 percent to 5 percent, Anderson said. There would even be money left over to increase Social Security benefits and shore up the trust funds that some people fear will otherwise go dry.

There's single supplier for mud for baseballs

You know that mud that umpires rub on five dozen baseballs before each major league game? It comes from one supplier only—Burns Bluff and his family in southern New Jersey. The mud there doesn't stick to the stitches of the ball. If it did, the pitched ball would dip and drive like a knuckler.

Heckler led away

Demonstrator wearing a large wig who was passing out pamphlets and heckling President Carter is arrested by sheriff's deputies in Plains, Ga., Sunday. Identified as Conception Picotito, she heckled the president as he walked between two churches. The pamphlet claims she was placed in a mental institution and her child taken away.

Baptists, Methodists share Carter's visit

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT
PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President Carter went to two Baptist churches Sunday and had dinner with Methodists on the last full day of his summer vacation.
The president turned to sports later in the day with plans to watch the Atlanta Falcons football game on television and take part in a softball game at the Sumner County Correctional Institute.
He was to return to Washington on Labor Day, ending a vacation that included eight days on the Delta Queen, six at Camp David and four in Plains.
On Sunday, the president attended Sunday school class at the Maranatha Baptist Church, which was formed in 1977 by members unhappy with the previously all-white Plains Baptist Church.
"Let us put aside petty, human, materialistic thoughts that are bred from selfishness and too much preoccupation with our own needs and our own yearnings," Carter said in the opening prayer.
"Let us join our hearts in Christian love, one with another, based on our knowledge of a life of Jesus Christ, by Thy saving grace."

and thy willingness to forgive all our sins.
Then the presidential motorcade headed for Plains Baptist Church, the first time since the split Carter has attended Sunday worship instead of Bible class at the church in which he was raised and served as a Sunday school teacher and deacon.
One of those at the service was Clennon King, a black activist whose efforts to join the church ignited a controversy shortly before the 1976 election and led to the split in the congregation.
King, from Albany, Ga., gave Carter a booklet at the end of the service. It was titled, "The Secret Story of Jimmy Carter and his Religion."
"King was the only black present. The congregation voted two weeks after the 1976 election to remove its prohibition on black members.
At noon, Carter and wife Rosalynn walked four blocks beneath a blazing sun to the Methodist church, where Mrs. Carter had gone as a girl. The president took off his jacket and joined others in the congregation in eating roast beef and blackeyed peas.

Spinal patient 'stable'

By JIM ROWLEY
BALTIMORE (UPI) — Doctors Sunday kept a close watch on Jessie Thomas, the patient in the world's first successful spinal-replacement operation, and relatives went to church to pray for her survival.
"I think the doctor did an excellent job. It's left to the Lord to do the rest," said Maude Stallings, Mrs. Thomas' sister.
A spokeswoman at University of Maryland Hospital said Mrs. Thomas, 33, spent a peaceful night and was in stable but guarded condition. A piece of metal 5 inches long was implanted in her lower back to replace a damaged portion of her spine.
Dr. Charles Edwards, who performed the operation, said it took longer than the eight hours he expected because there was a large amount of scar tissue from the earlier operation. In addition, Mrs. Thomas required 30 pints of blood during the procedure.
The unique operation was the alternative to Mrs. Thomas spending the rest of her life strapped immobile to a stretcher, Edwards said. And the prospect of a long life were remote without the surgery, he said.
But Edwards was not optimistic that his patient would regain the ability to walk even if she survives the operation. Edwards said she probably will be confined to a wheelchair.
Mrs. Stallings said she and her sister, Thomasina Byrd, and other relatives planned to continue their vigil at the hospital after relatives prayed for Mrs. Thomas' health at the Christian Community Church.

Carter 'rabbit' a nutria?

Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — The "killer rabbit" that tried to attack President Carter may not have been a rabbit at all, according to Dr. Lester Fisher, director of Lincoln Park Zoo here.
"It might have been a nutria, which is much more aggressive than a rabbit and is a good swimmer," said Fisher. "The nutria has been growing in numbers in the South and has a head somewhat like a rabbit."
The nutria, sometimes called a coypu, is a web-footed rodent native to South America. It was introduced in the South in the 1920s and was raised in pens for its fur, like mink or chinchilla. Some, of course, escaped into the wild.
"Of course, you can't rule out that it was a rabbit," said Fisher. "People go berserk at times, so I suppose a rabbit could, too. If it was a rabbit, I doubt it had rabies, because rabbits seldom get rabies."

According to a White House report released Wednesday, the President was forced to beat off the attacking animal with a paddle while canoeing on a pond April 20 near Plains, Ga. Rex Gramum, deputy press secretary, said photos of the incident had been made but that the pictures would not be released.
When Carter was pressed for details Thursday during a visit to Atlanta, he said: "It was just a nice, quiet, typical Georgia rabbit."
But White House aides earlier had described the animal as a "killer rabbit" and said the President was "swinging for his life."
Dr. William R. Edwards, a wildlife specialist with the Illinois Natural History Survey in Urbana, noted that "a lot of things happen in the woods that we don't understand."
He added, however, "I've handled thousands of wild rabbits over the years, and I've never seen one that was aggressive. I've been bitten only twice and neither time was the skin broken."

Edwards said he had seen rabbits swim on three occasions each time when being chased by dogs. For that reason, he theorized, the animal that swam toward Carter's canoe could have been fleeing from a predator.
"Rabbits aren't good swimmers, but they do have excellent eyesight," said Edwards. "The animal could have been heading for the canoe as the closest place to get out of the water."
Peter Dring, a wildlife specialist with the Cook County Forest Preserve District, said White House reports that the nutria was hissing and lunging at Carter might be explained by the fact that if probably was wounded.
"The legs of a rabbit simply aren't made for swimming. They're made for digging. They're too short and the back legs aren't properly shaped."

Measles nearing record low level

ATLANTA (UPI) — Federal health officials say measles is declining dramatically in this country and could hit a record low this year.
The Center for Disease Control said that if known cases of measles "continue to decline at the current rate, the projected 1979 total will be between 13,000 and 14,000 reported cases, an all-time low for the United States."
The big drop apparently was the result of a national effort announced last year to try to eliminate the disease in America except for imported cases.
Since then, many states have begun strict enforcement of immunization laws, excluding unvaccinated children from school until they have proof of inoculation. Federal health officials say this action has played a key role in reducing the number of measles cases.
As of August 25, the CDC said 12,000 cases of measles had been reported since the first of the year.

Kimberly Book Club disbands

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly Book Club had an unusual meeting last week at the home of Marietta Colner.

Members voted the 50-year old group out of existence.

The remaining $42 in the treasury was presented to the Kimberly Library as a final gesture of the members' interest in promotion of good reading.

According to Mrs. Colner, president, reasons for the decision to disband are mixed.

The most obvious is that the remaining 11 members, several of whom joined when the club was formed back in 1928 or 1929, are getting on in years and can no longer attend.

Couldn't they get younger members? This path was blocked because there "already is another book club in Kimberly which has probably attracted all the younger women in the community interested in this type of activity.

But in addition these discouraging facts of life, Mrs. Colner said the final consideration is simply that "people just don't read anymore."

"They are so busy with other materials (like television?) no one has time to read the 'books anymore,'" Mrs. Colner said.

Like most book clubs the Kimberly women operated on the assumption that members liked to read "good" books, would read them and in turn take turns reviewing them at monthly meetings at the homes of members.

Each member was assessed $5 yearly dues which was used to purchase books, usually on the suggestion of Sude Hager, longtime poet laureate of Idaho, and one of the original members.

Through her connections with the publishing world, Mrs. Hager kept people. This is one of many projects they have sponsored. This being the "Year of the Child," they are concentrating on children.

The Easter Seal Center works with many handicapped children. They have been stressing the importance of early identification and early therapy to help prevent many of these problems.

spine. The Easter Seal Center currently has five children who will benefit from the therapy given on the standing board.

The Magic Valley club is affiliated with the Telephone Pioneers of America, a nationwide organization made up of long-time (at least 18 years) employees of the telephone company. The objective of the association is to help handicapped members informed on what books were available and would review them so the ladies could decide which ones to purchase. She also was able to get books at better prices because of her contacts.

Each member in turn had to read one of the books, which varied from fiction, and biography to such serious topics as philosophy, and then review it at a meeting.

If the member was too shy, busy or disinclined to put the effort into preparing a book review, she would hire a "professional" to do it for her, recalls Wanda Reed, a member who now lives in Twin Falls.

Edna Emerson, another member, said every two years the books would be distributed among the members for their personal library.

Mrs. Emerson is moving from the community and several other members are no longer physically able to attend, including Mrs. Hager.

"Sude really was the book club," as Charlotte Link put it.

Now the poet laureate is no longer well enough able to provide information about available books, which was another reason for their decision to disband.

The 11 final members include Marietta Colner, Charlotte McMaster, secretary, Edna Emerson, Sude Hager, Carleen Pomeroy, Charlotte Link, Mina Irwin, Reta McPhee, Agnes Savage, Clara Brose and Wanda Reed.

