Soviet troop talks break down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Talks between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko Thursday on the presence of Soviet troops in Cuba broke down Thursday, prompting President Carter to summon his top diplomatic and military advisers to the White House to discuss the stalemate.

Press secretary Jody Powell indicated that Carter has set a date to address the nation next week on the combat brigade and would present intelligence information supporting the administration's claim that up to 3,000 Soviet troops are based in Cuba. No date was announced.

Officials said Gromyko was totally unyielding on the troop issue during his meetings in New York with Vance. The two officials officially reported "no progress" on their New York talks.

Powell the situation had not reached a crisis stage but he declined to give substantive details of the 90 minute meeting in the Cabinet room. Most of the officials, summoned to the White House from throughout the city, were to return Friday to discuss the stalemate on the sensitive political issue.

"It would not be appropriate to put this in the context of a crisis," Powell said. "Don't whip it up. I would not characterize it as a crisis meeting. I don't want to comment on the substance of the talks. I was instructed not to say anything."

Asked if any military steps had been ordered, he replied: "No."

Vice President Walter Mondale rushed to the White House from a meeting at a hotel with Minnesota Democrats.

Others summoned to the session included Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; CIA director Stansfield Turner; Carter's national security affairs adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski; Defense Secretary Harold Brown; deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher; and White House counsel Lloyd Cutler.

Powell said Carter, in his address to the nation, would make "sufficient information" available on the presence of the troops, indicating it could include photographs and intercepted messages.

Vance met privately with Carter for a half hour before they joined the other officials.

Most of those at the meeting are members of the National Security Council and are to return to the White House Friday for a foreign policy breakfast meeting, Powell said.

Carter has been under growing pressure from some senators to demand a complete pullout of the brigade. Key congressional leaders have said the SALT II treaty with the Soviets will not be ratified by the Senate unless the troops are withdrawn.

Arizona closes leaking atomic plant

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — The American Atomics Corp., whose plant was seized by the National Guard to stop low-level leakage of radioactive tritium, charged Thursday that untrained workers were mishandling the material in packing it for shipment out of Tucson.

But the county health director said it was more dangerous to leave the tritium, worth more than $500,000, in the central Tucson factory than to move it.

Acting on orders from Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, who declared a state of emergency, National Guardsmen took over the plant, which supplies tritium for luminous watch faces and glow-in-the-dark signs.

Babbitt said the tritium would be removed within 48 hours. He told the Arizona Daily Sun newspaper in Flagstaff that it would be stored at the Naval Army Depot near Flagstaff.

Babbitt, a member of the president's 11-member commission investigating the radiation leak at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Pennsylvania, ordered the plant seized because he felt American Atomics was moving too slowly in shutting down its mid-town plant in this city of 250,000 residents.

Tritium contamination was found in $300,000 worth of food stored in a central kitchen near the plant which prepared lunches for Tucson's schools.

Company officials admitted there was little health danger in the packaging process of the tritium for removal, but they criticized the way it was being conducted.

"Dean Nelson, a company spokesman, expressed concern that the persons packaging the tritium are not trained."

"We have special equipment designed and developed by us," Nelson said. "They haven't requested any blueprints or anything. We have strived to comply with all the tight controls but when the governor declares an emergency they don't have to comply with those restrictions."

Nelson also alleged the plant's radiation alarms have been going off during the removal process "even to the point that the Arizona Atomic Energy Commission officials turned off the alarm Wednesday so they could work."

County Health Director Dr. Dileep Bal said he is satisfied the packaging of the tritium in 55-gallon drums and its removal from the plant could be conducted without any major health risk.

"I'm delighted they are moving the stuff," he said. "There was more danger posed by the fact Atomics was venting emissions of tritium every day and that's a more real danger than the short-term dangers involved in moving it."

Carter gets Department of Education

By SPENCER RICH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The House gave President Carter one of the biggest legislative victories of his presidency Thursday as it completed congressional action on a bill to create a separate Cabinet-level Department of Education.

The House vote on the final compromise bill, creating a new department with nearly 18,000 employees and an annual budget of $14 billion, was 215 to 201 — a bigger margin than expected.

The bill now goes to the White House for the president's signature. Under its terms, the new department could legally be brought into being within the next few days, but it may be a few weeks before a transition team to be named by Budget Director James McIntyre actually works out plans to implement creation of the new department.

President Carter called final passage "a significant milestone in my effort to make the federal government more effective. We will now have a single Cabinet department which can provide the coherence and sense of direction needed" to manage billions of dollars in U.S. education funds.

He called the bill "one of my highest legislative priorities of the past two years." He said he was grateful to House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., who made a plea for final passage Thursday. House floor manager Jack Brooks, D-Texas, and Senate floor manager Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn.

Lobbyists for the White House and the National Education Association, who had conducted a massive lobbying campaign for the bill over the past two years, burst into cheers and applause in the corridor leading to the House chamber as the tally mounted to 215 and the vote ended. "This is a new day in American education," said an NEA lobbyist jubilantly. However, lobbyists for the American Federation of Teachers, which had opposed the bill, stood glumly and silently at the other side of the corridor as the roll-call finished.

With passage of the bill after two years of bitter and difficult lobbying, including a major personal effort by Vice President Walter Mondale, speculation turned to the question of who will be the secretary of the new department.

Analysis names that have surfaced as possibilities from time to time over the past few months have been Jerry Apodaca, former Democratic governor of New Mexico; Wilson Riles, superintendent of instruction of the State of California; Alan Campbell, head of the Office of Personnel Management (formerly Civil Service Commission); and Mary Berry, assistant secretary of health, education and welfare for education.

In winning passage of the bill creating the department, President Carter was carrying out a 1976 campaign pledge to the NEA, which subsequently endorsed him for president and is expected to do so again, perhaps in the next few days. His arguments for the department included enhanced prestige for education in having a department and Cabinet spokesman all its own and the possibility of speeding up educational decisions at the federal level. Carter said the new department would save $100 million a year or more by clearing out bureaucratic underbrush.

But he said he had slowed up educational decision-making within HEW. HEW now will be renamed the Department of Health and Human Services.

Although the NEA, many education organizations and unions and groups like the National Urban League endorsed the proposal for a department, other unions and civil rights groups opposed it. They feared it would break up the civil rights coalition by detaching education and fragment services for the poor now in HEW. Conservatives like Rep. John Erlenborn, R-Ill., said it would lead to federal domination of education.

1980 budget contains $28 billion deficit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, sharply divided on how to fight inflation, Thursday approved a $548.2 billion federal budget for fiscal year 1980, which starts Monday.

The vote was 212-206. Not a single Republican supported the budget. Fifty-two Democrats also opposed it.

The spending figure was reduced by only $400 million from one the House rejected a week ago.

The proposal now goes to conference with a Senate-passed version which calls for $1.9 billion less spending.

The House budget projects a $28.9 billion federal deficit in 1980, which would represent a steady decline from $48.8 billion in 1978 and $33.5 billion approved by Congress last year.

House Budget Committee Chairman Robert Gialmo, D-Conn., said lowering the deficit will help curb inflation. For the same purpose, he said, the budget proposal includes no tax cut.

The proposed budget calls for $53.7 billion more spending in 1980 than 1979, and $16 billion more than Congress targeted for 1980 last May.

Gialmo said most of the increase since May is due to the worsening economy. Inflation swells government costs and recession adds to unemployment compensation and welfare.

"I don't like a $28 billion deficit," Gialmo said. "I would like a surplus. But we have a responsibility to provide for the common defense. We have a responsibility to look after the general welfare of our people. We cannot turn our backs on these people."

The House proposal would provide a $2 billion smaller increase for defense than the Senate's. The House version also contains more money to help the poor meet energy costs and provides 100,000 more public service jobs than the Senate.

Republicans charged the House budget proposal would mean higher taxes, as inflation pushes people into higher brackets, slower economic growth, more unemployment and more inflation.

Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, said it continues the "spending ways" of Congress, which he called the main cause of inflation.

Republicans proposed an alternate budget with a $20 billion tax cut starting Jan. 1 and spending cuts to bring the deficit below $20 billion. They said this would spur the economy, hold down unemployment and reduce inflation. Their proposal was rejected by the House last week, and Republicans got no chance to bring it to the floor Thursday for a second vote.

Gialmo called the GOP proposal "a pie in the sky accounting." He said a big tax cut would be "the most inflationary thing we can possibly do at this time."

The House and Senate are unlikely to resolve their differences over the budget by the start of the fiscal year, but this will make little real difference. The budget sets total money limits on appropriations and other legislation for 1980 but programs do not stop when it is delayed.

Crosses Idaho in the night

Transcontinental balloon sails over Rockies

LANDER, Wyo. (UPI) — The 14-story high DeVance Transamerica balloon soared toward the Continental Divide Thursday in its attempt to make the first non-stop trip by manned balloon from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast.

"What a magnificent, spectacular view," reported Dr. Fred Hyde, 10-foot specialist from this 10-by-10 foot gondola suspended below the helium 38,800-foot gas bag.

During the night over Idaho, Hyde said two of the four persons aboard suffered headaches which he attributed to the altitude, but the headaches soon passed.

Hyde spent most of his time attempting to repair the balloon's aircraft radio which was put out of commission when a coaxial cable tore loose on takeoff Wednesday at Tillamook, Ore.

However, the project employed an amateur shortwave radio and a CB radio to communicate with ground.

The only other problem was fear that the crew's supply of candy was being consumed too fast to last until its landing next week at Norfolk, Va.

The balloon was moving at 22 mph, several miles per hour faster than expected, as it rode a westerly wind for which the crew had waited in Oregon several weeks to reach before lifting off.

It was believed the westerly, a wind that flows at high altitude across the entire continent, would carry the balloon all the way on its 2,300-mile course to Virginia.

The balloon began its ascent over the Rockies south of Salmon Wednesday night and was at an altitude of 15,300 feet.

"It's pretty from the air — all these round things they use to irrigate with look kind of polka-dotted in the sun," said Hyde, Kansas City eye surgeon who is also communications director for the project.

Asked if there were any problems, Hyde said, "We can't get the radios to work and once we get past Pendleton (Ore.) this telephone probably won't work." He also said some television tapes dropped off for ground personnel associated with the project were lost.

The balloon lifted off from Tillamook on the Oregon Coast Wednesday morning after a 3 1/2 hour countdown had stretched to 6 1/2 hours.

Hyde had worked with amateur radio operators across the country in his successful efforts to repair the radio problem, which some felt was caused by a faulty aerial.

Meteorologist Bob Rice said Hyde took his regular sleep time before starting repairs on the radio. "That should tell you roughly how panicked they are," he said.

Rice is chief meteorologist for Weather Service Inc., the Bedford, Mass., firm supplying the project's weather data. Through most of Wednesday, his equipment was the only communications link with the balloon crew.

The radio problem was not considered a danger to the mission, which was planned as the first manned non-stop balloon flight across the United States from Coast to Coast. The crew hopes to land near Norfolk, Va., 6 1/2 days after its Wednesday takeoff from a World War II blimp base.

Several problems, none of them major, occurred during the early morning hours as the balloon was being prepared for takeoff. A rigging bolt didn't fit the first time it was put in place, someone forgot to attach a metal pin and line for manual release of the balloon from its tether, and an on-board computer battery had to be replaced.

Good morning!

Firefighters look over burned out wreckage of a tanker truck that exploded Wednesday causing a fire that burned six storage tanks filled with crude oil and killing one man

Jury quits for the night

GARDEN CITY, Kan. (UPI) — A Finney County District Court jury deliberated two hours Thursday in the murder trial of a woman accused of killing her 3-year-old son and threatening to kill three other children, but failed to reach a verdict.

The jury was excused for the night at 10 p.m., when the foreman said the panel was "no where near" reaching a verdict. The jurors were instructed to resume their discussions Friday.

The woman is charged with first-degree murder in the shooting death of Lloyd Mitchell Locklear II. Her defense attorney has attempted to convince the jury which was expected to begin deliberation later in the day — that Mrs. Locklear was insane at the time of the shooting.

But her husband, who was sitting in the first row during Mrs. Locklear's 2 1/2 hours on the witness stand Thursday, testified earlier in the trial that the gun went off before he lunged at her.

PLO recognition conditional

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan flatly rejected any recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization Thursday, denouncing it as a terrorist group bent on destroying his country.

Most Arab delegations walked out of the hall of the United Nations when Dayan started to speak, including Farouk Khaddour, head of the delegation of the PLO, and Zehdi Labib Terzi, the PLO's Permanent Observer to the U.N.

But in a taped interview made available in Tel Aviv, Dayan said Israel would negotiate with the PLO if it ceases being a military organization and becomes a "political movement."

Railroad operation slated

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Terminal Railway Co. tentatively agreed late Thursday to accept a government order to provide service along the financially troubled and strikebound Rock Island line.

The ICC announced in Washington Wednesday the KCT had been ordered to provide 60-day emergency service during the autumn harvest. The Rock Island line is a major midwest grain shipper.

More sewage spills into bay

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Millions of gallons of partially treated and raw sewage are seeping into the San Francisco Bay, threatening the exotic birds, waterfowl and fish life that abound there.

Operations at two of three sewage treatment plants, where breakdowns caused the toxic sewage to spill into bay waters, returned to normal Thursday, but the most serious pollution problem — at the south end of the bay — remained.

There, the failure of a sewage control plant three weeks ago resulted in a daily flow of 120 million gallons of partially treated effluent, turning waters a dark-brown and killing batches of bait shrimp.

Huey Newton case dropped

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — The state Thursday abandoned a five-year effort to send Black Panther leader Huey Newton to prison for the slaying of a 17-year-old prostitute.

Newton smiled broadly as he embraced and kissed many of the 50 friends who showed up at the Alameda County courtroom expecting just such an outcome.

Superior Court Judge Donald McCullum said, "It is the order of this court that this case be dismissed in the furtherance of justice."

His ruling was requested by Tom Orloff, the prosecutor who handled the state's case in two trials, both of which ended in deadlocks on charges that Newton shot and killed Kathleen Smith on an Oakland street corner early on the morning of Aug. 6, 1974.

Detroit lays off city workers

DETROIT (UPI) — In an attempt to reduce Detroit's projected $70 million deficit, Mayor Coleman Young Thursday ordered the layoffs of more than 900 city employees — including 400 police officers.

"Let no one mistake these cutbacks today as an invitation to go crazy," he said.

Young said the layoffs, which also will affect the city's fire department and 15 other agencies, will save nearly $16 million.

"The reductions we've made in the police department will have no effect on the number of uniformed officers patrolling Detroit's streets and the cuts in the fire department will not necessitate the closing of any firehouses," Young said.

Carter signs canal bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Thursday signed legislation implementing the Panama Canal Treaties, which call for the United States to turn over control of the waterway to Panama in the year 2000.

The treaties themselves were ratified by the Senate last year, but the fight over a bill to implement them ended only Wednesday with the House approving a compromise version of the measure 232-188. The Senate passed it Tuesday.

The legislation sets up an administrative structure to operate the canal for the next 20 years. The process formally begins Monday.

Officials of the United States and Panama will participate in ceremonies Monday marking the effective date of the treaties.

Panel exempts more oil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee agreed Thursday to exempt all hard-to-recover crude oil from President Carter's windfall profits tax proposal, topping off another $7.5 billion in potential federal revenue.

The committee approved, 12-1, an amendment by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, that would exclude from the tax all tertiary oil — crude that is so difficult to extract it must be flushed from the ground with expensive detergents.

Woman retracts cocaine story

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A woman who claimed she watched Hamilton Jordan snort cocaine at a 1977 Beverly Hills party says she never really saw the White House chief of staff use the drug, her lawyer reported Thursday.

Los Angeles attorney Irving Osher said he was forced to bring down on the earlier declaration after interviewing client Lana Jean Rawls on Wednesday.

He said Mrs. Rawls, former wife of the Air Force pilot, said she saw Jordan snort cocaine at the party on Oct. 21, 1977, mainly because she sold a Jordan friend $500 worth of the powdery drug that night.

Osher quoted her saying, "I saw these people go into their bathroom. I saw these people turn their backs ... The way they acted, I knew they were using cocaine."

As Osher noted, "That's the difference between direct evidence and circumstantial evidence."

The revised version of the Rawls story led the FBI with a weaker case against Jordan. The agency is five weeks into a preliminary investigation that covers charges he snorted cocaine at a New York disco in 1978 and two California parties in 1977.

Justice Department sources said there is no direct evidence Jordan used cocaine in California. And the New York case is shaky because of the questionable credibility of the main accuser — a co-worker of Studio 54 who is seeking leniency on a tax evasion indictment, and an alleged drug dealer.

At the same time, reports sprung up of a new potential witness in the inquiry — a 20-year-old Los Angeles political worker said to have chauffeured Jordan and his colleagues back to their hotel after the 1977 party

Rawls attended.

The Los Angeles Herald-Examiner said FBI agents have been ordered to interview the campaign worker, Andrew Cohen. The newspaper said Cohen also was reportedly present the next night when Jordan allegedly used drugs again.

Final Amtrak bill OK'd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Thursday passed and sent to President Carter legislation cutting the Amtrak passenger excise tax but providing a long-term commitment to purchase new equipment to modernize the remaining trains.

The bill also orders Amtrak to increase the purchase of low fares for the elderly and handicapped, and increases federal matching funds for states that want to subsidize passenger service.

The bill passed by voice vote.

A final effort by Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., to save the entire Amtrak system failed when the Senate voted 44-44 that this amendment was not germane to a pending appropriations bill. The vote killed the amendment.

Five long-distance passenger trains about 20 percent of Amtrak's route will be started in Los Angeles Sunday as a result of the legislation.

However, a number of trains President Carter had wanted to discontinue were saved by the legislation that Congress began drafting this summer when the gasoline crisis was sending motorists back to trains in record numbers.

In addition, at least two new trains will be started, including the Los Angeles to Ogden, Utah, through Las Vegas, and the other from Chicago to Indianapolis.

The bill provides $912.7 million in fiscal 1980 and $884.9 million in fiscal 1981, much of it for operating subsidies, plus $229 million in fiscal 1982, most of it for new equipment and capital improvements.

Amtrak President Alan Boyd said the $701 million in capital funds cumulative over the three years will enable Amtrak to modernize its passenger fleet, including a new low level platform for the eastern routes where tight clearances will not allow operation of the new double-deck Superliners.

The five trains to begin their last runs on Sunday are:

- The National Limited from New York to Kansas City.
- The North Coast Hiawatha from Chicago to St. Petersburg.
- The Floridian from Chicago to Miami and St. Petersburg.
- The Lone Star from Chicago to Houston.
- The Hillopper from Boston to Catskills, Ky.

In addition, the Champion from New York to St. Petersburg and the Silver Meteor from New York to Miami will be combined as far south as Jacksonville, Fla.

Missouri has elected to subsidize a Kansas City-St. Louis train along the route of the National Limited, and Houston-Chicago service also may eventually be provided through a new train from Houston to Temple, Texas, which will connect with the Chicago-Laredo Interamerican.

Also, parts of some of these routes are served by other trains.

Today's weather

Partly cloudy, but high pressure will build

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and Gooding-Jerome areas.

Partly cloudy today, mostly sunny Saturday. Lows 40 to 45, highs in the upper 70s.

Harvest outlook including haying and potato, dry through Tuesday with above normal temperatures. Spotty light morning dew.

Spraying forecast calls for winds between 5 and 10 mph through Friday afternoon.

Pan evaporation, 20 today and Saturday. Four inch soil temperature trends, all soil temperatures to remain above 45 degrees through Saturday.

Hayley, Camas Prairie, and Wood River Valley.

Partly cloudy today but mostly sunny Saturday. Lows in the 30 to 35 bracket, highs 70 to 75.

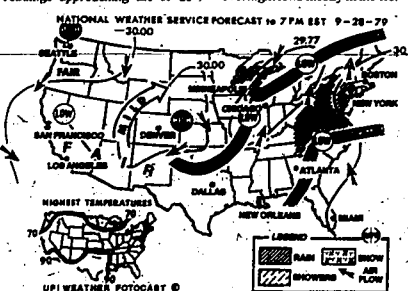

Mostly fair skies prevailed over Idaho Thursday. Some areas of valley fog were evident Thursday morning, especially in the higher locations. High pressure building over Idaho was responsible for the improvement in the weather pattern.

While Idaho is enjoying late summer-type weather, another Pacific storm system is moving toward the West Coast and pushing a few showers into extreme northwestern Washington. This system could spread scattered showers into northern Idaho today and partly cloudy conditions into the southern part of the state.

Temperatures were warming Thursday under the mostly clear skies. Early afternoon highs were mostly in the 70s with a few readings approaching the 80 degree mark. Low temperature in the state Thursday was 30 degrees at Stanley and Fairfield.

Precipitation during the past 24 hours has been light and confined mostly to the southeast.

The extended forecast for the period Sunday through Tuesday calls for mostly dry weather with above normal temperatures. Highs in the 70s and lower 80s with overnight lows mostly in the 50s.

World energy plan offered

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — President Jose Lopez Portillo of Mexico, insisting energy sources must not be the privilege of the powerful, Thursday proposed a world energy plan aimed at "bridging the gap" with the future.

Lopez Portillo, who opens two days of talks with President Carter in Washington Friday, announced his nine-point energy plan in an address to the 44th U.N. General Assembly.

"Energy sources are the shared responsibility of all mankind" and "must not be the privilege of the powerful," the Mexican president said.

He said abundance was relative and energy sources had limits "and will come to an end."

"We want to bridge the gap between extremes by making present-day petroleum supply, demand and price structures compatible with the alternatives we seek for the future," Lopez Portillo said.

More slavery indictments expected in Louisiana

FARMERVILLE, La. (UPI) — Authorities who charged a local official with enslaving Mexican laborers with "chains, shackles and locks" said Thursday more indictments could follow in their investigation into illegal alien activity in north Louisiana.

Two counts of slavery peonage — forced labor for payment of a debt — were filed against Connie Ray Alford, 49, of Trumbo, La., a farmer and the finance chairman of the Union Parish Police Jury, the county governing body. He was arrested Wednesday and released that night on $50,000 bond.

No arraignment was scheduled, but it must be held within 10 days.

The slavery peonage law has been used only rarely since the Civil War.

Alford was indicted on charges of holding two illegal Mexican aliens "by the use of chains, shackles, locks and by the use of other threats and intimidations" on his poultry and cattle farm.

He also was accused of concealment of illegal aliens in hiding those two and seven other Mexicans from immigration and Naturalization Service officers who visited the farm.

Alford could be jailed for up to 55 years and fined as much as $18,000 if convicted on all counts.

All nine aliens were in custody at the Shreveport, La., City Jail as material witnesses in the case, said Assistant U.S. Attorney A.M. Stroud III.

"We plan at this time to present additional information to the grand jury concerning the illegal alien traffic in north Louisiana," Stroud said.

