WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance Sunday summoned Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin to a meeting today, signaling the need for negotiations over Soviet combat troops in Cuba.

Dobrynin, Soviet ambassador since 1962 and a key figure in U.S.-Soviet relations, returned to Washington Sunday from Russia where his father recently died.

A U.S. spokesman announced Dobrynin's return and said he would meet Vance today at the State Department. The meeting is expected to be in the afternoon.

The United States had asked for Dobrynin's early return in order to put forward with the "firm diplomacy" President Carter said he planned to use in dealing with the Soviet combat brigade.

Earlier Sunday, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said the Carter administration would be inviting trouble in other parts of the world and endangering ratification of the SALT II treaty if the Soviet troops were not withdrawn.

"I think they must be withdrawn," said Church, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. "In my judgment, the Senate will not ratify the SALT II treaty while Soviet combat troops remain in Cuba."

"That is just a truthful assessment of my reading of the mood of the Senate," President Carter said Friday. The United States will use "firm diplomacy" in raising the issue of the troops with the Soviets, but he did not publicly demand their removal.

Carter said in remarks released

Saturday that SALT II should be approved "on its own merits" and should not be linked to the withdrawal of the estimated 2,000 to 3,000 Soviet troops.

Church said he supports SALT II with certain reservations and understandings and had hoped it could be considered on its own merits.

But he agreed with Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, who said Saturday SALT II would be defeated if it came up for a vote now because of the Soviet troops.

Church said the Soviets are testing the United States because they must have known when they stationed the troops in Cuba that the United States would eventually find out.

"If we do not insist the combat troops be removed, then I think we're borrowing trouble against the future," Church said on CBS "Face the Nation" program.

He said an insufficient U.S. response would invite "the adventurism" by the Soviets and the Cubans.

Church said the United States could use most-favored-nation trade status or the deployment of U.S. troops elsewhere in the world to put pressure on the Soviets to withdraw their troops.

"But that should be left to the president," he said. "The end objective should be the withdrawal of the combat troops from Cuba."

He said the failure of American intelligence to detect the Soviet troops earlier should not reflect on its ability to monitor the SALT II treaty.

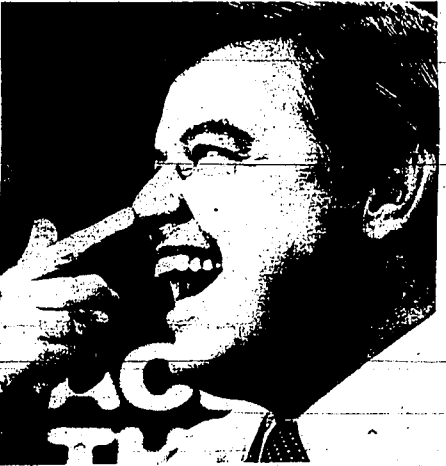

The Soviet combat troops are part of a larger Soviet presence in a broad society whose troops wear the same uniforms and use the same weapons, he said, making them hard to detect.

"I do think we have adequate intelligence to detect violations of SALT II, however," he said.

Church also said the difficulty of detecting the "combat troops" makes him believe he was not misled when intelligence officials told him on July 13 that there was no evidence of such troops in Cuba. He announced Aug. 30 that there was hard evidence of the troops' presence.

The Washington Post reported Sunday that a U.S. spy plane in orbit over Cuba Aug. 17 transmitted pictures of tanks, trucks and tents of a military unit on maneuvers, confirming the presence of the Soviet combat troops. This was more than a month after the intelligence officials told Church they had no evidence of the troops.

Stuntman sets speed record, delays try at sound barrier

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah (UPI) — Stuntman Stan Barrett powered his 48,000-horsepower rocket car to a world land speed record of 638.637 miles per hour Sunday and then decided Utah's Salt Flats were too rough for an attempt to break the sound barrier.

In a whooshing cloud of steam, Barrett thundered across the crusted sand shortly after dawn, breaking a Gary Gabellich's one-way mark of 631.367 mph set in 1970 on the western Utah desert.

Bill Szardick, designer of the bright-red racer, said the car used only one-half its power to set the land speed mark and would have no difficulty breaking the sound barrier, estimated at 740-750 mph at the altitude of the Salt Flats.

However, after analyzing telemetry reports on the run, Frederick and car owner Hal Needham cancelled the attempt for the speed of sound on the Bonneville Speedway.

"We knew there were some rough spots," he said after examining the course. "But we didn't know how rough until we took a closer look."

"In some places the rear of the car apparently became airborne for a distance of up to 95 feet," he said.

Frederick said he was not giving up. He and Barrett would make the sound barrier attempt at a dry lake bed near Edwards Air Force Base in California if the military would give its permission.

"We could do it here, but no one thinks it's important enough to risk Stan's life," said Frederick.

Barrett said the car vibrated so much during the run it was all he could do to keep it going straight during 8.5 mile run, which took only about a minute.

One of his two parachutes malfunctioned, ripping to shreds

Stan Barrett squeezes into cockpit of rocket-driven car UPI after it deployed. But the second chute slowed the car.

The cockpit canopy also blew open while the needle-nosed vehicle was still traveling at 400 mph.

"I'm glad it came open while he was slowing down, not speeding up," said Frederick.

Later, as Barrett was flushing the remaining hydrogen peroxide fuel from his car, a passing television helicopter spotted the mixture on five crew members.

They were hosed down by a water truck and rushed to the team's base camp. None was seriously injured.

Barrett, who did most of the stunts for Burt Reynolds in the movie Hooper, was elated after the run.

U.S. surrender of Guantanamo may be Soviet withdrawal demand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Kremlin may demand the pullout of U.S. military forces from Cuba's Guantanamo Bay in exchange for the withdrawal of Soviet troops from the island.

But such a proposal is likely to fall on deaf ears. The United States has made clear over the years that the only American military installation on communist territory is not negotiable.

The issue of Guantanamo was raised Friday by a Soviet envoy.

"Can you inform us how many American combat troops are now in Cuba?" the correspondent asked. State Department spokesman Hodgdon Carter didn't know at first, but later provided the answer:

As of June 30, there were 2,203 U.S. military personnel at Guantanamo — 1,769 from the Navy, 431 Marines and three from the Air Force. There also were some 3,600 dependents and civilian workers.

"What are they doing there?" the Soviet correspondent insisted.

"They are there under a long-term base agreement which we have maintained longer than I have been around," Carter replied.

"Are there any plans to withdraw them?" the Soviet correspondent went on.

"No, none," the spokesman said.

Later in the briefing, an American reporter asked what the United States would do "if it should turn out that the Soviet Union were to pursue this as a policy line, that somehow Guantanamo should be exchanged for this combat unit there."

"It is not negotiable... and that is a long-standing position that we have there," Carter replied.

The Guantanamo Naval Base is a 31-square-mile man-made island located on a Cuba's southern coast across the Windward Passage from Haiti.

Strategically located between the Caribbean Sea and the Atlantic Ocean, the base has been under U.S. control since 1903. It is one of the two main American naval bases in the Caribbean area. The other is Roosevelt Roads in Puerto Rico.

In 1934, Cuba gave the United States control of Guantanamo in perpetuity. But Cuban President Fidel Castro has maintained the accord ended in 1958 when he came to power.

For the past 20 years, the U.S. Navy has paid about $4,000 a year to Cuba as rent for the base. The payments, through the Swiss government, have so far been ignored by Castro.

Castro has made clear over the years that Guantanamo is one of the issues to be discussed in any talks between Washington and Havana on resuming the diplomatic ties broken in 1961.

"Guantanamo is militarily useless for the United States today," Szardick told a U.S. television interviewer two years ago. "They keep it as a show of strength... they have no fight to lose here because they are there against our will."

But, the Cuban leader said his veterans "have not used nor are we ever going to use force to recover Guantanamo."

Postal Service seeks success at faster pace

By JOHN J. FIALKA
Washington Post Staff Writer

WASHINGTON — Can a historically inefficient monopoly accustomed to muddling through rain, sleet and snow, find success in a world that is rapidly turning into what Marshall McLuhan once defined as an electronic village?

That's the multi-billion dollar question facing the U.S. Postal Service as it attempts to launch new programs designed to literally short-circuit part of the mail system by carrying letters most of the way in the form of an electronic signal.

The service has come a long way since the founding fathers gave it monopoly powers and charged it with "binding the nation together through personal, educational, literary and business correspondence of the people."

The volume of personal messages that it once carried was largely taken away in the 1920s by the telephone system. In the 1960s a variety of private companies grabbed a substantial part of the growing parcel business. In the 1970s electronic communications companies began to consider ways to siphon off much of the rest of the lucrative material remaining in the Post Office's hands: The first class letter market.

"This time, however, the postal service is not going to give up without a fight, asserts William F. Bolger, postmaster general since March 1978.

Undersecretary Bolger asserts, the USPS is finally getting itself in fighting trim. Volume and productivity are up. Last year it handled a record 97 billion pieces of mail with 80,000 fewer employees than it had in 1971 when Congress passed the Postal Reorganization Act.

And this year, he adds, the service will wind up with a surplus of some $400 million — the first since 1945 — giving further evidence that postal subsidies may eventually be ended, as Congress hoped for in passing the 1975 law.

What the Postal Service is fighting for are three programs now in the proposal stage which Bolger claims are necessary to maintain the system through the remainder of the 20th century:

•ECOM, for Electronic Computer Originated Mail, a system which would allow companies to send off bills and other business mail by delivering computer tapes or other forms of recorded electronic signals to the Post Office.

