

'Back to basics' move fails to add up in mathematics

By DIANE B. ROCKETT
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The recent "back-to-basics" movement in the nation's schools has failed to improve students' understanding of mathematical concepts and their ability to solve mathematical problems, a new national survey has found.

Students can generally handle the mechanical skills of addition, subtraction, multiplication and division, which are emphasized in today's basic mathematics programs.

But their skills in solving problems and understanding concepts, such as percentages and fractions, have declined even further in the past five years, according to the study.

Although a number of factors would have an impact, the study concluded, probably the major one is the back-to-basics movement, which has been widely instituted in the nation's schools during this decade. In mathematics, that movement has often meant drilling students on the basic "computational skills to the exclusion of problem-solving," the researchers found.

"It is not enough to assume that if students can do the arithmetic, they can automatically solve problems," suggested James W. Wilson, chairman of mathematics education at the University of Georgia.

The textbooks that have accompanied the basics movement have contributed to the problem, the study found.

"They provide few opportunities for problem solving," Wilson said. "And when they do, the problems are often so simple that students don't have to figure out the problem's meaning to solve it."

In addition, the concern about declining student performance in recent years has led to the minimal competency and accountability movements with increased emphasis on testing, the study points out. "And since computational skills are easier to test — and teach — the concern has further prompted teachers to stay away from spending class time on problem solving."

An expanded definition of what is "basic" in mathematics is needed, so that students will be better equipped to deal with a variety of problems," summed up Roy H. Forbes, director of the National Assessment of Educational Progress, which wrote the study.

The 1978 survey of 71,000 students, ages 9, 13 and 17, was funded by the National Institute of Education and was a repeat of a 1973 survey. It was analyzed by an analysis by a panel of mathematics experts, including Wilson.

U.S. gives up fight over H-bomb secrets

Progressive Magazine editor Erwin Kroll calls decision 'clear cut victory'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government Monday dropped its court fight to block the Progressive Magazine and other publications from printing secrets of the hydrogen bomb, but said it may file criminal charges against those involved in exposing some of the sensitive data.

The Department of Justice has decided to seek dismissal of the cases against the Daily Californian and Progressive Magazine, a department spokesman Terrence Adamson told reporters following a day of private meetings by government lawyers.

The government had obtained court orders blocking the two publications from printing H-bomb secrets in a battle that began last spring.

Adamson said the issue became moot when the Madison, Wis., Press Connection Sunday published a letter from an amateur expert that included a diagram and list of key components of an H-bomb.

The same letter, from computer programmer Charles Hansen to Sen. Charles Percy, Raleigh, has been circulated to a number of newspapers.

Adamson refused to say if the Press Connection or Hansen would be a target of the Justice Department's preliminary criminal inquiry into possible violations of the Atomic Energy Act that bars disclosure of nuclear weaponry technology.

He said "the material published in Madison, Wisconsin, has been widely disseminated" and is "in the public domain."

Once the suits are dropped, he said, the government will no longer fight publication of any of the material — "it's a matter of editorial judgment, not legal responsibility."

Administration sources said the government also abandoned its 7-month-old legal struggle to block publication of the Progressive article, by freelance writer Howard Morland, because the Hansen article "is more accurate than the Morland article."

Progressive Magazine editor Erwin Kroll said the decision by the Department of Justice was "a clear cut victory" and said the article by Morland would be published soon, possibly in the November issue.

Several of the newspapers that received the Hansen letter refused to turn it over to the government, and the Justice Department Saturday obtained a court order barring the Daily Californian, which is based in Berkeley, Calif., from publishing its contents.

On Monday, following publication of the letter in Madison, the Justice Department asked U.S. District Judge Samuel Conti of San Francisco to dissolve the temporary restraining order against the Daily Californian and dismiss its lawsuit. Conti promptly obliged.

Dismissal proceedings against the two newspapers are expected to take longer because the case is in an appeals court.

Adamson said Hansen's letter exposed the three "critical concepts of thermonuclear weapons... we were trying to protect."

He said the United States has "been injured" by disclosure of the material, because other countries will now have increased capability "to obtain the knowledge which heretofore has been carefully guarded, restricted data under the law."

Mark Lynch, a lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union which is representing the Progressive, said his clients did not pass the Morland research to Hansen.

"I'm very confident that our clients have been absolutely scrupulous in obeying the court productive order (barring disclosure of the Morland article)," he said.

He said the Progressive was "delighted" at the ruling. "The government finally realized that prior restraint doesn't work."

Adamson said the Justice Department will still "take appropriate steps to ensure continued protection" of material filed by the government under court seal in the Progressive case. But he said it would no longer fight publication of any of the material now in the public domain.

He said the Justice Department's preliminary inquiry will focus on whether any of the publications violated the two court orders or federal law.

The Atomic Energy Act establishes a maximum criminal penalty of life imprisonment for intent to give a foreign power an advantage by disseminating information about nuclear weapons. Persons who publish with the understanding the material will be used for nuclear weapons or the United States can face 10 years in prison.

No cooperation

U.S. nettled by Moscow

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — As an apparent signal of his increasing annoyance with Moscow, President Carter for the first time Monday personally conducted a National Security Council meeting on the Soviet combat brigade in Cuba.

"The President is not pleased with the cooperation we've been getting from the Russians," a White House official said later. The United States will not settle for calling the 3,000-man combat force a training unit just to dismiss the problem, he said.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance went from the Security Council meeting to his briefest session yet — 25 minutes — with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin on the brigade issue. Each of their three previous sessions lasted an hour or more.

This time before Carter presided over the Security Council meeting, the council's Policy Review Committee had met on the brigade issue, which is souring U.S.-Soviet relations and has led to the negotiation of strategic arms limitation treaty and embarrassing Carter politically.

Members of the committee — Vance, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, Central Intelligence Agency Director Stansfield Turner and Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser — briefed the president on their deliberations. Then he convened the National Security Council.

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell told reporters that the Security Council review was "carried out in the context of President Carter and Secretary Vance's previous statements of the American position."

But he then said refer to those statements. Powell read portions that he wished to emphasize. These were the strongest parts of the statements: "The United States considers the brigade's presence 'a very serious matter,' Powell said, and 'the status quo is not acceptable.' He repeated Carter's veiled warning that the United States has the 'right to insist' that Moscow respect U.S. interests and concerns if Moscow expects American respect for its sensibilities and concerns."

The White House official, after saying that Carter was "not pleased" with Soviet cooperation on the brigade issue, said one reason for reiterating the literal words of the U.S. position was to convince the Soviets that the White House was unwilling to paper over the issue.

"The president was very unhappy with stories that came out a few days ago indicating that he might be willing to accept some statement on the part of the Soviets that these Soviet combat troops are a training unit, and to leave it at that," the official said.

"We are not going to announce publicly what would be an acceptable solution ahead of time, because that would amount to an ultimatum which would be counterproductive," he said.

But "we would not consider that training the combat unit as a training unit to be a resolution of the situation," he said.

Pravda, the Soviet Communist Party newspaper, said in an editorial Sept. 10 that Soviet troops have been in Cuba for 17 years in training roles only.

A few days later, a senior official at the Department of State later identified as undersecretary of state for political affairs, David D. Newsom spoke to reporters on the condition that he be unnamed about various possible missions of the Soviet brigade.

California brush fires keep burning

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 20,000-acre brush and forest fire burned Monday to the edge of a scenic highway through the San Gabriel Mountains, and firefighters hoped to stop it there and prevent the blaze from moving up the back side of Mount Wilson.

Besides the five-mile front along Angeles Crest Highway, fire officials said, the blaze also threatened to break loose on its eastern flank burning towards the Chelso Flats area.

A second fire in the Angeles National Forest consumed 2,900 acres and was burning out of control, but firefighters either contained or neared containment of several other major blazes in Southern California mountains.

A force of 1,900 firefighters from several states battled the largest blaze, known as the Sage Fire, with the help of air tankers dropping fire retardant.

"The main deal is what will happen with the winds in the afternoon," a spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service said.

"If it jumps the highway, we don't know how much acreage it will burn, and Mount Wilson could be threatened from the other side."

No homes were lost by the blaze, which has destroyed a mine, a fishery and four Forest Service tree plantations.

The Mount Gleason fire burning more than a mile to the west did not threaten any structures. A spokesman said the blaze seemed to be holding steady, but officials had no estimate of containment or control.

The other major fire in the Angeles National Forest, the Pincere blaze, was fully contained Monday at more than 5,000 acres. The fire burned up the front side of Mount Wilson, with the steep southern flank towering over metropolitan Los Angeles, and threatened a cluster of television towers and transmitters.

Firefighters in San Bernardino County battled two major blazes that charred valuable watershed but did not damage any structures.

The Shadow Hills Fire burned 2,300 acres in the mountains north of San Bernardino, near Highway 330. The blaze was reported 90 percent contained Monday afternoon and fire officials hoped to have it under control by Tuesday evening.

Another fire burned more than 1,000 acres in steep terrain at the headwaters of the Santa Ana River. A spokesman said there was no estimate for containment of the blaze, which was definitely caused by arson.

In San Diego County, firefighters contained blazes that burned 8,000 acres of rangeland, including seven homes, east of Del Mar and charred 3,200 acres of brush land on the Camp Pendleton Marine base.

Airliner lands safely after tail cone falls

BOSTON (UPI) — The tail cone blew off an Air Canada DC-9 jetliner flying at 25,000 feet over the Atlantic Ocean Monday, leaving a door-size hole gaping in the fuselage. The aircraft returned safely to Boston with only one minor injury among the 43 persons aboard.

The cockpit door was bent off its hinges and a liquor cart was blown out of the aircraft. Airline and federal authorities could not explain the mishap and began an immediate investigation.

The cone, about a dozen feet long, snapped off Flight 680 with a loud noise about 60 miles out of Boston and pressure inside the cabin immediately began to fall, said Mike Ciccarelli, public affairs officer for the Federal Aviation Administration.

He said the flight crew went into a 180-degree turn and headed back to Logan International Airport, where the plane landed without incident.

The only person hurt was a stewardess who suffered a bump on the head when she fell.

"Flight attendants and passengers had to hold on tight" during the flight back.

Flight 680, carrying 33 passengers and five crew members, was en route from Boston to Yarmouth and Halifax, Nova Scotia.

"This cone is 10 to 12 feet long and forms the tail end of the fuselage, the streamline part," Ciccarelli said. "Inside the widest part of the cone is a bulkhead that forms the rear of the airplane and set inside the bulkhead is an emergency escape door which was torn out."

"As it blew it took the cone with it leaving a door-size hole in the fuselage," Ciccarelli said.

"Flight attendants had to hold on tight and thank goodness nobody was near there. A liquor cart which was in the area was blown out of the airplane," he said. "The cockpit door was bent off its hinges."

Truck thief scores

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — The singing Osmond family has lost an estimated $200,000 worth of musical instruments, sound equipment, song arrangements and costumes to a truck thief.

A rented truck loaded with the equipment was stolen early Monday from a hotel parking lot in downtown Des Moines, said Ron Clark, spokesman for the Osmonds.

The truck, enroute from Chicago to the Osmonds' studio in Orem, Utah, was apparently "hot wired" sometime between 12:30 a.m. and 5 a.m. and driven away while its driver slept in a Holiday Inn, Clark said.

"It was a rented truck and one of its windows was broken when we rented," Clark said. "We don't think whoever stole it was after the Osmonds' equipment in particular. We think someone just saw a truck with a broken window and decided to steal it."

Clark said the Osmond family is scheduled to open a show Sept. 24 in Las Vegas. But he the theft of their gear and costumes would not prevent the opening. "We can replace it all by then," he said.

Clark said Osmonds finished an engagement at Chicago's Mill Run Theater Saturday. The family members flew back to Utah, but their equipment was sent back by truck.

Two Bolshoi dancers gain asylum in U.S.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two leading dancers defected from the Bolshoi Ballet and were granted political asylum in the United States Monday night, a State Department spokesman said.

The spokesman said in Washington that Leonid Kozlov and his wife, Valentina Kozlov, had requested asylum in the U.S. and would be granted it.

"They are now under the protection of U.S. authorities," he said, adding that the formal granting of asylum would be announced later.

"It is a matter of filling out the forms," he said.

The couple are the second and third dancers to leave the Bolshoi in the past four weeks during its U.S. tour. Bolshoi dancer Alexander Godunov defected Aug. 22 in New York City, but his ballerina wife decided to return to the Soviet Union.

Police in Los Angeles had referred their applications for asylum to federal agents, who met the couple around 10 p.m. Monday at the Wilshire Division police station.

"Those two persons are now in the custody of the federal agents," a police spokesman said.

The famed Russian ballet company completed an engagement in Los Angeles last weekend and flew to Moscow on a chartered plane Monday.

In Washington, Justice Department spokesman John Russell said the two dancers were not on board a chartered Soviet flight that left Los Angeles at 4:30 p.m. EDT bound for Moscow via New York.

"They've expressed some desire to remain in the United States," Russell said.

Vern Jervis, spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said officials of his agency "have talked with them — we interviewed them late this afternoon. They are requesting asylum."

He said his office has accepted the Kozlov's applications for asylum, but the State Department officials will make the final decision whether to accept them.

After his defection last month, Godunov said his decision was prompted by a "desire for greater artistic possibilities." Godunov's departure was followed by a three-day diplomatic stand-off at New York's Kennedy Airport when his wife, Bolshoi ballerina Ludmila Vlasova, boarded an Aeroflot plane to return to Moscow.

Balloonists applauded

NAILA, West Germany (UPI) — Two East German families who made a daring escape to the West by balloon were showered with praise, gifts and money — Monday — by admiring Bavarians trying to induce them to settle in the region.

The flight made overnight celebrities of the freedom balloon crew — aircraft mechanic Hans-Peter Strubel, 31, bicyclist Guntar Wetzel, 24, their wives and four sons.

Robert Strubel, the mayor of the Bavarian town of Naila, said his telephone had not stopped ringing all day with callers eager to help the families, who were hailed as heroes following their landing in Naila early Sunday.

"People from all over the country have called," Strubel said. He said the callers offered the refugees apartments, jobs and money.

The Red Cross barracks where the eight East Germans were staying looked like a child's Christmas dream, resplendent with money, shoes, clothes, toys and flowers, the mayor said.

He said four bank accounts had been opened to collect the money given to the refugees, who flew across the lightly watched border in a homemade gas balloon fashioned from curtains and nylon sheets.

BOISE (UPI) — Oral arguments scheduled in 4th District Court in Boise today over whether Idaho Power Co. water rights on the Snake River have priority over upstream diversions for farming were postponed until Oct. 22.

Henri sideswipes Mexico

VERACRUZ, Mexico (UPI) — Hurricane Henri blurred erratically across the Gulf of Mexico Monday and sideswiped Ciudad Guzman where more than 2,000 persons fled to the safety of Veracruz and Tampico.

Hurricane watchers at Mexico's Gulf Disturbance Center said Henri, the season's eighth tropical storm, was spotted about 242 miles southeast of the northern city of Tampico, Tamaulipas province.

Blasts rock armory

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Three explosions rocked a National Guard armory west of San Juan late Monday and a National Guard truck was burned in what appeared to be a terrorist attack on the U.S. military.

Police said no one was injured in the attack and no arrests were immediately made.

Leftists map strategy

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — El Salvador's strongest leftist alliance began a four-day conference Monday to map out its strategy for countering an alleged wave of repression by the nation's military rulers.

Two bombs claimed by the leftist Popular Liberation Front guerrillas went off late Sunday in downtown San Salvador, causing minor damages and no injuries.

One policeman and a passerby were wounded in a machine gun attack from a speeding taxi on a government building in the city of Santa Ana, 40 miles west of San Salvador, police said.

Sub guard attacked

KITTERY, Maine (UPI) — Navy officials at Portsmouth Naval Shipyard Monday were unable to verify the report of a sailor who said he was attacked Sunday night by two divers wearing scuba gear while he guarded a nuclear submarine.

An unidentified spokesman guarding the USS Stonewall Jackson, a 425-foot nuclear-powered ballistic missile sub, reported the divers attacked him shortly before 9 p.m.

Bus mechanics return

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Striking bus mechanics agreed Monday to temporarily end their 23-day-old walkout against the nation's largest all-bus transit system.

Officials of the Southern California Rapid Transit District said the buses, which carry about 1.2 million fares a day, would roll again this morning.

William Niehou enjoys first day.

Niehou back at work

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — Owens Illinois executive William Niehou sat behind his own office desk for the first time in nearly four years Monday and described the occasion as "an enjoyable return to reality."

"I feel very great. I've been looking forward for this day for at least the four years I've been gone," said Niehou, who was abducted from his Caracas, Venezuela, home in 1976 by Marxist guerrillas.

Niehou said he planned a book about his ordeal, based on a diary now in the hands of Venezuelan authorities he kept during his captivity and notes he has made since his return.

He said a suit filed by his wife, Donna, which charged O-I, a glass container manufacturer, did not take proper steps to secure his release was dropped after his return without an out-of-court settlement or special payment resulting from the suit.

Britain serves notice

LONDON (UPI) — Britain served notice Monday that the position of the white minority in Zimbabwe Rhodesia must be safeguarded in a future constitution for the new nation.

But Britain, which ruled Rhodesia as a colony, ruled out the veto right for the 220,000 whites contained in the present Salisbury constitution fashioned by the multiracial administration of Bishop Abel Muzurwa.

Camas Prairie, Halley, lower Wood River valley: Fair and warm through Wednesday. Highs both days 80 to 85. Overnight lows 35 to 40.

Synopsis: Although a minor upper air disturbance crossed Idaho Sunday, high pressure prevailing over the state — and producing fair skies and unseasonably warm temperatures — rebuilt on Monday.

As a result, temperatures were again in the 80s at most reporting stations under clear skies.

The only effects from the passage of the disturbance was a few showers in the panhandle and along the Idaho-Montana border.