The next grand jury session is scheduled for mid-October, but Stroud said he doubted more indictments would be returned that soon.

"This will be a long investigation," he said.

Despite the indictment, one of Alford's colleagues on the parish governing body — the equivalent of a county commission — said Alford probably would win re-election in an upcoming election.

Pay raise dominates Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Thursday to freeze congressional salaries at $57,500 for another year and said no future pay raises should go into effect until congressmen face the voters in a general election.

The action came as the Senate approved, 76-11, a resolution continuing funding for several government agencies whose regular fiscal 1980 appropriations bills are stalled in Congress.

The Senate spent virtually the entire day wrangling over various aspects of the proposed congressional pay increase for members, then finally took the appropriations committee's recommendation that only top paid federal workers, not House and Senate members, get a 5.5 percent raise.

In other votes, the Senate killed, 63-32, a proposal by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to cut salaries for all federal workers and office holders if Congress fails to balance the federal budget and rejected, 67-30, an amendment by Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., to deny the 5.5 percent salary hike to the high paid federal workers.

Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said House-Senate conferees would meet Friday to try to iron out differences with a House bill which calls for all congressmen to be included in the 5.5 percent raise.

With little debate and without objection, the Senate approved an amendment by Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., to prohibit members of Congress from collecting any raise they vote themselves until after the next general election.

It would affect all members of the House and one-third of the members of the Senate who are up for re-election next year, freezing congressional pay at $57,500 through January.

The Senate bill would grant the 5.5 percent salary hike only to the 32,000 government workers who earn at least $47,500.

Judge stops salaries of California justices

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — A judge Thursday halted payment of the $73,723 yearly salary of California Chief Justice Rose Bird and salaries of the other six state Supreme Court Justices, saying proof must be shown that they have resolved all cases pending before them within 90 days of their submission.

Sacramento County Superior Court Judge Joseph Babich issued a restraining order in a suit filed by a law-and-order group that unsuccessfully campaigned to defeat Ms. Bird in last November's general election.

It requires Controller Ken Cory to withhold Ms. Bird's salary and the $69,386 annual salaries of the six associate justices pending further action by the lower court.

The suit is based on a 101-year provision of the state Constitution that prohibits payment of salaries for judges who fail to make rulings 90 days after cases are submitted, said John Felix, executive director of the Law and Order Campaign Committee.

Jury quits for the night

GARDEN CITY, Kan. (UPI) — A Finney County District Court jury deliberated two hours Thursday in the murder trial of a woman accused of killing her 9-year-old son and threatening to kill three other children, but failed to reach a verdict. The jury was excused for the night at 10 p.m., when the foreman said the panel was "no where near" reaching a verdict. The jurors were instructed to resume their discussions Friday. The woman is charged with first-degree murder in the shooting death of Lloyd Mitchell Locklear II. Her defense attorney has attempted to convince the jury which was expected to begin deliberation later in the day — that Mrs. Locklear was insane at the time of the shooting.

But her husband, who was sitting in the first row during Mrs. Locklear's 2 1/2 hours on the witness stand Thursday, testified earlier in the trial that the gun went off before he lunged at her.

PLO recognition conditional

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan flatly rejected any recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization Thursday, denouncing it as a terrorist group bent on destroying his country.

Most Arab delegations walked out of the hall of the United Nations when Dayan started to speak, including Farouk Khatami, head of the delegation of the PLO, and Zehdi Labib Terzi, the PLO's Permanent Observer to the U.N. But in a taped interview made available in Tel Aviv, Dayan said Israel would negotiate with the PLO if it ceases being a military organization and becomes a "political movement."

Railroad operation slated

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Terminal Railway Co. tentatively agreed late Thursday to accept a government order to provide service along the financially troubled and strikebound Rock Island Line.

The ICC announced in Washington Wednesday the KCT had been ordered to provide 50-day emergency service during the autumn harvest. The Rock Island line is a major Midwest grain shipper.

More sewage spills into bay

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Millions of gallons of partially treated and raw sewage are seeping into the San Francisco Bay, threatening the exotic birds, waterfowl and fish life that abound there. Operations at two of three sewage treatment plants, where breakdowns caused the toxic sewage to spill into bay waters, returned to normal Thursday, but the most serious pollution problem — at the south end of the bay — remains.

There, the failure of a sewage control plant three weeks ago resulted in a daily flow of 120 million gallons of partially treated effluent, turning waters a dark-brown and killing batches of bait shrimp.

Huey Newton case dropped

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — The state Thursday abandoned a five-year effort to send Black Panther leader Huey Newton to prison for the slaying of a 17-year-old prostitute. Newton smiled broadly as he embraced and kissed many of the 50 friends who showed up at the Alameda County courtroom expecting just such an outcome. Superior Court Judge Donald McCullum said, "It is the order of this court that this case be dismissed in the furtherance of justice."

His ruling was requested by Tom Orloff, the prosecutor who handled the state's case in two trials, both of which ended in deadlocks on charges that Newton shot and killed Kathleen Smith on an Oakland street corner early on the morning of Aug. 6, 1974.

Detroit lays off city workers

DETROIT (UPI) — In an attempt to reduce Detroit's projected $70 million deficit, Mayor Coleman Young Thursday ordered the layoffs of more than 900 city employees — including 400 police officers.

"Let no one mistake these cutbacks today as an invitation to go crazy," he said. Young said the layoffs, which also will affect the city's fire department and 15 other agencies, will save nearly $16 million.

"The reductions we've made in the police department will have no effect on the number of uniformed officers patrolling Detroit's streets and the cuts in the fire department will not necessitate the closing of any fire houses," Young said.

Carter signs canal bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Thursday signed legislation implementing the Panama Canal Treaties, which call for the United States to turn over control of the waterway to Panama in the year 2000.

The treaties themselves were ratified by the Senate last year, but the fight over a bill to implement them only ended Wednesday with the House approving a compromise version of the measure 232-188. The Senate passed it Tuesday.

The legislation sets up an administrative structure to operate the canal for the next 20 years. The process formally begins Monday.

Officials of the United States and Panama will participate in ceremonies Monday marking the effective date of the treaties.

Panel exempts more oil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Finance Committee agreed Thursday to exempt all hard-to-recover crude oil from President Carter's windfall profits tax proposal, topping off another $7.5 billion in potential federal revenues.

The committee approved 12-1 an amendment by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, that would exclude from the tax all tertiary oil — crude that is so difficult to extract it must be flushed from the ground with expensive detergents.

Woman retracts cocaine story

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A woman who claimed she watched Hamilton Jordan snort cocaine at a 1977 Beverly Hills party now says she never really saw a White House chef of staff use the drug, her lawyer reported Thursday. Los Angeles attorney Irving Osher said he was forced to back down on the earlier declaration after interviewing client Lana Jean Rawls on Wednesday.

He said Mrs. Rawls, former wife of singer Lou Rawls, still feels sure Jordan sniffed cocaine at the party on Oct. 21, 1977, mainly because she sold a Jordan friend $500 worth of the powdery drug that night.

Osher quoted her saying, "I saw these people go into the bathroom. I saw these people turn their backs ... The way they acted, I knew they were using cocaine."

As Osher noted, "That's the difference between direct evidence and circumstantial evidence." The revised version of the Rawls story left the FBI with a weaker case against Jordan. The agency is five weeks into a preliminary investigation that covers charges he sniffed cocaine at a New York disco in 1978 and two California parties in 1977.

Justice Department sources said there is no direct evidence Jordan used cocaine in California. And the New York case is shaky because of the questionable credibility of the two main witnesses — a co-owner of Studio 54 who is seeking leniency on a tax evasion indictment, and an alleged drug dealer.

At the same time, reports sprung up of a new, potential witness in the inquiry — a 29-year-old Los Angeles political worker said to have chauffeur-driven Jordan and his colleagues back to their hotel after the 1977 party

Rawls attended. The Los Angeles Herald-Examiner said FBI agents have been ordered to interview the campaign worker, Andrew Cohen. The newspaper said Cohen also was reportedly present the next night when Jordan allegedly used drugs again.

Final Amtrak bill OK'd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Thursday passed and sent to President Carter legislation cutting the Amtrak passenger system but providing a long-term commitment to purchase new equipment to modernize the remaining trains.

The bill also orders Amtrak to institute a program of low fares for the elderly and handicapped, and provides a general matching fund for states that want to subsidize passenger service.

The bill passed by voice vote. A final effort by Sen. John Melcher, D-Iowa, to save the entire Amtrak system failed when the Senate voted 44-4 that his amendment was not germane to a pending appropriations bill. The tie vote killed the amendment.

Five long-distance passenger trains about 20 percent of Amtrak's route miles — will begin their last runs Sunday as a result of the legislation.

The bill provides that President Carter had wanted to discontinue were saved by the legislation that Congress began drafting this summer when the gasoline crisis was sending motorists back to trains in record numbers.

In addition, at least two new trains will be started, one from Los Angeles to Ogden, Utah, through Las Vegas, and another from Chicago to Indianapolis.

The bill provides $912.7 million in fiscal 1980 and $984.9 million in fiscal 1981, much of it for operating subsidies of $29 million in fiscal 1982, most of it for new equipment and capital improvements.

Amtrak President Alan Boyd said the $1 billion in capital funds cumulative over the three years will enable Amtrak to modernize its passenger fleet, including a new low level passenger car for the eastern routes where high clearances will not allow operation of the new double-deck Superliners.

The five trains to begin their last runs on Sunday are: The National Limited from New York to Kansas City.

The North Coast Hiawatha from Chicago to Seattle.

The Floridian from Chicago to Miami and St. Petersburg.

The Hilltopper from Boston to Charlottesville, Va.

In addition, the Champion from New York to St. Petersburg and the Silver Meteor from New York to Miami will be combined as far south as Jacksonville, Fla.

Missouri has elected to subsidize a Kansas City-St. Louis train along the route of the National Limited, and Houston-Chicago service also may eventually be provided through a new train from Houston to Temple, Texas, which will connect with the Chicago-Laredo Interamerican.

Also, parts of some of these routes are served by other trains.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Libra. American entertainer Ed Sullivan was born Sept. 28, 1902. On this date in history: In 1920, baseball's biggest scandal broke. A grand jury indicted eight players of the Chicago White Sox for "throwing" the 1919 World Series games with the Chicago Red Stockings.

In 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt dedicated Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River in Oregon. In 1953, Robert Greenleaf Jr., was kidnapped. The 6-year-old son of a wealthy Kansas City, Mo., automobile dealer was found dead and the kidnap-murderers eventually were executed.

In 1976, Lebanese Christian and Syrian troops opened a major offensive against the Palestine Liberation Organization in Lebanon. In 1978, Pope John Paul I died of a heart attack at the age of 65 after a reign of only 33 days.

A thought for the day: England novelist William Makepeace Thackeray said "Next to the very young, I suppose the very old are the most selfish."

Poor work by USDA harmed many

The contamination of our food is not to be taken lightly.

And yet the U.S. Department of Agriculture delayed informing the state of Idaho that eggs at a Franklin chicken ranch contained unacceptable levels of PCB, a cancer-causing chemical.

The contamination, which came from a transformer leaking the chemical into feed produced in Montana and shipped to a number of states, was known to the USDA on Aug. 27, but state officials were not informed until early September.

The agriculture department itself learned of the contamination late, because an official went on vacation after taking test samples of the eggs. The results were not known until he returned over a week later.

The delay angered Gov. John Evans, who will bring up this and other criticisms of the way the agriculture department handled the case when he addresses a special Congressional committee hearing today.

Evans is right when he says state officials should have been called in immediately and that the delay was inexcusable.

The USDA is also guilty of irresponsibility in not pulling the contaminated eggs off Idaho retail shelves, while they were already recalling eggs from wholesale dealers.

This evidence of laxness in protecting consumers gives fuel to those who want stronger regulation of the food industry and has helped confuse and frighten consumers themselves.

On the other side of the fence, that fear has harmed Idaho food producers.

A second incident of contaminated feed has been tracked down to a Wendell hog farm and has brought the limelight to a Twin Falls meat packer, who bought hogs from the farm.

Tests so far have been contradictory and have not proven any contamination occurred here yet.

But the products of Independent Meat Co. have been pulled off the shelves of two supermarkets supposedly to make customers happy.

A strong agricultural inspection system helps both consumers and business. But the USDA's handling of the PCB case has harmed both.

Rejected counsel returns

By WILLIAM SAFIRE
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — I am pleased to see that Ted Kennedy has on his staff a Rejected Counsel. That used to be my job in the White House: to go into the president's office before a major decision and say, "Do the popular thing. Take the easy way." Later, in a ringing speech, he would tell me truthfully say, "Some of my advisers have told me to do the popular thing, to take the easy way. I have rejected such counsel..."

In his speech to the Congressional Black Caucus not long ago, Sen. Kennedy said: "Some say that a different tide is running in this country now. They tell us to slow down, to take a rest, to let things be. But I am here tonight to tell you that they are wrong. Our trumpets do not know how to sound retreat."

The Rejected Counsel was surely at work. "Excuse me, senator, I know you're working on a speech, but I thought you ought to know that a different tide is running, although if I were you I would lay off water metaphors. Slow down. Take a rest. Let things be. Let the trumpet sound retreat."

He did his job well, that Rejected Counsel, stirring the senator to rhetorical heights, even if the trumpet image is trite-and-true. But in one crucial area the Rejected Counsel has not yet been rejected. When it comes to Carter's pitiful economic policy, Kennedy seems content to let things be.

He has already suggested that the trumpet which will announce his candidacy (that instrument evidently does not have the keys necessary to blow retreat) will be heard when he finally decides that economic conditions make President Carter's continued tenure intolerable.

This means that Kennedy expects to have it both ways: by not criticizing the Carter inflation now, he lets the president sink deeper in the soup; by saying his announcement to the nation of the economy, Kennedy absolves himself of blame for what federal spending has done to the consumer dollar.

The senator rightly sees the need to disagree dramatically with the president on some major policy. He has agreed with Carter policies on SALT II, on selling out Taiwan, on the disastrous energy price control, on refusing to build U.S. defenses, and even on Cuba. He has differed mainly on health insurance, but he cannot oust a sitting president with a heavy-spending program that even most Democrats do not want.

Kennedy is mistaken if he thinks the president will hang around waiting for him to put out a position paper in January condemning Carter and proposing a mix of measures that would sound good and would not be disproprio in a campaign.

Logic suggests that some new ideas will be put forward soon — by labor, government or business — to cope with stagflation, perhaps along the lines of a social contract that would deliver mutual benefits rather than rely exclusively on patriotic exhortations.

In that event, the Kennedy candidacy could not afford to lie supine for more than a few months on the central issue in the campaign: who can best lead the economy away from crippling inflation without triggering really whopping unemployment?

Come next spring, Kennedy will be forced to stop reminding about how wonderful those guidelines were back in the days his brother was president.

Unemployment will be on the rise; inflation will still be high; no matter what long range solution may be in the works — squeezing borrowers and Humphrey-Hawkins eventually else the time will be ripe for a powerful piece of demagoguery.

Wage and price controls. The popular thing, the easy way. Unless Kennedy easily crushing President Carter and Gov. Jerry Brown in the early primaries, he will feel the need for some display of leadership to show how his Presidency will be different and activist. He will answer the recession with a plan for a huge tax cut and spending increase, simultaneously clamping down the lid of controls. (If Kennedy is crushing Carter, this becomes Carter's course of action.)

This year, of course, all candidates (some Republicans are running, too) will speak of controls with disdain. But liberals and hyperactivists will respond to popular outcry next year. Kennedy is philosophically even more attuned than Carter to government action on oil prices, as his anti-business record on oil illustrates.

One of Kennedy's eminent economic advisers, when in a facetious mood on the subject of incomes policy, likes to recall an aphorism attributed to the gangster Al Capone: "You get a lot more from a kind word and a gun, than from a kind word alone." When liberal families clash, the Kennedy clan will not hesitate to go to the mattresses of controls.

In a fight for the Democratic nomination, the 50-year-old is still at that place that F.D.R. called "a little left of center." Ironically, when a recession bites, productivity rises and inflation abates, and the advice of the Rejected Counsel makes sense: "Slow down. Take a rest. Let things be." But that good advice is given only to be scorned.

The senator, on the other hand, should benefit not only from his name and the assumption that he is a winner but from the fact that he will be taking the first crack at a president whose three years in office have been marked by frustration and disap-

The bad guys of pollution

Times-News Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Marvin Durning — prominent Washington state environmentalist — is changing jobs again. After more than two years as the top enforcement officer of the Environmental Protection Agency, Durning resigned and is now considering job offers from law firms and business.

The former Washington state gubernatorial and congressional candidate says he did what he could to do within the parameters of the EPA, and he points to several challenges which he feels the EPA should be meeting.

Observers suggest that Durning might have been miscast as a government official — that he functions best as an outsider, as a gadfly who pushes the government.

The National Wildlife Federation named Durning its National Conservationist of the Year in 1976 in recognition of his participation in the initiative campaign to create a Recreational Lands Program in Washington state.

In an interview last week, Durning said that while the EPA has made substantial progress in enforcing private sector compliance with the Clean Air and Water acts, the cities of America are now the bad guys of water pollution. He also drew attention to the new toxic chemicals, which he said will pose an even greater threat to our health than traditional pollutants. Danger from toxic chemicals is something the EPA is not equipped to handle, said Durning.

"There is no hazardous chemical waste program that can be implemented," says Durning. "We have less than 30 or 40 people in America in the EPA on hazardous wastes; the Justice Department has one. You won't treat it with 20 or 30 people and a couple of million dollars. It's a giant national problem, and we're throwing peanuts at it."

"It took me some time to see the inadequacy of our response to this problem. And if you think that it's critical of myself and my agency, the answer is 'Yes, it is.'"

Durning describes the dangerous chemicals: "For shorthand, you can call them the toxic organic compounds, the things we've developed in the plastics industry and the solvents industry and for use as pesticides and herbicides — thousands of chemicals that weren't in the environment until the last few decades, most of which are complicated, long-chain carbon molecules, some of which are the things which are causing increasing cancer — whether you're breathing them in cigarette tars or drinking them in water or having them leak into your home."

"That's an immense volume of environmental control that wasn't foreseen at the time of the Air and Water acts."

Speaking of the clean water issue, Durning says, "As a generalization, the industrial sector has not or will meet the Clean Air and Water acts deadlines. I can't say the same for the cities. The biggest, uncontrolled sources of water pollution in the country are the cities of America. — Less than 50 percent met the July 1977 deadlines to have secondary sewage treatment to continue. — Those which didn't include some of the biggest cities in the country: Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Memphis, Chicago, Detroit."

President Carter was right to fire Andrew Young

Editor, Times-News:

I want to comment on your September 9th editorial that praised Andrew Young, the former Ambassador to the United Nations. The editorial stated that President Carter removed him from office because he sided with the P.L.O. and stepped on the toes of established interest groups. The editorial closed by saying, "There are not many men alive with the courage and charisma of Andy Young."

I am afraid that I must agree with the decision of President Carter and not with your editorial, Andy Young may be courageous and have charisma, but he is also stupid and uninformed as far as the P.L.O. is concerned.

I do not argue the rights of the Palestinian Arabs or argue that they are a down-trodden people. They are a large group of people without a capability or the leadership to put such a movement together.

Certainly Mr. Arafat nor the P.L.O. provides that leadership. The P.L.O. is financially supported by radical Arab states north by the Palestine Arabs. The P.L.O. is not active in trying to establish a Palestine homeland in any part of the original Palestine except in Israel. None of the Arab states will discuss giving up part of their land for a Palestine homeland. The Gaza Strip was part of est of the six groups is the Al-Fatah which means "conquest" in Arabic. Its headquarters is now in Lebanon just north of Israel. It consists of approximately 15,000 men and women in uniform of which 3,000 are combatants. It is active in carrying out routine guerrilla missions across the Israeli border to kill Jews.

Today there are approximately 4,000,000 Palestinian Arabs living in a dozen Arab countries and 600,000 living in Jewish Israel. The original Palestine area (900 B.C.) consisted of today's Israel, the Gaza Strip, the West Bank of Jordan, and parts of the Sinai Desert, part of Syria, part of Lebanon and about half of Jordan.

The Palestinian Arabs have never been a political body. They have never ruled a land of their own. They have never had an elected leadership. Most of them today want a homeland of their own, but they have never had the capability or the leadership to put such a movement together.

They are likely to come out of it with one of two general impressions — either that Edward Kennedy is a winner and Jimmy Carter a goner, or that Kennedy is not as irresistible as he has been advertised to be. And while neither impression need necessarily be correct as an objective analysis, the impression would be far more important than the fact.

Political reporters can hardly ignore a contest, however insignificant fundamentally, in which two presidential contenders are making such major efforts. And neither of the candidates can afford to abdicate the first test of the campaign to the other (as those who left Iowa to Jimmy Carter in 1976 would quickly agree). But if the responsibility for building the Florida caucuses into something out of all proportion to their real worth is a sort of chicken-and-egg situation, the fact remains that the affect on the 1980 campaign could be equally out of proportion.

All this suggests that presidential nominations, although removed from the hands of the old political establishment (where they rested as recently as 1968), have not been "reformed" so much as shaken up. Too few people still dominate the process — even if now, instead of bosses, they are a few voters in a few states.

Egypt until 1967, but Egypt would not come to feed or house the Palestine Arabs. The same was true of Jordan. King Hussein of Jordan opened war on the P.L.O. In 1970 and drove them out of his country. He killed 3600 of them, more than the Jews have ever killed. The military operations leader of the P.L.O. was murdered in Cannes, France, in July of this year. Time Magazine quoted him as stating the real purpose of the P.L.O. "The Palestine people do not exist. The establishment of a Palestine state is just the means for continuing the struggle against Israel and for Arab unity."

Your editorial stated that someday we would have to recognize the P.L.O. I hope you are wrong. Our government cannot be criticized for its lack of support of the Palestine people. There is no government that has done more for them than that of the U.S.A. We helped the building of refugee camps when their Arab brothers in Egypt, Syria, Jordan, Iraq and Lebanon would do nothing for them. Between 1950 and 1975, the U.S.A. contributed $600,000 to help feed the Palestine Arabs. I believe in helping the down-trodden, but I will never believe in supporting assassins and murderers like those of the P.L.O.

Florida 'test' is the only game in town

By TOM WICKER
N.Y. Times News Service

In early 1976, Jimmy Carter's showing in the Iowa Democratic caucus caught the nation's eye. Then, his first-place finish in the New Hampshire primary gave him the front-runner status he never lost. Thus, before it had well begun, the campaign was profoundly — perhaps decisively — affected by the actions of a handful of voters in two states with only 12 electoral votes.

Now it appears that a relatively few Florida Democrats may exercise the same sort of power over the 1980 campaign, even before 1979's Thanksgiving turkeys are eaten. They will go to 47 county caucuses on Oct. 13 to select about half the delegates to a state Democratic convention to be held in mid-November.