The communication would go over the leased wires of Western Union to the post office nearest its destination. There high speed printers would print the message and mail would deliver in between 30 and 55 cents, roughly a third of the cost of Western Union's "Mailgram."

•Intelpost, is an international electronic mail system now in its experimental stages. This system can send an electronic copy of a hand-written letter, mailed in Washington, via satellite to a computer terminal in London where it is faithfully reproduced and stuffed in an envelope. The whole process takes something like four minutes.

•EMSS, the Electronic Message Service System, which would apply the Intelpost system to domestic service within the United States, delivering something like 95 percent of first class mail within a day or two (the most) at unsubsidized rates, that will, possibly, be below the current first class rates.

The logic driving these three systems is fairly simple.

CIA gave domestic spying high priority

By TIMOTHY S. ROBINSON
The Washington Post Staff Writer

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency considered its spying on American political and civil rights leaders such as Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. as having the same high priority as its intelligence gathering on the Soviet Union and Communist China, according to CIA files.

The previously undisclosed CIA files, obtained by The Washington Post last week, were declassified about two years ago by the CIA and turned over to plaintiffs in a civil lawsuit challenging the legality of the CIA's "Operation Chaos" domestic spying program in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

The documents obtained by The Post are among approximately 200 pages of such material scheduled for public release this week.

The documents, being released by the Center for National Security Studies, a private group exploring alleged intelligence service abuses, include some that might not have been disclosed to two government entities that probed the Chaos program after it was made public in late 1975, according to lawyers familiar with those investigations.

Persons who have had access to all the documents turned over to the plaintiffs said that while much of the material is not new in terms of basic information, it places many elements of the program in a new light and details for the first time the extent of opposition within the CIA itself to the domestic spying activity and the priority given the mission.

For example, the CIA's inspector general reported in a memorandum that Chaos cable traffic to one CIA post "was destroyed immediately on reading so as to avoid any possibility of its somehow falling into the hands of a block officer who might object to the program."

Various CIA officials questioned the legality of the program at the time, and voiced their concerns at the highest levels of the agency.

"They are there under a long-term base agreement which we have maintained longer than I have been around," Carter replied.

"Are there any plans to withdraw them?" the Soviet correspondent

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and a Senate select committee headed by Frank Church, D-Idaho.

The program apparently intensified in May 1969, when Helms instructed that "operational priority of MHCHAOS (the CIA code name) activities in the field is the highest category, ranking with Soviet and Chinese (Communist) data," according to a CIA memo.

The CIA has contended that the Chaos program was always a minor part of its activities, with later CIA director William Colby once describing it to President Ford as a "low-cost collection program."

Within a year after the Helms high-priority instructions, a CIA field office head informed superiors that "I do not think it is the sort of thing that we should be involved in, according to a CIA memo."

He said that even if it were considered "passive" intelligence collecting, there is a natural tendency among an interesting report is received to request additional details; then the action begins." He said the domestic collection of data on U.S. citizens is "clearly the function" of the FBI and not the CIA, and "I think we would find it difficult to justify what we're doing."

Democrats troop into New Hampshire

EDMUND G. BROWN JR.
... he's in there pitching

NASHUA, N.H. (UPI) — The opening salvo of the Democratic presidential campaign was fired Sunday when California Gov. Edmund Brown, Jr., Mrs. Lillian Carter and a "draft Kennedy" clan collided at a New Hampshire chicken barbecue.

For the most part, the tone of the Hillsborough County picnic was affable. But a prolonged silence fell on the 1,000 Democrats there when the president's 81-year-old mother spoke of Sen. Edward Kennedy's snowballing, and as yet, undeclared candidacy.

"If he does run, I wish him all the luck in the world," she said of the Massachusetts Democrat. "I hope to goodness nothing happens to him. I really do."

Her remark provoked a smattering of boos from Kennedy partisans at the political rally, and no comment from leaders of New Hampshire's "draft Kennedy" movement.

At another picnic at Dover, Miss Lillian backtracked, telling reporters she hoped she hadn't offended anyone with her remark about Kennedy.

"I didn't mean anything by it," said Miss Lillian. "I certainly didn't mean it the way it sounded."

Earlier, Miss Lillian, who arrived at the Nashua picnic on the arm of Gov. Hugh Gallen and surrounded by Secret Service agents, hinted her son might not be totally committed to running for re-election.

"If Jimmy runs, he will win," she said.

Representatives from all three presidential camps spent the day trumpeting the virtues of their candidates with campaign banners, posters and buttons.

"This is the opening salvo," said Dudley Dudley, head of New Hampshire's draft Kennedy movement.

Brown, making his first tour of New Hampshire as a presidential contender, drew a standing ovation when he spoke against development of nuclear power.

He received a similar response when he complained the federal budget is full of money for "warfare, welfare and interest on the national debt."

"It's time to start building for the future and not stealing from it," the California governor said.

While plugging for Kennedy, Mrs. Dudley took a subtle stab at Brown's sometimes companion, rock singer Linda Ronstadt, who was not there.

"At times, you must choose to march to the beat of a different drummer," she said, hitting a line from one of Miss Ronstadt's old hits. "That drum beat is measured by issues, personalities or political realities such as polls."

January 1977. Green cited sections of local court rules concerning out-of-court comments by attorneys and ordered the material kept secret.

The U.S. Court of Appeals said her order was wrong because it prohibited parties in a case from making "political expressions" and was "unsupported by any evidence."

In a hearing in May of this year, Green made it clear that she was still opposed to release of the material and accused ACLU attorney Mark Lynch of "playing games with me." However, she added, "there is nothing that this court can do at this time."

After the ACLU informed the CIA of a pending press release, in

Puerto Ricans go free today

By United Press International

Four Puerto Rican nationalists imprisoned more than 20 years ago for the attempted assassination of President Harry Truman and a shooting spree that injured five congressmen will be freed today and reunited.

The four — granted clemency last week by President Carter in what has been hailed as a humanitarian move — are scheduled to be released from federal institutions at 10 a.m. today.

The plans for the reunion and rally in Chicago, which have not been finalized, were announced in Washington by Nelson Canals, the president of the Ad Hoc Puerto Rican National Committee to Free the Nationalist Prisoners.

Wardens in four federal prisons will be served with the clemency papers that Carter signed Thursday. Following the reunion, Canals said the nationalists will return to Puerto Rico Tuesday or Wednesday.

Cleveland tunes bus plan

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Public school officials fine-tuned busing plans for the state's largest school district Sunday on the eve of court-ordered desegregation, but defendant parents vowed to keep their children home and challenged any judge to punish them for doing so.

One leader of the anti-busing movement, Norbert Donnerell Jr., told 300 parents at a weekend rally:

"Cleveland, Ohio, is going to be the first city in the country to stop forced busing."

The emphasis over the weekend, however, was on peaceful desegregation of the 100,000-pupil system. Civic and religious groups planned a march across one downtown bridge joining the city's east and west sides, symbolizing the need for unity.

CIA placed high priority on domestic spying

The CIA Inspector General's report, two years later, re-emphasized what it called "numerous signs of uneasiness over the agency's role" because chaos "appeared to constitute a monitoring of the political views and activities of Americans not known to be or suspected of being involved in espionage."

Some rather strong language was used in describing what was understood to be the thrust of MIKHAOS, and several officers said they wanted no part of it," the Inspector General said. He said many officers felt the agency would "find itself confronting a major crisis" if the program became known publicly.

Helm's reaction, according to another CIA memo, was to suggest that the person heading the program "become identified with the subject of terrorism" rather than domestic spying activities, while continuing the same operation.

There have been previous reports that the CIA kept files on 10,000 Americans and some data on 300,000 others. The reports recently disclosed appear to confirm for the first time the names of some of those watched.

Among those listed in a computer printout were former House member Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., and Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., as well as Kennedy and King.

In addition to the names located on the computer, the CIA also maintained what it called "sensitive files" on Abzug concerning her anti-Vietnam War activities in Europe, on King and on King's widow, Coretta King.

An attempt by the plaintiffs to make these documents public in January 1977 was blocked by a federal judge when she was informed that they planned a news conference concerning the material.

The plaintiffs, represented by the American Civil Liberties Union, had U.S. District Judge June L. Green reversed by the U.S. Court of Appeals, which said her order preventing disclosure of the materials presented serious First Amendment problems.

Even after the appellate court's ruling, Green questioned the ethics of the ACLU lawyer handling the case and chastised him for wanting the material made public. However, she rejected a Justice Department request that the government be given 72 hours' notice before the material was released.

The government had claimed that the release of the documents then would prejudice the CIA in a full trial before Green later. However, when the court of appeals said the CIA had to prove that any potential harm to the agency would be "substantial and serious," Justice Department attorneys conceded that "we could not even begin to meet this test."

Normal procedure in early phases of a civil lawsuit is for a side turning over documents to the other to ask a judge to sign a "protective order" preventing them from being made public. If it feels it is necessary, "protective orders" require strong justification, and the CIA did not ask for one when it first turned over the material.

After the ACLU informed the CIA of a pending press release, in

Some suggestions on utility shut-offs

Both advantages and burdens fall on public utilities because of government regulation.

A couple of advantages are some protection from competition and a guarantee of profitability.

As an example of non-competition: In what other industry could companies get together on business matters and not violate anti-trust laws?