Among the charter members are Mrs. Colner, Mrs. McMaster, Mrs. Emerson and Mrs. Hager.

"Although all the members at the meeting at Mrs. Colner's home agreed that they should call it quits, they 'feel we have served a worthwhile cause,'" as Mrs. Reed said, "not only to educate our members, but in friendships we will never forget."

Overwater lawns

RYE, N.Y. (UPI) — Overwatering is one of the major mistakes often made by homeowners in caring for their lawns, says John Traynor, head greenskeeper of the Westchester Country Club which is the annual site of the Westchester Classic golf tournament on the EGA tour.

Traynor warns that too much water, say from a sprinkler that is left on too long, can literally drown the lawn and it enhances the growth of fungus. Traynor also goes contrary to frequent advice by saying that the best time to water lawns is during the heat of the day, rather than the usually recommended night time, because it cools the grass and relieves the stress. He also recommends using a dormant winter feed—in January or February—insecticide in April, and herbicide in mid-May when dandelions are in flower.

Talkative gal is trouble

Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — A woman who liked to babble on the telephone is causing big trouble for the crime syndicates endangered Las Vegas operations.

She's the fiancée of Herbie Blitzstein, an ambitious hoodlum who rose from underworld obscurity here — like some cream — to become a top associate of Anthony Spilotro, the Chicago mob's man in Las Vegas.

The 300-pound Blitzstein, known around town as Fat Herbie, started making head from a hot dog stand on N. Broadway and is a three-time loser in marriage. His fiancée is an attractive blond Las Vegas showgirl type, Dena Harle, 29.

Fat Herbie has been under federal scrutiny because of his association with Spilotro, prime target of a federal grand jury investigation of the syndicates involvement in Las Vegas casinos. And the jury now is working in on Harle as a potential paid mine of information. Her votes is on more than 200 wiretap tapes accumulated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in its surveillance of Fat Herbie and his Gold Rush Limited, a Las Vegas jewelry store government attorneys say is a crime front for Spilotro.

They avoid frustration after separation

DEAR ABBY: I don't have a problem, but my friend suggested I write for a consultation on what she thinks is a most unusual situation. The child's father and I were happily married for nine years. I have never consummated our marriage. My physician who prefers to practice in the United States, and my husband is a career officer in a foreign military service, based abroad, 3,000 miles away. We are both in our 30s. We see each other only three times a year for a week at a time. We know how little time we would have together, but married anyway because we truly love each other. We express our love by hugging and kissing, but always stop short of completing the act of love because we agree it's easier to live in total abstinence than open ourselves up to insufferable frustrations during our long separations. We are a well-adjusted, heterosexual couple without organic dysfunction or psychological hang-ups. We are 100 percent faithful to each other. Of that I am absolutely certain. We are living proof that a sexless marriage can be fulfilling. Some may think we're weird. Perhaps you do.

My friend insisted that I get a prescription from Dear Abby. However, I don't think there's anything wrong that needs fixing. What is your opinion?
—DOING FINE WITHOUT DEAR DOING-FINE: Yours is a most unusual case, doctor. But if you and your husband are totally fulfilled in a sexless marriage, I agree — there's nothing that needs fixing. I can only wish your continued abstinence, because if you ever find out what you've been missing, you may kill yourselves.

Trend toward early retirement continues; changes may come

By ROBERT LEWIS
 © Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — The trend toward early retirement continues despite the new federal law generally forbidding mandatory retirement before age 70.
 But experts say that eventually, most people will work to age 68 and beyond. And older workers will make greater use of optional work patterns like part-time jobs, flexible hours, sabbaticals and second-career training.
 "It does not appear there's going to be a major turn-around in the retirement age in the immediate future," says Malcolm Morrison, research analyst in the Labor Department's Employment Standards Administration.
 "But in the long run there will be a major modification. More people will stay on the job beyond age 65," Morrison says. "It's too early to assess the impact of the law which bars forced retirement of employees before age 70. The act went into effect last Jan. 1 for all employees except those covered by collective bargaining pacts. For union workers the law will take effect no later than Jan. 1, 1980.

 But a survey of nearly 1,900 companies by the Portland State University Institute on Aging showed most employers do not expect many workers will want to continue on the job beyond age 65.
 Their appraisals, however, are based primarily on past experience and not a firm knowledge of their employees' retirement plans," says Lois F. Coppersman, who conducted the survey.
 Testing last week before the President's Commission on Pension Policy, Coppersman said changing economic conditions, particularly soaring inflation, may slow and eventually reverse the trend toward early retirement.

 The commission is reviewing the entire question of retirement income, and one of its first recommendations, due next March, will concern the standard retirement age of 65 under the Social Security System.
 Social Security recipients may now retire at age 62 with reduced benefits, and some public and private pension plans provide for retirement as early as age 55.
 One suggestion reportedly getting serious consideration would raise the early retirement threshold from the current age 55 to age 60, and advance the "standard" retirement age from 65 to 68.

 Such changes, however, would carry enormous implications for the Social Security system and public and private pensions, which face financial strains in coming decades because of the aging of the American population.
 The Social Security Administration estimates there will be one beneficiary for every two workers in the year 2030 if current trends continue. This would severely burden Social Security, which is basically a pay-as-you-go system. Currently, there are about three workers for each beneficiary.
 Eleven percent of the population is age 65 or older but this will increase to 22 percent by the year 2030. Retirement plans face financial strains because workers are retiring at younger ages but living longer.

thirds of those who retired were under age 60 and the trend toward early retirement is continuing according to pension experts who testified at commission hearings.
 At the same time, longevity is increasing. In 1965 the 65-year-old could expect to live an additional 14.2 years. Now life expectancy at age 65 is 15 years.
 Requiring workers to stay on the job until age 68-70, quality-for-full benefits would greatly strengthen pension plans. For three additional years, workers would be contributing to their retirement plans rather than drawing benefits.
 But any advance in the retirement age is sure to draw opposition from labor unions that have won early retirement concessions in wage contracts.
 In the retirement picture, there is the contradiction between what people say and what they do. A 1979 Harris poll found that 63 percent of retirees would have preferred to continue working rather than retiring. Yet an increasing percentage retire before they are forced to by their employers.

 Anna M. Rappaport, a pension consultant with William M. Mercer Inc. in Chicago, says attitudes toward retirement may hinge on how a worker views his job.
 "For the individual whose self-esteem is closely tied to work, retirement may be much more difficult than for the individual whose work is rather routine and not very meaningful," she told the commission. "The blue collar worker may find the adjustment to retirement much easier than the executive or professional."
 The General Motors Corp. experience appears to bear this out. The company has a mandatory retirement age of 65 for blue-collar employees. Between 1950 and 1978, only 13 percent of GM's hourly employees worked until age 64. Twenty-seven percent retired between 63 and 65 and 60 percent stopped work before reaching 65.

New affiliation for Burley Inn

BURLEY — The Burley Inn has a new affiliation.
 Manager Carl Boyer said it is now affiliated with Best Western International and will be known as the Best Western Burley Inn.

The inn was formerly affiliated with Ramada Inns.
 The name and affiliation change does not affect the ownership and management of the property, Boyer said.

Among the reasons for the change in affiliation was the broader referral base to motels in other cities in the Intermountain region as well as to other affiliates nationally, Boyer said.

Profit from auto lease boom

© Field Enterprises, Inc.
 As costs of cars and trucks continue to zoom and mounting millions of motorists seek budget-saving alternatives to ownership, the lease-rental industry has been booming. Its annual revenues now reach over $24 billion, up almost 20 percent in a single year and an astounding three and one-half times above levels of a decade ago.
 Should you join this boom?

 Most drivers couldn't possibly pay down $6,000-$9,000 cash for a new car. Of every five of us, four finance an average of two-thirds of the purchase price. And we lose interest on the remaining down payment, which we could have earned in some savings medium.
 The basic arguments of the major leasing firms are that they can:

which could help to steer you away from a loser to a winner in the re-sale roulette game on the used car lots in the past few years.
 The very variety of leases can confuse the unwary, though.
 Under an open-end lease, you can gain or lose on the car's re-sale value at lease end. With a closed-end lease, the leasing company takes that risk. A hybrid combination

(1) Select a car better; (2) buy it cheaper; (3) borrow their money for less than you can borrow yours; (4) insure more economically in many cases; (5) maintain the cars more efficiently; and then (6) sell the used vehicles at higher prices than can most individuals. And they still can chalk up handsome profits.
 Car selection is a key aspect, an often neglected factor in the car-cost equation. It bears on the car's biggest single expense — depreciation, or the difference between what you pay for the new car and what you sell or trade it in for when it is used.
 On the front end, you must get the biggest possible discount when you buy the car — but you also must get the best possible re-sale or trade-in price on it when you sell. Slightly different models, with a few different options, can produce a $400-$500 difference in re-sale values even on similar size cars from the same manufacturer. Thus, a car that is "cheaper" to buy, could cost you more to own, or vice versa. Even if you end up buying rather than leasing, it would be sound to discuss this with a leasing company.

contract lets you share in any re-sale gain, but frees you from loss responsibility.
 In addition to the open-end, closed-end choice, you can pick non-maintenance, partial (limited) maintenance or full-maintenance "options" in your contract, which also can be with, or without, licensing, with or without insurance, with or without a "down payment."