On Monday morning, Stanley had the lowest temperature in Idaho at 24. Elk City reported 27 and Fairfield 29 while most other minimum readings were in the 40 degree range, although higher mountain valleys were down in the 20s.

The harvest outlook for the Magic Valley including haying and potatoes calls for continued good drying conditions through Saturday with warm, dry weather and light to moderate morning dew. Four-inch soil temperatures will remain above 45 degrees through today.

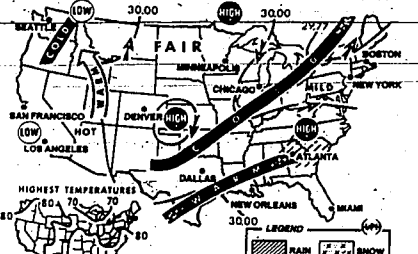

The spraying forecast calls for winds of 5 to 10 miles an hour during the day and at less than 5 mph nights and mornings. Pan evaporation is forecast at 25 inch today and Wednesday.

Payette and Caldwell were Idaho's warmest places Monday, reporting 91 degrees. Landmark's 22 was the coolest in the state.

The nation's hot spot was in California again, with Bakersfield and Fresno reporting 105 degrees. Gunnison, Colo., had the coolest, 29.

Castro orders Yanks freed

MIAMI (UPI) — Four Americans imprisoned in Cuba for more than a decade on political charges were freed late Monday and flown to the United States.

Cuban President Fidel Castro ordered the four prisoners released earlier Monday and the U.S. State Department sent a chartered plane to Cuba to pick them up. The plane returned to the United States at 5:40 p.m. EDT.

One of the four prisoners, Claudio Rodriguez Morales, a Puerto Rican fisherman jailed in 1966, boarded a commercial flight to Puerto Rico a few minutes after the chartered jet landed at Miami. The others were scheduled to fly north this morning.

U.S. government sources said Castro's move was in response to President Carter's grant of executive clemency last week to four Puerto Rican nationalists who got a hero's welcome on their return home. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the United States was "delighted" by the release of the Americans but did not consider it linked to the freeing of the Puerto Ricans.

The four Americans — including Lawrence Lunt, a CIA contract employee "imprisoned" since 1955 — were scheduled to fly to Miami in a U.S.-chartered aircraft Monday night.

Officials said the State Department received a note from Cuba's minister of foreign affairs relayed through the U.S. interest section in Havana at 11:15 a.m. indicating the Americans would be released.

Lunt, 55, a father of three from Saratoga, Wyo., was arrested in 1955 on espionage charges and has admitted providing the CIA with information.

The other Americans are: Juan Tur, 62, born in Tampa, Fla., who has served 15 years of a 30-year sentence for espionage. He has a sister living in New Jersey.

Morales, a fisherman from Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, arrested in 1966 and served 13 years of a 20-year sentence for smuggling political refugees out of Cuba.

"Everett Dennis Jackson, 38, shot down Dec. 29, 1968, by Cuban anti-aircraft fire in what was reportedly an attempt to photograph Cuban missile sites. He has relatives in Chicago and California.

Castro released the Americans a week after the four Puerto Ricans walked out of federal prisons after they had served 25 years or more for 1956 shooting attacks on the U.S. House and President Harry Truman's residence.

The State Department spokesman said, "The United States is delighted that they are being released." The four were held in Cuban prisons on charges the United States considered as political.

Celebration brings warnings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States, Egypt and Israel celebrated the first anniversary of the Camp David summit Monday, praising the progress of the past year but warning of the dangers that lie ahead.

"It's with a great sense of thanksgiving and confidence that I assess what has been done so far and what will be done in the future," Carter said at a White House ceremony marking the signing of Camp David's two frameworks for peace.

Joined by visiting Egyptian and Israeli officials on the South Lawn of the White House, Carter said "it is obvious that both countries, both peoples, both leaders are determined this process will be successful."

An upbeat Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said the gap that once divided Israel and Egypt "was wider than the gap that we have between us and the Palestinians when we talk now about autonomy."

"That's why I'm hopeful about it," Dayan said. But Egyptian Vice President Hosni Mubarak sounded a warning note, indirectly criticizing Israel's recent decision to let Jews buy Arab land on the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"We should refrain from any rash act that would jeopardize the prospects of peace at this crucial stage," Mubarak said. "Acts of defiance and negativism should be avoided."

Mubarak and Dayan, flanking Carter, spoke after high representatives of the United States, Israel and Egypt met in the White House Oval Office for about 15 minutes.

Young scoffs at Cuba fuss

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Outgoing U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young Monday dismissed the revelation that Soviet combat troops are stationed in Cuba as a political gambit by the Carter administration and said Sen. Edward Kennedy would probably not run for the presidency.

Young also said he had "no regrets" about his resignation following an unauthorized "talk" with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization and defended the meeting in a New York townhouse as having the healthy effect of opening up a fresh dialogue on the Middle East.

Kennedy his own chief spokesman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said Monday night that he speaks for himself on his possible presidential ambitions — not House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

O'Neill, long a political ally of Kennedy, said earlier he doubted that Kennedy would challenge President Carter for the Democratic nomination in 1980.

Kennedy gently chastised his old friend for the comment. "It's a very good friend," Kennedy told reporters outside the White House after an energy meeting. "I've expressed my thoughts. My views are probably the ones to think about."

O'Neill predicted that Carter will be nominated and will be opposed by Ronald Reagan.

Saying he had no inside information, O'Neill told reporters he doubted Kennedy would seek the nomination.

"The nominee will be Jimmy Carter," O'Neill said. "He will be fighting (Ronald) Reagan, who's got it sewed up" for the GOP nomination. As for Kennedy, D-Mass., the speaker said: "I think if he were a candidate he'd be out there organizing."

O'Neill noted that Kennedy has put together no campaign organization and has sent no advance organizers into the field. That simply is not the Kennedy style, the speaker said.

"Any organization out there is a rump organization, and that just isn't a Kennedy organization," he said.

While O'Neill said he would likely support Kennedy if he runs, he said he personally liked Carter, calling him "a brilliant man, highly intelligent," and said he was doing "as reasonably good a job" as any man could under the circumstances.

Kennedy has said he will decide by late this year whether to challenge Carter for the Democratic nomination. He said his decision will be based in part on Carter's handling of the economy.

In Providence, R.I., U.S. Ambassador-at-large Elliott Richardson said he expects Kennedy to seek the nomination and said he would be "a formidable challenger to President Carter."

Tax cut plan opposition speaks out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the interests of fighting inflation, congressional budget leaders Monday urged the House and Senate to reject proposals for a tax cut in 1980 or sharp increases in defense spending.

However, proponents of both those moves prepared to argue for them in floor fights during the next several days as Congress considers the 1980 federal budget.

Chairman Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, of the Senate Budget Committee told the Senate a significant tax cut now would aggravate inflation and delay plans to balance the budget in 1981.

It also would weaken confidence in the nation's resolve to fight inflation, and this in turn would weaken the value of other policies.

Muskie also told the Senate that "powerful lobbies" are advocating increases in spending over what his committee proposed, but that the public would have to pay for such increases "in higher taxes and greater inflation."

A similar warning was sounded by Muskie's counterpart in the House, Rep. Robert Gialma, D-Conn.

With that chamber also heading into debate on the budget, Gialma said spending restraint "is essential if we are to get a grip on inflation, which continues to erode the purchasing power of millions of Americans."

The Senate considered a $54.1 billion budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, while the House took up a $58.7 billion proposal. The Senate version is $11 billion more than Congress targeted last spring, and the House version is about $15.7 billion more.

Both budget committees recommended that taxes not be cut until 1982, although each envisioned reconsideration before that if the recession gets significantly worse.

A man goes on trial with the ERA

There are few times in a man's life that he will be forced to choose between two dearly held beliefs.

Such a decision is facing Federal Judge Marion Callister.

He is being asked to rule on a lawsuit of national importance concerning the Equal Rights Amendment.

For most judges the ERA does not pose dramatic conflicts.

But Callister is a member of the Mormon Church, which has officially denounced the ERA.

As a devout Mormon, Callister believes that the positions the Church takes are equal to the truth. Yet as a dedicated federal judge, he must believe that to decide the case fairly he must set aside his religious beliefs and decide the issue on its legal merits alone.

No doubt the decision will be a difficult one for Callister. But it is one he should be allowed to make on his own. The efforts of the Justice Department to have Callister removed from the case would make sense only if Callister had proven himself in the past to be incapable of separating his religious beliefs from his duties as a judge.

Callister should not be judged guilty of prejudice before the evidence is presented. The evidence will be forthcoming with Callister's handling of the case.

If Callister disqualifies himself from the case, he will be exonerated from confusing his duty to his Church with his duty to his position. If he chooses to stay with the case, his handling of it may give some indication of where his deepest allegiances lie.

The ERA is not the only issue in this case. Judge Callister is on trial as well.

Extremes exist on both sides

Idaho trail bike riders proved themselves as unreasonable as the extreme lock-it-up conservationists last week.

At a Bureau of Land Management hearing in Twin Falls on a proposed land designation plan for the north rim of the Snake River Canyon, officials of the Idaho and Magic Valley Trail Machine Associations criticized the BLM for closing 470 acres of the area in question.

They levelled a blast at the BLM despite the fact that the plan the BLM is proposing would leave 4,950 acres open to use by trail bike riders.

In other words, the bike riders were upset because under the plan they would be allowed to use only 90-some percent of the land in question.

The 470 acres that would be closed is land right along the rim between the canyons called Devil's Corral and Vineyard Lake, both environmentally sensitive areas.

There is no question that motorized recreation would have a greater adverse impact on the wildlife of those spring canyons than non-motorized recreation. Those unique wildlife havens should be preserved. If trail bike riders want to enjoy those canyons, they can leave their bikes near the canyons and walk in. If they do take to their feet, they might even see some wildlife, an experience they are not likely to have if they ride their bikes into the canyons.

We find the position that motorized recreation should be allowed anywhere non-motorized travel is allowed as unreasonable as the extreme conservationist position that all land which is now wilderness should remain wilderness forever.

Disposable heroes

BOSTON — It was a perfect weekend for generation watchers at Forest Hills. There, in less than 48 hours, Billie Jean King, 35, was beaten by Chris Evert Lloyd, 24, who was then beaten by Tracy Austin, 16.

Christie put the whole thing into perspective when she benignly patted her teenage victor on the head.

I couldn't help but notice that Tracy Austin displayed an utterly uncomplicated determination to get into first place, to become number one. Nor could I help noticing the crowd. It changed allegiances, sided with the contender, grew more and more excited at the prospect of unseating a champion and crowning a new one.

The whole thing reminded me of a suspicion I've had for some time: that sports contests have become a kind of model for the rest of our culture. No, I am not just talking about winners and losers. I'm talking about living in the age of expendability.

Not long ago, in discussing this with friends, we came up with the wry notion that if you become truly successful in America you have two options: You can die immediately or become a has-been.

This is not exactly a comfort to the contenders, but there you are. Our country markets has been — as if we were doing piece-rate work for the manufacturers of Trivia games. We churn out Golden Oldies and Where Are They Now's.

Andy Warhol — another Golden Oldie — once said that someday everyone in America would be famous for ten minutes. He was wrong. But someday, at this rate, no one will be number one for more than 10 minutes.

It's easy to understand why athletes are replaced like new parts. They're in a business that depends on the human body. But it is clear why this happens in fields that depend on the mind, talent, or even, for heaven's sakes, experience. And I wonder if it doesn't have something to do with...

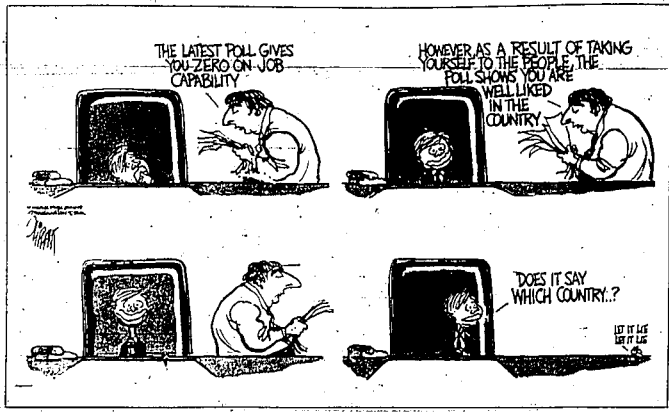

People have become our products. The "stars" — whether they are athletic or political, literary people or entertainers — are marketed and marketed, hustled and hustlers.

It doesn't take a whole evening in front of the tube to see that brewers are selling ball-players, not beer. Similarly, in Hollywood, the industry wants to sell stars, not movies. In most places, they still force theater owners to bid on movies blind — without seeing much more than the cast.

Meanwhile, in New York, the publishing people are selling authors, not novels. They push "a" Taylor Caldwell or "a" Robinson, a byline and not a name. But a product line.

In politics, of course, they package. We know all this, but what we don't know is that there may be an inverse relationship between exposure and endurance — publicity and productivity, selling and sales credibility. The natural obsolescence of an athlete becomes the built-in obsolescence of every Number One.

Admittedly it takes a lot longer to master politics than a two-handed backswing. There aren't many

George Will

Generic labels offend

By GEORGE F. WILL

ASPEN, Colorado — Here I sit, blind to a mountain setting of incomparable beauty, lost in contemplation of a catsup bottle. Or, more precisely, of an ugly (to me) label on a catsup bottle.

It is special catsup; or perhaps it is especially ordinary. It has a plain white label with severe black print that says, simply, "Catsup." Smaller but legible print announces: "This catsup may vary in color or consistency. It is suitable for everyday use."

I had lived in happy ignorance of "generic products." These are products sold under no brand name. Out here in the wild (well, sort of) West and, for all I know, elsewhere, generic products are popular. But, they are, to me, puzzling.

I consider this phrase on the catsup label: "suitable for everyday use." I want to conform to the contemporary idea of the Rational Consumer, so I wonder: What does "everyday use" preclude? Should this catsup be used on the Fourth of July? Should the label be read to imply: "Do not use this catsup on Christmas and other religious festivals?" (Perhaps that is academic. Who uses catsup on Christmas?)

Squinting at labels in the generic foods section of supermarkets, and taking copious notes, does one's reputation for letters concerning the use of a whole new universe of nuance. For example: "These mushrooms may vary in color, size and maturity. They are especially suitable for everyday use, for cooking purposes." Not just suitable, especially suitable.

Evidently the generic mushrooms are better as mushrooms than the generic paper towels are as paper towels. (Generic towels are suitable, but not "especially" so, for everyday use.) And the mushrooms beat the dickens out of the generic syrup, which is described, dimly, as just "acceptable" for everyday use.

The label on the canned corn says the corn is suitable for "regular home meals." That leaves the Will family out. They have had only highly irregular meals since the children materialized.

Granted, generic products are, on average, 37 percent cheaper than national brand-name products. Economy is especially important in Aspen's City Market, where prices give new meaning to the phrase "Rocky Mountain High." Nevertheless, finding myself puzzled in the generic foods section, I asked myself another question: Who uses catsup in a similar situation, and I knew not one to access a store employee with the question, "Who makes your generic catsup?"

Who he replied with ill-founded confidence, it says right there on the label: Topco Associates of Skokie, Illinois. He spoke like the Somerset Maugham character who was always throwing out statements with the take-it-or-leave-it casualness of Euclid making observations about geometry.

I sounded like a NIT (Nader-in-Training). "All the label says," I insisted, "is that the catsup is 'distributed' by the Valu Time division of Topco." Furthermore, this label, which is distributed by a so-called straightforward, contains a circle which looks, to the casual observer, like some sort of official seal. In the middle of the "circle" are the words "Valu Time." Around the circumference of the circle are the portentous words: "Specification Approved." "Specification Approved." That is, I'll bet, generic guff.

Style, someone stylish once said, is the art of omission. Perhaps the catsup label is surprisingly stylish. I have an awful feeling that the label is supposed to be, in some socially responsible sense, the acme of good taste.

Tastes, I know, differ. "To a toad, what is beauty?" asked Voltaire. "A female with two popteyes, a wide mouth, yellow belly and spotted back." Maybe generic labels are beautiful to people who live upright, sober and godly lives. To me they are as ugly as toads.

I know, intellectually, even if I do not accept, emotionally, the fact that the laws of neither man nor God nor nature decree that a catsup label should be colorful and distinctive, and familiar because of advertising. And perhaps I don't care if my catsup is lurking in the pantry, threatening to vary in color or consistency. Perhaps I don't even care who makes the "specification approved" stuff. Nevertheless, I am not sure I can remain First. It is only a matter of time before supermarkets crank up advertising campaigns to brag that their generic brands are better than their competitors' generic brands. Furthermore, what is the point of being an American if supermarket shelves are going to become banana?

The trouble with everyday life is its ordinariness. If this is to remain the greatest country in the world, American catsup must rise above that.

Twin Falls Clinic should not be a mere springboard

Editor, Times-News:

There has recently been such a barrage of letters condemning the Twin Falls Clinic for their actions against Drs. Miles and Geist that I feel obligated to come to the Clinic's defense.

Probably if I were an expectant mother, I would not feel as I do but I am obviously not and I do feel that the Clinic is justified in their actions.

It is extremely difficult for a young doctor just out of school to equip an office and to survive the long stage of establishing a clientele to say nothing of trying to collect all of the slow paying bills.

Even some doctors who are not recently out of school find it advantageous to have an established business and join up with the Clinic and the many advantages which they provide.

A few years ago, Buhl discovered this out when Dr. Smith, already established in Buhl and filling a much needed spot in our community, left his entire practice here and joined the Twin Falls Clinic where he is apparently now enjoying a very profitable and pleasant relationship.

It seems a little unjust to let the Clinic give space and equipment to young doctor and then have them use this as a springboard to starting their own practice.