That caucus voting will provide the first test of strength between Carter supporters and the growing Draft Kennedy movement. Since it's the only game in town at the moment, the Florida delegate selection will attract coverage that can only be called overkill from newspapers and television. For that reason — or it may really be the other way around — both the Carter and Kennedy teams are making major efforts to elect the most delegates; the Carter budget for the Florida caucuses, for example, has recently been doubled to $200,000.

Such efforts make a certain amount of sense. Edward Kennedy's aura of inevitability, basically untested outside Massachusetts, clearly would be damaged by a loss to Carter, and the latter's fortunes would be dramatically improved if he were to win a Kennedy victory in a Southern state, even before he becomes a declared candidate, would both strengthen that aura and make the president's reelection seem even more hopeless than it now appears.

Actually, both men have their advantages in this mini-election. Florida borders Carter's home state, supported him heavily in 1976, retains many of the elements of the strong organization he built there, and traditionally should be more sympathetic to the president's moderate stance than to Kennedy's presumed liberalism. Most state officials, including Gov. Robert Graham, are supporting the president.

The senator, on the other hand, should benefit not only from his name and the assumption that he is a winner but from the fact that he will be taking the first crack at a president whose three years in office have been marked by frustration and disappointment, not to mention galloping inflation, for the American people, including Florida.

But the truth is that, whoever wins, this preliminary test in one state will tell us little about the relative strengths — much less the views and positions — of Edward Kennedy and Jimmy Carter. It will not even tell us much about Florida. The other half of the delegates to the state convention, for example, will come from party elected officials and their appointees — an establishment group in which President Carter will undoubtedly be strong.

The caucus voting, therefore, will not necessarily control the state convention, which will endorse a presidential candidate. And that endorsement will not affect Florida's delegation to the Democratic National Convention, which will be chosen in a primary on March 11. Nor will any of this have much bearing on whether Florida's 17 electoral votes will go Democratic or Republican in 1980.

Nevertheless, the Florida caucus vote, owing to extensive press and television coverage, will have great impact on what voters will over the country think about the campaign and the candidates. They are likely to come out of it with one of two general impressions — either that Edward Kennedy is a winner and Jimmy Carter a goner, or that Kennedy is not as irresistible as he has been advertised to be. And while neither impression need necessarily be correct as an objective analysis, the impression would be far more important than the fact.

Rose, Mamie stay 'satisfactory'

By United Press International
 Mrs. Kennedy, recuperating from surgery in a Boston hospital, was visited by her son the senator Thursday. In Washington, Mamie Eisenhower received flowers and a card from the crew of the carrier USS Eisenhower, striking her carrier recovery from a stroke.

"Both women were reported in satisfactory condition."
 Sen. Edward Kennedy, accompanied by his wife, Joan, and his sister, Jean Kennedy Smith, and eight Secret Service men visited his mother for about a half hour.
 "Mother's going fine," Kennedy said.

Mrs. Kennedy underwent a hernia operation Wednesday in which a part of her small intestine was removed. The surgery, performed at Boston's New England Baptist Hospital, was described as routine but doctors were worried about the effects it might have.
 "Don't forget," said hospital spokesman Dave Welch, "she's 89 years old."

A spokesman at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C., said Mrs. Eisenhower, 82, the widow of Dwight D. Eisenhower, spent "another uneventful and restful night" and her condition was "essentially unchanged" Thursday.

Holiday pay for pope's visit barred

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — A federal judge Thursday temporarily barred the Polk County Board of Supervisors from declaring a legal holiday during Pope John Paul II's visit next week to central Iowa.

U.S. District Judge William Stuart said he was not prepared to rule on a permanent injunction request and would examine testimony and evidence in the case during the next few days.

The order was at least a temporary victory for the Iowa Civil Liberties Union, which filed a suit charging the county holiday violated the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

By voting to give county workers next Thursday off as a paid holiday, the board became involved in a religious event and wrongfully denied tax-paying residents access to county facilities, the ICLU contended.

Stuart scheduled a hearing Monday on a second ICLU lawsuit seeking to prevent Lenox Community School District in Taylor County from canceling classes during the pope's visit and using school buses to transport people to an outdoor mass.

School districts throughout the Des Moines area have canceled classes next Thursday. State and city workers have been encouraged to use discretionary holidays if they want to see the pope.

Describing the issue as "emotional," Stuart said testimony from the two witnesses in the case failed to completely resolve the issues.

"This leaves me with several unanswered questions," Stuart said. "The court is inclined to believe the resolution adopted by the board of supervisors on Sept. 7 fails to meet the first test provided (in the) establishment clause of the First Amendment. The court at this time is not prepared to make a firm ruling on the effect."

However, he hinted the ICLU might not have proven his contention that denying access to county building next Thursday was unconstitutional.

Des Moines attorney Judd Golden and the Rev. Ken Hurto, a Unitarian Universalist minister, were the only witnesses to testify during the hearing. They said they objected to the holiday, mainly because their tax money would be used to pay county workers for the day off.

"By doing so, the Polk County Board of Supervisors is paying homage to the Roman Catholic Church," Golden testified.

$400 paid for ounce of gold

United Press International
 Gold briefly touched the magic $400 an ounce level Thursday before dropping back to close in New York at $395 an ounce in a price surge that apparently was sparked at least in part by a shortage of physical gold.

The dollar plummeted to its lowest level since Oct. 31, 1978, reflecting gold's rise and continued rumors about actions by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. At the same time OPEC pricing rumors pushed the British pound to almost $2.21, about six cents higher than it was two days ago.

In Zurich gold opened at $384.50 an ounce from Wednesday's close of $376.50 and, with fluctuations, it was uphill all day. Gold closed in Zurich at a record $395.50, up $11 on the day.

Gemini should follow good judgment for best results, slow down pace during working hours

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An opportunity for advancement in your chosen field could come your way early in the day so be on the lookout. Control your ambitious nature and be more considerate of associates.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Made practical plans for expansion in your line of endeavor, but avoid extravagance. Strive for more happiness with your mate.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make plans to have greater abundance in the days ahead. Take no chances with one who has done you harm in the past.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be sure to handle communications well today and follow your good judgment for best results. Slow down pace at work.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You need to be more clarity if you wish to gain your aims in the future. Some of your desires can now be realized.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have good judgment now and can easily solve difficult problems. Strive for more harmony with family members. Be wise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21) An influential person of great importance is to be met by you soon. Be successful. (See) Changes are accurate at this time.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 21) Show a good friend that you are devoted and strengthen the relationship. The evening is fine for the social side of life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22 to Nov. 21) Contact higher-ups and get the support you need for any new talents you want to develop. Find extra happiness with mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Doing something thoughtful for your friends brings you added goodwill now. Be careful in the handling of money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be sure to follow any rules and regulations that apply you. Influential persons can be instrumental in your evening ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Come to a better understanding with associates by showing you respect them. Don't go off on any tangents now.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study your agreements with associates and be sure to keep your promises. Make plans to entertain at home this weekend.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can advance quickly because of the fine ideas and the ability to express them. Much success and prestige can come later in life. There could be a fine musician here. Much happiness. This chart.

What's what

Sports shoes leading sellers now; purveyors of sweat socks aren't

One out of every four pairs of shoes sold hereabouts now is some sort of sports shoe. Sneakers, mostly. Lot of people want to sneeze, clearly. Anyhow, 150 million pairs of sports shoes were sold in the last six months. And incidentally, purveyors of sweat socks are making a killing by putting baskets of them next to the cash registers in neighborhood convenience stores. A pack of cigarettes, a quart of milk and a pair of socks, like that.

Some coastal high schools in Southern California have added surfing to their sports curricula. Varsity athletes can latter in it. And some colleges now are said to offer surfing scholarships.

Even going for two and a half years without any food at all won't necessarily kill a tarantula.

BIG CATS

Q. Which of the big cats—lions, tigers, whatever—is the most easily tamed?
 A. The cheetah. By far.

Q. Does lightning knock down buildings?
 A. Rarely. If ever. It can zap a hole in a roof or start a fire. But most buildings have enough metal in them to ground out whatever lightning bolt hits them.

Q. You know those "small craft" warnings put out by the weather reporters? What determines whether it is a small craft or some other kind?
 A. Under 26 feet is the general rule. But if you're in one that's 27 feet, it wouldn't hurt to pay attention, no doubt. Winds as high as 33 knots are enough to prompt small craft advisories, I'm told.

CRASHES

Motion pictures repeatedly show how car drivers miraculously survive crashes without injury because they're thrown out before impact. Miraculously, in right. Statistics prove you're five times more likely to get hurt, if you're thrown out.

Ten years ago, people in the United States were the best paid in the world. Not anymore. Beginning engineers—they're a pretty good measure of pay scales generally—now make more money in Denmark, West Germany, Switzerland, Norway and Belgium than they do here.

T.F. girl tops with macrame

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Last July, 14-year-old Pam Stubbs was presented with a knotty problem.

She was handed a bag containing a spatula, a paint brush, wooden spoons, measuring cups and a potato masher and told to "do her thing" in making a macrame wall hanging for the Home Economics Department in the O'Leary Junior High School.

An expert in macrame, the art of knotting twine or yarn into woven designs, Pam sketched a design, and proceeded to twist, tie, knot, braid, (untangle) and create a tapestry that not only incorporated tools of the Home Ec Biz, but plugged O'Leary as "Number One" as well. The school's name, a "1" and the utensils are all worked into the pattern.

"When she walked in with this, I just about passed out," said Home Economics teacher Vicki Northrop. "I couldn't do this and I've done some macrame. Professional! You're not going to find better."

A ninth grader with interests in track, volleyball, gymnastics and disco, Pam has done custom macrame work for two years, helping out her mother, Mrs. Dale Stubbs, who runs Dale's Imagination Station, an American Handicrafts shop, 321 Main Ave. E.

Taught by her mother, Pam began making macrame necklaces over three years ago. She started custom work when her mother, heavily involved with advanced macrame sculptures, was unable to do projects requested by customers: "I don't have time to do this, but you can talk to my daughter."

Pam is paid labor fees for the plant holders and wall hangings she makes.

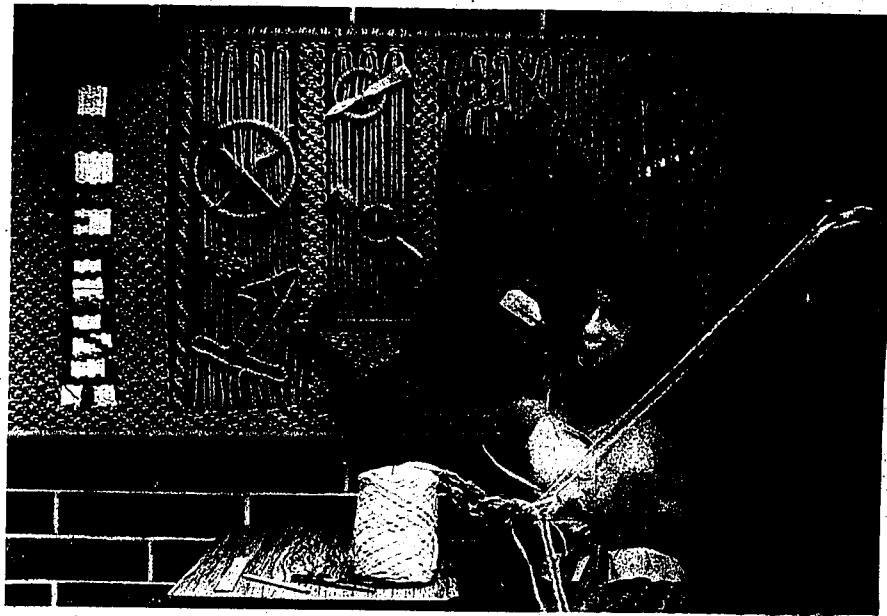

Last summer Mrs. Northrop and Mrs. Jennifer Ingram attempted to scout out someone to create a wall hanging for the home economics department at the new junior high. As the school's art program only infrequently teaches macrame, they called shops in the area, looking for macrame experts. When Mrs. Ingram called Dale's, Pam answered the phone — by chance.

Realizing that Pam was experienced in macrame, Mrs. Ingram asked Pam to do it. She was given utensils from the old O'Leary, and the store donated the "jute," the rough twine basic for macrame work. By August, with help from her friend Angie Holcomb, Pam was finished.

"There's a lot of mental work (in macrame), planning it out with math," Pam said. "You have to use math formulas, so many cords per inch."

Besides sports, Pam is interested in other crafts: "I've always liked anything to do with my hands." She'd do more macrame, "it's mostly finding the time."

Does she think she'll continue in crafts? "Well," she pauses, giggles and admits, "I'd really like to be a dancer."

Pam Stubbs, Vera O'Leary Junior High School student, created this impressive macrame tapestry.

Workshop at CSI focuses on problems faced when living alone

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Imagining a situation. You are a single parent, faced with bringing up your children alone. Your 4-year-old runs into the house, slams the door and screams, "School is this, and I hate you, you little stink bug."

"What is your reaction?"

"I'd hug him and leave him alone," said one woman, during a workshop on "The Art of Living Alone," sponsored Wednesday by the Women's Center at the College of Southern Idaho.

"What would you do?" asks Gordon Simpson, Health and Welfare Department employee, who conducted a class on "Parenting Alone" at the workshop.

"I'd ask him what happened at school," said another woman. "That's all you can do." "Something like that happens all the time to my little girl. I'd say 'That's your problem and you're going to have to live with it.'"

But what these suggestions do, Simpson said, is erect "roadblocks" to yourself, to meet your needs. "It's hard to give to a child if your bucket's empty." Do whatever it takes to get that time for yourself, he emphasized.

"I've been a single parent five years. I work full time. You mean after being away eight to nine hours on my job, I'm supposed to take time off from the children?" one woman asked.

Yes, if that job doesn't "fill up the bucket," according to Simpson. "Do yourself a favor: If not, you're not doing the kid a favor."

The all-day workshop also focused on other problems of living alone. The 20 women and three men were asked to list what being alone meant; answers included a lack of purpose in life, being afraid of noises in the night, having no one to share conversation with and having to make major decisions previously made by others.

"The working public does not like to work with a widow unless they're out to take them," asserted a participant, who claims she was "ripped off" when she was overcharged for the installation of a drain gutter.

both his church, the First United Presbyterian, the First Baptist Church and the Lutheran Church in Twin Falls sponsored "single" clubs where people can meet each other. ("Although everyone pretends it's an accident they're there," Ives added.) CSI classes are another place where people with similar interests can meet.

"In the bars, the girls aren't there, and in church, the guys aren't there," Ives remarked. "It's difficult for folks, especially men, to admit to the fact they feel alone and are lonely."

Mrs. Shaff said "It's easier for women to live alone than men, because it's easier for a woman to take over a male role than a man to take over a female role."

However, many of the women expressed dismay over learning how to make financial or mechanical decisions alone.

"The hardest thing about decisions is that we're a nation that has a chronic illness — we're afraid to be wrong," Ives said. "We end up usually making no decision about important things in our lives."

Tom Frazak, participant, commented amid laughter and a few "right on's" that "people living alone have the advantage (when making a decision) because no one is there to oppose it."

Psychologist David Ives warned against "defining yourself by your relationships to other people."

"As soon as our roles (like that of wife, mother, husband, teacher, doctor, etc.) change, we go through an identity crisis again," he said.

The Rev. Les Peterson, of the Valley Christian Church, noted that take over a male role than a man to take over a female role."

Day-care facilities become big business with real estate link

By DELIA O'HARA
Chicago Sun-Times

These days, an average day-care arrangement for one child whose parents work might cost more than $2,000 a year. As a result, day care could become big business.

Some of the firms moving into the field are becoming linked to the real estate industry, as child-care companies buy land that is developed as one of a subdivision's amenities, along with convenience stores and coin laundries.

"The commercial firms are responding to a real need. Forty per cent of women aged 18 to 65 now work outside the home, and that figure is expected to rise to 70 per cent by 1985.

The Home Data Corp., a marketing research firm, reports that 60 per cent of active homebuyers have two incomes. And 65 per cent of homebuyers aged 25 to 30 have two incomes, Home Data figures show.

The rise in the number of single parents has added to the day-care problem; single parents account for well over half of those using suburban day-care facilities, according to Home Data.

Care for one child in a day-care center might easily cost $50 a week, which is a good chunk of a single parent's take-home pay—and by no means insignificant even for a two-income family.

Child development experts theorize that the preschool years are critical in determining the kind of adult a child becomes. Thus: "What is good day care?" Can commercial firms provide it?

The "chain" is the newest development in day-care-for-profit. A major company in the field is Kinder-Care, an Alabama-based company begun 10 years ago by Perry Mendel, a former realty broker.

The firm is growing with great speed. For a year, it would disturb many parents, and is a big selling point. But standardizing hamburgers and hotels is very different from standardizing child care.

Lorraine Wallace, acting dean of the Erikson Institute for Early Childhood Development, said one danger with the large chains is that they may not be able to provide the kind of individual attention children need.

"I don't think people are thinking about what kind of adults we're going to get. Kids who grow up in too rigid an institutional setting may turn out all the same—and I'd bet you won't get many symphonies out of them, either," Wallace said.

According to Bob Elkin, the Kinder-Care area representative in St. Louis, "The Kinder-Care concept is a new (suburban housing) development is a natural fit place for us to look for a site, so working with the developers is a lot easier than like to go in as an amenity to the overall community," Elkin said.

The housing developer benefits from this arrangement, since he can reduce the cost of a child care center to potential home buyers.

Kinder-Care centers look like a slick version of the little red schoolhouse, and are called "schools," and "learning centers."

The 4,700-square-foot plan is laid out to provide separate, mostly open areas for the several age groups formed when the 100 children allowed under the license are divided up.

Most Kinder-Care centers are open from 6:30 a.m. until 6 p.m. In the Chicago area, it costs parents $41 to keep one child in the day-care program five days a week ($48 for two-year-olds). In addition to day care, the centers have before- and after-school programs (another consideration in site selection is proximity to elementary schools), complete with shuttle buses to the schools. There's also a summer camp program.

Founder Mendel originally organized Kinder-Care so individual centers were franchised. He later decided the quality of the operation suffered with a franchise arrangement and took back control of expansion.

Although expansion without franchising will be slower, Mendel has said, "Kinder-Care will take its place alongside chains like Holiday Inn, Howard Johnson's and McDonald's."

Gayle Clark, Kinder-Care area representative in Chicago, said the individual centers "look more standard than the others. It would disturb many parents, and is a big selling point. But standardizing hamburgers and hotels is very different from standardizing child care.

Lorraine Wallace, acting dean of the Erikson Institute for Early Childhood Development, said one danger with the large chains is that they may not be able to provide the kind of individual attention children need.

"I don't think people are thinking about what kind of adults we're going to get. Kids who grow up in too rigid an institutional setting may turn out all the same—and I'd bet you won't get many symphonies out of them, either," Wallace said.

Organist plays for joy and sometimes pulls all the stops

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.
The Chicago Tribune

DEAR ABBY: A reader in St. Augustine, Fla., said he quit going to church because the organist played too loudly. Well, I've been an organist since 1934, and the problem is probably not the organist, but the organ. Over the years, churches replace worn-out organs with rebuilt theater organs or parts of several organs, and the resulting sounds are disastrous! The church is the only corporate body I know of in which each member is an expert concerning what should and should not be played for the services. It is also the only corporate body which pays its most qualified employees. The organist and the organist, salaries which bear no relationship to the cost in time and money spent to acquire professional status. To all critics who think the organ music is too loud in church, I say the music in the services should run the gamut of soft to loud, depending on the occasion. Too many Christians today declare their faith sotto voce instead of fortissimo, and expect their organist to do likewise. I play for the joy of it, not for the pay, and God knows I sometimes pull out all the stops. Hallelujah and Amen!

LOUISE M. CHILDS INS.F.
DEAR LOUISE: Let's hear a slightly different time from another reader:

DEAR ABBY: This is for that St. Augustine reader who quit attending church because of the organ music: I, too, had the same problem, but I asked God to show me the way, and

He pointed me toward the Church of Christ. The Church of Christ doesn't believe in instrumental music, and believe me, it is heavenly to go to church and not have to hear all that loud instrumental music. For true salvation in a quiet and spiritual atmosphere, try the Church of Christ.

REBECCA

DEAR ABBY: I'll bet you're bombarded by nurses after advising FRUSTRATED, who wanted sex with her husband in the hospital, to ask the physician to write an "order" to that effect. You compared it to "conjugal visits" such as some prisons allow. Prisoners are one thing. Patients are something else. Abby, we nurses are held responsible for everything that happens to, with, for, on and around every patient in our care. I can just see the patient's chart: "Patient's door closed for two hours. Patient presumed to be alive." The floodgates for law suits would be wide open.

Patients who are well enough to engage in sex could ask their doctors for a pass to leave the hospital for a specific period of time. Of course, the patient would have to sign a form, releasing the physician, the hospital and its employees of all responsibility for anything that occurs during the patient's absence from the hospital. I hope you back up on this one, Abby.

CALIF. NURSE
DEAR NURSE: Consider me backed up.

DEAR ABBY: I found a clipping on my dresser this morning. It was your column with the letter from the man whose wife undressed in the closet. As you can probably guess, I am one of those wives.

After a dozen pregnancies, not too many wives have the kind of figure they want to parade around the bedroom nude to show off. I can go to bed alone and wake up pregnant.

Education on sex should start early

By MARY ELLEN HASKETT
BALTIMORE (UPI) — Susie is 13 years old and pregnant. She knows little about intercourse and believed she was too young to become pregnant. No one at home or school told her differently.

"No matter what happens to that girl, she won't get proper sex education until she is 17 or 18," says Grace Sparks, a Planned Parenthood counselor. "The average age of menarche (beginning of menstruation) is 12½, in fifth or sixth grade. No school I'm aware of has sex education classes that early."

A study at the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health suggests contraceptive information given pre-teens might help reduce the number of illegitimate teen-age pregnancies. There are more than 1 million such pregnancies a year in the United States.

"Our findings clearly point to the need to reach young girls with birth control information and services not only before the first pregnancy, but before the first intercourse," said the physician-researcher, Dr. Laurie Zabin.

Her study found 22 percent of all adolescent first pregnancies occurred before the girl had received a month of sexual intercourse. For girls who begin sexual relations in their teens, the probability of a first pregnancy within two years is about 35 percent.

If the girls never use contraceptives, the probability they will become pregnant is 66 percent — lowering to 20 percent if they use contraceptives occasionally and 10 percent if they always use contraceptives.

Ms. Zabin also found girls who begin having sex before age 15 have the highest risk of getting pregnant early, apparently because they are least likely to use contraceptives.

She said sex education should precede first sexual intercourse so it should be taught when children reach puberty, about age 11-13. "We're barking up the wrong tree if we continue to think of value-laden sex education (lectures about morals)," she said in an interview. "The risk is so early, we have to get the basic human physiology to them at the same time they learn about chickens."