Just one instance of this occurred last Thursday at a hearing held by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission. One man, an Intermountain Gas Co. vice president, spoke at the hearing for all the utilities that operate in Idaho—Idaho Power Co., Utah Power & Light Co., Pacific Power & Light Co., Intermountain Gas and Washington Water Power Co.

Under examination by the IPUIC is the way utilities shut off service to customers who don't or can't pay their bills.

Citizen groups want the commission to ban service terminations in the winter, in order to safeguard the health especially of the elderly.

Until last year, some billing and termination procedures were capricious and unfair. Then the IPUIC established uniform rules and made sure customers received more advance notice if their service was to be ended.

Yet at last week's hearing in Boise, testimony indicated almost 30 percent of some utilities' customers are considered past due on their accounts. Also, some past-due notices are arriving as little as two weeks after the previous billing.

The utilities' spokesman said the industry terminates service only as a last resort after repeatedly receiving no response from a past-due customer. He said a blanket moratorium on cut-offs would encourage freeloading and increase the costs to the conscientious.

But people temporarily in a tight spot and the elderly, who are on fixed incomes, are not freeloaders.

Extreme stories about terminations have been reported, including poor-people-building fires on their living room floors and elderly people freezing to death in bed.

To help avoid this, neither utilities nor customers need complicated regulations, and a blanket moratorium would bankrupt a utility.

But the utilities are not giving enough slack to customers who may get in trouble. At least two long-term corrections can be made.

First, people in an emergency this winter should be allowed to spread out their payments. Now in order to do so, they must have started on the program the summer before.

Second, accounts should not become past due for 30 days, as is the case in most businesses.

WELL, ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL PRE-EMPTIVE STRIKE IN THE INTERESTS OF NATIONAL SELF-DEFENSE. I HOPE ALL THIS DOESN'T LOSE US OUR MOST-MARTYRED-PEOPLE STATUS!

George Will Soviet military appeal

BRUSSELS, Belgium — When Belgians boast that their nation is at "the crossroads of Europe," they are putting a brave face on a fact that frequently has been tiresome. As Brussels celebrates its 1000th birthday, it looks back on a history of occupations.

And in this century Belgium at "the crossroads" has been in the path of mechanized armies.

Because it is the headquarters for the European Community bureaucracy, Brussels thinks of itself as "the capital of Europe." But the most salient fact about Europe today is that it finds tolerable, even desirable, a condition that hitherto seemed barely possible: economic might combined with political and military impotence.

Importing technology, falling in every field of competition except the military field. Neither is it comforting, although it is true, to say that there are no material reasons, only political reasons, why the West is losing only in a field where it cannot afford to lose, and is losing to a nation that is, as Raymond Aron says, "the most spectacular failure in history," a nation that fears, and cannot even feed, its people.

During this decade, security problems have been far from the front of Europe's mind. As Walter Laqueur writes, only in Spain, Portugal and Greece, and then only when regimes were changing, have issues other than domestic economic questions been paramount.

begin beyond NATO's perimeter and a NATO war probably would be a world-war. There is among European leaders a perfunctory talk about the importance of the Third World, but the talk sounds especially idle when accompanied by an unwillingness to take the political risk of even talking about extending NATO's military concerns beyond the European continent.

It is said, with an elegant innuendo, that a crisis is just a god between two other crises. It is said, plegmatically, that the recent history of Europe is a story of calamities that didn't happen, such as the victory of the Left that did not occur in the 1970 elections in France. But there is more to be said, and Raymond Aron, Europe's most distinguished public philosopher, has said it.

This was much on the minds of some people who attended a recent conference organized here by Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies.

And the Soviet Union appealed as a model society to a significant number of Western Europeans. The suppression of East Germany (1953), Hungary (1956) and Czechoslovakia (1968) and, above all, the pen of Alexander Solzhenitsyn have changed that appeal. But while the West has been winning the competition of ideas, it has been forfeiting the arms race.

It is true, but not especially comforting, that the Soviet Union remains an essentially backward society, exporting raw materials and importing technology, falling in every field of competition except the military field. Neither is it comforting, although it is true, to say that there are no material reasons, only political reasons, why the West is losing only in a field where it cannot afford to lose, and is losing to a nation that is, as Raymond Aron says, "the most spectacular failure in history," a nation that fears, and cannot even feed, its people.

Brezhnev's 'Big Ear'

WASHINGTON — The primary purpose of the 3,000-man Soviet armored brigade in Cuba is to protect a massive new "communications intercept" system which will give the Russians the ability to listen in on most United States telephone conversations as well as to monitor transmission of between countries in Vienna on our satellites and missiles.

The Soviet combat troops have several purposes — to provide a "praetorian guard" for President Castro to block an coup attempt while his main force is acting for Russia, in Africa, and to establish a "tripwire" to keep U.S. forces from responding to Cuban provocation.

Cuban surveillance until Stone's midsummer request, has been elected White House fall guy. He may not sit still for that: I am told that CIA was not the source of Yence's false "evidence," anyway.

All this puts the Soviets in a perfect position. If we react with only a feeble protest, they will have gained a Cuban base from Carter that they had been denied by Kennedy and Nixon.

But if — as is more likely — the Senate threatens to hold up SALT, and Carter goes on television with a stand-up-to-the-Russians stemwinder, then Brezhnev can play the bargaining chip he has been allowed to create.

But the essential role is to guard the most sophisticated new Soviet electronic intelligence equipment from everyone, including Cubans.

The Soviet "Big Ear" pressed against the United States has been under construction secretly for several years and is soon to become operational. That explains the troop buildup: with the most sensitive equipment in the world, the Soviets military presence, that happened in Cuba in 1962, in Egypt until 1976, and in Cuba again today; the Russians never completely trust their overseas allies.

Having brought about the crisis, the Soviets will resolve it — at a price. When Carter sternly demands the "Russians" withdraw, Brezhnev will pull out most of his combat troops — but not all, and not his intelligence base. In addition, he will agree once more not to use the Cienfuegos naval base to supply Soviet vessels.

In return for their responding to our "demands" with such sweet reason, the Senate will be expected to pass the SALT treaty without requiring a buildup of our defense forces.

The Carter administration encouraged this large-scale intrusion into the U.S. atmosphere by not "cutting" the administration of the electronic surveillance from atop Soviet diplomatic missions in the U.S. When Sen. Patrick J. Moynihan protested such timidity last year, the administration explained it had buried top-secret communication wires for government business; officials did not seem to care about protecting the conversations of citizens, or scientific interchange by computers.

News of the new Soviet intelligence base in Cuba began filtering into the Senate this spring from defense intelligence experts angered at cutbacks in our surveillance of Cuba.

Some of this intelligence evidently reached Carter in June. According to a source who told me, Secretary of State Vance to Florida Democratic Senator Richard Stone: "The President raised the question of the Soviet presence in Cuba with President Brezhnev in Vienna on June 15-18 and made clear to him that a Soviet buildup would adversely affect our relationship."

At that point, the Soviet leader either lied to Carter or ignored him; the two leaders then embraced for the cameras and signed SALT II.

By midsummer, Stone — a respected, hard-line voice on the Foreign Relations Committee — so evidently had reason to suspect Carter had been bamboozled, or that administration "higher-ups" were ignoring intelligence warnings. He wrote the Secretary of State a written response, and received the remarkable July 27 letter which contained this guarantee:

"There is no evidence of any substantial increase of the Soviet military presence in Cuba over the past several years or of the presence of a Soviet military base."

As we now know, that was untrue. Rarely has a secretary of state so flatly misled the Senate. Finally, under pressure from Foreign Relations Chairman Church, State last week was forced to assert it had just learned of the 3,000-man force (though nothing has been said publicly) about the purpose of the force to protect the electronic spying base.

In a panic, administration apologists now claim that "elements" of the Soviet force have been in Cuba since the 1960's. Unnoticed by our CIA, Carter intelligence chief Stanislaus Turner, who downplayed warnings on Cuba from his underlings and foolishly went along with the stark curtailment of our

T.F. Clinic should drop court action

Editor, Times-News: As a Lamont County childbirth advocate, I am very much aware of the great loss to children and parents alike that would result if Drs. Miles and Geist are forced to leave our community.

These fine doctors have done a tremendous work here — in their intensive care-neonatal service at the hospital and also for countless new parents who need normal well-baby care.

My three children have received excellent care from Dr. Miles for the past four years. They literally love to go see the doctor as he is gentle and took time from the very beginning to establish a warm, trusting relationship with them.

I had to take my eldest child to the emergency room at the Twin Falls Clinic the other evening and I can't describe the frustration I felt when my daughter could not have the doctor she felt comfortable and secure with.

ment? If Dr. Miles and Dr. Geist weren't making money for the clinic, then why the big fuss? Indeed, the clinic is more concerned with its financial status than the welfare of the children in our community. Surely the Twin Falls Clinic realizes they will lose more revenue by pursuing this action against Dr. Miles and Dr. Geist than by their mere absence from the clinic staff.

If Drs. Miles and Geist are forced to leave Twin Falls it will be our loss — a great loss to parents, expectant parents, and future expectant parents.

I personally chose Dr. Miles as my child's pediatrician because of his positive and progressive attitude toward family-centered maternity care — the concern he has for maternal-infant bonding, his support he gives to breastfeeding mothers, why aren't they welcoming a chance to clear out their pediatric department?

It is an injustice to the people of Magic Valley for the Twin Falls Clinic to deprive us of Drs. Miles and Geist's services. If the Twin Falls Clinic doctors claim to have "subsidized" the pediatric doctors, why aren't they welcoming a chance to clear out their pediatric department?