Here is what I would very much like to say:

Chinese invasion of Vietnam looms again

By KEYES BEECH

© The Los Angeles Times

HONG KONG — If the Chinese do try to teach Vietnam another "lesson" — and the best-informed people in Hong Kong say there is a greater than 50-50 chance that they will — the consequences here likely to be more serious and far-reaching than the border war that was fought earlier this year.

Western intelligence sources say that the Chinese military buildup along the border has already begun. Hanoi has changed Peking's wording said to be grossly inflated.

In any event, the numbers are unimportant. Manpower is the least of China's problems. What is important is whether the Chinese intend to send their troops across the border.

If they do, as analysts here see it, the chances of Soviet involvement will be much greater than before. Another invasion would also raise the question of what, if anything, the United States should do other than wring its hands and urge a peaceful solution.

Military analysts say the Chinese could limit themselves to another border war. But they fail to see what China would gain by such a strategy.

"The first lesson didn't take," a highly placed source said. "If anything, the Vietnamese are more defiant than before, perhaps because they are better prepared. Therefore, if there is a next time, the Chinese are going to have to do more to make their lesson stick. Otherwise, there is no point to the exercise."

By "more," the source meant that the Chinese will have to carry the war down from the mountains, beat the country into the densely populated Red River-Delta and threaten Hanoi.

The question is whether Moscow could afford to "stand idly by with arms folded," to use a Communist cliché, while all this is happening, assuming the Chinese can break through the Vietnamese defenses.

The Chinese appear to be confident that the Russians will do what they did the last time — nothing. But Western experts are not all that sure.

"I don't think the Russians are going to war over Vietnam, one way or the other," a source said. "And I don't anticipate wholesale crossings of the Sino-Soviet border. But the Russians are going to have to do more than mount an emergency airlift if they don't want to get laughed out of Southeast Asia."

One thing that the Russians could do short of massive intervention would be to threaten the destruction of a friendly government in Hanoi would be a different ball game.

China's invasion of Vietnam in February was conspicuously lacking in air action, presumably because the Chinese did not want to risk their big but antiquated air force against Vietnam's smaller but better-equipped and better-trained fliers.

Emphasizing the difference between then and now, Western analysts now believe that they know why the Russians did not respond more forcefully to the invasion in February: the Chinese deliberately advertised in advance that theirs was a punitive action of limited duration with limited objectives. And they withdrew 30 days after they went in.

Given that kind of situation, the Russians could afford to stay out and make points for their "show of restraint." But a protracted war that threatened the destruction of a friendly government in Hanoi would be a different ball game.

"We are hearing the same arguments against a Chinese invasion today that we heard last winter, and they all make good sense," one analyst said. "But China went ahead anyway — and I think they'll do it again."

Among the questions arguing against an invasion: Why should China risk war with the Soviet Union? Why tarnish its image by attacking a smaller neighbor? Why wage war when the emphasis at home is on modernization?

Peking views things differently — especially Senoiv Vice Premier Dong Xiangping (Teng Hsiao-ping), who has taken a good deal of criticism for insisting on the earlier invasion. As he and like-minded Old Guard leaders see it, China cannot tolerate defiance from Vietnam, once a vassal state and a Chinese province.

Moreover, Vietnam must be punished for its ingratitude in allying itself with China's mortal enemy, the Soviet Union, after all that China did to bring about the Vietnamese revolution.

The key to Chinese strategy in Indochina is to keep alive the fallen Cambodian leader, Pol Pot, and his Khmer Rouge forces, who are still fighting the Vietnamese.

Hanoi now has about 180,000 Soviet troops committed to Cambodia, and China would like to keep them there. "What the Chinese want to do is bleed Hanoi to death," one observer said.

Once the dry season arrives, around the first of November, Vietnam is expected to launch an all-out offensive to eliminate the Pol Pot forces. By that time, if it has not already done so, Peking will have to make up its mind whether to move in or stay out.

Atheist sues to block papal mass planned in Washington

Jon Murray, mother Madalyn Murray O'Hair outline suit filed in federal court

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair and her son said Tuesday they intend to file a federal court suit to stop Pope John Paul II from saying mass on the Washington Mall during his upcoming visit to the United States.

Mrs. O'Hair and Jon Garth Murray said the suits mailed last week to the U.S. District Court in Washington argue that the mass would violate constitutional principles of separation of church and state.

"We feel the pope's visit does not have a secular purpose, that it does foster government entanglement in religion, and that the pope's visit does have a purpose of advancing not only religion, but the Roman Catholic religion specifically," Murray said.

"It's time somebody said something about the mass. It's stupid, it's archaic," Mrs. O'Hair said. "It's time for all people to abandon this kind of reliance on this mystical ceremony."

She contended the pope's visit was timed to enhance the intended presidential candidacy of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and to encourage passage of an amendment to the U.S. Constitution prohibiting abortions.

"When the pope comes here to destroy the Constitution of the United States with that right-to-life stuff, I think he should be stopped," Mrs. O'Hair told a news conference at the American Atheist Center.

"I think he is a vicious and unprincipled man, and I have no respect for the pope at any level," she said. "He has said the place of women is in the home and in the kitchen and pregnant."

"He has made some very strong statements against abortion and birth control," she said. "He has put women back in a position of servitude throughout the world."

Murray and Mrs. O'Hair also said plans are being made for a protest march and picket line at the pope's Oct. 5 appearance in Chicago.

Senate approves veteran aid bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Monday approved a bill to give veterans, including those who may have developed cancer from atomic bomb tests in the 1950s, the right to go to court if the Veterans Administration rejects their claims for compensation.

Under current law, veterans have no recourse in their attempts to get benefits or medical help if the VA refuses to approve their claims.

Decisions by the VA — the third largest agency of the federal government — are not now subject to judicial review.

The bill was approved by voice vote without dissent and sent to the House for consideration.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., who introduced the legislation, said the bill would set "a historic precedent by correcting this inequity which has reduced the 29 million American veterans to the status of second-class citizen."

Under the legislation, veterans would be able to appeal to federal courts unfavorable decisions on eligibility for disability and pension benefits, educational assistance and access to VA medical care.

At present, appeals are decided by the VA's board of veterans' appeals. If the ruling goes against the veteran, he has no other recourse.

Veterans, such as radiation victims, who have been turned down by the VA could appeal the rulings if they applied within two years after the bill was enacted, under terms of the bill.

Those who have received compensation could file with the VA for additional benefits based on new evidence of causes or worsening of the illness. They could appeal to the courts if turned down by the VA.

Although most court challenges are expected to come from disability, pension and medical care cases, radiation victims of the Nevada atomic bomb tests are certain to file challenges in the courts.

So are the victims of the defoliant Agent Orange in Vietnam and other chemical testing and veterans denied benefits for psychological ailments blamed on the Vietnam War.

In addition, the bill would require the VA to publish its proposed rules and regulations so other agencies do and lift the current $10 ceiling on the fees a veteran may pay a lawyer to represent him.

Congressional veto on FTC work nearer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House committee Monday approved a bill designed to force a vote on whether to give Congress veto power over Federal Trade Commission rulings on such consumer subjects as funeral homes and used cars.

The measure passed by the Appropriations Committee, however, was weaker than an all-out attack on the agency approved by a subcommittee last week.

Under the measure approved Monday, the FTC would be given enough money to continue operating for only another 45 days after the new business year begins Oct. 1. Other government agencies were given enough money to continue for 90 days past the end of the fiscal year in lieu of regular appropriation bills.

During the 45 days, the FTC would be told it could not issue any new rules such as those covering children's advertising, how used cars are sold or other matters — and that it could not "infringe any new activities."

Chairman Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., said the real intent of the measure is to force a vote on legislation authorizing the FTC's activities. That authorizing legislation has been tied up for three years in a fight over whether Congress should have the right to veto various FTC projects on a one-by-one basis.

Pressure to enforce 55 mph limit sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration asked Congress Monday to increase pressure on the states to enforce the 55 mph speed limit and thereby save more gasoline.

But the administration proposal was far short of a new compliance schedule proposed by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. He called the administration "timid."

John Claybrook, administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said there needs to be a "delicate balance" in the federal-state effort to get motorists to accept the 55 mph limit. In place of the higher speeds that prevailed before the energy crisis.

Under present federal law, all states are supposed to be able to report at the end of the year that 30 percent of their motorists are complying with the 55 mph limit. Failure to meet that standard could result in a 5 percent cut in federal highway funds.

The required compliance level goes to 40 percent in 1980 and reaches 70 percent in 1983, but a bill sponsored by Metzenbaum would up the schedule to 75 percent in 1980 and reach 90 percent in 1983. It would also increase the penalty by withholding 35 percent of highway funds.

Ms. Claybrook, testifying before a Senate Energy subcommittee, proposed that the present schedule remain unchanged for 1979 and 1980, but be increased by 10 percent in each of the following years, to a total of 80 percent in 1983.

She also noted the enforcement problem is more difficult for some states — particularly in the West — than for others.

Ms. Claybrook said five states — Texas, Indiana, Missouri, New Mexico and Wyoming — have not reached the 30 percent compliance and face possible 5 percent cut in federal highway money if they do not meet that standard by the end of the year.

Reagan keeps his clout

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Ronald Reagan has shattered any suspicions among his rivals for the Republican presidential nomination that the former California governor has lost popularity among his homestate followers.

Reagan forces at the California Republican Convention Sunday handed a setback to one of those rivals, John Connally, by voting 62-27 against a resolution favoring an end to California's present winner-take-all primary.

California's block of 168 delegates is the richest prize of the presidential primary season next year and Reagan told reporters he favored the winner-take-all concept because it gave the winner "clout" at the convention.

Justice Brennan suffers slight stroke

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice William Brennan, 73, suffered a "slight" stroke Sept. 4, impairing the use of his right arm and hand, but returned to work this week, it was disclosed Monday.

Brennan, oldest of the nine justices, is taking a resolution favoring use of the hand and is in general "good health," according to Dr. Freeman Cary, attending physician at the Capitol.

Flight into record book his goal

EAST HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Charles Shattuck took his first flight back in 1939, a short hop to Boston to see "Wrong Way" Corrigan of aviation fame.

Four decades later, the 62-year-old East Hartford sheet metal worker flew 23,349 miles to 18 different cities in five days — and, he hopes, into the Guinness Book of World Records.

"Toward the end of the trip the United States seemed as though it was getting bigger and bigger," Shattuck recalled Monday. "The country seemed awful long, 10 times bigger than it did at the beginning."

Shattuck took off on the attempt to set a world's record for continuous air flights a week ago, leaving Boston's Logan International Airport where he returned over the weekend — 122 hours and 17 minutes later.

The flights, all on the same airline, took him to 32 cities — 18 different ones — and with the use of six airline discount coupons cost him about $1,900.

"One thing I went for was a record which, I think I have," said the white-haired employee of the Pratt &

Whitney Aircraft Group. "Everyone I talked to, they all thought it was fantastic! I was doing it."

"I think it was an achievement," he said. "I think it was even better than taking a vacation."

Young quotes dad's advice

NEW YORK (UPI) — Outgoing U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young says his dad gave him the advice that got him started as a diplomat — and that was because the other kids were bigger than he was.

Young was sharing the experience as guest storyteller Monday with callers to "Children's Story," a recorded announcement program sponsored by the New York Telephone Co. saluting the International Year of the Child.

"Do you know when I started being an ambassador?" It was in grammar school," Young said.

"I was always smaller than the others in my class and I knew I couldn't settle arguments by fighting. But I wasn't a coward either."

"My father told me 'Don't get mad get smart.' I learned to talk and so should you."

Young said his father's advice taught him that "Either you can agitate and get people mad or you can use your head and get people to talk. That's what being ambassador to the United Nations is all about."

Egypt invites boy, 12, for week

EASLEY, S.C. (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat's invitation to visit Egypt with all expenses paid came at a time Sam Brown's family thought the 12-year-old schoolboy was grasping for an unreachable dream.

"Don't build up your hopes," Donald and Sybil Brown cautioned Sam as he sent Sadat a letter last winter, expressing a desire to see the Arab nation.

But the dream came true with Friday's mail.

"I am delighted to inform you that an invitation has been extended to you by the Ministry of Egypt for a one-week visit," a letter from the Egyptian government tourist office in New York said.

The letter did not mention expenses and caused some concern for the Browns, who have been faced with monumental financial problems in recent months.

Shortly after Sam mailed his letter, their mobile home in Elberton, Ga., was destroyed by fire. Sam rescued his father from the flames by kicking a door open.

Brown has been out of work for 14 months with a back injury and Mrs. Brown had to quit her job because of bursts, diabetes and high blood pressure. Their 4-year-old daughter has been in the hospital twice with pneumonia.

"It's been rough for us," Mrs. Brown said. "There were many times when we didn't know where the next meal was coming from."

"We don't know how we'll get proper clothes for Sam to wear to Egypt, but things have always worked out. They will this time, too."

Models protest, cover up

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Nude models for San Jose State University art classes are engaging in a coverup until they get a pay raise and some heat.

The models, who pose for 20 sculpture, painting and drawing classes on the San Jose campus each week, left their clothes on Monday to protest their demands for a $2 an hour pay hike — from $4 to $6 — and warmer rooms to pose in.

"Modeling is a physically demanding job which is seasonal, part-time only and has no paid benefits," complained Hal Lombardi, a spokesman for the 29-member South Bay Models Union.

And, he says, it's hard to do that when your underpaid, naked and shivering.

Art professor Maynard Stewart, who supports the models in their protest, said the union is the only animals capable of contracting leprosy.

Source of tainted feed tracked down

BILLINGS, Mont. (UPI) — The "probable source of chicken feed contamination by the chemical PCB has been found at the Pierce Packing Co. in Billings, the firm's president reported late Sunday.

A back-up transformer located in an isolated storage area was found to be ruptured and drained of a quantity of coolant that contained the poisonous chemical, Ken Poggli said.

An investigation team from the Food and Drug Administration was advised of the finding, Poggli said in a prepared statement.

An estimated 400,000 chickens in Idaho and Utah contaminated by PCB were slaughtered last week, on orders from federal officials. The birds had been given the feed from Pierce Packing.

Poggli said Pierce is recalling "any of our affected animal feed that is in current distribution."

"We plan to process our animal feed but will not sell or ship any of this product until we have received a permitted tolerance level from the FDA," he added.

Poggli's statement was issued after the "entire situation" was reviewed during a Sunday meeting Poggli had with officials from several federal agencies, including the FDA and the Agriculture Department.

Referring to the transformer, Poggli said it appeared the coolant had leaked to a nearby drain.

"Drainage from this line is further processed through a treatment operation in the incinerator department where sludge is removed and added to inedible, rendered byproduct. We are surmising the rupture was caused by a loading vehicle moving in the isolated meat-byproducts area," he said.

"The accident was not reported. We do not know when the accident occurred."

Poggli said Pierce has contracted with Western Environmental Services of Portland, Ore., to clean up the affected area and remove the transformer "from the premises."

He said further that meals processed at the Pierce plant "not at all implicated in this problem."

Mountain states back nuke plants

PHOENIX (UPI) — Had residents of the eight Rocky Mountain states voted in July on whether to permit construction of new nuclear plants, they would have voted yes, an Arizona-polling firm says.

A majority of those polled in each of the eight states said they would have voted for construction of a new nuclear plant in their state had the issue been on the ballot, said the Behavior Research Center.

The center conducts the independent and non-partisan Rocky Mountain Poll.

"In some states such as Arizona, Idaho, Utah and Wyoming, the vote would have been lopsided in favor of construction, said Earl de Berge, research director for the center.

"On the other hand, a more closely divided public was found in Colorado, Montana, Nevada and New Mexico," he said.

The center asked the same question in an April poll, de Berge said. The July survey showed "a modest increase in the proportion of the public in favor of permitting nuclear plants to be built in their states," he said.

"For example, in April a majority of Montanans surveyed were in opposition to permitting new nuclear plant construction, but by July their position had reversed.

"Opposition to construction also declined in Arizona, Idaho and Utah, remained relatively unchanged in Colorado, but increased 13 points in Wyoming and seven points in Nevada and New Mexico," de Berge said.

Attitudes toward new nuclear plants varied among economic, sex, age, and political groups, he said.

"The proportion who favor construction is much stronger among middle and upper income groups, men, persons over 35 years of age, and among Republicans and Independents," said de Berge.

The survey asked the question, "If a new nuclear power plant were proposed for your state, would you vote for or against allowing construction to begin?" The state-by-state responses in percentages and opinions: those with no opinion — were:

- Arizona, 57 for, 29 against.
- Colorado, 59 for, 27 against.
- Idaho, 68 for, 21 against.
- Montana, 55 for, 31 against.
- Nevada, 54 for, 39 against.
- New Mexico, 53 for, 36 against.
- Utah, 55 for, 19 against.
- Wyoming, 61 for, 26 against.

Lamm listed among picks

DENVER (UPI) — A national news magazine has named Colo. Gov. Richard Lamm as a possible running mate for the Kennedy 1980 presidential ticket and Lamm said that offer would be difficult to refuse.

The Sept. 14 issue of U.S. News and World Report predicted the Colorado chief executive would be one of five top contenders for the No. 2 slot with possible presidential candidate Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass. Others named include Democratic Senators Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, Dale Bumpers of Arkansas, Sam Nunn of Georgia and Vice President Walter Mondale.

Lamm said Sunday "it would be hard to say no" if the call came, but he admitted he really does not want to live in Washington.

The Democratic governor told a Denver television station (KMGH-TV) reporter the offer would be "very flattering, but I am very doubtful that I would want to do it, or that I would even get a chance to do it."

Court clears power plants

HELENA, Mont. (UPI) — The Montana Supreme Court Monday approved plans for Colstrip Three and Four, a $1.5 billion coal-fired electrical generating complex in the southeastern corner of the state proposed to augment energy supplies throughout the northwestern U.S.