She said her study found young girls who got pregnant because they used no contraceptives often believed they were too young to become pregnant or they believed it was the wrong time of month to conceive.

A Gallup youth survey has concluded only 3 of 10 adolescents aged 13 to 18 have had any instruction on birth control in school. It also found 60 percent of the teen-agers and their parents believe the youths should have access to contraceptive services and information.

"Whatever you do (in providing sex education), you have to do it young," Ms. Zabin said. "Don't let this serious problem be hampered by the moral baggage" of parents who oppose the teaching of sex education at an early age.

She also said teen-age women who conceive soon after beginning sexual activity are likely to become pregnant again while still in their teens.

Teenagers seldom seek contraceptive help until they have been sexually active for a year. The younger they are when they begin to have sex, the longer the delay in seeking contraceptives, her study showed.

The study questioned 54 girls, ages 18-19, nationwide. They were asked when they began sexual activities, when they began using contraception and whether they became pregnant.

About 60 percent said they began sexual intercourse in their teens.

"Knowing how high a risk of pregnancy young girls experience early in their sexual careers does not make it easy to solve the problem," Ms. Zabin said. "Some 11- and 12-year-olds may seem young for information on birth control and access to contraceptive services, but some of them need it."

She said the information is basic human physiology and should not be labeled sex education.

"Why is it sex education to learn about our own body?" Ms. Zabin asked. "By labeling, you created a climate in which it is objected to."

She said school is the right place to provide the information young people need to know about reproduction and contraception.

Dr. Laurie Zabin says knowledge could reduce pregnancies

BAKED TOMATOES
Scoop out four medium tomatoes. Reserve the scooped-out part. Turn them upside down to drain.

6 green onions, chopped
2 tablespoons green pepper, chopped
4 tablespoons celery, chopped
10 soda crackers

Sauté the onions, green peppers and celery until soft but not brown. Chop the reserved tomato pulp and crush the crackers. Mix all together. Salt to taste. Stuff the tomatoes with this mixture. Sprinkle parmesan cheese and paprika on top, then drizzle melted butter over them. Bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes.

Bruins host Boise

TWIN FALLS — "They are capable of beating Borah."

That's the scouting report and the task for the Twin Falls Bruins tonight when they entertain the powerful Boise Braves at 8 p.m. at Bruin Stadium.

It will be dubbed Chamber of Commerce, during which Twin Falls Merchants will host the team. Chairman Jack Muldoon said the special activities will include drawings and prizes before the game and at halftime plus featuring the band and drill team and other high school activities.

Sophomore Coach John Astorquia scouted the Braves and came back with the report to head Coach Bill Jones.

"What can we say about this game?" the coach asked after ticking off a number of probable major college prospects the Braves will bring to town.

"Our goal is the same as it has been all year. To improve our execution, to cut down on mistakes and give it the best we have. We are playing the No. 2 or maybe No. 1 team in the state and we can't warn them to put on their combat boots. But we can go out there hoping to increase our execution," he answered his own question.

The Braves are considered very strong in the line. "Angelo Dilullo is one side of the line himself," said Astorquia who watched the Braves destroy Skyline last week. "The other tackle is bigger and might even be better. Then there's Keever. He plays defensive end but when they think they are in a little trouble, he moves to nose guard. Does that give you an idea about his mobility?"

Then they have the sophomore tailback, who is going on 19 but is a fine player. Overall, I was just very impressed with Boise. Its defense, execution, everything. I think they have a shot at winning it all this year," Astorquia said.

For the Bruins it must go as the coach said. Last week the Bruin offense ran into some bad lapses. Things it hadn't seen in earlier games. Defensively, the Bruins weren't in real bad position most of the time but too small to stop the Spartans.

After three games Twin Falls had gained a total of 665 yards with junior quarterback Gary Krumm accounting for 42 rushing and 24 in passing. The Bruin air game is hitting only a third of the time and that is a percentage the staff would like to improve.

Junior Ron Goodrich had five receptions for 37 yards while junior Lars Hovey had three catches for 67.

Behind Krumm in rushing is junior Greg Scherer with 39 yards and Bob McMillan with 57 and senior Mark Libert, who missed one game, with 45.

Mitch Mingo has punted 18 times for a 33.5 average and the Bruins' biggest statistic is in kickoff returns, augmented by that 89 yarder against Minico. They are averaging 44.5 yards per return.

Morton can't plea bargain

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — A plea-bargain was offered Thursday to Denver Broncos quarterback Craig Morton, who was charged last summer with driving under the influence of alcohol.

Prosecution and defense lawyers met in a pretrial conference to discuss the proposed bargaining, but neither side was willing to discuss the details of the offer.

The case was continued, with another hearing to be held at a later, unspecified date, the Larimer County court clerk's office said.

"We talked about a disposition on the case, but (defense attorneys) haven't verified if they will accept the offer that was made," said Assistant District Attorney Chris Loucks.

Greek predicts Baltimore will shock Buffalo

A look at this weekend's NFL action:

Buffalo (12-3) at Baltimore (0-4) — Still no Bert Jones for the Colts and it's not surprising that Baltimore has yet to record its first win. Colt defense playing tough but the offense unable to move the ball on the ground. Colts' secondary will be hard-pressed to contain dynamic passing combination of Houston (10-4) and Baltimore (10-3).

Cincinnati (10-4) at Dallas (3-1) — Bengals blew 24-point lead against the Oilers as defense has played nowhere near its preseason reputation. Tough task to get well against a Cowboy team nursing a hangover from Monday night embarrassment. Cowboy pass rush will get well at expense of Bengal QBs who have been sacked 12 times in last two games. Dallas by 10.

Cleveland (4-0) at Houston (3-1) — Brown offense red-hot thanks to precise passing of Brian Speil. Defense much improved and came up with five turnovers against Dallas. Houston struggling on offense as Dan Fouts' line is far from fully recovered from assorted ailments. Browns must contain Campbell on defense and protect Speil on offense to stay undefeated. Oilers use of four-man pass rush resulted in 13 sacks in last two contests. Houston by 4.

Denver (3-1) at Oakland (1-3) — Silver and black is mostly black and blue as Raiders have lost three straight in division. Injuries have crippled Oakland on both sides of scrimmage. Broncos found their offense with revival of Craig Morton. Defense still tough. Broncos have won five straight against Oakland. Denver by 3.

Kansas City (2-2) at Seattle (1-3) — Chiefs a major surprise as defense continues to improve. Offense has capitalized on five turnovers and 12 sacks in last two games. Improved Chiefs' ground attack featuring Tony Reed compliments passing of No. 1 pick Steve Fuller. Jim Zorn has thrown nine interceptions in three Seattle defeats. Seattle by 6.

Miami (4-0) at New York Jets (1-3) — Dolphins bid to stay undefeated on strength of comeback by Larry Csonka and fine relief performance by Don Strick. Dolphin defense has allowed just three TDs in four games. Wesley Walker got that many in opener a year ago, but Miami secondary is improved. Miami by 6.

Minnesota (2-2) at Detroit (1-3) — Tommy Kramer vs. Jeff Kamie in duel of young QBs. Ahmad Rashad remains top-ranking offensive threat. Lion defense not getting to the passer and has had several breakdowns in the secondary. Detroit by 3.

N.Y. Giants (0-4) at New Orleans (1-3) — Saint offense featuring Archie Manning virtually unstoppable, especially in the air. Club loses WR Yves Chandler with groin injury but the Giant defense will still have it tough trying to contain Muncie, Galbreath, Childs and Harris. New Orleans by 4.

Pittsburgh (4-0) at Philadelphia (3-1) — Injuries still haven't caught up with defending Super Bowl champions. Eagles pointing toward this game and coaching staff has called it the most important contest since arrival of Dick Vermeil. Jaworski will put points on the board but Eagle defense must stop Bradshaw from shooting holes in still-improven Philly secondary. Pittsburgh by 6.

St. Louis (1-3) at Los Angeles (2-2) — Rams off to disappointing start and would have trouble in any other division. However, rest of the NFC West has won just three games. Cardinal running game featuring Otis Anderson should bounce back from poor performance against the Skins. Los Angeles by 4.

San Francisco (0-4) at San Diego (3-1) — Chargers will rebound from Patriot defeat with strong offensive performance against weak 49er secondary. San Francisco coach Bill Walsh working wonders with QB Steve Delberg and is primarily responsible for development of Dan Fouts as well. San Diego by 17.

Tampa Bay (4-0) at Chicago (2-2) — Bear defense brought back to reality by successive defeats to Eagles and Miami as well as by permitting 55 points and almost 1,000 yards of total offense after holding Packers and Vikings to 10 points and less than 400 yards. Bucs for real but need to contain Payton to stay undefeated. Even.

Washington (3-1) at Atlanta (1-3) — Redskins' defense much improved as younger players like Don Hower, Mark Murphy and Carl Worth came up with big plays. Falcon defense, which set NFL record two years ago for longest punt allowed, has been giving up points in bunches — 34 in last two games and 34 to Saints in the opener. Atlanta by 3.

New England (3-1) at Green Bay (1-3) (Monday) — Patriot defense saved the day for Steve Grogan against the Chargers when four interceptions almost gave away a game in which New-England had stormed to a 20-0 lead. Packers' defense hurting against the pass because of failure to pressure the QB. Stanley Morgan, Harold Jackson and Russ Francis will take full advantage here. New England by 10.

Russ Kearby of Halley scoops up an average-sized trout from Richfield Canal during the annual salvaging operation following cutoff of irrigation flow Anglers rejoice!

Richfield salvage yields lunkers

'SHOSHONE — Regional fishery biologist Bob Bell is smiling again.

After three years of wondering about the Richfield Canal as a primary growth fishery, this year's salvage has seen the return of the lunkers.

"It's great to see this again," said Bell as a succession of four and five pounders were netted from the now nearly empty canal. "It looks like the good old days."

The Fish and Game Department completed the sweep this week for another year and returned about 4,000 pounds of rainbow trout to the public access areas on Silver Creek, Big Wood River and Magic Reservoir.

This year's return was excellent, especially considering a malfunctioning barrier that caused some fish kill before it was rectified.

It was because of that kill the department salvaged the canal this week. It originally was scheduled for next.

"Our information was that when the dam was closed, all the water in the Wood River was diverted into the canal. This only amounts to about four second feet at best and probably two this year," Bell said.

"I was up here Wednesday and everything looked good. The oxygen content was nine parts per million or higher everywhere. But somewhere along the line, the one gate came open or wouldn't close and the water starting diverting back into Wood River."

"Without that little flow, there was no recharging of the water and that combined with the heat, percolation, evaporation and everything the pools started dropping down. Oxygen dropped to three parts per million in some of the more shallow pools. We started getting reports of dead fish and fish in distress Friday. We sandbagged the gate and got the flow coming back through the canal. But it takes a long while for the pools to refill and start spilling on to the next one so this taken a long time for the water to get into the lower reaches of the canal.

However, Bell said that while this may seem a waste of fish, it isn't without benefit.

"I think the reason we are seeing the return of bigger fish is because of the drought conditions of a couple years ago," he said.

"We lost a lot of fish that winter and I think it reduced the competition for feed. You remember back in the late 60s the fish averaged from one and one-half to two pounds and we'd have those lunkers up to 12 pounds. Then we had those petitions asking that we leave the fish in the canal after the water was turned off to provide late fall fishing."

"I think that worked exactly opposite of what we all wanted. Instead of having that carryover of big fish we just wound up with more fish competing for the same amount of food and with the result that the canal growth rate went way down."

Bell noted the population of fresh water shrimp remains strong in the canal but the tiny things aren't that available to fish since they live in the crevices and moss. "It takes a lot of shrimp to feed a Rainbow this size," said Bell examining a five-pounder.

Bell similarly discounted the persistent rumor among fishermen that chemical spray from an airplane treating some desert land had wiped out the shrimp population in the canal, resulting in the lower growth rate.

"The spray used was very degradable and while there was some damage, the toxic effect didn't carry two miles down the canal," Bell said. "There was no residue effect and the shrimp moved right back in."

"No, I think the secret to keeping the canal as strong as it traditionally has been is to salvage it every year, plant it lightly and reduce food competition by reducing population."

Bell urged fishermen to continue to fish the area, noting a large number of fish still remain in the canal. "When you are salvaging, you feel them brushing by your legs and you see some get in behind you so we don't get anything close to a clean sweep," Bell said.

"A couple of years ago we went through the same pool twice, got about as many the second time as we did the first. On the third pass we hardly got any. So I estimate that we only take about 40 to 50 per cent of the fish and the rest are here for fisherman," he said.

The bottom line of this year's operation showed the biggest first at eight and three-quarters pounds and in the second day of salvaging — below the U.S. Highway 29 bridge — a total of 40 trout running six pounds or larger was taken.

Bell said he weighed 103 fish ranging from 17 to 25 inches in length and they averaged 5.3 pounds.

At the end of the second day, the salvagers had outtripped the trickle of water that is necessary to recharge the pools but no fish below the highway bridge showed any distress. Oxygen tests also showed it to be well within safe means and Bell said he appeared that the trickle of water would reach throughout the system before there was any more die-off.

LSU's best in years to test Southern Cal

By United Press International
Lousiana State, with perhaps its finest team since Billy Golden led the Tigers to an 11-0 season in 1958, challenges Southern California's No. 1 ranking Saturday night in a battle of powerful unbeatens college football teams.

The 15th ranked Tigers' defensive tail is a whiplash that limited the opposition to a mere three points while the offense was taking glibly from Colorado (44-0) and Rice (47-3). LSU leads the nation in total offense and rushing defense.

USC is equally offensive-minded with a 2-17 victory over Texas eed, a 42-9 thrashing of Oregon State and the 48-14 throttling of Minnesota. The offense, however, has yielded 26 points and ranks 11th against the rush.

Trojan Coach John Robinson calls his team boring because it wins with such ease. "but it's the most serious team I've ever been involved with."

Actually, neither team has a rushing leader among the top 20, the strength being in a balanced attack. Helms, Trojany candidate Charles White, coming off a shoulder injury, reeled off 153 yards in 10 carries against Minnesota. His counterpart is tailback Hokie Gajan, who has 173 yards in rushing this season.

Sixth-ranked Michigan State receives its severest test of the season against a No. 16 Notre Dame team seeking vengeance for an upset loss to Purdue last week. The capacity crowd of 59,000 at Notre Dame Stadium in South Bend, Ind., probably won't see anything to match the 10-0 tie in the 1966 "Game of the Century" when the Irish rallied from a 10-point deficit, but the suspense is sustained in two well-matched teams.

Notre Dame follows blame the Purdue loss on Irish quarterback Rusty Liss's limited activity because of an ankle injury.

"What happens against Michigan State will depend to a great extent on what kind of condition Rusty is in this week," says ND Coach Dan Devine.

The Spartans test Notre Dame's defense, which proved the Irish with a 15-0 opening game upset over Michigan, with its top running back Steve Smith, who has gained 388 yards in 53 carries for a 5.8 yard average and two touchdowns.

The top 10 ranked teams are unbeaten going into Saturday. There could be some status changes as No. 2 Alabama plays Vanderbilt, No. 3 Oklahoma meets Rice, fourth ranked Texas takes on seventh ranked Missouri, No. 5 Nebraska tackles Penn State, No. 8 Houston faces West Texas and the high-rated Washington goes against Fresno State and No. 10 Florida State clashes with Virginia Tech.

Games involving the 11th through 20th rankings, pit Ohio State vs. UCLA, Purdue vs. Oregon, Michigan vs. California, Arkansas vs. Tulsa, North Carolina State vs. Wake Forest and North Carolina vs. Army.

In addition, there's Texas Tech-Baylor, Georgia-South Carolina, SMU-Tulane, Tennessee-Auburn, Florida-Mississippi State, Navy-Illinois, Syracuse-Washington State, Stanford-Boston College and Indiana-Colorado.

Cards slow Pirates' drive

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — George Hendrick went 5-for-5 and drove in two runs to pace a 17-hit attack Thursday and lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 9-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Pirates entered the game with a 1 1/2-game lead over Montreal in the National League East.

Tony Scott, who went 4-for-5, and Garry Templeton also drove in two runs apiece for the Cardinals. The loss went to Dave Roberts, 5-4, the first of six Pittsburgh pitchers.

Bob Forsch, 11-1, allowed three runs on six hits in five innings of 7 1/2.

The Cardinals took a 6-1 lead in the fifth as the Pirates sleepwalked on the field. Two of three runs yielded by Roberts were unearned because of errors by center fielder Omar Moreno and left fielder John Milcarek.

The Pirates then woke up and scored two runs in the fifth and two more in the seventh to close within 6-5 before the Pirates' ace reliever, Kent Tekulve, was unable to contain St. Louis in his club-record 92nd appearance of the season.

Teulve hit Ken Oberkell with a pitch with one out in the eighth and then uncorked a wild pitch. After a strikeout, Tekulve yielded an RBI double to Templeton and a run-scoring single to Jerry Humphrey. Hendrick capped the scoring with a leadoff homer in the ninth off Bob Forsch.

Most distressing for the Pirates, considering their drive for the division championship, was the yellow performance by usual starter John Candelaria. Out of the lineup recently with a rib injury, Candelaria entered in the fourth and lasted just one-third of an inning — giving up two runs on three hits.

The Cardinals broke out top 2-0 in the second on Moreno's error, which allowed Hendrick to score, and Ken Reitz' sacrifice fly, which drove in Scott. St. Louis added a run in the third on Keith Hernandez' double and two more in the fourth on Scott's run-scoring single and Templeton's RBI hit.

Dave Parker led off the Pittsburgh fourth with his 24th leadoff home run but it was a grand slam, an RBI single in the fifth, hit by the Cardinals ahead 6-1.

Pittsburgh scored two fifth-inning runs on RBI singles by Moreno and Tim Lincecum and closed to 6-5 in the seventh on another run-scoring single by Foli and Templeton's error.

Frank Littell pitched the final 1-3 innings for his 13th save.

Vida Blue scattered eight hits in 8 1/3 innings to win his 14th game and Mike Ivin hit his 27th homer, leading the San Francisco Giants to a 5-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Blue, 14-14, struck out five and walked five before giving way to Greg Minton in the ninth inning.

Ivin hooked off losing pitcher Gerald Hannahs, 0-2, after Bill North reached first on an error in the first inning. The Giants scored an unearned run in the third and tallied in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Joe Strain. They scored another unearned run in the fifth when Pedro Guerrero made one of four Dodger errors.

Guerrero accounted for one of the Dodgers' runs with his second homer in the sixth inning.

Expos, Reds welcome rain

ATLANTA (UPI) — Montreal manager Dick Williams was delighted that Thursday night's doubleheader with the Atlanta Braves was postponed by rain and wet grounds.

"We're glad to have a break we needed," said Williams. "We're a tired team. We've played 14 games in 26 days, including eight doubleheaders. We've needed the rest. This extra day will help our pitchers and especially our catcher (Gary Carter).

With St. Louis beating Pittsburgh Thursday, the Expos tied the Pirates by one game in the National League East. They are even in the loss column with the Pirates, who have two less games left to play, holding two more victories.

"We got the big lift we needed from St. Louis today," said Williams. "We have a two-game lead over Pittsburgh in our remaining games and we're in a tie and if the Pirates win their remaining three they have a clutch tie.

The Expos were in a hurry to get back to Montreal where they open a three-game series with Philadelphia on Friday. The Pirates have three at-home games and one at Pittsburgh. Pittsburgh now Montreal has a two-game lead after Sunday's action, the Expos travel to Atlanta Monday to play the first double-header starting 5:12 noon EDT.

"I like it better this way," said Williams. "Maybe now we won't have to play those two games at all. But I hope it's the case. It's because we clinched the pennant, not Pittsburgh."

If Monday's twin bill leaves Montreal with a two-game lead over Pittsburgh, the two teams would meet in a Tuesday playoff in Montreal.

"I won the toss on that one," said Expos President John McFaire. "We were already out of the tie breaker lucked away if it comes to that."

Whichever team wins the NL East will start the National League Playoffs at the home of the NL West winner, either Cincinnati or Houston.

The Braves played the Houston Astros in the rain Wednesday night and the rain never let up. It was especially heavy around mid-day and turned the area not covered by the infield tarp into a quagmire. The first inning had five runs on three hits and EDT but the umpires waited for nearly an hour before calling it off.

"Both teams would have had to play under the tarp condition but I think it might have been less fair to us since we had so much at stake," said Williams. "We have been a good mud player in wet weather. But that field was awfully

Challenger Ernie Shavers tests Larry Holmes' condition at heavyweight weigh-in on eve of title fight

Holmes remains forgotten champion

LAS VEGAS — For those who would like to see beyond Larry Holmes, the public person, it can be reported from looking over his shoulder with a few of the "regulars" on the fight beat that he is not on the Scarsdale diet, although an interviewer could not pinch an ounce of fat at his midriff. Holmes permits such an invasion of privacy.

It could be disillusioning to an aspiring youngster to learn that Holmes is training for his World Boxing Council heavyweight title defense against Earnie Shavers here tonight by eating heaping plates of pump French-fried onion rings.

He attacked the ritual steak with the vigor of a youngster who did without them on the wrong side of the railroad tracks in Easton, Pa. If there is a wrong side there, he poked at the mandatory salad, and Brussels sprouts with the tassels he showed before knocking out Mike Weaver in the 12th round in June.

He wears a T-shirt identifying him as Larry Holmes "Champion of the World." That is not at all redundant here, where he competes with billboards listing the household names of the entertainment world. One could get sizable odds in this gambler's city that not everyone knows Muhammad Ali has retired or who the two guys are who will fight for the World Boxing Association title next month.

At one time a heavyweight champ had instant recognition implicitly, as the guy who could lick any man in the world. Preliminary fighters on Friday night's card have more box office identification, such as Sugar Ray Leonard and Roberto Duran.

That is one of the reasons why Holmes expressed almost childlike delight when a visitor to his suite presented him with a medalion on a chain identifying him as the "world champion."

He introduced the local jeweler who designed it and gave it to him, urging the fight writers to patronize him, and took the occasion to show another badge of his status, a ring proclaiming him as the "champion."

Once more he exposed his psyche as extremely sensitive to the Rodney "I don't get no respect" Dangerfield syndrome.

Does it bother him that there will be two heavyweight champions, presumably he and the winner of the WBA bout between Gerrie Coetzee and John Tate?

"No, it doesn't, because there is only one now — me. They haven't fought me. It only bothers me when you guys write about it."

Does he resent the attention being given to Leonard and Duran on the preliminary card?

"Come on, don't start that again. I was alluding to his bout with lightly regarded Weaver, when most of the preflight attention was focused on the preliminary bout between Duran and Carlos Palomino."

"Like I say, it didn't bother me until you wrote about it. I'm the heavyweight champion. The pride is when you win. I'm fighting the main event on Friday. I go on last, at 7:05 o'clock p.m. Easy."