At Twin Falls County Fair Interest in antiques grows

By MARTY TRILLHASE
Times-News writer

FILER — If the price of a local newspaper today seems extravagant, consider the slogan of one now-bygone publication of the old west, the California Dispatch. Printed proudly across its banner of the Aug. 26, 1897, edition is the following:

"The Dispatch is the largest newspaper published in California and is only $1."

The Dispatch is only one of more than 1,500 treasures being exhibited this week at the Twin Falls County Fair antique show. The fair opens Wednesday.

If not interested by old newspapers, consider:

- A display of several Colt handguns including a 44. Colt made for the U.S. Army between 1871-1875.
- A Rotary Neostyle hand operated printing press. The most recent patent on the machine is May 26, 1908.
- Two telephones made during the early 1900's offering the best of modern technology at that time including a four-digit phone number. One model, a wall phone, features a two-foot wooden box. A desk model sports a Sept. 13, 1904, patent.
- A hand-whittled high chair that could be as old as 130 years. The chair was made from willow growing along the Touchet River near Waihsburg, Wash.
- Also among the exhibits are a 104 year old mandolin, an early wooden wheelchair, early model Kodak cameras complete with bellows, and a 100-400 year old conquistador stirrup.
- Antiques have become a tradition for the fair, generating more interest and exhibits each year — and more work for the staff, says exhibit judge Willie Ruth Hanson of Filer.

"It really is a dream come true from the first days I was in there," Mrs. Hanson said.

Her interest in antiques was nurtured through considerable travels as an officer's wife. Her husband, Milton, was a Coast Guard communications officer. One does not grow roots easily during a military career. Through the years, they lived in 47 states.

She began the show 21 years ago with about 300 exhibits.

Last year the show featured 1,564 exhibits, over 2,000 articles, in 519 classifications.

All of the antiques come from private owners and not a few are family heirlooms, Mrs. Hanson said.

"Through the years, people have come to trust us and no we often have some museum pieces," she said. But caring for the valued items is a major responsibility, requiring hours of painstaking identification and categorizing. "Which means lots of work. In my first year we had three and now we have 10 or 11 people," she said.

One reason for that growth in a broadened selection of artifacts, Mrs. Hanson said.

No longer is the show dominated by crystal and china. Those items, of course, remain prominent. But also featured in this exhibit are such unlikely items as electrical line insulators and old bottles found on the desert.

"I think when it used to be china, only the women came in. Now we're seeing more men and young people," Hanson said.

Farmers may have beaten land deadline

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

TWIN FALLS — An estimated 150 to 200 farmers in Twin Falls County may have beaten the deadline for dividing their agricultural land into five-acre parcels.

A public hearing will be held Sept. 11 before the county commissioners on the new county zoning ordinance. This document will be adopted, with the limit future land division in agricultural zones to 20 acres. County commissioners will review testimony received at that time and then vote on the new ordinance.

The county zoning administrator said it is conceivable the new ordinance could be adopted and in effect by Sept. 15. It can be adopted to become effective upon publication in final form.

Meanwhile, land owners are calling at the county recorder's and county assessor's offices here with various types of documents showing their farms cut into five-acre parcels, hoping for grandfather rights under a date prior to the adoption of the ordinance. Many, says County Assessor William Clark, apparently have no intention of subdividing at this time, but they want to have a right to do so at some future date if the opportunity arises.

The new ordinance was drafted to carry out the provisions of the comprehensive land use plan for Twin Falls County. The county plan adopted by the commissioners earlier this year after several years of study, preparation and public hearings. The comprehensive plan sets the minimum size land parcel in agricultural zones at 20 acres.

One of the basic purposes of the plan and zoning ordinance is to keep housing development, and five-acre homesites from springing up in remote areas of the county and in the center of agricultural areas.

During hearings on the proposed plan, many farmers appealed to the county zoning administrator from encroaching housing developments, saying high level housing density is not compatible with farming operations. Others urged the county to adopt a plan that would save prime agricultural land for crop production, and keep housing development close to cities.

The many farm owners now attempting to file notices of plans to divide their property has zoning officials wondering if maybe farmers don't want the much-talked-about 20-acre minimum after all.

Clark said there is also question as to whether the filings will be held legal. He said he has asked for an opinion from the county attorney but as yet the county attorney has not completed researching the situation.

"Some farmers are getting licensed engineers to prepare maps and survey reports and others are sitting down at their kitchen tables and making their own drawings and land parcel descriptions," Clark said.

When they come to the assessor's office they are asked to file an affidavit, a "miscellaneous map" or "miscellaneous survey of property."

These contain legal metes and bounds descriptions of the proposed five-acre parcel, Clark said.

The land owners are recording their maps, surveys and legal descriptions with the county recorder and then going to the assessor's office with the information for tax assessment.

"I could say what procedure should be followed, but I can't," says Clark. "People are asking us about procedures and about taxes, but we don't have the answers at this time."

"If the land is going to remain agriculture for some time, we try to assess it as agriculture, but if it is going to be cut up and sold in the near future, then we feel it must be assessed at a much higher value as investment property."

"I suspect we may have some law suits as a result. For example, I would welcome one just to clear up the question of where we stand," Clark said.

Clark said the problem is unique with Twin Falls county because the state law says a minimum size farm parcel is five acres and the county plan and ordinance say 20 acres.

He said one deputy attorney general in Boise told him the land should probably be carried on the tax assessment roles as agricultural until the first five-acre parcel is sold. At that time it would require reassessment of the entire farm and it would be taxed as investment or development property.

There is still another factor involved, Clark said. The Legislature has adopted a new law that also applies.

The new law states any five-acre parcel on which the owner derives 15 percent or more of his total income from the production of agricultural products is to be taxed as farm land. This includes products for sale or for home consumption, Clark said. The law also allows farm classification on any land leased for farming at an annual rate of $1,000 or more.

Owners of such property must prove to the assessor each year that the land is used for farming.

Clark said neither the attorney general's office nor the state tax commission has made a commitment as yet on the matter. He said the division of farms into five-acre parcels, on paper, will continue until the zoning ordinance takes effect, and he said it means a lot of work in his office and that of the county recorder.

Some of the farms being divided are as large as 200 acres, he said. On Friday two Buhl area residents involved in Boise told him the land about 75 acres in size. Some of the land involved is on large productive farms that have been agricultural since the beginning of the tract.

Clark said the zoning ordinance and plan are in effect, farmers in agricultural zones who wish to divide the land in less than 20-acre parcels, will have to apply to the county planning and zoning commission for a zone change or zoning variance and will be required to plat and subdivide the property. This requires public hearings.

Residents of Melon Valley who attended a Planning and Zoning Commission public hearing on the ordinance and objected to a recreational zone in their area won their point. The zoning group eliminated the recreational zone from the ordinance, leaving Melon Valley as an agricultural zone with the 20-acre minimum land division.

Persons wanting to sell off small size land parcels for home sites in Melon Valley may be appearing at the Sept. 11 hearing.

Board plans to attend dedication

BOISE (UPI) — The State Board of Education will attend dedication ceremonies for the Eastern Idaho Vocational-Technical School in Idaho Falls during its Sept. 6-7 meeting.

On Thursday, the board will hear agenda proposals from the state's four higher education institutions and the Department of Education.

Frida's schedule includes requests from the divisions of Vocational Education and Vocational Rehabilitation, the State School for the Deaf and Blind, the Historical Society and the Office of the State Board of Education.

Today's fair schedule

All livestock must be on grounds by 6 p.m., except horses: 8 a.m. to noon — Antique entries
9 a.m. to 6 p.m. — Entries in Home Arts, Kitchen and Pantry, Youth Produce and Fruit, Poultry, and all 4-H Projects
1 to 6 p.m. — Weighing Market Steers
1 to 6 p.m. — 4-H Horse Fitting and Showing, Quality Horse Arena
1 to 4 p.m. — Weighing Market Lambs and Hogs

Inflation reaches fair admissions

FILER — Inflation has few sacred cows and the Twin Falls County Fair is apparently not one of them.

Admission to the fair this year will cost more as well as certain seating at the rodeo.

The four-day fair complete with rodeos, livestock shows, and carnival rides kicks off Wednesday at the county fairgrounds in Filer.

Admission at the gate is free for children under six, $1 for children six to 12, and $1.50 for adults.

That represents a 50 cent increase at the gate. The increase is intended to help the fair cover increased costs, secretary-manager Tom Shouse said.

The Twin Falls Lions Club is charging $1 for parking. Carnival rides will cost no more than 75 cents each.

General admission to the four-day rodeo will be $3.50 for adults, $2.50 for Junior high and high school students, and $2 for children. Reserved seats will be $5 and seating in the box seat section will cost $7.50.

The general admission price is unchanged from last year. But reserved seats will cost $1 more and box seats are up $2.50.

Tickets to the horse pulling contest Wednesday will cost $2. The event is scheduled at 2 p.m.