— encourage the Twin Falls Clinic to drop their court action against these doctors so that they may resume their excellent service to our community.

War over Idaho license plate slogan rages on

TWIN FALLS — An Idaho historian friend of mine insists much of the state's history can be traced through the slogans on Idaho's license plates.

A quick examination seems to prove him correct.

Beginning in 1948, the license plates would read "World Famous Potatoes," or as it later became "Famous Potatoes."

The slogan has stayed that way for most of the last three decades, to the chagrin of some north Idaho legislators who haven't seen a potato except next to a medium rare steak and a bottle of beer.

North Idaho, which is predominantly Democratic, has always hated south Idaho, which is predominantly Republican. Neither segment is predominantly an opportunity to thumb its nose at the other, and each fantasizes about secession.

In north Idaho, they make a lot of money on tourism. In south Idaho, agriculture is the major element of the economy.

Sure enough, the struggle between these two lifestyles can be seen in the license plates.

Idaho's license plate war hasn't always been that well publicized. Largely to correct that lack of information, I have gathered several of the alternative slogans proposed from time to time for Idaho's plates.

Each legislative session seems to see a few of these slogan suggested, usually in an attempt to promote some lesser known element of Idaho's economy or lifestyle. As a public service, I present them here for the first time in any newspaper.

Between 1941 and 1948, when the Democrats either controlled the state legislature, or the legislature was a minority, state license plates read "Scenic Idaho," or "Vacation Wonderland."

One year a picture of a graceful downhill skier also adorned the beautiful registration plates, thanks in large part to Democratic votes.

But in the 1948 elections, a Republican landslide wiped out Democratic right and left. By the 1947 session the downstate Republicans, most of whom were farmers, were ready to demonstrate their roots (figuratively and literally). Democratic control of the license plates would end in 1947, they announced.

Legislators from Moscow, for instance, have repeatedly sought this slogan: "Visit Idaho, home of the University of Idaho and many fine junior colleges."

The proposed deal in the education committee.

Several Boise residents resentful at the large segments of Idaho being purchased by out-of-state land developers, have proposed: "Visit Idaho, a wholly owned subsidiary of California."

Pocahontas residents are also fighting for their place in the sun. They're upset, having believed for years that their city has been misunderstood and tarred with a bad reputation. The answer, they say, is reverse psychology. They want license plates that treat as a virtue what some people think is the town's major disadvantage. The new license plate slogan would read: "Wallace residents have always felt their hard rock mining activities have been ignored, given the shaft, in a manner of speaking. They believe license plates should read "Miners do it deeper."

Nampa's center of a large farming area well known for its production of beans, believes license plates should call attention to their significant agricultural contributions. Nampa boosters want license plates reading: "Visit Nampa: Fiatulence Capital of the West."

Caldwell inhabitants, of course, not to be outdone, want plates saying "Visit Caldwell: Gateway to Nampa."

In Coeur d'Alene, which is possibly the most beautiful area in Idaho, if not the West, some are now hoping to prevent overcrowding by discouraging further in-state immigration and land development. They think the answer is a license plate slogan boasting: "Visit Idaho: Tick Fever State."

Idaho Falls lawmakers also have a request. They want plates reading: "Idaho Falls: Conservative Wonderland."

That's a slogan which is better understood after watching legislators and the potato lobby has been known to mash all opposition. But the next Legislature will meet during an election year and could be susceptible to allowing county option license plate slogans.

I have learned from a highly-placed source that in anticipation of this possibility, Gov. John Evans last week secretly ordered inmates at the Idaho State Penitentiary to begin re-tooling the machinery by which license plates are made.

What will the new Idaho slogan say?

What else?

"Famous License Plates."

Miss America's first words voice testimony to her faith

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Eleven years ago, doctors told Cheryl Prewitt she would never walk again. Saturday night, the Mississippi musician walked down the ramp as the 1980 Miss America.

She awoke Sunday morning and wondered whether her tragedy-to-glory storybook life was all a dream. "It was a miracle," said the 22-year-old blue-eyed, born-again Christian the morning after she took her tearful stroll down the runway of Convention Hall.

"In my lifetime, I have had a healing of my left leg, a cracked back and 100 stitches in my face," she said. "I think you can see I have been miraculously healed."

After a car accident at age 11, which savagely crushed one leg and left it two inches shorter than the other, doctors said she would never walk again.

At age 17, in a faith healing Bible meeting in Jackson, Miss., she said she prayed and then watched her shortened leg grow back to normal "in a matter of seconds."

Wearing her new crown and a beige dress, at the traditional post-pageant news conference, she said the healing was the most important thing of her life.

"If other people believe it, that's wonderful," she said. "And if not,

CHERYL PREWITT states her beliefs

then there is nothing I can do about it. "Jesus is the center of my life," Miss Prewitt said, who said she was a member of an independent Methodist church.

Miss Prewitt, who was raised in the small town of Ackerman, Miss. "We just got the road paved," she noted — has traveled extensively through the South as a gospel singer with her family.

She was the only contestant in Saturday's pageant to have a double talent, playing the piano and singing the popular song, "Don't Cry Out Loud."

She said she wants to perform professionally once she gets her doctorate at the Lulliard School of Music in New York. She recently was graduated from Mississippi State University.

Winning the Miss America crown gives Miss Prewitt a $20,000 scholarship to further her career and the promise of up to $100,000 in professional fees during her reign.

As the first Miss Mississippi to win the pageant since Lynda Lee Mead in 1960, Miss Prewitt said she could never deny her beliefs even as a spokeswoman for America.

"The Miss America standard is not to be a verbose, difficult, arrogant person, but to be a down-to-earth American girl," she said. "I think I am a very loving person. I like to share myself with others."

"I want my world to change and to progress, and Miss America will help that," she said.

Hope aiding Viet refugees

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bob Hope, who has entertained Americans most of his life, and John McCarthy, who has resettled refugees for more than half of his life, are combining their talents to help save the lives of Vietnam's "boat people."

Hope will appear Tuesday night at the Kennedy Center in a benefit performance sponsored by Migration and Refugee Services, a private non-profit organization headed by McCarthy. Hope telephoned McCarthy in late August with the idea.

The coordinating committee for the event includes Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. Frank Lautner, R-Mo.

Thomas P. O'Neill, All are expected to attend.

McCarthy, who resettled Jewish refugees from Europe during World War II, said his group has resettled 150,000 Indochinese refugees in the last three years.

"The idea of identifying these small people with a humanitarian like Bob Hope is a way to sensitize the people," he said in a recent interview. "I don't think there's any cause more worthy than that of refugees."

Pope squelched scandal probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Top officials of the Roman Catholic Church, including Pope John Paul II, have struggled for more than five years to contain and cover up one of the church's worst scandals, Gannett News Service reported Sunday.

The news service said in a copyright story that the tale of political entanglement and financial devastation involves a small order of monks based in Doylestown, Pa., the 900-year-old Order of St. Paul the First Hermit, or the Pauline Fathers.

Vatican documents show that, in less than a decade, the order squandered a substantial portion of $20 million in charitable donations, loans, investments and bond proceeds through mismanagement, dubious business practices and what Vatican investigators described as "chaotic" and "immoral" lifestyles.

Gannett said powerful papal investigators concluded that business deals and tax-avoidance schemes engineered in five states by the leader of the Paulines in America were of questionable legality and in violation of the canons of the church.

The Vatican probes — together with the titular head of the American Catholic Church and top members of the Roman hierarchy — directed that the offending priests be severely disciplined.

But Pope John Paul II — who, like the Pauline Order, is Polish — reversed the decision by abruptly closing the probe of the order and its bizarre exploits in America with a final, formal papal decree on May 21.

Gannett said principal elements of the Pauline saga include:

- Top American officials of the Catholic Church congratulating themselves on avoiding civil litigation and criminal prosecution of those involved.
- An intense power struggle within the upper ranks of the church over who should control the Paulines, a political contest so bitter that Vatican detectives reported bugging of the head of the order's telephones in both Rome and Poland.

Contributions by Catholics of an estimated $250,000 to the Paulines for mass requests, after which the money was spent and the masses were never said.

Successful solicitation by the Paulines of more than $400,000 in contributions for bronze memorial plaques to be installed in a national shrine, after which the funds were spent, and the plaques were not erected.

Vatican astonishment at the scope of the order's secret investments, which included two hospitals, a trade school, an aircraft equipment plant, a foundry and several other businesses, all geared to milk the greatest advantage from the Paulines' tax-exempt status.

Misappropriation of more than $65,000 of the order's own cemetery funds, legally required for "perpetual care," burial plots and other memorials for other purposes.

The retaining of a disbarred attorney, who had served time for federal tax evasion, as principal legal adviser to the Paulines.

Actress believed overdose victim

PARIS (UPI) — Police said Sunday they were almost certain American actress Jean Seberg, whose best known role was as a saint, committed suicide by taking an overdose of barbiturates.

The body of the 40-year-old blonde film star was discovered late Saturday in the back seat of her car near the studio apartment she shared with her fourth husband, a 29-year-old Algerian actor.

An autopsy was to be performed today.

Miss Seberg was best known for her starring role in Otto Preminger's 1957 film "Jean of Arc." She was an avid teenager when she was cast in the role after a nationwide search.

In 1970, Miss Seberg had a still birth, one month after she was separated from French diplomat and author Roman Gary.