Again he was asked if it would not bother him that Coetzee, a South African, or Tate, an American, is going to be recognized as champion by some people around the world in WBA jurisdictions?

"They can't beat me. Does he know Tate, who is from Knoxville, Tenn.?"

"No, but I know he's illiterate. I saw him on television and he couldn't even talk; he couldn't express himself. Bob Arum is taking him to South Africa and 'using' him. Then he'll drop him."

"What happens when Tate's own people (blacks) turn from him? Some white people may accept him — for a while. Arum is programming him like a robot."

Would Holmes fight Coetzee if the South African beats Tate?

"Not under the circumstances."

Is it Tate's opponent he objects to or where the bout is being fought?

"It's the South African government. Coetzee can't help the fact that he was born there. Like I was born black. I'd fight him if he came to the United States. Arum is doing it for money."

Holmes noted that Rev. Jesse Jackson of People United to Save Humanity (PUSH) has opposed the fight in South Africa because of the country's apartheid policy. A reporter implied in a line of questioning that Tate should be allowed to earn some big money. The reporter asked Holmes, "What has Jesse Jackson done for you?"

"Nothing, but he is a representative for black people. Martin Luther King was. Everybody has a representative."

Did Holmes expect Tate to know about international politics?

"Tate knows what one plus one is. He sold his soul."

Was Holmes saying Tate is a traitor to his race?

"No, he just doesn't know what's going on. Jesse Jackson went to Israel to try to help things out. So did Andrew Young. I've got to be behind them; they're for my people."

"Heck, Tate is weighing 245 pounds. That shows nobody cares what may happen to him. Maybe they'll drug him so he can't win. I've heard all kinds of stories. Willie Rodriguez, a welterweight is a friend of mine. He went there and they treated him badly; he's Hispanic. They didn't want him there."

Holmes was asked afterward if he had any facts to support his suspicions relative to Tate's security. He said he did not.

Someone mentioned that seating for the Coetzee-Tate bout is going to be integrated and he said, "That don't mean anything."

"I liked Arum," he said, with mocking laughter, "until he said about me after my bout with Weaver that I have a heart as big as a mouse," and it doesn't figure to happen again. Ram offense lacking spark.

Oakland 27, Denver 24 — Vagabond Raiders finally get home and it should help. Bronco defense is not the force it once was.

Atlanta 23, Washington 14 — Falcons need to get themselves together to stay in NFC West race. Redskins have won three straight but against inferior competition.

Dallas 31, Cincinnati 13 — Winless Bengals in unenviable position of having to face Cowboys after first loss Monday night. Cincinnati defense has been terrible.

Seattle 33, Kansas City 24 — Seahawks always manage to get their points but defense is big question mark. Chiefs defense has been playing well and balling out fitness of offense.

Minnesota 27, Detroit 17 — Vikings have a little too much offense for Detroit. Rookie QB Jeff Krome also may have problems with Minnesota defense.

Buffalo 34, Baltimore 20 — Young Bills are rolling and could easily be 4-0 instead of 2-2. Colts still not generating any offense without QB Bert Jones.

New Orleans 27, New York Giants 17 — Saints look to get untracked. They lead NFC in total offense but are 1-3. Winless Giants may unveil rookie QB Phil Simms, No. 1 draft choice.

New England 34, Green Bay 16 — Patriots, 3-1, are not in the same class as 1-3 Packers. New England defense should have little trouble with Green Bay offense.

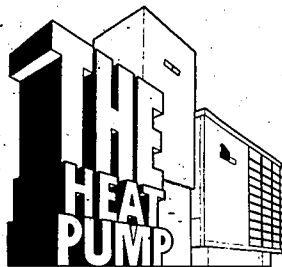

San Diego 37, San Francisco 17 — Chargers rebound after absorbing first loss of season last week. 49ers score but don't stop people.

St. Louis 20, Angeles 17 — Cardinals fumbles cost them last week

Knicks, 7ers post victories

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joe C Merliweather scored 22 points and hauled down 10 rebounds and rookie Bill Cartwright added 18 points and 12 rebounds Thursday night as the New York Knicks defeated the New Jersey Nets 126-91 in the second game of a preseason NBA double-header.

In the first game, Boston's Larry Bird made an impressive debut as a pro by scoring 18 points and grabbing six rebounds in 28 minutes of play.

Browns, Bucs still need miracles

BY JOE CARNICELLI
UPI Executive Sports Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — The National Football League's two "miracle" teams will have tough assignments this week.

The unbeaten Cleveland Browns, who pulled off three come-from-behind victories in their first three games and then stunned NFC champion Dallas Monday night, take on the Houston Oilers in a critical AFC Central Division game.

And the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, also 4-0 and coming off an easy victory over Los Angeles, are in Chicago to take on the Bears in a key NFC Central game.

The Browns, off to their best start in 16 years, are tied with Pittsburgh for the division lead. Houston, 3-1, is a game behind. Last season, the Oilers cost the Browns a playoff berth with 16-13 and 14-10 victories over the Browns.

Cleveland's major task will be stopping Earl Campbell, the NFL's leading rusher. Campbell carried 34 times for 153 yards last week as the Oilers rallied from a 24-0 deficit to defeat Cincinnati 30-27 in overtime.

The Browns may have to stop Campbell without Lyle Alzado, who has been out since the season began being acquired from Denver just before the start of the season. Alzado suffered a sprained knee against Dallas and aggravated it when a security guard fell on him in a crowd of fans at the end of the game.

Cleveland also may be without star running back Greg Pruitt, who is also suffering with a knee sprain.

Tampa Bay owns a two-game lead in the NFC Central and could push the Bears three behind with a victory. The Bucs have been winning with spectacular defensive play — they are tied with Philadelphia for fewest points allowed in the NFC and the unit also has forced critical turnovers which have helped produce an NFC high 102 points. The Bucs already have 11 fumble recoveries.

Chicago won its first two games before suffering a last-minute loss to Dallas and then getting beaten badly by Miami.

Here's the way the NFL shapes up this weekend:

Sunday
Houston 34, Cleveland 31 — Oilers are always tough at home and key injuries to Alzado and Pruitt will hamper Browns. But Houston defense must pressure Sipe if Oilers hope to win.

Tampa Bay 24, Chicago 13 — Defense keeps Bucs rolling until offense comes around. Bucs QB Doug Williams hitting mere 34 per cent of his passes and has to improve.

Pittsburgh 20, Philadelphia 17 — Injury-riddled Steelers will need all-out effort from second-line players to remain unbeaten. Eagles can be dangerous.

Miami 24, New York Jets 13 — Miami defense has been brilliant, allowing NFL-low 45 points. Jet defense has been atrocious, surrendering league high 137.

San Diego 37, San Francisco 17 — Chargers rebound after absorbing first loss of season last week. 49ers score but don't stop people.

St. Louis 20, Angeles 17 — Cardinal fumbles cost them last week and it doesn't figure to happen again. Ram offense lacking spark.

Oakland 27, Denver 24 — Vagabond Raiders finally get home and it should help. Bronco defense is not the force it once was.

Atlanta 23, Washington 14 — Falcons need to get themselves together to stay in NFC West race. Redskins have won three straight but against inferior competition.

Seattle 33, Kansas City 24 — Seahawks always manage to get their points but defense is big question mark. Chiefs defense has been playing well and balling out fitness of offense.

Minnesota 27, Detroit 17 — Vikings have a little too much offense for Detroit. Rookie QB Jeff Krome also may have problems with Minnesota defense.

Buffalo 34, Baltimore 20 — Young Bills are rolling and could easily be 4-0 instead of 2-2. Colts still not generating any offense without QB Bert Jones.

New Orleans 27, New York Giants 17 — Saints look to get untracked. They lead NFC in total offense but are 1-3. Winless Giants may unveil rookie QB Phil Simms, No. 1 draft choice.

Monday night
New England 34, Green Bay 16 — Patriots, 3-1, are not in the same class as 1-3 Packers. New England defense should have little trouble with Green Bay offense.

San Diego 37, San Francisco 17 — Chargers rebound after absorbing first loss of season last week. 49ers score but don't stop people.

St. Louis 20, Angeles 17 — Cardinal fumbles cost them last week

Bean sets course record to open World Series of Golf

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Andy Bean, not complaining about the controversial sand traps like some golfers because he was rarely in them, fired a tournament record 64 Thursday to grab a two-stroke lead after the first round of the $400,000 World Series of Golf.

Bean shot a sizzling 33-31—64, six strokes below par on the usually rugged Firestone Country Club south course and one stroke better than the previous 'tourney' one-round record of 65 set in 1976 by Hubert Green.

Bean's sensational round also was just one shot off the course record of 63 set by Bruce Crampton during the 1975 PGA Tournament.

Two strokes behind Bean in the chase for the $100,000 first prize were J.C. Snead with a 32-34-66 and Graham Marsh with a 34-32-66.

Then came Lee Trevino, Lon Hinkle and Tom Kite, all with scores of 33-34-67, followed by Jerry Pate and Larry Nelson at 34-34-68 and Tom Watson at 35-33-68.

Also breaking par with 69s were Hale Irwin, Bill Rogers, Howard Twitty and Fuzzy Zoeller.

"This is probably the best day the pros have ever had at Firestone," figured Watson, the PGA's leading money winner this year who has a chance to become the first pro golfer ever to earn more than $500,000 in one year if he either wins or places second here.

But, Snead and Kite figured they would have had even better days had the sand in the bunkers not been so loose. But their complaints were overshadowed by the sterling play of Bean, who got in only one bunker all day.

"What can I say?" Bean wondered after his record-setting 64. "For me, it was a perfect round on a perfect day for golf.

"I played about as well as I can. I'm just looking forward to doing it the next three days.

"The weather and the course are absolutely perfect. If it stays like this, the scores here are going to be lower than normal.

Although Bean said he "didn't think anything was wrong with the sand" in the bunkers, Snead and Kite were irked.

"The bunkers are awful," complained Snead. "You could spit in there and it would go down two feet. Everything that goes in the bunker baries. Every shot goes out of sight."

And, when Kite finished his round, he also got off a sand blast.

"I'd be willing to bet this doesn't meet the PGA requirements for sand," he ventured. "This sand just hasn't had time to settle. You step in it and it goes up past your ankle. This indicates they just put it in a week or two ago."

Not so, answered Firestone grounds chairman Jim Loke.

"There's no new sand here," he said. "Absolutely not."

However, Loke admitted the sand was what he called "fluffy."

"I knew it was too soft," he said. "The sand is fluffy because we've had at least five severe thunderstorms this summer that pushed the sand around. So, we've had to shovel it and redistribute it."

"We've been hand-watering it to try to pack it down, but we've had manpower problems and we just haven't been able to water it enough."

But, at least there was one good point about the loose sand.

"I had a lot of bunker practice," noted Kite.

Turnbull stuns Evert in Atlanta classic

ATLANTA (UPI) — Eighth-seeded Wendy Turnbull of Australia served a clean ace on her third match point to upset second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd 6-4, 1-6, 6-4 Thursday and move into the semifinals of the $100,000 Atlanta women's tennis classic.

Top-seeded Martina Navratilova met seventh-seeded Virginia Wade while third-seeded Tracy Austin played sixth-seed Dianne Fromholtz in more quarterfinal action later Thursday.

In another quarterfinal match Thursday, fifth-seeded Evonne Goolagong beat South African Marie Kruger, who upset Billie Jean King on Wednesday, by a 6-1-2 margin.

"I played really well," Turnbull said following the match. "Now I just want to relax."

The 26-year-old Turnbull, who had lost her previous 11 matches to Evert including the final of the French Open and the Wimbledon quarterfinals this year — served extremely well and never allowed Evert to dominate the tempo of play with her ground strokes.

Taking a 5-3 lead in the first set with a break of Evert's serve in the eighth game, Turnbull dropped her own serve for 5-4. In the next game, Turnbull took the set with a forehand cross court passing shot on her second set point.

Evert came storming back in the second stanza and dropped only one game, that coming in the fourth on Turnbull's serve for 2-1. After two long games in which 23 points were played, Evert moved out to a 4-1 lead and won the last two games with the loss of only two points.

After both players held service for 1-1 in the decisive set, Turnbull broke Evert for 2-1, but dropped her own service for 2-2. The set went on serve until 4-4 when Evert Lloyd, down love-15, let a Turnbull backhand go, thinking it would land long.

Stephenson's 66 earns early LPGA lead in Dallas meet

DALLAS (UPI) — Jan Stephenson fired a 66 under-par 66 Thursday to assume a two-shot lead over Californian Vicki Ferguson after the opening round of the $150,000 LPGA Mary Kay Golf Classic.

Two shots behind Ferguson at 2-under 70 were U.S. Open champion Jerilyn Britz and rookie Beth Daniel, a two-time U.S. amateur champion from Charleston, S.C.

Stephenson, 27, a native of Australia now living in Fort Worth, Tex., had seven birdies, 10 pars and a single bogie in shooting the second-lowest round of her six-year career.

Ten other golfers, including the tour's leading money winner, Nancy Lopez, had sub-par rounds on the Bent Tree course. Twelve other players matched par.

Stephenson, who has won three tournaments in her career but none this year, sank birdies with putts ranging from two to 12 feet and her only bogie came when she three-putted the 14th hole.

"I wanted to get mad but I didn't," Stephenson said. "If you lose your head out there, you can shoot a bundle. I'm really normally a slow starter. I usually finish fast because I love the people, the money and the show."

Racquetball meet begins

TWIN FALLS — Ball Busters Racquet Ball and Health Club will start its third year of operation with a "Summer's End" Racquetball Tournament today.

More than 110 competitors have signed up for the three-day tourney which ends Sunday.

A free buffet dinner will be held Saturday night for all participants. There also will be dinner tickets available at a nominal charge of $2.

All final matches will be held Sunday with play concluding about 3 p.m.

Rupert takes inter-city

TWIN FALLS — Rupert has won the Magic Valley Ladies' Inter-City Golf competition by an eight-point margin over Jerome.

Following last week's competition, Rupert totalled 81½ points, Jerome 23½, Twin Falls Municipal 73, Canyon Springs 71½, Blue Lakes Country Club 59½, Burley 58, Buhl 45½, and Gooding 41½.

Individual winners at the final tourney at Jerome were:

- Gross Division — First, Judy Lawley, Jerome, 76; second, Lucille Milton, Rupert, 84; third (tie), Penny Jones, Rupert, 85 and Barbara Anderson, Gooding, 85; fifth (tie), Shirley Strangh, Canyon Springs, 86 and Justine Messersmith, Jerome, 86.
- Net Division — First (tie), Lyn Borlase, Jerome, 63 and Clarice Groesbeck, Rupert, 63; third (tie), Minnie Stanley, Blue Lakes, 66 and Betty Colner, Blue Lakes, 66; and fifth (tie), Sue Langdon, Canyon Springs, 68 and Frieda Richmond, Buhl, 68.

Mildred Lynch of Burley was elected inter-city president for the 1980 season.

Jerome sets horse show

JEROME — An all-youth benefit horse show will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at Simpson's Arena near Jerome.

Proceeds from the show will go to the Concerned Citizens for the Mentally Handicapped to be used toward the summer school program. Karen James, former Miss Rodeo America, will judge the show.

Most of the classes will be divided into three age divisions and an all-around trophy will be given to the high point exhibitor in each division.

Class winners will receive a tack item and there will be ribbons for first through sixth.

Businessmen honor Bruins

Starr eyed for Senate seat

By United Press International

If Bart Starr is not busy with the Green Bay Packers next year, he might be a possibility as the Republican Party's candidate for the U.S. Senate, Wisconsin Gov. Lee Dreyfus said Thursday.

The Republican governor is helping recruit a candidate to run against Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., in 1980.

Asked at a news conference if Starr might be a good candidate, Dreyfus said, "I think there may be some possibility. One of the key things in politics I've learned is that if you swim with the sharks, don't bleed. And I would appear to me at least in the field of athletic management, Mr. Starr has learned not to bleed.

"As to whether he has any political desires or not, I really haven't the slightest idea. I've never talked to him about it. I've heard his name come up."

"I can't even tell you if his persistence is one party or the other. But, no, I've not talked to him. I have not thought about it. I assume at the moment he is slightly occupied."

Asked if Starr could beat Nelson, Dreyfus quipped, "I don't know. I am more concerned about the Chicago Bears at this point."

The Puerto Rican Olympic Committee Thursday asked the heads of world amateur sports organizations to bar the United States from international basketball competition until such time as Indiana University Coach Bobby Knight appears before the Puerto Rican courts.

The Puerto Rican Olympic Committee approved the resolution asking for the ban on the United States at a meeting Wednesday night and the requests for the ban were being sent out Thursday to the International Olympic Committee, the International Amateur Basketball Federation and the U.S. Olympic Committee.

The Olympic Committee approved the resolution unanimously with only one abstention that of yacht racing delegate Juan R. Torruella, who is a federal judge in San Juan.

Knight, the start-tempered coach of the U.S. national basketball team that won the gold medal at the Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico last July, is now considered a fugitive from justice in Puerto Rico because he refused to show up to stand trial on a charge of hitting a Puerto Rican policeman.

Brian Pederson, a 6-10 junior, will miss the entire University of Minnesota basketball season because of a chronic back problem.

Pederson was the only junior on the Gopher team and coaches said his experience as a center and forward would be missed by the young squad. He played in 24 games last year, averaged 2.7 rebounds per game and scored a total of 32 points.

Pederson was bothered by the problem last year and had been resting his back since the end of last season.

Coach Jim Dutcher said Pederson tried to play in a pickup game recently "and the next morning he couldn't get out of bed." The coach said Pederson would sit out the season as a red-shirt, "and then we'll see if he can play again."

Dr. Harvey O'Phelan, team physician, has said Pederson must rest his back completely for a year or undergo surgery.

St. Louis outfielder Lou Brock and Philadelphia first baseman Pete Rose, two recent members of baseball's 3,000-hit club, head a contingent of 44 players who will travel to Japan to play in the All-Star Game in November, it was announced Thursday by Baseball

Jenkins — both averaging more than six yards per carry. Reeves is also leading the Big Sky in rushing with a 153-yard-per-game average, while Jenkins' 85-yard average per game is No. 4 in the league.

Montana State hopes to keep pace with NAU by winning at Boise State Saturday night. The Bulldogs are only 1-2 this fall, but 1-0 in the Big Sky. But the 2-1 Broncos must be the favorite based on their defense. BSU has given up just 11 points per game this fall and has the 1st first league contest.

BSU is also No. 1 in the conference in stopping the rush, which is about the only way Montana State has been able to move the ball this year.

Either Montana or Weber State should get win No. 1 this year, unless they play to a tie — something they've never done in 17 past games.

The Wildcats are 0-3 this fall while the Grizzlies are 0-2. If one team has the edge it must be Montana. The Grizzlies have won nine of the last 10 games, including a 27-7 victory last fall in Ogden, Utah.

Idaho should even its record at 2-0 at the expense of Puget Sound. The Vandals are fresh from a 17-13 win over Division I Pacific, and demonstrated enough power to hand the Loggers what their first loss this fall in four games.

situation, our outlook for the future." "We will certainly have to be ready to have a chance. It is a difficult time. We are disappointed, but not down. We have faced up to the situation and must have patience to grow."

Saturday's headliner in the Southeastern Conference will be at Baton Rouge, La., where 16th-ranked Louisiana State hosts top-ranked Southern Cal. Other games involving SEC teams include 2nd-ranked Alabama at Vanderbilt, Auburn at Tennessee, Maryland at Kentucky and Mississippi State vs. Florida.

A third member of the 3,000-hit club, Hall of Famer Willie Mays, will serve as a National League coach under Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda. Baltimore's Earl Weaver will manage the AL squad. Brock, who has announced his retirement effective with the end of the 1979 season, will join Francisco's Jack Clark, Cincinnati's George Foster, Chicago's Dave Kingman and Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia in the outfield.

The AL roster is headed by seven-time batting champion Rod Carew of California, who will join outfielder and teammate Don Baylor, Detroit outfielder Steve Kemp, Boston's Jim Rice and Baltimore's Ken Singleton among others.

The teams will depart from New York and San Francisco on Nov. 3, and will be returning Nov. 21.

Joe Klecko, a starting defensive tackle for the New York Jets, was released from Good Samaritan Hospital in Babylon, N.Y., Thursday and will practice with the team Friday, the club announced.

Klecko, who was hospitalized with an ankle infection and 101-degree temperature, is listed as questionable for Sunday, when the Jets play host to the Miami Dolphins.

New York quarterback Matt Robinson, who lost his starting job to Richard Todd in recent weeks, is listed as probable with a sinus condition.

Cleveland may go against Oilers without Greg Pruitt

By IRA KAUFMAN UPI Sports Writer

Although the Cleveland Browns — one of only four unbeaten teams left in the National Football League — lead the AFC in passing yardage, the eyes of Texas are on a Cleveland running back.

Greg Pruitt, the Browns' leading rusher with 214 yards and a player of game-breaking potential, strained a knee late in the first half of Cleveland's shockingly easy 26-7 triumph over Dallas Monday night and is doubtful for the AstroDome Sunday. The 5-foot-10, 190-pound halfback had helped build a 21-point lead against the Cowboys, but the Browns' offense was stifled without him for most of the second half.

"Greg gives their offense an added dimension," Oilers' defensive coach Eddie Biles said. "We're preparing as if he will play."

Cleveland and Pittsburgh share the lead in the AFC Central with 4-0 records and Houston's 3-1. Miami and Tampa Bay are the only other unbeaten teams in the league.

Despite the acknowledged strength of the Oilers — who edged the Browns twice last year at home to a playoff berth — Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano faces the task of convincing his team not to look past this week's game: Cleveland takes on the Steelers next week and in the final quarter of the Dallas game. Browns' fans chanted, "We want Pittsburgh! We want Pittsburgh!"

The Browns rank second in the AFC in total offense and first in passing due to quarterback Brian Sipe's 1,902 yards. Eight of Cleveland's 10 touchdowns have been in the air, with light end Ozzie Newsome catching three and wide receivers Dave Logan and Reggie Rucker two each.

The Oilers, however, boast a strong pass rush (18 sacks) and a stingy pass defense which has allowed only 45 percent of opponent's passes completed.

On offense, Houston again is going with what they do best ... put the ball into the belly of No. 34; the wondrous Earl Campbell. The second-year back is averaging almost 30 carries per game and leads the NFL with 493 rushing yards. Quarterback Dan Pastorini, injured but expected to start against the Browns, is off to a miserable start with eight interceptions and a 39 percent completion rate.

In other games Sunday, Pittsburgh is at Philadelphia, St. Louis at Los Angeles, Buffalo at Baltimore, Denver at Oakland, Kansas City at Seattle, Miami at the New York Jets, Minnesota at Detroit, the New York Giants at New Orleans, Tampa Bay at Chicago, Washington at Atlanta, Cincinnati at Dallas and San Francisco at San Diego.