Those charges are expected to generate about $175,000 to $200,000, Shouse said. In years past the fairgrounds has also relied on about $80,000 in county revenues as well as its own funds.

The 75-acre fairgrounds and its buildings is the county's second most valuable property.

But the fairgrounds' subsidy could be lost in one or two years due to the anticipated effects of Idaho's new 1 percent land tax.

"If we don't make our own money, we're out of business," Shouse said.

To deal with the loss of revenue and inflation, the fairgrounds is considering charging more for other activities, Shouse said.

"And if we can get by and everybody pulls his own weight, that's fine," Shouse said.

Crash kills Idahoan

RUBERT — The death of an Idaho Falls man Saturday raised to three the number of fatalities on Idaho highways during the Labor Day weekend.

Christopher Marvin Harrison, 19, of Idaho Falls was killed at about 5:45 p.m. near the Kasota interchange on I-80.

Harrison's name had been withheld until his family was notified Sunday.

Police said Harrison apparently fell asleep at the wheel and ran off the road into the median strip. Upon awaking, he overcorrected, turning the vehicle back onto the highway and heading into a roll.

Harrison was ejected and killed instantly when the vehicle rolled over him.

A 23-year-old Desmet man had died earlier Saturday along the Desmet Road. Harold Lay Seaton was thrown from his car after he flipped over an embankment.

Idaho State Police said Seaton was speeding west on the road when he lost control of his vehicle. The accident occurred at 2:30 a.m.

Organization planned

TWIN FALLS — Camp Fire Ma Te Val Blue Birds, Blue Jays, Adventurers, Discovery and Horizon Clubs of Twin Falls are having their group organization meeting for children and parents at 3:30 p.m. Sept. 10 at most Twin Falls schools and at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 10, at the Camp Fire office for those who cannot make it to the school meeting. For more information call Janet Taylor, 734-3487 or the Camp Fire office, 733-6214.

Twin Falls woman hurt

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls woman Sunday was reported to have sustained a two-car collision at the intersection of Addison Avenue and Second Avenue North.

Irene Sinema, 82, of Twin Falls, was hospitalized for treatment of a broken rib and minor lacerations, according to the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital.

Sinema was eastbound on Addison Avenue when witnesses said she ran a stop sign, colliding with a pickup truck driven by Dale W. Ralphs, 16, of Twin Falls, Twin Falls Police said.

Ralphs was northbound on Second Avenue North, turning left onto Addison, police said.

The accident occurred at about 6 p.m.

Magie Valley Ambulance provided first aid and escorted Sinema to the clinic. No other injuries were reported.

Ketchum fire probed

KETCHUM — Ketchum fire department investigators Sunday continued checking into a fire which gutted five of ten Ketchum condominiums under construction.

No cause for the fire on Saturday has been determined. The Ketchum Condominiums on Leadville Street North under construction were destroyed, the department said. Damage in terms of dollars was unknown Sunday.

About 28 fire fighters from Ketchum and Sun Valley responded to the first alarm at 2 a.m. When they arrived, units one through five were completely in flame.

Seven of the ten units had progressed to the construction phase.

Collision hurts three

HOLLISTER — A Utah couple and a Filer man were reported in stable condition Sunday after a head-on collision two miles south of Hollister.

Michael Peterson, 25, of Filer, and Emma Wilkins, 61, of Springville, Utah, were reported in stable condition at Melon Valley Memorial Hospital. Mrs. Wilkins' husband, Arnold, 62, was treated and released.

Peterson was northbound on U.S. Highway 93 when he collided with a southbound vehicle driven by the Wilkins. Magie Valley Ambulance attendants said.

The accident occurred at about 5:30 p.m. Idaho State Police said. Further details of the accident were not available.

Spectacular Wyoming murder case to trial

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — John Crandall, deputy coroner in Evanston, Wyo., remembers clearly the events of Aug. 7, 1977.

He recalls the jarring explosion, the pre-dawn call from local authorities, the sight of the pulverized home and finally, the woman's body outside the debris.

That was the scene of what state Atty. Gen. John Troughton has called the "first indiscriminate bombing in Wyoming history." It ended the lives of Evanston attorney Vincent Vehar, his wife, Beverly, and his son, John, and sent state and federal investigators on a two-year quest for the perpetrators.

"That house was really flattened," said Crandall, now Uinta County coroner. "Other homes nearby were damaged as well. I know one had to be rebuilt."

The investigations culminated June 22, when Michael J. Hickey, of Lonetree, Wyo., admitted tossing 30 sticks of dynamite through the basement window of the Vehar home. In Evanston, 15 days before Hickey's confession, the Uinta County grand jury indicted the man prosecutors said was the real force behind the killings — Mark Hopkinson, 29, the owner of a mail of retail shops in Urlic, Wyo.

This week in Jackson, Wyo., Hopkinson — tall, mustachioed and clean-cut — goes on trial in Teton County District Court. Represented by prominent Salt Lake City criminal lawyer Robert Van Selver, Hopkinson must defend himself against charges that he ordered Hickey to blow up the home of Vehar, who pressed a lawsuit against Hopkinson on behalf of the local water and sewer district.

Taking the case for the state is Special Prosecutor Gerald Stead, senior state attorney. He won a $10 million judgment in the Karen Silkwood plutonium contamination case. Spence, who had been a friend of Vehar, is asking for the death penalty.

Hopkinson's troubles with the law, however, take in more than the Evanston bombing. The entire case involves a complex web of crimes and associations originating in southwest Wyoming's Bridger Valley, an isolated region where most of the farmers and ranchers knew each other intimately before the influx of new visitors drawn by mineral development in the early 1970s.

Besides the charges in the Vehar bombing, the grand jury indictment charges Hopkinson with:

- Arranging for a federal prison cell in California.
- The death of Jeffrey Green, of Mountain View, Wyo. Green's tortured body was found near an Interstate 80 rest stop in May, two days before he was to testify before the grand jury. The corpse bore marks of torture by burning and beating, and prosecutors said the 23-year-old victim had been slipped by professional killers.

Comploting with Hickey in the April 1977 death of William Roltz.

"Perjury with intent to conceal Hickey's guilt in the budgeon slaying of Kellie Wyckhuse, 15. Hickey has been convicted of second-degree murder in the Wyckhuse case under a plea-bargaining agreement arranged for his testimony in the Vehar bombing.

"Other perjury counts stemming from alleged false testimony about the Vehar bombing; a plot to bomb the car of a Phoenix, Ariz., attorney — for which Hopkinson has been sentenced to 10 years in a federal prison; drug trafficking; and his alleged efforts to have Green implicate someone other than Hickey in the Wyckhuse killing.

The perjury counts, however, have been separated from the murder charges by an Aug. 21 order from presiding Judge Robert B. Ranck. The case was moved from Evanston to Jackson on a change of venue.

One unique aspect to the case is that the three principals, Hopkinson, Green, and Hickey, are not transient workers lured to the state by energy development, but sons of families who have lived in the Bridger Valley for at least two generations.

"The Hickeys, Greens, and Hopkinsons are all native families," said Kathy Brown, editor of the weekly Bridger Valley Pioneer. "Their grandparents all owned land in the valley, and Hopkinson was raised on a ranch near Fort Bridger."

Mrs. Brown added that The Pioneer office is also located in the "mini-mall" owned by Hopkinson.

Troughton said security for the trial, beginning Tuesday will be the tightest he has ever seen.

Teton County Sheriff Steve Rogers has hired extra deputies to guard the jail and the jury will be under 24-hour surveillance. Meanwhile, special prosecutors Spence and Ed Moriarty — Spence's law partner — already have the protection of a flock of bodyguards from the Highway Patrol and Game and Fish Department.

Jury selection alone could take up the entire first week. Since it is a capital case, each side is allowed a dozen peremptory challenges, or opportunities to refuse prospective jurors without explanation.

The entire proceeding is expected to last five weeks. Court Clerk Barbara Oakley said Spence has included 170 persons on his witness list, while Van Selver has lined up at least 100.

"This has been a horrible, vicious case," Troughton said. "There's no question that it's unique in the annals of criminal justice in Wyoming."

Scientists trace hemophilia to days of pioneers in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — University of Utah scientists say hemophilia in Utahans can now be traced to its source — pioneer women who settled in the state in the middle to late 1800s.

Robert M. Fineman, director of the University Medical Center's genetics program, said his staff is tracking down carriers of hemophilia by using extensive genealogical records.

"We need large, well-defined pedigrees, a minimum of family migration and illegitimacy, and a good, relatively inexpensive carrier detection test," Fineman said.

He said the crippling blood-clotting disease affects one in every 2,500 males born in Utah each year.

A Department of Health, Education and Welfare grant has enabled Dr. Edward J. Hershgold, associate professor of community medicine, to set up two tests which detect abnormalities in the blood's clotting process.

"Thanks to the two much improved blood tests and the meticulous genealogical record-keeping of most Utah families, we will probably have the most complete carrier detection program ever," Fineman said.

The scientists said approximately 50 percent of daughters born to carrier women become carriers, they said, but no sons of affected males inherit the disease, they said.