In recent years the actress had undergone psychiatric treatment. She was born in Marshalltown, Iowa, and moved to Paris several years ago.

Dear Abby

Many report happy with gay spouses

By Abigail Van Buren
© The Chicago Tribune
N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR ABBY: Your advice to DESPERATE WIFE, who came home early and found her husband in bed with his best friend (another male), was not very well thought out. You said, "Bisexuality is a fact of life that can occur in any family. Give him up graciously, he has already consciously or unconsciously made a choice."
Abby, if he has been a wonderful husband for 12 years and a great father, as she stated, she should have been encouraged to try to save her marriage rather than demolish it.
Granted she is in shock and granted there has been deception on his part, but she isn't the only woman in the world who's married to a gay man. If she lives in a big city, there is a mental health clinic and a gay community service agency which can put her and her husband in touch with a support group for gay married men and women. Their counselors will help them deal with the realities of their marriage and show them how to build a new relationship based on honesty and open communication. Or they may conclude that it's best to separate. But at least they should consider the alternatives instead of scrapping the marriage.

I am sorry that you viewed the situation as hopeless. It isn't.
GAILY MARRIED INS.F.
DEAR GAILY MARRIED: Although my answer was (I thought) very well thought out, a surprising number of readers wrote to say that they are happily married to bisexual mates, and my advice was way out in left field. Read on:
DEAR ABBY: I'm sorry DESPERATE WIFE didn't ask ME for advice instead of you. I have been happily married to a bisexual man for 33 years and have no regrets. We raised four wonderful children who knew nothing of their father's proclivity until they were grown and able to understand it. None of them love him any less for it, and all are heterosexual, I might add.
I knew my husband was gay when I married him, but I never felt threatened by it. He was 33 and I was 34. We were both in the theater. I could bet my life that he has never had an affair since our marriage.
If I had a son, my husband in the arms of another man at any point in our marriage I would no more have considered divorcing him than I would had I caught him with a woman. He's a fine, beautiful man who by nature is able to relate sexually to both sexes, which is not as rare as most people think.

NAMELESS, PLEASE,
N.Y.C.
DEAR ABBY: Your advice to DESPERATE WIFE, who had been happily married for 18 years to a bisexual man, was simplistic.
Human beings are capable of more flexibility than you give them credit for. You didn't present any options. One was to get help in adjusting to the idea that her husband is bisexual. She said they loved each other, had terrific sex, and great children. None of that has changed, nor has HE changed. Only what she KNOWS has changed.
My husband is gay, but we have come to realize that what we have together and what we give each other and our children is more important than what happens when we are apart.
We can allow each other to live full and complete lives—whatever that may mean. You should have told that wife that leaving a loving husband isn't the only solution.
FOUND ANOTHER WAY IN MASS
DEAR ABBY: As a neuropsychiatrist, I have had many married, bisexual male patients. Most of them were vigorous, successful men in high-paying positions with intelligent, good-looking wives. In every case there also were healthy, well-adjusted children. There was a close rapport between these patients and their families for years until circumstances forced the skeletons out of the closet.

In every case the wife preferred to continue in the marriage. Not one man I ever treated was willing to give up his homosexuality—but he didn't want to give up his wife either. Such individuals seek help only when they get arrested as a lover or are exposed for some reason.
DESPERATE WIFE may have wanted only your confirmation of her wish to keep her husband; you let her down.
L.A. PHYSICIAN
DEAR PHYSICIAN: Possibly, but the fact that the husband had an affair in his own home tells me that perhaps he WANTED to get caught and end the closet capers.
Address comments and questions to Abby, Box 6970, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Dr. Lamb

Patient gets fat eating high protein diet

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
(Newspaper Enterprise Association)
Dear Dr. Lamb,
I read your column regularly and need some assistance. I was recently diagnosed as having low blood sugar, and the doctor suggested that I eat protein snacks between meals as well as high-protein meals.
I do feel better but have gained weight and now feel like a healthy sausage. I would like to know what I can eat that will give me the needed protein without the increase in weight.
Dear Reader,
I wonder how many of my readers have ever questioned the popular concept that a high-protein diet causes you to lose weight when people like you tend to gain weight when they eat proteins.
The truth is that proteins are just carbohydrates and fats with ammonia attached to them. The ammonia part of the amino acids in the protein is simply stripped off, and the excess protein becomes fat and carbohydrate. The extra ammonia is converted to urea and eliminated in your urine!
There are plenty of high-protein foods that are relatively low in fat. The problem is that many people choose foods that they have been told are high in protein but that also contain lots of fat and, therefore, lots of calories. A good example is whole milk; about half its calories really come from fat.
Meat is an excellent source of protein, but you must use lean meats if you want to avoid a lot of fat calories. A good example would be lean round steak with all the visible fat removed.
Chicken breasts or turkey breasts are good sources of protein without fat, particularly if you remove the skin.

The purpose of the high-protein meals and snacks is that they are emptied more slowly from the stomach than are carbohydrates, particularly the concentrated carbohydrates such as sugar. They are absorbed a little slower. As a result, they don't tend to raise your blood sugar and cause you to have rebound low blood sugar reactions.
You can accomplish the same results by being sure your diet contains more bulk. This should come from the bulky vegetables such as leafy salads or raw vegetables. You can even eat raw apples since they're fibrous, slowly digested and won't raise your blood sugar very much.

To give you a better understanding of what low blood sugar really is and what you should be doing about a diet, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 3-9, Low Blood Sugar: Hypoglycemia. Other readers who check this issue can save 75 cents in check or coin with a 10¢ stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

Pushbutton world now available

By JAMES J. DOYLE
UPI staff writer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Here's a scenario for the times:

A homemaker pushes a button and an oven is timed to begin cooking dinner an hour later. The oven will cook the dinner in six minutes, turn itself off and open its own door.

Madam homemaker, meanwhile, pushes a few more buttons and talks to a friend a thousand miles away. The TV goes on automatically and changes its own channels to a pre-selected show.

It also tapes the show for later viewing as a result of a couple of other buttons previously depressed.

It will go off by itself hours later after having selected a series of channels. The TV set also will turn on a nearby lamp at dusk.

That's not the future, it's the present. It's a push-button world, or it can be if you wish. And television sets are the major indicator.

It's a great age for a sloth.

But an official of one of the large companies that makes life so lazily, says laziness is not the point.

"It's speed and convenience," Robert Shortell of RCA said. "I don't think it has anything to do with laziness."

"People just look for fast and efficient ways to get things done, and pushing a button is a very speedy way."

RCA, which seems to have started a lot of things, is the current leader. In the field of push-button television sets, Shortell, reached at his Princeton, N.J., office by push-button telephone, said.

Although push-button and remote controls have been around for a long time, it's only recently that they've begun to proliferate in our quest for "the good life."

"You can find push buttons in all kinds of appliances," he said. "Just about everything is programmable. Without push buttons some things on the modern TV sets would be awkward."

"Now, there's one keyboard. You can program the set to go on and off at certain times of the day. It enables you to attach a lamp to the TV set independently so a thief will think you're home when you're not."

Those features are RCA's alone. Other television sets also have features. Shortell said. "You can sit across a room, turn it on and off, even zoom in on a fast sports play, or anything else, control volume and turn it off."

"What makes this all possible," Shortell said, "is solid-state electronics, integrated circuits — small chips with hundreds and hundreds of electronic components on them."

"It does many functions with incredible speed, and it's very reliable," he said. "I think we all look for that in some respects."

Current generation television sets consume less power than a 100-watt bulb, possibly less than a 70-watt bulb, he said.

"It's very energy efficient. It cost about five cents a day to operate." That is based on recent surveys which say the average family watches 6.4 hours of television a day.

"That's very cheap entertainment," Shortell said. "In this era when gasoline shortages keep us closer to home and inflation cuts into discretionary income, we find television growing as the home entertainment device."

The older sets pre-chip days, had to heat up all those tubes. "Very energy wasteful," Shortell said.

Look at a TV set today with all the improvements in quality and it sells for the same amount of money it sold for 10 years ago. Not many products can say that.

The television set he described today, a large color set, remote controls, lamp monitor, sells for an average of $550.

"If color television had followed the cost-of-living index," he said, "we would be paying $1,100 dollars instead of the average cost of $550. And despite that fact, today's set is as different from the sets of 10 years ago as a Boeing 747 is from a DC-3."

In the push-button era everything from the automatic dishwasher to the TV, to garage doors — there's even a lawnmower that can be operated by dad from the hammock to most kitchen appliances, can be controlled with less energy than it takes to open a can of beer.

For years, remote-controlled TV sets accounted for only 4 to 5 percent of sales. Today, it's about 15 percent, according to Jack K. Sauter, general manager of RCA's Consumer Electronics division.

He predicted the color TV industry would sell about 1.8 million remote-control receivers in 1979, up 200,000 units from last year's record sales.

The remote control business has doubled in the past three years, reflecting growing consumer demand for its convenience.

"Solid-state electronics has made possible the era of push buttons," Shortell said. "You can call a remote Alaskan village on the phone by pushing just 10 buttons."

Families with small children will be happy to hear that.

COINS

Q. What's the difference between a "proof coin" and an "uncirculated coin"?

A. The uncirculated coin is mated on the high-speed press, moved on conveyors, run through a tunnel machine and struck only once. It's not guaranteed to be perfect. The proof coin is hand-fled to a slow press, struck twice, and inspected for perfection. It is made from a highly polished blank.