New England is at Green Bay Monday night.

The unbeaten Steelers travel to Philadelphia riding a 13-game winning streak and will bring their league-leading defense as a present to their Pennsylvania rivals. Philadelphia, 4-1, boasts the NFL's best rushing defense, but the Eagles will have to maintain defensive pressure the entire game: Pittsburgh has truncated opponents 43-7 in the fourth quarter.

Los Angeles, 2-2, was held to mere 186 yards in total offense last week in 10-10 tie with Tampa Bay. The Rams hope to rebound against slumping Cardinals, 1-3. The Rams' defense is the NFL's best against the pass, but St. Louis offense features a nice blend of passing and running. Otis Anderson, Cardinals' rookie running back, is the NFL's third-leading ground-gainer with 406 yards.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A field of 20 horses, including Affirmed and Spectacular Bid, has been nominated to the $30,000 added Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont Park on October 6.

The race will mark the first confrontation between Affirmed, last year's horse of the year, and Spectacular Bid, this year's Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Marlboro Cup winner. Both horses will go into the Gold Cup off impressive wins and this year's horse of the Year title probably hinges on the outcome of this race.

Other likely participants include Czarovich, Coastal, Sirlud, Mister Brea and Chiquirin.

Spectacular Bid beat most of the opposition in the Marlboro Cup and Affirmed did the same in the Woodward Stakes.

Big Sky NAU heavily favored over winless Bengals

By United Press International

Defending champion Northern Arizona has had its way during the first three weeks of the 1979 Big Sky Conference season. And this Saturday looks like another win for the unbeaten Lumberjacks as they head for Idaho State.

NAU is unbeaten in three games this fall and 2-0 in the Big Sky. While ISU is winless in as many games and 0-2 in the league, and the Bengals have now lost eight consecutive conference games.

A look at the Big Sky statistics shows why Northern Arizona is leading the league. The Lumberjacks are No. 1 in total offense, rushing offense, scoring and first downs.

NAU is also No. 1 in penalties. And, if the Lumberjacks have another weakness, it's passing defense. Northern Arizona has given up 116 yards per game this fall.

Rodeo talk

Rodeo years ends on tragic and happy notes

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News Staff Writer

The airplane which disappeared while carrying four professional cowboys to a rodeo May 22 has been found in Northern California, according to a sheriff's officer in that state.

The wreckage was spotted by a hunter last Saturday, and sheriff's deputies were inspecting the fuselage Monday. There were no survivors.

The cowboys — Brian Claypool, 26, Sastakatoon, Sask.; Lee Coleman, 20, Pierceland, Sask.; Gary Logan, 21, Seaside, Alta.; and Clavin Buncney, 19, Duchesne, Wyo. — were flying from contests at Cloverdale, B.C. to another rodeo in Las Vegas, Nev.

Claypool was piloting the single-engine plane and failed to file a flight plan. In inclement weather, the craft crashed into the side of a 6,500-foot mountain in the timber country 20 miles northwest of Yreka, Calif.

A two-month long search followed, funded by donations from the cowboys' friends and fellow competitors on both sides of the border. It centered in an area around Medford, Ore. The plane was downed less than 10 miles from the area which was searched so painstakingly.

Rodeo fans are still talking about the performance of several top cowboys in the Idaho Cowboys Association rodeo this year.

Calvin Amy, a standout at the College of Southern Idaho, computerized the place in the year-end standings of the saddle bronc competition. He topped 2,478.55 points, substantially over the Holmes of Boise's 2,127.55 and Wally Kimball's 2,076.67. Gary Atch at 1,792.14.

Pat O'Malley at Shoshone was a second place finisher in the bull riding standings. His 1,776.20 points was second to Dave Taylor's 1,875.20 and 1,655.39. Jay Smith of Idaho Falls was third at 1,611.02.

Team roping — Dan Hooser, Caldwell, 216.06; Casey Cox, 182.50; John Maggard, 108.33; and Lonnie Wright, Murphy, 54.17.
Team roping — Scott Whitworth and Ted O'Neal, both of May, 183.32; Steve Kaufman and Tom Eddy, 137.50; and Sherry Hager and Dan Hager, both of Kuna, 91.17.
Saddle roping — Kevin Small, Medicine Lodge, Mont., 116.06; Willis Kimball, Prarie City, Ore., 102.50; Casey Bejeh, Caldwell, 108.33; and Bruce Boyda, 17.17.
Barrel race — Bob Schall, 20, Ignatius, 216.66; Dan Hooser, Caldwell, 182.50; Calvin Amy, Twin Falls, 108.33; and Mike Siewel, Idaho Falls, 51.17.

Buildings — Fred Buster, Hilder, Grandview, 1,239.41; and third, Jim Creer, Richland, Wash., 997.63.
Barrel racing — First, Jackie Hooser, Caldwell, 2,507.75; second, Dorethe Humpal, Caldwell, 2,285.92; and third, Sheri Roche, Corinne, Utah, 997.63.
Saddle bronc — First, Calvin Amy, Twin Falls, 2,478.55; second, Gene Holmes, Boise, 2,127.55; and third, Willie Kimball, Prarie City, Ore., 2,076.67.
Barrel racing — First, Bob Schall, 20, Ignatius, 216.66; second, Pat O'Malley, Shoshone, 1,776.20; and third, Mike DeVany, 1,271.67.
Results from the final rodeo at ICA included (based on averages):
Bull riding — Hingate 216.66; Kristi Kohala, Ontario, Ore., 182.50; Hooser 108.33; and Patti Kaufman, Kuna, 54.17.
Bulldogging — Hilday 206.66; La Mar Roche, Corinne, Utah, 155; Tom Clyde, Joseph, Ore., 102.53; Wade Banky, Ontario, Ore., 51.17.
Bull riding — Pat O'Malley, Shoshone, 206.66; Gene Holmes, Boise, 182.50; Troy Hutter, Welser, 102.53; and John Urrutia, Kimberly, 51.17.

Call roping — Dan Hooser, Caldwell, 216.06; Casey Cox, 182.50; John Maggard, 108.33; and Lonnie Wright, Murphy, 54.17.
Team roping — Scott Whitworth and Ted O'Neal, both of May, 183.32; Steve Kaufman and Tom Eddy, 137.50; and Sherry Hager and Dan Hager, both of Kuna, 91.17.
Saddle roping — Kevin Small, Medicine Lodge, Mont., 116.06; Willis Kimball, Prarie City, Ore., 102.50; Casey Bejeh, Caldwell, 108.33; and Bruce Boyda, 17.17.
Barrel race — Bob Schall, 20, Ignatius, 216.66; Dan Hooser, Caldwell, 182.50; Calvin Amy, Twin Falls, 108.33; and Mike Siewel, Idaho Falls, 51.17.

The Eastern Idaho Rodeo Association will hold its annual banquet Oct. 6 at the Roadway Inn in Pocatello. The banquet will be from 7 to 9 p.m. with a dance to follow.
Reservations can be made by calling 208-237-4020.
The top six cowboys in each event will be presented awards during the banquet. The following are the top six:

Art Ray of Keller, Tex., is one professional cowboy who has discovered a get rich quick scheme, and it may take him to his first National Finals Rodeo (NFR) in December.
The Texas' bull riding talents have become a hot-bed of high scores and whopping paychecks recently, and his latest hauling was a $6,200 check at Albuquerque, N.M., last weekend.
Ray, 25, was up during the last 10 minutes of the $100,000 rodeo and ended up at a mark of 80 to win the event. Atop Corvil's bull #511, he scored 81 points to cop first place and the biggest check of his rodeo career.

It pushed him from 19th to 11th in PRCA standings with a total of $22,307. The top 15 cowboys in each event will qualify for the half-million dollar National Finals and the Keller cowboy has a $2,900 safety margin right now.
The following are the PRCA standings:

All-around cowboy — Tom Ferguson, Miami, Okla., 97,442; Paul Terrey, Rapid City, S.D., 92,812; Doug Brown, Silverton, Ore., 83,549.
Saddle bronc — Monty Henson, Mesquite, Tex., 53,617; Bobby Berger, Lexington, Okla., 53,195; Joe Marvel, Hutto, Miss., 52,729.
Barrel racing — Bruce Ford, Evans, Colo., 23,306; Joe Alexander, Marysville, Calif., 213,300; and Sam Perkins, Chandler, Neb., 238,106.

Bull riding — Jerry Beagly, Medicine Lodge, Kan., 44,000; Don Gay, Mesquite, Tex., 42,200; and Benny Flynn, Charleston, W.Va., 38,258.
Call roping — Tom Ferguson, Miami, Okla., 63,512; Paul Terrey, Rapid City, S.D., 62,195; and Don Beck, Hutto, Miss., 52,729.

President suspects collusion

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Fernando "Mendry" Gallindez says he doesn't know if promoter Bob Arum had anything to do with his election as president of the World Boxing Association.

Gallindez, running for re-election of the world-wide organization, was defeated by Rodrigo Sanchez of Panama in a 300-vote election. Gallindez says he was surprised to learn that he had lost. "I got to talk first with the 10 people who changed their minds in two days. That surprised me," he said.

Gallindez stopped an Arum-promoted fight heavy-weight title fight between the champion Mike Roseman and Victor Gallindez (no relation) in Las Vegas last February by saying the winner would not be recognized as champion.

In a telegram, Gallindez objected to the use of Nevada officials instead of the WBA officials he had sent up from South America. The telegram led to the cancellation just moments before the fight time and Arum's complaining that "the lunatics have taken over the asylum."

Watkins Glen, N.Y. (UPI) — When Ferrari teammates Jody Scheckter and Gilles Villeneuve wheel their cars onto the 3.37 mile circuit, look for the first U.S. Grand Prix practice and qualifying session, they will be seeking a fourth straight victory in American Formula One competition.

Hunt Camp tower burning hotly debated

By DAVE MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Seattle Japanese-Americans will gather at the site of the Minidoka Relocation Center next month for a ceremony recalling the years they were imprisoned there behind barbed wire and under armed guards.

But that ceremony, the second to occur at the site this year, is being criticized by Idaho Japanese-Americans and the national Japanese-American Citizens League (JACL) as little more than a grandstanding publicity effort.

The Minidoka Center was one of 10 camps in the Western United States which housed the entire West Coast Japanese-American population in World War II. Concentration camps in all but name, they imprisoned more than 110,000 persons, most of whom were American citizens.

On Aug. 18, the camp, located at the Hunt railroad spur northwest of Eden, was dedicated as a National Historic Site. That dedication ceremony drew more than 300 persons from throughout the country.

The controversy over the scheduled Oct. 19 "Day of Remembrance," sponsored by the Seattle chapter of the JACL, has focused largely on the activities scheduled for the second ceremony. Some Japanese-Americans have objected to plans which call for construction and burning of a 25-foot-tall guard tower identical to those which at one time sheltered the armed soldiers who guarded the camp.

The tower burning, which sponsors of the second ceremony say is to be a symbolic destruction of the camps and what they stood for, has been criticized as a publicity stunt. Other Japanese-Americans, including several Idahoans, say they are afraid the action will cause bad feelings between Idaho Caucasians and Idaho Japanese-Americans, perhaps creating a "backlash" of resentment.

"We're hoping to fill a plane with at least 100 persons coming to the Day of Remembrance," said Frank Chin, a Seattle playwright and one of the organizers of the Oct. 19 ceremony. "But it's possible there could be more. A group will be coming out by car to put up the tower the day before."

According to Chin, the Seattle JACL chapter voted to endorse both the ceremony and the tower-burning earlier this year. The cost of constructing the tower is coming from the Seattle chapter treasury.

"I think it's a real shame," Chin said of the opposition to the second ceremony. "I think it's one of the effects of the camp itself. To preserve their good relations with the majority white community, the Idaho Japanese-Americans must quash, must destroy their own history."

According to Chin, "the opposition comes from the non-Indians of Idaho." Only Japanese-Americans living on the west coast were imprisoned, Chin said. Japanese-Americans living in inland states were not imprisoned.

"These permanent residents in 1941 and 1942 were afraid of being identified with the internees, and instead of defending their fellow Japanese-Americans, they sided with the whites. They believed that the only way to maintain good relations with whites was to condemn the Japanese-Americans who were interned and to characterize the camps as a blessing."

"There is still a fear of it happening again," Chin said. "This fear of a backlash is a fear that unless they keep their noses clean it will happen again," he added.

Chin believes the fear of a white backlash against Japanese-

Americans is unwarranted. "People want to know what happened. Our experience is that people are sympathetic and interested in learning what happened."

But the Seattle chapter's plans have drawn criticism.

"We support the idea of pilgrimages to the sites," said Karl Nobuyuki, of San Francisco, national director of the JACL. "But we are opposed to the idea of the tower burning. We don't feel it serves any meaningful purpose. It seems geared toward media publicity, gimmickry. It's a media hype."

Burning the guard tower "confuses and misses the point of what it all symbolized," he added.

Gasohol research funds set

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Approval of a $130,000 grant to test feasibility of producing gasohol from farm products in a plant at Raft River has been announced here Thursday afternoon by Tom Fleming, director of Region 4 Development Association.

Fleming told the regional advisory board at a regular meeting Monday that the grant has been authorized through the Economic Development Agency and the Office of Energy.

He said the plant will be capable of producing only 20 gallons of alcohol a day, but its principal function is to prove if production could be successfully undertaken in this area on a larger scale. The plant will use such Magic Valley farm produce as potatoes, sugar beets and possibly corn in producing the alcohol. It will be powered by the geothermal hot water being produced in the Raft River region.

Fleming said an organization of some 200 wheat growers and cattlemen, mostly from the Idaho Falls area, sponsored the project. The group is known as Agri-Energy and is expected to go ahead with plant construction as soon as the funds are available. Region 4 Development Association staff members have been working with Agri-Energy for some time to obtain the grant.

The association advisory board, made up mostly of city and county officials from the Magic Valley, Thursday also accepted an offer from Dr. James Taylor, President of the College of Southern Idaho, for assistance in a solid waste combustion plant study.

Taylor, a member of the board, offered a five-day loan of the college's research librarian. He will contact communities and plant operators where similar facilities are now functioning to try to determine the feasibility of establishing one or more plants in Magic Valley.

The Burley-Rupert area is already moving toward a plant, having made a study there. Twin Falls city and county have authorized a study for such a plant here. Both projects involve proposed plants which will burn garbage and other solid waste to produce steam or other energy which could be sold to industry.

Directors Thursday said before going on record in support of a plant which could serve a multi-community network, they wanted to know if it is feasible economically. Everett Ward of Lincoln County said he did not believe Lincoln County alone could support such a facility.

"What we would like to know is the cost of transporting our solid waste to, say, Twin Falls. Would we save money in the long run by closing the land fill and hauling the garbage, and just how much of our solid waste would be suitable for processing by the plant?" he asked.

Dr. Taylor said his research librarian would try to obtain answers to local questions and present it to the Region 4 staff for compiling and distributing in time for the October board meeting.

Directors voted to follow this procedure rather than call for a feasibility study from an engineering firm or other professional at a cost of several thousand dollars.

The board of directors also reviewed 28 proposed projects for application under the A-55 funding program for the coming year.

All were accepted with the exception of two.

A project to assist low-income, minority families in housing needs through the Idaho Migrant Council was tabled for more information.

Teachers plan campaign to avert strike need

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — Local Idaho Education Association leaders are hoping the threat of a statewide teacher walkout will make state legislators think twice before making any cuts in next year's education budget.

Before the Legislature meets, however, teachers are taking steps to decrease the chances they will have to resort to a work stoppage, which they view as a last resort.

Richard Chilcote, chairman of the regional Uniserve Council, a coordinating committee made up of representatives from south-central Idaho's IEA chapters, said, "The work stoppage is what we would do if there were absolutely no other alternative. Before it would ever take place, we will be bombarding legislators with information as to what we think is adequate legislation and what the consequences will be if the 1 percent initiative is allowed to damage public education."

Delegates to last spring's IEA Assembly at Boise passed a resolution giving the organization's executive committee authority to announce a walkout if the 1980 Legislature does not approve a substantial increase for school funding.

As of Aug. 31, 8,250 of Idaho's 9,373 public school teachers belonged to the IEA, according to Robert Day, the group's associate executive director at Boise. And membership drives are under way this fall in every local chapter.

Richard Laufenberg, president of the Twin Falls Education Association, said a walkout would shut down Idaho schools, even if school district administrators tried to operate with a teaching staff of non-members and outside help.

"Watch them try to cross our picket lines," Laufenberg said. "It could get a little nasty."

Chilcote, a social studies teacher at O'Leary Junior High School in Twin Falls, also heads a regional Work Stoppage Committee, which is planning the teachers' lobbying efforts. He said teachers will meet with all Magic Valley legislators before the Legislature convenes, attempting to head off the walkout by educating them about the ramifications of the 1 percent initiative and the problems of Idaho teachers.

The committee has not yet set a timetable for its activities, Chilcote said, but "will probably" meet again next month. In addition to the meetings with legislators, the committee will encourage area teachers to write to their representatives and will also draw up a just-in-case plan for a walkout, he added.

The IEA has not yet announced an official education budget recommendation, but Alan Ware, a member of the Work Stoppage Committee, said he is hoping for a 12 to 13 percent increase as a "bare minimum."

"We would need that much just to break even," said Ware. "Just to catch up with the tremendous inflation rate we've had over the past two years."

"And hopefully," said Ware, "through a rational, logical approach, we can cause our legislators to see the need to fund education as one of the first items next year instead of waiting to see what is left over at the end of the session."

Last spring the Legislature appropriated education funds which amounted to a 6.2 percent funding increase over the previous year. The increase to individual school districts varied widely, however, due to property values and other factors. Idaho teachers received an average raise of 7.5 percent, according to Ware, who teaches social studies at Stuart.

For the 1978-79 school year, Idaho ranked 49th of the 50 states in estimated per-pupil expenditures, according to John Fennell, consultant for management information at the state Department of Education. Fennell said figures comparing Idaho's school districts are "still being processed." For the 1977-78 school year the Twin Falls School District had the lowest per-pupil expenditure, based on general fund outlays alone, in the state, he said.

The text of the IEA resolution is as follows: "Resolved: In the event that the 1980 session of the state Legislature fails to enact legislation to realistically deal with the financial crisis imposed upon the schools by the

1 percent initiative, that the IEA executive committee be prepared to direct the 8,000 plus members of the association to close the Idaho schools until such time as the Legislature takes appropriate action."

The two Magic Valley teachers who sit on the 21-member IEA executive committee are Raymond Grubbs, of Twin Falls, and Lawrence Caldwell, of Rupert. Grubbs teaches at O'Leary Junior High School, Caldwell at Minico Senior High School. The two were elected by IEA members in the nine counties that make up IEA's Region 4.

County probation officer appointed

TWIN FALLS — Ron Roberson, a Twin Falls County deputy sheriff handling juvenile cases, has been named to the new position of county juvenile probation officer.

Roberson, 29, will be working through the court system in the county and will be provided office space and furnishings on the third floor of the county courthouse.

He will be paid from the District Court budget at a starting salary of $11,400. His total budget for the year will be $20,000. As in the case of other county employees, he will be on probation for several months with no salary increases to be granted until after the satisfactory probation.

Roberson will take over juvenile probation duties previously handled by the Department of Health and Welfare.

"We feel we will be gaining local control over this field and believe this will benefit the young people and the community. Many other counties are going this route in order to operate their own program," Leonard said.

Earlier this year the Department of Health and Welfare (DHW) announced because of tight budgeting at the state level it would be necessary to charge costs for juvenile probation services. Leonard said it is not certain if the county program will be less expensive but it will be more satisfactory in the views of county officials.

The county will continue to pay fees for psychiatric and medical care and for psychiatric examinations for sanity hearing cases. Professionals in these areas will be hired on a per case basis.

Leonard said the money is available for the probation officer from district court funds.

"This year the district court budget is $10,110 for Twin Falls County. This covers all five courts including district and magistrate."

"However, with five courts in our county, we generate a lot of revenue in fees and fines," Leonard said.

State law provides when these fees and fines exceed 60 percent of the court budget, the remainder goes into the county current expense fund. Here it can help to cover such services as the juvenile probation program, Leonard said.

Roberson will work closely with the judges and with Volunteers in Correction, a local agency which also works with juvenile matters.

Roberson's appointment becomes effective Oct. 1. He has worked five years with the Twin Falls Police Department as a patrol officer and three years with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office. He holds an intermediate certificate in law enforcement and in his present position has been working with juvenile crimes and problems.

"I am definitely looking forward to the new job. I like working with young people and I think I can help at least some of them back on the right track," Roberson said.

Girl killed while sleeping in field

JEROME — A 7-year-old girl was killed in eastern Jerome County late Thursday afternoon when she was run over by a truck while sleeping in a hay field, according to Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall.

Hall identified the girl as Lupita Farisa, 7, the daughter of Lupe Farisa, a former Austin, Texas, resident now living in Rupert.

He said preliminary information indicates the accident occurred around 2 p.m. some eight miles southeast of Hazelton on property owned by Gordon Lake of Burley.

The girl apparently fell asleep in the hay in a trench high after playing in the field. Hall reported while she was sleeping, a truck hauling potatoes turned a corner along a road from an

Hall said he had not obtained the name of the person driving the truck, owned by Luke, from investigating deputy Jim Howe.

The sheriff said Thursday night the investigation is continuing. But, he said there is no suspicion of foul play and he does not believe a citation will be issued in the case.

CSI officials receive car keys from Ace Hansen Chevrolet

CSI class set to tear apart gift car

TWIN FALLS — Some of the Chevrolet cars and trucks now turning out the most impressive "mileage" are those that have never been driven a mile on the road, such as the Chevrolet Malibu donated to CSI Friday.

These vehicles total nearly 2,000 cars and trucks damaged by wrecks, floods and other mishaps on the way to dealer showrooms. They have been given to schools and other institutions to help build automotive mechanical careers for young men and women.

Also included in the program are engineering test and pilot line cars, not available for sale.

In addition, Chevrolet has donated large numbers of car and truck engines, transmissions and other major automotive components to schools for vocational needs.

To make sure the vehicles are never operated again, schools receiving them must sign an affidavit that they will not be driven. Donation tags are fastened to the cars and their identification numbers removed by Chevrolet. Institutions receiving them must be non-profit organizations.

The damaged vehicles become available through Chevrolet's 44 zone sales offices whenever an accident occurs causing damage to units being shipped. The zone service staffs keep lists of requests for such vehicles.

Gas prices may rise for all consumers

BOISE (UPI) — A state engineer told the Idaho Public Utilities Commission Wednesday that Intermountain Gas Co. should receive an across-the-board rate increase, not one based on the costs of supplying natural gas.

PUC staff engineer Curtis Winterfeld said at a hearing that Intermountain Gas should not be allowed to charge on the basis of what it costs to provide service.