All daughters of hemophilic males become carriers, they said, but no sons of affected males inherit the disease, they said.

Fineman said medication for a hemophilic can cost a family up to $2,000 per year, or about $15 million annually for the 80-90 Utah families coping with the disorder.

He said the carrier detection program will, within several years, have a network of clinics set up across the state to aid in diagnosis and counseling.

"People have a right to know what chances they're taking when they have children," Fineman said.

Idaho trio rated high

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Conservative Union Sunday released its interim ratings of Congress with Idaho's Congressional delegation receiving an average conservative rating well above the national average.

The Idaho House members, Reps. Steve Symms and George Hansen, received a rating of 100 percent each. The national average rating for the House by the group is 46.39 percent.

Idaho senators averaged 59.5 percent, compared with the national average of 39.67 percent. Sen. Frank Church received a rating of 21 percent while Sen. James McClure was rated at 96 percent.

The group's rating is based on certain House and Senate votes between January and July. The issues included support for federal budget cuts, tax reduction and a balanced budget, opposition to gas rationing, the creation of a Department of Education, the implementation of the Panama Canal treaties and continuing sanctions against Rhodesia.

Reagan likely GOP pick

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho political party workers believe Republican Ronald Reagan will challenge President Jimmy Carter in the 1980 presidential race, a recent poll by the Idaho Statesman indicated.

But 78 percent of the Republican workers surveyed said Sen. Edward Kennedy would be the toughest Democratic nominee for the Republican candidate to beat.

Reagan likely GOP pick

Both Democrats and Republicans chose Rep. Steve Symms as the most likely candidate to oppose Sen. Frank Church in next year's Senate race.

The survey was mailed to state executive committee members, legislative district chairmen, county chairmen and state committeemen of both parties.

Pipeline coming still being taken

BOISE (UPI) — Cecil D. Andrus said public comment on an environmental statement on four applications for an oil pipeline to be constructed across the northern U.S. through Idaho will be accepted until the end of September.

The draft analyzes the applications submitted by Northern Tier Pipeline Co., Northwest Energy Co., Klumit Pipe Line Ltd. and Trans. Mountain Oil Pipe Line Co.

The proposed pipeline would extend from Alaska across Canada and through the states of Washington, Idaho and Montana into Minnesota.

"These are important steps toward protecting the priceless environmental values of nationally significant parklands," he said.

Oakland shocks Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams, skunked in the playoffs for six consecutive years, were bitten again in their 1979 season opener.

Ken "Snake" Stabler, the five-time All-Pro quarterback of the Oakland Raiders, cashed in on two of the Rams' four turnovers Sunday with touchdown passes to Raymond Chester in the third quarter to lift the Raiders to a 24-17 comeback victory in the NFL opener for both teams.

Stabler threw 30 interceptions last year and took much of the heat for last year's disappointing 27 finish by the Raiders, but he played almost the entire season with an injured throwing hand. This year, the beloved left-hander appears healthy and could guide Oakland back into the playoffs.

"I always have trouble with the Rams," Stabler said after the victory. "To beat them is satisfactory."

Stabler praised the Rams' defense, the best in the NFL last season.

Jack Youngblood and Fred Dryer were rushing with heat; Stabler said, "I haven't seen a better pass rush in a while. The Rams play the run well and have a good front four and linebackers."

Oakland Coach Tom Flores, making his victorious debut as an NFL head coach, praised the Raiders' defense.

"We know we have a good team," Flores said. "We just didn't know how good. I thought the key to the game was the special teams — they were just great and we were out there."

The Rams' Eddie Brown fumbled a Ray Guy punt midway through the third quarter and Derrick Jensen recovered for Oakland at the Los Angeles 25. Two days later Stabler hit Chester with a 27-yard pass to tie the score 17-17 with 7:24 left in the third period.

Oakland's Monte Jackson intercepted Pat Haden's first pass of the next series and returned it to the Los Angeles 26. Six plays later, Stabler and Chester teamed again on a 4-yard scoring pass with 5:22 left in the quarter. Arthur Whittington reeled off a 19-yard run to set up the TD pass.

On the Rams' next series, Haden completed a 49-yard pass to Preston Pennard to tie the Oakland 12 but his next pass was intercepted by Lester Hayes, ending the Rams' threat.

The Rams drove 31 yards in 11 plays on their second possession of the game, with Wendell Tyler capping the march with a 1-yard plunge with 3:10 in the first quarter. Los Angeles made it 14-0 on Haden's 17-yard scoring strike to Willie Miller just 2:09 into the second quarter.

Oakland pulled within 14-3 on a 38-yard field goal by Jim Breech 6:42 into the second quarter, culminating a 60-yard drive in 11 plays. Stabler hit Cliff Branch for 29 yards and Chester for 19.

The Raiders narrowed the Rams' lead to 14-10 on a 1-yard pass from Stabler to Derreck Ramsey with 4:33 left in the first half. The touchdown was set up when Mike Davis blocked a Ken Clark punt in the end zone and the Raiders got the ball on the Rams' 1-yard line.

Frank Corral kicked a 46-yard field goal with three seconds left in the second quarter to give the Rams a 17-10 halftime edge. Los Angeles picked up 21 yards in the drive on a pass interference call against Davis and a 16-yard illegal contact penalty against the Raiders.

Haden completed 21-of-41 passes for 229 yards. The 41 passes were the most ever tried in a game by Haden during his career. Stabler hit on 11-of-26 for 130 yards.

Lawrence McCutchen gained 63 yards in 15 carries for the Rams, giving him 6,000 rushing yards in his eight-year pro career.

Patriots to face 'Super' Steelers

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The New England Patriots have a chance tonight to put some hope and color in the region's sports scene in their 1979-80 football season opener against the Pittsburgh Steelers, last year's NFL Super Bowl champs.

New England sports fans need a psychological boost to take their minds off the Boston Red Sox, whose baseball fortunes are fading fast with the end of the season almost in sight.

Out of sight from the fans at Schaefer Stadium in Foxboro will be Darryl Stingley, the Pats' star receiver who was left paralyzed by a tackle in an exhibition game last year with the Oakland Raiders.

Stingley plans to visit with his former teammates and then watch the game from the private suite of Patriots owner Billy Sullivan at the top level of the press box.

The Pats, led by new coach, Bill Belichick, will be trying to overcome the Steelers' defense and display enough offensive power to beat last year's top team.

Belichick and the Patriots will be scrutinized closely by fans anxious to see if they finally have a team that can go all the way.

But Steelers Coach Chuck Noll doesn't think one game makes an entire season.

State tennis open Tourney takes a Utah twist

By GARY ELIASSEN Times-News sports editor

ELKHORN — It's called the Idaho State Open Tennis Championships, but a strong Utah contingent stole the show Sunday.

A Salt Lake City Ogden area competitor has fought his or her way into the semifinals of just about every one of the 28 divisions of the tourney. More than 250 entries of the 600 received for the prestigious tourney were from Utah.

Some of the Utah players vying for top honors today include the Fought brothers, Rob and Rick; Ogden; Mike Benson of Ogden; and Ismene Vetas of Salt Lake City.

Rick Fought, 20, men's open top seed, will have to get by his brother, Rob, in one semifinal match today at 8 a.m. His doubles partner, Mike Benson, 19, also of Ogden, will be playing the other semifinal against Steve Appleton of Boise. The two winners will meet at approximately noon.

Rick Fought, who lost in last year's finals, has never played his brother in tournament competition.

"We've practiced a lot together," said Rick. "He's a good ground stroker and a smart player. I'll have to play well to beat him."

Rick has worked his way to the semifinals with four convincing wins in the first two days of action.

"I'm more consistent this year," said the BYU junior. "I don't make too many unforced errors. I think I can take it."

His brother, Rob, 16, is a junior at Ben Lomond High School in Ogden and has surprised many by making it this far in the tough men's open bracket.

Benson, the number two seed, hopes he can meet his doubles partner (Rick) in the finals today.

"We've played together since we were 10 years old," he said. "He's tough and has a good all-around game."

Benson will be transferring to BYU this year after going to school at Oklahoma University for one year.

"One of my main goals will be to get his serve back," said Benson. "I just got to hang in there."

Rick Fought and Benson are the number two seed in the doubles competition which also will hold semifinals today.

Scheduled matches today include Fought-Benson against Warren Eber-Doug Wallares (Salt Lake City-Ketchum) and Kay Barney-Kevin Kempin (Salt Lake City) against Kent Crawford-Derk Wharton (Salt Lake City).

The women's open singles final will have Karen Larsen of Ogden facing Carrie Osborne of Boise. Semifinal doubles matches include Karen Kennington-Larsen (Ogden) versus Denise Vogt-Katie Hulsman (Pocatello); and Sandy Connor-Connie Draper (Boise) against Leslie Edman-Veda Edman (Salt Lake City).

In the finals of the mixed doubles, Eber-Page (Salt Lake City) will play Derk and Merae Pardee (Salt Lake City).

Two major upsets were registered in the junior division when Ismene Vetas, 15, of Ogden, knocked off top seeded Andrea Brown, an Australian who plans to attend Boise State University, in the 18-under singles.