The massive project has been the subject of hearings and litigation since 1973.

Spokesmen for an environmental group and the Northern Cheyenne Indian Tribe, opponents of the project, were not immediately available to say whether they would appeal the ruling to federal courts.

A consortium of utility companies building the project includes Montana Power, Puget Sound Power and Light, Portland General Electric, Washington Water Power, and Pacific Power and Light Co.

Fire damages hotel

SPOKANE (UPI) — A fire believed started by a careless smoker caused minor damage to the Pedicor Hotel in downtown Spokane Sunday.

The smoky fire started on the fifth floor of the old hotel and was confined to the floor and walls of the apartment and to the ceiling of an apartment below.

Negotiators leave talks

SPOKANE (UPI) — Negotiators for the Spokane city school district walked out on a negotiating session Sunday night.

Teacher-union officials said the action took place without the district informing the mediator or the teachers bargaining unit.

A teachers' spokeswoman said the action came after the district asked for and received a new, total package offer from the teachers.

The teachers said the package, given the district at 10 p.m., included some changes in original offers.

The teachers waited until about 12:21 a.m. Monday and then were told by the mediator that the district had walked out on the meeting.

The three week old strike has kept 28,000 students out of school.

A teachers spokeswoman said the bargaining unit was "appalled by the irregular behavior of the district."

She added that the district has been telling the public that it has counter-offers to make but none was brought forward during the meeting.

Meanwhile, the teachers plan to pursue their court battle with the district over district plans to hire substitute teachers at a higher wage than teachers make.

The teachers claim the action is illegal.

Fall quarter opens

CHENEY, Wash. (UPI) — The fall quarter began at Eastern Washington University Monday.

Officials said the enrollment will not be known until the end of late registration but indications are that enrollment will be up about 300 students from last fall when 7,000 students started classes.

Collision kills two

ROYAL CITY, Wash. (UPI) — Two Othello, Wash., residents died in a head-on collision near Royal City over the weekend.

Washington State Troopers identified the victims as Steven Meyette, 22, and Edna Sturgess, 44.

Officials said Meyette was southbound and Mrs. Sturgess was northbound when their two cars collided head on at the intersection of two streets.

What's what

Man who never lived still receives mail

London's Scotland Yard employs a secretary to handle incoming correspondence addressed to a man who never lived—Sherlock Holmes.

It is also a matter of record that the Inland Revenue have been known to be unable to accept applications for donations that some men have bet and lost their wives in the action.

Lenders for years have included on their credit application blank the query: Do you own or rent? And for years they've held the private conviction that people who own their own homes are less likely than renters to move out without paying their debts. However, research fails to turn up any hard statistics that such be the case. It's a reasonable prejudice, maybe. But the facts just don't support it.

LUCIFERS

Q. How come the old-timey matches were nicknamed "Lucifers"?
 A. The meaning of Lucifer-Satan's name before the fall was "bringer of light."

Q. How many real Stradivari violins are there worldwide? And how much is one worth?
 A. About 600 have been identified. Selling price of each starts at $200,000 and goes up, up, up.

Q. What makes goldfish gold?
 A. Now there you have me. Can only report that in their wild they're greenish-brown. And when the captive gold ones are returned to the wild, they become greenish-brown again.

THE WANDERJAHN

Every generation has what Goethe called the Wanderjah, the year of wandering. It's the time when so many men and women, too, of late—light out to drift. The hoboes of the 1930s. The soldiers of the '40s. The Beatniks of the '50s. The Hippies of the '60s. Cults and causes, depressions and wars flow into one another. And the travelers take their irresponsible trips with whatever suitable reasons the times afford. But they go. The way the cowboys went westerly in the 1870s. They go. It's a rare old man who doesn't have in his memory at least one Wanderjah.

Patients complain about office waits

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© The Chicago Tribune
N.Y. News Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for STEAMED IN STONINGTON, who was told to undress. I sat for the two hours he spent cooling his heels in the outer office.

Listen to this: I made an appointment for a routine physical six months in advance. When I arrived, the waiting room was packed with patients. An hour later, I was called into an examining room and was told to undress. I did. I sat there unclothed for 40 minutes until his majesty, the doctor, entered!

As soon as I was on the examining table, his telephone rang. The doctor said, "Excuse me," and proceeded to talk to another doctor about a business deal. They talked for 10 minutes, after which he phoned his secretary and asked her to call yet another doctor.

I lay there seething with resentment while my doctor told the second doctor what the first doctor had told him about their "tax tion, after which the doctor prescribed medication for high blood pressure. Believe me, I know what caused it!

STEAMED IN LONG BEACH
DEAR STEAMED: My mail reflects a great deal of sympathy for STEAMED. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: We had a doctor in Falls Church, Va., who never overbooked appointments. We never had to wait more than five or 10 minutes to see him. He had an excellent practice, and was so conscientious he refused to take a new patient unless he had time. (He referred them to a colleague.)

In Florida, it's another story. My husband had a 2 p.m. appointment. At 4 p.m. he was still waiting. He approached the nurse and asked, "Do I have to wait until the doctor sees all these other people?" "There were about 10 people waiting," the nurse replied. "You CERTAINLY do." With that, my husband walked out!

STEAMED IN DAYTONA BEACH
DEAR ABBY: I gave my doctor a taste of his own medicine a few years back. He used to keep me waiting for hours before I could get in to see him.

I was plenty annoyed, but I didn't want to change doctors because I had gone to him for years, he had all my old records and X-rays, and I thought I might as well live with the devil I knew rather than the devil I didn't know.

Anyway, when it came time to pay him, I made HIM wait for his money.

I never got me in any quicker, but I felt better about having to wait.

GOT EVEN IN IDAHO

DEAR ABBY: I worked for a doctor for six years. When he had two examining rooms, two appointments were booked for the same time. When he added two more examining rooms, four appointments were made for the same time. His appointments were booked 15 minutes apart.

In my association with other doctors' receptionists, I learned that they all worked on the same principle — the number of appointments booked for a given time depended on the number of examining rooms the doctor had.

I have suffered this fate as a patient. I suppose there are exceptions if you are lucky enough to find a doctor who is more interested in his patients than in their money.

Don't use my name. I may have to go back to work again.

NO SIGN IN N.J.

DEAR ABBY: I have a system I use to beat the "waiting game." I always ask for the first appointment of the day when I want an appointment with a doctor, dentist or beauty operator. I am never kept waiting.

It never fails.

MR. AND MRS. WESLEY GIFFORD

Francis-Gifford

WENDELL — Nadine Francis of Wendell and Wesley Alan Gifford of Jerome exchanged wedding vows Aug. 11 in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple with elder Fred Boyer officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John K. Francis of Wendell and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gifford of Jerome.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Robert Stevens and Mrs. Dale Leatherby, sisters of the bride.

Steven Orchard was best man, Groomsman was Lane Perme, the bridegroom's cousin.

A reception was held in the Wendell LDS church on Aug. 12.

Lorraine Sites attended the guest book.

The gift table attendants were Tammy Anderson, Mrs. Ed Tarter, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Ann Gifford, the bridegroom's sister-in-law, and Lana Bodily, Justin and Eric Tarter, nephews of the bridegroom, carried gifts.

Mrs. William Rappleye, the bride's aunt, and Mrs. Frank Perme, the bridegroom's aunt, served the cake and punch.

Special guests at the wedding and reception were David Francis of Brookings, S.D.; Mr. and Mrs. John Francis Jr. of Leland, Miss.; Mrs. Robert Stevens of Portland; Mrs. Dale Leatherby of Salt Lake City; and Francis Hult of Terreton, the bride's grandfather.

Background music at the reception was provided by Maurine Bevington, Mrs. Frank Nelson, Steven Smith, David Francis and Robin Chandler.

The program master of ceremonies was William M. Rappleye, the bride's uncle. Mrs. Darvie Gorliant, the bride's aunt, and Mrs. Melvin Brown, the bride's cousin, sang a duet. Ann Lorraine Smith played a piano solo. Mrs. Robert Stevens, the bride's sister, sang a solo.

Everett Cox gave an original poem. Mark Francis, the bride's brother, sang a solo. Mrs. Dale Leatherby and Mark Francis sang a duet.

The couple will reside in Jerome.

Dr. Lamb

Heart attack with few symptoms

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
(Newspaper Enterprise Association)

Dear Dr. Lamb,

Is it possible to have a myocardial infarction and have pain only in the shoulder, side of the neck and arm? Also fluttering and hard beating of the heart without chest pain. It was so diagnosed but my husband has doubts that it was a heart attack because in the seven years since I had this I haven't had another attack. Thank God! I've had a few symptoms that I thought were an erratic heartbeat with hurting around the jaw and neck. My electrocardiogram shows I have an abnormal heartbeat and left ventricular stagnation, but I usually feel well for a woman of 71. I take medicine for high blood pressure. My father suffered a fatal stroke.

Dear Reader,

You are right to be thankful that you haven't had any further attacks. Yes, you can very definitely have a heart attack manifested with only pain in the jaw, neck or shoulder or arm region.

In fact, there are many people who have heart attacks who have no significant symptoms at the time the attack occurs. Sometimes they may have mild indigestion or some non-specific symptom that's so innocuous that they're not aware they're having an abnormal heartbeat. Heart irregularities which you describe as fluttering commonly occur in the presence of heart attacks. Heart pain often is referred to the arm and there may not be any pain in the chest when you have pain in the arm or the jaw.

It's rather interesting that women are more inclined to have angina pain with disease of the coronary arteries than men. It seems like men are a little more inclined to have a clear-cut heart attack with the symptoms we usually ascribe to it, and women are more inclined to have transitory chest pains without heart attacks. Of course, that's not a hard and fast rule at all.

To give you more information on what you might expect as a result of disease of the coronary arteries, I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-10, Heart Attack, Myocardial Infarction, Angina Pectoris. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

It's important that you have a regular evaluation of your medical status and that you continue to take medicine to control your high blood pressure. Many people who have had serious heart trouble are able to live normal lives with a normal life span. Such individuals usually improve their lifestyle to enable this outcome.

Standouts

Carol Seddon, daughter of Frances Seddon of Filer, assistant professor of medical record science at Boise State University, was elected 1979-80 president-elect of the Treasure Valley Medical Record Association. She has also been appointed as one of Idaho's delegates to the national convention of the American Medical Record Association in Washington, D.C. Mrs. Seddon has also been appointed chairman of the Idaho Medical Record Association's Legal and Legislative Committee for 1979-80.

Mrs. Lois Cammack, a teacher in the Filer Elementary School for the last five years, has accepted a teaching position in Nuremberg, Germany. Her son Vince will accompany her and attend schools in Germany.

Cheryl Lynn Hongland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Hongland of Ring Hill, was named the first runner-up for the "A Girl For All Seasons" during the annual Miss Pocatello pageant sponsored by the Lions Club of Pocatello. Miss Hongland is a sophomore at Idaho State University, majoring in pre-pharmacy. She received a $130 scholarship to ISI, a $23 savings bond, and a sterling silver charm bracelet.

Mrs. Lena Reichert of Filer was honored on her 85th birthday anniversary with an open house at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reichert.

Ann R. Rangen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thortelf Rangen of Huhl, has been selected to participate in an international program at Franklin College, Switzerland—White at Franklin. Ms. Rangen will pursue a liberal arts program with emphasis on global relations. Ann is presently preparing in-depth studies of Greece where she will accompany a Franklin College professor on academic travel next month. She plans to return with both academic credit and international experience when she continues her education in the U.S. next year.

Chrysler chairman retires voluntarily

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Jop Ricardo said Monday he will retire this week to make it easier for the financially ailing automaker to obtain federal loan guarantees.

Ricardo, who has been chairman since Oct. 1, 1975, said he will ask directors to grant him early retirement effective Thursday.

Chrysler President Lee A. Iacocca was expected to take over as chief executive officer of the company.

Ricardo said there is "no question that even though I have actively addressed the major problems facing Chrysler, in the minds of many I am closely associated with the past management of a troubled company."

"It will be most unfair to the new management and to the employees of Chrysler if my continued presence as board chairman should in any way hinder the final passage of our request for federal loan guarantees."

Ricardo also said he was recently advised by physicians to retire because of a heart ailment.

Ricardo, 55, joined Chrysler in 1959 as a financial staff executive and moved rapidly up the executive ranks to become a member of the board of directors in 1967 and president early in 1970.

Last Nov. 2, Ricardo said he would remain as chief executive officer for perhaps a year. At that time, he recommended Iacocca to succeed him.

In his statement Monday, Ricardo described Iacocca as "one of the foremost automobile men in the industry."

"That was my judgement when I brought him in, and that is my judgement now. I am absolutely confident that under his leadership the company will return to the position of eminence that it deserves."

Ricardo has labored around the clock in recent months to win government support for his company, which expects to lose more than $1 billion this year.

While lobbying personally at federal and state levels for support, he has fought to uphold the image of the firm as a company that can remain viable.

"A detailed product and financial plan which will restore Chrysler to a position of strength has been submitted to the Treasury," he said. "We have laid the groundwork for the congressional support which is necessary."

"And even though the final amount is not yet fixed, the administration has agreed that it will support a federal loan guarantee. I am, therefore, confident that the necessary assistance will be provided."

Customer squawks over chicken order

I went into Kentucky Fried Chicken on Blue Lakes Boulevard and ordered eight chicken breasts. They would sell me four. They can't do that legally, can they? It's ridiculous to leave and come back later pretending I hadn't been there before. — Bob Fred, Twin Falls

Shop manager Terry Sheppard says his company's policy is to sell separate pieces of chicken as a convenience to customers, but "only when available." The limit varies according to what availability. Sheppard says limiting the number of pieces per customer is legal because separate pieces aren't on the menu.

He is mistaken, Myrna Stahman, an assistant state attorney general in Boise, says the shop cannot legally limit the number of items per customer. The shop could begin a policy of never selling separate pieces at all, however. The menu is irrelevant. An exception to the no-limit rule would be if you were planning to resell the chicken somewhere else.

Holding you to only four breasts was a misdemeanor, so you can file a complaint at the courthouse office of Jeff Stoker, Twin Falls County's prosecuting attorney. It would also be a good idea to call the Consumer Protection Section of the Idaho Attorney General's Office at their toll-free number: 1-800-632-5337. They will send you a form which you can use to report the incident, and they will look into the matter after you return the form.

How can I get reimbursed for the extra mileage which the Hughes Aircraft strike caused me? I had to rent a car to return to Twin Falls, and it cost me $60. The airline lost one of my suitcases, too. — Twin Falls reader.

The people in Hughes' San Franisco consumer affairs office are also on strike, so we couldn't get through by phone. Gather up copies of your car rental agreement, your flight ticket, your baggage claim tag, and any other receipts that might help tell your story. Then write a brief explanatory letter. Send it all to: Burt Pedersen, Director of Consumer Affairs; Hughes Aircraft; San Francisco International Airport; San Francisco, CA 94128. Your problem is one of many, so I may be a while before you see any results. But Jim Zaminsky, Boise manager for Hughes, says you should be reimbursed for your car rental. He also said he would try to track down your missing suitcase. Zaminsky's phone number in Boise is 344-7911. If all else fails, Small Claims Court would be worth a try.

have made three phone calls and written three letters. I got promises, but no results. — Frieda Johnston, Buhl.

Hopefully this will be the last promise you need: Nancy Grantan, head of customer service at BCS, told Action Line she would ship you a bag right away.

NOTE: Action Line will accept no more telephone calls. On your letter or record, please write your telephone number in case we need to contact you for more information. Where money is at stake, the amount must be $10 or more for Action Line to investigate. If you say you don't want your name printed, it won't be, but we do need to know it here.

Good construction firm reputations are the result of two factors:

The first is good people. Both ours and our customer's. For only with competent, professional people working together toward the same goal, can the second factor be achieved.

Results. Happy customers. Customers who got the quality building they needed, when they needed it, for the money they had to spend.

Over the years, we've satisfied quite a few people's building needs. Satisfied them so well, in fact, that they came back when they needed a second building. And a third. And a fourth.

Church, Symms' personal wealth listed

Editors Note: This is the third in a series on the personal and campaign finances of Democratic Sen. Frank Church and Republican Congressman Steve Symms. Although Symms has yet to announce his candidacy, he has said that barring unforeseen difficulties he will challenge Church in next year's U.S. Senate election.

Today the personal financial assets and liabilities of each man are examined.

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — In the 108 member U.S. Senate, where at least 25 persons are millionaires and several are multimillionaires, Democrat Frank Church ranks as a poor man's legislator.

Republican Steve Symms, who hopes to replace Church in the senate next year, is also far from the top of the most-wealthy-legislator senate, with personal assets valued slightly less than those listed by Church.

Still, both men are financially comfortable.

According to the Senate Public Financial Disclosure Report for 1979, filed by Church with the Senate Select Committee on Ethics, the Idaho Democrat at the end of 1978 had holdings valued at between $408,634 and $819,124. Church listed no debts.

In the reports filed by Symms with the clerk of the House of Representatives, the Idaho Republican lists holdings at the end of 1978 valued between $275,000.06 and $596,300.00. Symms also lists debts totaling at least $30,000.02 and perhaps as much as $100,000.

Both the Senate and the House of Representatives passed major new ethics codes in 1977. Those codes made several significant changes in laws affecting public officials, including a requirement that senators and congressmen make regular public disclosure of financial holdings and debts.

The codes differ slightly from the House to the Senate, but they contain most of the same public disclosure requirements.

Those reports have given the public a closer look than ever before at their elected officials, although the look is far from complete. Rather than listing financial holdings or debts at face value, a senator or a congressman lists assets and liabilities as falling into a specific category of value.

Stocks and bonds, for instance, may be listed as having a value that places them in category V. This means they are reported on the disclosure forms as being worth at least $100,000.01, but no more than $250,000.

This form of itemization explains the above description by category of the net worth of Symms and Church.