Intermountain Gas recently asked for a rate increase worth $20 million. Its officials said the increase is based on the rising cost of Canadian natural gas. The firm gets nearly 70 percent of its natural gas from Canadian suppliers.

Hunt camp controversy

"We are a democratic organization," Nobuyuki said, and the JACL supports the rights of each independent chapter to take its own course. But because of the national organization's opposition to the tower burning, it will send no representative to the October ceremony.

The thing we were also kind of worried about was the people, the Japanese-Americans who live in the Twin Falls area. They felt they didn't want any repercussions. Until now they have all been treated well. The feeling there between the Caucasians and the people here has been very good. They want to keep it that way. They want it (the ceremony) kept low key."

Gas chamber for Hopkinson

Friday, September 28, 1979 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho C-3

JACKSON, Wyo. (UPI) — Convicted murderer Mark Hopkinson was sentenced Thursday to die in the gas chamber Oct. 25 for the torture and murder last May of Jeffrey Lynn Green.

He was given not less than seven years, six months and not more than 10 years for each of two charges of conspiracy to murder.

The handsome 29-year-old Urie, Wyo., retailer and trailer court operator was found guilty Tuesday of first-degree murder in the Green and Vehar deaths and of conspiracy to kill Vehar and William Roitz, chairman of the Fort Bridger sewer district. Special Prosecutors Gerald Spence and Edward Moriarty contended Hopkinson wanted Vehar and Roitz killed because of a lawsuit filed by the district against Hopkinson. Vehar, the sewer district's attorney, filed the suit to gain payment of allegedly overdue fees for sewer hookups at Hopkinson's trailer court. The suit also sought $51,000 in damages for threats allegedly made by Hopkinson against Vehar. The prosecutors said Green's death was ordered because he implicated Hopkinson in the Vehar bombing. The former University of Arizona football player was charged June 8 by a Uinta County grand jury with the crimes. The jury took 7½ hours to find Hopkinson guilty, then spent 4½ hours Wednesday and most of Thursday deliberating over the sentence. During arguments on Hopkinson's sentence Wednesday, Spence and Moriarty pressed for the death penalty, saying Hopkinson had committed the "most heinous" murders in the state's history. Defense attorney Robert Van Sciver of Salt Lake City told the jury Hopkinson did not want to die and that there was no evidence he physically killed anyone.

SPOKANE (UPI) — Spokane's first school strike — the only one in the state and one of 11 nationwide — has ended after 24 days.

Negotiators from both sides early Thursday reached tentative agreement on a new two-year contract and the 1,400 member Spokane Education Association unanimously and loudly ratified the pact at 9:21 a.m. Terms of the settlement were to be announced later in the day.

Classes will begin with regular staff this morning. Teachers were to spend the rest of Thursday at their teaching posts orienting themselves for the beginning of their school year.

A majority of the city's 28,000 students have been at classes at the district's 54 schools since Monday, but others decided to stay home and away from the picket lines and the controversy.

Just what happened between Wednesday's stepped-up strike-breaking efforts on both sides and the sudden settlement appears to be twofold. First, Public Employment Relations Commission executive director Marvin Schurke appeared on the scene Tuesday.

He's a respected arbitrator and appeared at a time when negotiations were in need of third-party involvement. Schurke frankly told the district that the teachers "probably" had cause for unfair labor practices complaints and then turned to the teachers and told them where he thought they were wrong.

The second thing that jolted matters was Rosalynn to speak.

SPOKANE (UPI) — The first lady, Rosalynn Carter, will be in Spokane in mid-October to speak at a fund raiser for local Democratic party leaders. An exact date has not yet been set but it will be either Oct. 18-19. Democratic officials say a luncheon is planned.

out of complacency was a groundswell of public opposition to the district's hard-rock stance against settlement.

The teachers, just as solid in their efforts and demands, also incurred the wrath of the usually docile public.

When the strike began Sept. 4, the teachers said they were striking for two key things: Wages and a reduction in class size.

In the last publicized counter-offer last week, the district offered an eight and 10 per cent wage increase over the next two years and a reduction of one student per class "if" the levy money could be raised to pay for it.

Lines called hint

DENVER (UPI) — Former Interior Secretary Stewart Udall says long lines experienced by drivers at gasoline stations across the nation during the summer may be just a hint of things to come.

Udall, in Colorado to make a speech on energy problems, said the United States had "done little and failed to learn anything" in the six years since the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

Guard at prison knifed by inmate

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (UPI) — Mark Labue, one of six prisoners beaten by guards in a controversial incident in the segregation unit three months ago, stabbed a Washington State Penitentiary guard in both arms, a state spokesman said Thursday.

Jorge Lugotero, 29, was stabbed in the arms with a homemade knife Tuesday shortly before noon, said Dick Paulson, public information officer for the state Department of Social and Health Services. The guard, who will have completed his first year on the corrections staff at the penitentiary Oct. 3, was treated and released from Walla Walla General Hospital.

His wounds were considered "not serious," said a hospital spokesman.

Western may cut Pocatello service

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Western Airlines says it may soon drop service to 10 "small unprofitable cities" in Idaho, Wyoming, Montana and South Dakota.

Linda Dozier, the airline's director of public relations, said Wednesday that Western is considering pulling out of several cities, including Sheridan, Wyo., Pocatello, Idaho, Pierre, S.D., and Butte and Helena, Mont.

She also noted that Western had previously announced plans to suspend service to Cheyenne, Wyo., on Oct. 28.

"But we have not filed to suspend service to any other cities," she said, "and we have not yet made the decision to file for any other cities." Mrs. Dozier denied a report in this month's issue of Airlines Executive Magazine which said Western already decided to stop service to Sheridan and several other cities.

$1000 FACTORY REBATE

PEUGEOT IS MAKING ROOM FOR THE 1980 MODELS WITH A VERY CLASSY CLEARANCE SALE

BUY A LUXURIOUS PEUGEOT 604 AND PEUGEOT MOTORS OF AMERICA WILL SEND YOU A CHECK FOR $1000

Here's how it works. Go to your local Peugeot dealer from now until December 31, 1979, and make your best deal. And on top of it, PMA will send you a $1,000 check. Of course, $1,000 in itself may not be enough to convince you to buy a $13,998.00 car* But some of the following may. The luxurious 604 has standards like: A-wheel independent suspension, power-assisted rack-and-pinion steering, special orthopedic seats, power windows, air conditioning, and Michelin TRX tires.

So go down to your Peugeot dealer. He's making you a deal that's tough to beat on a car that's tougher than it has to be.

PEUGEOT
It's tougher than it has to be.

*Manufacturer's suggested retail price P.O.E. with 5-speed manual transmission. Destination charges, state and local taxes, dealer preparation, if any, and license fees (all of which may vary) extra.

U.S. NAMES RABBIT DIESEL

#1 IN ECONOMY.

Yep, it's official. According to the 1980 EPA Mileage Guide, a Rabbit Diesel gets the highest mileage of any car in America: an incredible 40 MPG in the city. (These estimates may vary depending on how and where you drive, optional equipment, and your car's condition. That's official, too.) Saving money has rarely been as comfortable. Or as roomy. Or as speedy. Try it. Come in and test drive the Rabbit Diesel. It will cost you mere pennies in fuel. And if you buy one, it could save you a fortune.

Kienholz exhibits his environments

MOSCOW — An artist of international renown has chosen the University of Idaho Art Gallery to host the first exhibition of his work in this country in 10 years.

Edward Kienholz, a native of Fairfield, Wash., whose provocative and controversial creations first brought him fame in the '60s, will show 12 of his more recent works in the U. of I. Gallery Oct. 6-26. The exhibit is expected to draw critics and spectators from around the United States. It is titled "Edward Kienholz, Sculptures: 1976-1979."

Kienholz, who maintains residences and studios in Hope, Idaho, and Berlin, West Germany, established "The Faith and Charity in Hope Gallery" in Hope, where he exhibits the work of major artists from the United States and Europe.

The work to be exhibited at the University of Idaho spans the years 1976-1979. Kienholz has exhibited most recently in the National Gallery in Berlin, the Beaubourg Museum, Centre Pompidou in Paris and the Louisiana Museum in Copenhagen.

Prior to 1968, his work was shown in this country in the Los Angeles County Museum; the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York; and the Washington Gallery of Modern Art, Washington, D.C., to name three.

Kienholz is known for his environments or large assemblages of objects, most of which he has found in flea markets and junk yards. The objects take on new identities as they are assembled into three-dimensional scenes. For instance, the upholstery from a car becomes a huge mouth with bared teeth.

The assemblages, which often carry social commentary or historical interpretation, have been said to be shocking yet fascinating, grotesque and horrifying, yet sometimes humorous.

Among the pieces to be exhibited at the university are two from the well-known "Volksempfänger" series, which show a WWII influence. Pieces in the series are composed of Nazi-era photographs, radios, washboards and Mother's Medals Kienholz scavenged from German flea markets and assembled in tableaux representative of the times.

Of these tableaux, German critic Dieter Honisch said that Kienholz has "rediscovered the whole iconography of a nightmare which was one time German reality, and which we still ignore and deny today because of fear, guilt or shame."

The core objects used in the art works are the "Volksempfänger" radios mass produced by Hitler to spread Nazi propaganda, which for Kienholz became the male symbol in much of his work — and common washboards, which serve as the female symbol.

The two works related to the "Volksempfänger" series to be exhibited at Idaho are "Mother with Child with Child" and "The Returning."

"Mother with Child with Child" makes reference to the reproductive function of mothers in the Third Reich. The washboard is decorated with a Mother's Medal awarded by Hitler to mothers with eight or more children.

"The Returning" is dominated by a photograph which for Kienholz is symbolic of the gods, according to Norse mythology, returning to Valhalla. The photograph shows a group of people moving along a path towards a distant town backdropped with hills. The same photo was used in other Volksempfänger pieces with "New Gothic" being one example.

The second group of objects is titled "Jungen," or "young boys." Each is an altar to the human factor in war. They symbolize the death of German boys, but they might just as well be American, French or Italian boys brought forward to die. However, the human "souls" live on in these epitaphs of real people.

The third group to be shown is "The White Easel Pieces." They are linked, visually and conceptually by their large scale and by the materials Kienholz used to construct them. Each of these pieces is backdropped by a wooden frame easel that replicates one Kienholz installed in his studio in Hope. The easel was used to bring the expense of his studio under control. Each of the works also contains the simulated cinderblock-wall texture of his studio with various objects placed in front. Kienholz has also used large pieces of galvanized steel — a material he enjoys for its intrinsic beauty — which sets up a striking middle ground between the cinderblock backdrop and the objects in front. "The White Easel Pieces" are more formal in their consideration without the obvious unity of subject matter that is dealt with in the "Jungen" pieces. "The White Easel Pieces" include "White Easel with Light," "White Easel with Machine Pistol," "White Easel with Wooden Hand," "White Easel with Face," and "The Fountain."

A public reception for the artist will be held 7-9 p.m. Oct. 6 at the gallery.

Kienholz' "Mother with Child with Child" symbolizes the female in Hitler's Germany

The exhibit will also be on view Mondays through Fridays, 8-30 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays, 7-9 p.m., and Saturdays and Sundays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The exhibit is free and open to the public.

More information about the exhibit may be obtained by calling the U. of I. News Bureau at 885-6291 or David L. Moreland, Associate Professor of Art, at 885-7416 or 882-1146.

After its U. of I. debut, the exhibit will go to the Henry Gallery at the University of Washington in Seattle before being dismantled.

Idaho artists, stand up and be counted

BOISE — The Idaho Commission on the Arts, the Idaho Alliance for Arts Education and the Idaho State Department of Education are currently updating the directory of Human Resources in the Arts — Idaho, to be published this fall.

The directory is a geographical index listing artists according to their specialties. It serves as a guide for schools, libraries, community arts agencies and individual clients who may desire the services of artists.

Previously listed artists should re-register and include any new information, since inclusion in the directory is not automatic.

The registration must be completed and sent by Oct. 12 to Idaho Commission on the Arts, c/o Statehouse Mail, Boise, Idaho, 83720.

Gossip

Q: Is there any truth to the rumor that Caroline Kennedy wants a movie acting career? — V.L., Santa Monica, Calif.

A: We don't think so. The rumors may have started when Caroline visited friends in Tinseltown, and made the rounds at private TV and movie screenings. She was spotted in the audience at the filming of a "Mork & Mindy" episode, along with another group that included Ava Gardner.

LID ON COOP. Gary Cooper's family has decided not to cooperate in any way with Hector Arce, the author doing a biography of the late movie star. Cooper's relatives made a firm decision when they learned that Tyrone Power's widow was unhappy with the book the same author had done on her late husband.

Q: Didn't I read that actor Burgess Meredith was going to quit acting to pursue his life-long hobby of trying to talk to whales? H.S., Myrtle Beach, S.C.

A: Meredith, who will be 70 in November, truly does want to quit acting to pursue his life-long hobby of trying to talk to whales. He's convinced that there will soon be a breakthrough and humans will be able to communicate with whales. Unfortunately he's been offered so many six figure movie deals he just can't turn down that talking to the whales will have to wait a while. Now, he's doing "Final Assignment" in Canada with Genevieve Buñuel.

Q: I loved the lates James Bond movie, "Moonraker," starring Roger Moore, but wondered why they never got a big name actress for one of the female roles? — R.T., Oxnard, Calif.

A: The producers did go after Faye Dunaway to play a villain in a 007 movie recently but her price has jumped astronomically and they didn't want to spring for that kind of money. And why should they? Without big name co-stars, United Artists reports that the 12 Bond movies have made so much money that they now rank as the most successful series of sequels in motion picture history.

Q: Didn't Katharine Hepburn have a niece who had acting aspirations and who actually made a movie with her? What's her name and what was the name of the movies she made with her super-famous aunt? — H.V., Clifton, N.J.

A: Hepburn's niece is Katharine Houghton, co-starred in the 1967 movie, "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner." Hepburn's last film with her was "The Day After Tomorrow." Katharine Houghton is an actress best known in theater circles. She and her close friend, actor Ken Jenkins, founded the Pilgrim Theatre Company in 1972. She recently toured in a production of "Uncle Vanya." Houghton's film career came to a halt after she made one more picture, "The Gardener," in 1976.

Q: When is Lauren Bacall's autobiography going to be made into a movie? — M.J., New Haven, Conn.

A: Word is that an independent movie company, Robert Halmi Productions, has offered Bacall a deal for the film rights to her book. To sweeten the deal Lauren also was offered a seat on the company's board of directors. We'll let you know if she accepts.

Q: Does Otto Preminger, that frascible producer-director-actor, still browbeat other actors on movie sets? I hear he's merciless, and a lot of big-name talents want to have anything to do with him. Is that true? — L.H., Kalamazoo, Mich.

A: At 72, Preminger shows no signs of mellowing, and still can be a holy terror on a set. While directing the screen version of Graham Greene's "The Human Factor" in England, Otto badgered one actress whose part consisted of a mere four lines. In his own defense, Preminger says he can be "very tough" on two accounts: when people are late and when they don't know their lines. Otherwise, he insists, he's something of a pussycat.

LAURA ANTONELLI
...Belmondou enflamed

Q: Laura Antonelli, age 37 or 38, depending on which record is used is the first big movie sex bomb from Italy since Gina Lollobrigida. But we don't know very much about her. Is she married? — D.L., San Francisco, Calif.

A: Laura, who was actually born in Yugoslavia and once studied to be a gym teacher, was married and divorced early in her career. Although many of her films are making the rounds now, her best is considered to be the late Italian film director Luchino Visconti's "The Innocent." Anyway, her current flame is French film director Jean-Paul Belmondou, with whom Laura's been having a long and passionate affair.

Q: It strikes me as odd that Richard Gere is perpetually being touted, as such a big-deal movie star, when he's acted in relatively few pictures. Is his popularity for real or just merchandized? — P.M., Yerington, Nev.

A: It's quite real. Example: Gere, whose new movie is "American Gigolo," is considered a hot favorite to win the popularity poll conducted by After Dark magazine. Staffers at the magazine are also predicting that Gere may very well walk off with their increasingly touted "RUBY" Award, named in honor of Ruby Keeler, the first winner, for her performance in 1971 in "No, No Nanette." Some past winners are Bette Midler, Lucille Ball, Ann-Margret, Barry Manilow, and other stars of that caliber. Gere's competition this year: merely Angela Lansbury, Donna Summer, Jon Voight, Robin Williams and Golda Kadow.

Q: I was flabbergasted to hear film buff Peter Fogel, on a TV talk show, refer to the great flick, "Casablanca," as a B-movie. Can he possibly be right? — R.N., Vincennes, Ind.

A: Foda's assessment of "Casablanca" may have been made for shock value. This now legendary picture was conceived, produced and exhibited as a A-movie all the way. While it's true that the film's current stature as a legend in movie-making has far eclipsed the wildest dreams of its producers, it boasts top 1942 production values. And its ultra fine cast, including Bogey, Ingrid Bergman, Paul Henreid and Claude Rains; can hardly be considered B-movie ingredients!

RICHARD GERE
... 'Ruby' crowned

Q: Vincent Price, one of my all-time favorite actors, says he's sick of making movies. How come? Has he played one horror role too many? — E.H., Dayton, Ohio

A: That's what Price is telling associates. He believes that although only a fifth of the some 100 erred horror flicks, he's been type-cast beyond repair. The 68-year-old actor and art buff prefers the live stage — he performs a one-man show about Oscar Wilde — to the sound stage.

Q: Neil Simon was spotted chatting in Manhattan where the movie version of his stage play, "Chapter Two," was being filmed. Does Simon involve himself in the actual film making? — H.C., Wantagh, N.Y.

A: The super-successful writer visits his movie sets; primarily to rewrite scenes. Simon confines himself to this task and prefers to leave the direction to the pros — in this case Robert Moore, whom he regards as highly. Matter of fact, this pair has worked together on such hit movies as "Murder by Death"

Q: Why weren't Marlene Dietrich's long-waited memoirs published? Just too hot to handle? W.M., Hudson, N.Y.

A: Truth is they weren't hot enough. And the publisher sent them back to her to put more personal stuff in, as the editors felt Marlene was holding back. Word is that La Dietrich finally agreed to level and tell all. She's also promised to go on tour to promote the book. And the latest is that the Dietrich story will be a movie, the film rights having been purchased before publication by Robert Halmi productions.

BURBANK BLACKOUT. Amazing fact: The city where Columbia, Warners, Disney and NBC-TV all headquarter in California doesn't have a single hard-top movie theatre. If Burbankers want to go to a movie they have to go out of town unless they have an in in the film biz. The city has more private screening rooms than most cities have movie theaters.

Facts and Fiction About LOW BLOOD SUGAR

Hypoglycemia is called, and it is a highly controversial medical condition. Is it a common disease or rare? How do you recognize it? What causes low blood sugar; what are its symptoms; what do you do about it? This FAMILY WEEKLY article in the September 30 issue discusses the problem and cautions against conclusion jumpers who may misjudge conditions that point to other dysfunctions entirely.

PUBLIC LOVE AFFAIR: It's a toss-up as to which a new major movie star hated most: the movie he recently, starred in or the director of the film. However, you couldn't tell it from the interviews the actor has given. According to those stories, the movie is one of the finest ever made and the director was "Just a peach."

LOVELIGHTS: In one scene for his upcoming movie, "The Electric Horseman," Robert Redford rides onto a Las Vegas stage in a cowboy suit covered with electric lights. At the first screening the other day, his co-star Jane Fonda quipped: "There's a broken heart for every light on Robert Redford."

Cop turns novelist turns producer

By ALJEAN HARMETZ
 ©N.Y. Times News Service
 LOS-ANGELES — JOE WAMBAUGH — police officer turned novelist turned movie producer — crutches in the corner of a Hollywood restaurant watching Paula Prentiss and Robert Foxworth speak words from his script of his best-selling novel "The Black Marble." Moreover, his sharp eyes fixed on the actors like a cobra eyeing its dinner, his intensity is overpowering.

Joseph Aloysius Wambaugh, the son of a cop and an upstairs maid, former altar boy and former Los Angeles Police Department sergeant, is a tough, cocky, 42-year-old embodiment of the American Dream. His four best-selling novels about policemen torn to pieces by the emotional violence of their work — "The New Centurions," "The Blue Knight," "The Choir Boys" and "The Black Marble" — and his one work of nonfiction, "The Onion Field," about the murder of a policeman, have taken him from rags to five acres of swimming pool, tennis courts and red brick house in the conservative, monied Los Angeles suburb of San Marino. Now his ruthless determination to put his books on the screen has won him a reputation as the intermediary of Hollywood screenwriters, producers and studios — may well take him back to rags.

He has $1 million of his own money in "The Black Marble" and "The Onion Field," which stars John Savage and James Woods and which opened last week to mixed reviews. When "The Onion Field" went $300,000 over its modest $2.7 million budget, Wambaugh sold his annuity — a apartment building he had purchased with the profits from his books — in order to complete the movie. "Then I got one bank loan to make 'The Black Marble,' he said, "and another bank loan to live on while I was making it. And all the other investors in 'The Onion Field' will get ALL their money out before we get a penny of ours.

The book rights to "The Onion Field" were worth $315,000. Columbia purchased the book for that price in 1973. After a few attempts to get a workable screenplay, the studio decided not to make the movie. Wambaugh tried to buy the book back. Columbia refused. If it had been any of his other books, he might have shrugged his shoulders and walked away. But he was — and is — obsessed with the story he told of a policeman who survived a murderous night in a Bakersfield onion field but was destroyed because he survived without saving his partner's life.

"I feel I was put on earth to write that story," Wambaugh said. "The poor guy did just what he should have done. He gave up his gun. He was explicitly and implicitly criticized and, with absolute insensitivity, the police officers who criticized him don't realize they were contributing to his destruction. His [giving of gun] was what interested me. The criminals never felt guilty. They'll get out of prison in 1983 and see his picture's second run. Their guiltlessness made them flower; they came out triumphant."

Wambaugh's own feelings of guilt — the steel remnants of a Catholic childhood — are, he concedes, the driving force in his writing and his life: "I must do my duty and write 2,000 words a day with I'm working on a novel." Wambaugh offered Columbia the right of first refusal on "The Black Marble" in return for allowing him to buy back "The Onion Field." When the studio reneged on what Wambaugh said was a verbal contract to do that, he sued.

"Being willing to sue," he said, "helps me to get my way a lot. Most people are frightened of lawsuits because they're so time-consuming and draining of time and energy. But if you do business with me, you have to keep your word or I'll sue your butt off. Betrayals are common in the motion picture business. Policemen don't use each other. Loyalty is absolutely necessary. If you drive with a man, you must be prepared to give up your life for him — even if you hate him."

Earlier, Wambaugh had sued Universal when his script for "The Choir Boys" was turned into what he calls "a dreadful, slimy, ugly thing about policemen as fascists." That suit was based on a verbal contract that no changes would be made in his script. Universal settled by taking his name off the script and giving him $1 million for his residual interests in the movie.