Vetas, who lost in the 16-year old division Saturday, said she played better Sunday.

"I was too cautious on Saturday, but today I played the net more and attacked better," she said.

Jim Trestrahl, 18, who lives in Seattle, Wash., but is working in Sun Valley this summer, shocked number one seeded Curt Cortis of Salt Lake City in that age bracket.

"I just kept hitting his serve back — he's got a tough one," said Trestrahl. "If you can get it back, you can do okay."

Two Idaho products, Bart Weimer and Brad Madison, both of Idaho Falls, are the odds on favorite to win the 10-under doubles title.

In conjunction with the tennis tournament, Chris Chadwick, Rossignol tennis salesmen for the northwest, is holding a fast serve contest.

Fastest serve registered during the first two days of competition was turned in Sunday night by Jim Doud of Carlsbad, Calif., who hit 172 kilometers or 107.5 miles per hour.

The eight qualifiers who will vie today for the title include: Bob Norwood of Leucadia, Calif.; Craig Van Dyck of Boise; Grady Johnson of Clear Valley; Kevin Kempin of Sandy, Utah; Rod Leonard of Moscow; Scott Moreland of Moscow; and Chris Langdon of Boise.

Brad Madison's booming serve led him and Bart Weimer, both of Idaho Falls, to victory

Cromwell takes lead in amateur

By LARRY HOVEY Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS, Idaho — When Ken Cromwell of Ogden said Saturday he was starting to get better healthwise, players in the Magic Valley tournament should have listened.

Cromwell at the time was talking about a back problem that took him away from the job for six weeks and caused a lot of pain last year's tournament. Sunday morning he ordered some breakfast at a Twin Falls restaurant and I shouldn't have eaten it.

With a bad back and an upset stomach, the Utah fired a three-under par 65 on Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course and will enter the final round of the Magic Valley Amateur Golf Tournament with a four-stroke lead.

A former champion, Cromwell ended the first day with a four-under par 122 total for the first time.

First-day leader Mike Hamblin of Twin Falls, complaining about his putting, fell to second at 136. And it made the chase over the last 18 holes today a real problem to catch Cromwell, who won this event four years ago.

State amateur champion Glenn Blakeley of Burley carried an even-par 68 to tie with Hamblin, who had a 70.

Dr. Chick Cutler and Gary Duncan, both Twin Falls, were tied at 139, seven strokes off the lead.

Duncan, who learned the game on this course, continued to spray the ball around but scored well. This was evidenced by the fact he won the championship flight elimination derby after he said he was everywhere and then in the hole. He took it when Hamblin missed a short putt on the ninth green, but the youngster, taking a break from reporting to Arizona Western where he is a golf team member, shrugged it off. "I told you I had the spastic putter all day," he said. "It was just like that all day."

Cromwell said "I played pretty well" and then added he'd been taking Pepto-Bismol to try to counteract the sausage. One thing the stomach upset did do, however, was take his mind off his back.

In the first flight, young Dave Parker, a sophomore at Burley High School, cruised to a one-under 69 and seized the lead at 145. "I want to shoot 68 tomorrow," he said. But right behind was Doug Wood of Ogden, who's reputation in this tournament as a steady golfer was not hindered by the fact he turned in his second straight 71.

First-day leader Stack Madigan of Elko, who went on to win the flight derby over runner-up Dr. Ed Allison, was lodged in a tie at 146 with Jim Rasmussen of Twin Falls. Woody Wilde of Elko had a 71 while Terry Spackman of Burley skied a bit to 76 and those two wound up at 149.

Ray Dey of Twin Falls continued to lead the second flight, posting a two-day 145 total and a two-stroke edge over young Steve Meyerhoefer and Norm Thomas, both Twin Falls, and Tom Church of Burley. Six shots back was Dean Gordon of Twin Falls while Gordon Barry hauled himself to 152 along with Herb Wright and Chris Israel of Twin Falls.

Del Rupert of Boise carded a 72 to take the third-flight lead at 151, one stroke ahead of Shorty Workman of Burley.

In the fourth flight, Hob Bowen of Twin Falls stayed just ahead with a 160 while Ralph Conant charged up with a 75 to share second place with 71 Long of Twin Falls. Just one shot behind.

Fifth flight leader Bill Mason of Twin Falls built his fifth flight lead to five strokes at 165 while Kenny McClain's endurance continued to impress.

In the all-net sixth flight, Bob Blake continued to lead although he saw his first-day seven-stroke lead melt to three against Fred Workman.

DuPre upsets Mayer, Connors wins

DuPre, contending that "I came into this tournament with the intention of winning it," routed 13th seed Gene Mayer, 7-5, 6-2, 6-3, while Connors, the second seed, who generally gets to play here on his birthday, breezed into the fourth round with a 6-3, 6-0, 6-3 victory over Bruce Manson.

Chris Evert Lloyd, yet to be extended in three matches, opened the night program by beating Fennee Richards 6-2, 6-1. Evert, seeking a fifth consecutive Open crown, has dropped only five games this far.

Connors, the defending champion, suffered from leg cramps during his match but said later he was okay. He next meets 11th seed Brian Gottfried, who had to endure a day-night marathon with big victor Araya before pulling out a 6-7, 4-6, 7-5, 6-1, 6-4 victory.

After saving his eighth-game service through five deuces, Gottfried made the key break in the ninth game of the final set of the match, which started under the sun and was completed under lights. He wound it up with two aces in the final game.

Fifth seed Roscoe Tanner, the man who finally ended DuPre's run at Wimbledon after bowing in the final to Bjorn Borg, also gained the round of 16 with a stormy 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 triumph over Nick Saviano.

John McEnroe, the third seed, made it into the fourth round the easy way as his scheduled opponent, John Lloyd, defaulted because of illness, and No. 9 Eddie Dibbs defeated Bernie Milton, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3. McEnroe next meets Tom Gorman and Dibbs plays Guillermo Vilas.

In another night match, seventh seed Harold Solomon easily disposed of Ray Moore 6-3, 6-0, 7-5, breaking the South African in the final game of the third set.

Third seed Tracy Austin easily disposed of Kate Lattman, 6-0, 6-0, and moving along with her into the fourth round of the women's singles were No. 6 Dianne Fromholtz, No. 8 Kerry Reid, No. 10 Greer Stevens and No. 11 Kathy Jordan.

Fromholtz had to struggle before subduing New Yorker Leslie Allen, a protégé of Althea Gibson, 6-7, 6-3, 6-2.

DuPre, whose victims at Wimbledon included Vitas Gerulaitis and Adriano Panatta, dropped the first 10 games against Mayer, losing his first two services, and was trailing 4-2 when rain caused a delay of 2 hours and 40 minutes.

The 24-year-old DuPre changed his game plan during the break, and was in complete control the rest of the way.

"At the very beginning of the match I played incorrectly," DuPre said. "I tried to be too aggressive and forced the attack. I figured I had to pressure his backhand and attack, attack. After a few games I realized that was not the way."

"When we came back from the break I let him do what he wanted to do, and he's not that forgetful a player. I never felt in trouble."

The turning point for Tanner came after the strong serving but inconsistent Saviano had won five consecutive games to close the third set and take a 2-0 lead in the third. Tanner then won the next two games, at which time Saviano smashed his racket to the ground, cracking it.

Not only did Saviano require a new racket but he was assessed a racket abuse penalty of one point. Tanner held service and then Saviano, still seething and arguing with the umpire, dropped his service at love to give Tanner a decisive 4-2 lead.

"The rules are there for a reason, to protect the people in the stands," Tanner explained later. "Different things can happen when a player begins to lose control of his actions. Right or wrong you have to go along, and the best thing to do when you get a bad call is to only let it count for the one point."

Broncos edge Cincy

Oilers' survive Skins' scare

DENVER (UPI) — Norris, in his new starting quarterback role, threw for 202 yards and one touchdown Sunday to lead the Denver Broncos to a 10-0 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals in the NFL opener for both teams.

The two teams went into halftime in a 0-0 tie. Weese, who was named starting quarterback ahead of veteran Craig Morton, completed 13-of-20 passes.

The Broncos scored the game's only touchdown on Weese's 6-yard pass to running back Ray Weston in the third period. Jim Turner kicked a 37-yard field goal for the Broncos in the second quarter.

The Bengals' only serious threat stalled on Denver's 1-yard line in the fourth quarter.

The two teams went into halftime with Denver leading 3-0 on Turner's field goal, which came with 35 seconds remaining in the half. Turner earlier missed an attempt from the same distance.

Turner's field goal was set up on four Weese first-down pass completions, including gainers of 20, 16, and 23 yards.

The Broncos scored on their first possession of the second half after an 88-yard drive. The drive was sustained on a 37-yard Weese pass to Rick Upchurch and a 16-yard pass to tight end Riley Odoms, who moved the ball to the Bengals 11. Weese hit Preston with a 6-yard pass for the touchdown.