Q. Seemed a few generations ago that every dog in the country was called Rover, but I don't know why?

A. They were named after the first animal film star who played the hero in the 1905 movie "Rescued by Rover."

A. American history. That subject in which the most get an "F" in English, regret to report.

A. Little less than 16 miles.

Nonaligned summit blasts Egyptian treaty

HAVANA, Cuba (UPI) — The sixth summit of the nonaligned nations ended Sunday with an acrimonious 24-hour session condemning Egypt's peace treaty with Israel but rejecting Cuban President Fidel Castro's demand that Egypt's membership in the movement be "frozen."

described by sources as a very "hot exchange full of personal insults, some of them questioning the intelligence of some leaders at the summit."

In a compromise on the issue of whether to suspend Egypt from the movement as demanded by radical Arab states, the delegates appointed a commission to monitor Egypt's conduct over the next 18 months. A vote on whether to suspend Egypt will be taken at the next meeting of the non-aligned foreign ministers.

"That's like saying I am not going to hang you but I'm going to put rope around your neck," one Singapore delegate commented. An Egyptian diplomat compared the decision to being put on parole.

Egyptian delegate Butros - Ghali spoke at least three times during the final session and then stormed out of the meeting about three quarters of the way through the debate. Most of the personal insults were traded among the African nations, the sources said.

In his closing speech, Castro told the 1,400 delegates from 95 nations: "Our movement is more united than ever. Our movement is more vigorous than ever. Our movement is more ours than ever before insults of all the campaigns, insults of all the predictions."

The final version of the "Havana Declaration" made public at the end of the summit lacked most of the directly anti-American language included in the draft Cuba originally submitted in its role as host of the summit.

Two paragraphs that many moderate nations at the seven-day summit said were part of an effort by Castro to tip the movement toward the Soviet Union were also missing.

The two paragraphs were at the heart of charges that the Cuban draft argued that all non-aligned nations are natural enemies of U.S. imperialism and therefore natural allies of the Socialists.

The declaration contains the general principles of non-alignment that will guide the movement until the summit in Baghdad in 1982, as well as the movement's stands on world problems and economics.

The final document also was expanded to include several even handed attacks on "expansionism in all its forms," a thinly veiled reference to Moscow as well as Washington.

issues such as on Africa and Latin America were strongly worded and included appeals for increased military aid to black revolutionary forces in Zimbabwe Rhodesia and South Africa.

The declaration's key political language followed the line laid down by Yugoslav President Josip Broz, the sole surviving founder of the movement in 1961 — total independence from both the U.S. and Soviet blocs.

Tito, whose movement has grown to 95 member nations and includes more than half the world's population, was known to have been angered by the resolution's first draft written months ago by Cuba as the host country.

The dispute triggered reports of a possible confrontation at the Havana summit that would split the movement into radical and moderate wings.

Iraq may halt oil flow

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — Iraq may cut off supplies of crude oil from major multinational oil companies that do not comply with its boycott on Israel, Egypt, Rhodesia and South Africa, the authoritative Middle East Economic Survey said Sunday.

New Iraqi demands, affecting American firms like Gulf, Mobil and Exxon, seek contracts that will prohibit the shipment of oil to, or through, countries on the boycott list, MEES said.

The magazine said 300,000 to 400,000 barrels of oil a day were at stake for American companies. The United States currently imports about 9 million barrels per day from all foreign sources.

The publication said state-run companies, like the French Compagnie Francaise des Petroles, would escape the ban for political reasons.

MEES said the Iraqi government informed several companies their contracts will be terminated Dec. 31 while new terms, including in all probability the boycott, are negotiated.

Sadat claims progress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Insisting Egypt and Israel have achieved progress in talks toward Palestinian self-rule, President Anwar Sadat says Jordan — and maybe even the PLO — may join the negotiations by the end of the year.

"There is progress," the Egyptian leader said on NBC's "Meet the Press" program aired Sunday.

But Sadat, interviewed for the program last week in Haifa, Israel, during a break in talks with Prime Minister Menachem Begin, declined to reveal details of the progress.

Sadat complained about attempts by reporters to find out the details of the negotiations, saying his Camp David summit with Begin and President Carter succeeded because of the secrecy.

Asked if he expects Jordan's King Hussein to join the negotiations on Palestinian self-rule, Sadat said: "I, myself, I think, by the end of this year, we shall be anticipating King Hussein and maybe others, also."

The Egyptian leader indicated the Palestine Liberation Organization also may join the talks on self-rule for the Arab residents of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Hughes talks pressed

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 — Negotiators Sunday continued labor bargaining as a midnight deadline drew closer and the fate of primary airline services in several major Idaho cities, including Twin Falls, hung in the balance.

At press time, the Airline Employees Association, representing 2,200 clerical workers, station personnel and reservation personnel, and Hughes Aircraft management were meeting in Washington under the auspices of the National Mediation Board.

A cooling-off period ordered by federal officials was set to expire at 1 a.m. local time today.

Contract negotiations have been taking place since the unions contract expired in Aug. 1978. The principle unresolved issue is wages.

The National Mediation Board was called in Sept. 5 and the negotiations were moved to Washington last week.

If a strike should occur, Hughes Aircraft would discontinue service, Hughes spokesman Larry Litchfield said.

"The company is doing everything it can to expedite a settlement and is hopeful there will be an agreement," Hughes spokesman Ralph Henn offered some optimism, saying, "They are continuing the meetings which is a good sign. It could very well go right down to midnight."

"We're optimistic and hopeful, but you know how unions are," Henn added about 42 percent of the airline's work force belongs to the union.

"There is a strike, we will be shuttled down completely," Henn said.

"In Twin Falls, where Hughes is the primary airline, a strike would mean a drastic reduction in passenger and cargo service, airport manager Harry Herick said.

"If a strike is called, eight of the nine Hughes employees at Joslin Field would be on strike, Henn said.

Hughes makes four flights a day departing from Twin Falls. In July, 3,150 passengers boarded Hughes planes at the Twin Falls airport, Henn said.

"The strike would be felt in most of the states," Henn said.

Hughes makes 34 flights a day in Idaho, carrying an estimated 23,200 passengers in July, Henn said.

Hughes is also the principal airline in Lewiston and one of two major airlines in Idaho Falls and Pocatello.

Of the 76 Idaho Hughes employees, 60 are union members, Henn said.

Prices paid at livestock sale soar

By MARJORIE LIERMAN
Times-News writer

FILER — Inflation took more than a slight turn, Filer Saturday morning when best sold at more than $5 a pound on the hoof and bidders went as high as $10 a pound for lamb.

The occasion was the annual 4-H and FFA fat stock sale with the sleek and pampered blue ribbon animals of the 1979 Twin Falls County Fair going at twin above premium prices.

The sale drew a near record turnout of individuals and businesses supporting the young livestock producers. It was one of the final events of what officials say has again been another record exposition in quality exhibits and enthusiastic crowds.

Lee Chadwick of Hollister received the grand champion honor in 4-H beef fitting and showing, while Anita Young, also of Hollister, took reserve grand champion.

Hess Charolais Ranch of Jerome received grand champion heifer and grand champion bull trophies in the Charolais beef class with Dallas Ulrich of Buhl getting the reserve champion award.

The Plant Stop of Filer received the fair board's personal plaque for best display of produce in merchants' exhibits, and Rae and Thelma Lee's Handmade Crafts of Murtaugh won a plaque for best originality in displaying the product.

The fat stock sale ran for more than five hours Saturday and with lots of competition in the bidding.

Anita Young of Rogerson received top price of $5.10 per pound for her 1,130 pound champion beef. Her total price was $5,763 for the single animal. Buyer was the Club 93 in Jackpot, Nev.

Gus Kohntopp of Twin Falls received $3.25 per pound or $3,795.75 for his 1167 pound animal for the second high beef-price of the day. It was purchased by Cactus Pete's of Jackpot, Nev.

The 240 pound grand champion swine, owned by Roxanne Hoke of Filer, sold for $1 per pound.

Independent Meat Co. of Twin Falls bringing $960 for the young owner.

Gary Smith of Twin Falls sold his 210 pound swine for $2.20 per pound to Steve's Burger-Out in Twin Falls.

Scott Marshall of Filer, owner of the grand champion 110 pound lamb, sold his entry at $10 per pound to the Horse Sho Club of Jackpot.

The 110 pound reserve champion, owned by Jeff Sharp of Twin Falls, brought $7 per pound from the Franklin Shop of Twin Falls.

A White Samoyed Dog won the popularity contest in the dog department. Its owner, Carol Price of Twin Falls, was presented a plaque by Mrs. Cecil Noble, doghouse superintendent.

People who visited the department during the four days had cast ballots for their favorite dog in the building.

Fairgoers listened to the Oldtime Fiddlers concert Saturday afternoon on the fairground lawn, and many attended the Filer Wranglerettes' free horse show in the rodeo arena. With tickets at a premium, people began filling the rodeo stands early in the evening for the grand final rodeo competition and the Miss Rodeo Idaho contest.

Today's schedule
9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. — Release of Antiques and Home Arts that have entries in both departments.

Fair gate sets record

FILER — The four-day attendance at the Twin Falls County Fair reached a total of 80,265 fairgoers, an all-time record, goes 265 over the projected 80,000 mark.

The Saturday crowd numbered 22,678. Each of the last three days showed an increase of more than 1,000 over last year. Fair board official Tom Shouse said he was highly pleased and hoped to do as well or better next year.