He is an obstinate and tenacious man, and his experience with "The Choir Boys" solidified his determination to finance and produce "The Onion Field" and "The Black Marble" himself. He has found controlling a movie surprisingly easy: "A policeman has less authority than most people think, but in any street encounter, he is in charge. He has to be decisive. I would rather make a wrong decision than no decision. I'm amazed that three-fourths of the people in the world would rather make no decision."

The movie he has made of "The Onion Field" is, he declared, "true." "For once, you can believe that word," he said. "There's real truth, and Hollywood truth. One Hollywood studio said they would release the movie if I made it more like 'Death Wish' and have the criminals blown away by the policeman in court."

He is aware he has stayed with the truth even to the detriment of the dramatic structure of the movie. "But if I started fiddling with the truth, we'd all lose."

Wambaugh flashes a sleazy smile. Right or wrong, commercial or uncommercial, it is his movie and his way. "Harold Becker (the movie's director with $150,000 of his own money in the film)," he said, "wants to make his money back plus $1. I'll skip the extra dollar."

Karla Bonoff's sleeping easy

 ©N.Y. Times Service
 NEW YORK (In August 1977, Karla Bonoff released her debut album, entitled "Karla Bonoff." It was a lovely disk, and was received as such by many critics and enough of the public to insure a respectable if not overwhelming commercial success. In concert, too, Miss Bonoff had a grave, sad beauty, reinforcing the same qualities in her songs and her singing.

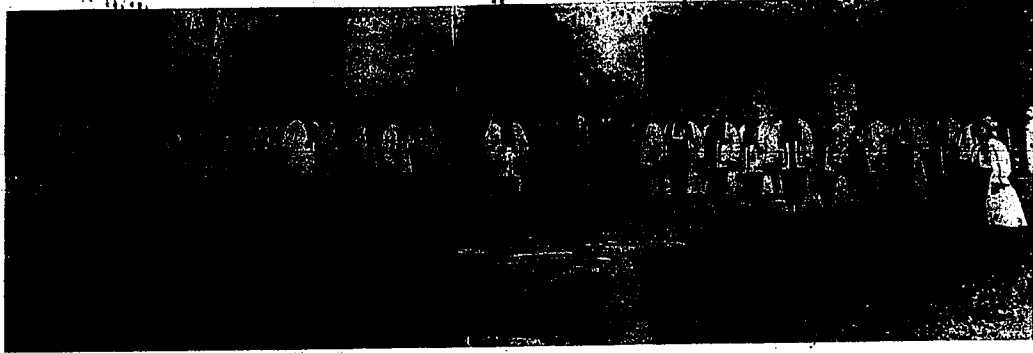

Now, more than two years later, she has finally come forth with her second LP, "Restless Nights." The long delay runs counter to the recent business's conventional wisdom, which argues that a well-received debut should be followed as quickly as possible by another disk, before the public forgets.

Miss Bonoff is a slow composer, however, and she didn't want to rush precipitously into the stores with an inferior follow-up. It's good that she waited: "Restless Nights" is one of the most lovely albums of the year.

"Karla Bonoff" owed some of its commercial success to Miss Bonoff's association with Linda Ronstadt. The two women are friends and work in the same folk-rock idiom. Miss Bonoff's album was produced by Miss Ronstadt's longtime bass player, Kenny Edwards, and received continual promotion from Miss Ronstadt in interviews and concerts. Above all, it contained three songs that Miss Ronstadt had already recorded on one of her million-selling albums — and, as a bonus, another song that Bonnie Raitt had recorded. For "Restless Nights," Miss Bonoff still uses Edwards and a group of musicians familiar from Miss Ronstadt's records, and also has Kosh, who has designed Miss Ronstadt's last few album jackets, to provide a similar visual appearance. But this time she has kept her song for herself. The record is all originals, although a couple of the songs were written with Edwards. There is also a chaste traditional folk song and an unusual version of Jackie De Shannon's "When You Walk into the Room."

The De Shannon number — which has the cowboy-singing backup — is unusual because Miss Bonoff has adapted it to her personality and style without falsifying it. Originally a rousing pop rocker, it emerges on this album with a fascinating undercurrent of contemplative sadness.

Old Time Fiddlers tour Romania

By TRUDI RARIO

Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Romania — twice to communists and gypsies played host to a slew of Idaho fiddlers recently as part of the cultural exchange program. Sixteen members of the Idaho Old Time Fiddlers group took the trip in late August as part of the project sponsored by the Friendship Ambassadors (FA) in New York City.

Despite a lukewarm reception to the proposal at the fiddlers' February convention in Caldwell, the sixteen who did go on the trip remember it as a worth-while, sometimes tiring experience.

The group included Kathryn O'Connor, Blanche, Remarkus, Maudie Shaw, Mike Earl, Kay Wilkinson, Donna Lowder, Edna Ford, Cliff Haak, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Waites, Mr. and Mrs. Orin Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Lennie Malone and Mr. and Mrs. Archie Turner.

The fiddlers were recommended for the tour by the Idaho Commission on the Arts. Friendship Ambassadors contacted fiddler Archie Turner of Twin Falls with its proposal. They would make all of the tour arrangements and participants would pay all their expenses, which would come to $1,650 for air fare alone.

The non-profit organization, which claims Reader's Digest as its largest contributor, organizes performing arts tours to communist countries.

After FA representatives briefed them on what to expect on their travels and instructed them not to perform any religious songs, the group flew from New York to Amsterdam. They were accompanied by the 57-member New Jersey Generation Dancers, who were being sent by FA to Romania on a similar tour.

"Turner served as tour leader and his wife kept a travel journal because, as she says, 'I was there to learn as much as I could.'"

Arriving in Bucharest they met Angie, their state-appointed tour guide. She was in her early twenties, spoke fluent English and by the end of the tour had learned "old-timey" taxes and was helping them on stage.

The group stayed two nights in Bucharest, but for unknown reasons their concert was cancelled.

The next stop was Sibiel, a peasant village in Transylvania. Road construction delayed their bus for about four hours, which, according to the Turners, was the highlight of their entire trip. It wasn't long before the fiddlers were jamming on the side of the road to pass the time away. And it didn't take long before they had drawn a crowd of 500 smiling impromptu concert-goers. They ignored requests for religious tunes but honored requests for John Brown's Body, Skip to My Lou and Oh Susannah. Turner said the most requested song throughout the tour was "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean."

The bus reached Sibiel late that evening. Their hosts — peasant families — each took a few fiddlers into their homes for the night.

Mrs. Turner said the typical peasant home was surrounded by a fenced courtyard, usually canopied by grapes. Flery home-made wine and plum brandy were served often. Turner said he and Cliff Haak of Filer were sampling brandy while their host, an old peasant, rubbed his stomach and smiled at the grapes hanging overhead. He kept repeating the sound "boon" which is Romanian for "good." Haak thought his host was referring to the sorch of the liquid and agreed, "Yeah, boon...boon all the way down."

At the Sibiel community hall the fiddlers played and taught the Virginia reel, which Mrs. Turner said they learned quickly! The fiddlers gave out trinkets and souvenirs, including Idaho tourist brochures, fiddler pins and postcards of the Perrine bridge.

The next morning they visited a still-remaining old church in Sibiel. The priest asked them to sing "The Old Rugged Cross," which he taped.

Everywhere they traveled they saw horse-drawn wagons, since most Romanians can't afford to buy cars. Lifestyles were simple and energy resources were strictly conserved. Water was shut off in the hotels after midnight and only minimal lighting was used.

Although large-scale government farming is mechanized, small farms are worked by hand, horse, oxen and water buffalo. Hay is stacked around a stiek. Farmers live in central villages and have small gardens for their own use. The farm families take turns leading the village cows out to pasture. The potatoes they raise are similar to the White Rose variety, with parsnip-colored skins.

The Romanians don't dock (remove the tail) or castrate their animals, so their meat is very strong-tasting. Chicken and pork, the most popular meats, are served with an abundance of grease, and several of the fiddlers fell victim to "traveler's traumatized stomach."

Families are penalized for having more than one child by taxes on subsequent children. Dating is not allowed until a girl is 18 and a boy is 21, and those younger are not allowed on the streets at night unaccompanied. Their limited entainment was mostly found in the home — fancywork and quiet games of backgammon were popular.

Mrs. Turner thought the people were well-dressed and noted the women usually wore dresses, not pants, and no makeup.

The Turners noticed a generalized anxiety and somnolence, especially in the cities, and Mrs. Turner said people often looked at them with "piercing eyes." Few questions about the U.S. were asked.

When the fiddlers arrived in the tourist town of Brasov they found the atmosphere relaxed and friendly. They were asked to play during the hotel band's breaks and to themselves trading fiddle techniques and swapping music with the "Romanian" musicians. Turner praised their musicianship, but said they just couldn't pick up the fiddler-style of shuffle bowing. The Romanians use a lot of fingerpicking over the body of the violin, he explained, which the fiddlers in turn found difficult to imitate.

The fiddlers were well-received again in Trapiatra Neamt and Galati, an industrial town on the Danube River, but met with open hostility in the Black Sea resort of Olimp. At first the fiddlers thought a group of Russians in the audience was singing along with them in kind of a chant. Someone translated the chant which was a call for the "workers of the world to unite" and other pro-communist slogans. The audience rejected the fiddler programs and souvenirs.

Unsettled, the fiddlers went back to their hotel only to be awakened in the middle of the night by the same chanting outside their building. The desk clerk intervened and disbanded the group. But by then the fiddlers were getting anxious to get home.

After a few days of sightseeing around their modern Balkan Sea resorts the group headed with a sense of relief to their familiar Idaho turf.

Turner is preparing a movie of their trip to show to clubs and organizations in Magic Valley, in appreciation for all those who helped the Old Time Fiddlers share a bit of the American way and Idaho with Romania.

Soviet tour rough on blues band

By KIRSTEN O. LUNDBERG
MOSCOW (UPI) — Eilon John loved it, but American blues and jazz band Gatemouth Brown and Gates Express found performing in the Soviet Union an exhausting and frustrating business.

First there was the problem of the rubles.

"Man, what are you gonna spend all those rubles on?" asked tour manager Don Helmerman.

The Soviet Union allows no one to take rubles out of the country, so the band couldn't get rid of them even in six weeks of expensive dinners, tipping taxicabs 50 rubles ($3) and buying endless souvenirs.

600 rubles ($1,200) for each of 38 performances, the group collected so many it threw a lavish champagne bash for the foreign community in Moscow the day before going home.

"The Soviets 'helped' at the last minute" by announcing band members' luggage was $2,550 overnight and that a painting bought for nearly $1,500 would require a 100 percent export tax.

That surprise was only the last of a series of unexpected frustrations that confronted the band members during their six-week tour of Leningrad, Rostov, Baku, Erivan, Tbilisi, Sukhumi, Sochi and Moscow.

"Our equipment will never be the same again," said Cal Freeman, pedal steel guitar player from Lubbock, Texas. "I got so bashed up in travel by the people sent to help us that we were wondering if it would survive the trip."

"Look at this microphone. They tried to unplug it and ripped the cord out altogether."

Most of the six band members were on their first trip to Russia — or to Europe. So it was a new problem to get a meal after 9 p.m. (concerts always ran much later), to find hotel rooms where the "toilets didn't work," to find taxis scarce.

One evening a band member accepted a dinner invitation from a woman he had met and dined with her, her friend and the friend's husband. Next day the friend was fired from her job. The band never learned why.

Freeman's unorthodox appearance with long, blond hair below his shoulders combined with a beard as long as his hair drew howls of approval from audiences, but he found it more problematic on the street.

Musically, the tour was fine, except that "these audiences aren't used to responding to music. Like they've been told they can't or something," said manager Helmerman. With our kind of performance, we really depend on feedback to get going, so sometimes it got kind of difficult to keep up the enthusiasm."

One night in Moscow, band members said they even had them dancing in the aisles.

But six weeks is a long time, and the band was anxious to get home by the end.

Vonnegut's dose of 'strong stuff'

By JOHN LEONARD

NEW YORK TIMES SERVICE

JAILBIRD, Kurt Vonnegut Jr. 242 pages. Delacorte Press. Seymour Lawrence. $9.95.

In his last novel, "Slapstick" (1978), Kurt Vonnegut told us that he believed in the "Five Rights," Robert's Rules of Order and the principles of Alcoholics Anonymous. In his new novel, "Jailbird," his best, in my opinion, since "Mother Night" (1961) and "Cat's Cradle" (1963) he adds another sacred document. It is the Sermon on the Mount.

Walter F. Starbuck is asked by Richard M. Nixon at a Congressional hearing in 1949 why, "as the son of immigrants who have been treated so well by Americans, as a man who had been treated like a son and been sent to Harvard by an American capitalist," he had been so ungrateful to the American people, since he had just joined the Communist Party. Starbuck replies: "Why? The Sermon on the Mount, sir."

Harvard and Nixon, the Holocaust and Watergate, Sacco and Vanzetti, Alger Hiss and Whittaker Chambers, trade unionism and conglomerate capitalism, not to mention Roy M. Cohn—these are the obsessions of "Jailbird," a fable of evil and inadvertence. Strong stuff, Starbuck would say, because strong stuff is the latest in a long line of Vonnegut semaphores, verbal kiss-offs: so it goes, hho, I had to laugh, small world, strong stuff.

What has this stuff to do with Starbuck in the Sermon on the Mount? Starbuck is the son of a millionaire's chauffeur. Because he plays chess with the millionaire, the millionaire sends him to Harvard, where he has an affair with a radical young Irishwoman and joins the Communist Party. He is off, then, to join Roosevelt's New Deal. He quits the party on the occasion of the Nazi-Stalin pact. In Germany during and after World War II he meets and marries a death-camp survivor and has dealings at Nuremberg.

He returns to Washington to betray, by accident, a friend. Years of joblessness follow until Nixon hires him as special adviser on "youth affairs." Some of the Watergate money is stashed in his windowless office, and so he goes to jail with the big boys. Let us say he arrives in New York and falls into the clutches of a conglomerate that seems to own most of the world.

Starbuck is clearly one of those characters—to whom history is always happening like an accident. His old girlfriend tells him: "You can't help it but you were born without a heart. At least you tried to believe what the people with hearts believed — so you were a good man just the same." As good as most of us, anyway, and about to be back in jail.

Not once in "Jailbird" does Vonnegut nod off, go vague. His people bite into their lives. Kindnesses, as inexpressible as history, are collected, like saving remnants in New York, with catacombs under Grand Central Terminal and harps on top of the Chrysler Building, is wonderfully evoked. The prose has a glow. Nixon's "unhappy little smile," for instance "looked to me like a rosebud that had just been smashed by a hammer." Or: "There was a withered old man . . . hunched over his food, hiding it with his arms. Sarah whispered that he ate as though his meal were a royal feast."

And when you think about it, the Sermon on the Mount is a radical document, promising that the meek shall inherit the earth. Shall they, indeed? Vonnegut has his doubts. It is the fashion these days for young academics, fresh from bravely grappling with the archetypes of modernism at a graduate seminar, to dismiss Vonnegut as simplistic. He is insufficiently obscure; he is not loud enough about the ambiguities. Well, as he would say, "listen. 'X is simple' — c/urtesy and decency — is harder."

In "The Sirens of Titan," the problem was how to cause "less rather than more pain," how to "love whoever is around to be loved." The message in "Mother Night" was "We are what we pretend to be, so we must be careful about what we pretend to be." "God Bless You, Mr. Rosewater," asked, "How to love people who have no use?" Laurel and Hardy were admired in "Slapstick" because, although they were not "really very good at life," at least they "never failed to bargain in good faith with their destinies."

To be sure, his characters are given to dreaming of an escape hatch out of history, a secret village, a tropical island, a neutral zone, an alternative reality. But he doesn't let them get away with it. Everything isn't beautiful, and many things hurt, and neither technology nor organized religion is much help, nor "granfaloon" like the Communist Party and the Daughters of the American Revolution. Even play, as in "Cat's Cradle," can be monstrous, and art itself is a lie. Billy Pilgrim in "Slaughterhouse-Five" overhears Elliot Rosewater say to his psychiatrist, "I think you guys are going to have to come up with a lot of wonderful new lies, or people just aren't going to want to go on living."

Simple? Vonnegut brought all his characters along for Billy Pilgrim's ride in "Slaughterhouse." In "Breakfast of Champions," he cut them loose, set them free. One returns in "Jailbird" — a man who writes science fiction novel under the name of, naturally, Kluge Trout, who is in jail, naturally, for treason. These days, the Sermon on the Mount is treason. Vonnegut has exactly what Constant pinned for in "Sirens": "a single message that was sufficiently dignified and important to merit his carrying it between two points." We read his novels the way that Mary Kathleen reads Starbuck's college books: "the way a young cannibal might eat the hearts of brave old enemies. Their magic would become hers." Ours.

'Courses by Newspaper' connects with TV

TWIN FALLS — Professor John G. Burke of UCLA, coordinator of "Connections" for Courses by Newspaper, and E.G. Marshall, well-known actor and television host, joined forces this summer to create the thoughtful 10-minute commentaries on technology and change that follow each of the "Connections" programs on PBS.

The Courses by Newspaper (CBN) series this fall — the 11th in an ongoing series — is linked, for the first time, to a 10-part PBS series of the same title that will premiere throughout the country on Sunday, Sept. 30, at 8 p.m. Most PBS stations will rebroadcast each program during the week one or two additional times.

The television series is underwritten by a grant from the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and Associated Companies of The Bell System. Courses by Newspaper is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, an independent federal agency created by Congress in 1965 to support projects of research, education and public activity in the humanities.

Because of his role with the Courses by Newspaper project and his cooperative efforts with the creator of the television series for British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC), Professor Burke was selected as the consultant for the segments produced by WQED/Pittsburgh to conclude each "Connections" program for PBS.

In these segments, host E.G. Marshall poses key questions on the meaning of technological change to American scholars and experts in the field. These scholars include two CBN authors, Professor Lynn White of UCLA and Professor Melvin Kranzberg of Georgia Institute of Technology.

Marshall is best known to PBS audiences as the host for the past five years of the award-winning National Geographic specials, also produced at WQED/Pittsburgh. Earlier, on commercial television, Marshall was well-known for his starring role on "The Defenders," which enjoyed a five-year run and earned him two Emmy awards. Marshall has appeared on more than 500 television programs in addition to his long and distinguished career on Broadway.

Prior to the production of the concluding segments for each program at WQED/Pittsburgh, CBN staff and Professor Burke had worked for more than two years with the BBC and Time-Life Television, the co-producers of "Connections," to develop a national educational program that utilizes, for the first time, both newspapers and television. Almost 400 colleges and universities are currently offering "Connections" as a credit course for students who use educational materials developed by CBN under the direction of Professor Burke. In addition to the college course, thousands of high school and college teachers will use special educational materials developed by AT&T in their regular science and social studies classes.

The television programs feature James Burke, a well-known BBC science writer and commentator, as the on-camera narrator. Three years in development, the television series is in the tradition of such highly praised BBC series as "The Ascent of Man" and "Civilisation."

Editor's Note: The Times-News will carry the weekly series "Connections" every Sunday in the Valley Living section. The first, entitled "Technology of Trial," ran in last Sunday's edition.

Learning by the light of the tube

By FRANK SWERTLOW
© Chicago Sun-Times

In 1938, Edward R. Murrow discussed his hopes for television. "This instrument can teach," the CBS newscaster said, "it can illuminate; yes, and it can even inspire. But it can do so only to the extent that humans are determined to use it to those ends. Otherwise, it is merely lights and wire in a box."

For anyone who has watched the meager offerings of this new season, most of the programs are dim lights and frayed wire, hurled into a sagging carboard box. Indeed, they would sadden Murrow, if he were alive.

Yet, there is, at least, one surprise this season. It's a series called Connections, one of those exchange programs from the BBC about science and its history and its effects on you and me.

This program is superb. It is what Murrow had hoped for, a use of television that enlightens and entertains and illuminates. Nothing is cheap about this show. Nothing is banal. Nothing is commonplace. And it is not one of those hokey programs on public television that talks down to the audience. It's just good stuff, easily understood, witty and bright and fun.

The point that James Burke, the anchor, tries to make in his first chapter on science is technology affects the way we live so directly and powerfully that we fail to realize how it controls our lives. He asks that we pause a moment and reflect upon the impact of such scientific inventions as

The plow? Ah, there's the rub. Is the first chapter about the plow? Yes, sort of. But before he discusses the plow, Burke suggests that all started with the plow in ancient Egypt. There, man overcame his environment with one of the first machines, the plow, just simple hunks of wood nailed together and pulled by domesticated animals.

But Burke's overall point remains valid: In 1979, we are creatures of past inventions, which today so dominate our existence that most of us would be helpless without them. It's a frightening thought, but it's accurate. Think about life without electricity. It wouldn't be too comfortable without a refrigerator. Or a light bulb. Or the boob tube.

were supposed to liberate us.

But how did we get to this stage of human development? Burke suggests that it all started with the plow in ancient Egypt. There, man overcame his environment with one of the first machines, the plow, just simple hunks of wood nailed together and pulled by domesticated animals.

But Burke's overall point remains valid: In 1979, we are creatures of past inventions, which today so dominate our existence that most of us would be helpless without them. NBC roosts on top

By JERRY KRUPNICK
Newhouse News Service
NEW YORK — Don't look now, but the nation's No. 1 television network for the first full week of the new season is... NBC.

NBC opened with some blockbuster movies and also managed a good sampling on its premiering series, solidly beating out frontrunner ABC in the Nielsen ratings released Tuesday. CBS trailed both.

The win for President Fred Silverman's beleaguered network was its first premiere week triumph since 1972.

Much of the credit must go to 16 hours of movies and two-hour special versions of NBC's regular series. The first TV showing of Jane Fonda and Jon Voight in "Coming Home..." was the network's top-ranked show and came in fourth overall. It was followed by another feature film, Clint Eastwood's "The Outlaw Josey Wales," which ranked fifth.

In addition, NBC aired such films as Disney's "The Love Bug," "Sem-Tough," a made-for-TV'er called "Mrs. R's Daughter" and two-hour openers for "Eisenschid" and "CHIPS."

and "CHIPS."

Last year's lowest-ranked network also was happy about its other shows. It got decent ratings for its new series, and landed three returning shows — "CHIPS," "Little House on the Prairie," and "Diff'rent Strokes" — in the top 20.

ABC, meanwhile, stuck with its regular programming — and claimed it still is No. 1 despite last week's NBC win. The ABC season began a week earlier, so that network's reckoning it leads NBC by 1.5 rating points.

NBC, therefore, is on top with a 20.6 rating, followed by ABC with 18 and CBS with 16.9. NBC took two nights — Monday and Saturday. ABC took the middle of the week — Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. CBS took Friday and Sunday.