The Bengals' lone scoring threat came midway through the fourth period when quarterback Ken Anderson hit Don Bass for 24 yards. Dan Ross for 12 and Isaac Curtis for 14. The drive also was helped by an interference call against Denver's Bernard Jackson, putting the ball on the Broncos' 10.

Two plays later, Anderson rolled around the right side for eight yards to the 1. On 4th-and-1, though, running back Deacon Turner was hit for a 2-yard loss.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Earl Campbell, who gained 166 yards, ran three yards with 1:57 remaining for his second touchdown of the game, rallying the Houston Oilers to a 29-27 season-opening victory over the Washington Redskins.

Campbell, who carried 22 times, scored from 13 yards out and Dan Pastorini passed 14 yards to Billy Johnson for another touchdown. Toni Frisich added field goals of 41, 46 and 26 yards.

Joe Theismann passed 6 and 30 yards to tight end Jean-Fugett and Benny Malone ran 1 yard for Washington touchdowns. Mark Moseley kicked field goals of 37 and 39 yards.

The Oilers needed eight plays to score the decisive TD after defensive back Bill Currier recovered a fumble by John Riggins at the Washington 29. Riggins, who gained 34 yards on 12 carries, left the Redskins for one day this week in a contract dispute.

Washington moved to a 27-13 lead early in the fourth quarter on Moseley's 39-yard field goal after Joe Lovander picked off the Redskins' third interception of Pastorini.

The Oilers moved 85 yards in eight plays, capped by Johnson's touchdown catch on their next possession. Frisich's extra point attempt hit the right upright.

Campbell's third touchdown ended an 83-yard, eight-play drive on the Oilers' first possession of the second half.

Pastorini, despite the three interceptions, completed 12-of-30 passes for 176 yards. Theismann hit on 7-of-14 for 123 yards and the two touchdowns while throwing one interception.

The Redskins turned a pair of pass interceptions into second quarter touchdowns for their 17-6 halftime lead.

Rookie Ray Wabby returned a Pastorini pass to the Houston 4. Theismann passed 13 yards to Danny Buggs before Riggins got eight yards and Malone 10, setting up Theismann's 39-yard scoring toss to Fugett.

Redskins' cornerback Lemar Parish swiped another Pastorini pass and returned it to the Oilers' 36. Riggins went straight ahead for 12 yards. Malone picked up 14 more and three plays later, he leaped the stack from the 1-yard line with 3:17 left in the half.

Halfback pass lifts Cowboys

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Ron Springs was supposed to hit Tony Dorsett's shoes — but he helped Roger Staubach's arm instead.

Springs, the first rookie to crack the starting lineup for the Dallas Cowboys since Calvin Hill did it 10 years ago, led a 38-yard touchdown pass to Tony Hill early in the fourth quarter Sunday, helping Dallas earn a 22-21 seasaw victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Springs, a fifth-round draft choice out of Ohio State, started in the Dallas backfield in place of Dorsett, who was in uniform but is still recovering from a broken leg. Springs' rushing was less than spectacular — 30 yards in six carries, but his bomb to Hill helped the Cowboys to their 15th straight opening-season win.

"I didn't throw any passes at Ohio State," Springs said. "But I did practice that halfback pass a lot this week. Four times during practice I threw and completed all four." Springs' rushing was less than spectacular — 30 yards in six carries, but his bomb to Hill helped the Cowboys to their 15th straight opening-season win.

"I didn't throw any passes at Ohio State," Springs said. "But I did practice that halfback pass a lot this week. Four times during practice I threw and completed all four."

Rafael Septien's 27-yard field goal, his third, lifted the Cowboys to a 22-21 victory over the Cardinals.

Cowboys rookie kicker Steve Stiles kicked a 34-yard field goal, giving St. Louis a 21-19 lead.

St. Louis Coach Bud Wilkinson said the rollout pass by halfback Springs was "a complete surprise because the Cowboys have used the play before. But cornerback Roger Wehrli didn't know the former Buckeye was a southpaw.

"I wasn't aware he's a left-handed passer," Wehrli said. "The Cowboys come up with something like that every year."

Chiefs 14, Colts 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Ted McKnight rushed for touchdowns of 31 and 70 yards and Gary Green made two key first-half defensive plays Sunday to lift the Kansas City Chiefs to a 14-0 season-opening victory over the Baltimore Colts.

Green, a first-year defensive back, personally kept the Chiefs in the game in the first half with a fumble recovery at his own 29 on Baltimore's first possession and an interception of Bert Jones pass at his own 4-yard line on the fourth play of the second quarter.

Green carried that interception back 37 yards to the Colts' 39 to set up McKnight's first TD.

The Chiefs drove for 39 yards in six plays, highlighted by an 11-yard pass from Mike Livingston to J. T. Smith, McKnight plowed in from the 1-yard line on the next play.

McKnight's second score — the longest run by a Kansas City back since 1969 — followed Tom Linhart's miss of a 37-yard field goal midway through the game.

McKnight lost a yard on the first play of the drive, but Tony Reed picked up 10 to put the Chiefs in a 3rd-and-1 situation. With the Baltimore defense bunched up at the line, McKnight breezed off left tackle and went 70 yards untouched for the score.

Long last minute fourth quarter pass catch attempt by Packer James Lofton is broken up by Bear defender Terry Schmidt.

Vikings 28, 49ers 22

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Tommy Kramer, taking firm hold of the No. 1 quarterback slot left by the retired Fran Tarkenton, fired four touchdowns passes to Ahmad Rashad Sunday to lift the Minnesota Vikings to a 28-22 comeback victory over the San Francisco 49ers in a wild NFL season opener.

Rashad bubbled the fourth touchdown in the end zone and Sammy White pounced on it, but Rashad was given the score, setting a team record.

For Kramer, the thriller was nearly an instant replay of contests between the teams two years ago. In that game, Kramer came off the bench in the fourth quarter for Tarkenton and threw three TD passes to pull out a 29-27 victory.

For San Francisco, an apparent victory once again dissolved in the game's final moments.

San Francisco's Steve DeBerg fired a 46-yard TD pass to Fred Solomon and Lenell Elliott ran for a 4-yard score to give the 49ers a 22-21 edge with 3:47 remaining.

After spotting the 49ers a 9-0 lead on field goals of 37, 22 and 34 yards by Ray Wersching, the Vikings drove 88 yards in two plays to cut the margin to 7-0.

On their first score, Rashad faked a handoff to Eddie Lewis on the sidelines and sprinted for a 32-yard touchdown. Rashad burned Lewis again with 23 seconds left in the third quarter on a 32-yard scoring play.

Browns 25, Jets 22

NEW YORK (UPI) — As for as the New York Jets are concerned, they would be very happy if they never saw Don Cockroft again.

Cockroft, who beat the Jets in overtime last year with a 22-yard field goal, rubbed it in a little more in the NFL season opener Sunday.

He kicked a 35-yard field goal in just four seconds left in regulation time and then brought the Cleveland Browns a 25-22 victory on a 27-yarder with just 15 seconds remaining in sudden death overtime.

Brian Sipe, who hit on 21-of-36 passes for 302 yards, set up both scores with passes to Dave Logan, who had six catches for 116 yards.

"Earlier in the game, I relaxed too much on an extra point and pulled it the left," said Cockroft, who also had field goals of 31 and 36 yards to give him four for the day.

"When the next field goal opportunity came up, I made up my mind to attack the ball. I felt really good on the last two field goals.

"This team has tremendous character. We made a lot of mistakes but we still managed to scratch and claw-and-win-the-game. I haven't been in a game with so many chances for a kicker to win it."

Eagles 23, Giants 17

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Harold Carmichael caught two touchdowns passes from Ron Jaworski in a 1:19 span during Philadelphia's 21-point second quarter Sunday and the Eagles held on for a 23-17 victory over New York, ending the NFL head coaching debut of the Giants' Ray Perkins.

Carmichael snared a 7-yard TD toss from Jaworski on an "Alley-Oop" pass with 5:00 to play in the second quarter. On the Eagles' next play from scrimmage, Jaworski found Carmichael 10 yards behind the Giants' secondary and hit him with a perfect pass to complete a 41-yard scoring play with 3:41 remaining in the half.

A 26-yard Jaworski-to-Carmichael pass set up Billy Campfield's 1-yard TD run earlier in the quarter and rookie Tony Franklin connected on a 16-yard field goal to give the Eagles a 23-3 halftime advantage.

The Giants came storming back on touchdown passes by Joe Pisarcik to Johnny Perkins of 15 and 38 yards, punting New York to within 22-17 with 7:11 to play. Perkins' second TD catch was holly disrupted — with the Eagles charging that an incomplete pass should have been ruled when Perkins fumbled the ball at the 5-yard line and recovered it in the end zone.

New York defensive end George Marlin recovered a Larry Barnes fumble at the Philadelphia 30 after Perkins' second touchdown, but the Giants failed to score.

Dolphins 9, Bills 7

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — Veteran running back Larry Csonka bulled over from one yard out midway through the final quarter Sunday to lift Miami to a 9-7 victory over Buffalo for the Dolphins' 19th consecutive triumph over the Bills.

The Bills had a chance to win the game and snap the streak, but kicker Tom Dempsey's 34-yard field goal attempt was wide to the left as the clock ran out.