Shouse and fair board members praised tired workers, exhibitors and even the fans as the gates closed on the five-day show Saturday night.

"The weather was wonderful, the displays and exhibits outstanding and our attendance increased each day," he said.

considered a predator, and he and his domestic animals need plants.

Mrs. Ruffino said she did a good deal of research before completing her book, which was printed by the Twin Falls County Extension Service. She would like to write another book on the environment and its importance to all mankind.

She said she has always been interested in nature since she was a small girl, and used to dream of becoming a game warden.

Mrs. Ruffino was born in Texas and lived in Washington before coming to Idaho. She plans to be a teacher some day, saying she feels the best way to impress upon people the importance of preserving our environment is to begin in the classroom.

'Snores' fooled 'em

FILER — One of the cleverest ideas to come up at the fair for many years is the snoring farmer in the Lucerne Grange booth in the produce building.

It is no accident that Lucerne Grange won first in the best artistic arrangement and general appearance, second in best original arrangement and general appearance, and third in best quality produce and fruit.

Using the show "Energy Shortage," the booth shows a barefoot farmer sound asleep in a field with his hoe at his side. The loud snoring sounds coming from the sleeping farmer are actually those made by a grange member's son and husband and recorded while the two men were asleep.

The produce superintendent couldn't divulge the name of the woman or the two male snorers in her family, but most often heard comment is "That sounds just like my husband!"

The full-size model looks so real that a number of people pausing to look at the display have leaned over the railing and tickled the bottoms of the man's feet, hoping to awaken him.

4-H text wins good reviews

FILER — A young Twin Falls naturalist, Pam Ruffino, wrote her own textbook for a 4-H Club this year and it received an enthusiastic review from the judge in the 4-H department at the Twin Falls County Fair.

Mrs. Ruffino said none of the available workbooks contained enough about Idaho environment, its plants, rocks, minerals and animals, and she wanted to produce something to show "what life is all about," she said. Her club is the first of its kind in Magic Valley.

Calling themselves the "Nature Study 4-H Club," the present club of two girls and four boys began as a group of 13, but the other seven members dropped out, because the work was too hard. Members of the club are in the 9-12 year age group, and Mrs. Ruffino said she believes the work should really have been for older students.

The six who did finish are interested in their projects, and said they especially enjoyed a field trip to Dierkes Lake where they gathered plant specimens, bird nests, insects and rocks, and learned to identify each.

The group has studied the relationship of plants and animals, and their displays include illustrated exhibits of food chains, showing how all life begins and ends with plants.

Bald eagles, bears, deer and coyotes are among the predators used to illustrate how each gains sustenance from insects, smaller animals and forms of plant life. Even man is considered a predator, and he and his domestic animals need plants.

Mrs. Ruffino said she did a good deal of research before completing her book, which was printed by the Twin Falls County Extension Service. She would like to write another book on the environment and its importance to all mankind.

She said she has always been interested in nature since she was a small girl, and used to dream of becoming a game warden.

Buhl girl, 9, dies

BOISE — A Buhl girl was pronounced dead Sunday at St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise after she had been hit by an on-coming car near Buhl.

Joanna Barth, 9, was dismounting from a church bus and apparently darted in front of a southbound car along Clear Lake Road, Twin Falls County Sheriff James Munn said.

The name of the driver was not available at press time.

The accident occurred a half mile north of Sawtooth. Drive at about 12:20 p.m., Munn said.

The girl was rushed by ambulance to Magic Valley Memorial and then taken to St. Alphonsus. She arrived at the Boise hospital about 4 p.m. and died 30 minutes later.

Twin Falls County Coroner Cloyce Edwards said the girl died of multiple head injuries.

Chalk brood decimating Idaho bees

PARMA (UPI) — A mysterious disease is creeping into Idaho's leaf cutter bee hives, killing the bees and costing farmers thousands of dollars in unproduced alfalfa seeds.

The disease called chalk brood infiltrates hives and kills the bees while they are in the larvae. The disease can not be detected until the bees are in the adult stage.

The rare leaf cutter bee pollinates the alfalfa plant.

A University of Idaho extension researcher, Norman Waters, said the disease has reached epidemic proportions. Since 1973, the leaf cutter death toll has increased from 1 percent of the bee population to 40 percent last year.

Farmer Jim Hitch said the disease may drive him out of the alfalfa seed business. He said in 1977 he netted $187 an acre, about the county average of $21. But last year, he lost $87, he said.

"A lot of my seed was put in without sufficient pollination," Hitch said. "We're at the point right now where 40 percent of our larvae for next year will be dead seeds."

Hitch said the disease was affected every alfalfa seed farm in southwestern Idaho.

Despite research efforts, scientists have found no cure for the disease. They have tried to kill it with fungicides and antibiotics, as well as freezing and baking. Still, the disease continues to ravage-bee populations.

Waters is in charge of Idaho's program to find a cure for the disease in five years. He said a cure is at least a year away.

"We still can't tell when, or even if, we're going to have success," Waters said.

Quota of 200 pints set for blood drawing

TWIN FALLS — The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be in Twin Falls today to collect 200 pints of blood from local donors.

American Red Cross officials say donors have been generous in recent drawings and they are hoping for another good turnout.

The unit will be in Twin Falls both today and Tuesday with a 100-pint quota for each day. Residents are urged to call today from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. or Tuesday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the First United Presbyterian Church to donate blood.

Red Cross blood committee members say there is only one source of the life-saving blood and that is from the people.

"If you donate blood when the bloodmobile visits, your blood is used to meet the plasma and whole blood needs of the local region," says Ann Livingston, Twin Falls chapter director.

Stroke proves fatal

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man Sunday collapsed while irrigating his lawn and was pronounced dead at the scene, County Coroner Cloyce Edwards said.

Walter Boyard, 57, of Twin Falls suffered a massive stroke, collapsing in an alley behind his home. The body was noticed by a neighbor about 30 minutes later, Edwards said.

Twin Falls police and Magic Valley Ambulance units arrived at the scene about 8 a.m.

Woodcutter killed

BURLEY — A falling 40 foot tall tree Sunday killed a Filer man while cutting fire wood in the South Hills, Cassia County sheriff's deputies said.

Clyde Gerald Brady, 36, was pronounced dead at the scene after being struck in the trunk of the head, Cassia County Deputy Sheriff Ruben Saldana said.

Brady was sawing fire wood with his brother-in-law, Van Olson of Twin Falls, who had cut a notch in one tree in order to have it fall east. The tree fell south toward Brady. Olson's shouts of warning were drowned out by Brady's chainsaw, Saldana said.

The accident occurred 20 to 25 miles west of a holiday about 10 a.m.

Cassia and Twin Falls county sheriff's deputies and a Life Run ambulance unit were dispatched to the scene.

Purse, dogs stolen

TWIN FALLS — Among other duties Thursday, city police detectives in Twin Falls were investigating the theft of one purse and two registered dogs.

Doris Iken of Hamilton, Mont., said a woman thief took advantage of the situation Wednesday and snatched her purse.

The woman said the theft occurred in the restroom of the Albertson's store on Addison Avenue East about 10:58 a.m. She said her purse contained about $200 in cash along with personal papers and credit cards.

Manny Ramirez told police someone entered his fenced yard sometime Wednesday and took two registered dogs valued at $1,000. He said one was a 95-pound registered German Shepherd and the other a white Akita, weighing about 85 pounds. Ramirez said when he returned home Wednesday and went to feed the dogs, he found his gate had been opened and both dogs taken.

Agencies 'go public'

TWIN FALLS — The United Way of Twin Falls will be meeting the public this week at area stores.

The week has been set aside for the community to become acquainted with the United Way agencies, said Bobby Dobbs, Special Events chairman.

Each agency will have a display and representatives will answer questions.

Displays will be held at the Blue Lakes Mall on Sept. 14 and 15, and downtown for the remainder of the week. Among businesses hosting displays will be Sears, Cain's, Judy's Books, The Bon, Roper's, the ID Store, Penney's, The Paris, and Idaho First National Bank.

Idaho man arrested

SPARKS (UPI) — A Sun Valley man is in the Sparks jail on charges of attempted murder and arson.

Randy Howard, 28, surrendered to detectives after the Friday incident in which a young woman was beaten and an attempt made to set her apartment on fire. Police said Howard was arguing with two women roommates when a fight started. He allegedly beat the victim while the other woman ran for help, and then threw a stuffed doll into an oven.

When smoke started coming from the apartment, a witness called fire and police officers.

Class sign-up set

TWIN FALLS — Registration for three Idaho State University continuing education classes will continue at 7 p.m. today at the Shields Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

The classes include: Education 357-957; library science, cataloguing and classification; Counselor Education 619, individual intelligence testing, and Consumer Economics 323, advanced clothing.

Nampa man killed

NAMPA (UPI) — A 20-year-old Nampa man was killed in a "freak" accident at the Meridian Wood Products Co. plant north of Nampa.

Ricardo Flores died after a piece of wood struck him in the chest while he was operating a table saw at the plant late Friday, said Canyon County coroner Chris Klein.

Plane crash

KILIS BOISART
BOISE (UPI) — A Boise businessman and an Alaskan pilot were killed in a plane crash on a remote Alaska lake and two other Boise men are missing, authorities said.

William E. Foster Jr., 46, was on a hunting trip 200 miles northwest of Anchorage when the pontooon-equipped plane he was in crashed shortly after takeoff, Alaska State Trooper Perry Ingles said.