Church's income came from several sources. As a senator he receives a yearly salary of $37,500. He also listed as income interest from shares in the Senate Employees' Credit Union, valued at less than $5,000; interest from the sale of a ranch owned by Mrs. Church, valued at between $15,001 and $50,000; and the long-term capital gain from the sale of the same ranch valued at between $50,001 and $100,000.

Church also listed two homes on his disclosure reports. His personal residence in Bethesda, Md., a bedroom community of Washington, D.C., was valued at between $100,000.01 and $250,000.

His personal residence in Boise was valued at between $50,001 and $100,000.

Both values were based on 1978 tax assessments.

Church listed two retirement funds, one with the Idaho First National Bank and one with the Civil Service Retirement Fund. The first he valued at between $5,001 and $15,000. The second was valued at between $50,001 and $100,000.

The ethics reports also show Church has an account with the Senate Employees Federal Credit Union valued at between $5,001 and $15,000, and a municipal investment trust fund with the United States Trust Company of New York, valued at between $50,000.01 and $100,000.

According to his senate report, Church made 17 speeches in 1978 for which he was paid an honorarium, and his wife made three speeches for which she was paid.

The Churches received a grand total of $26,500 for those 20 speeches.

The speeches were presented to a wide variety of organizations, ranging from the Atomic Industrial Forum to the North American Conference on the Visual Handicapped to the National Farmers Union to the student body at Brigham Young University.

Church also listed $125 he was paid to write an article for the Baltimore Sun.

The disclosure report for Symms shows many similar items.

In addition to his $37,500 yearly salary, Symms lists the following items under assets, with their value:

- Interest from the Idaho First National bank, between $100.01-$1,000.

- Rent from the Symms Fruit Ranch, between $5,000.01-$15,000.
- Sale of investments, between $100.01-$1,000.
- Common stock in the Symms Fruit Ranch, between $100,000.01-$250,000.
- Partnership Interest, Sunnyslope Fruit Co., between $5,000.01-$15,000.
- Eighty acres of Canyon County farmland, between $100,000.01-$250,000.

The First District Congressman also received payment for 16 different speeches, totaling $7,300.

Symms listed two debts under the category marked "liabilities":

- The first was a note payable to the Bank of Idaho, the second was a mortgage payable to Travelers Insurance Co. Both were valued at between $15,000.01 and $50,000.

Irrigation decision put off

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — More than 50 people crowded into Twin Falls City Hall Monday night to question the city's proposed abandonment of its irrigation system.

The city, faced with crimped finances, has called for abandoning its subsidy of the system, a subsidy which cost more than $45,000 last year alone.

In order to balance the books, the city is looking at either increasing fees to water users by about 400 percent or abandoning its supervision of the 15-district system. If that occurs, water users in those districts would have to maintain the system themselves.

The city polled the users last month, and of the 229 responding, 186 approved abandonment.

Most in attendance agreed with those results and raised only technical questions. But some had gripes with the city's future action and with its past handling of the system.

"I thought I was spending my money for maintenance of the system and it has not been maintained," Lillas Talley of Twin Falls said.

She said the city has not replaced deteriorated pipes in the system and now expects water users to do so at their own expense.

Others disputed the city's cost in maintaining the system.

"I can't see where $60,000 goes into that irrigation system," George Miller of Twin Falls said. He added only four or five ditch riders are hired for the summer.

Although the city may abandon its involvement in the system, water would still be channeled through to the farms from the Twin Falls Canal Company, company manager Clifford Montgomery said.

"The canal company's responsibility is to deliver it through the headgate and that's it," he said.

Several property owners appeared willing to live with that.

R.C. Ashenbrenner of Twin Falls presented a petition of property owners who said they were prepared to assume responsibility for its district, provided the city returned their irrigation water shares.

"All of our people have signed this petition. We feel we are capable of handling the water," he said.

City manager Jean Miller said 420 water shares held in trust by the city would be returned to the individual property owners.

But a Murtough farmer is apparently interested in buying those shares for $300 each. That offer was made by Twin Falls attorney John Rasmussen, who would not identify his client.

In other matters, the council voted to increase sewer, water and garbage collection rates beginning Oct. 1. Those changes had been anticipated in the city's new budget.

Under the measures passed, sewer rates for single-family residences would increase to $3.25 per month from $2.53. Two-family buildings would pay $6 per month, up from $4.67.

Garbage collection would increase to $4.25 per month for single and double family dwelling units. That's up from $3 for family and $4 for the first double unit and $3 for the next unit.

The increase reflects increased collection costs, including a cost of living increase for the city's contractor, Parks and Sons. That increase, announced Sept. 12, is called for in the city's contract which expires next year.

Water use charges would also increase to 15 cents per 1,000 gallons for usage above 100,000 per month.

Bridge fall kills woman

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls and Jerome county sheriff officers and search and rescue teams combed the Snake River Monday afternoon and evening in search of the body of a woman who fell from the Perrine Bridge.

Wanda Bray, 32, of Burley fell from the west side of the bridge into the Snake River at about 4 p.m. after parking her late-model Lincoln Continental nearby. At press time the body had not been found.

She apparently floated in the river for some time before sinking, according to witnesses.

A relative of the woman said she had been "extremely ill" for the past year.

Boy found in South Hills

TWIN FALLS — A Jerome boy, separated from his family on a hunting trip, was found unharmed Sunday morning by Twin Falls County Sheriff's officers and search and rescue units.

Kevin Cameron, 12, of Jerome, became separated from his family Saturday evening in the Magic Hats Springs area 40 miles south of Twin Falls.

Search and Rescue units responded, searching the area all night. Temperatures fell to the high 30's that night and the boy was lightly dressed, Twin Falls Sheriff James Munn said.

The boy was found on Big Creek Road at 8 a.m. Sunday about seven miles from his campsite, Munn said.

Although cold and hungry, the boy was reported in good condition.

Hospital board shows support for manager

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Memorial Hospital's Board of Trustees Monday night reaffirmed its contract with the Hospital Management Corporation for another year.

The board put off action on complaints voiced by employees last week, awaiting the results of a new staff survey by an outside consultant.

Finance committee chairman Cal Butler read a resolution stating the management firm, a subsidiary of the Nashville-based Hospital Affiliates International, had met the goals set when the board hired the firm in March. The resolution waives the board's option to terminate the contract.

The resolution passed unanimously without discussion.

The contract, which expires Sept. 30, 1982, allows the hospital board to end its involvement with HMC and HAI effective any September 30th before that date, without stating a cause, according to Fred Decker, attorney for the board. A termination is possible at other times of the year as well, but only if the board lists its reasons and gives the management notice, Decker said.

HMC is the employer of hospital administrator William Burns, who has angered some employees, particularly nurses, by what Burns has called efficiency and economy measures.

Jack Claiborn, personnel committee chairman, briefly reported on a meeting between his committee and over 50 hospital employees last Tuesday. He said the committee would eventually respond to every complaint that came up at the meeting, making recommendations to the board as a whole.

One result of the meeting, Claiborn said, was to put James Beard, an outside personnel consultant, to work interviewing all hospital employees. However, Claiborn later told the Times-News, the consultant was hired before the meeting with the employees.

Blaine voters decide county's health care future

HAILEY — Voters will decide today whether to approve a new $1.5 million wing for the Blaine County Hospital to be used as a nursing home.

Polls are open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., and those wishing to vote must be at least 18 years of age and have resided in the county more than 30 days. Eligible voters do not have to be registered voters but they must sign a sworn statement stating they meet the above-mentioned qualifications.

A two-thirds majority is needed for the measure to pass.

Those voting may vote at any of the following locations: Hemingway School and the Catholic Church in Ketchikan, City Hall and the National Guard Armory in Hailey; City Hall in Bellevue, Carey School in Carey, and Rhea Knopp's home in the Gannett-Picabo area.

The ballot will contain a question that will require a simple yes or no vote for or against, respectively, the addition.

If approved, the bond measure would build a 118,000-square-foot wing capable of housing 28 patients. Some remodeling work on the existing hospital also would be included.

Construction could begin between November and next March, county officials estimate, with completion anticipated by December 1980.

The measure would cost taxpayers owning a $50,000 home between $18 and $22.50 more per year, Hospital Administrator Frank McNamara has estimated, depending on what interest rates would be paid on the bonds.

There has been controversy over whether the addition is needed or whether to combine the Blaine County Hospital operations with Moritz Hospital in Sun Valley to take care of the nursing home needs.

People for consolidation say the annual subsidy paid by the county to maintain Blaine County Hospital could cover the cost of converting it into a nursing home, while the Sun Valley hospital could be used for acute-care patients.

Last year's subsidy amounted to $120,000 while the 1979-80 fiscal year budget has $104,000 set aside for a hospital subsidy.

Those favoring a new wing say consolidating the entire facility to a nursing home would cost $129,000 a year in tax subsidies and that there is a need for a new wing.

With the help of private donations, Moritz Hospital shows a profit.

A feasibility study done in May estimated the current nursing home needs of the entire county at 29 hospital beds for the current population, with the 1990 needs possibly being 46 beds for nursing home patients.

The Blaine County Commissioners have said they will consider consolidating the two hospitals and converting the Hailey facility to a nursing home facility.

Symms and Church discuss disclosure law

The personal financial disclosures of Church and Symms are required under the House and Senate ethics codes. Those codes were passed in early 1977, in an attempt to restore public confidence in congress. That confidence, many believe, had been shattered by Watergate revelations, pay-off scandals, and sexual escapades of several lawmakers. The codes were the congressional response to the voter demand that lawmakers clean up their act. At the time of their passage, both Symms and Church commented on the new codes.

With some reservations, Church supported the new codes. That stance was similar to earlier positions taken by the senator.

In May 1964, for instance, Church became one of the first senators or congressmen to voluntarily release records of his income and assets. That year Church said, "When we insist, as we often do, that a man nominated to a cabinet post must, as a condition to his confirmation, make a full disclosure of his business interests and private holdings, we in Congress must be willing to do likewise."

In the years since, Church has continued voluntarily releasing information about his personal wealth. In 1973, he authored the first mandatory disclosure provision ever to pass the Senate. That bill died in the house.

When the new ethics codes came up for debate in 1977, Church endorsed them. He was aware, Church then said, that some lawmakers felt the codes required congressmen and senators to live under tougher standards than the public at large. But senators and congressmen were different from other citizens in one important fact, Church said.

"They make the laws that affect business; they write the taxes that corporations as well as individuals must pay. Since members of Congress must regularly vote on legislation which reaches every segment of the economy, there is a very legitimate reason for making their private holdings a matter of public record."

This disclosure, Church said, "would allow the voter, or someone having doubts to resolve, to compare the member's voting record in office with his financial portfolio, and determine for himself whether the member has voted his private pocketbook interest or the general public interest, in the discharge of his official duties."

Symms opposed the new disclosure requirements. He was one of only 22 representatives to vote against final passage of the House measure. The House ethics codes finally passed the house on March 1, 1977, by a vote of 402-22.

Symms said, in a later interview with the Times-News, that he objected to the disclosure required by the ethics codes because they created a loss of privacy similar to that described in George Orwell's book "1984."

"There's no end to where they could decide to extend it," he said. "Soon we may be demanding all of this information from someone on a Public Utilities Commission, or a person who runs a transportation company, or the news media or a food service businessman. It's like a camel getting his nose under the tent."

would discourage potential candidates for public office. Financially impoverished congressmen will resent having their poverty broadcast to the nation, he said, while rich legislators will become vulnerable to terrorists and kidnappers if they reveal their wealth.

"The ideas are the things that are important" in judging a congressman or a senator, Symms said, "the ideas you hold and the ideas you vote. That's what has an impact on our lives. The rest is nitpicking."

Task force begins study of Idaho agricultural future

BOISE — Gov. John Evans Monday named a 16-member task force to evaluate the status of agriculture in Idaho.

The task force will report to Evans in one year, listing problems facing Idaho agriculture and recommending ways to solve those problems.

"The future of Idaho is intrinsically tied to the future of agriculture," Evans said in announcing the task force. "This new council will advise the office, the Legislature, and the state director of agriculture on matters of mutual concern. It will have the full authority of the governor's office to carry out its duties and meet its objectives."

The members of the task force are:

Phil Soulen, chairman, Welsler; Gene Davis, Bruneau; Sam Tyler, Tensed; George Brooke Jr., Kendrick; Al Johnson, Pocatello; Ken Remington, St. Anthony; Doug Jones, Twin Falls; Clarence Bellem, Rupert; Dennis Curtis, Burley; Sen. Ken Braunschweig, Wendell; Dr. Richard W. A representative of the environmental community will be named at a later date, Evans said.

Evans said the task force staff will be directed by Frank Lundburg, of Boise, who has been a gubernatorial assistant for agriculture, livestock and range problems since 1977.

According to Lundburg, the task force will "explore the future of the agricultural economy in relation to costs of production, availability of markets, promotion of products and traditional and alternative crops."

The $90,000 one-year grant that funds the task force is provided by the Pacific Northwest Regional Commission.

Ada, Canyon GOP like Reagan

BOISE (UPI) — Presidential polls conducted by Idaho Republicans in Ada and Canyon counties showed former California Gov. Ronald Reagan far ahead of other possible candidates.

Reagan beat former Texas Gov. John Connally 77-24 in the balloting by delegates and members of the Republican State Central Committee.

Crane received seven votes each, former president Gerald Ford and former congressman and CIA director George Bush received three votes apiece and one vote went to former Treasury Secretary William Simon, Sen. Jesse Helms, Sen. Robert Dole, Ben Fernandez and former NATO director General Alexander Haig.

A second poll was taken at the party's watermelon feed in Nampa. Reagan again came out ahead, leading Connally 89-30. Baker had 10; Crane, 9; Ford, 8; Bush, 7; Dole, 4; and Simon, 2.

Total for the two polls showed Reagan with 160; Connally, 54; Baker, 17; Crane, 16; Ford, 11; Bush, 10; Dole, 5; Simon, 3; and 1 each for Helms, Fernandez and Haig.

Women's board members named

BOISE (UPI) — The appointment of 12 new members of the Idaho Commission on Women's Programs and designation of a chairman for the group was announced today by Gov. John V. Evans.

Anne Pasley Stuart, Boise, was appointed to a term ending July 1, 1980. She is a member of the commission's executive committee.

Mrs. Stuart, a native of Caldwell, operates a consultant business in Boise and she and her husband also own a business in Stanley. Jannell Burke, Coeur d'Alene, whose term on the commission continues until July 1, 1980, was named vice chairman. Jane Lessen, Boise, was named budget coordinator and Jo Bedard, also Boise, was appointed public information director.

Other new members were Crickett Corbelli, Kellogg; Marilyn E. Boice, Post Falls; Glenda Johnson, Lewiston; Kay Keskinen, Moscow; Sandra Ortiz, Pocatello; Diane Romano, Twin Falls; Constance Watters, Lapwai, and Jean Lovejoy and Mary Mech, both Boise.

Reappointed to new terms were E. Kay Hamilton and Rita Hesse-Sallaz, both Boise; Phillip Ann Miller, Pocatello, and Gladys Swank, Lewiston.

Evans also announced three other appointments: Michael Bruce Guthrie, Priest River, Law Enforcement Planning Commission; Linda Craine-Hatzenbuehler, Pocatello, state Board of Psychologist Examiners; and Loreta Joyce Barton, Boise, Social Workers Licensure Board.

Idaho sues to protect fish

BOISE (UPI) — The State of Idaho has filed a motion in federal district court to force the states of Oregon and Washington and four Indian tribes to adhere to a lower Columbia River fish management plan.

The action followed the failure of the Oregon-Washington Columbia River Compact to revise previously established Idaho fishing rights at a meeting in Portland Friday. Idaho is a non-voting member of the compact.

Fisheries biologists from Oregon and Washington testified at the hearing that the upper steelhead run over the Lower Granite Dam would about 15,000 fish this summer.

A five-year agreement signed by Oregon, Washington, the United States and four lower river treaty tribes provides for a minimum escapement of 30,000 salmon to the spawning grounds above Lower Granite Dam.

Idaho also filed a motion for a temporary restraining order, seeking to restrict further commercial fishing on the lower part of the river by either treaty or non-treaty fishermen. A hearing date will be set for the motion this week.

State Land Board officials rap Birds of Prey report

BOISE (UPI) — Four Idaho officials claim, the U.S. Interior Department "carefully orchestrated" a "draft environmental impact statement on the proposed Snake River Birds of Prey Area.

At the same time, the officials have recommended a delay in consideration of the proposed legislation and that a state-federal bird area task force be formed to iron out points of contention.

The four state Land Board members had asked the attorney general's office to "investigate" the draft environmental statement, which the Interior Department drew up for the proposed 720,000-acre raptor refuge in southern Idaho.

The statement "reaches a deliberately predetermined result and therefore is not an unbiased analysis of the area," said the state study. It was ordered by Attorney General David Leroy, Secretary of State Pete Conrross, Public Instruction Superintendent Jerry Evans and State Auditor Joe Williams.

Williams is a Democrat and the others are Republicans.

"The fifth board member, Democrat Gov. John V. Evans, did not participate."

"This initial investigation indicates a need for more time in which to conduct a searching analysis of the issues presented by the Birds of Prey Area study."

"While it is clear that the wildlife in the area must be afforded protection, it is also equally clear that the environmental analysis prepared by the Department of the Interior is inadequate on its face."

The statement is "part of a well-orchestrated publicity campaign to gain political support for the proposed legislation," the attorney general's study said.

"Contrary to law, the procedures and time frames in support of the proposal were carefully orchestrated to limit as much as possible any searching discussion" regarding the bird area, the study said.

A copy of the study today was sent to the Interior Department, which is gathering public opinion for preparation of a final environmental statement on the proposal.

The report also said the statement: —Does not outline any possible ways in which agricultural concerns would be aided in establishment of the area.