Csonka, an 11-year veteran who returned to the Miami backfield this season after a four-year absence, scored at 8:31 of the final quarter to rally the Dolphins from a 7-3 deficit.

The Miami touchdown capped a 36-yard drive during a torrential downpour that began at the start of the final quarter.

Key plays in the drive, which consumed 8:23 on the clock, were Csonka's 22-yard run to the Buffalo 39 and his run of eight and three yards which set up the clinching touchdown. Dolphins' rookie kicker

Falcons 40, Saints 34

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Atlanta rookie punter Jim Grayson was just in the right place at the right time to intercept a desperation pass by New Orleans rookie punter Russell Erxleben and run the ball in for a game-winning touchdown in a thrilling 40-34 overtime victory over the Saints.

"I heard the crowd and I knew something was wrong," said Grayson, a special teams member for the Falcons. "I saw the ball back there and I just took off after it."

"I just ran back there expecting to tackle. The ball was in the air and I had nothing else to do but score."

Erxleben had to track down a wide snap from center John Watson that sailed four feet over the punter's head and rolled to the Saints' goal line. Erxleben picked the ball up on the run and tried to shove a two-handed pass to avoid a safety.

Mayberry, however, was snatching down on Erxleben and beating the ball out of the air to run in untouched for the clinching touchdown.

The halfback was the third stunning victory by the Falcons over the Saints in their last three meetings. The Falcons defeated the Saints twice last year 20-17 on last-second touchdowns.

Chargers 33, Seahawks 16

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Seattle Seahawks were the first to admit Sunday that the San Diego Chargers are the best defense bunched up at the AFC's Western Division trying to prove they're legitimate playoff contenders.

"San Diego is an outstanding football team," said Seattle Coach Jack Paterson. "Good enough to win the championship."

The Seahawks and Chargers played almost the same district with the perennially strong Oakland Raiders and Denver Broncos, but Seahawks' defensive end Carl Eller, a veteran of four Super Bowls with Minnesota, called off the Chargers as the team to beat in the AFC West.

"They really are a super team," said the 37-year-old Eller. "They are going to be right in there. But so are we. We can do it, but not by playing the way we did today."

With quarterback Dan Fouts cutting up the Seattle defense with 21 completions out of 30 passing attempts for 245 yards, the Chargers swamped Seattle 33-16. Concentrating on his tight ends and running backs, Fouts only completed two passes apiece to wide receivers John Jefferson and Charlie Joiner.

Bears 6, Packers 3

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago offense came up with the "big play" all day long in the Bears' 6-3 triumph over Green Bay Sunday, according to Chicago Coach Neil Armstrong, but the Bears were more concerned with their depleted backfield to next week's game against Minnesota.

The Bears limited Green Bay to a 28-yard field goal by Chester Marcol late in the third quarter and limited Green Bay to only 77 yards rushing and 72 yards passing. The Green Bay defense was equally stingy, yielding only two second-quarter field goals by Bob Thomas.

Starting fullback John Skibinski suffered a knee injury and his backup, Robin Earl had to leave the game with an injured foot. That left Walter Payton, who gained 125 yards in 36 carries, as the Bears' fullback at the end of the game.

"When you lose a Roland Harper (who was injured in the preseason and will be out four weeks) and then lose quality players like Skibinski and Earl, you have to be concerned," Armstrong said.

Unters paces racers

ONTARIO, Calif. (UPI) — Bobby Unser of Albuquerque, N.M., led a three-car Penske sweep of the California 500 Sunday, leading teammates Rick Mears of Bakersfield, Calif., and Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., across the finish line after leading nearly half the race at the Motor Speedway.

It was the first time in the history of 500-mile racing in the United States that one team has swept the first three places, a speedway spokesman said.

Unser became the first three-time winner of the race, having won the 500 in 1974 and 1976.

Unser averaged 146.795 mph in his Penske PC7 Norton Sprinter. He led 95 of the 200 laps, although his younger brother, Al, looked like a runaway winner early in the race as he led 63 of the first 85 laps.

Drag time to Brown

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Defending champion Kelly Brown matched the low qualifying time in the top fuel category Sunday to become a factor in the finals of the 25th U.S. Nationals drag racing championships.

Brown, Calabasas, Calif., registered 5.81 seconds for the quarter-mile during the first round of eliminations to tie Richard Thrapp of Dallas as the No. 1 runner.

Briefly in sports

Arizona beats CSU

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Arizona's Hubert Oliver ran for a career-high 106 yards late Saturday night in piling the Wildcats to a 33-17 victory over Colorado State.

Oliver, a junior halfback, made one burst of 56 yards, Arizona's longest run from scrimmage since 1977.

Arizona left the Western Athletic Conference last year to join the PAC-10 and this was the Wildcats' first game against a team from their old league.

Despite his outstanding performance, Oliver scored only one touchdown for the Cats, which came on a 4-yard pass from quarterback Jim Krohn.

The Krohn-to-Oliver comeback was Arizona's only touchdown in the second half but the Cats also added two field goals by Bill Zivlic while holding the Rams scoreless.

In addition, Arizona's Marcellus Green had an 89-yard touchdown punt return nullified by a penalty.

Allison, driving the 1.366-mile oval in a Ford, captured the pole position and set a record for qualifying Thursday with a speed of 151.881 mph, breaking the previous record of 151.699 mph set by David Pearson in 1976.

Amateur to O'Meara

SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio (UPI) — Mark O'Meara took advantage of defending champ John Cook's mistakes and breezed to an 8 and 7 victory Sunday in the U.S. Amateur Championship at Canterbury Golf Club.

The usually cool and inscrutable Cook threw away the crown he won in last year's U.S. Amateur at Plainfield Country Club during the first 18 holes of the 36-hole final.

The 21-year-old Ohio State University senior also lost his chance to be the first amateur to win the championship two years in a row since E. Harvie Ward accomplished the feat in 1955 and 1956.

Trevino leads field

WOODBURIDGE, Ont. (UPI) — Lee Trevino fired a methodical one-under-par 70 Sunday to capture the $100,000 Canadian International Golf Classic with a four-round total of 285, three strokes ahead of Larry Maddix.

Trevino, who won the Canadian Open earlier this year, rattled three birdies and absorbed three bogeys to demolish the game of his third round co-leader Peter Townsend of Great Britain who fell seven strokes back with a disastrous round that included five bogeys and a double bogey.

Montreal completes sweep

By United Press International After what the Montreal Expos accomplished this weekend they own themselves a pat on the back. But they're chasing the Pittsburgh Pirates, even a short breather is an impossible luxury.

Montreal lagged Mike LaCoss for seven consecutive singles to open the game and Steve Rogers pitched a four-hitter Sunday for a 13-1 victory that completed a sweep of a three-game series with the Cincinnati Reds.

On the West Coast, however, John Candelaria hurled a nine-hitter and Steve Nicosia doubled in two runs to lead the first-place Pirates to their sixth straight victory, a 5-3 decision over the San Francisco Giants.

Pittsburgh's triumph completed a 6-0 season for the Pirates in Candlestick Park, the first time any club has swept the Giants on their own field since 1907.

A walk to Nicosia and Omar Moreno's double with two out in the seventh accounted for the winning run. The Pirates staked Candelaria, 1-8, to a 2-0 lead in the second against Vida Blue, 10-13, with Nicosia driving in the runs with a two-out double. Candelaria finished with 10 strikeouts.

In other games, St. Louis defeated San Diego 2-1. Philadelphia nipped Atlanta 2-1 in 10 innings. New York topped Houston 5-4 and Los Angeles slammed Chicago 6-2.

Cardinal right-hander Bob Forsch, 8-10, pitched a five-hitter and Ken Oberkfell struck a sacrifice fly in the fifth to break a 1-1 tie. Ted Simmons hit his 22nd homer for St. Louis.

John Stearns doubled in the tie-breaking run in the seventh, enabling the Mets to end a nine-game losing streak. The defeat left Houston one-half game ahead of second-place Cincinnati in the West.

Davey Lopes belted a grand slam with two out in the ninth, coupling a five-run rally in a game that featured Manny Mota's record-breaking 14th career pinch-hit.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Alan: "Here is one of those lady-and-the-tiger problems. You are in six notrump, you must lose a trick to the ace of clubs. Now you have to find the queen of spades to make your slam."

Oswald: "Somewhere or other, you will take your nine tricks. I've analyzed this, I assume that no one throws the spade and that each defender is left with the three spades he was dealt."

Alan: "Exactly so. Also you have found that West led his diamond from 10 9 8 3, which would be a normal lead from a holding of the rest of his hand."

Oswald: "I assume that you found the queen. Experts aren't supposed to go wrong when they have an even chance to succeed."

Alan: "I did and I got a little help. On the fourth club, East discarded a diamond with no problem. West also checked a diamond, but only after a lot of soul searching. Then I cashed diamonds. On the third diamond, East threw a heart after long thought. So I decided to play him for the spade queen and was right."

The correct rebid is three diamonds. We hate to make this bid with that bad suit, but no other bid is adequate. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