McEnroe and Austin reign over U.S. tennis

NEW YORK (UPI) — For John McEnroe and Tracy Austin, the fresh faced new king and queen of American tennis, it's winning that counts — not the records.

McEnroe, a brash young man with an arrogant manner at times, routed Vilas Gerulaitis 7-5, 6-3, 6-3 in an all-New York final of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships Sunday after the shy Austin humbled Chris Evert.

Lloyd 6-4, 6-3.

McEnroe, at 20, thus became the youngest man to capture the national championship since Pancho Gonzales in 1938, while the 16-year-old Austin is the youngest player ever to win either singles.

Neither was too impressed with the distinction.

"I don't matter," McEnroe said. "All that matters is winning the title. I didn't know about Pancho Gonzales until people told me, but the important thing was just winning it."

Austin, who called this the happiest day of her life, shared the same sentiment.

"I don't really think of being the youngest just the champion part," she said, cradling a bouquet of roses.

The blonde Californian then continued, "I can't believe it. The last game was the toughest one to win. You could just see the championship within your reach."

Evert was thwarted in her bid for what would have been a record fifth consecutive Open victory.

McEnroe called this victory "the best feeling about tennis I've ever had, it's the biggest tournament I ever won. It's not the best overall feeling I've had. Anyway, it's pretty nice."

The last time two Americans played for the men's title was in 1953, and even more unusual in this case is the fact that McEnroe and Gerulaitis live only five minutes from each other, a few miles from the National Tennis Center.

There was nothing neighborly about the way McEnroe treated his friend, however, making key breaks early in each set. Gerulaitis managed only one break—the entire match, that coming in the fifth game of the opening set. But McEnroe came right back for another break in the next game, then held his service to love in the third.

On Saturday, Gerulaitis also dropped the first two sets of his semifinal to Roscoe Tanner before rallying to win, but McEnroe gave him no such opportunity Sunday.

During the fifth game of the second set, McEnroe hopped over a flower box in a futile attempt at a crosscourt smash, and landed just two yards from where his parents were sitting. McEnroe eventually broke Gerulaitis in that game.

The only real outburst by McEnroe came later that set when he fouled. He turned to the stands and yelled, "Don't do that," then said to the umpire, "I don't want cameras rolling when I'm serving."

When the match ended, McEnroe leaped high and then jumped again, this time throwing his racket high in the air.

Gerulaitis hurt himself with seven double faults to only three for McEnroe.

Austin, who still has two years of high school remaining, earned $39,000 for her milestone victory, the same purse as McEnroe, and 10 less than a year as a pro she already has banked $297,223.

The distinction of being the youngest person to win the U.S. National championship doesn't excite the blonde Californian that much.

"I don't really think of being the youngest, just the champion part," said Austin, cradling a bouquet of red roses. "I can't believe it. The last game was the toughest one to win. You could just see the championship within your reach."

Evert, recently married, has agonized for the past year about how much she is willing to sacrifice to remain a champion, and she admitted again Sunday, "I'm definitely not as hungry as I used to be. I know how it feels to win a major title and it isn't as exciting anymore."

But she took nothing away from her conqueror, saying, "Tracy was just too tough for me today. She's had a great tournament, beating Martina Navratilova in the semis and me today. She deserves to win, but maybe next time it'll be a different story."

"I thought winning the title would be intimidating to her, but she went out and played it just like it was another tennis match."

Although Austin graciously contends that Evert doesn't give anything away, Evert made two agonizing, and uncharacteristic, errors that twice cost her her serve. Very likely, they also cost her the championship and the 31-match winning streak she had put together in the Open.

The first incident occurred in the eighth game of the opening set when Evert had an easy smash at the net but drilled it wide crosscourt. That allowed Austin to pull even at 4-4 and she also took the next two games, making the decisive break in the 10th game when Evert, after saving one set point, drove a forehand over the baseline.

Again in the sixth game of the second set Evert was in a similar position with Austin helplessly off balance, and this time she elected to go for a short shot to the near side. Once again, she sent it wide, enabling Austin to break service for 4-2.

Evert staved off doom by holding her service in an eighth game going 10-10 in the next. But Austin wouldn't yield, applying the coup de grace on her second match point.

The match was played almost entirely from the baseline with long rallies for most of the points. At times, on the lazy, sunny afternoon, the lineswomen seemed to be lulled to sleep since some of their calls were slow.

Graham takes title at Pleasant Valley

SUTTON, Mass. (UPI) — Steady veteran Lou Graham carded a 2-under par 69 Sunday to pull away from a three-way tie for second and capture the $250,000 Pleasant Valley Classic by one shot over Ben Crenshaw.

Graham's four-round total was 275, nine under par, and the victory earned him $45,000 and a spot in the World Series of Golf. The 41-year-old Nashville, Tenn., native, who won the Philadelphia Classic in July, has now earned nearly $135,000 this year, the best in his 16-year career.

Two double bogeys and three bogeys. He ended up at 692, 2-under par.

Graham took over the lead for good with a birdie on the fifth, and held at least a two-shot lead until Crenshaw birdied on 18. But Graham, playing two groups behind Crenshaw, made a routine par on 18, tapping in a 6-inch putt for the win.

Thomsen cashes

SUTTON, Mass. — Jeff Thomsen of Twin Falls had his first big payday by placing 11th in the Pleasant Valley Classic PGA Golf Tournament Sunday.

Thomsen had rounds of 70-71-71-70 and collected $6,250 for the meet.

Graham's final round included birdies on the 2nd, 5th and 12th holes along with a bogey on 14. Crenshaw had two birdies and two bogeys on the front side, and shot eight straight pars on the backside, before making his birdie on 18.

Jeff Mitchell finished in fourth place at 6-under 272 while veteran Bruce Devlin headed a group of five at 3-under 281, which included Rod Curl, Rex Caldwell, Tim Simpson and David Eger.

Opening-game failure haunts Weber State

By United Press International

A pair of two-point conversion plays Saturday night made Northern Arizona's season football opener a success and spoiled Weber State's bid to end its seven-year history of dropping the first game of the fall.

NAU's touchdown after the buzzer and pass for the two pointer gave the Lumberjacks a 22-21 win at Portland State. While Weber State lost at North Dakota State when Bison running back Mike Kasowski scored a touchdown and a two-point conversion to edged the Wildcats 11-10.

Idaho State in the Big Sky opener for both teams. Hawkins also scored a pair of Wolfpack touchdowns on one-yard runs, and Larry Workman passed 50 yards to Charles Edwards for another UNR TD.

In other Saturday games for Big Sky Conference teams, Nevada-Reno celebrated its first game in the league by whipping Idaho State 24-7. While, in non-conference games, Idaho lost 30-10 at Fresno State, Boise State was edged 9-7 by Long Beach State, and North Dakota slipped past Montana State 20-16. Montana was idle.

The Bengals' only score came in the fourth quarter when Scott Bachmeyer dashed eight yards for the touchdown. The two-point conversion try failed.

Boise State gave up three first-half field goals to Long Beach State's Ralph Petrosian, and that was just enough for the 49ers. The Broncos came up with a super defensive game, but managed only 163 yards in total offense in the loss.

Potter completed 16 passes for 216 yards in the Lumberjacks' narrow win. And running back Willard Reeves carried for 116 yards and NAU touchdowns of one and 21 yards.

Montana State led 16-13 in the closing minutes of the game — on Mike Deerler's two touchdown runs and Jeff Mur's 37-yard field goal. But North Dakota's Tim Bloch hit Paul Muckenheim in the end zone on a 17-yard pass play for the go ahead touchdown with just 1:30 left in the game.

Weber State had led North Dakota State 10-3 in the third quarter on freshman Winford Roberson's 2-yard touchdown run and Roger Rusek's extra-point kick and field goal.

Next Saturday Idaho is at NAU in a Big Sky game, while non-conference action will have Boise State and Fullerton State, Idaho State hosting Northern Colorado, Montana at Washington State, Montana State hosting Fresno State, Nevada-Las Vegas at Nevada-Reno, and Weber State at Brigham Young.

But the Bison went 93 yards on their last possession, scoring on Kasowski's 7-yard run with just 1:07 left in the game. And Kasowski then blew it in the end zone on the two-point run to defeat the Wildcats.

Nevada-Reno amassed 403 yards in total offense, with Frank Hawkins rushing for 168 yards, in beating

Lyle has European title

TURNBERRY, Scotland (UPI) — Britain's Sandy Lyle birdied six of the first seven holes and shot a final round 65 in brilliant sunshine Sunday to defeat South Africa's Dale Hayes and Briton Peter Townsend by seven strokes and win the European Golf Championship.

Lyle, 21, who will make his debut in the European Ryder Cup team later this week, predegauded the field over the 6,875 yards Turnberry course and finished with a Sunday-par aggregate of 275.

Hayes, who shot a 68, and Townsend, who carded 72, finished with 283.

Lyle, who won his first European tournaments earlier this season when he captured the Volvo and and Scandinavian Open titles, collected the $35,000 winner's purse and now takes over at the top of the European order of merit with Spain's Severiano Ballesteros in second place.

There was little doubt that the European Open was going to be Lyle's third big win of the year, and only his second as a professional following his astonishing 1978-79 cover of the first nine in a 20-hole par 3 compared with third round leaders Neil Coles and Mark James, both at 67.

Britain's Tommy Horan and Neil Coles had rounds of 69 and 70, respectively for Johnnie Walker's