—Was rushed through the U.S. Bureau of Land Management to avoid "dissenting" internal comment.

—Is an attempt to cloud the issue and foot the state out of land it is owed by the federal government under the Carey Act.

—Ignores the "very real" potential for oil and gas discoveries and geothermal and mineral development in the area.

Also charged by the state officials is that the draft statement process has been abused and therefore is "legally questionable."

The officials want the Interior Department to grant the Land Board time to conduct public hearings on the proposed legislation, and that the results of the hearings be made part of the federal record.

Still another request is that any further studies on the area be conducted by "independent" experts on the proposal, to be approved by state and federal officials.

The Land Board last month voted to delay discussion of a land transaction between the state and the federal government.

The 14,000 state-owned acres, scattered throughout the proposed refuge, are of little use to the state, according to the Interior Department.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, a former Idaho governor, warned the state not to delay the land deal with the department would go ahead with the legislation anyway, leaving the state with a useless bunch of land.

But the state officials argued that the Interior Department should turn over land owed to the state in other deals before the bird area deal is agreed upon.

The 3-2 land board vote last month was on a strict party line, the Republican for and the Democrats against.

Gov. Evans disagrees

By ROBYNC WALKER

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans Monday disagreed with others on the Snake River Birds of Prey Area study that the Bureau of Land Management had "carefully orchestrated" its study of the proposed Birds of Prey Natural Area.

"I think they are oversteering some of the issues involved," said Evans, who is the chairman of the Land Board.

Evans said he had already asked for and been granted an additional 30 days for study of the proposal, but he said he agreed with the request for additional time because he felt more study could be devoted to using Boise's surplus water for agricultural purposes.

But he said he did not agree with Idaho Attorney General David Leroy's accusation that the establishment of the Birds of Prey Area was Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus' "pet project" although he added, "There is no doubt in my mind that the Secretary is as dedicated as I am to establishing a Birds of Prey Natural Area along the Snake River."

He said the four officials' charge that the BLM statement ignores the potential for oil and gas discoveries and geothermal and mineral development is not an issue in his judgment.

"The BLM addressed it in the legislation to allow oil and gas exploration and drilling to see whether the time to do it again," Evans said.

PAC's called Republican fronts

BOISE (UPI) — The state chairman of the Democratic Party Monday charged that the Anyone But Church Committee and the Committee for Positive Change are "front organizations" for the Republican Party.

"These are not independent political action committees," said Wayne Fuller, executive director of the state party organizations for the Republican Party.

"These are not independent political action committees," said Wayne Fuller, executive director of the state party organizations for the Republican Party.

"These are not independent political action committees," said Wayne Fuller, executive director of the state party organizations for the Republican Party.

to be held accountable for what these two groups do."

Noting that ABC had reported at a state Republican meeting this year, Fuller said, "I don't believe you would have a committee that is independent reporting to the party."

He said there are "very close ties" between the party and the committee, adding that the meeting of the Republican State Central Committee last weekend indicated "that the Republicans have something to hide."

"There is no possible justification for excluding the press from these meetings unless there was something to hide," Fuller said. "The failure to have an open and public discussion is a black mark on the Idaho political scene. It also says to the public the connection between the anti-Church groups and the Republican Party cannot stand the sunshine of public scrutiny."

But Fuller said he would not ask for an investigation of the situation by the Federal Election Commission because it would take too long and would be counterproductive.

"An investigation would be misunderstood and doesn't produce any concrete results," Fuller said.

He said investigation results could not be released by the FEC unless the party under investigation consented. He said the lack of any publicized results would convey to the public that the committees had done nothing illegal.

Challis wild horses to be thinned

By ANN D. KIRKWOOD

BOISE (UPI) — A roundup of Land Management cowboys are saddling up for a roundup of 150 wild horses in the Challis area next week.

U.S. District Judge Charles Kiehey in Washington Monday gave the go-ahead for the roundup—three years after a lawsuit—filed by the Humane Society of the U.S. and American Horse Protection Association—reinstated BLM from creating the horses which ranchers in the area say are devastating rangeland.

Henry Finlayson, BLM Challis District manager in Salmon, said the judge lifted an order restraining the bureau from capturing the horses when witnesses for the humane society and horse association did not appear at a hearing scheduled for Monday. Finlayson said the seven bureau witnesses, who flew to Washington for the hearing, immediately returned to Idaho to make preparations for the roundup which begins Monday.

The hearing on the lawsuit has been postponed for six months, but the interim order allows the bureau to give away horses for a one-year adoption period, Finlayson said. After that time, he said, owners of adopted horses must furnish a certificate of humane treatment issued by a veterinarian to receive permanent title to the horses.

Meg Nelson, executive director of the Idaho Humane Society, said she expects representatives of her group to be present during next week's roundup. She said the lawsuit, based on BLM roundup techniques used in Nevada about three years ago, was brought against the Idaho BLM to ensure humane practices were used when the horses are caught.

"At one time the horses were being abused in the process of catching them," Ms. Nelson said. "We haven't had any reports of that happening in Idaho and, recently, we've always been present during a roundup. I think it's a good idea to attend this one because everything I've read indicates that a certain number of the horses are going to have to be removed."

In 1976, the Challis District of the bureau proposed to round up 150 "excess" wild horses in the 800-herd herd. Finlayson said the bureau's study indicated that there are too many horses on the land in competition with other wildlife and domestic herds.

The bureau plans reflected studies which indicate a deterioration in Challis rangeland. Finlayson said the watershed and abundance of vegetation is being gradually reduced by over grazing on the "fragile" land. In addition to requesting the roundup, Finlayson said the bureau has cut back by 15 percent the amount of grazing land open to ranchers — a move ranchers are protesting through administrative appeals.

"They're raising hell about that, too," Finlayson said. "The ranchers and Custer County officials say they need this land for grazing in order to make a living and have a healthy county economy."

The wild horses are descendants of domestic horses raised on Challis area ranches in the 1800s, Finlayson said. When it became uneconomical to round up the horses for sale, the ranchers allowed the horses to run free and "what we see now is the result of reproduction," Finlayson said.

"The ironic thing about this situation is that the ranchers here originally let the horses run free," Finlayson said. "Now, the descendants of those horses are running over the land that is wanted by the descendants of those ranchers."

Finlayson said the permit eliminates the process of trying to meet the West's energy needs without damaging the environment.

"This is not the cheapest route we could have selected, but it is the one that has the fewest impacts on the environment," Buffington said.

The utility plans to begin construction of the line in October and hopes to have the line finished by Sept. 1980.

Buffington said the BLM will maintain continuous inspection of the construction of the powerline.

Finlayson said the herd of wild horses increases by about 20 percent each year, causing an additional burden on grazing land. He said the Wild Horse and Burro Act of 1971 "elevated horses to a protected status," making their removal a difficult and time-consuming endeavor.

Finlayson said the first 150 names of Idahoans on the bureau's adoption list will be selected to receive the horses. That list includes about 10,000 people from across the nation wishing to adopt horses, he said.

PCB's found in new spots

By United Press International

Food and Drug Administration officials Monday discovered more chicken contaminated with the chemical poison PCB at a Montana poultry farm.

They also said said PCB laden feed supplement produced at a Pierce Packing Co. Plant in Billings, Mont., may have been used in up to three months by poultry farmers and hog ranchers in several states before the contamination was discovered.

Health officials have stressed that the small amounts of the banned chemical found in chickens and eggs are not dangerous. But long-term exposure could be hazardous, especially if people had other contact with the chemical.

LeRoy Gomez, Denver District Director for the FDA, said inspectors found contaminated chickens at Cherrylane Farms in Three Forks, Mont. He said the entire laying stock of the farms would have to be destroyed and eggs would be recalled.

A spokesman for the farms said he hadn't received any order from FDA. He also declined to discuss how many chickens were involved.

High levels of the banned chemical forced destruction of nearly 60,000 chickens at two poultry farms in Idaho and Utah last week. Hitewood Egg Co. in Franklin, Idaho, voluntarily destroyed its entire laying stock of 350,000 hens and Ockfeld Farms in Riverton, Utah, killed 38,000 pullets at bought from Hitewood.

All of the chickens were contaminated by an animal meal trace to the Pierce plant, said Gomez. The Cherrylane chickens contained eight to parts per million of the chemical.

It's good year to hunt sage grouse

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS—Sage grouse hunters have never had it so good.

The results of last weekend's opening two days of the popular bird-season turned out to be the best on record since 1971, according to Gary Will, Idaho Fish and Game regional wildlife manager.

"We had forecasted a season better than last year, and it seems to have turned out even better than our expectations," he said after reviewing reports from the Fish and Game's 10 check stations throughout the region.

The region extends from Glens Ferry to Mañaree Rocks and the Union Border to Galena Summit.

Will offers statistics to back up his claim.

The check stations reported 3,805 hunters with 4,427 sage grouse were processed Saturday and Sunday. This averages out to 11.1 birds per hunter.

Compared to last year, Will said it is an increase of 13 percent in the number of hunters and a jump of 0.29 (not percentage) in the number of birds per hunter (The 1978 figures were 3,357 hunters and 2,921 grouse).

Not since 1971 when the average was 1.34 birds per hunter has the first two days of the season been that high. That year there were 3,781 hunters who brought home 4,719 birds.

The lowpoint in the past eight years has been .6 birds per hunter, Will noted.

"This year's spring conditions have been ideal," said Will explaining the reason for the increase in the number of sage grouse. "The grouse can take the cold but can't take a lot of moisture. The result: a good hatch."

The western portion of the region is open to sage grouse hunters through Sunday (the regulation book had erroneously listed Sept. 21 as the ending date). The daily bag limit and possession limit is two grouse.

The eastern portion of the region will have an extra week of hunting—extending until Sept. 28. The daily bag limit is three with the possession being six.

A new state law regarding identification of sex caused some problems for hunters, according to Howard Carroll, Fish and Game enforcement officer.

Carroll said the new law requires that hunters leave the head or the wing attached. In the past the law has read that either the wing or some other discernible part be left on the bird.

"We only had one check station which reported any large number of violations of this new regulation," said Carroll. "That was at Cat Creek in Elmore County."

Those hunters who are in violation of the law face a minimum fine of $25 and possibly as high as $300, he said.

Chukar and quail seasons also opened last Saturday, but Fish and Game officials weren't able to get an accurate reading on the results.

"It looks like it went fairly well. The chukars are still suffering some effects from the 1977 drought and hard winters the past two years," he said.

The other seasons and their limits include:

- Chukar partridge and Hungarian partridge, Sept. 13 through Dec. 31 for the whole region, eight daily bag limit for both with a 16 possession limit.
- Quail, Sept. 15 through Dec. 31, limit of 10 per day (but only two mountain quail in that 10). Mountain quail have a straight-top knot on the head, white valley quail have a shorter club.
- Forest grouse, Sept. 15 through Nov. 25, statewide including blue, spruce, and ruffed grouse, limit of four (aggregate) and eight possession limit.

Some areas of the region will open Oct. 3 for elk hunting, while the general deer season begins Oct. 17.

Redskins clobber Giants

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Large victory margins and shutouts have been rare for the Washington Redskins, but not so rare as Diron Talbert hugging Joe Theismann in the middle of the football field.

Talbert, a 13-year veteran and one of the few remaining members of the famed "Over-the-Hill Gang," bearhugged Theismann just after the Redskins quarterback jiltedbugged seven yards for a touchdown midway through the third quarter of Washington's 27-0 romp over the New York Giants Monday night.

Theismann passed for another touchdown and defensive end Karl Lorch returned a pass interception 31 yards for another. Mark Moseley kicked a pair of field goals and three conversions.

"Westie took a hug from me," admitted Talbert, who can hardly be considered one of the quarterback's close friends. "I got all excited out there. We had things going like they're supposed to go. I wanted that shutout in the worst way."

Talbert and his mates kept the Giants at bay and made the most of the penalties called against New York. Lorch recovered a fumble to be in the right place at the right time for his first NFL interception.

"I don't think Giants quarterback Joe Pisarcik ever saw me until he'd let go of the ball," said Lorch, a four-year veteran. "I was looping to the outside trying to contain him and he threw it right to me."

Even after I had the ball I wasn't sure what I'd done. Finally when I was all alone in the endzone, I saw the official raise his hands. Then I knew I'd actually scored ... right on national television.

Moseley, who kicked field goals of 46 and 40 yards, has hit six of seven this season, missing only on 70 yards.

Theismann's 47-yard scoring toss went to Clarence Harmon after Lorch and Moseley had given the Redskins a 10-7 lead. Theismann scrambled for his touchdown in the third quarter and Moseley capped the scoring with his 40-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

The victory lifted the Redskins' record to 2-1 and was their eighth straight triumph at home in the NFL's Monday night showcase. The penalty-plagued Giants dropped to 0-3.

Washington's margin of victory was its largest since early 1975 when the Redskins ripped the Giants 49-13.

Theismann, the NFL's leading passer, completed 18-of-29 passes for 153 yards before being relieved late in the game by Kim McQuiken.

The Giants' best offensive thrust came late in the first quarter when, trailing 2-0, they moved from their 20 to the Washington 21. But quarterback Joe Pisarcik, who completed a 31-yard pass to Jimmy Robinson on the drive, was called for intentional grounding on a third-and-six at the 21. Joe Danelo's 48-yard field goal attempt was wide to the left.

The Redskins stunned Pisarcik early in the second quarter when Lorch picked off a pass intended for running back Billy Taylor near the sidelines. Lorch was untouched on his way to the endzone.

Ready for Boise meet
Heading into one of the largest meets of the year, the Twin Falls High School boys cross country team appears determined to make a strong showing. The team will travel to Boise Friday afternoon to participate in the Boise City Invitational at Ann Morrison Park in the downtown area. Coach Jerry Kleinkopf said he will be fielding a seven-man varsity team in the run which will feature about 24 teams.

Trojans stay on top

NEW YORK (UPI)—Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine flourishes where others fear to tread — the Michigan Stadium snakepit at Ann Arbor — and his latest triumph over the Wolverines has vaulted the Fighting Irish six spots in the second weekly UPI Board of Coaches' Top 20 ratings, announced Monday.

Southern California solidified its No. 1 ranking with a 42-3 rout of Oregon St., followed by Alabama, Oklahoma and Texas as the top four teams remained unchanged in voting by 39 of the 42 coaches on the board.

Notre Dame replaced Michigan as No. 5 and Penn State, Nebraska, Michigan State, Houston and Washington round out the top 10.

A Devine-led team went into Ann Arbor, Mich., and emerged with a victory for the third straight time Saturday as Notre Dame upset the Wolverines 12-10. The Fighting Irish,

Irish take over No. 5 in UPI poll ranked 11th last week, received 392 points for lifting Devine to "the greatest thrill of my life" in their season opener.

Devine's Missouri squad beat Michigan on the road in 1959 and 1960 and Notre Dame's victory Saturday dropped the Wolverines seven notches to No. 12. Devine, one of the coaches on the ratings board, agrees with his team's ranking.

"I'm very pleased with the No. 5 spot. I think that's where I put us, too," Devine said. "Everybody says they don't look at the ratings but I think they do."

The fans of Southern Cal certainly take their ratings seriously — and the Trojans have to be as pleased as Devine. Southern Cal, the defending national champion, received 31 first-place votes and 379 overall points to retain the No. 1 spot after crushing the Beavers for the Trojans' second

Birds magic number now at three games

Detroit (UPI)—Scott McGregor tossed an eight-inning shutout as far as third base cracked home runs Monday night, enabling the Baltimore Orioles to reduce their "magic number" for clinching the American League East title to three games with a 2-1 triumph over the Detroit Tigers.

"Parker has played hurt this season but now I think he's 100 percent," said Pittsburgh manager Chuck Tanner after Parker, last year's National League MVP, delivered a pair of RBI singles and Dan Robinson pitched a six-hitter Monday night to lead the Pirates to a 2-1 victory over Montreal.

The triumph boosted the Pirates into a one-game lead over the Expos in the NL East.

"Robinson pitched one helluva ballgame," said Montreal manager Dick Williams. "He was tough on us. The Pirates just played better ball than we did tonight. They had more scoring chances than we did. We've got five games to play with them so we just need a split to stay in contention. All the games will be a real battle."

Royals club Angels to trim margin to two

By United Press International
 Everyone knew the Kansas City Royals were anxious to show the world they weren't dead yet — but nobody quite expected a massacre.

Al Cowens and Darrell Porter knocked in four runs apiece to help the Royals cut California's lead in the American League West to two games Monday night with a 16-6 hammering of the Angels.

The Royals and Angels each have 12 games remaining, including six against each other. Kansas City will send Rich Gale, 9-9, against Dave Frost, 14-9, in the second game of the four-game series Tuesday night.

Dennis Leonard, 19-10, was overpowering in the first five innings, allowing a game-opening single to Rod Carew before trailing 14 straight batters. During that time, the Royals opened a 3-0 lead off loser Chris Knapp, 3-5, on a sacrifice fly by U.L. Washington in the second inning and a run-scoring triple by George Brett and an RBI single by Cowens in the third.

Kansas City then blew the game open with four runs in the fifth, three in the sixth and five more in the seventh to send the Angels to their third straight loss.

Highlighting the outburst were a two-run homer by Pete LaCock in the fifth, a two-run triple by Cowens in the sixth and a three-run homer by Porter in the seventh. Washington drove home the Royals' final run in the eighth inning with a sacrifice fly.

Highlighting the outburst were hits against four California pitchers with Hal McRae and LaCock collecting three hits and Wilson,AMES, Otis, Brett and Porter two apiece. McRae also scored four runs as every player on the Royals who came to bat got at least one hit.

Brett's third-inning triple enabled him to become the first major-leaguer since Willie Mays in 1957 to collect 20 doubles, 20 triples and 20 home runs in a season. Brett leads the league in doubles (41), triples (20) and runs scored (113) and has 21 homers and 102 RBI.

Leonard allowed four runs and eight hits in 7 1/3 innings while striking out six to win for the fifth time in his last six decisions. Eduardo Rodriguez pitched the final 2 1/3 innings.

California scored its runs on a two-run single by Dan Ford in the sixth and a two-run homer by Willie Aikens, his 21st, in the eighth.

Elsewhere in the AL, Baltimore edged Detroit 2-1. Toronto beat Boston 5-4 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the nightcap 5-3. Cleveland swept New York 6-5 and 5-1. Minnesota clobbered Chicago 10-3 and Texas beat Oakland 6-3.

Scott McGreer, 12-5, tossed an eight-hitter and Al Boney and Ken Singleton homered to send Baltimore west Detroit.

Jim Rice belted a three-run homer and Fred Lynn added a two-run blast, giving Boston its nightcap victory.

In the first game, Rick Cerone doubled in two runs and scored the winning run on catcher Mike O'Berry's throwing error in the bottom of the ninth to win for the Blue Jays.

Mike Burroughs tripled home Tom Verzer with one out in the ninth inning to give Cleveland a sweep. In the opener, Rick Witsessed a five-hitter and Cliff Johnson hurt his ex-teammate with a tie-breaking, run-scoring double in the fifth to help the Indians snap a five-game losing streak.

Bombio Rivera's two-run triple highlighted a five-run fifth inning and Ken Landreau added a solo homer in the eighth inning, pacing Minnesota to a triumph over Chicago.

Buddy Bell and Pat Putnam drove in two runs each and Steve Carter and Jim Kern combined on a six-hitter to lead the Texas Rangers to a 6-3 triumph over the Oakland A's.

Astros gain on Reds

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
 Joe Niekro tossed a six-hitter for his fifth shutout of the season and Cesar Cedeno's sacrifice fly in the ninth inning Monday night secured Rafael Landestoy to give the Houston Astros a 1-0 victory over the San Diego Padres.

The victory moved the Astros back within one and one-half games in the pennant race in the National League's western division. Cincinnati still leads San Francisco 4-1.

Landestoy opened the ninth by slicing a triple off loser Bob Ojeda 2-1 that hooked up the chain-link down the right field foul line. Cedeno then lofted a fly ball to Dave Winfield in medium right and Landestoy slid home just ahead of the throw.

Niekro, 19-10, notched his fifth victory with a loss over Ken Griffey Sr. that hooked up the chain-link down the right field foul line. Cedeno then lofted a fly ball to Dave Winfield in medium right and Landestoy slid home just ahead of the throw.

Niekro's ERA dipped to 2.96 as he posted the 17th shutout of his career with the Astros staff, tops in the National League.

San Diego's biggest threat came in the second inning when Bill Pahey doubled with one out and Kurt Bevacqua drew a walk. Niekro then retired Jay Johnstone and Ozzie Smith on ground balls.

In other games, Philadelphia beat St. Louis 7-5, and Los Angeles beat Atlanta 9-4.

Manny Trillo came home with the go-ahead run when Ken Griffey Sr. misplayed Mike Schum's groundout with two out in the ninth inning to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 7-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Phillies tied the score at 5-5 with two out in the ninth on consecutive singles by Pete Rose, Trillo and Baker. Mike of reliever Darrel Knauer knocked Griffey replaced by Mark Littell and Schmidt hit a hard grounder which glanced off Reitz' glove into left field. Grier Gross then singled to drive in McBride.

Ted Simmons belted a three-run homer with two out in the eighth inning to give the Cardinals a 5-4 lead. Ken Oberkfell opened the ninth with a triple and Garry Templeton's ground out made it 4-3. Jerry Murrey singled and winner Steve Carlton, 16-11, walked Keith Hernandez before Simmons sent a 2-1 pitch into the left-field seats for his 21st home run.

The Phillies took a 4-1 lead in the eighth on singles by Rose, McBride and Schmidt and a throwing error by Gierke Hendrick.

At San Francisco, Roger Metzger's two-run triple highlighted a five-run first inning that helped the San Francisco Giants to a 7-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. The loss cut the Reds' lead over second-place Houston to 1 1/2 games in the National League West.

Vida Blue, with relief help from Greg Minton and Garry Lavelle, won his third straight game to even his season record at 13-13.

Cincinnati starter Mike Laca, 14-7, retired only one of the seven batters he faced in the first inning. Bill North, Joe Strain, Mike Ivie, and Darrell Evans all singled to account for the first two runs. Ivey scored on a wild pitch. Rose hit his 10th homer in a walk before Metzger tripled to left center to make it 5-0.

Joe Ferguson belted a pair of home runs and Steve Garvey and Dusty Baker added one apiece to hand Phil Niekro his 20th loss and pace the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 9-4 triumph over the Atlanta Braves.

Ferguson hit his 10th homer in the second inning and added his 20th in the eighth, both coming with the bases empty. The Dodgers followed Ferguson's second-inning blast with four unearned runs after errors by Bob Horner and Jerry Royster. Key hits in the inning were Bill Russell's two-run double and Garvey's RBI single.

Garvey led off the fifth inning with his 26th homer and Baker drilled his 23rd homer in the seventh.

Toronto Blue Jays draw crowds but fail to win

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Blue Jays reached the nadir of their brief three-year history Monday, recording their 100th loss in a game with a 5-3 defeat in the second game of a double-header against the Boston Red Sox.

For the Jays, who have defied baseball tradition by drawing the biggest gate of any expansion team in major-league history despite their poor play, it was a milestone — the earliest date at which they have ever eclipsed the 100-loss barrier.

It has been a season of woeful futility for the Jays.

"What do you want me to do, sit my throat?" said Manager Roy Hartsfield. "Go through the record of other expansion teams and see how many lost 100 games in their third year."

The Jays' record over the last eight games, however, shows a different team from the one that has lost so much. In only one of the last eight games, the league announced Monday.

Berchievo served on 17 points for the Broncos in the first quarter.

Shoshone won the Junior varsity match.

Tennis tourney ends

TWIN FALLS — Jess Olavarría and Carolyn Matsukawa claimed titles during the Twin Falls Tennis Association Closed Tournament over the weekend.

Olavarría defeated Al Allen 6-3, 2-6, 7-6 for the men's A singles crown, while Matsukawa defeated Teressa Hoag 6-0, 6-2 in the women's A singles division.

Sage competes

ONTARIO, Ore. — Treasure Valley Gym Academy defeated Sage Gymnastics of Twin Falls over the weekend 171.35 to 152.35 in a dual meet.

Despite the loss, three local girls scored above 30.0 in the all-around and qualified for the state championships in December.

Juste Waters, 10, scored a 31.65. Alice-Anne Hayes, 11, 31.35, and Tracy McGinnis, 12, 30.65. Suzie Buck narrowly missed with a 29.65 and Shanna Swinston scored a personal best of 28.85. Amy Herbst had 28.35.

Judo club begins

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley YFCA Judo program has launched its 17th season under coaches Wes Dobbs and Al Benkula.

Guy Matsukawa will serve as counselor and advisor.

The classes, for both males and females, are held from 7 to 8 p.m. for beginners and 8 to 9:30 p.m. for more advanced players on Tuesday and Thursday evenings in the Y.

Shoshone wins

SHOSHONE — Led by the serving of Barbara Berchievo, Shoshone's girls' volleyball team dropped Carey 15-2, 15-8 Monday night.

Berchievo served on 17 points for the Broncos in the first quarter.

Shoshone won the Junior varsity match.

Bronco film tonight

TWIN FALLS — Film highlights of Boise State's 22-3 victory over Cal State-Fullerton will be shown tonight at 7:30 at the Little Theatre.

The occasion will be the weekly meeting of the Bronco Athletic Association, according to Jim Faucher of the BAA.

Rose top player

NEW YORK (UPI) — Philadelphia's Pete Rose, who batted .667 for the first time in 1979, was named National League Player of the Week, the league announced Monday.

Rose, who moved into the Phillies' leadoff position at the start of the week, got 16 hits in 24 at-bats, including two doubles and three RBIs. Rose needs 11 hits to achieve his 10th 200 hit season.

Rose was named the league's first player in baseball history to accomplish the feat.

Lucas injured

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Maurice Lucas, a 6-foot-9 forward, for the Portland Trail Blazers, cracked a knuckle in his right hand while suffering from tonsillitis, a team spokesman said Monday.

Lucas apparently cracked the knuckle on the ring finger of his right hand during the summer while playing basketball.

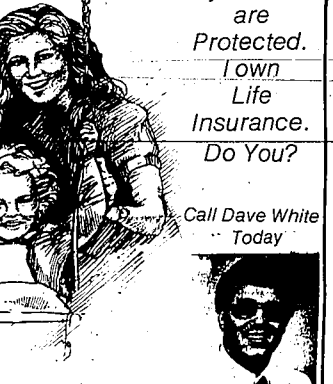

The tonsillitis has kept Lucas from pressman activity, but he will have the tonsils removed next week, the spokesman added.

Attendance record

NEW YORK (UPI) — With two weeks left in the regular season, major-league baseball has already set a single-season attendance record.

Through games of Sunday, Sept. 16, the total attendance for the major leagues was 40,628,124, the eighth time in the last 11 years the single-season mark has been broken. The previous record of 40,636,888 was set in 1978.

It's good year to hunt sage grouse

By GARY ELLIASEN
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — Sage grouse hunters have never had it so good.

The results of last weekend's opening two days of the popular bird-season turned out to be the best on record since 1971, according to Gary Will, Idaho Fish and Game regional wildlife manager.

"We had forecasted a season better than last year, and it seems to have turned out even better than our expectations," he said after reviewing reports from the Fish and Game's 10 check stations throughout the region.

The region extends from Glenns Ferry to Masacre Rocks and the Utah border to Galena Summit.

Will offers statistics to back up his claim.

The check stations reported 3,805 hunters with 4,427 sage grouse were processed Saturday and Sunday. This averages out to 1.1 birds per hunter.

Compared to last year, Will said it is an increase of 13 percent in the number of hunters and a jump of 0.29 (not percentage) in the number of birds per hunter (The 1978 figures were 3,327 hunters and 2,921 grouse).

Not since 1971 when the average was 1.24 birds per hunter has the first two days of the season been that high. That year there were 3,784 hunters who brought home 4,719 birds.

The lowpoint in the past eight years has been 6 birds per hunter, Will noted.

"This year's spring conditions have been ideal," said Will explaining the reason for the increase in the number of sage grouse. "The grouse can take the cold but can't take a lot of moisture. The result is a good hatch."

The western portion of the region is open to sage grouse hunters through Sunday (the regulation book had erroneously listed Sept. 21 as the ending date). The daily bag limit and possession limit is two grouse.

The eastern portion of the region will have an extra week of hunting — extending until Sept. 28. The daily bag limit is three with the possession being six.

A new state law regarding identification of sex caused some problems for hunters, according to Howard Carroll, Fish and Game enforcement officer.

Carroll said the new law requires that hunters leave the head or the wing attached. In the past the law has read that either the wing or some other discernible part be left on the bird.

"We only had one check station which reported any large number of violators of this new regulation," said Carroll. "That was at Cat Creek in Elmore County."

Those hunters who are in violation of the law face a minimum fine of $25 and possibly as high as $300, he said.

Chukar and quail seasons also opened last Saturday, but Fish and Game officials weren't able to get an accurate reading on the results.

"It looks like it went fairly well. The chukars are still suffering some effects from the 1977 drought and hard winters the past two years," he said.

The other seasons and their limits include:

- Chukar partridge and Hungarian partridge, Sept. 15 through Dec. 31 for the whole region, eight daily bag limit for both with a 16 possession limit.
- Quail, Sept. 15 through Dec. 31, limit of 10 per day (but only two mountain quail in that 10). Mountain quail have a straight top knot on the head, while valley quail have a shorter club.
- Forest grouse, Sept. 15 through Nov. 25, statewide including blue, spruce, and ruffed grouse, limit of four (aggregate) and eight possession limit.
- Some areas of the region will open Oct. 3 for elk hunting, while the general deer season begins Oct. 17.

Redskins clobber Giants

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Large victory margins and shutouts have been rare for the Washington Redskins, but not so rare as Diron Talbert hugging Joe Theismann in the middle of the football field.

Talbert, a 13-year veteran and one of the few remaining members of the famed "Over the Hill Gang," bearhugged Theismann just after the Redskins quarterback flitterbaggered seven yards for a touchdown midway through the third quarter of Washington's 27-0 romp over the New York Giants Monday night.

Theismann passed for another touchdown and defensive end Karl Lorch returned a pass interception 31 yards for another. Mark Moseley kicked a pair of field goals and three conversions.

"Yeah, yeah, I hugged Joe," admitted Talbert, who can hardly be considered one of the quarterback's close friends. "I got all excited out there. We had things going like they're supposed to go. I wanted that shout in the worst way."

Talbert and his mates kept the Giants at bay and made the most of the penalty called against New York. Lorch, however, just happened to be in the right place at the right time for his first NFL interception.

"I don't think Giants quarterback Joe Pisarcik ever saw me until he let go of the ball," said Lorch, a four-year veteran. "I was looping to the outside trying to contain him and he threw it right to me."

"Even after I had the ball I wasn't sure what I'd done. Finally when I was all alone in the endzone, I saw the official raise his hands. Then I knew I'd actually scored... right on national television."

Moseley, who kicked field goals of 46 and 40 yards, has hit six of seven this season, missing only from 70 yards.

Theismann's 4-yard scoring loss went to Clarence Harmon after Lorch and Moseley had given the Redskins a 10-7 lead. Theismann scrambled for his touchdown in the third quarter and Moseley rapped up the scoring with his 40-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

The victory lifted the Redskins' record to 2-1 and was their eighth straight triumph at home in the NFL's Monday night showcase. The penalty-plagued Giants dropped to 0-3.

Washington's margin of victory was its largest since early 1975 when the Redskins ripped the Giants 49-13.

Theismann, the NFL's leading passer, completed 18-of-28 passes for 153 yards before being relieved late in the game by Kim McQuilken.

The Giants' best offensive thrust came late in the first quarter when, trailing 10-0, they moved from their 20 to the Washington 21. But quarterback Joe Pisarcik, who completed a 31-yard pass to Jimmy Robinson on the drive, was elded for interception grounding on a third-and-9 situation at the 21. Joe Danele's 48-yard field goal attempt was wide to the left.

The Redskins stunned Pisarcik early in the second quarter when Lorch picked off a pass intended for running back Billy Taylor near the sidelines. Lorch was untouched on his way to the endzone.

Ready for Boise meet

Heading into one of the largest meets of the year, the Twin Falls High School boys cross country team appears determined to make a strong showing. The team will travel to Boise Friday afternoon to participate in the Boise City Invitational at Ann Morrison Park in the downtown area. Coach Jerry Kleinkopf said he will be fielding a seven-man varsity team in the run which will feature about 24 teams.

Trojans stay on top

NEW YORK (UPI) — Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine flourishes where others fear to tread — the Michigan Stadium snakepit at Ann Arbor — and his latest triumph over the Wolverines has vaulted the Fighting Irish six spots in the second weekly UPI Board of Coaches' Top 20 ratings, announced Monday.

Southern California solidified its No. 1 ranking with a 42-5 rout of Oregon St., followed by Alabama, Oklahoma and Texas, as the top four teams remained unchanged in voting by 29 of the 42 coaches on the board.

Notre Dame replaced Michigan as No. 5 and Penn State, Nebraska, Michigan State, Houston and Washington round out the top 10.

A Devine-led team went into Ann Arbor, Mich., and emerged with a victory for the third straight time Saturday as Notre Dame upset the Wolverines 12-10. The Fighting Irish, ranked 11th last week, received 392 points for lifting Devine to "the greatest thrill of my life" in their season opener.

Devine's Missouri squad beat Michigan on the road in 1959 and 1969 and Notre Dame's victory Saturday dropped the Wolverines seven notches to No. 12. Devine, one of the coaches on the ratings board, agrees with his team's ranking.

"I'm very pleased with the No. 5 spot. I think that's where I put us, too," Devine said. "Everybody says they don't look at the ratings but I think they do."

The fans of Southern Cal certainly take their ratings seriously — and the Trojans have to be as pleased as Devine. Southern Cal, the defending national champions, received 331 first-place votes and 579 overall points to retain the No. 1 spot after crushing the Beavers for the Trojans' second victory.

Like Alabama, 1-0, picked up five votes for the top spot and 530 points to remain second and No. 3 Oklahoma received 470 points after whipping Iowa 21-6 in the Sooners' season opener behind a pair of TD runs by Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims.

Fourth-rated Texas, which opens its season against Iowa State Saturday, received the other first-place vote and 394 points. Penn State picked up 353 points to remain sixth-ranked after opening with a 45-10 drubbing of Rutgers and Nebraska moved up a notch to No. 7 with a season-opening 35-14 triumph over Utah State. The Cornhuskers received 347 points to replace Purdue — which dropped out of the top 20 after a loss to UCLA and faces Notre Dame this Saturday.

Michigan State, 2-0, moved up two spots to eighth after beating Oregon 41-17 behind the three-touchdown performance of tailback Derek Hughes. The Spartans recorded 306 points and Houston stayed ninth with a 14-10 victory over Florida. The Cougars, 2-0, picked up 247 points to remain ahead of No. 10 Washington, which jumped three spots with a 47-7 rout of Utah. The Huskies, 2-0, received 188 points.

The rest of the top 20, in order, are Missouri, Michigan, Pittsburgh, Florida State, Ohio State, Arkansas, LSU, UCLA, Brigham Young, and North Carolina State.

LSU and UCLA were unranked last week but cracked the top 20 with impressive victories. The Fighting Tigers blasted Colorado 44-0 and the Bruins topped Purdue 31-21 as quarterback Rick Boshore fired two TD passes and rushed for two other scores.

The Bollermakers were one of two teams to drop out of the top 20;

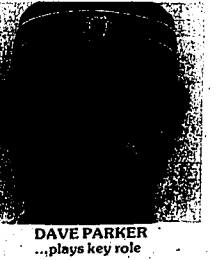

Georgia, No. 14 a week ago, was beaten 22-21 by Wake Forest Saturday in the Bulldogs' opener.

Each week the UPI Board of Coaches ranks the nation's top 20 teams, listing teams from first to 20th. Fifteen points are awarded for a first-place vote and one point for a 15th-place vote.

Edge Montreal 2-1

Pirates claim first place in east

MONTREAL (UPI) — In the most important game of the year for the Pittsburgh Pirates, it was only fitting that Dave Parker played the role of the hero.

"Parker has played hurt this season but now I think he's 100 percent," said Pittsburgh manager Chuck Tanner after Parker, last year's National League MVP, delivered a pair of RBI singles and Don Robinson pitched a six-hitter Monday night to lead the Pirates to a 2-1 victory over Montreal.

The triumph boosted the Pirates into a one-game lead over the Expos in the NL East.

"Robinson pitched one helluva ballgame," said Montreal manager Dick Williams. "He was tough on us. The Pirates just played better ball than we did tonight. They had more scoring chances than we did. We've got five games to play with them so we just need a split to stay in contention. All the games will be a real battle."

Pittsburgh opened a 1-0 lead in the third inning when Omar Moreno led off with a single and stole second. Tim Lincecum sacrificed Moreno to third and Parker followed with a

In the fifth inning, Robinson, who improved his record to 8-6, hit a one-out single and moved to second on a single by Foli. Parker delivered another run-scoring single to give the Pirates a 2-0 lead.

Montreal, which fell one game behind the Pirates, scored its run in the fifth inning when Larry Parrish hit a leadoff double and scored on a subsequent single by Rodney Scott and an error by center fielder Moreno.

Robinson went the distance for the fourth time this season, striking out four and walking two.

The game was originally played under protest by Pittsburgh manager Chuck Tanner, who became angered in the third inning when Willie Stargell was charged with unintentional interference after his fist hit the glove of Montreal catcher Gary Carter. On the play, Parker stole second and was sent back to first by home plate umpire Doug Harvey. However, Tanner withdrew the protest after the Pirates won.

Birds magic number now at three games

DETROIT (UPI) — Scott McGregor tossed an eight-inning and Al Bumbry and Ken Singleton cracked home runs Monday night, enabling the Baltimore Orioles to reduce their "magic number" for clinching the American League East title to three games with a 2-1 triumph over the Detroit Tigers.

Mike Witcox, 12-4, had a three-hitter until Bumbry lined his sixth homer of the season just over the right-field fence to snap a scoreless tie in the eighth inning. Singleton led off the ninth with his 35th homer for what proved to be the winning run.

McGregor, 12-5, allowed only one baserunner as far as third base until the ninth when the Tigers put runners on first and third with two out. A sacrifice fly by Lynn Jones spoiled the shutout bid, but McGregor bore down and got the final outs to record his seventh complete game.

With the Orioles leading the division by 1 1/2 games over the Brewers, any combination of Baltimore victories or Milwaukee losses totaling three will give the Orioles their first division title since 1974.

DAVE PARKER...plays key role

Royals club Angels to trim margin to two

Everyone knew the Kansas City Royals were anxious to show the world they weren't dead yet — but nobody quite expected a massacre.

Al Cowens and Darrell Porter knocked in four runs apiece to help the Royals cut California's lead in the American League West to two games Monday night with a 16-4 hammering of the Angels.

RBI single by Cowens in the third. Kansas City then blew the game open with four runs in the fifth, three in the sixth and five more in the seventh to send the Angels to their third straight loss.

Tampa Bay taking on a John McKay look

By Ron Rapoport
@1978 Chicago Sun-Times

GREEN BAY, Wis. — It took four years, but John McKay finally has succeeded in transplanting the University of Southern California offense to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

It helps, of course, that he no longer has to try to do it with personnel more fit for Mike Post. With Ricky Bell, who has some passing acquaintance with the way things were done in the glory days at USC, and with Jerry Eckwood, who proves to be a quick learner, McKay seems to be well on his way to proving that what worked in the groves of academe can be just as effective out in the real world.

Maybe it was the weather here Sunday — warm and sunny the way Los Angeles can be when the smog isn't forcing people indoors — but Bell and Eckwood brought to life the famous "stretching left and right" plays that make every USC starting tailback an automatic Helms Trophy contender.

Eckwood, a rookie from Arkansas, breezed unrestrained around the left side and 40 yards downhill for a touchdown. Williams' 13-yard touchdown pass to Bell in the end zone ran right end for an equally easy 19-yard score in the third period.

The two running backs gained 98 and 97 yards, respectively, as Tampa Bay, in the course of a 21-0 victory over the Packers, proved once and for all that those lovingly frustrating Go-for-9 days of 1976 and 1977 are gone forever.

There is virtually no resemblance between the team that lost 28 straight games and the one that takes the field today. If the fact that the Buccaneers are 3-0 and almost the top of the NFC Central Division does not prove that vast improvements have been made, then even the most cursory glance of the team in action will do the job.

Eckwood and Bell kept pounding away behind a solidly coached offensive line until the Packers' respected defensive unit finally cracked under the strain. By the time it was going full speed in the second half, Tampa's rushing game was gaining ground right, left and center. In the end, after Tampa finished off the Packers with a six-minute clock-killing drive on the ground in the final period, it won the rushing battle, 233 yards to 89.

Tampa quarterback Doug Williams showed for the third straight week that numbers don't mean everything as he threw passes for the relatively modest total of 132 yards. Even though he came into the game with a 31.1 completion percentage—lowest in the NFC—and even though he still has a tendency to throw bullets that bounce off his receivers' hands, Williams' ability to hurl the long ball accurately is unquestioned. And he seems to be developing something approaching a soft touch, too.

Williams' 13-yard touchdown pass to Bell in the third quarter was a thing of beauty as he flipped the ball just over a four-man Packer blitz and made the connection at the right sideline just beyond the line of scrimmage. Bell carried the ball beyond the goal line untouched.

And the Tampa Bay defense, always a weak team's strongest point, clearly has come into its own. With end Lee Roy Selmon and linebacker Dave Lewis the unquestioned leaders — and with Valley Chambers making good on a McKay challenge to get his act together — the Buccaneers held Green Bay on a touchdown till midway through the final period Sunday. By then, it was much too late.

In all, Tampa Bay is a confident and polished team that firmly believes it is going to the playoffs this year.

"It's been a long time since I've been on a team that started off 3-0," said Bell. "Since my college days. But things are starting to fall into place. If we can stay pretty strong, stay away from injuries, we've got a great shot at making the playoffs."

"We're still putting it together," said Eckwood. "But I think we've got as much talent as anybody in the league."

The first time Bell and Eckwood became aware of each other was in 1975 when they were fighting each other for the college rushing title. Bell, then a senior on McKay's USC team, finally won when Eckwood, a sophomore at Arkansas, hurt his knee late in the season.

After coming back from the injury, Eckwood was used relatively sparingly last year in an Arkansas attack that used a number of running backs. Even the fact that he was gaining about six yards per carry didn't get him the ball more than 100 times. "I think I could have done better," he says.

Thus, Eckwood probably was lucky to be picked by Tampa in the third round of the NFL draft, but he wasted no time in showing the Bucs he had made a smart move. In Tampa's first two games, he carried the ball 59 times and gained 174 yards.

Eckwood's 40-yard scoring dash Sunday was the longest touchdown run in Tampa Bay's short history (the record was only 17 yards), a fact that did not particularly impress McKay.

"That's baseball talk," he said. "Like the second time you slide into second base on a Tuesday with two out."

The addition of Eckwood to the Tampa attack has made it hard for defenses to figure out what's coming next or to stop the Bucs even if they do.

"We were doing almost everything we tried," said Bell. "I welcome him here. He's done a lot for me and a lot for the team."

Johnson seeks pact

BY UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
Milwaukee Bucks' front office Monday the club not going to yield to the salary demands of forward John Johnson.

Johnson, who has not come to training camp, is in the third year of a six-year contract for a reported $200,000 a year. The deal set camp thus far, claiming the team did not honor promises to raise his salary.

On Monday, Fitzgerald said early last year he offered to give Johnson a bonus over and above his contract. But he said Johnson never met with him after the season as expected. Fitzgerald added that Johnson switched from agent Donald Bell to Ted Sorenson, a Los Angeles agent, without telling the Bucks. Fitzgerald said he had told Johnson he would not make such a move without informing the club.

Johnson, who last season averaged 25.8 and 8.8 points and 7.8 rebounds, was at home in Los Angeles and unavailable for comment.

When asked what the bonus offer was, Fitzgerald said it was about $100,000. Fitzgerald added that if the club renegotiated Johnson's contract, it would have to do so with the terms of the league because the NBA player system is based on contracts with players.

Fitzgerald said Johnson had a guaranteed five-year contract. The club president also said Johnson received a large bonus for signing to the promise from Dell, his former agent, that Johnson would not renegotiate.

"You can't put it in the bank I will not do that," Fitzgerald said of Dell's response at the time. "This was the man representing Marquette's interests."

Fitzgerald has denied that the Bucks have not honored promises to Johnson.

"I keep my promises. I resent when someone says I don't," he said. Fitzgerald admitted he does not have a good relationship.

"I'll really miss my job," Fitzgerald said of Sorenson, who helped toward Alex English leave the Bucks as a free agent before last season.

Milwaukee Bucks Coach Don Nelson, who is also director of player personnel, said Monday Johnson's contract is not really a bonus. "It's just a gift for his past season."

"I'm not going to trade him, period. I think he is certainly one of the best, if not the best, forwards in the league," Nelson said.

Ann Meyers, having filed in her bid to make the Indiana Pacers of the National Basketball Association, will be heavily engaged in negotiations with the New York Stars who will try to sign her to the Women's Basketball League.

The league's new rules require exclusive rights to the former UCLA player from the Houston Angels and have 10 days in which to reach an agreement.

Meyers' considered one of the top players in women's basketball. She has been with the Stars for two seasons and has led the club to a 75 percent win record. She was offered a position as color commentator in the league's broadcast.

After Ann was rejected by the Stars and top reporters she would consider playing in our league," said Stars president Edward G. Fordson. "We'll be the Stars definitely want her to play."

David Greenwood said Monday his prolonged contract negotiations with the Chicago Bulls were still in the early stages. He said he has a good chance of signing with the Bulls for an estimated $1.5 million.

After his second workout on the club Monday, Greenwood said, "I was mostly playing for a couple hours. I'm very happy to be here."

Philadelphia Eagles' All-Pro linebacker Bill Berkey said Monday he was not depressed about a knee injury that will sideline him for the season and added he still intended to play "two, three, maybe four years."

Berkey spoke via telephone from his room at Penn Memorial Hospital following surgery for the injury. He said he was disappointed about the carriage, an injury sustained in the opening moments of the Eagles' 1977 season over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Team physician Dr. Vincent DiGirolano, who performed the surgery, called the operation a success but said Berkey will have to sit out the rest of the year.

While up on the injury, the 34-year-old, 11-year NFL veteran was hospitalized.

"I had played 11 years without any kind of injury," said Berkey, who said he was "very happy to be back."

"I said, 'Bill, Berkey, you have been very good to you. So how can you be down and how can you be hurt?'" Berkey had not missed a game in 73 straight for the Eagles since joining the club in 1974. He has scored only one touchdown and two goals in his career.

Mike Buzza, the "young tight end" with the New York Islanders who last year became only the second player in NHL history to score 61 goals in a season, Monday signed a three-year contract with the club. Buzza, 22, has scored 12 goals in 81 games during his two-year career in the NHL. He was happy to stay with New York.

"I'm happy about the contract and the salary," Buzza said. "I scored 63 goals in 1978-79 and helped the Islanders to the best regular-season record in the league." I look into consideration that the Islanders were my first team and that's the reason I want to stay here.

Blazer recruit

Portland Trail Blazers' Stan Eckwood may be a ninth round draft choice 'sleeper.' The team's interest in Eckwood was touched by a letter sent to the NBA club by a scout who mentioned that he had All-American Slazenger in a post-season game. The Blazers checked this out with Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton who told the Blazers that Eckwood can play.

Blazer scout Mike Ford, who has been scouting for the team, indicated to him that he would like to remain at UMKC an extra season if he should be drafted by a team.

Southern Methodist Coach Ron Meyer said Monday scout indicated to him that he would like to remain at UMKC an extra season if he should be drafted by a team.

The White House Monday denied reports that U.S. basketball players would be allowed to play in the USSR.

Associate press secretary Claudia Fredricks said the White House would not comment on reports that U.S. basketball players would be allowed to play in the USSR.

Mass Township said yesterday that he was scheduled to visit Carter last Friday — he did after meeting for 3,000 miles.

Ingram's condition has "substantially improved," said the Swedish former three-time world cup holder will be returning to the World Cup final on the end of the month, his doctor said.

Trainer Ray McInerney said Chaney, who played in the World Cup in 1968, is set for at least three days. Chaney has experienced less trouble the past two seasons and said he should not have been competing.

Charles Dell, the 1976 "Sportswoman of the Year," 34-year-old "Maricopa" team that won the 1974 Baseball Tournament, has died at the age of 69. He was born in Los Angeles, Calif., and had been in the major leagues from 1932-33.

Plane crash cause

Munson 'qualified'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Records indicate New York Yankee catcher Thurman Munson was "thoroughly qualified" to fly the jet in which he was killed in a crash last month, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said Monday.

A spokesman for Dennis Feldman responded to a request by agency investigator Edward McAvoy who said preliminary evidence indicates Munson improperly used the throttles of the $1.4 million Cessna Citation at the time of the Aug. 2 crash in Canton, Ohio.

Feldman said Munson was interviewed by telephone in Chicago, said Munson had the necessary time and money with which to obtain the advanced ratings in a relatively short period.

"The achievement of the ratings is not surprising in the case of a multimillionaire who worked six months a year and had ample time to pursue this avocation," Feldman said.

McAvoy said tests found nothing mechanically wrong with Munson's plane, and evidence so far indicates Munson did not use the throttles properly.

"We've got the engines to the point where they were found with no malfunctions," he said, "and with the way the pilot's passengers described the advancement of the throttles they were not advanced in a rapid and positive manner."

The FAA has designated so much of its authority it's pathetic, McAvoy told the Times.

Feldman said, "In the absence of specifics, we see nothing wrong with the system, which has licensed hundreds of thousands of qualified pilots."

Both Feldman and McAvoy, who was interviewed by telephone in Chicago, said Munson had the necessary time and money with which to obtain the advanced ratings in a relatively short period.

"The achievement of the ratings is not surprising in the case of a multimillionaire who worked six months a year and had ample time to pursue this avocation," Feldman said.

McAvoy said tests found nothing mechanically wrong with Munson's plane, and evidence so far indicates Munson did not use the throttles properly.

First annual Powerlifter tourney set at Jerome

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News special editor
JEROME — Some of the best powerlifters from the international Region will compete Saturday in the first annual Southern Idaho Open Powerlifter Meet at Jerome High School.

Sponsored by the Jerome Recreation District, there will be competition in at least nine divisions and perhaps 12 if enough entries are received. Action gets underway at 11 a.m. in the lighter weight classifications.

According to Mike Requa, a powerlifter himself but unable to compete because of a shoulder injury, there are some top-notch lifters for spectators to keep an eye on.

"These include Brent Van Pelt of Mountain Home, who at 140 pounds holds the state record in the bench press at each weight and then an overall outstanding powerlifter for the meet also will be honored.

About 30 lifters are expected to compete. Entries will be accepted the day of the competition.

For more information contact the Jerome Recreation District.

Fought surprised by victory

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (UPI) — John Fought says he was especially eager to enter the $150,000 PGA event at Warwick Hills Country Club, figuring he could get a few thousand of gold and buy a car at a discount.

When the 25-year-old Portland, Ore., native ended up with a playoff victory and the $27,000 top prize. "I couldn't wait to get here," said Fought, who has a degree in accounting from Brigham Young University.

"I was going to buy a Buick. I figured I'd get a discount and play in the tournament, too," the 5-foot-7 Fought said. "To do this saves me some more money. I'm in another world."

Fought had started the day two strokes off the lead. But he came out of the pack to catch the leaders, make a clutch birdie on the 18th hole and then beat veteran Jim Simons in a playoff to win.

The five-hole, 3-under-par 69 Fought shot Sunday gave him a 72-hole total of 280, following rounds of 71, 72 and 68. The win, Fought's first PGA victory, came on the second sudden-death playoff hole.

Fought had set up the playoff by sinking a crucial six-foot birdie putt on the first hole of regulation. Simons, a two-time tour winner, already had finished at 8-under-par 280 after a final round of 67.

On the first playoff hole, the pair, No. 16, Fought tipped out a 14-foot birdie putt while Simons' winning bird of 8-foot missed on the right.

Fought put his tee shot on the left edge of the fairway. Simons pulled his tee shot to the left. The 5-foot-7 Simons knocked a strong chip shot into an opposite bunker, then blasted eight feet putt to the hole.

After logging his first putt within three feet of the hole, Fought watched as Simons missed his bogey attempt. He then tapped in the short putt.

"I thought I had lost the tournament the first playoff hole when I missed that putt because Jim is a very good putter," Fought said. "On No. 17, after I saw what Jim did, all I wanted to do was get my first putt close."

ace of hearts lead followed by a diamond shift. South draws trumps, discards his two diamonds on clubs and makes a slam.

For years, match-point players have been bidding the diamond suit in situations like this.

Other players have grown accustomed to this type of action and such bids are like a two-headed rattle snake. They bite both ways.

This time the two-diamond bid backfired. West would probably have opened a diamond in any event. He opened the suit and South was held to the minimum.
